

CAROLS AND PLAYLET ARE FEATURES AT 1931 ASSEMBLY

Good-bye to 1931! The last assembly of that year passed into oblivion with Christmas carols, music, and a short play.

The air was filled with notes of: "Joy to the World," "It Came upon the Midnight Clear," "Silent Night," "Hark the Herald Angels Sing," sung by the students and under direction of Rachel Cope.

Mary Lou Scullion related the Christmas Story and Connie Tice, a poem entitled "Three Wishes".

After violin solos by Theodore Visker, and carols by the Girls' Glee Club, Miss Evelyn Cherry, favored the student body, singing "The Star of Bethlehem."

A short playlet "Why the Chimes Rang," gave various students a chance to display their dramatic ability.

The students were then dismissed with playing of recessional music.

CLUBS OF SALEM HIGH HAVE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

That the spirit of Christmas reigned throughout the clubs of Salem High School the week before Christmas vacation, was easily proven by the number of programs, entertainments and plays that were given by the various clubs.

Nearly all the clubs had some sort of an entertainment. Most of them consisted of stunts or songs, in accordance with the type of club.

Two of the clubs, the Latin and French clubs had well-planned programs.

The program of the Latin club featured a reading by Dorothy Astry; a Christmas story by Ruth Obenour; and carols by the club with Margaret Megrail accompanying on the clarinet.

The French club featured a play under the charge of Rosamond Burcaw. The cast included Betty Hinkle, Charles Stuart, Christine McArtor, Edgar Wilms, and Mary Baltonic.

QUAKERS OPEN SEASON BY DEFEATING LISBON

In the opening game of the present basketball season the Quakers overwhelmed Lisbon players to obtain a 41 to 24 decision. The Salem players showed fine teamwork. Not many long shots were tried because the ball was nearly always worked into scoring territory.

QUAKER RECEIVES CRITICISM FROM JUDGE IN CONTEST

The Quaker received a letter of constructive criticism from the judge in the state contest for high school papers. The report was arranged in five parts:

1. Excellent qualities—

(a) News coverage complete, varied; judgment in arranging it edit it carefully. Use more short items on page one; keep down length of stories throughout.

2. Good qualities—

(a) make-up. Tendency to overdisplay on page one; type is pretty large for a small inside-page make-up. (b) Editorials.

3. Fair qualities—

(a) Features. Well written, though they should be more diverse.

(b) News style and editing.

4. Suggestions for improvement

(a) Headlines lack balance; frequently don't say enough or break badly.

5. Remarks—(a) Is the exchange column worth the space? (b) More sports news? How about giving a department or a page to it?

This is the first year journalism has been studied in Salem High and the things which were criticised are gradually being corrected.

SALEM LASSIES LOSE FIRST GAME TO LISBON

Miss Peterson's Lassies were overcome by the Lisbon Sextet by the score of 18 to 33 on December 1.

It was a good game with both teams giving all they had. However, Lisbon proved slightly superior in strength.

Highlights in the game included Paxson's guarding and Weigand's passing. The whole team displayed wonderful teamwork.

SALEM HIGH GRADUATE IS KILLED IN ACCIDENT

Members of Salem High and the faculty, in fact, many in the entire community, were shocked at the tragic death of Mary Elizabeth Chessman during the holiday season. She had been a director of girls' athletics in Middletown High School for the past two years and was coming to her sister's home in Youngstown for the Christmas holidays when she was killed in an automobile accident. Mary Chessman was a member of the class of 1925 and had been granted an alumni scholarship that year. All who knew her admired her for her sterling character and sweet disposition. She was a quiet and unassuming girl, a hard worker and most brave in facing and overcoming many difficulties, which came into her life. Having started at college with the aid of the alumni scholarship fund, she had worked her own way through and was graduated from Ohio University at Athens, Ohio in 1929. Since then she had been very successful and happy in her work. It does seem tragic to her friends and acquaintances that at the age of twenty-two her life was cut short by an accident.

STONEMEN LOSE FIRST BIG TEN GAME, 31-29

Rallying in the last quarter of the Massillon game the Quakers almost overcame the early Massillon lead, but were defeated by a score of 31 to 29. This game was played on December 26, and it was the first Big Ten defeat.

The Quakers again displayed good teamwork, and shown brilliantly in their last quarter rally. A little inaccuracy still prevailed in basket shooting, but the team showed that it has power.

CAGER'S LAST PERIOD RALLY AGAINST AVIATORS, TO LATE

Alliance Overwhelms Salem, 27-23

Although the Quakers staged a sensational comeback in the closing minutes of the game, they were unable to overpower the titular defense of the Red and Blue. So tight was the defense of the Aviators that the Quakers were forced to shoot from the middle of the floor while Alliance had numerous shots from close quarters. The Aviators also presented a wonderful offense, scoring on nearly every break.

Early, held scoreless for three quarters broke into the scoring list with a fancy one-handed shot. Scullion popped into the limelight by completing one of two long shots. Sidinger also scored before he was taken out on four personal fouls.

SCHOOL BUS DRIVERS MUST GET DRIVERS' LICENSES

Out of town pupils who come to Salem schools may now feel more assured as to the competence of their school bus drivers.

Every school-bus driver is required to procure a chauffeur's license along with his regular bus license this year. Otherwise he may not operate a school bus. To get this license the driver must take a test and pass it. The licenses are issued by Mr. Morris, manager of the Auto Club.

AUTOMOTIVES SHOP IS AID TO CLASSES

The automotives shop aids both the manual training classes and the automotive classes by giving more room in which to work.

The automotive classes are glad to get a new shop to work in and the manual training classes are also glad to get a room that was originally intended for that work. This permits them to have their machinery in positions so that they can work to a better advantage. A safe tool room has also been put into use in the manual department where the tools are kept safely—and in order.

EXAMS ARE COMING

Now that we're back in school again one of the first things we remember is the nearness of the mid-year exams.

To some this thought brings a feeling of disaster while others do not worry at all. It is often this latter group which comes out on top. Its philosophy might be a good one to adopt.

Why worry about tests when one or two weeks are spent in review of the proper material with a teacher to direct? Pay especially good attention during the review in class and your troubles should end.

The way is much easier and more effective than the popular last night cramming.

SOME CLASS NOTES

JUNIOR NEWS

Christian Roth is again basketball manager. He was last year. Purn Sidinger is on the varsity, and Bill Holloway and Gordon Keyes are on the reserves.

The cast of the Christmas play was made up of juniors with the exception of Dick Harris. Perhaps the cast will have a chance in the junior play to really show what they can do.

SOPHOMORE NEWS

Scarlet and gray have been chosen as the colors of the class of '34.

It looks as though all the sophomores had a good time during Christmas vacation; at least they all came back with cherubic grins on their faces.

The class of '34 does hereby resolve to make the New Year bigger (by one day), better, and brighter than the last one.

FRESHMAN NEWS

The class of '35 is enjoying high school very much. Many young recruits turned out for football and have been looking forward to next year with great expectations. There are many prospective cage stars among the freshman.

The General Science and Debate clubs have enrolled many of the class. The fortunate ones have been receiving much satisfaction from the clubs, and hope they will continue to do so. The English classes have been laboring over "Ivanhoe" for the past few weeks.

The class was very much interested in the acting displayed by the seniors and are looking forward to the time when they will have an opportunity to exhibit their talent on the stage.

The freshmen are all working hard to make Salem High a better school.

SOCIETY

Miss Workman spent the Christmas vacation in Poland, Ohio, and Wheeling, W. Va.

Purely Nonsense

Soap was walking along the main street of the great city of New Albany when he met Suds coming around the side of the general store. The following conversation took place:

Soap: Hello, my dear friend; am I still your best enemy?

Suds: Well, I should say you are!

Now I'll ask you one! Did you hear about the policeman who ordered a no-parking sign on a certain corner and then found a child's kiddie-car parked right next to the sign? Ha-ha! And then there was the Scotchman who owned an elephant. He noticed a sign in a restaurant window. "All you can eat for sixty-five cents." So he took the elephant down to the restaurant and then wondered why he was booted out the door. Ho-ho!

Soap: Did you hear the latest one on the professor who lives down the street from me? He has been going out a lot recently. The other night he came home from a formal ball and spread his clothes out on the bed. Then he draped himself over a chair and slept the rest of the night.

Suds: I heard tell of a popular man who was to take part in the christening of a large ship. In fact, he was to break the bottle on her bow. Instead he went prepared with an opener and instead of breaking the bottle as soon as he stepped upon the platform, he drank the contents, then broke the bottle.

And a waiter asked a new customer "Are you Hungry?"

The customer answered, "Yes, Siam. Now Russia out to the kitchen and Sweden my coffee and Denmark my bill."

Soap: I'll have to tell those to my wife. Well if I don't see you tomorrow, I'll see you soon after. Good-by, and good luck.

Suds: So long. I'll be seein' you

It happened at the wedding of Rena and Ray. A small guest, aged four, was little interested in the wedding ceremony, but much interested in a goldfish in a bowl, which he had watched excitedly all during the ritual. Just the moment after the minister said the binding words, "I pronounce you man and wife," the little boy cried out, "Oh! the poor fish. He can't get out!"

"A geese is a low, heavy set bold which is mostly meet and fetters. Hes head sits on one side, and he sets on the other. A geese can't sing much on account of dampness of the moisture. He ain't got no between his toes and he's got a baloon in his stomach to keep him from sinking. Somes geoses when they gits by has curls on their tales and is called ganders. Ganders don't have to sit and hatch, but just eat and loaf, and go swimming. If i was a goose, I'd rather be a gander."

Mr. B. was testing knowledge of kindergarten class. Clapping a half-dollar on the desk, he said sharply: "What is that?"

Instantly Mike Corso said: "Tails."

Mrs. Brown was changing her boarding house, and when she arrived at the new one the landlady showed her to her room.

"There you are, Mrs. Brown," she said proudly. "That's your room."

"It looks comfortable," said Mrs. Brown.

"Yes," went on the landlady, "most people admit I've made them comfortable here. I've always had a gift for doing that."

"Is that so?" asked Mrs. Brown doubtfully. "Well, you need not expect one from me."

An old codger was crossing a busy corner when a huge police dog dashed into him, and bowled him over. The next instand an austin skidded around a corner, bumped him, inflicting more severe bruises. Bystanders helped him to his feet and asked him if the dog had hurt him.

"Not exactly" he replied, "it was the tin can tied on his tail."

"Are you positive that the defendant was drunk?"

"No doubt," growled officer Raynor.

"Why are you so certain?"

"Well, anyhow," replied Raynor, "I saw him put a penny in the patrol box on fourth street, then look up at the clock on the town hall and shout: "Gosh! I've lost fourteen pounds."

TREES

I think that I shall never see,
 Along the road an unscraped tree.

With bark intact, and painted white,
 That no car ever hit at night.

For every tree that's near the road,
 Has caused some auto to be towed.

Sideswiping trees is done a lot
 By drivers who are not so hot.

God gave them eyes so they could see
 Yet any fool can hit a tree.

WHOOOSIM

This senior might be a distant relative of Greta Garbo. Blond curly hair, and light eyes, you know. He was in both the junior and senior plays. He goes out for football and basketball too. Now, can you guess? Clifford Cessna was described the last time.

WHOOSER

Blond hair; brown eyes; short, is this senior. She's a Hi-Tri member. Her home room is 205.

The last Whooser was Kathryn Cessna.

THE BROKEN RESOLUTION

"O, golly! Gee gosh! Imagine it! Me. A man of such gorgeous will power. Me! Yea, look a me. I'm the guy all Western knows as 'steel-willed Manning,' and what am I now? The biggest hunk of mushy, jelly fished ever—O!" And here 'steel-willed', otherwise 'Beans' Manning strode to the large French window, and looked out on a world that seemed anything but rose-colored at that moment.

Jim Collins, the unfortunate Manning's roommate, paused long enough to glance up from his book and inquire, "What difference does it make anyhow, Beans, old boy?"

ADVICE FOR THE FRESHMEN

Take a bit of dark plaza,
 Add some moonlight—not too much,
 Press in two strong hands a small one,

Add of coy reserve a touch.
 Sift in just a bit of folly,
 Mixed with softly whispered sighs,
 Of romance, add two small teacups,
 and the starlight of her eyes.

Then dissolve some pure emotion,
 In a longing and a laugh;
 Mix a grain of deep affection,
 With a bit of merry chaff.
 Add an ounce of mild resistance,
 Two of yielding—then, in mute,
 Inexpressible enjoyment,
 Serve in quantities to suit.

THE BROKEN RESOLUTION

 ury and see me in misery and ask the difference! It just means ten dollars, that's all. And that will leave a hole in my pocket so big, it won't even be funny. Gosh," and here he drew up a chair close to his roommate's. "After all, Jim, it was only a New Year's resolution, and ten berries is too much even for that. Thing he'll cancel it? You know, Cal's a pal when he wants to be."

"How did it happen?" his friend wanted to know.

"Well," Beans moistened his lips. "You see, we both decided we were having too much poker, and not enough ABC, so we bet. He'll at least knock off a few, won't he?"

"All I have to say is," said Jim dryly, "if you've got a debt, pay it."

All which made Beans feel none too good as he looked darkly on the world in general. It was just as he had told Mildred that morning. He was a strong-willed man, and a man of honor and all that, but ten dollars was ten dollars.

"Undoubtedly," she had said. And she added to his good feeling by telling him that since it was blue Monday, she would let Pete Smith take her out to eat. "And," she continued, ((with deep sympathy for Beans) "someplace afterwards, I suppose." Which is cause enough to make any man feel in the dumps.

He pictured to himself the next day when he would meet Cal on the campus. He'd probably rub it in; Cal and the rest of the fellows. Ride him like somebody's wild broncho, he supposed. Cal would probably spend a peaceful evening gloating over Bean's tortured body as it was being dragged across the hot coals. Golly! And here Beans passed a moist, plump hand over his brow. If he didn't lose weight over night, it would be something to wonder at. How he wished morning would never come!

But come it did, after a night of tossing and seeing a ten spot on wings before his eyes for eight hours.

All too soon nine o'clock approached, and Beans saw Cal coming down the campus. On one side of him was Mildred, on the other, Jim, O., Cal had gathered a crowd, all right. He probably wanted the world to see Beans' down-fall he thought. And there was Jim thumping him on the back. They were fine friends! Turned a guy down just because he couldn't stand up under the acid test. Well, he'd not give Cal the satisfaction of speaking first, he'd wait. Then, the inevitable happened.

"Hi, Beans."

"Hi, Cal."

And just to show he was in good spirits, Beans extended his hand. "Yea," he admitted, "I lost. Mildred tricked me into a game last night. I had to give in because—well, because I didn't have your will power, I guess."

"Yes," Mildred agreed, "Beans has such a gorgeous will power."

"I'll say he has!" Jim added with a chuckle.

"That's all right, Cal," Beans said as he returned the bill. "After all, it was just a bet, and not worth ten dollars."

"Isn't that just what you said before?" Mildred giggled.

"Gee, you're a great guy. Thanks." Cal said. "I'll see if I can't do the same for you."

"Do that," Beans smiled. And, as he turned to Mildred, "Where shall we eat tonight?"

"O, I know a cute new place. And they're trying out a new song tonight called 'I Wish You Were Dead, You Rascal, You.'"

"Just the place," Beans laughed.
