Sound Devices Shown Explained to Pupils

All pupils were admitted to an assembly last Friday sponsered by the Ohio Bell Telephone Company.

The entertainment was of a scientific nature and is the same program that was presented at the Great Lakes Exposition last sum-

Mr. Chase who has made telephone his life's work, demonstrated "Scrambled Speech". This is the method of turning. or scrambling, messages into something quite unintelligible in order that there may be absolute secrecy on transoceanic calls.

Another interesting phase of the program was the amplification system which was so great that every person in the audience heard Paul Roelen's heart beat, when he was called up on the stage.

A demonstration of the artificial larynx was given by a man who had lost his voice through an operation removing his larynx. Unable to speak until science gave him a "voice" he can now carry on a conversation just as any person who has his voice.

The shortage of time prevented Mr. Chase from showing many other phases of this work and going into it in detail.

SHS Debate Squad Visits Youngstown

The Salem High debate squad was invited by Youngstown Chaney High school to attend the debate between Western Reserve and the University of Pittsburgh, Friday night, November 6.

It is with the anticipation of a season of well-balanced, hardfought debates that they approach the question: "Resolved: That all Electric Utilities Should Be Governmentally owned and operated."

There has been a difference of opinion on this question for over 40 years, and Salem High is debating on it this year.

Lobsters Find Lab Very Interesting

From their cozy nuptial tub they saw the reporter coming. Womanlike Letitia Lobster sent Leslie out to meet him while she retired behind a convenient bunch of seaweed to preen. Leslie turned modestly to Letitia... who had since come out of hiding: "shall I tell hom?" he asked.

The reporter was visibly shaken, Letitia tittered coyly and clicked her pincers authoritatively, "Quiet, shrimp, I'll do the talking." Leslie was obviously deeply hurt and withdrew a little into the shadow. After all, he had his pride!

Members of the club received slips of paper containing the names of all the Junior Salemasquers. They were asked to nominate an assistant secretary, vice president, assistant treasurer. These nominees will be voted on at the next meeting: The Juniors chosen for offices in this manner will be the Senior officers next year.

Following the business meeting Mrs. Beattie, an active member of the Salem Dramatic Club, gave an interesting talk.

Dramatics Classes To Present Plays

Student directors have been chosen in Mr. McDonald's Dramatic classes for the production of short plays. The plays will be put before the dramatic classes and possibly at a later date, at an assembly program.

The second period dramatic class is preparing, "The Mayor and the class. Mr. McDonald has chosen Irene Baltorinic to direct "Two Crooks and a Lady".

In each of the Dramatic classes programs were presented on Armistice Day.

New Sophomore likes Golf and Football

Vincent Bober, a new pupil, entered Salem High last week to join the sophomore class from Mahoning County Greenford High. He has gone to quite a number of schools so entering here is nothing new to him. Being interested in sports he is trying out for our football team. Greenford, being small, had no tean but Vincent has come to Salem several times to see our team play. Golf and tennis are also sports he is interested in, but hasn't decided as to whether and a tough one." The best cross

Harding Grid Team Trounces Quakers

Salem High school's gridders were decisively trounced, when they met the powerful Warren grid eleven at the Harding High School Auditorium last Saturday.

Although honors in the contest went to the Harding High team, the Salem fans who witnessed the game felt that a decisive moral victory was won by the Salemites.

The team of underclassmen used by Coach Schroeder throughout the game proved to themselves and to their followers that they were a scrappy eleven as they met the powerful thrusts of the Hardingites whose superior weight and experience made victory for the Quakers

Outstanding among the underclassmen was Bill Schaeffer, Sophomore end, who was on the receiving end of most of Salem's passes.

Despite the scrappy opposition of the Schroedermen Warren's superiority asserted itself when Brutz intercepted one of Olexa's passes and raced from his own 49 yard line to the Salem 27. A first down in two plays brought the ball to the Salem 16 from where Joe Bugzavich swept wide around his own right end and made his way to the four yard marker before step-

Quaker eleven has nothing to recommend it to Lady Victory except a lot of scrappy "do or die" spirit.

This willingness to step in and take it and ask for more, was in evidence throughout the Salem, Warren game last week when the Salem team, made up almost entirely of underclassmen fought it's way to a touchdown in the final period although the score rolled up against them could have easily discouraged them from trying to

The Alliance lineup, with plenty of seasoned footballers in it, can be compared favorably with the Warrenites who romped to victory over the Quakers last week and there is every reason to believe that the Salem's aggregation's chances for victory are as slim as they were in that contest.

Although there is no game on the grid iron schedule of the Salemites this week, the absence of active conflict does not mean a rest for the Quakers for Coach Schroeder has indicated that they will practice intensively in preparation for their game with the Aviators.

It is probable that those underclassmen who saw action in the Warren game last week will play against Alliance as it is Schroeder's desire to provide game experience for those fellows from which he must make up future Salem teams.

English III Classes Studying New Book

English III classes have started working with their new book, 'Speak, Read, Write!" This is a new book designed to teach students to speak correctly, fluently, and clearly at all times, to read and understand what they have read, and to write in such a way that their thoughts are clearly and unmistakably expressed.

This is the first year this book has been used. It was written by Elizabeth Crowe Hannum, and is an Atlantic $4,000 prize book.

The first assignment was to come to class next day prepared to tell stories of a maximum time of three minutes in all but one class, which set a maximum of five minutes.

Gossip: A Murderer

The most hazardous and destructive practice in social life is idle talk. Few people realize the intensity of gossip on the smallest scale Salem High is not reputed as a place of slander, however it is tending toward that indecency. It is human nature to relay unstable facts concerning an associate. The gossiper does not know how low he stoops to deliver unjust critisism or untruthful quotations. That loosetongued student will soon find himself graduated into another world entirely, where a reputation is an important step towards success.

The person with whom idle talk is concerned is not the only one affected. The slanderer has sown the seed of deceit in himself. He is not thought any more of by delivering contorted news to another. The other person may accept it all as facts and it is spread about.

Petty lies, seemingly nothing, may prove more disturbing than you think.

Salem High has a good reputation in that line so let's keep it such. Take your site out on your subject in some other manner.

Loyalty

Loyalty. Why is loyalty necessary in all walks of life? Loyalty in school, as well as in the outside world, must be stressed.

If the members of some great football squads were not loyal to their team, their victories would be few.

It is necessary for a student to be loyal to his friends, fellow students, teachers and parents if he expects to make a success of life.

CHEWING GUM

"Oh, I've gotten chewing gum on my hand!"

How many times have you reached into the desk and found gum and candy and sometimes found the desk full of paper? Perhaps we never stop to think that we are responsible for some of this. If the upperclassmen notice they will see the freshmen take wastpaper to the basket. That is because they have been given more discipline in Junior High. Are we Seniors going to take a lesson from the Frosh?

"LET THE TIDE IN."

A boat was caught at low tide too far inland. There was no way to get it off, although the men in charge of it used their greatest strength. There was only one thing to do and they did it. They waited until the tide came in and then the boat floated away by itself in the Enthusiasm is like the tide. By its aid many great projects which would be impossible under ordinary circumstances can be accomplished. History is full of astonishing records of things that have been done by apparently weak people when they have been filled with great enthusiasm for some purpose.

WHAT ARE FRESHMEN?

Freshmen can easily be defined as poor, little innocent creatures taking their first step into higher education. They are timid at first but as the weeks drag on they learn the routine. Some say, "What if there were no Freshmen." Well, the answer to that is there would be no upperclassmen. Take a hint and let these infants in higher education alone.

A teacher was talking of Niagara Falls, she said "The Falls are slowly wearing back toward Buffalo, and in the course of some two hundred thousand years they will wash away Erie. A little girl in the class began crying. The teacher asked what the trouble was. "Oh," wailed the little girl, "my sister lives in Erie."

Tragedy stalks our hallways. Isn't there somebody who loves Jack Hilles? That's the question everyone is asking. If you see someone with clouded eyes, sagging gate and flat feet, that's Jack. The next question was naturally, "Why-" To which Leslie replied, having come forward to put a protective feeler about his grieving mate, "Letty means, sir, that imperfect though our understanding of your ways is, we have concluded that foul plans are afoot." He leaned forward and dropped his voice confidingly. "Letty tells me plans have been discussed and lettuce and dressing mentioned. Tears welled into his eyes and his manly chin began to quiver. "I fear that if visitors would see us they must hurry. The address is 108 in care of Mrs. Cox." He snuffed sentimentally and blew his nose violently. "You have been kind, sir, will you leave now in mourning?"

The reporter retired from the room, heart in throat, tears in eyes, and notebook in pocket.

Junior High Students See American Indian Portrayal

At an assembly given to the members of the seventh and eighth grade classes last Friday, Wilmer E. Cochran, of Newcomerstown, Ohio, gave his portrayal of the American Indian. In his program he told of the different tribal superstitions, the Indian sign language, the Indian's religious life, their customs, habits, history and different songs and dances. Together with his talk, he also showed the pupils various different articles of the Indian. Some of his articles were a tom-tom, a tepee which he erected, bows and arrows and other weapons of war, several types of skins of animals, a live raccoon. snow shoes, a buffalo hide which had Indian picture writing upon it, and various other implements that were used by the Red Man. During his speech, Mr. Cochran was dressed in a real Indian suit which he obtained from a certain tribe. Mr. Cochran has spent 25 years in the study of the habits, customs, and history of the American Indian. He also wrote and directed many Indian pageants. Twelve years of his life were also spent as a leader of Boy Scout work. An admission of $.05 was charged to the pupils who attended. The members of the seventh grade saw the assembly the 4th period in the morning, while the eighth grade pupils attended during the 6th period in the afternoon.

English Classes Give Armistice Day Programs

Miss Cameron's English classes, 8A, 8C, 8E, and 8F, presented Armistice Day programs during each of their respective class periods on Armistice Day, Nov. 11. Each program in the various classes consisted of poems, talks, essays, stories, songs by the entire class, vocal solos, instrumentations, and other forms of entertainment. Besides the English classes, the entire school was in observance of the day, and every class had some sort of a program.

Janice Greene goes around with a very severe burden on her conscience. She lives in mortal fear that her story will leak out.

It seems that Janice attended the Wellsville game. Janice had a very good time at that game—hot dogs, peanuts and all the trimmings. But on the way home Janice became very sleepy. The bus was cold and drafty; so Janice snuggled deep down in her collar and promptly went to sleep.

But she was not meant to slumber in peace, for her sleep was abruptly ended by the sudden jerk of the bus and Janice opened her startled eyes, and glanced around at her companions, who had been snickering audibly for quite a while. As she became more fully awake she was aware that the snickers were intended for her. After a puzzled glance around the compartment, Janice's beautiful blush was turned on full force.

And the cause of it all? For the past 15 miles she had been slumbering on the shoulder of one of our distinguished ex-grades.

Janice was promised that this gentleman's name wouldn't be disclosed but his initials are Bob Whitehill!

Silver and Albright "Turn the Worm"

Ahoy, all game fans, stand by—Polly Silver and Betty Albright have a new one for you. It has no rules; anything's fair, and its object is to reverse custom and keep teachers in after school. There are, of course, several fairly easy ways of doing that: be tardy. play hooky, talk in study halls, but all of those methods are in reality penalties to you—there's no fun staying in then.

But Albright and Silver stayed of their own accord and kept a teacher in until almost 5 o'clock. The system is much too intricate to be given here, but if a sufficient number of students are interested the two girls will give free lessons the second Tuesday of each week.

Owls And Oysters Prove Too Much For Mr. Brautigam; Is Saved By Bell

Extra! Teacher saved by the bell!

What student is a stranger that feeling of relief, elation or whatever you will? Who has not thanked in reverent and joyous voice the power of fate which ordained the intervention of the bell signifying the end of the period just as said student is about to launch on a somewhat vague answer to a strangely infamiliar question? But how often is a teacher so indebted to "friend" bell?

It all happened in a fifth period English class. New English books were being looked over for the first time. Now in these books are two tongue twisters, the worst of these being:

Olive Oglethorpe ogled an owl and oyster

Did Olive Oglethorpe ogle an owl and oyster

If Olive Oglethorpe ogled an owl

Where are the owl and oyster Olive Oglethorpe ogled?? Try that in a spare moment.

What hilarious hilarity as nimble tongued lads and lassies tongues tried over these tempting tongue twisters. Then someone suggested the teacher try it. Mr. Brautigam, being the teacher, objected, but finally, though still reluctant, was won over by an insistent class. Firmly he grasped the book, took a breath and with the intention to do or die, opened his mouth to speak but he did not. Thoughts, or what ever flashes through the mind of a doomed man were interupted

"No Place Finer"

If per chance you happen to be PHILOSOPHY ___ anywhere near the High school between the hours of 7 and 9 on any week day night, don't be startled to hear a blood-curdling scream.

No, the school isn't being robbed nor is anyone being murdered. That is only a part of the practice for the Senior play.

If you are good at recognizing voices you might detect at different intervals Betty Martin's or Jean Kingley's or Gert Harris' exceedingly shrill voice.

But the last of Jeanne Layden's series of three screams ends almost like a fire siren-in fact, it really beats them all.

You must be on your way now though, but come back about the first week in December, attend the play, and hear the yodels at their perfection.

"Who gave you the black eye,

"Nobody gave it to me; I had to fight for it."

As we go along day by day We meet sorrow and loneliness Along the way.

Do you ever stop to think what you can do,

Perhaps their happiness depends upon you.

You can lend a helping hand Where there is pain

Your smile can heal a broken heart,

So you should spontaneously do your part.
