The Salem Community Hospital officially opened its new state-of-the-art, multi-million dollar Surgery Center Sunday afternoon, welcoming several hundred community members on a guided tour for a behind-the-scenes view of the advanced facility and its wide array of surgical services.

According to Howard Rohleder, SCH president and chief executive officer (CEO), the new facility achieves two goals — recognizing the shift to outpatient surgery and planning for the future.

“Our previous surgery suites had served us well for 30 years, but new technology, new procedures and greater volumes meant we had outgrown the 1978 facility,” he said.

the operating rooms, which must be kept available 24 hours a day, needed to be done at one time, and done properly, he said. With the advanced technology and growing capabilities that facilitate outpatient procedures, the need to focus on an outpatient center became apparent, he further noted.

“Our goal was to offer that convenience (of a free-standing outpatient surgery center) with the safety of a complete hospital,” he said. “We did not ignore the inpatients, but we designed a specific flow for inpatients and specific flow for outpatients.”

Taking almost three years to complete, the $19 million project was completed in two phases — the first of

COLUMBIANA — The Columbiana Public Library will celebrate 75 years of serving the community with a week-long series of events beginning Tuesday.

According to the library's Web site, it opened as a local library in a city-owned building on West Friend Street on Aug. 11, 1934, after a PTA committee received an allotment of books from the State Library of Ohio the prior year.

To access intangible tax funding, the library became public in 1935 and moved into a new facility at 111 S.

Elm St. on Sept. 9, 1939, with assistance from the Public Works Administration.

Multiple additions were completed at the Elm Street facility before a shift in state funding in 1986 allowed the library the necessary means to pursue a larger facility, the current one at 332 N. Middle St. Residents passed a 1.1-mill, ten-year bond issue in May 1990 and the building was opened on Aug. 25, 1991.

Another bond issue was passed in 2001, and additions to the adult, children's and community rooms has increased the facility's square footage to almost 16,000 feet.

It is currently one of seven independent libraries in Columbiana County and, in

Carroll helps Tribe beat Sox

Indians have won 12 of 18

CHICAGO (AP) — On a steamy day, Jamey Carroll and the Cleveland Indians rallied for a win by wearing down Jose Contreras during a long fifth inning.

Carroll hit a go-ahead RBI double in the fifth and added a solo homer in the seventh, leading the Cleveland Indians to an 8-4 victory over the Chicago White Sox on Sunday.

The Indians have won 12 of 18 and three straight series against division rivals but still trail Detroit in the AL Central by 11 1/2 games.

Contreras was coasting with a 3-0 lead but faltered in the fifth. He gave up back-to-back singles and walked Trevor Crowe to load the bases with no outs. Andy Marte followed with an RBI infield single and Wyatt Toregas had a sacrifice fly. With runners on first and second and two outs, Carroll doubled down the left-field line, scoring two and giving the Indians a 4-3 lead. Contreras' day ended when he walked Asdrubal Cabrera.

"You make him work on a day like today, as hot as it was out there, and you make a guy work and eventually you can catch up to him," Indians manager Eric Wedge said.

Contreras (4-11) allowed four runs on six hits in 4 2/3 innings. He struck out two and walked two. He is 0-4 in his last five outings with a 6.75 ERA and failed to make it out of the fifth inning three times.

White Sox manager Ozzie Guillen said Contreras struggled because of the heat.

"Believe me, I hope it was that because if it wasn't we're in trouble," Guillen said. "He was cruising real well, throwing the ball real well, attacking the strike zone the way we think he can do then all of a sudden everything was bad."

Contreras said the weather was not a factor.

"I wasn't tired at all," Contreras said through a translator. "I lost my rhythm that's why the pitches were up in the zone and started getting hit."

There were no testy moments after Guillen earlier Sunday warned the league his pitchers would retaliate by throwing at opposing batters if his team continued getting hit by pitches. The Indians hit three Chicago players on Saturday.

AKRON — Woods was in trouble in the trees on the famous par-5 16th hole, one shot behind Padraig Harrington, trying to figure out how he could squeeze out a victory Sunday in the Bridgestone Invitational.

He delivered another signature moment, this one an 8-iron from 178 that wound up a foot from the hole for birdie. Moments later, with an official timing his every shot, Padraig Harrington rushed his way into a stunning meltdown. He hit five straight shots without losing his

AKRON — Fittingly, Padraig Harrington had his back to Firestone Country Club as he walked to the scorer's trailer. A smile creased his face as he saw his two kids. "Give me a hug," he said as he lifted first Ciaran and then Patrick. "I need a hug."

Boy, did he. Harrington had said he was looking forward to facing off with Tiger Woods. But then a dreadful 16th hole — Arnold Palmer dubbed it "The Monster" for good reason — finished him. The Irishman's triple-bogey 8 on the 630-yard hole sabotaged any shot he had of keeping up, let alone staying ahead.

"Until 16, it was just a great battle," Woods said. Woods, who came into the hole down by a stroke, drilled a moon-shot of an 8 iron that ended up a foot from the hole for a birdie. Just like that, a four-shot swing meant Woods was well on his way to his seventh victory at the Bridgestone Invitational.

"One hole," Caroline Harrington said, shaking her head at the thought of her husband's late fall.

Tour officials had put the twosome on the clock several holes earlier. Harrington later said he felt the pressure to speed things up, but didn't use that as an excuse — although he twice said he

Dixon rolls to Mid-Ohio victory lane

20th IndyCar win is new mark

LEXINGTON — Scott Dixon didn't start racing IndyCars to set records.

They keep falling anyway.

Dixon became IndyCar's career leader in victories with a commanding performance in the Indy 200 at Mid-Ohio on Sunday. The win was the 20th of Dixon's career, breaking a tie with former series star Sam Hornish Jr.

Not that Dixon was ready to celebrate. He knows his record might not stand for long considering the company he keeps.

"To keep that going I'm definitely going to have to keep racing for a lot more years," Dixon said. "But if I can get it to 25, 30, 35 that would be pretty cool."

The affable New Zealander appears to be well on his way.

Dixon won so easily at Mid-Ohio, he was practically posing for pictures in Victory Lane by the time the rest of the field hit the finish line at the sprawling 2.258-mile course. He took the checkered flag nearly 30 seconds ahead of pole-sitter Ryan Briscoe, the largest margin of victory in the series in a decade.

"When you get to this place and you get in a rhythm with that car, you can do exactly what you want with it, you do a performance like Scott gave today," said Dario Franchitti, who finished third. "It was dominant and very impressive. He's tough to beat."

The win vaulted the defending points champion back atop the standings, the 12th time in 13 events this season that the points lead has changed hands.

The way Dixon ran roughshod over the field, he may have stamped himself as the driver to beat. Dixon heads to Sonoma in two weeks with a three-point lead over Briscoe and a 20-point edge over Franchitti.

If Dixon can keep it going, making up the difference won't be easy, though he is hardly comfortable at the top.

"It's going to go down to the wire," Dixon said. "(Briscoe) definitely isn't going to let up. My teammate Dario isn't going to let up either."

They better not if they want to stop Dixon's bid for a third points title.

Typhoon pummels China, toppling houses, flooding villages and forcing nearly a million to flee

BEIJING (AP) — A typhoon pummeled China's eastern coast Sunday, toppling houses, flooding villages and forcing nearly a million people to flee to safety. Officials rode bicycles to distribute food to residents trapped by rising waters. Typhoon Morakot struck after triggering the worst flooding in Taiwan 50 years, leaving dozens missing and feared dead and toppling a six-story hotel. It earlier lashed the Philippines, killing at least 21 people. Morakot, which means "emerald" in Thai, made landfall in China's eastern Fujian province, carrying heavy rain and winds of 74 miles (119 kilometers) per hour, according to the China Meteorological Administration. At least one child died after a house collapsed on him in Zhejiang province. People stumbled with flashlights as the storm enveloped the town of Beibi in Fujian in darkness, the official Xinhua News Agency said. Strong winds uprooted trees or snapped them apart, while farmers tried to catch fish swept out of fish farms by high waves. Village officials in Zhejiang rode bicycles to hand out drinking water and instant noodles to residents stranded by deep floods, while rescuers tried to reach eight sailors on a cargo ship blown onto a reef off Fujian, Xinhua reported.

Divers recover 7 bodies, helicopter in Hudson River from mid-air crash that killed 9

HOBOKEN, N.J. (AP) — Divers pulled a helicopter and four more bodies out of the murky Hudson River on Sunday in their search for victims, wreckage and explanations from a midair collision of a sightseeing helicopter and a small plane that killed nine people. The dead from Saturday's crash include three fathers and their three teenage sons. The private plane carried a family from Pennsylvania, and the helicopter held five Italian tourists celebrating a couple's 25th wedding anniversary. The plane approached the helicopter, which had just taken off for a 12-minute tour, from behind and clipped it with a wing, witnesses said. Both aircraft split apart and fell into the river. Searchers fought swift currents, dealt with visibility as low as one foot, and dodged debris dumped along the river bottom as they brought four more bodies on to boats. One was found in the fuselage of the helicopter, New Jersey State Police Sgt. Stephen Jones said. Two bodies remained missing. A U.S. Army Corps of Engineers crane lifted the twisted wreckage of the helicopter from 30 feet of water. Nearby, a sonar scanner found the small plane wreckage, New York City police said. More plane wreckage was found farther out in the river under about 50 feet of water.

sought on Sunday to calm public outrage in Iran over the deaths of detained protesters in prison, acknowledging abuses and calling for those responsible to be punished. A senior commander of the powerful Revolutionary Guard, which led the crackdown against the protesters, meanwhile, said that the three top opposition figures are the ones who should be put on trial, striking a harder line that suggests tensions at the highest levels of Iran's power structure. Iran's Prosecutor General Ghorban Ali Dorri Najafabadi called for those responsible for mistreating detainees to be punished, saying that the protesters weren't even meant to be taken to Kahrizak prison, which has been at the center of abuse claims. "Unfortunately, negligence and carelessness by some officials caused the Kahrizak incident, which is not defensible," he told the state news agency. "During early days, it is possible there were mistakes and mistreatment due to overcrowding in the prison." His comments were followed up by police chief Gen. Ismail Ahmadi Moghaddam who acknowledged protesters were beaten by their jailers at the same facility and its head has since been arrested along with three guards there and the prison closed down.

SC's philandering governor used state planes for personal, political trips

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — South Carolina Gov. Mark Sanford used state aircraft for personal and political trips, often bringing along his wife and children — contrary to state law regarding official use, an Associated Press investigation has found. Records reviewed by the AP show that since he took office in 2003, the two-term Republican has taken trips on state aircraft to locations of his children's sporting events, hair and dentist appointments, political party gatherings and a birthday party for a campaign donor. According to state budget law, "Any and all aircraft owned or operated by agencies of the State Government shall be used only for official business." On March 10, 2006, a state plane was sent to pick up Sanford in Myrtle Beach and return him to Columbia, the state capital, at a cost of $1,265 — when his calendar showed his only appointment in Columbia was "personal time" at his favorite discount hair salon. He had flown to Myrtle Beach on a private plane and attended a county GOP event. The trip home on the state aircraft took off at 1:50 p.m. and arrived in Columbia at 2:35 p.m., enabling the governor to keep his plans for a 3 p.m. haircut across town. There were no other appointments on his official schedule that afternoon; the trip back to Columbia would have taken about three hours by car.

Pa gunman's former church says God will hold shooter accountable, prays for surviving victims

FOREST HILLS, Pa. (AP) — If prayers were said Sunday for the soul of the gunman who killed three women at a Pennsylvania health club, they were not by the parishioners of a church where he apparently sat quietly for many years: Tetelestai Church doesn't pray for the dead. "We pray for the living — the victims and the family of George Sodini," said Chuck Matone, a senior deacon. And Sodini? "God will hold him accountable. God has his justice." Sodini's name wasn't even mentioned during the service, held in the auditorium of Trinity Christian School in Forest Hills. But John Dorohovich, an associate pastor, referred to the LA Fitness club shooter's long-seething rage indirectly, urging the faithful to reject "the bitterness and the gall and man's frantic search for happiness." "When you seek that over the word of God, that brings upon you a lifestyle of misery," he said. "And then you want to take it out on others."

Rollins hangs on for win in Reno

Mediate cards first top 10 finish of the season

RENO, Nev. (AP) — John Rollins overcame an early double bogey with a chip-in eagle, then survived a string of bogeys to shoot an even-par 72 and win the Legends Reno-Tahoe Open on Sunday for his third career PGA Tour victory.

Rollins, who tied the course record with a second-round 62 and led by six strokes at the turn Sunday, won by three strokes, finishing at 17-under 271 on the Montreux Golf & Country Club course.

Martin Laird made a 5-foot birdie putt on the 18th to shoot a 66 and tie for second with Jeff Quinney, who also shot a 66 on the strength of six birdies. Joe Ogilvie (71) was fourth at 13 under.

It was the first time in six attempts Rollins has won after leading through 54 holes.

“It was a hang-on kind of day. I’m proud I managed to come out on top,” said Rollins, who tied for second at Reno last year. “I had to battle a lot of emotions.”

Ryan Palmer, who started the day four off the pace in the final group with his friend Rollins, had four bogeys and two birdies on the front nine.

He shot a 73 to join Alex Cejka (67) and Kevin Na (68) at 12 under.

Rod Pampling finished another stroke back after a 67 on Sunday that included an eagle on the par-5 11th, where he holed out from a bunker in the third round for a quadruple-bogey 9. Despite making 13 of 14 cuts on tour this year, Rocco Mediate (72) carded his first top 10 finish of the season at 10-under.

Rollins, who won the 2002 Canadian Open and the 2006 B.C. Open, was the runner-up earlier this year at the Buick Invitational and the Honda Classic. The $540,000 winner’s check pushed his season earnings beyond the $2 million mark for only the second time in nine years on tour for a career total of more than $12 million.

Bridgestone’s aboard for 5 more years

AKRON (AP) — Bridgestone has become the fourth title sponsor this year to renew its contract with the PGA Tour.

The tire and golf equipment company agreed to back the World Golf Championship event at Firestone Country Club through 2014. Commissioner Tim Finchem and Bridgestone officials announced the agreement Sunday before the start of the tournament’s final round.

Bridgestone joins Accenture (Match Play), Zurich (New Orleans) and Travelers (Hartford), which also renewed contracts through 2014. Finchem calls this a solid trend in a down economy.

“We seem to be now in a very solid trend as we look out past this downturn of having an increasing number of our sponsors step up and move forward with us over the next half a decade,” Finchem said. “And for that we are delighted.”

The tour has signed a new sponsor in SBS for Kapalua, replacing Mercedes-Benz, through 2020; and The Greenbrier Classic, which replaces the Buick Open. Buick has backed out of its sponsorship of tour events, as has the namesake of the US Bank Championship in Milwaukee.

Finchem revealed earlier this year that FBR, sponsor of the Phoenix Open, would not renew its sponsorship deal when it runs out in 2010.

The Bridgestone tournament will remain a WGC event.

Finchem said the new deal would be well received by the world’s top player. Tiger Woods has won the Bridgestone Invitational six times at Firestone Country Club.

“I think the happiest person today might be Tiger,” he said.

SHEDDING THE RUST: After six weeks away from the PGA Tour, Phil Mickelson had mixed results in four days at the Bridgestone Invitational. “There was a little more rust,” Mickelson said. “I didn’t play as well as I expected. I expected to come out here and play well (but) I didn’t score well. I didn’t play as poorly as the score reflected.”

Mickelson closed with a 3-over 70 on Sunday to finish at 287, a distant 19 shots behind winner Tiger Woods.

After faltering near the finish at the U.S. Open, Mickelson had stayed at home to be with wife Amy, who is battling breast cancer. Golf was an afterthought for the first few weeks, until he eventually started playing practice rounds. He did fit in a tour of Hazeltine, home of next week’s PGA Championship.

Mickelson was greeted by large and welcoming crowds around Firestone Country Club.

“It’s been nice, and again we’ve had some good diagnosis,” he said. “We’re in a good situation for long-term recovery and yet still it’s not an easy road along the way. We still have ups and downs. But we’ve been fortunate so far.”

SURPRISE SECOND: Robert Allenby recorded an under-the-radar 66 to slide into second behind Tiger Woods when Padraig Harrington blew up down the finish.

There was no question what the key was for Allenby, whose 272 left him four shots back of Woods at the Bridgestone.

At the recommendation of defending champion Vijay Singh several weeks ago, he changed his grip. All of a sudden, he seemed to pour in every putt.

game, that’s for sure,” Allenby said. “I wouldn’t say I was on the down and out, but it just didn’t feel good and hasn’t felt food for quite a while. It’s funny, when you feel good with the putter, the rest of your game starts clicking. ... Now I’ve got some confidence.”

Allenby needed just 25 putts in the final round, five fewer than a day earlier. “The putter feels fantastic, it really does,” he said, adding that he hadn’t putted so well since 2005. “I’m excited to get out there and play.”

EURO INVASION: Based on the way they finished the Bridgestone Invitational, maybe another European player will succeed Padraig Harrington as the PGA Championship winner.

Lee Westwood, Justin Rose and Darren Clarke all felt good about their games as they packed their bags to head for Hazeltine, site of this week’s final major of the year.

Westwood shot a 5-under 65, the best round of the day, to finish at 5-under 275 for ninth place.

“I have gotten better as this week has gone on so I am looking forward to next week,” he said. “It’s the last major of the year and having come

Rollins sank an 18-foot birdie putt on the par-3 second hole, but he double bogeyed the par-5 fourth after he had to take a penalty stroke for an unplayable lie in the right rough off the tee and missed a 9-foot putt for bogey.

He chipped within 3 feet from 44 yards out on the 616-year, par-5 fifth and made the birdie putt to make the turn at even-par 36 — and six strokes ahead.

On the 584-yard 11th, he drove 351 yards down the right side of the fairway, hit his approach 212 yards to just short of the green and chipped in from nearly 40 feet for the eagle that pushed him to 19 under. But he followed that with consecutive bogeys, hitting short in a bunker on the par-3 12th and missing a 13-foot putt for par, then hitting his approach over the green on the par-4 13th before two-putting from 9 feet. He hit another drive 348 yards on the 477-yard, par-4 15th but his second shot came up short in a deep bunker on the short side and his next went 25 feet past the hole before he two-putted again for bogey to drop to 16-under — ahead by only two — with three holes to play.

so close at the (British) Open championship, I will try and put that right next week — and get the ‘W’ as they say over here.”

Westwood held a one-shot lead with four holes to play at Turnberry before making back-to-back bogeys.

Rose followed an opening 75 with rounds of 68, 69 and 69 on a long and tree-lined course many think is perfect preparation for Hazeltine.

“This has been the perfect warmup for me,” Rose said.

Clarke finished at even-par 280 and was encouraged with how he played.

“The guys at the PGA of America have been very kind in giving me an invite to play in the tournament, and the fact that I have a little bit of form going into it means I’m very much looking forward to it.”

DIVOTS: The victory was Woods’ 11th in Ohio, including a tournament-record four at the Memorial Tournament in Dublin. ... Sixty-six players have finished as a runner-up to Woods on the PGA Tour. ... Singh, who won the Bridgestone a year ago when Woods was out recuperating from knee surgery, finished at 281, 13 shots behind Woods.

TIGER FROM 1B

turn, made triple bogey and became a mere bystander the final two holes as Woods won for the 70th time in his career.

Woods closed with a 5-under 65, becoming the first player in PGA Tour history to win seven times on the same golf course and giving him back-to-back victories going into the PGA Championship, his last chance to win a major this year.

Woods won it with an 8-iron that was pure theater.

“When I hit it, I knew it was going to be a good one,” he said. “I thought it was going to be just a little bit past the hole. I was surprised it spun that much considering it was that much downwind. But it came back and ended up a kick-in.”

He believes Harrington lost it with a stopwatch that was unnecessary.

They were timed earlier in the round, then told by John Paramor, the PGA European Tour’s chief referee, they were on the clock on the 16th tee, with Harrington in the lead by one shot. Knowing he had no time to contemplate his escape from the trees, the collar of a bunker and a dicey flop shot behind the green, he turned the hole known as “The Monster” into an utter mess.

The pivotal play was his fourth shot behind the green, which came out hot and into the water.

“I had an awkward fourth shot,” Harrington said. “I had to go after it and probably rushed that a bit. That was the end of that.”

Harrington told Woods when it was over, “We’ll do battle many times again.”

Woods, who holds the three-time major champion in high esteem, looked forward to that.

“Like I was telling him out there, I’m sorry that John got in the way of a great battle,” because it was such a great battle for 16 holes,” Woods said. “We’re going at it, head-to-head, and unfortunately that happened. Paddy and I will definitely do it again.”

Asked if he won because of an 8-iron or a stopwatch, Woods replied, “Both.”

Paramor said the final pairing was 17 minutes behind schedule on the 16th hole and “we had no choice but to put them on the clock.”

The dispute clouded an otherwise remarkable rally for Woods, who won his 16th title in just 30 starts in the World Golf Championships series, and picked up a lot of momentum headed to Hazeltine.

Woods, who has won the Bridgestone Invitational seven times in 10 starts and has never finished out of the top five, closed out his remarkable afternoon in style with a 6-foot birdie putt.

His fifth victory this year and 70th of his PGA Tour career put him three behind Jack Nicklaus, and 12 victories away from the all-time record held by Sam Snead.

“We locked horns pretty good,” Woods said. “I made a couple of mistakes. Paddy was being consistent, grinding it out, doing all the right things. Unfortunately, 16 happened. But it was a great battle all day.” It was every bit of that.

Woods won for only the sixth time in his career when trailing by three shots or more, a deficit that didn’t last long.

He hit his approach into the par-5 second hole just over the bunkers to 25 feet to make eagle, and two more birdies fairway right. It’s not the end of the world.”

Needing to just punch a 5-iron that would run down within 80 or 90 yards of the small green, fronted by a large lake, he pulled the shot and it ended up on the slope of a bunker. From there he hit his approach over the green into more deep rough.

While all of that was taking place, Woods had found the left rough. He hit back to the fairway, leaving himself 178 yards that he easily covered with the 8-iron.

“It was a superb golf shot, a phenomenal shot,” Harrington said. “I struggled to hit that green with a lob wedge, so it was pretty impressive. ... Yeah, it was a great shot, but I was having my own troubles at that stage.”

Woods waited while Harrington struggled, hitting seven consecutive shots.

From behind the green, Harrington’s flop shot from a downhill lie behind the green came out hot and rolled all the way past the pin and into the lake in front of the green. The was enough for him to take the lead after only five holes. From the right rough on the ninth fairway — a rare miss on the front nine — Woods hit to 7 feet for a birdie that gave him a 30 on the outward nine and a two-shot lead.

Harrington, a three-time major champion with a tough mind, kept grinding away with pars and regained a share of the lead with his first birdie of the day on the 11th. And when Woods made consecutive bogeys, Harrington found himself with a one-shot lead heading for the homestretch.

What cost Harrington was his second shot from the trees, which he tried to land some 80 yards short of the green. Instead, he pulled the 5-iron to the grassy slope of the bunker, and had to decide quickly his next move after watching Woods stuff the 8-iron.

“It was a superb golf shot. It was a phenomenal shot,” Harrington said. “I struggled to hit that green with a lob wedge, so it was pretty impressive. But I was having my own troubles at that stage.”

From behind the green, the shot is all down hill toward the water. Harrington could have gallery, crammed into the grandstands and five-deep behind the ropes at the course’s signature hole, groaned in unison.

“I had an awkward fourth shot,” Harrington said. “I had to go after it and probably rushed it a bit as well.”

“That was the end of that.” Harrington walked all the way back to the middle of the fairway and again chipped over the green, then chopped the ball out and hit the putt for his snowman.

“I took 6 and 8 the last two played sideways and assured himself of a bogey, but he figured a par was his chance to win the tournament.

“I just got it a little bit too much on the club face and didn’t get under it enough, and it came out too strong,” he said.

The four-shot swing was the tournament. For the first time all day, Woods finally felt in control.

Ultimately, the winner didn’t surprise anyone.

Hunter Mahan, who shot 66 and tied for fourth, looked up at the leaderboard early in his round and saw that Woods already had erased a three-shot deficit after four holes.

“That’s what he does,” Mahan said. “He could play this course left-handed and do well.”

A short time later, Camilo Villegas left the clubhouse and passed by the British-based Sky Sports broadcast crew watching on TV. Woods and Harrington were on the 12th hole.

“What are you watching for? You know what’s going to happen,” Villegas said with a smile. The final hour was full of surprises, except for Woods winning at Firestone.

days (there), so I certainly think it’s a bit of a monster,” Harrington said.

He swore that the 16th wouldn’t stick in his mind.

“You learn from these things,” he said. “I don’t see it being a big issue. I’ve got the PGA next week. So, at the end of the day, when I start hitting shots tomorrow, today will be forgotten about.”

Harrington took steps to forget it immediately.

After the round, he turned to Woods and said, “We’ll do battle many times again.”

SHERIFF

County Sheriff

— A deputy on patrol at 12:35 a.m. Saturday came across a vehicle parked in front of J & J Tire, state Route 45, West Point, with a man looking under the hood and another snooping around the building. The two told the deputy their vehicle was having problems, and they stopped to look for a screwdriver. With their permission, the deputy searched the vehicle and found nothing inside. The two were told to leave and warned they would be charged with criminal trespassing if they returned.

— A call was received of a domestic dispute in progress on state Route 154, Negley, at 3:30 p.m. Saturday. The deputy arrived at the residence and spoke with Victoria Hoon, who said her husband told her to move out, which she was doing when he reportedly became angry and accused her of damaging some of his property. Her husband left prior to the deputy's arrival.

— Some people were shooting at clay pigeons in a field near St. Johnsberry Candle Co., state Route 7, New Waterford, at 7:30 p.m. Saturday. The men said they had the property owner's permission to be there, but the deputy advised them to cease since this was not a safe place to shoot.

Salvage yard owners worry about higher prices

DAYTON (AP) — The Cash for Clunkers program has been a boost to car sales, but the concerns of some salvage yard owners and car dealers show that not everyone is happy.

Richard Harris, owner of Valley Auto Parts in Dayton, said the program's requirement that clunkers' engines and drivetrains be destroyed will lead to fewer parts and higher prices.

"Used parts are going to be fewer and fewer," said Harris. "It's hard to stock a yard even if you have 1,000 cars," he said, because "parts don't interchange any more," and there are so many makes and models.

"It just don't make sense to lock up a good engine and destroy a good car," said Harris, who hasn't received any cars yet.

Tim Caldwell, owner of Dayton Xenia Auto Parts in Xenia, also is approved for the clunkers but said he's not accepting the vehicles because of safety concerns.

Caldwell said he learned this week that disabling the motors yields a toxic substance when the components melt together that could cause skin irritations and be hazardous to workers in unventilated areas.

Caldwell echoed the concerns about higher prices for spare parts, saying the lack of availability of SUV and truck parts was going to cause a price increase.

Chuck Adkins of Adkins Auto Salvage in Miamisburg said he was deterred by all the rules. Salvage yards can't sell the engines and drivetrains, and the cars have to be kept separate from other vehicles the business receives, he said.

Some local car dealers also question the program.

"It's working OK, but on the whole it's probably not working as intended," said Jim Taylor, owner of Troy Ford Inc. in Troy. "We're not getting real clunkers. The cars we're getting are still drivable."

Taylor said 15 or 16 of the 25 cars he's gotten he would have retailed or given to somebody in need of a car.

"It's a pretty good deal for consumers, but these people probably would have bought from us in the future (anyway)," he said.

A local towing company said the program has boosted its business.

Sandy's Towing contracted with Franklin Iron & Metal to haul clunkers from about 25 dealerships in the area, said Doug Thoma, co-owner of the towing company.

"We've towed about 200 cars," he said. "That won't even touch what's sitting on the ground waiting for the government to pay the dealers. Some dealers have 40 or 50 cars sitting on their lots."

Ohio roller coaster reopens day after man's death

MASON (AP) — Kings Island amusement park says it has reopened a roller coaster a day after the death of a man who had been riding it.

Park spokesman Don Helbig says state inspectors found the Firehawk was operating properly Sunday. A man who was having trouble breathing after riding the roller coaster died Saturday.

Helbig said ride operators noticed the man was having trouble breathing.

Emergency personnel took the man to a hospital, where he later died.

Helbig said Kings Island had voluntarily closed the ride.

The park's Web site says the Firehawk travels at 51 mph along 3,340 feet of track and has five inversions.

Breeders: puppy mill crackdown could hurt all

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Legislation to crack down on puppy mills under consideration by state lawmakers could end up hurting legitimate breeders and even put some small breeders out of business, breeders and industry advocates said.

Bills being considered in the Ohio House and Senate would create a regulatory regime for kennels, levy annual kennel fees based on the number of puppies born and set age limits on breeding dogs. The legislation is designed to stamp out breeders who raise dogs in cramped, filthy conditions with little or no medical care.

But Polly Britton, legislative agent for the Ohio Association of Animal Owners, said the bills could hurt large breeders by increasing their operating costs and knock small breeders out of business.

"They're out to shut down dog breeding, period," Britton said.

State Sen. Jim Hughes said the bill he is sponsoring will help respectable breeders by getting rid of the bad ones. He said he won't pull back on his effort.

"The issue won't go away by sweeping it under the rug," Hughes said. "If you don't like something I have, I am more than willing to make a good piece of legislation better."

The bills, which are in committee, would try to stop abusive breeders who keep dogs in cramped, dirty or disease-ridden kennels and who breed dogs with genetic problems or illnesses.

The legislation would also establish age limits and state inspections.

"If they're doing a good job, then there are no problems with this," said Hughes.

But breeders and industry advocates said the bills as proposed would hurt legitimate breeders with additional costs and rules.

Britton said her organization supports inspections but wants them done at the county level. The association would support fees to pay for them, she said.

Large-scale dog breeding occurs only in a few areas of Ohio, such as Holmes and Geauga counties, said Mark Kumpf, director of the Montgomery County Animal Resource Center.

Kumpf said people who purchase dogs with congenital health problems often drop the animals off at the shelter because the owners cannot afford to care for them.

A flurry of lawsuits and countersuits in recent months between Chillicothe-based retailer Petland, consumers and animal-rights activists have brought a spotlight on the business of puppies.

On Friday, a federal district court in Arizona dismissed a class action lawsuit against Petland Inc. and the Hunte Corp.

Unhappy pet owners had filed the suit alleging the retailers sold unhealthy puppies raised by big distributors in substandard conditions.

"The Columbiana Public Library has always tried to remain on the cutting edge for the public," said Library Director Carol Cobbs. "We search for ways to enhance the services we provide and strive to maintain that quality. Even with the recent budget cuts, I'm certain that we will still maintain our presence in the community and continue to meet the needs of our patrons."

Cobbs said that since she came to the library in 1998, she has witnessed a doubling in both facility size and circulation, and noted that July had the largest circulation total in the library's existence.

"It can probably be contributed to the economic times," she said. "Now, more than ever, we can see how vital all libraries are to their communities."

Bucs' bullpen blows another

Pirates have lost 13 of last 15

By JOHN PERROTTO
Special to the Salem News

PITTSBURGH — Desperate times calls for desperate measures, but even that wasn't enough to keep the Pirates from losing yet again Sunday.

Closer Matt Capps, called on to enter the game in the eighth in a rare move by manager John Russell, served up a game-winning two-run home run to pinch hitter Skip Schumacher to start a five-run inning and rally the National League Central-leading St. Louis Cardinals to a 7-3 victory.

The Cardinals swept the three-game series at PNC Park. The Pirates lost their eighth consecutive game, matching their longest losing streak of the season from May 3-10. They have also lost 13 of their last 15 games in falling to 45-66.

It was the first time Russell brought Capps into a save situation in the eighth inning in his two years as manager.

"Matt hadn't been used in a few days," said Russell referring to Capps last pitching on Thursday. "We have an off day (today). It just made sense to use him for two innings in that situation."

Of course, Russell might not trust any of his other relievers following a 2-8 homestand in which Pirates bullpen had a 7.64 ERA.

Russell decided to lift left-hander Zach Duke, who received a no-decision despite pitching well for 7 1/3 innings, and call on Capps with one out in the eighth and a runner on first base. Cardinals manager Tony La Russa countered by pinch-hitting the left-handed hitting Schumacher for Julio Lugo.

Schumacher responded with a home run to center field, just his fifth of the season and the first of his career as a pinch hitter.

"It was a bad plan on my part," said Capps (2-7). "I tried to go with a fastball in and that wasn't the right pitch to throw in that situation. I should have gone with a different pitch or at least different location."

Closers are often creatures of habit, but Capps said pitching in the eighth inning was not a factor.

"I've got to execute my pitches, regardless of the inning," he said.

Capps then hit star first baseman Albert Pujols in the ribcage with an 0-1 fastball and was ejected by home plate umpire Mike Estabrook. Capps barely protested, but said after the game he did not intentionally hit Pujols.

"I know it looks bad, especially after giving up the home run, but I was trying to go inside with a fastball and got too far in," Capps.

Pujols and La Russa absolved Capps of any blame, though La Russa suggested Pirates pitching coach Joe Kerrigan might have ordered a brushback.

"It hurts to get hit in the ribs with a 95-mph fastball, but I know he didn't do it on purpose, even though it looked bad in that situation," Pujols said.

Jesse Chavez relieved and the Cardinals scored three more runs in the inning to pad the lead to 7-3. Ryan Ludwick hit a two-run double and scored on Khalil Greene's single.

TRIBE FROM 1B

Huff (6-6) shook off a three-run second inning to pitch into the seventh. The left-hander allowed four runs on eight hits in 6 1-3 innings.

"I think coming back after that three-spot and putting up all those zeros was real big," Huff said. "It was one of those things where they got to me a little bit and I just had to really concentrate at the next guy."

A.J. Pierzynski and Alexei Ramirez hit solo home runs for the White Sox, who fell three games behind the Detroit Tigers in the AL Central. The White Sox are 3-10 in the last 13 games against AL Central division opponents.

After winning three of four games against the Yankees and taking a three-game series from the Angels, Chicago ended its homestand by losing two of three to the Indians.

"I loved the way we started, I don't like the way we finished, that's how I can describe it," Guillen said. "With Cleveland coming to town, I'm making it clear, you have to be careful with those type of teams because they're loose, they're going to come out and beat you. They're not going to lay down and feel sorry for themselves."

With a runner on first and two outs, White Sox reliever Tony Pena allowed a single to Marte, putting runners on first and second, Toregas followed with an RBI single to put the Indians up 5-3.

Carroll tagged White Sox reliever Scott Linebrink with a leadoff homer in the seventh. It was Carroll's second of the season.

Pierzynski's home run came in the second inning after the ball hit off a leaping Grady Sizemore's glove and went over the wall for Pierzynski's 12th of season.

Ramirez ended Huff's outing with a solo home run in the seventh.

Duke wound up with a no-decision, allowing three runs, two earned, and seven hits with one walk and two strikeouts. It was the eighth time this season Duke has made a quality start - six or more innings, three earned runs or less - and either taken a loss or no-decision.

"This is kind of how my whole year has gone, but I've got to keep battling," Duke said.

Joel Pineiro (10-9) gave up three runs and nine hits in seven innings with no walks and six strikeouts. Kyle McClellan pitched 1 2/3 perfect innings for his second save.

The Pirates took a 3-0 lead on Steve Pearce's two-run homer, his second, in the second and Delwyn Young's RBI single in the third, but couldn't hold it. The Cardinals closed to 3-2 on Matt Holliday's sacrifice fly in the fourth and Yadier Molina's run-scoring single in the sixth, then won it in the eighth against the beleaguered bullpen, which has taken the loss in four of the last five games. "Everyone in the bullpen just needs to relax," Russell said. "They're all pressing right now."

Rain postpones Cup race at The Glen

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (AP) — Andy Lally will have to curb his enthusiasm for another day.

Lally, a champion road racer with dreams of competing in NASCAR, was scheduled to make his first Sprint Cup start on Sunday. But a band of rain moved over the road course at Watkins Glen International and never lifted, forcing NASCAR to postpone the race until noon Monday.

"It's pretty anticlimactic. We were all belted in ready to go when they pulled the plug on us," Lally said after NASCAR called off the race at 4 p.m. "This being my first Sprint Cup start, it just makes it that much more anticipation. I'm going to try to get a good night's sleep in the motor home tonight and just think positive, keep thinking about all the things I have to do tomorrow."

A thunderstorm hit the track about 2 p.m. Sunday when drivers were about to start their engines. The course takes at least two hours to dry. Rain was still falling at 4 p.m. making it too late to complete the 90-lap event before sunset. The track stretches nearly 2 1/2 miles around 11 turns and has several elevation changes.

Last week's race at Pocono also was moved to Monday because of rain, and with just five races before the Chase for the Sprint Cup championship, another delay wasn't welcome.

"That's got to be tough," Canadian road racer Ron Fellows said. "They've spent a lot of time at the racetrack watching it rain. You might get a bit stir-crazy."

Saturday's Nationwide race at The Glen was also threatened by rain. Though it never materialized, rain tires were stacked in the garage area just in case. NASCAR's first major points race in the rain came just over a year ago at Circuit Gilles Villeneuve in Montreal in a Nationwide Series race, and that made a lasting impression on four-time Cup champion Jeff Gordon.

"I can't imagine what it would be like in a Cup race," Gordon said. "I thoroughly enjoyed watching it rain up there. That was highly entertaining, but I was very glad I wasn't inside the car." Carl Edwards' team was one of several that didn't install a windshield wiper during an extended early caution when NASCAR went to the rain tires. Without a wiper, Edwards stuck a squeegee out the driver-side window to clean his windshield during later caution periods. Fellows won the race.

Browns sign veteran lineman Weary

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Cleveland Browns have signed veteran offensive lineman Fred Weary.

The Browns announced Sunday that the 31-year-old Weary will join the team, which may be without Rex Hadnot. The starting guard injured his knee in practice last week.

Weary, who broke his leg in 2007, was on injured reserve with the Texans last fall before he was released.

Weary has started in 43 of the 63 games in which he's appeared during his seven-year career.

Drafted in the third round by Houston in 2002, Weary played four years at Tennessee.

Hampton, Sweed leave Steelers practice

LATROBE, Pa. (AP) — Pittsburgh Steelers nose tackle Casey Hampton left practice Sunday with a knee injury, although coach Mike Tomlin said the four-time Pro Bowl player is expected to be fine.

Second-year wide receiver Limas Sweed (hamstring) also didn't finish practice. Running back Willie Parker (back spasms) sat out a second straight day as the Steelers worked on their goal-line offense for the first time since camp began July 31.

Outside linebacker LaMarr Woodley returned after sitting out three days with swelling in his right knee.

Hampton, who missed three games last season with a groin injury, is considered the key to the Steelers' league-leading rushing defense.

Sweed, a second-round pick in 2008, may be the top candidate to replace Nate Washington as Pittsburgh's No. 3 receiver. Washington signed with Tennessee.

Laurinaitis gets time with Rams' 1st-team defense

EARTH CITY, Mo. (AP) — James Laurinaitis is downplaying his increased time with the St. Louis Rams' first-team defense.

The rookie middle linebacker out of Ohio State played with the starters during Sunday's morning workout, but he and coach Steve Spagnuolo say the added work with the first team is a reflection of his increased comfort with the system and not a move up the depth chart.

"I'm happy that (Spagnuolo) had the confidence to put me with the first group, but nothing's changed from my mindset," Laurinaitis said. "I'm still going out there trying to learn, still asking a lot of questions and trying to get better every day."

Laurinaitis, the 35th-overall overall draft pick this spring, remains behind 11-year veteran Chris Draft.

The three-time All-American is going through the same growing pains all rookies deal with despite a stellar collegiate career. He also won the Nagurski Award, as the nation's best defensive player, as a sophomore, and the Butkus Award, as the nation's top linebacker, as a junior.

"We're seeing the things we thought when we drafted him. He's a smart football player, that's tough, can run really well," Spagnuolo said. "He's picking up things pretty well. The volume is getting heavier and heavier, but he's handling it pretty well."

The coach also pointed out that a number of players will be used in different positions and with different units as the Rams progress through the pre-season. They have their first pre-season game Friday at the New York Jets.

Laurinaitis said that having veterans such as Draft and fellow linebacker Will Witherspoon, in his ninth season, has been instrumental to learning the system. Laurinaitis said Draft has been especially helpful in helping him take increased responsibility for making defensive calls.

"I'm very comfortable doing that," Laurinaitis said. "This is one of those things where you've got to be very comfortable in your position and you've got to be able to make calls and you've got to be able to stand by them."

Spurrier says Bowden shouldn't lose victories

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — South Carolina's Steve Spurrier finds himself in agreement with Bobby Bowden.

Spurrier said Sunday that Bowden and the Seminoles should not have to give up 14 victories as part of the NCAA penalties because of an academic cheating scandal at Florida State.

Spurrier said, just as importantly, Florida State's track team should not lose its NCAA championships that took place during the time in question.

When Spurrier was Florida's football coach, he would needle Bowden and the Seminoles when he could. Spurrier once called the school "Free Shoes University" in 1994 when Bowden dealt with a scandal involving his players and Foot Locker.

Quinn throws 51-yard TD pass in Browns scrimmage

CLEVELAND (AP) — Looking to take the lead in the quarterback competition, Brady Quinn threw a 51-yard touchdown pass on his first play in the Cleveland Browns scrimmage Sunday.

Quinn made a play-action fake, then threw a long arcing pass to Lance Leggett, who beat two defenders to run under the ball a couple of steps into the end zone at Cleveland Browns Stadium.

Quinn and Derek Anderson are in a heated competition to become the Browns' starting quarterback. First-year coach Eric Mangini has yet to select a favorite and has said throughout training camp that he has no timetable for choosing his starter. The Browns play their first preseason game Saturday in Green Bay. Mangini hasn't made a decision on the starter for that game.

"We'll look at it this week and decide a little bit later in the week," he said.

The decision on who will start the season opener against Minnesota could go down to the end of camp.

Anderson's brown team defeated Quinn's white team, 17-14. The brown team was comprised mostly of first-team offensive players, including wide receiver Braylon Edwards and running back Jamal Lewis and the starting offensive line.

The quarterbacks were relatively even statistically.

Anderson, who ran for a six-yard touchdown in the fourth quarter, was 12-for-21 for 107 yards and an interception. Quinn was 11-for-19 for 121 yards with a touchdown and an interception.

"I thought both guys had their moments on the plus side and on the side that we need to continue to work on," Mangini said. "I'm sure (Anderson) would want that interception back that he had. Brady's interception there set up points. They moved the team at different times with different levels of effectiveness."

Quinn's long pass to Leggett was the highlight of the day for the 14,314 fans who watched the scrimmage despite temperatures that soared above 90 degrees.

"Lance is a fast guy," Quinn said. "We wanted to get some play action and pull the safeties and get behind the coverage. He ran a great route and the offensive line did a great job."

While Anderson gets credit for having a stronger arm, Quinn showed an ability to throw the deep ball.

"On a throw like that when the guy beats them, you never want to overthrow them," Quinn said. "You don't want to overthrow it either. You try to put it on the money if you can."

Anderson led a long drive later in the first quarter, but was intercepted at the goal line by linebacker D'Qwell Jackson. Anderson's pass was intended for tight end Robert Royal, who appeared to be open. But Jackson dropped back in coverage, picked off the pass and returned it 40 yards.

"I saw him running to it," Anderson said. "I should have moved it to the left. I ran the wrong play from what was called. I'm glad it was a scrimmage and not versus the Vikings."

Overall, Anderson was happy with his performance.

"It was all right," he said. "I thought I moved the ball pretty well. We didn't panic. It was about winning the scrimmage."

Quinn threw an interception in the fourth quarter when his pass went through Leggett's hands and was picked off by defensive back Mike Adams. That set up the 28-yard game-winning field goal by Phil Dawson, who kicked for both teams.

"I think it went well," Quinn said. "I think it went how camp goes. You're going to have good days and bad days. The key for me mentally is not to get down after you've had a bad day."

Anderson was also upbeat.

"I thought I had a great week, grasping things and getting guys in right situations, command of the offense," he said. "I've been throwing the ball really well. I think camp has been pretty good for me."

While there was no tackling in the scrimmage, which was officiated by NFL referees, it was ruled that Anderson was sacked twice. He was called for unsportsmanlike conduct when the official ruled he threw the ball at defensive tackle Shaun Rogers, who did a dance after one sack.

"No big deal," Anderson said. "He said it hit (Rogers). I was like, 'You gotta be kidding me.' "Mangini spoke with Anderson when the quarterback came to the sidelines.

"It's important that you focus on the task at hand," Mangini said. "The officials are not going to change their mind on any amount of lobbying, any amount of discussion. It doesn't happen. It's not a debate. Their rule is final."

Running back Noah Herren ran for a 39-yard score for the white team while Brett Ratliff hit receiver David Patten for a 71-yard score for the brown team.

track, Dixon had little trouble keeping his cool despite spending the first portion of the race falling well behind Justin Wilson.

Wilson was in total command early, slipping past Briscoe five laps in and quickly extending his lead to more than seven seconds.

Dixon, however, was able to close the gap thanks to slightly better fuel mileage and a perfect pit stop. He took the lead for good about halfway through the race after Wilson got hung up behind Milka Duno's lapped car.

"I think we were already past him before we ran into Milka," Dixon said. "She made it exciting for a couple of corners."

Wilson's bid to pick up his second win on a road course in five weeks ended when he stalled coming out of the pits with just over 20 laps remaining. He finished 13th.

With Wilson out of the way, Dixon had little resistance, turning the final laps into an extended victory parade.

The handful of modifications the series pushed through last week before the race at Kentucky in hopes of providing a more thrilling product — including the popular "Push to Pass" button — didn't produce much in the way of excitement.

Dixon made sure of that. The win was Dixon's seventh career road triumph and first since winning at Edmonton over a year ago.

Though he's displayed his usual dominance on ovals this year, Dixon hasn't been quite so sharp when forced to turn both left and right.

He entered Mid-Ohio having led just three laps on road courses this year. Whatever road woes had bedeviled him, however, disappeared after he took the lead from Wilson, who appeared to get stuck behind the decidedly slower Duno.

Dixon didn't get too fired up about breaking Hornish's mark. The official IndyCar series only goes back to 1996. He's still got plenty of work to do to catch A.J. Foyt, who holds the career record for open-wheel wins with 67.

Still, it's heady company to keep. He didn't expect this kind of success when he joined IndyCar in 2003, now he finds himself ahead of Hornish — who served as the face of the series for several years — in the record books.

"Obviously it's a fantastic milestone for myself and obviously for the team," he said. "To finally be labeled (among the best) in this series is a big deal to me, a big deal to the team. But it's going to be tough to hang on to that."

No difference between fee, tax increases

Many Ohioans probably applauded claims by Gov. Ted Strickland and state legislators that the state budget would be balanced without new taxes. We urged such an approach, while warning that hidden taxation, such as increases in fees Ohioans pay, needed to be guarded against, too.

It turns out that we were right to be concerned. Many fees paid by individuals and businesses in Ohio have gone up to raise money for the new two-year budget.

Virtually everyone in Ohio will pay for one increase, in state fees for garbage dumped in landfills. Beginning this weekend, those fees increase by $1.25 per ton.

That will have an effect on everyone who disposes of garbage in Ohio — everyone, in effect. While the impact will be comparatively small for most people, it does amount to a new tax. It and other higher fees will raise millions of dollars for state government — by taking the money from Ohioans' pockets.

A tax increase by any other name still is a tax increase.

Too often, tragedies that could have been avoided are aided and abetted by people who suffer no consequences as a result of their irresponsible actions. Such a tragedy occurred earlier this month at the Ohio University campus in Athens. A 20-year-old student died from injuries suffered in a fall from a fourth-floor dormitory window.

Prosecutors have charged another young man with counts of involuntary manslaughter and aggravated drug trafficking in connection with the death. They say he supplied hallucinogenic mushrooms to the student who died. Traces of the hallucinogen were found in the dead man's blood.

If the chemical was a factor in the student's death — as seems probable — the supplier should be held accountable.

We encourage law enforcement authorities in our area to continue taking harsh stances toward those, especially adults, who facilitate dangerous behavior by others.

Perhaps if enough people are sent to prison for such irresponsible behavior, a few lives can be saved.

Wing-nuts after grandma

ELLEN GOODMAN

I am as happy as anyone at signs of an economic recovery. But I confess to having mixed feelings about the resurgence of the wing-nut industry.

We now have "The Birthers" manufacturing myths that President Obama was not born in the United States and therefore is serving illegally. These products arrive in my inbox faster than I can press

"block sender."

They are just following the business plan of those earlier entrepreneurs selling the idea that Obama had killed his grandma. Consider the scare-biz Internet scribe who penned the memorable line: "Obama flies to Hawaii to visit his grandmother and just a few days later she winds up dead. Coincidence?"

But now the industry has ratcheted up from accusing Obama of killing his grandma to accusing him of trying to kill your grandma.

The campaign of the moment is based on a small provision in the health care bill that would allow Medicare to reimburse doctors for time spent consulting with patients about their end-of-life choices.

This modest idea was willfully distorted by people such as Betsy McCaughey, the former lieutenant governor of New York, who said that the bill would "absolutely require" end-of-life counseling that "will tell them how to end their life sooner." Republican leader John Boehner offered the same flawed product, saying, "This provision may start us down a treacherous path toward government-encouraged euthanasia."

Their views were also sold by right-wing franchise operators. Laura Ingraham warned that government bureaucrats would "come to an old person's house" -- yeah, house calls! -- for scary death chats. Fox News analyst Peter Johnson called it a "kind of our 2009 'Brave New World.'" And Randall Terry, the Zelig of the pro-life movement, said this was an attempt to "kill Granny."

Panic is their most important product. The bill doesn't really mandate anything. It simply assures that a talk about advance care planning will be covered for the patients and families who want it. As Obama told a woman at an AARP forum, "It strikes me that that's a sensible thing to do." But who would trust someone who offed his grandma?

All in all, Fearmongers Inc. plays on the notion that advance directives are a sneaky way of cutting costs by cutting life short.

Well, here's what we know: One-quarter of all Medicare dollars are spent in the last year of life, much of it in the last month. We don't know yet whether it will cost less (and how much less) for patients to choose high-quality palliative care. It surely isn't the cheap fix to the health cost spiral.

But we have some other hints. In a study of terminal cancer patients at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute in Boston, those who had end-of-life conversations spent about one-third less in their last week than those who didn't. And they had a better quality of life and death.

Yes, those who didn't talk about options had more aggressive treatment. They ended up in intensive care and/or on ventilators or were resuscitated. They not only had a worse quality of death by any measure, they left their families in more distress, and here's the kicker: They didn't live any longer.

As the study's author, Holly Prigerson, said, "Usually saving money comes at a cost to society or the patient and family. In this case it would appear to be a win-win." The patients who got more expensive treatment, she added, "were not buying anything that any informed consumer would want."

Conversations about dying are never easy. Only about 20 percent of Americans have advance directives.

This cultural silence lingers over a false and stark choice between "treatment" -- the word we use to describe aggressive procedures -- and fear of abandonment. Families may feel that if they aren't doing "everything," they are doing nothing. Patients may see the alternative to medical care as no care.

We confuse life-prolonging and suffering-prolonging treatments. We don't always hear about palliative care and hospice. This is precisely why we need to encourage these conversations.

Some people will choose "everything." Others will choose comfort care. But if we train and reimburse clinicians for the fine art of communicating, we'll have an informed choice. And that's what this teeny little clause in the great big health care bill does. It enables granny and grandpa and us to say how we want to die.

So may we declare the scare biz bankrupt?

Oh no, what's that I see on the horizon? "Obamacare Will Mandate Free Sex Change Operations." More wing nuts for sale.

Health care choices versus control by bureaucrats

THOMAS SOWELL

Someone who was once rushed to a hospital in the middle of the night, because of taking a medication that millions of people take every day without the slightest problem, I have a special horror of life and death medical de-isions being made by bureaucrats in Washington, about patients they have never laid eyes on.

On another occasion, I was told by a doctor that I would have died if I had not gotten to him in time, after an allergic reaction to eating one of the most healthful foods around. On still another occasion, I was treated with a medication that causes many people big problems and was urged to come back to the hospital immediately if I had a really bad reaction. But I had no reaction at all, went home, felt fine and slept soundly through the night.

My point is that everybody is different. Millions of children eat peanut butter sandwiches every day but some children can die from eating peanut butter. Some vaccines and medications that save many lives can also kill some people.

Are decisions made by doctors who have treated the same patient for years to be over-ruled by bureaucrats sitting in front of computer screens in Washington, following guidelines drawn up with the idea of "bringing down the cost of medical care"?

The idea is even more absurd than the idea that you can add millions of people to a government medical care plan without increasing the costs. It is also more dangerous.

What is both dangerous and mindless is rushing a massive new medical care scheme through Congress so fast that members of Congress do not even have time to read it before voting on it. Legislation that is far less sweeping in its effects can get months of hearings before Congressional committees, followed by debates in the Senate and the House of Representatives, with all sorts of people voicing their views in the media and in letters to Congress, while ads from people on both sides of the issue appear in newspapers and on television.

If this new medical scheme is so wonderful, why can't it stand the light of day or a little time to think about it?

The obvious answer is that the administration doesn't want us to know what it is all about or else we would not go along with it. Far better to say that we can't wait, that things are just too urgent. This tactic worked with whizzing the "stimulus" package through Congress, even though the stimulus package itself has not worked.

Any serious discussion of government-run medical care would have to look at other countries where there is government-run medical care. As someone who has done some research on this for my book "Applied Economics," I can tell you that the actual consequences of government-controlled medical care is not a pretty picture, however inspiring the rhetoric that accompanies it.

Thirty thousand Canadians are passing up free medical care at home to go to some other country where they have to pay for it. People don't do that without a reason.

But Canadians are better off than people in some other countries with government-controlled medical care, because they have the United States right next door, in case their medical problems get too serious to rely on their own system.

But where are Americans to turn if we become like Canada? Where are we to go when we need better medical treatment than Washington bureaucrats will let us have? Mexico? The Caribbean?

Many people do not understand that it is not just a question of whether government bureaucrats will agree to pay for particular medical treatments. The same government-control mindset that decides what should and should not be paid for can also decide that the medical technology or pharmaceutical drugs that they control should not be for sale to those who are willing to pay their own money.

Right now, medications or treatments that have not been approved by the Food and Drug Administration are medications or treatments that you are not allowed to buy with your own money, no matter how desperate your medical condition, and no matter how many years these medications or treatments may have been used without dire effects in other countries.

The crucial word is not "care" but "control."

Collins sharp as Titans beat Bills in HOF game

CANTON (AP) — Kerry Collins was sharp and Vince Young tentative for the Tennessee Titans in overshadowing Terrell Owens' debut for the Buffalo Bills.

With a little trickery and a solid performance by the Collins-led starting offense, Tennessee opened the preseason with a 21-18 win in the Hall of Fame game on Sunday night.

If this was the NFL's throwback weekend to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the founding of the American Football League, then this also resembled the Titans' quarterback situation at the beginning of last year. That's when Young got off to a terrible start and lost his starting job to Collins by Week 2.

Collins, already selected the starter, quickly began delivering on the faith the Titans put in him after being signed to a two-year $15 million contract this offseason.

He went 7-of-10 for 82 yards in producing two touchdown drives, one capped by reserve punter A.J. Trapasso's 40-yard run on a perfectly executed fake punt on the opening possession. Collins was especially efficient in going 3 for 4 for 49 yards on third down.

"I thought we got off to a good start," Collins said. "We executed our offense and played fast out there."

The same couldn't be said for Young, who took over at the start of the second quarter. In his first three series, Young was 1-of-5 for 13 yards and an interception, nearly dropped a shotgun snap and looked hesitant running the ball when he was easily caught from behind by rookie linebacker Nic Harris.

Young finally warmed up, and showed great touch in hitting Paul Williams for a 5-yard touchdown pass to convert third-and-2 to put the Titans up 21-3 late in the second quarter. The No. 3 selection in the 2006 draft still has a long way to go to regain his once-dominating form. In five series, Young went 5-of-10 for 39 yards, and a 1-yard run.

The Bills were sluggish and looked nothing like the better-prepared team, considering Buffalo opened training camp two weeks ago — a week ahead of the Titans.

The only offensive highlights were provided by Owens, who signed a one-year $6.5 million contract with Buffalo in early March, days after being released by Dallas.

On the field for only one series, Owens had two catches for 27 yards, including a 16-yarder on the second play from scrimmage. Trent Edwards hit Owens in perfect stride on a slant, and the receiver had the opportunity to score if not for a perfect tackle by cornerback Cortland Finnegan. The drive, however, ended when Edwards floated a pass intended for Lee Evans at the Titans' 7 and was easily intercepted by Cortland Finnegan.

"It's good to get the cobwebs out," Edwards said. "(The rhythm) is just what we are trying to find right now. ... We just can't turn the ball over."

Owens was greeted by chants of "T.O.! T.O.!" by the partisan Buffalo crowd that stayed an extra day after Bills defensive end Bruce Smith and team owner Ralph Wilson were among six inducted into the Hall.

Bills cornerback Reggie Corner scored on a 26-yard interception return off fourth-stringer Alex Mortensen, while kicker Ryan Lindell hit all three field-goal attempts, including a 52-yarder.

LenDale White scored on a 3-yard run on the Titans first-stringers' only other series, capping an 11-play, 73-yard drive.

ON THE FRINGE

Woods angry over final pairing being timed AKRON (AP) — Tiger Woods won the Bridgestone Invitational with an 8-iron that stopped a foot from the cup on the 16th hole and a 5-under 65. He believes Pdraig Harrington lost because of a stopwatch. Even after his 70th career victory, Woods was upset Sunday that he and Harrington were told on the pivotal 16th hole that they would be put on the clock for being out of the position from the group ahead of them. Harrington, while not blaming the slow-play policy, conceded that he was rushed out during a series of shots in the rough on his way to making a triple bogey, going from a one-shot lead to a three-shot deficit. Woods was more direct in his comments to the Irishman as they shook hands on the 18th green. "Like I was telling him out there, 'I'm sorry that John got in the way of a great battle,' because it was such a great battle for 16 holes," Woods said. "And unfortunately, that happened."

John Paramor, chief referee for the PGA European Tour, made no apologies for playing the rules. He said the final pairing was 13 minutes over their time limit after 11 holes and could have been put on the clock, except that J.B. Holmes went ahead of them as they were struggling on the 16th with various rulings.

"We thought that would allow them to get back into position on the golf course, but they ended up playing the 13th and 14th poorly, and the 15th was not too quick, either." When they reached the 16th green, Paramor said Woods and Harrington were 17 minutes behind schedule.

"The 16th hole had opened up before they cleared the 15th green," he said. "And therefore, we had no choice but to put them on the clock at that stage." When players take more than the allotted time while on the clock — 40 seconds, with an additional 20 seconds for the first player to hit each of the shots toward the green — they are given a warning. A second bad time leads to a $5,000 fine and a one-shot penalty. The last player penalized a shot for slow play on the PGA Tour was Dillard Pruitt at the 1982 Byron Nelson Classic.

Woods said the stopwatch led to Harrington rushing his shots, none of them very good. First came a 5-iron from the right trees that he pulled into the collar of a bunker. Then came a shot from 159 yards that went over the green, followed by the crucial play — a flop shot that came out hot and went into the water.

"He had to get in there quickly and hit it," Woods said. "That was a shot you don't want to get in there quickly and hit. You want to take your time and figure out exactly what you want to do. And I think by rushing like he had to, it forced him to make a couple mistakes."

Harrington said the trick to being put on the clock is to keep it out of trouble. He did just the opposite — a tee shot into the trees, the shot into the grassy slope of a bunker, the delicate flop shot to a green running away from him to the water.

Forty years later, Woodstock still fascinates

BETHEL, N.Y. — Forty years after Richie Havens sang and strummed for a sea of people at Woodstock, he still gets asked about it all the time. And like in the movie, he still gets requests to sing “Freedom.”

He’s not surprised. “Everything in my life, and so many others’, is attached to that train,” Havens said.

The young hippies who watched the sun come up with The Who in 1969 are now eligible for early bird specials. Many of the bands are broken up or missing members who died. But Woodstock remains one of those events — like the moon landing earlier that summer — that continues to define the ’60s in the popular imagination.

Consider the bumper crop of Woodstock nostalgia marking the 40th anniversary. There’s a new director’s cut DVD of the concert movie, a remastered concert CD, director Ang Lee’s rock ‘n’ roll comedy “Taking Woodstock” and a memoir by promoter Michael Lang. There are also performances scheduled by Woodstock veterans at the old site, now home to a ’60s museum and an outdoor concert pavilion.

The Woodstock legend stems from big names like Jimi Hendrix and Janis Joplin playing at a show where everything went wrong — but turned out right.

The town of Woodstock didn’t want the concert and promoters were bounced from another site at the 11th hour. Lang settled on a hay field in Bethel owned by a kindly dairy farmer named Max Yasgur. The concert did come off Aug. 15-18, 1969, but barely. Fences were torn down, tickets became useless. More than 400,000 people converged on this rural corner 80 miles northwest of New York City, freezing traffic for miles. Then the rains doused everything.

It should have been a disaster. But Americans tuning in to the evening news that weekend saw smiling, dancing, muddy kids. By the time the concert movie came out months later, Woodstock was a symbol of the happy, hippie

In this August 1969 aerial file photo, a view of part of the crowd at the Woodstock Music and Arts Festival held on a 600-acre pasture in the Catskill Mountains near White Lake in Bethel, N.Y., in Aug. 1969. The festival, billed as “Three Days of Peace and Music,” started on Friday, Aug. 15. More than 400,000 persons attended. (AP Photo) side of the ’60s spirit. It still is.

Baby boomers are the “Woodstock Generation” — not the “Monterey Generation” or the “Altamont Generation.” Bethel’s onsite museum has logged more than 70,000 visitors since last summer, a fair number of them college students born well after Woodstock. A roadside monument there regularly logs visitors from around the planet.

“It’s almost a pilgrimage,” said Wade Lawrence, director of the Museum at Bethel Woods. “It’s like going to a high school reunion, or it’s like visiting a grave site of a loved one.”

From Lollapalooza to All Points West, there have been plenty of big festivals focused on youth culture. The continent-hopping Live Aid shows of 1985 did that and more, enlisting top names like U2 and Madonna to fight hunger in Africa. None have the cultural cachet of Woodstock. Who would ever ask a Generation X-er: “Were you really at Live Aid?”

People who went to Woodstock say the crowd set it apart as much as the music. The trippy anarchy of Woodstock has become legend: lots of nudity, casual sex, dirty (and muddy) dancing, open drug use. The stage announcer famously warned people to steer clear of the brown acid.

Many who were there recall Woodstock as an oasis of good vibes during a time of unrest over the Vietnam War. Ilene Marder, then an 18-year-old who hitched from the Bronx, saw people feeding one another and respecting one another. She knew she found her tribe.

“The music was nice, but it was being with so many people who looked like us, who looked like me,” said Marder, who later moved to Woodstock some 50 miles away.

“I remember telling myself ‘Don’t forget this! Don’t forget they way you feel right now!’”

Former Grateful Dead keyboardist Tom Constanten remembers hearing buzz that something special was up at the nearby hotel where the band was staying. The scale of the event sunk in when the band choppered in over the mass of people. While artists like Joe Cocker and Santana boosted their careers at Woodstock, the Dead were notoriously flat.

Jerry Garcia, the band’s late guitarist, told interviewers that his guitar was being hit with bouncing blue balls of electricity — the kind that comes from bad wiring, not strong psychedelics. Constanten said he wasn’t as bothered as his band mates.

“Actually, I had a wonderful time. The guitarists were not. Because of electrical problems, they were getting shocks from their strings and all,” he said. “Aversion therapy like that, no one needs.”

Constanten contends the music and spirit of Woodstock was not a revelation to the people there. But it was to the millions who saw the movie and listened to the album.

As they say now, Woodstock went viral.

“This juggernaut of a music scene burst in their awareness,” he said. “It didn’t feel different to us. It was their response.”

Woodstock has been resurrected a couple of times since then, at least in name.

Promoters staged a 25th anniversary concert near Woodstock in 1994 that was a musical success. But a 30th anniversary concert at a former Air Force Base in Rome, N.Y., ended in disaster after crowds lit bonfires and looted on the last night. The unrelenting heat and $4 bottles of water taxed any vestiges of Woodstock spirit.

Yasgur’s old farm, meanwhile, has gone establishment in recent years. Local cable TV billionaire Alan Gerry quietly snapped up the land in the ’90s and started a not-for-profit foundation to run a museum and concert venue. The gently sloping hill that provided a natural amphitheater in 1969 is nicely tended and fenced in.

Concerts are regularly scheduled over the hill from the original stage at a modern, 4,800-seat amphitheater.

Constanten and Havens are among the 1969 performers returning to the site on the 40th anniversary weekend. Havens will play a solo show that Friday, a day before a larger show featuring other Woodstock veterans like Levon Helm, formerly of The Band, Ten Years After and Canned Heat. Though long separated from the Dead, Constanten said he’ll play the band’s songs that weekend. No electric shocks are expected under the multimillion dollar pavilion, and probably no generation-defining magic either.

“Then is then,” Constanten said, “and now is now.”

Wrong way crash — Alcoholics often are experts at hiding it

NEW YORK (AP) — At one point during her quarter-century as an alcoholic, Carol Colleran would down at least 10 beers each week-night, more on weekends. Then she would show up the next morning at her job in hospital management, feeling fuzzy and lousy.

But she would cheerfully wander the halls greeting people — “It felt a lot better than sitting down,” she says wryly — and she is sure that nobody, not even the staff at the hospital’s addiction treatment center, suspected she had a drinking problem.

Colleran, now 72 and sober, was that good at hiding it. We may never know if Diane Schuler — the Long Island mother who packed five kids into a minivan and drove the wrong way under the influence of alcohol and marijuana, killing herself and seven other people — was an alcoholic. Her husband insists she wasn’t.

But if she did have a drinking problem, addiction specialists and doctors say, it is indeed plausible that she succeeded in hiding it from colleagues, friends, even close family. Alcoholics, they say, become pretty good at covering their tracks.

Especially women. “It’s more common among women to hide their drinking because of the social stigma of it,” says Dr. Robert Swift, an addiction psychiatrist and professor at Brown University in Providence, R.I. They might choose vodka, for example, which produces less of an odor on the breath, he says. (A broken bottle of vodka was found in the wreckage of Schuler’s car).

Or they might choose to drink at times when people aren’t around — in the morning, for example, when the kids are off at school. They might use colorless alcohol and put it in sports bottles. And they might find creative places to hide booze.

“I’ve known people to hide alcohol under ceiling tiles, in hollowed-out parts of mattresses, behind books on bookshelves,” Swift says. Women in particular feel an extra responsibility to keep their drinking secret, because they need to keep the family running smoothly, says Dr. Petros Levounis, director of the Addiction Institute of New York at St. Luke’s-Roosevelt Hospital Center.

Because they hide it more often, frequently drinking alone, the problem is not only harder to spot but more acute when it is discovered.

“Women are often deprived of the normal red flags that the rest of the population enjoys,” says Levounis, also a professor at Columbia University. “Men who work 9 to 5, they often come home late, and sloppy, and people no-they may lose a job, but their lives are saved.”

There are many tricks. Over about 20 years of drinking and using illegal drugs, William C. Moyers says he “did a pretty good job of covering my butt,” though he uses a slightly stronger word.

One device: For every drink in a public setting, such as a party, “I’d have another in the bathroom,” Moyers says. “One openly, one secretly. And on and on like that.” As for cocaine and marijuana, he would do those by himself.

“My spouse at the time had no idea that I was a full-blown addict and alcoholic,” says Moyers, now executive director of the Center for Public Advocacy at Hazelden, an addiction treatment center. (He is also a former journalist and the son of broadcaster Bill Moyers.) But family members also tend to engage in a bit of denial, Moyers adds.

“Alcoholism is often an illness of denial, not just for the person involved, but for their family,” he says. “There are dots there to be connected, and nobody connects them.”

Colleran, who has been sober for 27 years and serves as executive vice president of the Center of Older Adult Recovery at the Hanley Center in Florida, also recalls a healthy dose of denial — a refusal to believe she was an alcoholic — from those around her, partly, she thinks, because she was a mother.

“My neighbors later told me they had no idea,” Colleran says. “But they saw me with a beer can every day! I had barbecues where I’d screw up completely, not cooking the chicken for example, and still people didn’t think I had a problem.”

Both Colleran and Moyers look at the wrong-way tragedy in New York and shudder to think that it could have been them, in an earlier time.

“I drove drunk, yes,”

Moyers says. “Fortunately in my case it wasn’t too late. I didn’t kill anyone and I wasn’t killed.”

Despite the broken bottle of Absolut vodka found in Schuler’s car, and the devastating autopsy report — a blood alcohol level more than twice the legal limit, and high levels of the key ingredient in marijuana in her system — experts interviewed for this story were careful to note that her husband may be right: She may not have been addicted to alcohol.

Salem Area Sustainable Comprehensive Plan

www.sustainabledevelopment.osu.edu

Salem Chamber Board of Directors member Sue Lease, co-owner of Lehmann Mills, recently wrote a rebuttal to the Salem News question of the day "If the Sustainable Comprehensive Plan is only a guide, was it a waste of money?" The following is her reply:

People are leaving Salem to pursue a more stable economic future, however, many remain here. Their love for the area and its resources and their commitment to family and the community overcome the unknowns presented in a changing world. Unguided and undirected, the growth and development necessary to accommodate these new residents could unknowingly alter the very qualities that attracted them in the first place.

The Sustainable Comprehensive Plan is a reflection of the wide variety of individual community needs, desires, shortcomings, and accomplishments, all of which are addressed in the Plan guidelines. To sustain growth and development, Salem needs context and direction set by goals, policies, and strategies to promote the best social, economic and environmental future for the citizens of Salem.

The Salem Sustainable Comprehensive Plan, as presented, has been discussed, debated, revisited and revised during its three years in the making. It is the time and energy of citizens contributing hundreds of hours. It is a fundamental restructuring of community services. The plan will impact the future delivery of services. However, it goes beyond that. It is a statement about Salem as a community, and how it will be in the future as a place to work and play, to raise a family or retire, to get an education or start a business. The Plan represents a statement of basic principles and it is by these principles by which its success will be judged.

We need to work together, tapping the strengths and diversity of the citizens of the community. We need to understand the fiscal impacts of our decision making. We need to create opportunities for those who have less or are just starting out to be able to participate fully in all aspects of the community. We need to be consistent, coordinated, and flexible in the delivery of community services.

The Comprehensive Plan is a living document and it will change as circumstances, challenges, and outside influences change. The Plan established a broad model of what citizens want their community to be by recommending a comprehensive and balanced framework for preservation and development, an agenda for action, and a method of evaluation for achieving a sustainable community-imagining the future!

For more information on this initiative, citizens are invited to access the website listed above and find out how the Plan can improve the lives of those living and working in our local community. Salem City Council recently passed Resolution #42 giving recognition to the Salem Area Chamber of Commerce and the Ohio State Extension Offices for the massive amount of volunteer work hours spent on this blueprint for Salem's future.

HOROSCOPE

MONDAY, AUG. 10, 2009

Mars and Saturn square off, bringing about feisty moods and a variety of temper tantrums. These two powerful planets have been working toward this aspect since July 31 and the effects of the square will continue to be felt through this week. Instead of resisting the fight, treat the goings-on like a game and get into the spirit of it.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Finding a groove requires a bit of patience, so don't be too quick to dismiss what doesn't immediately work. It will take a moment for things to click in. Keep your mind open to possibility.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Your heartstrings will get a tug today. It could be a poignant movie or a scene in real life that touches your heart. There's a reason you're seeing this. You could make a decision based on the feelings that come up.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Ask your friends to connect you with their friends. They will be happy to do so as long as they see the benefit in it for all involved. What's at stake? Fun, adventure, romance and maybe a big sale.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You know you're with someone who gets you when you don't have to explain yourself. Intimate communication is subtle communication. Without many words or questions, you get right to the heart of the matter.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You get down to business quickly. No one has to scare you with a deadline or by letting you know that the one in charge is keeping tabs on your activities. You're self-motivated and that's the secret of your success.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You'll be going somewhere to answer a calling. As you journey on, try not to let the details slow you down. There will be more important things that need your attention once you get there.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You have vices and you have virtues. Those who observe you will understand right away what's great about you, so you don't have to tell them. As for the vices, it's none of their business so don't advertise those either.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). It pays to ask yourself some tough questions. For starters, are you really looking at the big picture? If so, are you seeing the kind of life that you would want to create for yourself? A slight change can make a big difference.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You're being too tough on yourself. Get on your own side. Stop dwelling on what you did wrong and think of all the things you did right. And you'll do more good today once you shake off that critical mood.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You'll be negotiating. You're in a better position when you don't really need the thing you're bargaining for. Be ready and willing -- almost eager -- to walk away from the deal. That's when you'll make the right arrangement.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). What you're offering the world is a complete package. You are whole just as you are. Remind yourself of that often as you go about your day. Your confidence attracts new friends.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Stay centered and focused on what you want. Your resources are abundant. And whatever it is you don't have, there are many people who will help you if you ask. When you're not afraid to lose, you'll win.

CELEBRITY PROFILES: Lucas Till may be one of Hollywood's freshest young faces, but this young Leo has already been in "the business" for 10 years doing commercials and movies. He'll follow up his starring role in "Hannah Montana: The Movie" by playing a Russian spy alongside Jackie Chan. With his moon in Aries, Till has the heart of a warrior, though Venus and Jupiter in Cancer show a sensitive side, too.

Go to the bottle again?

Heloise

Dear Readers: Many of you have written asking if PLASTIC WATER BOTTLES are safe to reuse. With so many of us using them, it's a good time to revisit the issue.

Heloise Central rechecked information printed in this column before, and here is the updated scoop: Reusing these bottles can be a problem due to saliva, sweat and bacteria -- yuck! If you don't take the time to clean with HOT water and dish soap (or use the dishwasher), you should NOT reuse the bottle, according to the experts. Bottles with narrow openings are hard to clean, so if you want to reuse a bottle, use a bottle that has a wide mouth for easier cleaning.

Please put your used bottles in the recycling bin! Or use them to water plants, as I do for my African violets. -- Heloise

FAST FACTS

Dear Readers: Here are other uses for shampoo from hotels and motels:

- * Hand-wash sweaters or lingerie.
- * Clean the shower or tub.
- * Use as bubble bath.
- * Put in a hand-soap dispenser.
- * Keep in a purse or glove box for public restrooms with no soap. -- Heloise

NEVER FORGET

Dear Heloise: Here is a hint that will keep you from forgetting items. If I am at work or wherever and there is something I need to take home, I put my car keys with it. Since I need to have my keys, the item will be remembered. -- Jimmie, Wichita, Kan.

This is a good hint. However, one of my assistants did this and then didn't remember where she had put her keys!

She spent quite a bit of time looking before she remembered they were in the refrigerator. So, make a note, too! -- Heloise

SAUCE PACKETS

Dear Heloise: I buy several different sauce/gravy packets. When I set them in the pantry, they always manage to get "lost." I bought a small plastic bin and placed it on the pantry shelf. Now I put the packets in it, and they are easy to find. -- Daisy M. in Texas

Father-in-law's fish story reveals his true character

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Two weeks ago, I went on a fishing trip with my father-in-law. It was great. I caught the biggest fish of my life. I kept it so I could have it mounted when I returned home.

When we arrived back at my in-laws', my father-in-law took the fish out of the cooler and claimed he had caught it. At first, I thought he was joking, but now he's planning on having the fish mounted!

I didn't want to make him look bad in front of his daughter and his wife, but I am furious. My wife thinks I'm overreacting, but this really is the big one that got away. Should I confront him and call his bluff? -- SOMETHING'S FISHY IN NEW YORK

DEAR SOMETHING'S FISHY: If you were going to confront your father-in-law, you should have done so as soon as he took credit for catching your fish. Instead of being "furious," be grateful that you now have a clear insight into the man's character. That he would lie about something like this calls into question anything that has ever -- or will ever -- come out of his mouth.

DEAR ABBY: My 8-year-old nephew was diagnosed with autism at the age of 3. He has made amazing progress with therapy and has advanced so he is practically functioning at his age level.

Our entire family has teamed up and joined a charity that raises money for autism. We have devoted our time and energy to this important cause. My sister (my nephew's mother) refuses to get involved! She says she is "too busy."

We all work and have other activities, yet we still make time to devote to this cause. She doesn't work and has no other responsibilities outside her family that prohibit her from participating. She says raising money isn't something she likes to do.

I don't have much time for it either, but our family MAKES the time because this cause is important to us. It makes me furious that she won't help raise money for her own child's disorder. How can I talk to her about this without seeming confrontational? -- RAISING MONEY IN FLORIDA

DEAR RAISING MONEY: I urge you to refrain from doing so. For heaven's sake, your sister is the mother of a child who is working hard to overcome a disorder. She has a full-time job -- one that lasts 24 hours a day, seven days a week. She is not lingering, so stop judging her.

DEAR ABBY: I am a happily married woman. Fifteen years ago, I was married to another man I'll call "Mario." Mario and I divorced after four years and ended it as friends.

Mario and I have both been in the restaurant business separately as well as together. Mario called me two days ago and asked me if he could hire me for his newest venture because he knows what a good manager I am. When I mentioned it to my present husband, he was adamantly against it.

Do you see anything wrong with my working with my ex? -- "CYNDIE" IN SOUTH FLORIDA

DEAR "CYNDIE": I don't -- but obviously your present husband does, because he's threatened by the idea. It appears you have an important decision to make. Which is more important to you -- the job, or keeping peace in your marriage?

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

Low sodium causes many symptoms

Dr. Donohue

BY PAUL G. DONOHUE, M.D. DEAR DR.

DONOHUE: What can you tell me about a low sodium level? My visiting friend (from England) was refused embarkation on his cruise because he was acting belligerent and confused.

troubles with the adrenal glands and a sluggish thyroid gland are other causes for a lowering of blood sodium.

Restoring the body's sodium content is not too difficult. Tracking the reason why it dropped is.

Has your friend's mental function normalized now that his sodium level has returned to normal? If it has not, then his doctor has to look for explanations of his erratic behavior that have nothing to do with his sodium.

The booklet on sodium and potassium explains why these minerals are so important and what happens when they are out of kilter. Readers can order a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue -- No 202, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Can. with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I had a foot reconstruction operation some months ago. The foot doctor said I had to be off Celebrex until the foot completely healed. I had been on it for several years. I have osteoporosis and rheumatoid arthritis. Since being off Celebrex for four months, I don't have any more pain or stiffness than I did while I was taking it. Do I really need it? -- V.M.

ANSWER: If a medicine isn't doing anything for you, why take it? You've taken Celebrex for several years and now you've been off it for four months with no worsening of your symptoms. I'd say you made a strong case for not continuing it. Many, many other rheumatoid arthritis medicines are on the market. It's time for a change, or perhaps for a medicine rest if your doctor agrees.

Daughter getting pulled in different directions

Annie's Mailbox

Dear Annie: I am 19 years old and seem to be getting pulled in different directions. I have been a good daughter, making my parents proud with great academics and strong morals. My family has always depended on me to be a role model for my relationship with Derek is not about them, and they should get over whatever hard feelings exist. The more they try to hold me back, the more I see myself growing apart from them. What should I do? -- Lost in America

Dear Lost: You are old enough to make these decisions yourself, and as an upstanding, responsible college student, your parents should trust your choices.
