Fifty-five earn scholarships

Harvey M. Walken is year's alumnus

Fifty-five Salem Senior High School seniors were given scholarships totaling $102,000 June 4 at the annual Salem High School Alumni Association banquet at Timberlanes.

Harvey M. Walken, Chicago realtor and member of the Class of 1946, was honored as outstanding alumnus of the year. The Class of 1938, which had celebrated its 50-year reunion on Friday, received special recognition.

The Association gave its two top $5,000 awards to Anne Soriano and Brian Staudt. Miss Soriano, senior class president, gave the class response and presented a $200 check to the Association.

Treasurer Charles Gibbs reported gifts of $30,000 during the past fiscal year and said the Association's assets total more than $1.5 million. Only investment income is spent on scholarships and expenses, he pointed out.

Daniel E. Smith, chairman of the scholarship committee, told the 55 scholarship recipients there were "no strings attached" to their awards, but urged them to "keep us in your minds and your hearts as you move through life."

Forty-five awards were for scholastic achievements, five were earmarked for vocational pursuits and five Max Fisher awards were for athletic accomplishments. The latter were presented by Dr. Gail Herron.

Smith applauded SHS Principal Rob Delane for his 10 years of work on the scholarship project.

The 50-year 1938 class was represented by Dr. Harold Hoprich, himself a scholarship winner in 1938. He gave a partly humorous talk, saying the class was not only happy to be at the banquet, "but happy to be anywhere." He said his class was an active bunch that has held 20 consecutive yearly picnics. He presented the Association with a class gift of $1,500 and closed by saying it was a privilege to be a graduate of Salem High.

Joseph Bodo of Tampa, a 1923 SHS graduate, told the new graduating class it has an awesome responsibility, but to "love yourself and miracles will happen." He traced the history of the high school back to 1853 and said "we are proud of our heritage."

Members of the classes of 1933, 1928, 1923 and 1916 (Charles F. Baker) were introduced.

Walken, who was the first 4.0 grade student at Salem High, introduced his parents, Nat and Bertha Walken of Salem. He said they had given him a great start in life and that he had the benefit of a wholesome small town atmosphere in growing up.

He said he had been lucky in the real estate field, but that it was a creative field that he loved. Love, sensitivity and hard work helped make his success possible, he said.

Walken told the 1988 class: "Know your

Words reflect high caliber of graduates

(Editor's note: An example of the caliber of Salem High's new graduates can be seen in the following two letters, received from two Class of 1988 students who had 4.0 grade averages.)

As teenagers we often complain about the lack of opportunities that exist in a small community such as Salem; however, we forget that Salem is one of the few communities that provides for a future of opportunities for its youth with the distribution of the Alumni Scholarships.

I would like to thank you, the Alumni Association, ever so much for the money that I will receive. I assure you that it will be a good "investment" and hopefully I can someday return the generosity.

Thank you again!

Thank you so much for the scholarship which was presented to me at the SHS Alumni Association banquet on June 4. The generous grant will greatly ease the financial burden of my college education.

I would also like to thank you for a rewarding evening beyond the scholarship. Mr. Walken, Dr. Hoprich and other speakers were interesting, entertaining and very impressive. After attending that banquet, I have greater pride than ever before with regard to Salem, its schools and its people.

The Alumni Association is outstanding, and its scholarship program is wonderful. I am looking forward to becoming a member of such a fine organization and to attending future banquets.

One-upmanship dissolves at reunion

By John Goodall
Youngstown Vindicator

The Austintown Fitch Class of 1967, one of the area's largest in its day, gathered over the Thanksgiving holiday weekend after 20 years to tell a few whoppers and compare scars.

Holiday reunions are replacing the traditional summer gatherings of earlier high school classes, a concession to local economic realities. People dispersed across the nation in search of jobs and promotions are lured by the dual prospect of spending Thanksgiving with their families and seeing old classmates again.

I'd bet that many of the 170 — some who showed for the affair joined me in mixed feelings. Not that most of us don't have fond memories of high school. But if there was a period of our lives when we shrank from the intellectual challenges and social opportunities available, those four years are likely to be it.

We were all nerds!

Children often recognize things that adults can't or won't. Shortly before the reunion, I found my daughter laughing as she turned the pages of my yearbook. "What's so funny?" I demanded.

"Daddy," she giggled, "you're all nerds."

I snatched away the book, fumbling for a defense. Good Lord — checkered shirts, plastic hair bands, "flood"-length trousers, saddle shoes and horned-rimmed glasses — it was true!

We thought we were so cool then. How could we have known that Hollywood would adopt our style nearly two decades later as a comedy device in the film, "Revenge of the Nerds?"

And there was more to it than the fact we didn't dress as sophisticated as today's third graders.

Some barriers of long ago had come from within

So many of us were painfully, agonizingly inept socially. Skinny, immature, pimple-faced and going through changes we barely understood, we retreated to the sidelines, too timid to join a club or team, to try out for a play or ask someone for a date or dance.

Sometimes we were even too insecure to open a conversation with a person to whom we were attracted.

Our ultimate fear was of rejection, of being laughed at. Few things in existence are as fragile as a fledgling ego.

Perhaps a smaller school, like a small town, tends to draw almost everyone into the pattern of life, whether they like it or not. But at bustling Austintown Fitch, I'm afraid that too many of us reacted as one might in a big city — staying on guard, trying not to call attention to ourselves, watching that we didn't make a mistake. At the reunion the comment was repeated again and again by both men and women: "You probably don't remember me. I was kind of shy."

We weren't all nerds, of course. There were those possessed of a confidence and personality that propelled them to dominate, regardless of intellect or athletic prowess. Possibly unaware and without trying, they formed a circle unapproachable and envied by the masses beyond.

It wasn't that the "in crowd" tried to shut anyone out. The barriers to the rest of us were within.

A woman, who had been one of the brightest of our classmates, confessed the night of the reunion that she had always wanted to be pretty and popular, not the smartest. Time has a way of evening things, though.

Twenty years for some had worked a wondrous transformation. It was commented on more than once during the course of the affair that many of the plainer girls in school had come to equal or surpass in looks the cheerleader and homecoming court types.

In general, the females appeared to withstand the ravages of time far better than the males. The women sported trim figures and flashy hair styles, faces that were barely on speaking terms with a wrinkle.

They looked very much '80s women.

We guys were another matter. The hair on our faces often was more lush than the wisps left on our pates. Apparently the last long-forgotten pushup we had done wasn't away from the table. The lines in our skin looked like glacial ridges.

I'd like to think it was the pressures of pursuing a career in a "man's world" that made us appear more stone-washed than our jeans. But I had read the booklet.

The reunion committee had compiled bits of information about each of us: our current places of residence, spouses and children, jobs and activities. The women listed hobbies such as tennis, aerobics and skiing. Many of the men had gravitated to gardening, reading or watching football.

Horrible results: a muscle

These were women from the era when just about the only physical activity they were permitted was a silly version of half-court basketball with minimal dribbling? Too much activity, it was thought back then, would have a horrible result: a muscle.

The tables had turned in more ways than appearance, if the booklet can be believed. Those who seemed to have the most career success often were not particularly outstanding in high school, even academically.

Collapse of civilization?

Granted, a certain amount of truth-stretching is common in these kinds of endeavors. Even a cursory review of the listings clearly reveals that the whole of Western civilization would collapse if we were as a group suddenly removed from the scene.

Among us we have business owners, corporate executives, supervisors, a dentist, a Navy executive officer and engineers galore. Others carry important-sounding titles with companies or agencies identified only by inscrutable acronyms.

Some listings included just a name and address. They were tantalizingly mysterious. Had life devastated those classmates in some unmentionable fashion or were they so marvelously well off that they couldn't bother boasting?

My entry carries little information, but it is no mystery. I misplaced my reporting form.

I'm partial to the listings that refused to bend to convention. Straightforward, they offered no apologies for lives that might not meet others' definition of success.

Several housewives were secure enough to state that's what they were. Someone else didn't mind stating she had been a waitress for 22 years. Another

May French was teacher

In a story printed in 1987, concerning Salem schools in 1898-99, we erroneously listed "Max French" as a second grade teacher at Columbia School. Carroll Cobourn ('21) called to inform us that it was May French. She was his aunt. She died about 1974 at age 99.

reported she enjoyed being a member of Overeaters Anonymous.

What might border on one-upmanship in the booklet was not displayed at all at the reunion. People seemed to brighten at seeing the old crowd, including a good many of those they never took the chance of knowing.

The reunion wasn't so much a night that the nerds had their revenge. It was a demonstration that all can have their time, if they can only find it within to be patient.

Marine Sgt. Allison cited for heroism

Because he risked his life to rescue a distressed swimmer in a vicious rip tide in Kaneohe Bay, Hawaii, last December, Sgt. Robert Allison ('78) has been recommended for the Marine Corps Medal for Heroism.

After swimming, Allison saw a 66-year-old Air Force retiree being swept toward open sea by the rip tide. Another Marine, Cpl. John Mellor, swam after the man, followed by Allison.

The two reached the man, struggled against the tide and managed to bring him in to shore, no doubt saving his life.

Allison, the son of Robert E. Allison ('43) of 1341 Fairview Ct. and Evie Hahn Allison ('46) of 390 Woodland Ave., recently re-enlisted in the Marine Corps for three years, intending to make the Corps a career. He currently lives at 1243 A Manning Ct., Kailua, HI 96734, but will be moving to 29 Palms Marine Base in California in January where he will take one year of advanced training in electronics.

A ground radio repairman assigned to the 1st Radio Battalion, Allison has served in the Marines for eight years. He held the Salem High pole vault record until 1987. He and wife Yolanda have two sons, Bobby Jr. and Anthony.

Sports achievement by Paul Huzyak ('88) sets school record

One of the truly great individual sports achievements in the history of Salem High was performed May 26 by Paul Huzyak ('88) when he pole vaulted 16 feet in the regional track meet at Austintown. It was easily a new school record, 17 inches higher than Paul had ever vaulted before. His mark is only four inches under the all-time Ohio record.

He passed all heights up to 13 feet before starting to vault, then broke the meet record on four consecutive vaults. On his record-setting vault, the bar danced crazily before staying up.

Huzyak, a fine 3.84 student, also won a $3,000 scholarship from the Alumni Association.

Pager checks in

Bob Pager ('48), all-time Quaker basketball great, now resides at 114 Schooley Circle, Daphne, AL 36526 where he is in the manufacturing business. He called the alumni office to reminisce and to reveal that his daughter, Susie Redman, 21, is a competitor on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament circuit. She is tall, like her dad, and hits the ball a ton, he says.

'Socko' on flight

George (Socko) Vavrek ('45) of Torrance, CA, is still excited over his recent 2,000-mile ride aboard the Air France Supersonic Concorde jet. The two-hour Discovery Flight took him halfway to Hawaii and then back to San Diego. The flight cost passengers almost $1,000 apiece, but was "well worth it," Socko says. Vavrek organized and conducted West Coast Salem reunions in 1986 and 1987 and plans another in 1990.

Class of '38 celebrates golden date

Full weekend of activities and fellowship

Classmates from 13 states were present when the Salem Senior High School Class of 1938 celebrated its 50-year reunion June 3 at the Salem Golf Club. Attending were 145 persons, including 83 class members.

After a buffet dinner, a program was presented by co-chairmen Betty Albright Hanzlick and George Adams. Mrs. Hanzlick served as toastmistress. Sam Rea gave the invocation and a memorial to deceased members.

Treasurer Charles Trotter presented the SHS Alumni Association a check for $1,500 from the class. Accepting was Robert Dixon, executive coordinator, who made a short talk.

Prizes were awarded by Bob Hinton to Leonard and Dorothy Middleton Bonsall for the oldest intra-class marriage; to Harold and Mary Helen Bruderly Hoprich for the newest intra-class marriage; to Ralston Smith of Oregon for traveling the longest distance; to Harold London of Florida for driving the longest distance; to Ruth Provins Shallenberg for the 50th reservation; to Verna Lippiatt Stevens for driving the oldest car.

Thirteen specially crafted miniature chairs, made by Hinton, were given away as prizes. He also made and presented a lamp to Bill Brooks of South Carolina.

Adams read a selection of items from Quaker weeklies in 1938. A letter from original class president Charles Wentz, Comdr. USN retired, was read.

Lee Wilms presented the 1983-88 officers. Adams recognized committee members and a tribute to the class was given by Harold Culler.

Ralson Smith gave a talk on high school memories. Dancing to the music of the Kings of Swing followed.

Each member also received a round glass paper weight favor with silhouetted Quaker Lady and dates 1938-1988 positioned on each side of the head, given by Ray Coppock.

Out-of-state members were present from Oregon, California, Arizona, Montana, Texas, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Tennessee. New York, North and South Carolina and Florida.

The class held breakfasts on Saturday at Colonial Woods Restaurant with 50 in attendance and on Sunday at Timberlanes with 54 attending. A class reception was held at the SHS Alumni Association office on Saturday afternoon. Hinton showed slides of former reunions and picnics.

Ninety class members and guests attended the Alumni dinner Saturday night at Timberlanes. Hoprich made the class response with a short humorous talk.

One of Salem High's all-time basketball greats was the late Martha Willaman ('25) who led the entire state in the 1924-25 season with a 23 point per game scoring average, totalling 346 points in 15 games. The sister of Sam Willaman ('09) who became head football coach at Ohio State, she later married John Siskowic ('22), who was to coach and serve as athletic director at Struthers High for many years.

President's Message

We wish to thank all the graduated classes that held class reunions over the last few years for their donations to the scholarship fund. Last year, 11 classes gave $5,687. This year, nine classes have given $7,850 and one more class is still to be heard from after its Oct. 22 reunion.

The gifts were made in the name of each class when members were advised of the services the Alumni Association had provided its reunion planners. Each of the members was asked to give what they could and each class responded generously. It is all appreciated.

Contributions have zoomed since the Alumni office opened in the fall of 1984 and since our newsletter started to go out. It now reaches 10,000 grads in every state in the union.

Alumni history updated

(The alumni history was in the first issue of the Salem High School Alumni Association newsletter in 1985. The mailing covered only 3,800 graduates, but the current mailing is in excess of 9,600, so this updated story is reprinted).

Your recollection of the SHS Alumni Association is probably that of some obscure organization that was run by old fogies who held a dinner every June and gave out a couple hundred dollars in scholarships to the two brightest seniors. That's about the way it is today, with certain modifications. We found that we are the old fogies now and that the scholarships awarded annually total around $1000,000 — believe it or not.

The Association is now housed in a new office at 328 E. State St., which was formally opened in June, 1984. These rooms, extensively remodeled in a Williamsburg decor, were made available by an alumnus on a 15-year rent-free basis. There is an atmosphere of elegance in the rooms that should make any SHS grad proud.

The office is located next door to what used to be the Farmers Bank at the corner of E. State and Broadway. The 1300-square foot office has an 18 x 26 main office room and a large 18 x 48 meeting-exhibit room with skylight, rest room and kitchenette. The office is open every morning and is available at all times for class reunion planning meetings. About 85 a year are conducted there.

Bob Dixon ('40), a retired newspaperman, serves as executive coordinator and is on duty daily. He writes and edits this newsletter.

There are always exhibits of SHS memorabilia on display in the office. As an example, former coach

Floyd Stone, now living in Michigan, donated the football used in Ohio's first night game (in Salem in October, 1929) and it is on display, bearing names of all the members of that undefeated SHS squad.

Other material was given to the Association by the family of Laura Mae Whinnery ('30), who died in 1984. She had devoted almost all of her spare time over the years to collecting Salem High records and memorabilia. She kept extensive records in bulky ledgers, many dating back to the mid-1800's when the high school first began operations. The ledgers' contents have been re-typed into handy notebooks and are available for perusal by anyone interested. Mrs. Whinnery's contributions over the years cannot be overemphasized. Her records are priceless.

And there are continual contributions from alumni who have found treasures in attics and boxes.

Two committees, an Executive and a Scholarship, administer the affairs of the Association which now has an asset value of (are you ready for this?) more than $1.5 million. It is a non-profit organization with an IRS tax exempt status. No one has been able to find a similar high school alumni group anywhere that can boast of such funding.

For many, many years after its 1882 organization, the association struggled along, slowly gaining financial ground through modest donations and bequests. The first scholarship awarded was $60 which went to Walter French in 1908. In 1911, Charles Burchfield, who became a famous artist, received $120. Ella Thea Smith Cox ('16) won a $200 scholarship. She was to author the textbook "Exploring Biology," which has widespread use in high schools.

The big breakthrough in funding came in the 1970's. By that time, the Association was giving about $6,200 a year in scholarships to top seniors.

In 1972, Max Fisher ('26) of Detroit, the alumnus honored at the spring banquet that year, announced he would donate $5,000 annually in perpetuity from the Fisher Foundation for scholarships to outstanding athletes.

The Association gained great momentum from a $600,000 bequest from the late Leon H. Colley, who was associated with the First National Bank of Salem from 1928 until his death in 1977. He was bank president from 1938 to 1967. Oddly, he was not a Salem High graduate and had no children. Colley awards pushed the scholarship total in 1980 to $41,000.

Longtime teacher Doris Tetlow died in 1983 and left the Association $203,000. Scholarship totals jumped to $73,000 in 1983 and over the past five years have averaged $98,800. In 1986 the total was $114,500, the highest ever. This year $102,000 was given out.

Only interest income is used for scholarships, leaving the Association's principal intact.

Since 1908, when that first $60 award was made, the Association has awarded 635 students a total of $928,150 — a truly outstanding record.

Scholarship committee members work with the high school to select deserving and qualified students to receive awards each year. It has been said that the scope of the scholarship program is astonishing for a small college, let alone a high school.

But it was only yesterday!

One occupant of the alumni office who was in the initial first grade class at Reilly School in 1928 still regards Reilly as the "new" grade school in Salem. He was shocked to realize the school is now 60 years old.

Most of the other Salem schools are also showing their age. Prospect Elementary is 92 years old, the Junior High is 71 years old, Buckeye Elementary is 40 years old, Salem Senior High (also "new") is 31 years old and Southeast Elementary is 21 years old.

Graduates back their association

Single donations add up to big total

Generous contributions to the Scholarship Committee from Salem High graduates have totaled $15,932 since the publication of the spring newsletter.

Below is a list of all contributors through September 22. Please advise if anyone has been overlooked.

Nine classes that held reunions in 1988 contributed $7,850 of the above amount. The Class of 1948 is still to be heard from since its reunion was scheduled for later in the fall.

Each class asked its members if they would care to contribute to the scholarship fund, pointing out that the Association had provided meeting rooms, address printouts and mailing labels for reunion planners.

'69ers to meet

Salem High Class of 1969 will hold its 20-year reunion next July 8 at the Elks Lodge, a dinner-dance affair featuring the music of the Good Vibrations.

Anyone wanting to help should call Phil Crowgey at (216) 332-9164.

She sees stars

Encountering celebrities from the world of entertainment is commonplace with Karen J. Stillman ('64). It is all part of her job at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Karen, the daughter of George Ulrich of 1225 Somerset Dr., Salem, is a program representative for the school's Department of Humanities.

Her job is to do the planning and implementing for the series, serving as a liaison for all of the guests.

She has been involved in such lecture series as "Many Faces of Humor" and "Conversations with Distinguished Journalists." These have brought her in contact with Jay Leno, Whoopie Goldberg, Walter Cronkite, Linda Ellerbee, Helen Thomas, Jack Lemmon and others.

Most of the celebs are easy to deal with, but some are obnoxious, Karen reports. She says some comedians are unable to talk to people unless they are on stage. "They know their act, but they almost panic when you want to know something."

Karen, who has two sons, is attending Santa Monica College for a degree in education. She previously attended Columbus Business University and the U. of Cincinnati.

The Perry Indians finally got the recognition we so dearly deserve. It was a good piece of journalism. Bill Jones ('38) called me from California after reading the story. He reminded me that he was the Perry Indians' chief statistician and his records show that we won more games than we lost. You need to report facts.

The two of us were really upset with the use of the word "ineptitude" in the headline. Webster's definition includes these words: Unfit, not suitable, bungling and inefficient. They demean the character of the Perry Indians. We, in fact, were models of efficiency, fitness, respectability and a winning attitude.

Seriously, I really enjoyed reading the article. I have fond memories of the friendships established as a result of our no-talent performances.

I have just received my SHS newsletter and enjoyed it very much. It's always very interesting to read about the alumni and to have old names come out. The ethnic groups and old Salem families have been there for years, haven't they? I guess home is always home.

I enjoyed the old picture of Sherm and Paul Myers (Perry Indians) and remember what a gentleman Paul always was at the post office all of those years and a nice friend, too.

This note is all nostalgia, I guess. A couple of beers and 10 quiet minutes makes a person think of The Corner, Heddlestone's Drug Store, Murphy's, S. S. Kresge, Shaffer's Tavern (Jess, Florence, Tom) and the State Theater with Nat Walken.

I read every word of this newsletter and enjoyed it immensely. The very day I received this issue, I got a phone call from a classmate I haven't heard from in over 30 years. I am now secretary and half owner of a merger and acquisition firm in Jupiter and would enjoy hearing from anyone in this area.

Thank you so much for sending me your newsletter. I enjoyed it so much. I have fond memories of my high school days. I graduated in 1928 and knew Jim Scullion quite well. In admiring the photo on the newsletter cover and the fine young men shown there, I wondered if the professional football league didn't start in Ohio.

I remember that Sam Willaman formed a team of overweight players who received $50 per game if they sold enough tickets for the game. I believed, like most other people, that such a venture would never last, despite the popularity of Sam. (Editor's note: Sam Willaman was a 1909 grad of SHS, a fine athlete who later became head football coach at Ohio State.)

Other teams were the Canton

Bulldogs, a team in Cleveland, one in Youngstown, etc. Maybe some other old timer could give a better, more complete story than mine.

Nevertheless, I am proud of Rich Karlis and Kirk Lowdermilk.

Love that great picture of the Dazzling 1919 Quakers! I was just so thrilled to see that old team — can't believe that I ever looked that young! It must have been Minnie Koenreich who gave you the picture and it was good of you to use it. I keep in touch with Janet Woodruff, and I know she will get a charge from this, too. This brought back many, many memories. Thanks so much.

There are so many good articles in this edition of our paper — I like the Perry Indians and remember many of those guys. The corner of Lincoln and Perry was one of my favorite places, too, and I used to pick wild flowers there.

I remember Wilbur Smith of the Class of 1909 (who wrote the editorial about streetcars). He was the oldest of four sons and his father was part owner of the Smith and Eckstein Clothing Store. The article about our Quakers in the pros was also very good. My grandsons will be interested in reading about Rich and Kirk.

Your office does so much good and makes people happy. To find and return class rings is just great. So good of you to do all that.

Need old Quakers?

A supply of new Quaker annuals has been given to the Alumni Association by Salem High School. The books cover the years 1967, 1968, 1971, 1972, 1973, 1975, 1976, 1977, 1979, 1981, 1982, 1984 and 1985.

Copies may be procured by making a contribution to the Association's scholarship fund.

Graduates desiring to advertise in future editions of the Quaker annual should contact the school at 1200 E. 6th St., Salem, OH 44460.

Owner is sought

The alumni office is trying to determine the original owner of a girl's 1947 Salem High class ring, bearing what appears to be the initials A.M.R. No one with those initials was in the Class of 1947.

The ring is in the possession of Donna Ward Chappell who can be called at (216) 337-8887.

Rare items given

Some rare Salem High items were recently given to the Alumni Association by the family of the late Laura Mae Whinnery. Included was a November, 1902 Quaker monthly, the oldest known Quaker publication. Also included were minutes of Alumni Association meetings dating back to 1883, the year after the organization was formed.

Tours available

Individuals or groups visiting in Salem for their respective class reunions have been invited to tour the Salem Historical Society Museum at 208 S. Broadway.

Those interested should call Carolyn Lehwald, society director, at 332-4959 to make arrangements for a tour.

Soon a million!

Since 1908, the Salem High School Alumni Association has given out $928,150 in scholarships to 642 different students. The Alumni awards go back 81 years and total $845,150, Max Fisher athletic awards have been given out for 15 years and have totaled $75,000 to 75 students, while the new vocational awards the last two years have totaled $8,000.

Weiss promoted

Joseph M. Weiss III ('77) has been promoted to the position of manager of the John Murveen Co., Inc., bond representatives, of Boca Raton, Florida.

He was graduated with honors from Ohio U. with a degree in finance and business management. For the past three years, he has been a sale representative for the firm in Atlanta, Georgia. He is the son of Betty Daniels Weiss ('44) and the late Joseph M. Weiss, Jr. of Salem.

Blockbuster!

Nick Zantal ('49) of Huber Heights, Ohio, wrote the alumni office to give his new address "because I certainly would not want to miss any festivities in relation to our 40-year class reunion next year."

Then he added the following blockbuster: "I plan to ride my bicycle to this event, 240 miles from Dayton to Salem."
