SERB hearing held for Salem, firefighters

By LARRY SHIELDS

Staff Writer

SALEM — Attorneys for each side exchanged trial information during a short pre-hearing at the State Employment Relations Board in Columbus on Friday.

The pre-hearing was regarding an unfair labor practice complaint filed last year by the city against city firefighters.

The hearing was held before Administrative Law Judge Kay A. Kingsley who will preside over the formal hearing set for 9 a.m. April 30.

International Association of Fire

Fighter's Local 283 President Lt. Jeff Olinger and Vice President Mike Burns attended the pre-hearing along with IAFF 3rd District President Mike Taylor and attorney Henry Arnet. The city's legal council also appeared during the 15-minute hearing.

Olinger said, "The actual hearing sounds like it's going to be a lengthy one."

In Salem, four firefighters are on duty in the department around the clock and the city unfair labor practice complaint charges the daily four-man minimum staffing per shift in the department was cause for illegal collective bargaining last year because it was a permissive subject.

Local 283 firefighters signed a three-year agreement with the city last year that included a wage freeze.

Olinger said, "What they're saying to us is the minimum manning clause shouldn't be in the contract ... we shouldn't be allowed to put it in the contract."

He said the issue was brought up last year during collective bargaining but for firefighters it boiled down to a safety issue. He explained the issue has been challenged in fact-finding since 1996.

"We've won every fact-finding report since."

Olinger said he was surprised no city officials appeared at Friday's hearing.

The United States Occupational Safety and Health Administration set a two-in/two out standard years ago for firefighters on the scene.

Olinger said the Ohio Association of Fire Fighters "really has a high stake in this and is prepared to exhaust all its resources to make sure it stays in there."

Ohio March jobless rate at 25-year high

COLUMBUS (AP) — Ohio's unemployment rate rose to a 25-year high in March as the state continued to lose jobs, the Ohio Department of Job and Family Services said Friday.

The state's unemployment rate increased from a revised 9.5 percent in February to 9.7 percent last month, the highest rate since April 1984, department spokesman Brian Harter said.

"We continue to see a reflection of the economic trend that's going on across the country. That has meant a large loss in manufacturing jobs," Harter said.

But employment also continued to decline in Ohio's services sector during March, the department said. The state's unemployment rate has gone up by more than two full percentage points since October and November, when it held steady at 7.3 percent.

Defense seeks funds for experts in trial of Salem woman accused in mother's death

By MARY ANN GREIER

Staff Writer

LISBON — A judge made no ruling Friday on requests for funding to hire medical and psychological experts for the defense of Robin Jackson, the Salem woman charged with allegedly causing the 2007 death of her mother.

Defense attorney Douglas King filed a motion for the appropriation of funds, asking the county to pay $300 for a psychological expert to study Jackson's relationship with her mother, Shirley Nutter, and for $1,500 to secure a forensic pathologist to study the medical evidence.

The 48-year-old Jackson is scheduled to face trial June 9 for involuntary manslaughter, a first-degree felony, and failing to provide for a functionally impaired person, a fourth-degree felony. A status hearing remains set for 9:30 a.m. May 29.

The indictment alleged Jackson failed to properly care for her mother medically and nutritionally and failed to provide her with proper hygiene, leading to her death at age 70 in March 2007. Jackson had been her mother's caretaker.

During a hearing Friday before Judge C.

Ashley Pike in Columbiana County Common Pleas Court, King said $300 would cover an assessment and some type of written report from Dr. Robert DeVise, of Psychological and Family Consultants Inc. of Canton. If he testified, there could be additional charges.

As for the forensic expert, he only asked for $1,500 but was told the cost to retain Karl E. Williams, M.D., Forensic Consulting Services, Pittsburgh, would be $2,500 and recently learned it could be $3,500, so if he couldn't get him to do it for less, he may have to start searching for a new expert.

County Assistant Prosecutor Tim McNicol said he had no objection to the hiring of the forensic expert, acknowledging the complexities of the case, but he said he was a little disheartened by the fact that the jury trial was coming up and may not happen at the scheduled time if another medical expert has to be found.

He objected to the request for a psychological expert, saying the court would be throwing good money after bad for testimony that wouldn't be permitted at trial. He explained that Ohio law does not recognize

Cavs, Pistons ready to rumble

No love lost between two rivals

By TOM WITHERS

INDEPENDENCE — There's no love in the NBA playoffs. Now is not the time nor the place for fondness or friendship.

With so much on the line, the pressure can be smothering. And with each possession, game and series the intensity increases to unmatched levels.

"It's 100 times what it is in the regular season," said Cavaliers superstar LeBron James. Buckle up. It's here.

About to enter his fourth postseason, and this time fully confident he and his Cleveland teammates will finish what has been a season of seasons with the shiny Larry O'Brien Trophy in their grasp, James has learned the playoffs can turn the best of friends into the worst of enemies.

"You're playing the same team over and over," he said. "You start to hate that person, you're tired of seeing them everyday. You have no reason why you hate them or don't like them, it's just seeing the same person and the same plays, you have to be really dialed in on what's going on."

So getting focused to play the Washington Wizards the past three years was a challenge?

"No," James said. "We really hated them."

The Cavaliers don't hold quite the same disdain for their first-round opponent this season, but they aren't friendly with their Michigan neighbors either.

The Cavs and Pistons, who will open their best-of-seven series on Saturday at Quicken Loans Arena, know each other inside and out.

Central Division rivals, this is the third time in the past four years that they've met playoffs. Two years ago, Cleveland, behind an epic performance from James in Game 5, beat the Pistons in the Eastern Conference finals to avenge a loss to Detroit the previous year in a rough-and-tumble conference semifinal.

Yankees beat Indians 6-5 for 1st win at new home

NEW YORK — Derek Jeter broke an eighth-inning tie with the Yankees' fifth solo home run, and New York beat the Cleveland Indians 6-5 Friday for its first win at the new Yankee Stadium.

Johnny Damon, Mark Teixeira, Melky Cabrera and Robinson Cano also connected as New York avoided dropping the first two games at its new home. Cano became the first player to reach the new stadium's second deck.

A day after Cleveland blew out New York 10-2 in the opening game at the $1.5 billion palace, the ceremonial bunting was gone, and the spectators in many of the expensive seats were gone, too. While the level of noise was somewhat louder than at Thursday's opener, it still seemed lower than at the old ballpark, although a better test will be when rival Boston arrives for a series next month.

A crowd of 45,101, about 7,000 short of the listed capacity, saw Brian Bruney (2-0) win in relief of Joba Chamberlain, who threw just 46 of 93 pitches for strikes and gave up five runs, six hits and five walks in 4 2-3 slow-moving innings.

Mariano Rivera pitched the ninth to convert his third save in three chances. Following one-out singles by Tony Grafanino and Asdrubal Cabrera,

Pirates hold on for win

Pittsburgh pitchers tame Braves

By JOHN PERROTTO

Special to the Salem News

PITTSBURGH — Paul Maholm never seems get to mentioned among the elite pitchers in the National League.

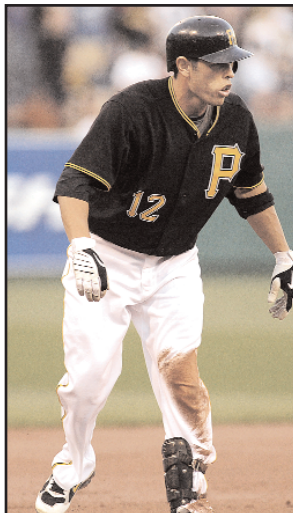

Perhaps it is time for that to change.

The Pirates ace turned in another gem Friday night as he pitched seven innings and combined with two relievers on a six-hit shutout to lead the Pirates to a 3-0 victory over the Atlanta Braves in the opener of a three-game series at PNC Park. The win pushed the Pirates back to the .500 level at 5-5.

Maholm is 2-0 with a 0.87 ERA after three starts and his ERA since last May 8 is 3.24, which ranks second among NL left-handers in that span behind the New York Mets' Johan Santana (2.33).

Yet, it seems no one outside the Pittsburgh area and perhaps his native Mississippi would recognize Maholm if he walked down the street.

"I think he definitely deserves to be considered among the best pitchers in the league," Pirates closer Matt Capps said. "Look at what he's done the last couple of years. He's been as good as anybody. The only thing that's keep him from getting noticed is wins."

Indeed, Maholm wound up with just nine victories last season in his 31 starts while playing on a team that finished 67-95. However, he already has two wins this year and has turned in a quality start in all three outings.

"He's become unhittable," Pirates center fielder Nate See PIRATES, 2B

Pittsburgh wins in OT

By ALAN ROBINSON
Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Bill Guerin scored his second goal of the game after Pittsburgh went on a rare two-man advantage in overtime, and the Penguins went up two games in their first-round playoff series against the Philadelphia Flyers, winning 3-2 on Friday night.

Guerin, at 38 the oldest player on a mostly young team, took Sergei Gonchar's pass from center point and skated toward the net from the low left circle, faked a pass and beat goalie Martin Biron on a shot that deflected off the left post and into the net 18:29 into overtime.

Guerin also scored the goal that tied it at 1 late in the second period, and Evgeni Malkin tied it at 2 with 3:37 remaining in the third after rookie Darroll Powe's goal put the determined Flyers up early in the period.

The Penguins will take a 2-0 series lead to Philadelphia for Game 3 on Sunday, as they did in winning last year's Eastern Conference finals against the Flyers.

The overtime game was the first between the in-state rivals since Keith Primeau's goal decided the Flyers' 2-1, five-OT win that started on May 4, 2000, and ended in the early morning hours of May 5. That game was the NHL's longest in the last 73 years.

This game was much shorter.

The Flyers initially went on the power play in overtime when Hal Gill was called for cross-checking, but an identical penalty on Mike Knuble and a slashing call on Claude Giroux 30 seconds later gave Pittsburgh a two-man edge that would have lasted 1:29. Guerin scored with 27 seconds left in

Obama pledges ‘equal partnership’ in the Americas

PORT-OF-SPAIN, Trinidad (AP) — Venturing into an unfamiliar region of the world, President Barack Obama made a splash on a stage of leaders from across the Americas on Friday and promised to offer them a new style of U.S. politics: more pragmatism, less arrogance.

“We have at times been disengaged, and at times we sought to dictate our terms,” the president told the heads of every democratic government across the Western Hemisphere.

“But I pledge to you that we seek an equal partnership,” Obama said. “There is no senior partner and junior partner in our relations.”

Such an idea — that the United States is equal, despite being keeper of the world’s most powerful military and leader of an economy that helps steer the globe — was telling.

Obama’s drive to reshape the image of the United States as a humble, cooperative partner is perhaps his most significant mission here in this Caribbean nation. Grappling with an economic swoon that has touched them all, the heads of 34 nations have gathered for the first time in almost four years to fashion a fresh agenda — and in some cases, to size up Obama.

“I’m here to launch a new chapter of engagement that will be sustained throughout my administration,” Obama said at the opening of the Summit of the Americas in the two-island nation of Trinidad and Tobago. He had entered the room to a roar of applause and was singled out for attention by all the other speakers.

Obama’s concessions came after reversals of decades-old policy toward Cuba, the United States’ rival just 90 miles to the south. Cuba is not a participant at the summit, but the potential for a sudden upward shift in its relations with the United States is dominating attention.

Until now, Obama had never been south of Mexico in the Western Hemisphere. And until Thursday, the 47-year-old president had only been to Mexico once in his life, during college.

The summit itself is not expected to produce any major breakthroughs. The final document is an already locked-in declaration of joint efforts on the economy, energy and security.

But Obama’s mission is broader. It is to get the countries in this part of the world — a mix of emerging, hurting, tiny and overshadowed places — to believe the United States is truly engaged.

Much of this region felt left off the U.S. agenda during the Iraq-dominated presidency of George W. Bush, although even Obama acknowledges the problem goes back much longer than that.

“The United States has changed over time. It has not always been easy, but it has changed,” Obama said. “And so I think it’s important to remind my fellow leaders that it’s not just the United States that has to change. All of us have responsibilities.”

In perhaps his sternest line, Obama told his peers that the United States is not to blame for all the problems of the hemisphere — and that they shouldn’t do anything to suggest it is. His comments were driven in part to the grievances aired by some of the leaders who spoke before Obama took the podium.

“The United States will be willing to acknowledge past errors where those errors have been made,” Obama said. “We will be partners in helping to alleviate poverty. But the American people have to get some positive reinforcement.”

This week alone, Obama has recast relations with Cuba by lifting a series of sanctions, published an opinion piece in English and Spanish that pleads with the hemisphere to “choose the future over the past,” stood with Mexican President Felipe Calderon in Mexico City to show solidarity in a festering drug war and immersed himself in this get-know-you summit.

Miss. woman survives being shot in head, makes tea

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A Mississippi woman who was shot in the head not only survived but made herself tea and offered an astonished deputy something to drink, authorities said Friday.

Tammy Sexton, 47, remained hospitalized three days after being wounded by her husband, who killed himself after he shot his wife. A bullet struck her squarely in the forehead, passed through her skull and exited through the back of her head, authorities said. She is expected to fully recover.

“There’s no way she should be alive other than a miracle from God,” said Sheriff Mike Byrd of Jackson County, Miss.

Byrd said deputies were looking for Sexton’s husband, Donald Ray Sexton, earlier in the week to give him a document ordering him to stay away from his wife. Court records show he was put on probation for six months on April 9 for domestic violence.

He showed up at their home in rural Jackson County in Southeast Mississippi about 12:10 a.m. Tuesday and confronted his wife as a relative ran next door to call police, the sheriff said.

“She was at her bed, and he shot her right in the head,” Byrd said. “Then he went out on the back porch and shot himself.”

A deputy was greeted by the woman when he arrived minutes after she was shot with the slug from a .380-caliber handgun.

“When the officer got there she said, ‘What’s going on?’ She was holding a rag on her head and talking. She was conscious, but she was confused about what had happened,” he said. “She had made herself some tea and offered the officer something to drink.”

Byrd said the bullet apparently passed through the lobes of the woman’s brain without causing major damage. She was rushed to a Mobile hospital by a helicopter.

While such cases may be rare, a neurosurgeon who wasn’t involved in Sexton’s case said such an outcome is possible. Medical journals also confirm people have been shot in the head with little or no lasting injury.

Captain arrives home to cheers

BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP) — The ship captain rescued by Navy snipers from the clutches of Somali pirates said upon his triumphant arrival back in his home state Friday that he was just an ordinary seaman doing his job and he’s not a hero.

“I’m not a hero, the military is,” said Richard Phillips a week and a half after being taken by pirates who attacked his cargo ship, the Maersk Alabama.

He said the first people he wanted to thank for saving him were the SEAL snipers who killed three pirates with three simultaneous gunshots in a daring Easter Sunday mission.

“They’re the superheroes,” he said. “They’re the titans. They’re impossible men doing an impossible job, and they did the impossible with me.”

Phillips’ wife, Andrea, and their adult children, Daniel and Mariah, went on board the corporate jet to greet him at the Burlington airport. Phillips waved to a small, cheering crowd and hugged his daughter as he walked inside a building for a private reunion.

After the brief reunion,

Phillips spoke to the media and thanked the military, saying it did the impossible by saving him. He also praised his fellow crew members.

EPA sets stage for new pollution limits for cars, plants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cars, power plants and factories could all soon face much tougher pollution limits after a government declaration Friday setting the stage for the first federal regulation of gases blamed for global warming.

The Environmental Protection Agency took a big step in that direction, concluding that carbon dioxide and five other greenhouse gases are a major hazard to Americans’ health. That was a reversal from the Bush administration, which resisted such a conclusion and said it would be costly for companies to meet new emission limits and therefore could harm the national economy.

“In both magnitude and probability, climate change is an enormous problem (and) the greenhouse gases that are responsible for it endangered public health and welfare,” said the EPA, concluding the dangers warrant action under federal air pollution laws.

Vatican denounces reaction to pope’s

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — John Sotos has a theory about why Abraham Lincoln was so tall, why he appeared to have lumps on his lips and even why he had gastrointestinal problems.

condom comments during Africa trip

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Critics of the Catholic Church’s social teachings are trying to intimidate Pope Benedict XVI into silence, the Vatican charged Friday in responding to attacks on the pontiff’s remarks about AIDS and condom use.

In a strongly worded statement, the Vatican defended the pope’s view that condoms aren’t the answer to Africa’s AIDS epidemic and could make it worse. On his way to Africa last month, he said the best strategy is the church’s effort to promote sexual responsibility through abstinence and monogamy.

France, Germany, the United Nations’ AIDS-fighting agency and the British medical journal The Lancet called the remarks irresponsible and dangerous. The Belgian parliament passed a resolution calling them “unacceptable” and demanded Belgium’s government officially protest.

Belgium’s ambassador to the Holy See lodged the formal protest Wednesday, prompting the Vatican Secretariat to issue its tough statement denouncing the Belgian vote.

Test of blood sample from Lincoln sought

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — John Sotos has a theory about why Abraham Lincoln was so tall, why he appeared to have lumps on his lips and even why he had gastrointestinal problems.

The 16th president, he contends, had a rare genetic disorder — one that would likely have left him dead of cancer within a year had he not been assassinated. And his bid to prove his theory has posed an ethical and scientific dilemma for a small Philadelphia museum in the year that marks the 200th anniversary of Lincoln’s birth.

Framed behind glass in the Grand Army of the Republic Civil War Museum and Library in northeast Philadelphia is a small piece of bloodstained pillowcase on which the head of the dying president rested after he was shot at Ford’s Theater in Washington 144 years ago.

Sotos, a cardiologist and author, is hoping a DNA test of the strip will reveal whether Lincoln was afflicted with multiple endocrine neoplasia, type 2B. The disorder, which occurs in one in every 600,000 people, would explain Lincoln’s unusual height, his relatively small and asymmetric head and bumps on his lips seen in photos, he said.

Plane smashes into Fla. home, killing 80-year-old pilot

OAKLAND PARK, Fla. (AP) — A small plane sputtered and dove into a house shortly after taking off from a local airport Friday morning, slicing the home down the middle into two charred pieces. The pilot was killed.

The plane, believed to be a twin-engine Cessna 421, crashed around 11:20 a.m., and the house burst into flames. The owner’s nephew barely escaped the catastrophe, leaving just before the aircraft hit to visit his aunt.

“For now, it’s a bit difficult to explain how I feel,” said Oscar Nolasco, 52, who has lived in the home for nearly 20 years. “Everything is gone.”

The house was about two miles from the Fort Lauderdale Executive Airport, where the plane has just taken off. The pilot, Cecil A. Murray, 80, of Tarmac, did not survive, said Broward County Sheriff Al Lamber-ti.

much since. The roles sure have. With 66 regular-season wins — and a sparkling 39-2 mark in their rowdy arena — the Cavaliers enter as the No. 1 overall seed. Like the Motor City itself, the No. 8 Pistons have fallen on hard times. At 39-43, they're the only team in the 16-team field with a losing record. On paper, it appears to be a major mismatch. "It's going to be a good challenge," Pistons center Rasheed Wallace said. "They've got a pretty good record, a pretty good home record and I know they are feeling themselves right now. "So I guess it's going to be like David vs. Goliath."

Western Reserve 8, East Palestine 0
BERLIN CENTER — Elizabeth Srock and Ashlee Grim teamed up to pitch a no-hitter for the second time this season for Western Reserve as they blanked East Palestine, 8-0 Friday. Srock went five innings, striking out 11, while Grim finished the contest with three strikeouts of her own. Srock, along with Maggie Stubbs and Kailyn Mowery hit for doubles, while Melissa Burkey hit for two doubles and Heather Monosky finished off the batting clinic with a triple. Carly Blair finished out the game for the Lady Bulldogs with five strikeouts and two walks. Western Reserve (5-2) will take on McDonald at home on Monday, while East Palestine travels to take on South Range.

McLouth said. "It's one thing to watch him from the dugout or the press box but I'm lucky because I get a great view of him from center field. I can really see how he attacks the hitters, up and down, in and out. He's great at what he does." Maholm laughed when asked if he is perhaps the most underrated starter in the league. "I don't care about that stuff," he said. "My goal every game is to pitch seven or eight innings and give us the best chance possible to win. That's all I care about, not what other people are thinking or saying about me." Maholm gave the Pirates a great opportunity to win on a night in which he battled his command. He allowed four hits but walked three, struck out two, twice hit Braves catcher Brian McCann and committed a balk. John Grabow worked around two singles to pitch a scoreless eighth and Capps finished with a scoreless ninth for his third save. The Pirates lowered their ERA to 2.90, best in the major leagues, lied starter Anthony Reyes. Then in the seventh, Smith walked Damon leading off and threw Teixeira's sacrifice wide of first, allowing Damon to come home on the error. Jeter led off the eighth against Jensen Lewis (1-1) with his third homer of the season. All five of New York's home runs went to right field. Judging by the first two games, tradition wasn't the only thing left behind at the original stadium across 161st Street. Noise and passion have been missing, too. Except these Davids have more than one slingshot in their arsenal. The Pistons, a perennial power and the only Eastern team to make the playoffs eight straight seasons, are still a threat. They're talented and could be trouble if the confident Cavs overlook them. That's not likely. "They have a lot of experience," Cleveland center Zydrunas Ilgauskas said. "They've been in the playoffs. They are a dangerous team. It won't be easy. We expect a tough series." Cleveland took the season series 3-1, winning the most recent matchup 79-73 at home on March 31. That game was like most between the defensive-minded teams in recent years — tight, tough and tense where open shots are rare and one scoring run can be all it when Kris Letang's shot from the point deflected off Malkin and past Biron for Malkin's second of the series. Pittsburgh had a chance to tie it only because goalie Marc-Andre Fleury made an improbable save several minutes before, scrambling from one side of the crease to the other to stick out his right skate and deflect Jeff Carter's shot toward an unguarded side of the net. With their season perhaps on the line if they went down 2-0, the Flyers responded the way coach John Stevens said after finishing last in the NL with a 5.08 mark last season. "It was kind of a battle for Paul," Pirates manager John Russell said. "He didn't have his best stuff but it shows how much he has grown and matured as a pitcher in the last year. Even on a night when it was a bit of a struggle, he still found way to get guys out and not give up any runs." Maholm got into major trouble in the second when he hit McCann to open the inning then gave up singles to Jeff Francoeur and Martin Prado that loaded the bases with no one out. However, Maholm got Casey Kotchman to pop out then induced Jordan Schafer to hit a comebacker to the mound that he turned into a pitcher-to-home-to-first double play that ended the inning. Maholm, true to his nature, never got rattled. "My goal was still to put up a zero in that inning and I felt I was at the point in the batting order where that could happen," he said. Braves starter Jair Jurrjens (2-1) also pitched well as he gave up one run on four hits in 6 2/3 innings with two walks and seven strikeouts. However, it wasn't enough. Others patrons lingered over meals on the second floor of the duplex Legends Suite Club behind home plate. Detroit averaged just 81 and shot only 41 percent against Cleveland, which could be without center Ben Wallace (strained knee) early in the series. Scoring has been a problem all season for the Pistons, who never recovered from the trade that sent Chauncey Billups to Denver for Allen Iverson, now a highly paid spectator. And unless coach Michael Curry devises something unique, Detroit's predictable offense won't offer the Cavs any surprises. "We know their personnel. We know what they like to do," Ilgauskas said. The Flyers didn't worry about retaliating or sending messages or trying to outhit Pittsburgh, only trying to beat them — and it nearly worked. They pressed the play from the start, got the important first goal from Scott Hartnell, then kept pressuring even after Pittsburgh tied it on Guerin's 29th career playoff goal. McLouth gave the Pirates breathing room in the eighth inning when he turned around a high fastball from closer Mike Gonzalez deep into the right-field bleachers for a two-run home run, his third of the season. "I think Gonzo made a mistake on that pitch but he's still a tough guy to get a hit off," McLouth said of his former Pirates' teammate. "With the way our pitching has been, we felt good with a one-run lead but a three-run lead made it even better."

Murder trial jurors can expect road trip

By MARY ANN GREIER

Staff Writer

LISBON — Jurors selected for the Eric Dillard murder trial can expect to take a road trip to Wellsville their first day on the job.

Judge C. Ashley Pike of Columbiana County Common Pleas Court approved the state's request for a jury view of the area where the shooting took place, with no objection from defense counsel.

Plans call for the trip to take place after the panel of 12 is selected, before the opening arguments, but with some instruction from the judge before they leave.

Dillard, 31, remains under electronically monitored house arrest in his Wellsville residence on Commerce Street, charged with murder with a gun specification and having weapons under disability for the April 22, 2008 shooting death of 35-year-old Jamie Farley of East Liverpool. The shooting occurred outside Dillard's residence.

The jury trial remains set for May 5.

During a final status hearing Friday, attorneys for both sides addressed some final housekeeping matters in preparation for trial. County Chief Assistant Prosecutor John Gamble filed a motion to compel to elicit addresses of some defense witnesses from the defense, but told the judge most of the issue had been resolved.

He said there were still three potential witnesses they needed addresses for, with the defense providing two of the three and indicating the third was nowhere to be found. They also discussed the limitations of what a witness from the Drug Enforcement Agency will be able to share on the stand.

Defense attorney James Hartford indicated early on that his client would be claiming self-defense and filed a written notice of that intent on April 1, indicating the victim had been threatening his client for months and called him the day of the shooting, threatening him, his son and his girlfriend.

The document said Farley came to Dillard's residence, was ordered to leave and left, but then returned and "...approached the defendant, his girlfriend and minor son in a menacing manner under circumstances which created in the defendant an honest and reasonable belief that it was necessary to use deadly force to protect himself, his girlfriend and minor son at their residence."

Ohio health care worker indicted on fraud charges

COLUMBUS (AP) — Ohio's attorney general says a former employee of a managed care organization has been indicted in Franklin County on workers compensation fraud charges.

Attorney General Richard Cordray said Friday that Christine Lynn Blair, a former employee of Columbus-based Gates McDonald Health Plus, is accused of instructing her staff to submit falsified return-to-work data to the Ohio Bureau of Workers Compensation.

Cordray said the data made it appear that workers whose claims were managed by the company returned to work the same day they were injured.

Gay's birdie streak lifts him to lead

By PETE IACOBELLI
Associated Press

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. — Brian Gay's run of five straight birdies lifted him past a revived Todd Hamilton after two rounds of the Verizon Heritage on Friday.

Gay made six birdies on the front nine, including five in a row from the fourth through ninth holes to help him to a 66 and, at 9-under par, a one-stroke lead over former British Open champion Hamilton.

First-round leader Alex Cejka followed his 64 with an even-par 71 and was tied at 7-under with two-time U.S. Open champion Lee Janzen.

Janzen's round of 70 featured an ace on the 17th hole. Gay has steadily improved over his 11 full PGA Tour seasons. His best came last year with his first career victory at the Mayakoba Golf Classic and a personal high of more than $2.2 million in earnings.

"That front nine was awesome," Gay said.

Gay's streak began when he rolled in an 18-footer for birdie on the par-3 4th hole, then picked up steam with a 25-foot putt a hole later. His approach from a fairway bunker landed inside 5 feet for a third straight birdie.

After a birdie putt inside 10 feet on the seventh, Gay closed the stretch with another sizeable putt of 20 feet to get reach 10 under.

Gay had a chance from 15 feet away on the ninth hole to keep things going, but settled for par.

He was well shy of the PGA Tour mark of eight straight birdies, accomplished many times. Last year, champion Boo Weekley and Jay Williamson each had streaks of five consecutive birdies at Harbour Town.

Gay made his only bogey on the 10th hole, then parred in to hold on to the lead.

He's had his struggles here, missing the cut six times in his nine previous trips. And Gay felt as challenged Friday with the swirling winds, despite his charge.

"Heck, I was as surprised as anybody" about his birdie run, he said.

Gay led a strong, if not stellar field, as many of the world's best players took the week off to recuperate after the Masters. Green jacket winner Angel Cabrera took a break as did Tiger Woods and Phil Mickelson. In all, just six of the top 20 ranked golfers teed it up here. Hamilton, who tied for 15th at Augusta, may have found his major championship at the right time.

His five-year PGA Tour exemption from that 2004 win ends after this season. And Hamilton had done little in the year's first three months — seven missed cuts in nine events — to guarantee him a spot beyond December.

"Getting off to a slow start, I think that's when I started thinking, 'Man, you better start doing something and not waste your opportunity. You've got one year of a free pass left, you better start getting after it.'"

Hamilton went after it hard last week to earn his biggest prize ($131,250) since 2004. The bounce back continued at Sea Pines Resort. He posted two sub-70 rounds in a tournament for the first time all season.

Hamilton got going with three birdies over four holes of his starting nine. He put a pitching wedge about 3 feet away on the 13th for the first birdie, knocked in a 12-footer on the par-3 14th and then added an 8-foot birdie putt on the 16th hole.

Hamilton closed with a birdie for the second straight day, rolling in a 10-foot putt on the ninth. There's no mystery about Hamilton's improved play. He said he has worked hard on his iron, wedge and bunker play. "some things I haven't been doing well over the last four years."

Janzen, whose last tour win was that 1998 U.S. Open win over the late Payne Stewart, continued his own try at shoring up his shaky playing status. Janzen's finished outside the top 125 the past four years and missed the cut in four of his seven events this year.

The highlight was the hole in one on the breezy 17th that moved him to a shot off the lead. Janzen's 8-iron tee shot took three hops, rolled against the pin and dropped in.

"It was just drawing a little bit, bounced right towards the hole and when somebody said, 'Go in,' I was just waiting for the reaction up on the green," Janzen said.

Two-time defending champ Weekley nearly shot himself out of the tournament early on. He made three bogeys and a double bogey when he four-putted the simple par-4 9th from 14 feet away.

However, Weekley rebounded with three birdies coming in to finish 1-under, eight shots back.

"You never know what can happen on the weekend," he said.

Divots: Missing the cut were Steve Flesch and Jim Furyk, the two highest Masters finishers competing at Harbour Town. Flesch tied for sixth at Augusta, but was 5-over here. Furyk, who tied for 12th last week, was 3-over. ... Along with Janzen, Tommy Armour III also aced a hole in the second round. He hit an 8-iron 162 yards into the cup on the 7th. ... Jerry Kelly withdrew with illness after carding a 10 on the par-5 15th hole.

Kahne says he'll honor contract through 2010

AVONDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Cross Kasey Kahne's name off the list of drivers on the move. He said Friday he doesn't want to break his contract with Richard Petty Motorsports at the end of the season.

"I made a commitment to race with (the team) through 2010, so I'll do that for sure," Kahne said. "I told them from the start that if we can get our cars where they are right and competitive with the best teams out here, then I don't know why I would ever want to move from that company."

Kahne's name has popped up recently as a potential free agent, based somewhat on his frustration of not being more consistent in the No. 9 Dodge. Although he heads into Saturday night's race at Phoenix International Raceway ranked 10th, he has not consistently contended for a championship since joining the team in 2004.

RPM has had several ownership changes since Kahne signed on, transferring from team founder Ray Evernham to partner George Gillett Jr. before its January merger with Petty Enterprises.

He has nine career wins, but has not finished higher than eighth in the final season standings. He's also made the Chase for the Sprint Cup championship twice in five seasons.

"I want to get a chance to compete in some really good equipment," he said. "Were working on that and if we get there, I'll stay with RPM."

Penn St. hires Sanderson away from Iowa State

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Penn State lured one of college wrestling's marquee names away from his alma mater to take over the Nittany Lions program.

Cael Sanderson was hired after three successful seasons at Iowa State, Penn State athletic director Tim Curley said in a statement Friday. The Cyclones won Big 12 titles all three years under Sanderson and finished in the top five in each of the last three NCAA championships.

Now, Sanderson is headed east to take over at Penn State, which slipped to 17th at nationals this season following a third-place finish in 2008.

The Nittany Lions also finished seventh in the Big Ten, and Penn State grad Troy Sunderland resigned as coach two weeks ago following 11 seasons at the helm at his own alma mater.

Sanderson, 29, will be officially introduced at a news conference in Happy Valley on Monday, Penn State said.

He's perhaps even better known among wrestling aficionados for his accomplishments on the mat as an Olympic gold medalist and four-time NCAA champion.

Curley said he was thrilled that Sanderson took the job, and that "Cael has quickly demonstrated as a head coach the skills, passion and dedication that made him an NCAA and Olympic champion."

Iowa State will conduct a national search for Sanderson's replacement, said athletic director Jamie Pollard.

"It is a difficult day for all Cyclones as we cope with the departure of a truly outstanding and accomplished student and coach," Pollard said in a statement. "Cael's unblemished collegiate record, Olympic glory and promising start as a coach all came while he was representing Iowa State University and he will forever be recognized as a Cyclone."

Sanderson departs without winning the national championship he promised when he was promoted to head coach following the retirement of Bobby Douglas in March 2006.

Sanderson broke down in tears during his introductory press conference in Ames, overwhelmed by the chance to take over at his alma mater. He quickly turned Iowa State into one of the nation's top programs.

Led by 197-pound national title winner Jake Varner, Iowa State finished third at the NCAAs in St. Louis last month.

Sanderson's arrival also took the Iowa-Iowa State rivalry — already one of the most heated in all of college sports — to new heights. In December, top-ranked Iowa beat No. 2 Iowa State in Iowa City in front of a national dual-meet attendance record crowd of 15,955.

But Sanderson's time in Ames was overshadowed by the Hawkeyes and coach Tom Brands, who awoke a sleeping giant at Iowa by guiding it the last two national titles, the 21st and 22nd in school history.

James joins Garnett in elite club

CLEVELAND (AP) — LeBron James has become the second player to win four conference player of the month awards in one season.

Cleveland's All-Star forward was named the NBA Eastern Conference's top player for April. He also won it in November, January and March this season, and now has 11 overall.

Kevin Garnett won the award four times with Minnesota in 2003-04, his MVP season.

James averaged 29.9 points, 6.0 rebounds and 6.6 assists in seven games this month. He helped the Cavs finish 66-16 overall, 39-2 at home and earn the No. 1 overall playoff seed. Cleveland begins the playoffs against Detroit on Saturday.

Dallas' Dirk Nowitzki was the Western Conference's top player.

Earnhardt sad No. 8 isn't racing right now

AVONDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Dale Earnhardt Jr. is sad the No. 8 isn't on the track this weekend at Phoenix International Raceway. Still, he believes his beloved former number will race again.

Earnhardt-Ganassi Racing closed its No. 8 team last week because of lack of funding. Aric Almirola was the driver.

Earnhardt used the number for nine seasons driving for Dale Earnhardt Inc. His stepmother would not allow him to take it with him when he left for Hendrick Motorsports at the end of 2007.

Junior says he does not blame Teresa Earnhardt for keeping the number, which had sentimental value to the Earnhardt family. Although he says he wanted to keep his No. 8, he says he's glad Robert Yates allowed him to take the No. 88 and start a new identity.

Memory of DNF lingers for legendary Rodgers

BOSTON (AP) — Former Boston Marathon champion Bill Rodgers is heading back to the starting line on Monday for another go at the race he won four times.

Rodgers hasn't run the race since 1999, when he went for the 50-and-over American record but dropped out at the top of Heartbreak Hill. Now 61, Rodgers says it still bothers him that his last marathon was one he didn't finish.

Rodgers won the world's most prestigious marathon in 1975 and then for three straight years from 1978-80. His victories helped jumpstart the popularity of distance running in the United States.

No American has won the Boston Marathon since Lisa Larsen-Weidenbach won the women's race in 1985. The last man to win Boston was Greg Meyer in 1983.

Chris Andersen, Denver Nuggets rise again

Team is dubbed "Comeback Kids"

By ARNIE STAPLETON
Associated Press

DENVER — So many things have gone right for the Denver Nuggets this season.

There's the trade that brought Chauncey Billups back to Denver, the return to health of big men Nene and Kenyon Martin. The maturation of Carmelo Anthony, the development of J.R. Smith.

But it's the acquisition of Chris "Birdman" Andersen and his spectacular play after missing almost two seasons because of a drug suspension that has the Nuggets doing so well, coach George Karl suggested.

The Nuggets are the second seed in the West and they have a first-round date with Andersen's former team, the New Orleans Hornets, beginning Sunday at the Pepsi Center.

It's the first time Denver has started a playoff series at home since 1988.

Andersen is one part of the Nuggets' frontcourt trio of Comeback Kids, along with Nene, who returned from testicular cancer, and Martin, who's overcome microfracture surgery to both knees.

"You have a cancer survivor that has been close to an All-Star year. You have a guy that has been maligned here because of his contract and now finally gives the foundation to a team that everybody expected of him," Karl said. "And then you have Chris Andersen, who, when I put in the game, there is a spirit to him walking up to the scorer's table. That doesn't happen in pro ball."

"Even the haters like Chris Andersen."

Andersen's ban lasted almost two years after he tested positive for an undisclosed "drug of abuse." He said he spent his time away from the game cleaning up his life and plotting his return.

"I kept a positive mind through it all. I stayed optimistic. I knew I wanted to come back and to be in the position I'm in," Andersen said. "Being on a team in second place in the Western Conference is just one of the rewards that I got through the hard work. The hard work paid off."

Karl was worried last summer when the Nuggets had to ditch defensive stud Marcus Camby to save $20 million, half of it in salary and the other half in luxury tax.

But Andersen, whose one-year deal is worth $998,398, has replaced Camby's shot-blocking and defensive disruption while adding a healthy dollop of exuberance that has made him a fan favorite.

One enthusiast even started a Web site called bringbackthebirdman.com, encouraging the Nuggets to re-sign Andersen, an unrestricted free agent this summer, to a multiyear deal.

"It's better than firegeorgekarl.com, I know that," Karl cracked.

But he's not joking when he insists the Nuggets wouldn't be where they are without the Birdman, who began his career in Denver, then had a breakout season in New Orleans in 2004-05 before his career was derailed by drugs.

Andersen returned to the Hornets late last season and played in five games, blocking four shots.

Then, several teams offered him the same NBA minimum contract, but he wanted to play in Denver, where he lives.

So he returned to the Nuggets and helped them forget all about Camby's departure.

Karl considers himself lucky.

"It's a gift from the basketball gods above," Karl said. "No one predicted us to (have this much success). No one predicted that Chris Andersen could ever play as well as he's played. We had him in camp, we worked him out for 10 days before we signed him."

"And we never thought we'd get this. This has been a gift."

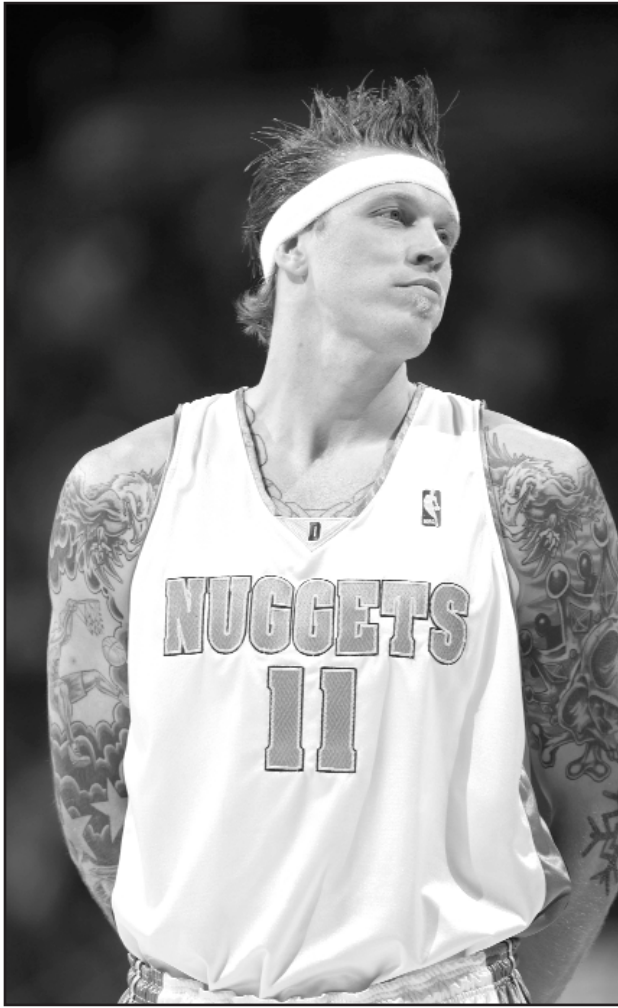

Andersen averaged 2.46 blocks per game, second in the NBA to Orlando Magic All-Star Dwight Howard's 2.92 and just ahead of the 2.13 blocks-per-game Camby averaged for the Los Angeles Clippers.

But get this: Andersen did his damage in 20.6 minutes per game.

Howard clocked 35.7 minutes a night and Camby 31.

Andersen also averaged 6.4 points and 6.2 boards.

It's the intangibles, though, that make him so popular, his willingness to throw himself around seemingly without regard to his health and impervious to pain, to take charges, the electrify the crowd with his spark, spirit and spunk.

The Birdman

In this April 13 file photo, Denver Nuggets forward Chris Andersen takes the court while facing the Sacramento Kings in the first quarter of a basketball game in Denver. Andersen will be facing the team that he left amid personal turmoil when the Nuggets host the New Orleans Hornets in Game 1 of the first-round of the NBA Western Conference playoffs on Sunday. (AP Photo)

"He has an amazing way of bringing energy to the game," Karl said. "And it doesn't have a lot of polish to it. It's kind of all over the place and yet when you watch it on film, it actually has a better discipline than you think it does. He's been great. There's some games I can't wait for the 5-minute mark so I can start rotating."

And sending in Andersen, with all his colorful tattoos and spiky hair, to do his thing.

As far as Karl's concerned, this Nuggets season would have been one for the birds if not for the Birdman.

"I think we'd be lost," Karl said. "I mean, I don't know how we would have played small. We wouldn't have been able to play big most of the year. He's replaced, statistically, the shot block from Marcus. He's not the same type of player, but in some ways he's actually more."

Hornets coach Byron Scott has found himself wishing at times that Andersen was still on his side.

"We talk about how great J.R.'s season has been, but I think Bird has been just as important to them on the defensive end," Scott said. "We go a little ways back and I'm very proud of him for the way he's come back and played the last year."

Send prosecutors to jail this time

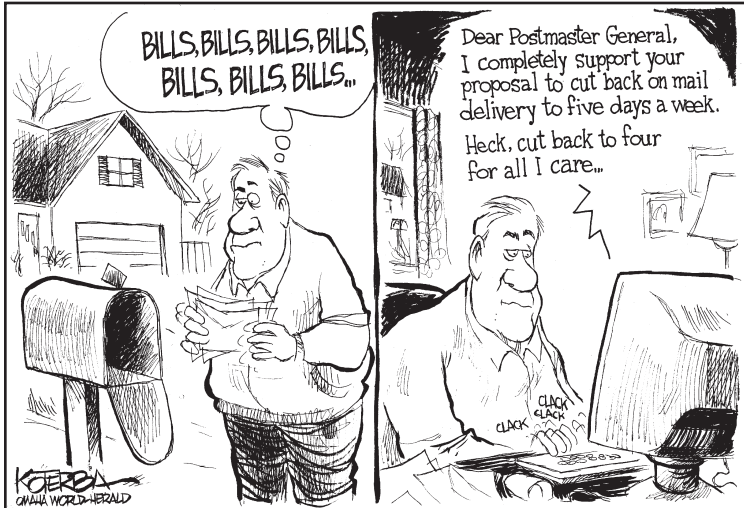

At least one analyst has speculated that wrongdoing by federal prosecutors in the case of former Sen. Ted Stevens "could prove to be career-ending" for some officials in the Justice Department's public corruption unit. If reports we are hearing about crimes committed by the prosecutors are correct, their conduct should result in punishment worse than sending them to unemployment lines. They ought to go to prison.

U.S. District Judge Emmet Sullivan may agree. Last Tuesday, Sullivan appointed a special prosecutor to investigate Justice Department lawyers who lied to Stevens' defense attorneys.

Stevens, a Republican who represented Alaska for many years, was convicted last fall of charges involving allegations of corruption in office. Weeks after the conviction, he lost a bid to be re-elected.

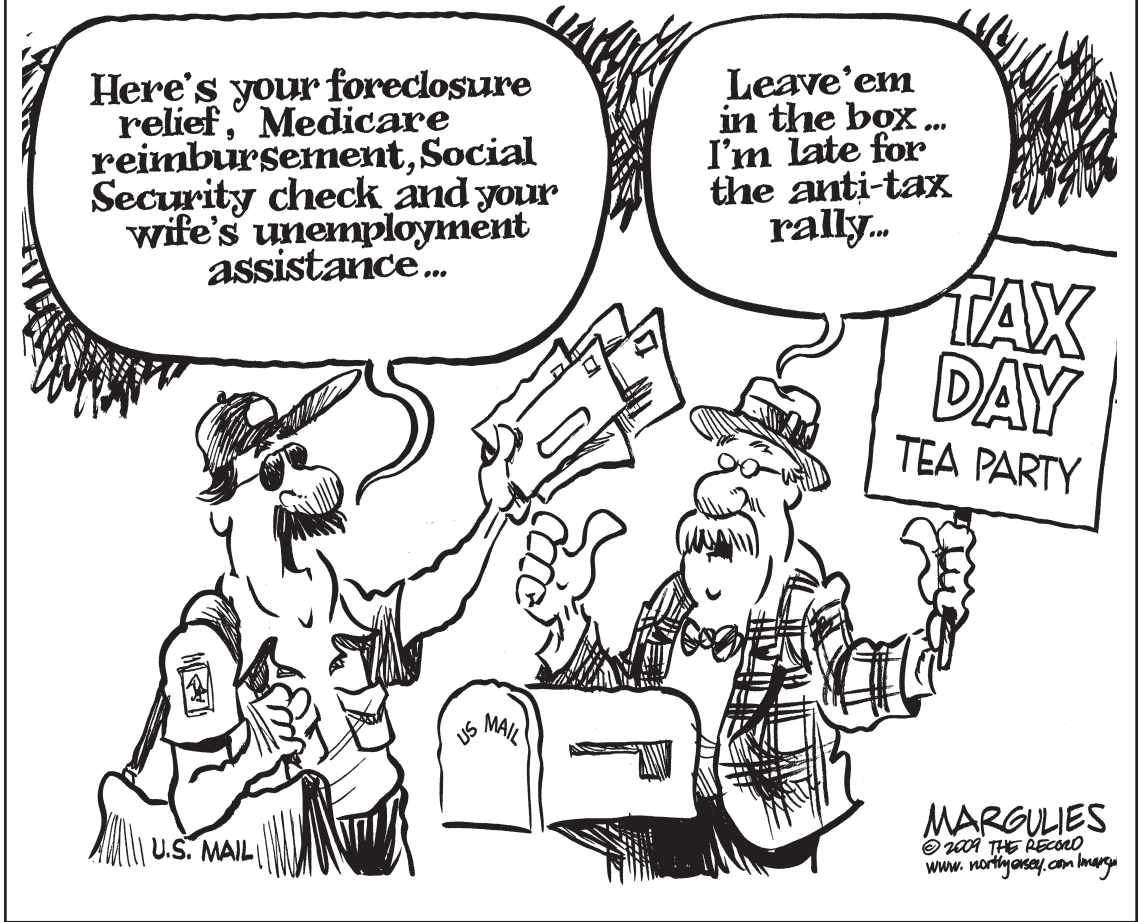

But last month, Attorney General Eric Holder admitted that some Justice Department prosecutors lied about evidence. So egregious was their behavior that Holder asked that the conviction be voided. Sullivan agreed with that.

Sullivan is right to be furious about what the Justice Department lawyers did. If the situation is as bad as he suspects, charges should be filed against the miscreants — and they, not Stevens, should go to jail.

IRS decides who is married

ELLEN GOODMAN

They are not the only married couple in America who talk about taxes and ulcers in the same sentence. Nor are they the only couple who believe they are paying more than they should. On that ground they are part of a noisy majority.

But they are a couple for whom tax season also entails an identity crisis. You see, Melba Abreu and Beatrice Hernandez file state taxes as what they are -- a legally married Massachusetts couple. But under federal law, they have to file federal taxes as what they aren't -- two single women.

This identity crisis is not just some psychological blip on the cheerful landscape of their family life. In the last four years, the government's refusal to consider them a married couple has cost the writer and the CFO of a nonprofit about $5,000 a year. As Beatrice puts it, "We don't know anyone for whom $20,000 and counting isn't significant."

This is one reason they joined seven other married couples and three surviving spouses last month in bringing a legal complaint against DOMA, the law that deliberately denies federal benefits to same-sex marriages. The other plaintiffs include a postal worker who can't get health care coverage for her spouse, a widower ineligible for higher Social Security benefits, and a couple who can't get a passport under their married name.

The suit is not just timely because we all share a certain post-tax traumatic stress syndrome. But we have just doubled the number of states in which same-sex couples can be legally married. First, Iowa joined Massachusetts and Connecticut. Then Vermont followed with the first legislative approval. And a bill was just introduced in New York, where people cringe to find themselves lagging behind Iowa.

This is all part of a careful state-by-state strategy. But as a side effect, it's producing more Americans with a strange dual citizenship: Married in the eyes of Iowa, single in the eyes of Washington. Eligible for a pension, health care, family leave in the eyes of the state; ineligible in the eyes of the feds.

DOMA is doing it. The so-called Defense of Marriage Act passed in the panic of 1996 when it looked as if Hawaii would become the first state with gay marriage. The purpose was as obvious and discriminatory as Rep. Henry Hyde's declaration that DOMA was to express this "disapprobation" for homosexuality.

The day that it passed, Dean Hara remembers deliberately going to have dinner in the members' lounge with his longtime partner, Rep. Gerry Studds, to face down his colleagues. Now, 13 years later, after their marriage and Studds' death, Hara is denied congressional survivor's annuities of $60,000 a year.

"Gerry worked for the federal government for 25 years," says Hara. "We were legally married. Why am I being treated differently as a surviving spouse?" He brings this question as a plaintiff in the case he describes as a posthumous "love letter to the things Gerry believed in."

Much has changed since 1996. Even Rep. Bob Barr, who wrote DOMA, now disavows it.

GLAD, the gay rights group that brought the marriage case to the Massachusetts court, is arguing on pretty narrow grounds. "In our system," says Mary Bonauto, "the states decide who gets married. It's a violation of equal protection to deny recognition of marriages of same-sex couples validly licensed by their state."

"Our case does not seek to marry any more people," she adds carefully. "It's about how the federal government is dealing with people already married by their states." But this is also a next step, the first direct confrontation with a federal law against gay marriage.

There is still enormous controversy around this issue and setbacks such as Proposition 8 in California. But in the glacial scheme of social change, attitudes are evolving at whitewater speed. Civil unions were once radical, now they are the conservative default position. The scare tactics of 1996 are the satires of 2009.

Did you see the current ad against same-sex marriage that puts zombies on parade uttering dire warnings? -- "There is a storm gathering. The clouds are dark and the winds are strong. And I am afraid." It got laughed out of the news when the audition tape for the actors became a YouTube sensation. So what do you say about an out-of-date law that enforces an identity crisis? What do you say about a law that "defends" marriage by denying it? The winds are blowing, but in a very different direction.

Peanut growers line up for government help, too

By ALAN FRAM

Associated Press Writer

The battered peanut industry has a new message: Peanuts are safe to eat, and there's a law in the works to make them even safer. So have a handful.

In a nutshell, that's the theme of a lobbying and public relations campaign to help the industry rebound from a salmonella crisis blamed for killing at least nine people and sickening nearly 700 others.

With more than 3,400 peanut products recalled in the outbreak linked to Peanut Corp. of America, a rattled public is buying less of them. One analyst puts the economic damage at $1 billion.

The effort by farmers and food manufacturers is part of a delicate strategy: Backing new federal food safety rules to help reassure consumers, while opposing steps they think go too far. It also illustrates a hard lesson learned by groups that find themselves in Congress' crosshairs: It is better to help lawmakers shape regulations than to let others do it for you.

"We know things are going to have to be done, and we want to be part of fixing the problem," said Mike McLeod, a lobbyist representing the Western Peanut Growers Association, whose members are Texas peanut farmers. "We want to be perceived as being constructive in trying to get this problem behind us."

The nation's 10,000 peanut growers get nearly $1 billion a year for their crops, with products like peanut butter and candy generating billions more, according to Stanley Fletcher, a University of Georgia agriculture professor specializing in peanuts.

Fletcher estimates farmers alone could lose $500 million this year from the salmonella crisis, with an additional $500 million lost in overall economic activity. That makes tougher safety standards an easier sell to an industry which might otherwise resist.

"A safer product means higher consumer confidence. Higher consumer confidence means they sell more product," said Rep. Sanford Bishop, D-Ga., whose state is the nation's largest peanut producer.

Farmers have come to Washington to lobby Congress and the Obama administration. They've asked them to buy more peanut butter for federal feeding programs and to change a government program they say is driving peanut prices down. But the main focus is on safety.

The most prominent food safety bill is one sponsored by Senate Majority Whip Richard Durbin, D-Ill., backed by Republican Sens. Saxby Chambliss and Johnny Isakson of Georgia. It would require companies to have food safety plans, empower the Food and Drug Administration to recall tainted products and require annual FDA inspections of facilities it considers high risk.

Durbin's bill has drawn praise from farmers, food manufacturers and consumer advocates, though there are divisions over whether to seek even stricter legislation. Consumer groups prefer at least yearly inspections for all food facilities, fees on food manufacturers to pay for the inspections and electronic tracking of food shipments.

"If they really want to protect their industry, they should support tougher oversight," said Jean Halloran, director of food policy initiatives for Consumers Union.

The views of peanut interests are not uniform. Some farmers back requirements — like annual inspections of all food manufacturers, not just the risky ones — that the manufacturers oppose.

"The message from producers is all the same: We don't want this to happen again, and what does the government need to do to prevent this from happening again," said Bob Redding, a lobbyist representing growers from Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Mississippi.

Tougher rules are needed but some, like yearly inspections, would make little sense, argues the Grocery Manufacturers Association, which represents major food companies.

"We should focus on activities that truly increase the safety of food and minimize steps that ultimately may increase the cost of food," said association lobbyist Scott Faber.

The food manufacturers far outgun peanut farmers in the lobbying wars.

The grocery manufacturers alone reported spending $4.5 million on lobbying last year, according to the nonpartisan Center for Responsive Politics, and recently hired the high-profile Duberstein Group to lobby on food safety issues. The Texas growers reported spending just $40,000 lobbying last year, while the Georgia Peanut Commission, representing that state's farmers, spent $100,000.

Convinced legislation alone isn't a solution, peanut interests have launched public relations campaigns.

Companies like the J.M. Smucker Co., makers of Jif peanut butter, have run national television ads and note prominently on their Internet sites that their products have not been recalled. Southern peanut growers gave more than 8,000 jars of peanut butter to Martha's Table, a Washington feeding program.

The National Peanut Board distributed peanuts at marathon races in Washington and Atlanta last month. It also used a long-planned New York City unveiling of a new slogan — "Peanuts: Energy for the good life" — to emphasize their products' safety, with farmers answering commuters' questions at a mock peanut field set up in Grand Central Terminal.

Peanut farmer Jimbo Grissom of Seminole, Texas, chairman of the Western Peanut Growers Association, wrote to President Barack Obama asking him to reassure consumers that peanut butter from supermarkets is safe. In a radio address, Obama had said his daughter Sasha often eats peanut butter sandwiches and said parents shouldn't have to worry about their children's lunches.

"We want to make sure that your statements do not lead Americans to believe that the peanut butter on their supermarket shelves is unsafe," Grissom said in a letter distributed to newspapers.

Grissom said he has received no response.

Amato defense wants crime scene diagram

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

LISBON — A crime scene diagram already used in a weapons hearing will be provided to the attorneys defending Jack “J.C.” Amato Jr. against a murder charge in his wife’s 2007 death.

The diagram called a “demonstrative aid” by Special Prosecutor Lynn Grimshaw was the subject of a motion to compel discovery filed by defense attorney James Hartford on March 27, with a hearing held by telephone Friday with Judge C. Ashley Pike in Columbiana County Common Pleas Court.

Amato, 37, was charged with murder and having weapons under disability in the shooting death of his wife, Tonia, at their Wellsville residence on July 1, 2007. He claimed self-defense, saying she fired a gun at him first after an argument and then he shot her with a .45-caliber handgun.

As part of a requirement of bail, he was living at his father’s Irondale residence under house arrest when investigators executed a search warrant at the residence last September in search of a gun involved in the shooting. They claimed the gun they had from the Wellsville residence didn’t match the bullet they found which contained the victim’s DNA.

During the search, investigators found guns and an alleged pipe bomb in Amato’s room, resulting in an additional five counts of having weapons under disability and one count of possession of a dangerous ordinance, all felonies. Amato has remained in the county jail on the weapons indictment and just recently lost a bid to have the evidence thrown out.

In his motion, Hartford asked the court to order the state to provide all scientific reports, diagrams or evidence summaries, particularly any three-dimensional drawings received from the Federal Bureau of Investigation or any other law enforcement agency. He specifically noted the diagram used by Grimshaw in the hearing on the separate weapons indictment against Amato, claiming it had not been provided to the defense.

Discovery requires the prosecution to reveal any witnesses or evidence which would prove helpful to the defense.

During the hearing, Grimshaw said the drawing was not evidence, but was based on material already turned over to the defense, including photographs, measurements and other information related to the crime scene at the Amato house in Wellsville.

He said he wanted a diagram that he could use in the courtroom and someone from the F.B.I volunteered to generate a computer diagram of the scene. He said Hartford was welcome to use the diagram in the courtroom.

Hartford insisted that he was entitled to a copy of the diagram because it could be useful to the defense. He said they had a right to evaluate it.

Grimshaw suggested that Hartford provide the state with everything he’s going to use during the trial. Defense attorney Nicholas Amato pointed out the drawing was used during the weapons hearing to show the line of the gunshot.

“I don’t understand the big deal here...our goal here is searching for the truth,” Pike said.

Grimshaw said he’s never withheld any evidence from the defense and added he didn’t like the innuendo that the state was withholding evidence.

“I want it crystal clear that I haven’t done anything wrong,” he said, prompting Hartford to say this was the fourth motion to compel filed in the case.

Pike said all counsel had conducted themselves in a professional manner throughout the discovery process. Grimshaw noted that if Hartford had told him he wanted to use the drawing, he would have given it to him. Hartford requested the name of the person who prepared the document and Grimshaw agreed to provide him both the name and a copy of the drawing.

The murder trial remains scheduled for Aug. 18, with a status hearing at 9 a.m. Aug. 10.

As for the separate weapons case, Grimshaw asked if they still intended to go to trial on May 19 in light of the motion to suppress being denied.

“Obviously that decision affects how we’re going to proceed,” Hartford said, but he also said they’ll still be going to trial on

Salem Hospital honors nurse Karen Buchmann

SALEM — Throughout Salem Community Hospital there are many employees who exceed the expectations of their jobs everyday. This commitment to excellence is acknowledged each month through the Above and Beyond Employee Recognition Program.

For the month of March, SCH is pleased to honor Karen Buchmann, an RN case manager in the case management department. In this role, Buchmann helps patients in a variety of ways, such as linking them with community resources or simply lending a sympathetic ear. She often goes above and beyond what is expected to help her patients overcome challenges.

Recently, Buchmann came to the aid of a seriously ill patient who was experiencing financial challenges and had no insurance. Buchmann realized the sadness of the situation and took action to help the young woman. One Sunday, as the patient was returning to her room from surgery, Buchmann brought her a gift of donations collected at church that morning. Buchmann reassured the patient that everything would work out.

Because of these kind actions, Buchmann has been described as an angel at work. She reflects the mission of the hospital by demonstrating compassion and concern for those in her care.

any kind of diminished capacity defense and no insanity plea had been raised.

When questioned after the hearing, McNicol said in Ohio, you’re either considered insane or sane — there’s no middle ground.

He said the psychological expert wouldn’t be able to testify about the relationship between mother and daughter and whether that relationship prevented Jackson from doing the right thing.

King argued that his client had a right to have an expert testify regarding her relationship with her mother, saying it would help him to better understand the situation and help him to defend her.

“She was treated very badly by her mother at the mere suggestion of going for medical care,” he said.

When Pike asked if the information the psychologist used would be gleaned from the defendant, King said it would be based on interviews with her, family members and her statement to police.

Pike took everything under advisement, with a ruling pending.

Trial set April 28 for man accused in East Liverpool house arsons

By MARY ANN GREIER

Staff Writer

LISBON — A jury trial remains set April 28 for an East Liverpool man accused of intentionally setting three houses on fire last year in East Liverpool.

John Williams, 28, whose last known address was Lincoln Avenue, had been found competent in March to stand trial on one count of aggravated arson, a second-degree felony, and two counts of arson, a fourth-degree felony.

Attorneys for both the defendant and the prosecution indicated to Judge C. Ashley Pike during a pretrial in Columbiana County Common Pleas Court on Friday that no resolution had been reached and the trial appeared to be going forward.

Court documents said the charges involved fires on Sept. 30 at 945 Dresden Ave. and 1001 Dresden Ave. and on July 6 at 728 Green Lane. One of the homes on Dresden Avenue was vacant at the time, but a resident was in the neighboring home which caught fire, leading to the more serious charge, documents said.

Williams allegedly admitted to the July fire after his arrest for the other two fires, according to East Liverpool police.

Also in Common Pleas Court:

- Nicholas Edwards, 19, of 142 1/2 W. Third St., Salem, pleaded guilty to complicity to breaking and entering, a fifth-degree felony, with sentencing set for June 19. Documents said Edwards helped a co-defendant in a break-in at Sami Quick Stop on Second Street in Salem on Jan. 20, 2008 by taking stolen beer and cigarettes from the co-defendant as he handed them out the window he broke to gain entry. The prosecution will recommend an eight-month prison term. The maximum possible prison term would be 12 months in prison.

- Steven Davis, 33, of 333 E. Washington St., Lisbon, was sentenced to six months in prison for breaking and entering and possession of criminal tools, both fifth-degree felonies, with credit for 36 days already served in the county jail. Documents said Davis broke into the Night Court bar on Market Street in Lisbon on July 29 and had a pry bar and hammer in his possession.

- Wayne Bean, 26, of Darlington, Pa., was placed on probation under community control for four years for burglary, a fourth-degree felony, and criminal trespass, a misdemeanor. An assault charge was dismissed. Documents said Bean trespassed in the residence of Marcy Mancuso on East Salem Street in Columbiana on July 27 and in the residence of her neighbor, Richard Daniels.

- James Green, 60, of 14729 Old Fredericktown Road, East Liverpool, was placed on probation under community control for four years for carrying a concealed weapon, a fourth-degree felony. Documents said Green was caught Jan. 27, 2008 on Pancake Clarkson Road with a loaded .357 magnum revolver under the passenger seat of his car.

- Scott McKinnon, 48, of 325 Moore St., East Liverpool, pleaded guilty to two counts of breaking and entering, a fifth-degree felony, in two separate indictments, with sentencing June 18. Documents said McKinnon trespassed at Quick Cash on Walnut Street in East Liverpool on June 27 and Aug. 3, stealing miscellaneous items.

- Trevor Heiney, 19, of 727 Broadway, Wellsville, pleaded guilty to receiving stolen property, a first-degree misdemeanor, with sentencing June 25. Documents said Heiney brought 194 pounds of telephone wire belonging to AT&T to Summitville Recycling Center, also known as Haupt’s Recycling, on Oct. 3 to turn it in for money.

POLICE

PERRY TOWNSHIP

Suspicious persons

Police responded to the 1800 block of S. Lincoln Ave. at 5:58 p.m. Wednesday where a person had been loitering for over an hour. Police spoke with the person who claimed to have limited knowledge of the English language and advised him the management requested him to leave. He was escorted from the property after checking him for warrants.

Suspicious vehicle

Police patrolling in the Egypt and Painter roads area at 4:49 p.m. observed an unoccupied vehicle sitting off the roadway with a window partially open and observed several very small pieces of contraband in plain view inside the vehicle. A search did not locate any other contraband and located the people nearby where they were fishing. They were advised of the consequences of criminal trespassing and also about the contraband, which was dispensed of.

Accidents

Police responded to a car in a ditch in the 1400 block of Newgarden Ave. at 7:43 p.m. Monday and found the driver, Ray A. Mercer, 971 Newgarden Ave., Salem, was intoxicated and charged him with OVI failure to control and an open container.

Police responded to a two vehicle accident without injuries at 2:19 p.m. Tuesday at S. Lincoln Ave. and state Route 45. Keith R. Burke of East Liverpool was southbound on S. Lincoln Ave. just south of Pidgeon Road when the Norfolk Southern Railway vehicle operated by Allen R. Pierson of East Liverpool was southbound and stopped for traffic when Burke rear-ended it. Burke was charged with assured clear distance accident and both vehicles were driven from the scene.

Civil

Police responded to the 1900 block of Cunningham Road where the complainant advised she and her husband were getting divorced and he took a television that belongs to her mother. All parties were advised it was a civil matter.

Assist deputies

Police responded to the 2800 block of Cunningham Road at 8:05 p.m. Tuesday and assisted deputies on a domestic call. Both parties were separated and deputies charged Wade and Billie Cain with domestic violence and transported them to the county jail.

Traffic stop

Police made a traffic stop in the 1900 block of Cunningham Road on a vehicle with an expired tag and the registration did not fit the vehicle. The driver, William C. Huddleston Jr., 4735 McCracken Road, was charged with fictitious plate and an expired registration. The vehicle was towed from the scene.

Financial series set at Abundant Life Fellowship

NEW WATERFORD — Barry Fasenmyer, 46, a financial consultant from Pittsburgh, will bring his energetic and insightful message to Abundant Life Fellowship, 46469 state Route 46, during the 10:30 a.m. service April 26. He will follow up that service with a free financial workshop from 10 a.m. to noon May 2 in the church social room.

Fasenmyer, a registered principal with New England Securities in Pittsburgh, has a passion to challenge and equip people to achieve greater blessings while better serving God. Using his spiritual gifts of prophecy and leader, he operates under the premise that every person has an obligation to God, to self and to future generations to go deeper in faith and pursue a better life. In this third decade of researching and investing in financial markets, Fasenmyer brings a multitude of ideas and experience in the areas of wealth and stewardship. Before entering the world of finance, Fasenmyer served in the U.S. Navy.

Abundant Life will follow up Fasenmyer's workshop by offering several weeks of free classes to further help people to apply the principles. Leading those Wednesday classes, which will begin at 7 p.m. May 6, will be Linda Allender, a leader at the church. All aspects of the financial series are open to the public.

Regulators close bank in Missouri; 24th this year

NEW YORK (AP) — Regulators on Friday shut down American Sterling Bank in Missouri, marking the 24th failure this year of a federally insured bank.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. was appointed receiver of the bank, based in Sugar Creek, Mo. It had $181 million in assets and $171.9 million in deposits as of March 20.

Metcalf Bank, based in Lee's Summit, Mo., was chosen to assume American Sterling's deposits and buy about $173.6 million of its assets. The FDIC will retain the rest of the assets to sell later.

The Missouri offices of American Sterling will reopen on Saturday. Those in California and Arizona will open on Monday as branches of Metcalf Bank.

Depositors of American Sterling will automatically become depositors of Metcalf Bank.

The last FDIC-insured institution to fail in Missouri was Hume Bank, in Hume, in March last year.

This year's tally so far of 24 bank failures is just under the total for all of 2008, when regulators seized 25 U.S. banks. Two of the nation's largest savings and loans failed that year, Washington Mutual Inc. and IndyMac Corp.

The list of bank failures is growing as falling home prices and rising unemployment cause more individuals and businesses to default on their debt.

Trapshooter honored

Recently at Columbiana County Fish and Game, Terry Zaplata of Lisbon, from left, was honored with a dinner and a plaque. Zaplata has been a registered trapshooter and member of the Amateur Trapshooting Association since 1968. He has done many things over the years to help further the sport and has won various state titles and honors. In 1977 he was the fourth person to ever break 500 straight. The list of his titles and trophies are too numerous to list here. Zaplata will be inducted into the Ohio State Trapshooting Hall of Fame on June 26. Presenting the plaque is Club President Wayne Saling. (Submitted photo)

Traina head of government group

CAMBRIDGE — The Ohio Mid-Eastern Governments Association (OMEGA) held its annual membership meeting on Wednesday at the Cambridge Country Club.

Kerry Metzger, Tuscarawas County Commissioner, introduced Larry Long, executive director of County Commissioners Association of Ohio. Long addressed the membership on economic issues impacting the OMEGA region at the county level. He made references to the many changes since Gov. Strickland took office, stating that Ohio as well as the nation is experiencing more economic difficulties at the county government levels.

The new officers elected for April 15, 2009 until April 2010 year are: President, Penny Traina, Columbiana County commissioner; Vice President, Thomas Wheaton, Carroll County commissioner; Secretary, Domenick Mucci, mayor, city of Steubenville; and Treasurer, Thomas Laughman, Guernsey County commissioner.

In other business, the board approved three community development block grants and six regional project applications through the OMEGA Intergovernmental Review Process.

The OMEGA FY07-08 annual report was distributed and explains the local development effort in planning, development and implementation of local and regional plans, programs and projects which will increase the economic activity in the area.

Salem Community Theatre changes pace with ‘The Price’

SALEM — So far this year audiences have been dazzled by the musicals the Fantastiks and Sanders Family Christmas on the theatre stage, and have viewed the hilarious comedy Noises Off and witnessed the hysterical special benefit a Roast To Hollywood.

But opening May 1, Arthur Miller’s “The Price” gives theatre goers a change of pace. The Price is compelling masterpiece examining the pain and anger that often lies just below the surface in many families, tells the story of two brothers who made very different choices for their lives and must now face the costs of those choices. A moving examination of family loyalty and personal sacrifice this play will have you riveted in your seats and for many will hit close to home.

It’s a drama that deals with the inner struggles of families, and how they have lived for years with past choices they have made. Set in the 1950’s, “The Price “ is written by on of America’s greatest playwrights, Arthur Miller.

Dick Fawcett returns to the director’s chair, and leads the four person cast he has assembled through Miller’s gripping saga. Fawcett has the privilege of once again directing his wife Kathy Fawcett, who assumes the role of Esther Franz. Kathy Fawcett never fails to shine on stage, and this role is no exception.

Terry Shears, an award winning actor from the Youngstown Playhouse, plays Gregory Solomon, a Jewish appraiser who many say is Miller’s finest character.

Bill Finley who has graced the SCT stage numerous times and is one of the finest actors in the area, plays Walter Franz, one of the brothers who are dealing away their fathers furniture.

And Dan Haueter breaks away from his usual comedic routines to play Victor Franz, the other Franz brother who gave up everything to care for their stricken father.

The show runs the first two weekends in May, May 1-3 and 8-10. Call the theatre at 332-9688 for tickets. (Submitted material)
