Salem YWCA to close

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

SALEM — The YWCA of Salem became the latest victim of the economy, with Executive Director Susan Hays announcing Friday the nearly 53-year-old organization will close its office by Dec. 31 and dissolve by May 2011.

"The board has been wrestling with this decision for a good while now," Hays said when contacted by phone.

On a bright note, though, she said the Kin & Kids program which catered to grandparents and relatives serving as parents to grandchildren or a relative's children will remain intact by moving to the Family Recovery Center in Lisbon.

Kin & Kids program director Mary Caye Bixler will remain in her position, but as an employee of FRC. The program's grant from the Brookdale Foundation which continues through April 2011 will follow the program. The YWCA will assist with funding through 2010 and funds from the United Way will continue in 2010 and be used for Kin & Kids.

"Families aren't going to see a real change," Hays said, noting the board was committed to keeping the program in the county. "We want the transition all the way around to be smooth."

The office to be closed is located in the Kent State City Center on North Lincoln Avenue in Salem. Furniture and program supplies will be sold or transferred to other agencies. Part of the collection of stuff includes artwork done by Salem area artists, including a piece reminiscent of the beginnings of the YWCA, whose chapter was founded in Salem in 1957.

In letters to members of the YWCA of Salem, Kin & Kids friends and friends of the YWCA, Hays and board president Amanda Jackson explained how the organization had been running in the red for many years and using investment funds to cover operational costs.

The direction of the local YWCA began changing two years ago from physical and leisure activities, where attendance had been waning, to a more mission-driven presence, such as focusing on women's issues, including domestic violence.

At the same time, the YWCA of Salem board members decided to invest more of the reserve funds for what they were calling the "transformation" process. Then

YWCA officials announced Friday the office at the Kent State City Center will close at the end of this year, the Kin & Kids program will continue at the Family Recovery Center in Lisbon and the longtime non-profit organization known as YWCA of Salem will dissolve by May 2011. But for heroes, bloodbath could have been worse

FORT HOOD, Texas (AP) — Pfc. Marquest Smith, on his way to Afghanistan in January, was completing routine paperwork about a bee-sting allergy when the sounds erupted.

A loud, popping noise. Moans. The sudden, urgent shout of "Gun!"

Smith poked his head over the cubicle's partition and saw an extraordinary sight: An Army officer with two guns, firing into the crowded room.

The 21-year-old Fort Worth native quickly grabbed the civilian worker who'd been helping with his paperwork and forced her under the desk. He lay low for several minutes, waiting for the shooter to run out of ammunition and wishing he, too, had a gun.

After the shooter stopped to reload, Smith made a run for it. Pushing two other soldiers in front of him, he made it out of the Soldier Readiness Processing center — only to plunge into the building twice more to help the wounded.

Smith had survived the worst mass shooting on an American military base, a rampage of more than 100 shots that left 13 dead and 30 wounded, including the alleged shooter, Army psychiatrist Maj. Nidal Malik Hasan.

It could have been much worse, but for the heroics of Smith and others — like the 19-year-old private who ignored her own wounds, and the diminutive civilian police officer whose gunfire helped take down Hasan.

Wilson plans to vote for House health care reform bill

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

U.S. Rep. Charlie Wilson announced Friday he plans to support the proposed health care reform bill.

The congressman for the Sixth District, which includes Columbiana County and part of Mahoning County, released a written statement from his Washington, D.C. office explaining his support for H.R. 3962, the Affordable Health Care for America Act.

"As we wind down to the final hours of the healthcare debate, I have thought long and hard about what is in the best interest of my district. Emotions have run high on both sides of the issue for many months now and I have listened to a wide range of voices from across my district in order to best inform my decision," he said.

"While the Affordable Health Care for America Act is not a perfect bill, there are benefits in it that are hard to ignore. In my district alone, this bill will help almost 13,000 small businesses provide good healthcare coverage for their employees. It will close the prescription drug donut hole for over 9,000 of our seniors. And it will help 174,000 households in the Sixth District afford better coverage.

"I have always promised my constituents that I will vote in their best interest. There are times that I have disagreed with House leadership when I felt like what they were doing would unfairly punish my district, as was the case with the Cap and Trade bill earlier this year," he said. "I am never afraid to stand up for what is right."

"On this issue, what I believe is right is a health reform bill that will bring stability and security to the health care system, lower the cost of health care, and insure broader coverage. With those goals having been met, I am proud to announce my support for H.R. 3962, the Affordable Health Care for America Act," he said.

Some of Wilson's constituents came knocking on his Washington, D.C. office door Thursday after rallying near the Capitol against the health care proposal. One Columbiana County resident, Linda Harrington of Calcutta, said they met with a pair of Wilson's aides and made it clear to them their mission will be to replace the congressman. A member of the Ohio Valley Tea Party movement, she said their next project will be to send pink slips to Wilson and fellow Ohio Democrat Sen. Sherrod Brown.

Constituents also gathered at Wilson's Boardman office Thursday and planned to return Friday.

The House is expected to bring up the bill for a possible vote this weekend.

Pryor expects 'electric' crowd

OSU has tough road test today at Penn State

By GENARO C. ARMAS
Associated Press

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Welcome home, Terrelle Pryor.

No. 15 Ohio State and its talented dual-threat quarterback visit No. 11 Penn State in a high-stakes Big Ten game. For Pryor, it will be his first game at Beaver Stadium since the western Pennsylvania native spurned Penn State last year to end one of the most publicized recruiting races in recent memory.

Nittany Lions fans haven't forgotten, and Pryor knows it.

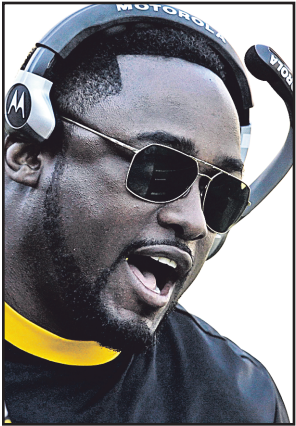

"It's going to be a crazy atmosphere, but that's what we come here for," said Pryor, a sophomore. "We're going (in) as a team, so if I get spit on, they spit on the whole team and stuff like that."

As if the annual grudge match between the Buckeyes

Broncos enter game with top-ranked defense

By ALAN ROBINSON
Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — The more coach Mike Tomlin keeps talking about it, the more agitated his players get.

Exactly the response Tomlin wants from his Pittsburgh Steelers.

Tomlin keeps referring to the Broncos as having "the world's best defense," a reference to Denver's spot atop the NFL team yardage statistics. He mentioned it during the weekly team meeting. Before practice on Wednesday. Before practice on Thursday. And he'll likely keep saying it until game time Monday.

"We've heard coach Tomlin say it 1,000 times already this week," quarterback Ben Roethlisberger said. "They're a great defense, a big challenge for us ... an awesome challenge."

By constantly reminding that the Broncos (6-1) are playing better statistically than the Steelers (5-2), Tomlin is trying to motivate both his offense and his defense. He wants his offense determined to prove it can move the ball in Denver, and his defense mad that it's no longer No. 1.

"They've put in a very aggressive style of defense," Steelers offensive coordinator Bruce Arians said. "They changed to a system very GRANVILLE — If this is a dream season, then the Salem Quakers don't want to wake up. The only thing sweeter than playing in your first playoff game is winning your first playoff game.

Although it took a last second field goal and overtime, Salem made the most of their first trip to the playoffs, defeating Granville 38-31 in an instant classic.

"These guys never cease to amaze me," Salem coach Mike Kopachy said. "They're making history with every step they take. I'm so proud of them."

The legs of Ben Eisel are usually important for Salem when it comes to long pass plays or punt returns.

Tonight they proved to have another value. With the season on the line, Salem was down three and took over at their own 11 yard line with only 1:31 left. Calmly, Trent Toothman marched the team to the Granville 16-yard line, connecting several times with Zach Penick. After three unsuccessful tries for the end zone, Eisel lined up for a 34-yard field goal with 1.2 seconds on the clock. Despite Granville's attempts at icing him by calling timeouts, Eisel knocked the ball through the uprights and sent the game to overtime.

"Nobody ices Ben Eisel," Kopachy said. "That's a situation we practice every day and we say it's for the game. Today it was for the game and he put it right through the middle."

Rebels handle Bulldogs again

Crestview holds off East Palestine

By MICHAEL S. BURICH
Staff Writer

COLUMBIANA — Crestview had a little bit of a sinking feeling near the end of the fourth quarter in its 20-14 victory over East Palestine in a Division V playoff first round game on Friday.

With its best offensive threat hobbled by a knee injury and the Bulldogs having scored a touchdown and two-point conversion off a fake kick attempt with nearly five minutes left, Crestview could see the finish line, but it didn't look as clearly as it did when the Rebels beat the Bulldogs 35-14 in the regular season.

A similar scenario happened a few weeks ago in a loss to Mineral Ridge, but this time a lot more was on the line.

"We knew we just had to keep playing," Rebel senior Adam Britton said.

Riding a wave of momentum, East Palestine got the ball

Woods has share of lead in Shanghai

Late push puts Tiger at 10-under

By DOUG FERGUSON

SHANGHAI — The gallery kept growing until it stretched along all 603 yards of the eighth hole at Sheshan International. It took a little longer before Tiger Woods gave them what they came to see Friday in the HSBC Champions.

Losing patience with each missed putt, Woods finally knocked in a 10-foot birdie on the ninth hole and was on his way.

With five birdies over the final 10 holes, he pieced together another 5-under 67 and surged into a share of the 36-hole lead with Nick Watney in a World Golf Championship that had a distinctive American flavor. Seven of the top nine players on the leaderboard are from the United States.

Far more tantalizing going into the weekend was Woods and Phil Mickelson, who ended their PGA Tour season with a compelling battle in Atlanta, going at it again halfway around the world in China.

Woods missed six birdie chances inside 20 feet and was growing increasingly agitated until one putt on the ninth changed his outlook.

"It certainly was a little bit frustrating, but the guys weren't running off and hiding, either," Woods said. "I knew if I could just play the back nine at 3-under par ... I figured that would probably be a pretty good number. And I did a couple better than that."

Mickelson chipped in for birdie on the 15th, then recovered from a poor tee shot with an unlikely birdie on the 16th. After trying to play short off the tee on the 288-yard hole and hitting hybrid into a bunker, Mickelson faced an awkward distance and a slightly plugged lie in the sand. He blasted a pitching wedge to 12 feet and made another birdie.

"One of the best shots I hit all day," Mickelson said, and one final birdie on the par-5 18th gave him a 66.

Behind him was Woods,

Sign

sign in the district to be lit by a light source mounted in front of the sign and with a metal shield over the light source.

However, Davis had argued that a provision in the village's general zoning codes allows for such signs to exist, which Frost confirmed in his judgment entry.

The village adopted its general zoning codes in 1994 and last amended the sign ordinance in 2001. As it currently reads, a portion of the ordinance states, "All signs and advertising structures, except hereinafter modified, may be illuminated internally or by reflected light."

Frost also noted the village in 1998 adopted the ordinance that established the historic district and set its design standards. "However, none of these standards which were clearly intended to be applicable to the Historic District were referenced to in any existing section of the Codified Ordinance or in the Zoning Code which may be accessed online at the Village's Web site," Frost said in his judgment entry. He also noted the ordinance establishing the historic district does not contain a provision to repeal or supercede the previously adopted ordinance allowing for internally lit signs anywhere in the village.

Frost said it is obvious village council intended to prohibit internally lit signs in the historical district, but it failed to establish that idea through its existing ordinances. Furthermore, he pointed out that Village Attorney Virginia Barborak informed the village Board of Zoning Appeals of the conflicting ordinances as early as December 2008.

"The law was the law. It was very cut and dry, and they should have seen it up there," Davis commented.

Davis said he holds no grudges against anyone in the village and acknowledged the village government is in place to make and enforce local laws.

"Their job is also to help us and encourage business; promote business," he added. "Their job is not just to slap the hand and slam the gavel down."

Davis said he has seen a tremendous amount of support since village officials first began publicly discussing taking him to court over the sign issue in July.

"I'm in awe. I'm thankful for the support of everybody in the community and all the customers," he said.

Davis had made two other arguments for his innocence, the first of which was a claim that the village should have granted him a variance. However, Frost noted the Municipal Court does not have the power to review the Board of Zoning Appeals' decision.

The other argument was that the village was using discrimination or selective enforcement, and Davis had noted the internally lit time and temperature sign at Huntington Bank is in the historic district, and the bank had received a variance. But "Clearly there is great merit in a town with such a proud history as Lisbon taking steps to preserve that history ... But the imposition of design or zoning standards has always been viewed in the law as an infringement upon the rights of individual property owners," Frost noted in his judgment entry.

"Unfortunately over the past eight years, our Army has been no stranger to tragedy," said a somber Gen. George Casey, Army chief of staff. "But we are an Army that draws strength from adversity. And hearing the stories of courage and heroism that I heard today makes me proud to be the leader of this great Army."

Home of the 1st Cavalry and 1st Army Division West, Fort Hood has seen more than its share of deployments and casualties in the past eight years.

As a psychiatrist, Hasan, 39, had listened to soldiers' tales of horror. Now, the American-born Muslim was facing imminent deployment to Afghanistan. In recent days, Hasan had been saying goodbye to friends. He had given away many of his possessions, including copies of the Holy Quran.

At 2:37 a.m. Thursday and again around 5, Hasan called neighbor Willie Bell. Bell could normally hear Hasan's morning prayers through the thin apartment walls, but Hasan skipped the ritual Thursday. Bell didn't pick up either time, but Hasan left a message. "Nice knowing you, old friend," Hasan said.

About an hour later, surveillance cameras at a 7-Eleven across from the base captured images of a smiling Hasan, dressed in a long white garment and white kufi prayer cap, buying his usual breakfast — coffee and a hash brown.

At the processing center on the southern edge of the 100,000-acre base, soldiers returning from overseas mingled with colleagues filling out forms and undergoing medical tests in preparation for deployment.

Around 1:30 p.m., witnesses say a man later identified as Hasan jumped up on a desk and shouted the words "Allahu Akbar!" — Arabic for "God is great!" He was armed with two pistols, one a semiautomatic capable of firing up to 20 rounds without reloading.

Packed into cubicles with 5-foot-high dividers, the 300 unarmed soldiers were sitting ducks. Those who weren't hit by direct fire were struck by rounds ricocheting off the desks and tile floor.

When he decided that Hasan wasn't close to being out of ammo, Smith made a dash for the door. He'd made it outside when he heard cries from within.

"I don't want to die." "This really hurts." "Help me get out of here."

Smith rushed back inside and found two wounded. He grabbed them by their collars and dragged them outside.

His second time through the door, he ran into the shooter, whose back was to him. Smith turned and fled, bullets whizzing by his head and hitting the walls as he rushed outside.

Around this time, Fort Hood Police Sgt. Kimberly Munley got the call of "shots fired." The SRP isn't on Munley's beat; she was in the area because her vehicle was in the shop. Munley, 34, was on the scene within three minutes.

Just over 5 feet tall, Munley is an advanced firearms instructor and civilian member of Fort Hood's special reaction team. She had trained on "active shooter" scenarios after the April 2007 mass shooting at Virginia Tech University. She didn't wait for backup.

As Munley approached the squat, rectangular building, a soldier emerged from a door with a gunman in pursuit. The officer fired, and the uniformed shooter wheeled and charged.

Another officer, Senior Sgt. Mark Todd, also responded to the sound of gunfire. He arrived to find Hasan "just standing there, hiding behind a telephone pole."

"He just looked like he was calm and he was just pointing, it was almost like he was pointing his finger at me," Todd told CNN in an interview late Friday. "But then I seen the weapon. ... I just know I seen the weapon and muzzle flashes and then that's when we returned the fire."

Munley was hit at least three times in the exchange — twice through the left leg and once in her right wrist.

Salem PTO offers cookbook

The Salem Junior High School PTO will sell copies of its cookbook, "Cooking With The Quakers," from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday at Giant Eagle. Cost is $10. As an added bonus, customers will receive a plate of fresh baked homemade cookies with each purchase at no additional cost, some of which the recipes are included in the actual cookbook. "We thought that this cookbook would be a great idea for the Salem Junior High School, and we had faculty, staff and students contribute all of the recipes" said Glory Zamarelli, cookbook chairperson. "They were thrilled with the idea and we could not be happier with the end result." The cookbook can also be purchased at the alumni office and Salem Computer Center. LeBron gets 33 in only MSG visit, Cavs beat Knicks

NEW YORK (AP) — LeBron James scored 33 points in his only visit to Madison Square Garden this season, leading the Cleveland Cavaliers to a 100-91 victory over the New York Knicks on Friday night.
One night after managing just 42 second-half points in an ugly home loss to Chicago, the Cavaliers rang up 40 in the first quarter, leaving New York fans with little left to do besides cheer for the Yankees in attendance and enjoy another mesmerizing performance by James. He added nine assists and eight rebounds, but fell just shy of passing Kobe Bryant as the active scoring leader at the Garden. James improved his average to 30.4 points, with Bryant averaging 30.5 in 11 visits, according to STATS LLC

James had scored 50 or more in two of his last three visits, joining Michael Jordan as the only visiting players with multiple 50-point games at the current building.
Mo Williams scored 12 points for the Cavaliers, who have won six in a row against the Knicks and four straight at the Garden, where James loves to perform.
New Yorkers are desperate for him to make it his full-time home when he becomes a free agent next summer, but the Knicks continue to offer nothing on the court that would make him consider a switch. As it is, he has as many victories at MSG this season as the Knicks, who fell to 1-5 overall.

David Lee scored 21 points and former Cavs guard Larry Hughes had 18 for the Knicks, who played their first nationally televised home game since March 19, 2006, and showed they are still miles from being ready for prime time.
James said he was still sore from a couple of falls in Thursday’s 86-85 home loss, but vowed that wouldn’t prevent him from playing the way he always does.
Just to prove it, he then nearly outscored the entire Knicks team in the first quarter. James shot 8 of 9 in the period, with his second 3-pointer coming just before the buzzer to give him 19 points and make it 40-21. The Cavs made 16 of 22 shots (73 percent), closing the quarter with a 17-2 run that basically wrapped it up early.

Before the second quarter started, the Yankees fan then went to the sideline and joined the crowd that included his pal Jay-Z in a standing ovation for Alex Rodriguez and six other members of the World Series champions who came onto the court between periods.
James said before the game he wouldn’t think about free agency until July, believing his team could contend for a title this season.

The Cavs haven’t been showing that yet, coming to New York with only a 3-3 record.
They looked like championship material against the Knicks, whose defensive effort had to be disheartening to Charles Oakley, Anthony Mason and Larry Johnson, who were in the crowd. They played for the franchise back when defense was their trademark. The Knicks did cut it to single digits with under 4 minutes to play, but James set up Williams for a basket, then knocked down a turnaround jumper to make it 95-82 with 2:47 remaining.

SALEM FROM 1B

Eisel said. “If it comes down to me I’ll get it done. Coach told me they couldn’t ice me so I was believing in him. If I make it we win, if I miss it we lose. It’s nerve-wracking, but I got it done.”
Salem took control first in the overtime period and used a power rushing game behind Toothman and Eric Bailey. Toothman finally punched it in from 2-yards out for what was to be the winning score. The Quakers held Granville on a fourth and goal from the three to seal the game.
The game was played in two distinct halves. The first half was a track meet, the second half was a slugfest. Granville used the big strike capability they’re known for to put up 31 first half points. Salem, not to be outdone, hit their own big plays. Trailing 3-0 on their first possession, it took Salem only two plays, two Trent Toothman runs to score. Toothman ran for 61 yards and then 16 to the end zone on the next play. Although Granville kept racking up the yards and points, Toothman and Salem would always come back with an answer. He would add two long touchdown passes, one to Eisel and one to Penick before halftime, but Salem still found itself down by 10.

“We sat in the locker room, and we had enough of giving up points and giving up yards,” Toothman said.
“We knew it was going to come to the end, we knew we were going to sell out on defense and give it everything we had to come back and win this game.”

Salem got the ball first in the second half and marched 77 yards in 15 plays before Toothman ran in from five yards out to narrow the gap. Then the defense turned the game around. After giving up 14 first downs in the first half, the gave up one in the second. After giving up 289 yards in the first half, they have up only 19 in the second. Most importantly, the gave up no points after halftime.
According to Kopachy the difference was easy.
“We tackled,” Kopachy said. “We played Salem football in the second half. We didn’t play Salem football in the first half. We were playing like we were playing against a scout team. Defensively we said ‘look, we don’t want to leave here with regrets. We want to play 24 minutes, all out effort, and let the chips fall where they may.’ I said ‘if we play defense in the second half we win this game’ and we did.”

The road continues for Salem and gets tougher at each step.
Next in line for Salem stands the Steubenville Big Red, one of the premier programs in all of Ohio, winners of two state championships the last four years.
One thing is for certain heading into that game, the community of Salem will be well behind the Quakers as they were Friday in Granville.
“I’m so proud of our kids, proud of our staff, proud of our school,” Kopachy said. “We filled this place tonight. They couldn’t hold us. We got people lining up all over the place. The community’s proud of them, I’m proud of them. What an effort by these guys. Words can’t say enough.”

REBELS FROM 1B

back at the 3:10 mark of the fourth with a chance to erase a two-game losing streak to end the season and the disappointing fourth place finish in the Inter-Tri County League upper tier.
But it would not come to pass.
Crestview’s defense, which had given up a six-play, 67-yard touchdown drive in 1 minute and 20 seconds earlier in the quarter, rose to the occasion to end East Palestine’s game-winning drive attempt with 2:22 left on the clock.
Perhaps the biggest defensive play of the game came on Dakota Norris’ sack of East Palestine Shane Peterson on third down during that drive.
“We didn’t want to blitz too much and run by Peterson and give him a lane to run,” Crestview coach Paul Cusick said. “Norris, one of our fastest linebackers, was able to get in there on the blitz and make a play on him.”
Crestview (10-1) advances to meet defending Div. V state champion Youngstown Ursuline on Friday at a site to be determined. Ursuline beat Garfield Heights Trinity 28-0. East Palestine ends its season at 7-4.
Crestview got on the board first in this one when Norris capped a 10-play 66-yard drive with a 1-yard touchdown plunge with 9:35 left in the second quarter. This was roughly several minutes after Rebel quarterback Carter Hill injured his knee in the first quarter.
The injury, which was to the same right knee Hill had surgery on following last season’s playoff loss to South

East Palestine’s Shane Peterson rolls out to pass during the team’s game against Crestview Friday. (Special to the Salem News/Richard Stelts, Swan Lake Photography)

Range, severely hampered his mobility for the rest of the game.

“It was real frustrating because I sort of act as a running back in our offense,” Hill said.

Cusick even thought about pulling Hill after seeing how much the junior was struggling, but he knew he needed his best player on the field.
“We knew his knee was a little sore and we even thought about bringing in Adam Coppock,” Cusick said. “We have a lot of faith in Adam, but I felt we needed Carter’s presence out there.”
Hill said it didn’t matter what the coach did.
“It’s his decision and he’s going to do what’s best for the team,” Hill said. “If I had to go, I would have had no problem with it.”
Hill transitioned into a role of pocket passer and hit Adam Britton on a 13-yard touchdown with 5:48 left in the half to push the Rebels lead to 13-0.
“There was definitely a lot of pressure on us with Hill playing hurt,” Britton said. “We knew it had to be a team effort.”
Hill ended up completing 12 of 20 passes for 151 yards. Britton caught three of those balls for 46 yards. Britton was also the leading rusher with 74 yards on 18 carries.

No. 5 Boise survives

RUSTON, La. (AP) — Kellen Moore threw for 354 yards and three touchdowns, and No. 5 Boise State survived a brief scare on the road with a 45-35 victory over upstart Louisiana Tech on Friday night.
Tech had pulled within 30-28 early in the fourth quarter on Dennis Morris’ leaping catch in the corner of the end zone. The Broncos defense buckled down long enough after that for Boise State to pull away with touchdowns on consecutive drives, the second score coming on Jeremy Avery’s 44-yard touchdown run.

Avery finished with 146 yards rushing, while Titus Young caught eight passes for 110 yards and a touchdown for Boise State (9-0, 4-0 Western Athletic Conference).

GOLF FROM 1B

hard to miss with the size of his gallery and the accompanying cheers. He came up short with his wedge and chipped in for birdie, then reached the green in two on the 538-yard closing hole framed by water for a two-putt birdie.
That put him in the lead at 10-under 134 with Watney, who birdied his last two holes for a 70.
Even in a World Golf Championship with players from 23 countries — the most diverse field for this series — Woods and Mickelson have been the attractions at the biggest tournament in Asian golf.

Woods first came to China in 2001 for an exhibition and remains a favorite of the star-struck crowd that calls him “Laohu,” which is Mandarin Chinese for Tiger.
Mickelson won the HSBC Champions two years ago and has impressed the Chinese off the course, too, by speaking of a responsibility to play in Asia to help grow the game and talking up the two golf courses projects he has in the country, including one in Kunming with a par-3 course that he hopes will attract children.
“This is my third year here, and I’ve seen a great increase in the number of people that have come out to watch, as well as the excitement level,” Mickelson said. “Obviously, Tiger Woods coming here plays a big part in that. But he also came here three or four years ago, and this is at a whole different level this year. It’s been neat to see.”

Woods has come twice to Sheshan International, and twice left as the runner-up. And despite leading going into the weekend, he realizes there is a lot of work left.
Watney felt as though he missed every putt that he had made the day before, yet his closing birdies put him in a share of the lead. As he finished, the world’s top two players were starting to make their moves.
“I knew from the start they were in the field, so it’s no surprise they’re playing well,” Watney said. “Whatever the lead is at, that’s not going to win the golf tournament. I need to go out and keep playing well and keep making birdies to have any shot.”

Mickelson is part of a crowd at 9-under 135. He is joined by Alvaro Quiros, the Spaniard reputed to be golf’s biggest hitter who shot a 66; and Ryan Moore, who made an 8-foot eagle on the 18th and finished his round at No. 9 by chipping in for birdie.
“If I have to be honest, I don’t see my name for a long time on the leaderboard — all were Americans,” Quiros said. “It was strange. Of course, it is exciting for me.”
Another shot behind is Anthony Kim, who saved his aggressiveness for the 18th hole by hitting a 5-wood to 4 feet for eagle. Pat Perez had a chance to post the only bogey-free round of the tournament until he missed an 8-foot par putt on his final hole for a 69, leaving him three shots off the lead.

Perez has been around long enough to understand that Woods commands the largest gallery, but he didn’t realize what kind of magnet the world’s No. 1 player was in China until he looked around and saw two spectators. He didn’t say whether that included his wife.
“It made me realize I’m actually a nobody,” Perez said. “I thought I was somebody, but this confirms it. In worldwide golf, I’m a nobody.”
He has a chance to make a name for himself this weekend, as do others.

Bond renewed for mother accused of abusing kids

LISBON — A Wellsville mother accused of abusing her children had her recognizance bond reinstated to keep her out of jail while her case remains pending, but under the condition that she stay at the residence where she's been living.

Michelle D. Darrah, 25, whose last known address was Clark Avenue, appeared in Columbiana County Common Pleas Court for a pretrial hearing Friday, a week after she failed to show up for another scheduled court hearing in her case. Her trial which had been scheduled to start this past week was cancelled and a warrant was issued for her arrest.

Judge C. Ashley Pike agreed to reinstate the bond for her release. A new trial date was set for Feb. 23, with a status hearing set for 11:30 a.m. Feb. 19.

Darrah was charged earlier this year with four counts of endangering children related to allegations that she recklessly abused her children and created a risk to their health and safety last fall.

The indictment alleged the abuse of her 4-year-old son occurred in September 2008 and the abuse of her 3-year-old daughter occurred in November 2008.

Also in Common Pleas Court:

• Ashley Miller, 22, of 1134 Jones Drive, Salem, was sentenced to 12 months in prison after pleading guilty to receiving stolen property, identity fraud and nine counts of forgery, all fifth-degree felonies. The sentence was to be served at the same time as a sentence in Stark County. Court documents said Miller used the personal identifying information of Brittany Rhodes and forged several stolen checks belonging to Rhodes on Oct. 30 and 31 in 2008.

Man charged with failure to appear

LISBON — A Salineville man accused of failing to show up for a court hearing was served Thursday with a secret indictment for a felony count.

Mark H. Felton, 35, whose last known address was 6691 County Road 55, was charged by the Columbiana County grand jury with failure to appear, a fourth-degree felony.

Court documents alleged Felton didn't show up for a pre-trial hearing set for Aug. 15, 2008 in a felony case for non-support of dependents. He was out of jail on a recognizance bond at the time.

Death sought in Ohio woman's death

AKRON (AP) — Prosecutors in Ohio intend to seek the death penalty against a woman accused of hiring a friend to kill her mother.

An indictment filed Thursday in Summit County court shows 20-year-old Taylor Marks of Akron faces one count of on aggravated murder. Police say Marks offered a friend $5,000 to kill 58-year-old Kristie Marks so she could inherit money.

Police say the daughter lured her mother to an apartment complex on Oct. 24, where the friend stabbed the older woman to death.

Police say they have confessions and found bloody clothes and a knife.

Marks is jailed and faces a Nov. 13 arraignment date.

Kristie Marks operated a Visiting Angels home health care business.

No. 19 Notre Dame knows how dangerous Navy is

By TOM COYNE
Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind.— No one on No. 19 Notre Dame needs convincing about how tough Navy is to play.

The Fighting Irish (6-2) remember how the Midshipmen gave them a scare last season by recovering two onside kicks and scoring two touchdowns in the final 99 seconds before the Irish held on for a 27-21 victory.

Just as vivid is a season earlier, when Navy beat Notre Dame 46-44 in three overtimes to end a 43-game losing streak to the Irish.

“That was kind of the low point of my career,” Irish center Eric Olsen said. “Obviously that season wasn’t a season that any of us really want to remember. But when you have a streak that long against a team, you hate to be the team that gives that streak up.”

The Midshipmen (6-3) say the memory of ending the NCAA’s longest losing streak by any team to a single opponent gives them confidence.

“We’ll keep that in the back of our minds as a reminder that we have done it before,” cornerback Blake Carter said. “We know that we have the ability to beat Notre Dame.”

That wasn’t always the case. The Irish beat the Midshipmen annually by an average margin of 24 points from 1964-2006, winning by 30 points or more 16 times. Navy was able to keep the game within a touchdown or less just six times.

Still, year after year, Irish players would talk about how dangerous Navy was and how difficult it was to play the Midshipmen. The players always sounded sincere, but it still seemed a bit hard to believe. That’s not the case any more.

The Irish players say playing Navy isn’t like any other game. Navy may not be as athletic as some teams the Irish face, but they are more tenacious.

“There’s no other way around it,” safety Kyle McCarthy said. “I’m not trying to be disrespectful with other teams we play. Navy, I mean, you can just feel it as a player. When you talk about going whistle to whistle, they go from whistle to the end of the whistle. That’s why we respect them so much.”

But Olsen said it isn’t just the effort that makes Navy so tough. “Their schemes on offense and defense, they’re good at what they do,” he said.

With its triple option offense, Navy has led nation in rushing for four straight years. This year they are ranked third at 279.8 yards per game.

Navy doesn’t pass much, attempting only 71 passes all season. Two weeks ago, Navy didn’t throw at all against Wake Forest in a driving rainstorm.

Irish coach Charlie Weis is also concerned about the Navy defense, which he called the best he’s seen in his five years here. The Midshipmen are 27th in the country in total defense, giving up an average of 316 yards a game.

The Irish can’t afford to lose if they want to keep their hopes for a Bowl Championship Series berth alive, while Navy needs one more victory to be eligible for the Texas Bowl.

Both teams get back key players from injuries. Notre Dame receiver Michael Floyd will play for the first time since breaking his left collarbone six weeks ago. Floyd is averaging 27.5 yards a catch.

Quarterback Ricky Dobbs will start for Navy after missing the Wake Forest win with a cracked bone in his right knee and getting in for seven plays in the 27-24 loss to Temple last week. He remains Navy’s second-leading rusher with 595 yards and still leads the nation with 16 rushing touchdowns.

“When you sit out two weeks, I don’t think you’re ever at full capacity,” Navy coach Ken Niumatalolo said.

Dobbs said this game is “personal” because his roommate is a die-hard Notre Dame fan and has showcases all sorts of Fighting Irish memorabilia in their dorm room.

“Me and his family are real cool. They said they would be rooting for me, but that their hearts were still with Notre Dame,” he said.

Notre Dame spent some time this week working on defending against onside kicks after last season’s embarrassment, with Weis calling it “an onside kickathon.”

The Irish players say Navy’s rally taught them a lesson.

“Navy is a team that never quits,” McCarthy said.

“We can’t take our foot off the gas.”

Hall of Famer Joe Paterno, would say. Games between the Nittany Lions and Buckeyes usually hinge on field position and big defensive plays, whether in Happy Valley or the Horseshoe.

Tressel, like Paterno, often likes to play things close to his sweater vest. Their styles pay off given that the two big-name coaches have 616 victories between them — Paterno the leader among major college coaches with 391, Tressel with 225.

In fact, Saturday’s game will be the first time two FBS coaches with a combined 600 or more wins will have met in the regular season, according to Penn State’s sports information department. The other time it happened was in the 2006 Orange Bowl, when Penn State and Paterno beat Florida State and Bobby Bowden, who is five behind Paterno on the career victory chart.

But Paterno doesn’t like to talk about his career stats, or to compare himself to Tressel or any of his other colleagues, for that matter.

“No, I’m not going to compare myself, heck,” Paterno said when a reporter broached the topic this week. “I’ll compare your writing with somebody else’s writing if you want me to do that, or something like that, but that’s not — no.”

He’s had more immediate concerns on his mind, like containing Pryor.

If there’s any defense that’s up to the challenge, it’s a Penn State unit that is the stingiest in the nation in allowing just 9.3 points per game.

The Nittany Lions’ defense leads the league in sacks, while the athletic linebacking trio of Navorro Bowman, Josh Hull and Sean Lee is one of the best in the country.

Mobile Northwestern quarterback Mike Kafka lit up the Penn State defense early last week before getting hurt, though the Nittany Lions have done a good job this season in containing other running quarterbacks such as Illinois’ Juice Williams and Michigan’s Tate Forcier.

While Ohio State’s defense (11.7 points and 260 yards per game) can go toe-to-toe with the Nittany Lions, the offense has struggled at times, with much of the blame pinned on an inconsistent Pryor.

Pryor started out slow “but the last two games he’s been very, very overpowering, really. He’s running well, he’s throwing the ball well deep,” Paterno said.

Pryor would love to do the same against the Nittany Lions at Beaver Stadium, especially after his fourth-quarter fumble last year set up Penn State’s go-ahead score in a 13-6 loss in Columbus. Penn State fans are ready to pounce on Pryor’s every move. Many blue-and-white backers still recall that during recruiting, Pryor called the Penn State campus in rural central Pennsylvania too “countryside” for his taste.

“I came here to Ohio State to play in this type of game. I have my teammates with me, all 70 guys,” Pryor said. “We’ll feed off of that, whether it’s our fans or their fans. It’s going to be exciting, electric.”

Indians hires Belcher as pitching coach

CLEVELAND (AP) — During his search for Cleveland’s pitching coach, new Indians manager Manny Acta was meeting with general manager Mark Shapiro when Tim Belcher’s name came up for discussion.

After a few minutes, Acta had heard enough. “He said, ‘Why are we going any farther? This is the guy,’” Shapiro said. Belcher, who has done just about everything but pitch for the Indians, is the first member of Acta’s new staff. The 48-year-old Belcher had spent the past eight seasons as a special assistant, instructing, evaluating and scouting players throughout Cleveland’s system.

Now, he’ll coach their best ones. “I view it as a good opportunity and challenge,” Belcher said Friday. Belcher replaces Carl Willis, who was let go after seven seasons when the Indians fired manager Eric Wedge and his entire coaching staff last month. Cleveland had its worst season since 1991, a slide that was tied in many ways to the Indians’ pitching problems.

It’s up to Belcher to get them worked out. The former major leaguer, who won 146 games over a 14-year career with seven teams, is very familiar with Cleveland’s arms. Belcher served as an interim pitching coach in each of Cleveland’s minor-league levels and was an in-uniform instructor during spring training. His knowledge of the Indians pitchers made him attractive to Acta.

“He has all the intangibles that we were looking for,” said Acta, who is still interviewing candidates to fill the other coaching vacancies. “We wanted to bring in a guy who could right this ship.”

Belcher has turned down other coaching opportunities in the past, but couldn’t resist the chance to accept one about a 90-minute drive from his home in Sparta, Ohio.

He’s got his work cut with Cleveland’s pitching staff. The Indians’ 5.06 ERA was the second-highest in the AL, while opponents batted .294 against the club’s starters. The Indians are counting on Fausto Carmona to bounce back after a disastrous season and hope Jake Westbrook makes it back from elbow surgery.

Phillies pick up Lee’s $9 million option

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies have picked up Cliff Lee’s $9 million option for 2010.

The team announced the expected move on Friday, two days after losing the World Series to the New York Yankees. Lee’s contract expires after next season, though general manager Ruben Amaro Jr. said the team is open to signing the star left-hander to a long-term deal.

Lee, 31, was acquired from the Cleveland Indians on July 29 for four minor leaguers, and quickly became Philadelphia’s ace. Lee posted a 3.39 ERA in 12 starts for the Phillies, then went 4-0 with a 1.56 mark in five postseason outings, including 2-0 in the World Series.

Published reports have suggested that Lee might command a deal similar to the seven-year, $161 million contract the Yankees gave C.C. Sabathia.

Ramirez to return to Dodgers next season

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Manny Ramirez is coming back to the Dodgers next season.

The team said Friday that the slugger exercised his $20 million contract option for 2010. His agent Scott Boras informed Dodgers general manager Ned Colletti of the decision.

Ramirez hit .290 with 19 home runs and 63 RBIs in 104 regular season games. He missed 50 games while suspended for violating baseball’s drug policy.

In the NL division series against St. Louis, Ramirez batted .308 with no homers and two RBI. Against Philadelphia in the NL championship series, he hit .263 with one homer and two RBI.

Ramirez was traded to the Dodgers from Boston in July 2008.

Roethlisberger’s accuser in suit quits casino job

RENO, Nev. (AP) — The woman who filed a lawsuit accusing Ben Roethlisberger of raping her has quit her job at the Lake Tahoe hotel-casino where she claims the assault occurred in the NFL quarterback’s penthouse room more than a year ago.

The woman had been working as a VIP host at Harrah’s Lake Tahoe in July 2008 when she alleges the two-time Super Bowl champ for the Pittsburgh Steelers lured her to his room under false pretenses and forced himself on her. He was in town playing in a celebrity golf tournament.

Her lawyer, Cal Dunlap, said Friday she quit “because of the way Harrah’s was treating her.” He told The Associated Press he can’t go into detail.

Dunlap said the woman took several leaves of absence for medical reasons in the months after the alleged incident, but returned to work in March and had been there since.

Harrah’s officials did not immediately return a telephone call or e-mail seeking comment.

The woman filed the suit in Washoe District Court in Reno last July. Roethlisberger’s lawyers asked the state Supreme Court to overturn a ruling by a district judge denying their motion to move the trial to Douglas County, closer to Lake Tahoe. No hearing has been set for that request.

New Mexico suspends hair-pulling soccer player

PROVO, Utah (AP) — A New Mexico soccer player has become an Internet celebrity for the wrong reasons.

Junior defender Elizabeth Lambert was suspended Friday for her infractions the day before during a 1-0 loss to BYU in a Mountain West Conference semifinal. Lambert is seen in video from the game throwing elbows, colliding with several players and then yanking the ponytail of a BYU player who went crashing to the ground.

“My actions were uncalled for,” Lambert said in a statement released by New Mexico. “I let my emotions get the best of me in a heated situation.”

Lambert’s actions brought unprecedented — and very unwanted — attention to the Mountain West women’s soccer tournament.

Video highlights have been airing nationally since Thursday night and not because it was a thrilling game decided on Carlee Payne’s header in the 31st minute. The focus of the highlights is more on Lambert’s physical play, especially her takedown of BYU’s Kassidy Shumway by grabbing her ponytail and pulling her backward.

New Mexico moved quickly to announce Friday that Lambert has been suspended indefinitely. The Mountain West followed with a statement commending the Lobos for acting promptly.

“Liz is a quality student-athlete, but in this instance her actions clearly crossed the line of fair play and good sportsmanship,” New Mexico coach Kit Vela said.

Lambert was the only player to be penalized in the game, getting a yellow card in the 77th minute for colliding with a BYU player who was driving toward the Lobos’ net. The highlights showed the game was physical in both directions, including an elbow to Lambert’s ribs by a BYU player during a dead ball.

OSU FROM 1B

(7-2, 4-1 Big Ten) and Nittany Lions (8-1, 4-1) needed any subplots.

Both teams could use a signature win to solidify their credentials for a BCS bowl berth.

The game also will break their tie for second place in the conference, putting the victor in better position for at least a share of the Big Ten crown should unbeaten Iowa falter down the stretch.

“We definitely feel like we have something to prove. There’s a whole bunch of talk that we haven’t played anybody yet,” Penn State receiver Derek Moye said.

The Nittany Lions have won five straight by lopsided margins, though they lost their toughest game this season when they fell to the Hawkeyes in late September.

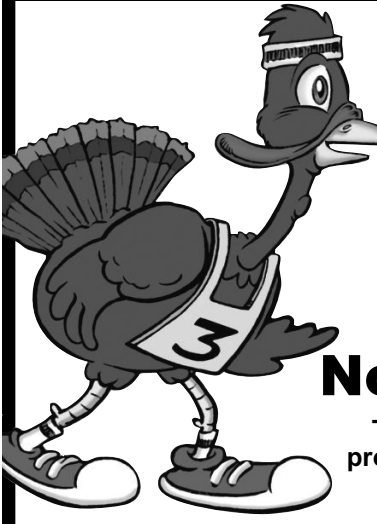

A loss could put the Buckeyes in more late-season trouble. Their goal to win at least a share of their fifth consecutive Big Ten title is already in jeopardy, and they host Iowa next week.

But there’s not a Buckeye that’s looking beyond the Nittany Lions, a team that leads the Big Ten in total offense (429 yards per game) and total defense (84 yards).

“It starts up front, very physical, very strong, aggressive style, not unlike ours,” Ohio State coach Jim Tressel said.

That sounds a lot like something his Penn State counterpart,

Casino win, as always, favors major cities

Ohioans finally approved a gambling proposal that favors, of course, the state's major cities, Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati and Toledo.

It will be interesting to analyze the vote returns on a county-by-county basis when they're made official later this month, to see if the outcome is a victory swath that basically follows Interstate 71 and the Ohio Turnpike across the state.

We're sure it won't include Eastern Ohio, as voters here turned down the proposal handily.

The reasons are simple to understand. First, the proposal does indeed favor the major cities, assuming the casinos eventually are built.

Second, the casinos will be a detriment to the area, which already benefits from casino traffic out of the Cleveland area which provides employment at the Mountaineer Casino, Racetrack and Resort at Chester.

Factor in competition from Pennsylvania, which doubtlessly will be moved rapidly off the fence now in favor of table games, and the issue becomes one not of fighting for tourist dollars but one of local casinos battling one another for local clientele, literally from Erie, Pa., to Cincinnati.

MTR, in issuing its third quarter results, said it must prepare for the new competition, which it anticipates will arise in about four years. MTR owns not only Mountaineer but also Presque Isle Downs in Erie, Pa., and the Scioto Downs track in Columbus. MTR spent $3.7 million in the fight against the latest Ohio gambling proposal, and it has seen a drop in revenue at Mountaineer following the opening of the Rivers Casino in downtown Pittsburgh during the third quarter.

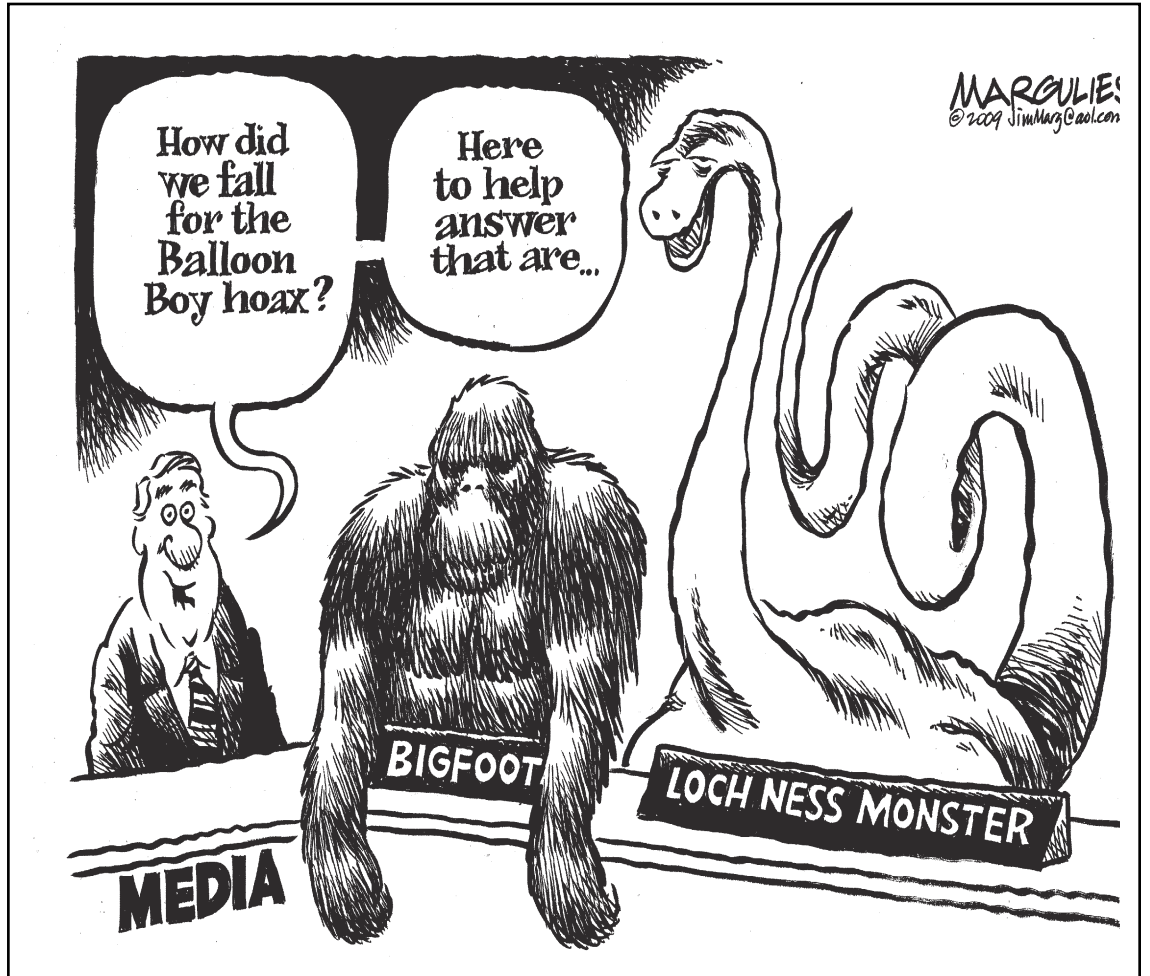

The question we have remains this: Gov. Ted Strickland and the state's budgeteers estimate there's $1 billion available to the tax coffers of Ohio when the table games are active.

We wonder. If a commodity like gambling stops being a novelty, a destination, when does it stop drawing new dollars and simply redistributing the existing pool of wealth, from the hands of wage earners and retirees to the hands of casino owners?

In other words, when there's a casino on every corner, Ohio, and West Virginia and Pennsylvania, will surely discover they're not a vacation and convention destination like Las Vegas and Atlantic City — both of which are struggling in the down economy.

We'll hold judgment, but suspect Ohio will suffer the social ills with little, if any, of the economic gains of gambling.

Death of deliberative democracy

In 2006, the minority party in Congress issued a dire report on the "unprecedented erosion of the democratic process." Democratic Rep. Louise Slaughter, then the ranking member of the House Rules Committee, authored the scathing document. She blasted the majority Republicans' violations of "procedural fairness," short-circuiting of debate, and late-night meetings "to discourage members and the press from participating" in legislative deliberations. My, how history repeats itself.

Fast-forward to 2009. The Imperial Congress has returned. The oppressed have become the oppressors. Democrats have met the enemy of deliberative democracy, and it is they.

Three years ago, the Democrats complained of House Republicans rushing through conference reports "before members could read them." Sound vaguely familiar? They urged their colleagues in power to "spend more time on major, substantive legislation" instead of ramming things through. Deja vu, anyone?

The Slaughter report pleaded for more transparency and public access: "Regular order should be the rule, not the exception." Instead of meeting late at night or early in the morning, the Dems called on the majority to operate "during regular 'business' hours so that members and the press can attend and participate."

Three years later, Democratic House Speaker Nancy Pelosi is jamming a 1,900-page health care takeover bill through Congress for a hasty Saturday vote while members of her own party revolt against strong-arm tactics. Upward of 40 pro-life Democrats have objected to the plan's government subsidies for abortion. Majority leaders evaded sunlight by keeping a compromise amendment on the matter out of the version of the bill made available to the public. As of Thursday afternoon (fewer than two days before the scheduled vote), Pelosi had yet to decide whether to permit an abortion ban amendment to her health care bill.

Pelosi's "most ethical," open and transparent House ever ordered Capitol police to block a GOP staffer from attending the public unveiling of the health care reform plan last week. A week before that, Democratic Rep. Edolphus Towns, D-N.Y., locked Republicans out of the House Oversight and Government Reform Committee room to prevent them from meeting when Democrats weren't present.

In June, Pelosi's Imperial Congress severely curtailed debate on the House cap-and-tax bill and rammed a 309-page manager's amendment through the legislative grinder at 3 a.m., which no one read before the vote just hours later. As GOP Rep. Mike Pence pointed out on the House floor, the "debate" was a "travesty." So much for procedural fairness: 224 GOP amendments were denied by the majority.

In April, the House passed a $3.6 trillion federal budget in the middle of the night with phony fiscal restraint amendments that leaders all admitted would be thrown out during a closed-door conference.

In February, House and Senate conferees larded up the stimulus bill with pork galore behind closed doors while President Obama denied the existence of earmarks with a straight face. South Carolina Rep. and House Majority Whip Jim Clyburn snuck in a provision intended to punish governors who chose to turn down federal stimulus funds. The Democrats broke their high-minded pledge to give Americans 48 hours to read the bill before passage. "Urgency" demanded it.

On the Senate side, Majority Leader Harry Reid is playing Harry Houdini with his health care package. After announcing a deal last week and telling the public that he was sending his proposal to the Congressional Budget Office for scoring, there is still no actual bill to review. When 40 Republican senators demanded to see the bill, he played "you show me yours" and then admitted that, indeed, "there is no bill to release publicly -- it does not exist."

Emitting more vapor than an industrial humidifier, Reid still holds out the possibility of abusing the budget reconciliation process to force the government health care takeover through with a simple majority and limited debate.

Meanwhile, Sen. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., performed an end-run around debate over her massive global warming bill on Thursday by using a "nuclear option" maneuver on the Senate Environment and Public Works. She and 10 Democrats rammed through the legislation without considering amendments and in defiance of GOP protests.

The 2006 minority Democrats' report on the death of deliberative democracy condemned the then-GOP leadership for becoming "the arrogant and corrupt majority they despised and condemned in their minority days." And now? Et tu, majority Democrats? Same as it ever was.

No climate for a change treaty in Copenhagen

GEORGE WILL

Intelligent people agree that, absent immediate radical action regarding global warming, the human race is sunk. That is a tautology because those who do not agree are, definitionally, unintelligent. Britain's intelligent Prime Minister Gordon Brown gives scary precision to the word "immediate." By his reckoning, humanity now has about 30 days to save itself. He says that unless a decisive agreement is reached at the 192-nation summit on climate change that opens Dec. 7 in Copenhagen, all is lost.

So, all is lost. The chances of a comprehensive and binding treaty are approximately nil.

The fourth of five parleys preparing for Copenhagen occurred in Bangkok from Sept. 28 through Oct. 9, with delegates from about 180 nations participating. Remember diplomat George Kennan's axiom that the unlikelihood of reaching an agreement is the square of the number of parties at the table? The meeting adjourned with, as usual, essentially no progress toward an agreement on reduced emissions by developed nations or on the money such nations should pay to finance developing nations' efforts against global warming.

The New York Times reports that "the United Nations Adaptation Fund, which officially began operating in 2008 to help poor countries finance projects to blunt the effects of global warming, remains an empty shell, largely because rich nations have failed to come through with the donations they promised." The fund has a risible $18 million, which might not cover the cost of Copenhagen conference.

There they will experience more futility because of, among other things, two stubborn facts -- the two most populous nations. On Oct. 21, China, the world's leading emitter of greenhouse gases, and India, which ranks fourth -- together they account for 26 percent of emissions -- jointly agreed: They, with their combined one-third of the world's population, will not play in what increasingly resembles a global game of climate-change charades. Neither nation is interested in jeopardizing its economic growth with emission caps of a sort that never impeded the growth of the developed nations that now praise them.

But do not really embrace them. Recently, the U.S. House of Representatives took time out from fending off the world and exempted large cattle, dairy and hog producing operations from an Environmental Protection Agency requirement for reporting greenhouse gas emissions. And 13 Great Lakes cargo ships were exempted from a proposed mandate requiring the use of low-sulfur fuel. When constituents' interests conflict with global grandstanding, Congress' rule is "act locally, think globally tomorrow, maybe."

In their new book, "SuperFreakonomics," Steven D. Levitt, a University of Chicago economist, and Stephen J. Dubner, a journalist, worry about global warming but revive some inconvenient memories of 30 years ago. Then intelligent people agreed (see above) that global cooling threatened human survival. It had, Newsweek reported, "taken the planet about a sixth of the way toward the Ice Age average." Some scientists proposed radical measures to cause global warming -- for example, covering the arctic ice cap with black soot that would absorb heat and cause melting.

Levitt and Dubner also spoil some of the fun of the sort of the "think globally, act locally" gestures that are liturgically important in the church of climate change. For example, they say the "locavore" movement -- people eating locally grown foods from small farms -- actually increases greenhouse gas emissions. They cite research showing that only 11 percent of such emissions associated with food are in the transportation of it; 80 percent are in the production phase and, regarding emissions, big farms are much more efficient.

Although the political and media drumbeat of alarm is incessant, a Pew poll shows that only 57 percent of Americans think there is solid evidence of global warming, down 20 points in three years. Gallup shows that only 1 percent of Americans rank the environment as their biggest worry. Two reasons are:

They are worried about their wages, which will not be improved by clobbering a weak economy with the costs of a cap-and-trade carbon-reduction regime. And climate Cassandras are learning the wages of crying "Wolf!"

In 2005, global warming worriers warned, as they tend to do after all adverse or anomalous environmental events, that Hurricane Katrina was caused by global warming and foreshadowed an increase in the number and destructiveness of hurricanes. As this year's Atlantic hurricane season ends, only three hurricanes have formed -- half the average of the last 50 years -- and none have hit the United States.

much like ours and Baltimore's. They've got the personnel to run it right now.”
The Steelers were the NFL's best defense statistically the past two seasons, but they're No. 8 this season. They're No. 1 against the run, but are 16th against the pass, which is dragging down their overall ranking.

“When you prepare for a team like this, it's like playing a division team, like a Baltimore,” safety Troy Polamalu said.

“It's always defense challenging defense. It's an important goal in every game for us: As a defense, we always want to outplay the other defense.”

The Broncos didn't do that during a 30-7 loss Sunday to Baltimore, which allows Tomlin to also sell this to his players: The Broncos are determined not to have another letdown in a game that potentially could prove important when the AFC playoff seeding is determined.

“I just think the Denver Broncos ran into a buzzsaw,” Tomlin said.

What the Steelers defense might run into is a Broncos offense that looks much different than it did against Baltimore.

When Broncos coach Josh McDaniels was an assistant coach with New England, the Patriots had success against Pittsburgh with spread-type formations that forced Polamalu to play deep coverage and didn't allow the Steelers to blitz as much.

The Broncos had trouble pass protecting for quarterback Kyle Orton against Baltimore, and the Steelers are capable of bringing the same kind of pressure the Ravens did. If the Broncos spread it out at times, Orton can get rid of the ball

HOROSCOPE

BY HOLIDAY MATHIS
SATURDAY, NOV. 7

Venus turns up the intensity of our relationships as she enters the passionate sign of Scorpio. The planet of romance is starkly honest as she traverses through this mysterious realm of the zodiac. In the weeks to come, our connections get closer as we disclose the information that emerges from the far reaches of our psyches.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). It's like the world is your cocktail party. Circulate and get to know a lot of different people. Your attention to etiquette will affect which opportunities you will be offered.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). If you want the same thing that everyone wants and you get it, you'll be envied. Luckily, you're likely to want something that is very unique and specific to you. So you'll be celebrated when you finally attain it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Whatever work you can do to get ready for life, take plenty of time to do it. When you are prepared, you'll have fun. If you can't, then relax and have fun anyway. Your improvisational skills will amaze you.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You appreciate beauty to such an extent that you cannot really enjoy yourself in an ugly environment. That's why you will feel driven to place yourself around loveliness or create it.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). What you do, you do for one reason -- love. You give of yourself and want nothing in return. You're here to contribute to the world, not to take whatever you can get from it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You'll be impressed by a new influence and will want to gain its qualities. In order to do this, you'll be willing to give something up -- like hard-earned cash. But go slowly. See if you still feel the same way tomorrow.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). It will be challenging to follow all of the social rules your mother would follow, but certainly not impossible. Confidence will come easily to you when you're sure you've done what is right and proper.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You respect your elders even when you don't agree with them. If you are quiet, you could get through a situation under the radar. Avoiding an argument is more important to you than exerting your own ego.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Your awareness of others will be tested. To pass this test, it's not enough to merely be observant. You must be empathic. What you think of as a trifling matter might be the very thing that means most to someone else.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Life is a trading game. You can't gain one thing without losing something else, and you never lose without gaining something, either. The trick is in deciding what is most valuable. You have a fantastic handle on that now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Someone knows how to work your nerves. If you feel that your patience is wearing thin, consider that there might be some humor in the situation that you've been missing. Lighten up and give it another look.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You will feel like venturing out, though hopefully not too far, since it's likely that the thing you seek is right at home. A slight shift in perspective will be all that's necessary to allow you to see it once again.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Nov. 7). You will be an agent for change. This month your own example of improved fitness and fresh style will attract interest and followers. You'll share your insights in December and really make people think. Family respects you and delivers on your requests. There's a chance to double your income in June. Aquarius and Cancer people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 36, 20, 14, 9 and 27.

Creatine — useful but not miraculous

Dr. Donohue

DEAR DR. DONOHUE:

I started lifting weights when I was a senior in high school. I am now 23, and I think I have reached a plateau. I haven't made much progress this past year, and I was making huge gains previously. I increased my workout time, but that hasn't made a difference.

A friend suggests I take creatine. What is it? Is it safe? It's not banned by any sports authority, is it? I am thinking of entering competitions if I can get back on track. What's the dose? I appreciate any information you can provide. -- J.M.

ANSWER: Don't think of creatine as a miracle product. It's an energy molecule. Close to 95 percent of the body's creatine is found in muscles. It keeps them working when they have to perform hard work in short intervals, the kind of work and exercise involved in lifting weights. It delays muscle fatigue and allows the exerciser to work longer and harder.

It also appears to spur muscle growth when it's combined with a weightlifting program. Even people 65 years old and older experienced increase muscle growth by taking it.

I am speaking of creatine monohydrate. There are other forms, but I don't know if they provide the same benefits as the monohydrate does. You can find this product in health-food stores and even in some drugstores.

Creatine is a food supplement, not a drug. It's not banned by any sports authority.

It appears to be safe. A few users complained of stomach upset, and some felt it induced muscle cramps, but those effects were few and far between.

An often-recommended dose is 5 grams taken four times a day for five days, or 2 grams taken daily for about four weeks. The instructions for how to take it and how much to take should be on the label. Creatine is not supposed to be a lifelong supplement. Use it as I indicated and see what happens. If it brings results, you can use it again down the road.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I know when to eat before exercise or before a game. When is the best time after exercise? Is there such a time? Or can you just eat when it's convenient? -- B.D.

ANSWER: If you take in a high-carbohydrate meal within 60 minutes of exercise, your muscles replenish their glycogen rapidly. Glycogen is stored muscle sugar. It's the muscle's primary source of fuel. If you can't have a full meal within 60 minutes, you can still replenish glycogen by taking a carbohydrate load. Energy bars and sports drinks provide a good supply of carbohydrates. So do most fruits.

Teen's lie about past jeopardizes future

DEAR ABBY: I am a 16-year-old guy in my sophomore year of high school. I am known as a friendly, outgoing guy who gets along with girls. My problem is, I used to be one of the biggest jerks who ever was. I was involved in fighting and other things I won't go into. But I turned my life around.

I was going out with an amazing girl, "Samantha." She always kept me in line, but was sweet about it. Recently, because I was ashamed of my past, I lied to her. She found out about it and, needless to say, she was very hurt. When I saw how hurt she was, I was sick to my stomach knowing how much pain I had caused such a trusting girl.

I want to make things right, but I don't know where to start. I have talked to her since then, but things aren't the same. Please help. -- LOVESICK IN KENNEWICK, WASH.

DEAR LOVESICK: Apologize again to Samantha for not being completely truthful with her, and explain that you lied because you were ashamed about your past behavior and only wanted someone as special as she is to see you in a good light. Promise never to do it again.

If she likes you as much as you like her, she'll give you another chance. But remember, from here on you will have to be honest because if she catches you in another lie, she won't believe another word that comes out of your mouth. Enough said?

Annie's Mailbox

Dear Annie: My parents divorced 18 years ago, and Dad has had numerous partners and wives since. Three months ago, Dad found out he had stage-four colon cancer. Two weeks after his diagnosis, he married "Sue."

Here's the problem: Before he was sick, Dad didn't get along that well with Sue. They argued a lot, and my sisters and I thought he'd eventually break it off. Still, we were all polite to her and invited her to family gatherings. As soon as they married, Sue started pushing us away. Her family members had confrontations with my sisters at the hospital, telling us we were butting in too much.

Dad recently came home. We are determined to do whatever we can to help and be with him until his final day. We used to come over to take out the garbage and mow the lawn, but now Sue has hired people and says we don't need to come by anymore. When we told Dad how upset we were, he said he is too sick to argue with Sue and she can do whatever she wants.

Dad just had a birthday. We gave him a puppy since he told us in the hospital that he wanted one to sit with him through chemo. Sue got rid of it. We think she is emotionally abusive to him. I know he's terribly depressed because he keeps asking for his gun back. We don't want to create problems. We just want to be part of

CHURCH BRIEFS

Catholic Women

YOUNGSTOWN – The Youngstown Diocesan Council of Catholic Women will meet from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Nov. 21 at St. Christine's Catholic Church Hall, 3165 S. Schenley Ave. A light breakfast and light lunch will be provided by the Hospitality Ministry of St. Christine's. There is no charge to attend, but reservations are required and may be made by calling 330-834-0354 before Nov. 7. The morning program features The Christmas Billboard Ladies, three of which are members of St. Christine's Parish.

St. Jude Women's Guild announces craft show

St. Jude craft show

COLUMBIANA – St. Jude Women's Guild is sponsoring its annual craft show from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Nov. 21 at St. Jude Activity Center, 180 Seventh St. Handcrafted and homemade items will be featured along with a Chinese auction, bake sale, prize raffle and lunch counter. Admission and parking are free.

Roast beef dinner

GREENFORD – The Greenford Lutheran Church will hold its annual roast beef dinner on Nov. 14. Seatings are at 4 and 5:30 p.m. Hosting the dinner are the men of GLC serving roast beef, mashed potatoes and gravy, green beans, cole slaw, applesauce, rolls, beverage and cake. Cost is $7 for adults and $4 for children ages 3 to 11. There will be a raffle for a queen-size quilt made by the ladies of the church. For ticket and seating reservations call the church office at 330-533-5324. The church is located at 7450 W. South Range Road.

Christmas Child

NEW WATERFORD - Abundant Life Fellowship at 46469 state Route 46 is a designated drop-off location for churches, groups and individuals participating in a global outreach project for children. Operation Christmas Child, a project of Samaritan's Purse, an international ministry affiliated with evangelists Billy and Franklin Graham.

People are asked to fill shoeboxes with gifts for age- and gender-specific children. The gifts can be toys, school supplies, hygiene items, small clothing items, etc. Vivian Carvender of Columbiana, relay center coordinator at Abundant Life, has been involved in the project since 1995. All boxes dropped off at the church will be loaded onto a tractor-trailer, hauled to Warren and transported directly to the Samaritan Purse headquarters in North Carolina for distribution to children in the states and overseas.

National collection week for Operation Christmas Child is Nov. 16-22. Boxes will be accepted at Abundant Life from 10 a.m.-1 p.m. Nov. 16, 17, 19; 10 a.m.-2 p.m. Nov. 18; 10 a.m.-1 p.m. and 4-7 p.m. Nov. 20; 9 a.m.-noon Nov. 21; and 9 a.m.-1 p.m. Nov. 22

Carvender, who is assisted in the project by Margaret Kandel of Lisbon, is encouraging churches, community groups and individuals who have never participated to get involved this year, when she anticipates even greater needs. More details about preparing the boxes and what can be sent are available at www.samaritanspurse.org.
