A piece of Salem history

No, it's not the latest piece of firefighting equipment during these budget-challenged times. This is a "Swan Neck" village fire engine made by The Deming Co. in Salem at the turn of the 20th century. According to a 1902 Deming Co. catalog, this fire engine with "gun-metal cylinders," came in two sizes and used reversible folding brakes, "arranged so that 10 men can work them at once." From left are Capt. Shawn Mesler, Firefighter Mike Bryan, Lt. Jeff Olinger and Inspector Steve Mix. Actually the front two firefighters, Mesler and Olinger, should be facing in the opposite direction to make the pump operational. The rig came with a fifth wheel to allow it to turn "the shortest corners" and cost $200 for a 4.4-inch cylinder size and $275 for a 6inch cylinder size. Dave Stratton of the Salem Historical Society said Keith Blahoe of Evon Valley, Pa., is the owner and wanted it to be on display so people could see what Deming made. Tim Filp and John Tarleton, a former firefighter, brought the unit into the Salem Fire Department where it will remain on display before moving to the Stadium GM Superstore on W. New South Range school should be ready

NORTH LIMA - South Range Local is moving toward its relocation and should be ready for the start of the school year Sept. 8, according to Superintendent Dennis Dunham.

At the school board's regular meeting Monday night, Dunham reported that the school received partial occupancy for the new building, in particular its academic wings. The kitchen and library should be certified by the start of school, and the auditorium shortly after, he said.

The life safety issues, such as fire alarm and suppression system, are all operational, Dunham added.

"Despite what you might hear, your kids will be going to school on Sept. 8," Dunham said. "Not everything is in place yet, but we will move into a Jim Phillips. building that with time and patience will be what we all want it to be."

A limited open house for parents and students will be held from 5 to 8 p.m. Monday.

A larger open house and ribboncutting ceremony for the public will be held at a future date.

In other news, the board rejected bids for the all-weather track to be built to the east of the K-12 campus.

The board had previously approved the work by Santini Builders, but had to put the project on hold until the funds for it are released by the Ohio School Facility Commission, which is retaining the money until the K-12 campus is complete and there is proof the project did not exceed budget, according to Treasurer

The money is earmarked for the track and a weight room, so the project will be completed eventually, Phillips said.

The board will have to re-bid the track project when the funds are released, he noted.

Additionally the board accepted the retirement of high school chemistry and physics teacher Bob Ferranti, who has been with the district for 36

A "Meet the Team" night is scheduled for 7 p.m. Aug. 24 at the football stadium.

The next regular board meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Sept. 20 in the library of the new K-12 campus.

Schools move to cut energy use

By LARRY SHIELDS Staff Writer

SALEM - School begins next week and with it the district expects to implement the "Energy Conservation Measurer" developed by Chevron Energy Solutions that was approved in March.

Superintendent Tom Bratten said Monday that the Ohio School Facilities Commission final approval is expected on Aug. 26 and ventilation renovations on Buckeye and Reilly Elementary schools can begin within a week and then move to the other build-

The program is expected to save $1.7 million over 15 years or between $40,000 and $100,000 annually, according to George L. Locher, Jr., senior project development manger for Chevron, who said last March that the savings, once determined, will be guaranteed including principle and interest.

He said the district is already doing a good job with conservation but it needed "to address large capital items."

The savings are guaranteed and "required" by the state and will support the 15-year or less loan that will be needed for the plan.

If the savings aren't there, Chevron pays for the upgrades.

Bratten said it was an attempt to provide better ventilation and to make buildings cooler in the summer and warmer in the

On Monday, Bratten said the work will not be cosmetic but more on the infrastructure.

Chevron engineers have mapped out all the buildings and the board expects to use local contractors if they met Chevron's and the board's standards.

Chevron said the ultimate choice is with the school board regarding that, and flexibility was the

It's what's up front that counts

By DOUG FERGUSON Associated Press

COLUMBUS - When Ohio State's offensive line is clicking, it's as good as any in the nation.

At least that's what the players who make it up think.

huge expectations. We want to be the best offensive line in the country," guard Justin Boren said. "Last year we had a lot of new guys in a lot of positions but now we have a pretty solid starting point. Hopefully it is only better things from here."

The offensive wall in recent years had been one of the most maligned groups at Ohio State. When the Buckeyes lost two of their first seven games and barely escaped with a win in the opener against Navy last year, it seemed everyone wearing scarlet and gray was complaining about the blocking. At times, the unit seemed lost.

But then the linemen started dominating teams in a sixgame winning streak to end an 11-2 season. Quarterback Terrelle Pryor and running backs Brandon Saine and Dan Herron got a lot of the credit, but for a change people were saying good things about the offense's biggest guys, too.

"This line has a lot of experience coming back," said center Mike Brewster. "We're expecting a lot of ourselves. We all know the plays very well and the blitzes and everything. We're definitely going to demand a much higher (level of) play this year."

Miller, at 6-foot-6 and 288 pounds, is the lightest of the five, believe it or not. Adams (6-8, 300), Boren (6-3, 320), Brewster (6-5, 293), Browning (6-4, 313) and Shugarts (6-7, 297) don't get shortchanged at the training table. Boren, a transfer from archrival Michigan, Miller and Browning are seniors; the rest are juniors.

The only member missing from last year's crew is graduated veteran Jim Cordle, who started at left tackle in the victory over Oregon in the Rose Bowl.

The Buckeyes ran their usual balanced mix of run and pass plays for most of last season until Pryor suffered a minor knee injury late in the year which didn't keep him from playing but did keep him from doing much running.

Problem solved?

New QB Jake Delhomme steadying Browns

By TOM WITHERS Associated Press

BEREA — One drive: 11 plays, 80 yards in under six minutes. That's all it took for Jake Delhomme to convince m a n y Cleveland fans that the Browns' seemingly endless problems at quarterback are history.

Well, it's way too early to proclaim the team's QB problems over, but Delhomme's brief but bright exhibition debut on Saturday night in Green Bay went a long way toward restoring the veteran's image, and it helped further faith that president Mike Holmgren can revive the

In his first — and only series, Delhomme went 6 of 7 for 66 yards and moved the Browns to a quick touchdown against a highly regarded Packers defense. Cleveland rallied after blowing a 14-0 lead to win 27-24 on a last-second field goal, but Delhomme's performance was both a personal victory and vindication for Holmgren, who raised some eyebrows when he signed the 35-year-old free agent as one of his first executive acts in March and discarded both Brady Quinn and Derek Anderson.

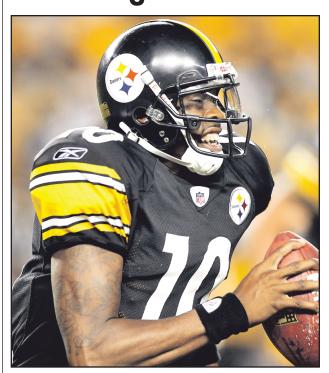

"Jake did an excellent job on the first drive," coach Éric Mangini said Monday. "We were able to do a lot of things

No change in Steelers' quarterback rotation

By ALAN ROBINSON

LATROBE, Pa. — Dennis Dixon is off to a running start as he tries to overtake Byron Leftwich and become the Steelers' starting quarterback during Ben Roethlisberger's suspension.

That's the problem,

The Steelers don't want the mobile Dixon abandoning the pocket and running while he has open receivers downfield. Not in exhibition games, not in practices and especially not when the games count. "If he's your starter, you're not going to expose him to running the football, because they're going to break him up," offensive coordinator Bruce Arians said earlier in camp. "That stuff, you can forget about that if he's the starter. He wouldn't last two ball-

So while Dixon's statistics were better than Leftwich's during the Steelers' 23-7 exhibition victory over Detroit on Saturday, the quarterback rotation remained unchanged during practice Monday.

Roethlisberger, who will play Saturday at the Giants after being held out against Detroit, ran with the starters. Leftwich followed him. Dixon came after that, running a package of plays designed to emphasize his quickness and versatility. But not running too much.

"And it's not necessarily with the twos (second unit) or the threes (third unit), it's a special package," Arians said Monday. "When you play without Ben, you're going to utilize all the players you have. He'll have a package, and how he plays within that package will determine how much he PITTSBURGH - The Pirates failed to win any of six games on their recently concluded road trip, but they resembled a different team in their homecoming on Monday night.

The Pirates made short work of the Florida Marlins at PNC Park, 7-1, as starter James Mc-Donald allowed one run on three hits in seven innings, his second second effective start in three tries with his new team.

The Pirates own a almostrespectable 27-30 record at home compared to a god-awful 13-48 mark on the road. What's the difference? Don't

"Who knows? I have no idea," shrugged Andrew McCutchen, who hit his 10th home run of the season. "I bet if you checked the stats in past years, not just for ours but for other teams, I'm sure their percentages are somewhat better at home. I mean, that's just the way it is. Good teams win on the road. We just have to find a way to do that."

Only the beginning for Kaymer

Young German star capable of more majors

By DOUG FERGUSON Associated Press

SHEBOYGAN, Wis. Even with the Wanamaker Trophy at his side, Martin Kaymer could not believe he was a major champion. Neither could anyone else.

Even after winning the PGA Championship, he had to share the spotlight with hard-luck Dustin Johnson, the victim of a twostroke penalty on the final hole when he grounded his club in a bunker without realizing he was in a hazard.

It will be hard to mention Whistling Straits without thinking of Johnson, just as Jean Van de Velde and his comical collapse remains such an ingrained part of the history at Carnoustie.

It might take another major for the 25-year-old German to get his due.

Not many would be surprised if he did.

Kaymer was in his second year on the European Tour when he won the Abu Dhabi Championship, then finished birdie-eagle in Dubai to finish one shot behind Tiger Woods.

"You've got to watch this kid play," Ernie Els said early in 2008. "He's going to be something, I promise you."

Consider the promise fulfilled.

Lost in the controversy over what should constitute a bunker at Whistling Straits were the clutch putts Kaymer made in the final round Sunday. First came the 15-foot par putt on the 18th hole in regulation to earn his spot in the playoff. Then came another 15-footer on the par-3 17th, the second of a three-hole playoff to catch up to Bubba Watson. The end was anticlimactic for everyone but Kaymer.

He rapped in a 2-foot bogey putt to finish one shot ahead of Watson in the playoff, calmly plucked the ball from the cup and had to muster up some emotion to commemorate his first major.

Typical stoicism of a German? Not really.

"If I would have made that par putt in the playoff, I probably would have freaked out," Kaymer said. "But it was only a little bit more than a foot, 1 1/2 feet, to win it. And when I was walking toward the putt, I just thought I should really think about that feeling, what I

'Monster' child rapist sentenced to 20 years in prison

By MARY ANN GREIER

Staff Writer

LISBON - An admitted rapist described as a monster apologized before being sentenced to 20 years in prison for his sexual acts against a young girl and one of her friends, a prosecutor said.

Michael Kosonovich, 32, of 1642 Holiday St., appeared for sentencing Monday morning in Columbiana County Common Pleas Court for two counts each of rape, sexual battery and gross sexual imposition.

Judge C. Ashley Pike issued a sentence of 10 years for each of the two rape charges and five years each for the other four sex-related counts, with the rape charges to be served consecutive to each other and the other charges to be served at the same time for a total of 20 years.

Two additional rape charges were dropped as part of a plea agreement reached in June when Kosonovich entered a guilty plea to six charges. He could have faced an additional 20 years for the dismissed charges.

Most of the charges involved a girl who was 9 or 10 years old when the attacks began in 2004 and continued through 2009. He had access to her through his relationship with her mother, with the incidents occurring at their residences in East Liverpool and Calcutta. One of the charges involved him sexually molesting one of the girl's friends who spent the night at the home.

During the hearing, assistant county Prosecutor Tim McNicol said a victim's advocate read a statement from the girl's mother who told the judge she agreed with the plea deal so her daughter wouldn't have to go through a trial. McNicol said she consistently described Kosonovich as a monster.

When it was his time to speak, Kosonovich apologized for what he did.

"I'm glad it brought closure for the family," McNicol said, adding "hopefully she will recover from the mental scars, which sometimes last longer than the physical injuries.'

According to McNicol, nobody from the other girl's family spoke.

Reid comes out against plan to build a mosque near ground zero

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate's top Democrat on Monday came out against plans to build a mosque near the site of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, moving away from President Barack Obama on the controversial election-year issue.

Locked in a tight race, Nevada Sen. Harry Reid became the highest profile Democrat to respond to Obama, who last week backed the right for the developers to build a mosque near ground zero. Since his comments Friday, the Democratic president and his aides have worked to explain the statement, which drew criticism from Republicans and Democrats alike.

'The First Amendment protects freedom of religion," said Jim Manley, a Reid spokesman. "Senator Reid respects that, but thinks that the mosque should be built some place else."

Critics have said the location of the mosque is insensitive because the terrorists who struck were Islamic extremists. The plans call for a $100 million Islamic center two blocks from where almost 3,000 people perished when hijacked jetliners slammed into the World Trade Center towers on Sept. 11, 2001.

Ex-Israeli soldier in trouble over Facebook photos with prisoners

JERUSALEM (AP) - A former Israeli soldier posted photos on Facebook of herself in uniform smiling beside bound and blindfolded Palestinian prisoners, drawing sharp criticism Monday from the Israeli military and Palestinian officials.

Israeli news websites and blogs showed two photographs of the woman. In one, she is sitting legs crossed beside a blindfolded Palestinian man who is slumped against a concrete barrier. His face is turned downwards, while she leans toward him with her face upturned. Another shows her smiling at the camera with three Palestinian men with bound hands and blindfolds behind her.

The incident was a reminder of the fraught relations between Israeli soldiers and the West Bank Palestinians under their control.

Israeli soldiers have run into trouble on the social media sites like Facebook and YouTube before. Most recently a group of combat soldiers were reprimanded for breaking into choreographed dance moves while on patrol in the West Bank town of Hebron. The dance featured prominently on YouTube.

Palestinian Authority spokesman Ghassan Khatib condemned the photos and said they pointed to a deeper malaise – how Israel's 43-year-old occupation of Palestinians has affected the Israelis who enforce it.

Interior halts exemptions from reviews for deepwater oil drilling

WASHINGTON (AP) Obama administration announced Monday it is requiring environmental reviews for all new deepwater oil

That means an end, at least for now, to the kind of exemptions that allowed BP to drill its blown-out well in the Gulf with little scrutiny.

The announcement came in response to a report by the White House Council on Environmental Quality, which found that decades-old data provided the basis for exempting BP's drilling permits from any extensive review.

The Interior Department said the ban on so-called "categorical exclusions" for deepwater drilling would be in place pending full review of how such exemptions are granted.

Obama slams Republicans as 'No we can't' party

MILWAUKEE (AP) - Flying thousands of miles to reap millions of dollars, President Barack Obama is dashing across the country to help his party retain power, essentially offering one familiar argument: Republicans don't solve problems.

"Don't give in to fear," Obama said Monday in his latest ominous vision of a country led by the opposition party. "Let's reach for hope."

Obama has settled on his message for the pivotal midterm elections, which means what he said Monday in Milwaukee will sound like what he says Tuesday in Seattle and Wednesday in Miami. He is covering more than 8,000 freewheeling miles in three days, the kind of personal attention that gets donors to the door.

This week offers not just a window for Obama to campaign - Congress is gone, his summer vacation awaits - but also a window into his thinking about the fall campaign. Despite deep voter impatience over the sickly economy, the White House is betting people will stick with Democrats if the choice is framed as one between those who act and those who obstruct.

Rash of suicides sets off alarm bells at Border Patrol

FORT HANCOCK, Texas (AP) – After a bad day on the job as a Border Patrol agent, Eddie DeLaCruz went home and began discussing with his wife how to celebrate her upcoming birthday. Then he casually pressed his government-issued handgun under his chin and pulled the trigger.

'It was the ugliest sound I ever heard in my life," his widow, Toni DeLaCruz, recalled of that day last November. "He just collapsed."

A month later, one of DeLaCruz's colleagues at the Fort Hancock border post put a bullet through his head, too.

Suicides including these have set off alarm bells throughout the agency responsible for policing the nation's borders. After nearly four years without a single suicide in their ranks, border agents are killing themselves in greater numbers. Records obtained by The Associated Press show that at least 15 agents have taken their own lives since February 2008 - the largest spike in suicides the agency has seen in at least 20 years.

It's unclear exactly why the men ended their lives. Few of them left

Firefighters search for boy near Crestview High

By MATTHEW SCHOMER

Staff Writer

COLUMBIANA - A 9year-old Fairfield Township boy's disappearance Monday night brought out a search squad of more than 30 emergency workers.

New Waterford fire Chief Bryan Henderson said about 18 firefighters each from the New Waterford and Columbiana fire departments searched about an hour for the boy before successfully locating him unharmed.

The boy disappeared in the 8 p.m. hour Monday in an area just east of Crestview High School after an argument with his mother. Henderson noted the time of night and the large number of cornfields providing possible hiding spots in the surrounding area prompted him to call for additional backup.

"When it starts getting dark, you want to call in more people, you want to find him as soon as possible," he said.

The Leetonia Fire Department and a K-9 unit from Beaver Township were called in to aid in the search, but officials found the boy before either department had units on the way.

Henderson also had called for STAT MedEvac to send a helicopter with a night vision camera to assist in searching for the boy, but the search was called off before the helicopter crew's takeoff.

Pavin says Tiger 'high on his list' for Ryder Cup

MILWAUKEE (AP) -Tiger Woods remained No. 1 in the world ranking Monday, though not even close to that on two lists — the Ryder Cup and FedEx Cup — that mean much more these days. Woods failed to qualify for the Ryder Cup for the first time — he had led the standings every other time since 1997 — and now must rely on U.S. captain Corey Pavin spending one of four wild-card picks on him.

In a hotel conference room Monday, Pavin sat at the head table between two poster boards, each showing the final standings for the eight American qualifiers. Woods' name was nowhere to be found between Phil Mickelson at No. 1 and Matt Kuchar at No. 8.

Pavin would only say that Woods is "high on my list" and will be a "big consideration" when he announces his selections Sept. 7.

"I'm looking at him in essence like any other player. He isn't ... but he is," Pavin said. "I'm certainly not going to disrespect other players by considering him different from other players. I have to look at the way he's playing, the way he played, and I have to look at his body of work as well. If anyone can turn it around quickly, it's him."

Woods should have at least one more tournament to make an impression.

While he wound up No. 12 in the Ryder Cup standings, equally troublesome is that Woods is No. 108 in the FedEx Cup standings. The top 125 are eligible for The Barclays next week at Ridgewood Country Club in New Jersey, the start of the PGA Tour playoffs. Only the top 100 in the standings advance to the second round of the playoffs at the Deutsche

Bank Championship outside Boston. Woods is so far down in the FedEx Cup standings he's one spot behind Pavin.

"He's ranked a lot higher on Ryder Cup points," Pavin said with a laugh, "and probably the world ranking, I'm guessing."

Despite the shockingly low numbers next to Woods' name, Pavin came away from the PGA Championship encouraged as much by what he heard from Woods as what he saw from him.

Woods stated plainly at the start of the week that he wants to play in the Ryder Cup and would accept a captain's pick. Even after he closed with a 1over 73 to tie for 28th at Whistling Straits, he joked that he could still help out in singles. His Ryder Cup record is 10-13-2, including 3-1-2 in singles.

"I feel my game is a lot better than it was obviously last week, and given a little bit more time, it's starting to head in the right direction now, which is good," Woods said. "And I'm looking forward to it. Hopefully, Corey will pick me on the team."

Woods tied for fourth in the Masters and U.S. Open. He missed the cut at Quail Hollow with the highest 36-hole total of his career, and only a week before the final major, he had the worst tournament of his career when he shot 18-over par at Firestone.

Which guy will show up? Is he even worth a pick?

Pavin was asked about the pros and cons of taking Woods, and he could think only of the

"He's the No. 1 player in the world — that's a pretty good 'pro," Pavin said. "Obviously, I'm considering him highly, no doubt about it. He's' playing better. I think we have all seen that. And he wants to play he wants to be part of the team. But it's going to be my judgment whether I pick him or not. I don't think there are any Mickelson led the points table for the first time followed by Hunter Mahan, PGA runner-up Bubba Watson, Jim Furyk, Steve Stricker, Dustin Johnson, Jeff Overton and Matt Kuchar.

Four of those players -Watson, Johnson, Overton and Kuchar — have never played a Ryder Cup. Stricker and Mahan played the first time two years ago at Valhalla. Overton, meanwhile, became the first American to qualify for the Ryder Cup without having won on the PGA Tour.

"I believe the eight players that have qualified is really going to allow a lot of flexibility for the four picks," Pavin said. "It's not just going to be about a type of player. There's going to be a lot of room for maneuvering."

Also missing from the list is Anthony Kim, the star of the American victory two years ago. Kim had thumb surgery in May, missed three months and has played poorly in the two tournaments since he returned.

Still, it all centers on Woods. "I'm very encouraged by the way he played last week,' Pavin said. "He did a lot of good things. One of them may not have been driving the ball, but he grinded hard, he chipped the ball beautifully and putted better. His improvement from the Bridgestone to the PGA Championship was large. And I think he was encouraged by it." Pavin is not planning to play in The Barclays, worn out from playing so many big tournaments (Champions Tour and PGA Tour) the last month. Even so, he plans to keep in touch with Woods.

And what Woods says might go a way toward what Pavin

"I have to evaluate how he's playing," Pavin said. "And he has to help me evaluate, just like any other player. If he feels he wants to take himself out of it, then that's fine. If he feels like he wants to play, then it's my decision."

have now. I really wanted to enjoy that moment."

Perhaps there was enough time to think about growing up in Germany, where two-time Masters champion Bernhard Langer was the only golfing hero in a soccer-mad country. Kaymer started kicking a ball around when he was 3, only picking up golf when his father and brother took him to a public driving range when he was 10. He enjoyed the time spent with family, and his natural athleticism made it clear he would be an athlete.

It was only a matter of choosing, and Kaymer appears to have made the right choice.

"Obviously, soccer is bigger in Germany than golf," he said. "But for me, I enjoyed to be out on the golf course early in the morning by myself, nobody disturbing me. That was for me one of the nicest moments.'

Those days of solitude might be behind him.

The victory Sunday was the sixth for Kaymer, who joined the European Tour in 2007. He first got attention by shooting a 59 on a mini-tour in Europe, and earning his card on its Challenge Tour by finishing four on the money list in only eight events.

He won successive weeks in the French Open and Scottish Open last year and has been taking baby steps in the ma-

This was a giant leap. "The majors are the biggest tournaments that you can win in your career," he said. "And just knowing that I can win a tournament like that gives me huge confidence for any other tournament I will play for the rest of my career. This was the toughest field all year."

Even so, he never considered Whistling Straits the place to win his first major. Kaymer was more focused on a strong finish when he started the final round four shots behind Nick Watney. His goal was to do well enough to lock up his spot in the Ryder Cup, which he attended last year as a guest of European captain Nick Faldo.

"I was never really expecting myself to win here on Sunday," Kaymer said. "I know that I had a chance, but majors ... they are a little bit different than normal golf tournaments that we play week to week." Imagine his surprise when he made birdie on the par-5 second, then a brilliant shot with the wind at his back on the 489-yard fourth hole that put him atop the leaderboard when Watney began to crum-"I said to my caddie on the sixth hole, 'It doesn't really matter what happened today, but it's the first time in my career that I'm leading a major championship. It's a pretty cool feeling," Kaymer said. He tried not to look on the back nine, but the pressure was evident over the final few holes. Kaymer kept his cool.

Kaymer was sad to see Johnson eliminated from the playoff with the two-stroke penalty, a bizarre end to a strange year in the majors. No matter what happens, though, his name is on the trophy.

He gazed at some of the names he joins, from Walter Hagen to Ben Hogan, from Jack Nicklaus to Tiger Woods.

"It will take me a while to realize what happened," he

As for becoming German's next golfing star? Kaymer says he still has a ways to go to catch Langer, a two-time Masters champion, Ryder Cup star and winning Ryder Cup captain. Besides, this was just one major. Langer won a Senior British Open and a Senior U.S. Open in consecutive weeks.

"Actually, I have to win the Masters next year then to accomplish that," he said.

After what he did Sunday in the PGA Championship, not many would put that past him.

Pirates come to terms with top two draft picks

By PAUL LADEWSKI

Special to the Salem News

PITTTSBURGH - The Pirates were confident that they would reel in at least two and possibly four more draft picks before the deadline struck midnight on Monday.

Consider it a done

Nearly three hours before the deadline, the organization announced an agreement with St. Edward's (Ohio) High School pitcher Stetson Allie, who was chosen in the second round.

Not long afterward, it came to terms with pitcher Jameson Taillon, the second overall pick in the draft. A team spokesman said any deal would not be made official until after the

"He is a physical right-handed pitcher with a solid combination of intelligence and competitiveness to go along with a power fastball-breaking ball mix and a complimentary change-up. Stetson was one of the best high school pitchers available in the draft, and he has the potential to be a quality major league starting

Indians sign pitcher, catcher from amateur

CLEVELAND(AP) — The Cleveland Indians have signed right-hander Kyle Blair, their fourth-round pick in this year's draft, and local star catcher Alex Lavisky.

Right before the midnight deadline, the Indians reportedly came to terms with their top three picks. In the final minutes, the Indians signed top pick Drew Pomeranz, second pick LeVon Washington and third pick Tony Wolters.

Blair was the 120th overall pick. He was 8-4 with a 2.54 ERA last season at San Diego. The Los Angeles Dodgers took him in the fifth round in 2007, but he decided to go to college.

An eighth-round pick, Lavisky played at Lakewood St. Edward High School, where he helped lead the Eagles to a state title this season with pitcher Stetson Allie, the No. 52 overall pick who signed with Pittsburgh on Monday.

Dr. Laszlo J. Bujdoso

LISBON – Dr. Laszlo J. Bujdoso, 84, of West Chestnut Street, passed died at 8:15 a.m. Monday at his home.

Dr. Bujdoso was born Dec. 14, 1925 in Hungary, a son of the late Pal and Karoline (Egry) Bujdoso, and had lived in Lisbon since 1965.

A surgeon, he served as a Budapest hospital staff surgeon from 1955 to 1957, until the Hungarian revolution. In 1957, he escaped from Hungary and immigrated to the United States, with his wife, his mother, and his two children. Dr. Bujdoso restarted his internship in New Brunswick, New Jersey from 1957 to 1958, and served his surgical residency from 1958 to 1962. Then from 1962 to 1963, he served his fellowship in open-heart surgery in New York, New York, and later served his residency in chest surgery in Metuchen, N.J.

After the birth of their third child, the Bujdoso's moved to Lisbon, where he joined the Bacon and Cibula Clinic.

Locally, he was as a member of the Salem Community Hospital staff, serving for many years on Executive Committees, elected as secretary/treasurer, vice president, and president of the Medical Staff and Ex-officia, and member of the Board of Trustees of the Hospital.

As a surgeon, he founded the vascular and chest surgery operations at the Salem Community Hospital. He retired from office practice in 1991, but continued working as an assistant surgeon until 1999.

He is survived by his wife of 56 years, Magda C. (Miklosi) Bujdoso, whom he married Feb. 27, 1954; his daughter, Katalin (Jon) Wolff of Madison, Wisc.; sons, Laszlo (Lauren) Bujdoso of Dallas/Fort Worth, Texas, and Paul (Christine) Bujdoso of Newark, Ohio; eight grandchildren; several cousins and nephews still living in Hun-

EP man sentenced in rifle thefts

LISBON – An East Palestine man who stole a rifle from a car and had another stolen rifle in his bedroom was sentenced to prison for two years.

Ricardo Gonzalez Jr., 20, of 5393 Bye Road, appeared for sentencing recently in Columbiana County Common Pleas Court before Judge C. Ashley Pike for charges of grand theft, a third-degree felony, and receiving stolen property, a fourth-degree felony.

He received credit for 26 days already served in the county jail.

Court documents said he stole a rifle belonging to David Cooper from a car in East Palestine on Dec. 3 and possessed another rifle on Dec. 4 which had been stolen from a vehicle in New Waterford. The stolen rifle was found in the bedroom of his Bye Road residence.

Also in Common Pleas Court:

Jennifer Campbell, 37, whose last known address was Clark Avenue, Wellsville, was placed on probation for five years for theft, a fifth-degree felony, with credit for six days served in the county jail. She completed paying restitution to the victims in court with $1,329. She had already paid $500 of the $1,829 she had stolen from their checking account. Documents said the theft occurred from Sept. 19, 2008 to April 1, 2009 when she used the routing number from the checking account of George Lawton and Candice Reichle to make online bill payments totaling $1,829 to American Electric, Alltel and

Time for another shake-up to Earnhardt's team

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) With a nondescript 19thplace finish at Michigan International Speedway, Dale Earnhardt Jr. all but ensured he'll miss the Chase for the Sprint Cup championship for the third time in four years.

That wasn't supposed to happen. Not with all the resources Hendrick Motorsports poured into rebuilding Earnhardt's team in an effort to turn NASCAR's most popular driver if not into a champion, then at least a winner again.

Yet Earnhardt and his No. 88 team have fallen short again, and with three races left to set the Chase field, he's 129 points out of the 12th and final qualifying spot.

He was short with reporters following Sunday's race, in which he struggled most of the afternoon and was in no mood to discuss his Chase chances after his fifth consecutive finish outside the top 15.

"I just want to go home," he said. "It wasn't good. We were junk all day. We weren't good. We worked hard."

Nobody questions whether or not Earnhardt works hard. In fact, those around him insist the driver has never put forth a greater effort to turn around his fortunes and fulfill the expectations that come with being the son of one of NASCAR's greatest racers.

All the pieces were supposed to finally be in place when he teamed with Rick Hendrick in 2008, positioning himself with NASCAR's top team because, in his own words at his 2007 hiring announcement, "I think that I'll have a good opportunity to succeed and win a lot of races. Personally, I think I will cherish a championship on my mantle when it's all said and done." Only the reality is that Earnhardt has just one victory in 95 races with HMS. He made the Chase just once, in 2008, when he spent most of the season ranked third in points but finished 12th in the final standings. Last season was the worst of his Cup career, and Hendrick had to fire Earnhardt's longtime crew chief, Tony Eury Jr., in an effort to salvage the season. It didn't really work as Earnhardt notched only five top-10 finishes and a careerworst 25th-place finish in the standings at the same time teammates Jimmie Johnson, Mark Martin and Jeff Gordon led a 1-2-3 sweep of the points.

So Hendrick made an organizational commitment to Earnhardt. He spent the offseason tightly pairing Earnhardt's team with Martin's team and gave new Earnhardt crew chief Lance McGrew key personnel members from Martin's team.

The focus on the No. 88 team has clearly hurt Martin's bunch: A five-race winner and championship contender last season, he's yet to make it to Victory Lane this year and finds himself trailing Clint Bowyer by 35 points for the final Chase berth.

Clearly, Hendrick's efforts haven't worked, for Earnhardt or Martin, as Martin's team has taken a step back and any improvement shown by Earnhardt is certainly not at the expected levels.

So now it's time to try something else.

Hendrick last week solved one of his pressing matters by stashing Kasey Kahne at Red Bull Racing for next season as he waits to replace Martin in the No. 5 car in 2012. Kahne has a crew chief he really likes in Kenny Francis, and Francis has seemed to be the odd man out in the entire Kahne saga.

It appears he can't move over to Red Bull next season with Kahne because manufacturer Toyota seems opposed to allowing a crew chief a oneyear internship with its parts and pieces — the chance to gain insight Francis could later take elsewhere, namely Hendrick Motorsports.

So Hendrick technically has an opportunity to grab Francis now. It obviously wouldn't be with Johnson or Gordon, who both have longtime relationships with crew chiefs who this season signed lengthy contract extensions to stay right where they are.

Instead, Hendrick should put Francis on the No. 5 car immediately, and let him work next season with Martin in preparation for Kahne's 2012 arrival. That of course pushes out Alan Gustafson, one of the most loyal employees Hendrick has ever had. But Gustafson wouldn't have to go far. It just might be that Gustafson could be the answer to all of Earnhardt's

Hendrick earlier this year described Gustafson as the ultimate company man, the employee he never had to worry about turning down a task that the boss believed would benefit the company.

"If there's ever a soldier that you have to take into battle with you, it's Alan Gustafson," Hendrick told The Associated

Well, there's no bigger battle right now than fixing Earnhardt's team.

HMS officials said there's been zero discussion of moving Gustafson to Earnhardt's crew, but that's doesn't mean the talks shouldn't happen.

Earnhardt is heading into the fourth year of a five-year contract with HMS, and for whatever reason, Hendrick has been unable to give him the chemistry and confidence he had during a 15-win stretch from 2000 to 2004.

Earnhardt has remained supportive of McGrew, who graciously stepped into the hardest crew chief job in the garage and has helped the driver show flashes while operating under an intense spotlight. But for whatever reason, it's simply not clicking consistently, and it may be time for someone else to get the chance.

This might be the one time, though, that Gustafson balks at a potential Hendrick reassignment. He's built the No. 5 car to its current level, weathering a tumultuous period with Kyle Busch, a noncompetitive stretch with Casey Mears, and, finally, the pairing with Martin and a shot at last year's championship.

Gustafson has earned the right to decline another rebuilding project, but is more prone to do anything the boss asks of him.

At this stage, it might be a request Hendrick can't afford not to make.

FROM 1B

Beginning with his first throw, a 17-yard completion to tight end Evan Moore, Delhomme was efficient, decisive and polished. With Delhomme in charge, Cleveland's offense, ranked dead last statistically in the NFL last season, clicked like it rarely has in recent years. It was an opening act to behold.

"It was great to see our offense march right down the field," said kicker Phil Dawson, who made a 58-yard field goal and a 46-yarder in the final 1:27. "I can't remember the last time I was kicking extra points like that. It was efficient, everyone knew what to do. There were no penalties. To execute like that was refreshing and hopefully we can keep it going."

That's what Seneca Wallace did. Replacing Delhomme following a turnover after Cleveland took a 7-0 lead, Wallace threw a TD pass to wide receiver Brian Robiskie and tossed another to tight end Benjamin Watson in the second quarter to help the Browns take a 21-14 halftime lead.

A year ago, the competition between Quinn and Anderson for the starting job dominated Mangini's first camp with Cleveland and carried into the regular season. There's no such drama this summer, and that in itself is reason to believe the Browns are going to be better in 2010. It's early, but Mangini is comforted by the newfound stability at quarterback.

"It has been great," he said. "You can see that both of those guys go in, and it's a little different package for each player, but they're both efficient with the operation. Seneca makes some plays with his feet that cause problems. The throws were on time and guys had a chance for every ball. It was great to watch."

Mangini also praised Delhomme and Wallace for staying into the game even when they were out of it.

"Jake comes out and he was as involved when he was on that first drive, he was that involved in the fourth quarter and the third quarter when he was helping out Colt (McCoy) and Ratty (Brett Ratliff) and Seneca was right there," he said. "They wanted to help those guys out and they're teaching while they're not playing and that's a great thing.'

Notes: Rookie QB McCoy missed practice with a minor thumb injury sustained against the Packers. Mangini said McCoy, who threw two interceptions in his pro debut, will miss a "day or two" but he expects the former Texas star to play in Saturday's home exhibition against St. Louis.

There was one change during practice — first-round draft pick Maurkice Pouncey ran with the starters at center. The Steelers drafted him as a center, but planned to use him at right guard initially because it can be difficult for a rookie to deliver all the line blocking

He died Sunday in Albuquerque, N.M., the team said Monday. Less than two months ago, he attended a reunion of the 1960 Pirates.

"As the architect behind the 1960 and 1971 World Series teams, we were honored that Joe was able to return to Pittsburgh in June to help us celebrate the 50th anniversary of the 1960 team," team president Frank Coonelly said in a statement. "The ovation he received prior to the game was a special moment for Joe and his family."

Brown, the son of famed comedian Joe E. Brown, succeeded Branch Rickey as the Pirates' general manager following a last-place season in 1955. He stayed on the job through 1976, a span in which the Pirates won the 1960 and 1971 World Series and five NL East titles after division play began in

Brown traded for 1960 Pirates standouts Don Hoak, Smoky Burgess, Bill Virdon, Harvey Haddix, Dick Schofield and Vinegar Bend Mizell — deals that helped reshape what was the majors' worst club during much of the 1950s

His best move might have been bringing in Danny Murtaugh, who managed the 1960 and 1971 World Series teams despite retiring briefly during the 1960s. Murtaugh is the only manager in Pirates history to oversee two

Brown also promoted to the majors Hall of Famers Willie Stargell and Bill Mazeroski as well as Al Oliver, Dave Parker, Steve Blass, Richie Hebner and Manny Sanguillen. By constantly identifying, drafting and signing strong prospects, the Pirates were a contender for much of the 1960s and all of the 1970s before Brown retired. The 1960 team upset the heavily favored New York Yankees in one of the most unpredictable World Series, overcoming losses of 16-3, 12-0 and 10-0 to win Game 7 on a ninth-inning home run by Mazeroski — one of the most storied games in major league history.

Despite his success, Brown wasn't popular among some players. He also negotiated contracts during the time before free agency, when salaries weren't high and even a modest drop in production could mean a pay cut. Still, the players recognized his organizational skills and his passion for maintaining a strong farm system.

Brown's talent gathering was greatly aided by the Pirates' Caribbean scout. Howie Haak, one of the most successful scouts in baseball history.

Brown returned as general manager early in the 1985 season amid a clubhouse cocaine scandal and began overhauling a 104-loss team before Syd Thrift was hired full time later that year.

For the reunion trip to Pittsburgh, Brown was in a wheelchair. Former players said he was talkative and enthusiastic. He spent much of his time talking to Vera Clemente, the wife of the late Hall of Famer.

Brown resided in Newport Beach, Calif., but had been staying recently in an assisted living center in Albuquerque near his daughter's home. He would have been 92 on Sept. 1.

After retiring, Brown served as the longtime chairman of the Baseball Hall of Fame Veterans Committee. The committee was restructured after Mazeroski was chosen in 2001.

Why won't state pension plans share numbers?

hio taxpayers reportedly pay about $4 billion a year to subsidize the state's public employee pension programs. We'd say Ohioans have a right — bought and paid for — to details about the programs.

Pension officials don't agree. They are refusing to comply with a request to provide detailed information about benefits and contributions involving the programs' 400,000 clients.

The request was made by a group of eight major Ohio newspapers. In July, they asked for records on all of the 400,000 people receiving benefits from the five pension programs. The newspapers wanted detailed reports on salaries, pension benefits, contributions to the programs, ages and years of service of those receiving benefits.

Officials of all five programs refused to provide the records. The State Teachers Retirement System maintained it refused the request "to the extent it sought personal information of individual members," according to The Columbus Dispatch.

But no personal information was sought. The newspapers specified they wanted only the numbers. Names, addresses and any other information that might identify individual pension recipients was to be deleted, according to the request.

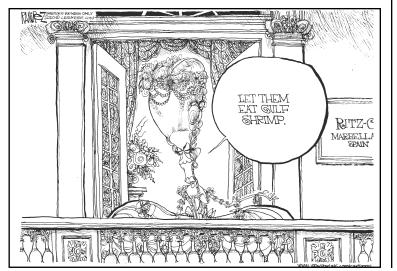

No private information about any individual pension recipient was requested. Again, to the contrary, the newspapers specified such references should be deleted from documents they requested.

Yet all five pension programs are withholding the information sought by the newspapers to provide an analysis of trends and problems with the pension funds.

Why is it that state officials don't want the newspapers — and thus, the public — to have the information? Is there something they would prefer not come to the attention of taxpayers who subsidize the pension

Some state legislators don't think it is proper for the pension agencies to withhold information. They are considering legislation that would require release of information such as that sought by the newspapers.

We hope it doesn't require an act of the General Assembly to pry the documents loose from pension officials. But if the agencies refuse to bow to public opinion on the matter, lawmakers should force them to do

Genuine humor needed now

We are told hourly that our national mood grows even sourer. Referring to the meltdown of the flight attendant who, after allegedly enduring abuse from belligerent passengers, lost his temper and exited the aircraft by the emergency chute, Democratic pollster Peter D. Hart quipped: "I think it's a 'Jet-Blue' election. Everyone is frustrated, and everyone is headed for the emergency exit."

In dark times, the nation needs to be able to have a good laugh. No recent American leader understood that better than former President Ronald Reagan. In 1987, when confidence in the president's judgment, following the secret sending of arms to Iran, was slipping and the animosity between White House chief of staff Donald Regan and first lady Nancy Reagan was an open secret and there was press speculation about whether the 76-year-old president still had the required energy and stamina to handle the demands of the office, Mr. Reagan had this to say to the Gridiron dinner: "1986 was the year of hostile takeover attempts, inside maneuverings, highstakes intrigue – and that was just at the White

He continued: "Nancy and Don Regan at one point tried to patch things up. They met privately over lunch, just the two of them and their food tasters." Then, to critics of his less than dawn-todusk work schedule, Reagan had this to say: "It's true hard work never killed anybody, but I figure, why take the chance?" Humor, most especially self-deprecatory humor, where a political leader publicly kids his own perceived weaknesses and errors, sends an emphatically positive message about that leader's emotional security. The politician who can laugh easily at himself tells his audience and the nation that "I'm really not that pompous or self-important. Even though I'm up here - in this office - on this elevated platform, I don't consider myself any better than any of you sitting out there."

And no, it is not just a matter of hiring better joke writers. As someone who earlier worked writing humor for many politicians from both parties, I can testify that only a special handful are both comfortable and convincing poking fun at themselves. There was no gag writer present when Reagan, as a candidate, was asked by a political reporter to autograph a poster photo of him and his chimp co-star in "Bedtime for Bonzo." Reagan wrote, "I'm the one with the watch."

During the 1980 campaign, after Reagan incorrectly insisted that trees cause more pollution than automobiles, he arrived for a speech on a California college campus, where some wiseguy grad student had hung a sign on a tree: "Cut me down before I kill again." To his credit, Reagan laughed heartily at the needle.

Once a political leader voluntarily lampoons his own liabilities, it becomes more difficult for adversaries or the press to continue to harp on them without sounding like scolds. John F. Kennedy was secure enough to answer a young child's question on how JFK had become a naval hero in World War II this way: "It was involuntary. They sank my boat." And facing charges that he was too young and too influenced by his willful millionaire father, candidate Kennedy told a Washington dinner: "I have just received the following telegram from my generous daddy. It says, 'Dear Jack: Don't buy a single vote more than is necessary. I'll be damned if I'm going to pay for a landslide."

In the late summer of 2010, Americans desperately need leaders who can help us laugh again. Leaders like Reagan and JFK and the late beloved Arizona Rep. Morris K. "Mo" Udall, who joked after he lost 14 presidential primaries in 1976 to Jimmy Carter, just 12 years after Sen. Barry Goldwater had been trounced by Lyndon Johnson, that "Arizona is the only state where mothers don't tell their children they can grow up to be president." It would be a welcome antidote to the bitter, ill-tempered sourness now afflicting our body politic.

How Obama is locking up our land, federal and private

MICHELLE MALKIN

Have you heard of the "Great Outdoors Initiative"? Chances are, you haven't. But across the country, White House officials have been meeting quietly with environmental groups to map out government plans for acquiring untold millions of acres of both public and private land. It's another stealthy power grab through executive order that promises to radically transform the American way of life.

In April, President Obama issued a memorandum outlining his "21st century strategy for America's great outdoors." It was addressed to the Interior Secretary, the Agriculture Secretary, the head of the Environmental Protection Agency and the chair of the Council on Environmental Quality. The memo calls on the officials to conduct "listening and learning sessions" with the public to "identify the places that mean the most to Americans, and leverage the support of the Federal Government" to "protect" outdoor spaces. Eighteen of 25 planned sessions have already been held. But there's much more to the agenda than simply "reconnecting Americans to nature."

The federal government, as the memo boasted, is the nation's "largest land manager." It already owns roughly one of every three acres in the United States. This is apparently not enough. At a "listening session" in New Hampshire last week, government bureaucrats trained their sights on millions of private forest land throughout the New England region. Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack crusaded for "the need for additional attention to the Land and Water Conservation Fund - and the need to promptly support full funding of that fund."

Property owners have every reason to be worried. The Land and Water Conservation Fund (LWCF) is a pet project of green radicals, who want the decades-old government slush fund for buying up private lands to be freed from congressional appropriations oversight. It's paid for primarily with receipts from the government's offshore oil and gas leases. Both Senate and House Democrats have included $900 million in full LWCF funding, not subject to congressional approval, in their energy/BP oil spill legislative packages. The Democrats have also included a provision in these packages that would require the federal government to take over energy permitting in state waters, which provoked an outcry from Texas state officials, who sent a letter of protest to

Capitol Hill last month:

"In light of federal failures, it is incomprehensible that the United States Congress is entertaining proposals that expand federal authority over oil and gas drilling in state water and lands long regulated by states... Given the track record, putting the federal government in charge of energy production on state land and waters not only breaks years of successful precedent and threatens the 10th Amendment to the United Sates Constitution, but it also undermines common sense and threatens the environmental and economy security of our state's citizens.'

This power grab, masquerading as a feel-good, all-American recreation program, comes on top of a separate, property-usurping initiative exposed by GOP Rep. Robert Bishop and Sen. Jim DeMint earlier this spring. According to an internal, 21-page Obama administration memo, 17 energy-rich areas in 11 states have been targeted as potential federal "monuments." The lives of coyotes, deer and prairie dogs would be elevated above states' needs to generate jobs, tourism business and energy solutions. Take my home state of Colorado. The Obama administration is considering locking up some 380,000 acres of Bureau of Land Management land and private land in Colorado under the 1906 Antiquities Act. The Vermillion Basin and the Alpine Triangle would be shut off to mining, hunting, grazing, oil and gas development and recreational activities. Alan Foutz, president of the Colorado Farm Bureau, blasted the administration's meddling: "Deer and elk populations are thriving, and we in Colorado don't need help from the federal government in order to manage them effectively."

Indeed, the feds have enough trouble as it is managing the vast amount of land they already control. As the Washington, D.C.-based Americans for Limited Government group, which defends private property rights, points out: "The (National Park Service) claims it would need about $9.5 billion just to clear its backlog of the necessary improvements and repairs. At a time when our existing national parks are suffering, it doesn't make sense for the federal government to grab new lands."

The bureaucrats behind Obama's "Great Outdoors Initiative" plan on wrapping up their public comment solicitation by November 15. The initiative's taxpayer-funded website (http://ideas.usda.gov/ago/ideas.nsf/) has been dominated by left-wing environmental activists proposing human population reduction, private property confiscation, and gun bans, hunting bans and vehicle bans in national parks. It's time for private property owners to send their own loud, clear message to the land-hungry feds: Take a hike.

staff adapted. For the last four games of the season, it used Pryor mostly as a guy who handed off to the backs and threw the ball only when absolutely necessary.

After Ohio State managed just 66 yards on the ground in a stunning loss at Purdue, the line — widely criticized for the loss — took over. Over the final six games, the Buckeyes averaged more than 240 yards rushing per game.

"It really started after the tragedy at Purdue," Shugarts said. "We really came together because we had to bring the communication back and bring the team back together because at that point in the season we could have crumbled. But we came together, and we knew we had to, because it was do or die." Now those hogs up front feel they're ready to maintain that ground superiority.

'A year ago we definitely weren't this far ahead," Brewster said. "You always want to take steps and we've taken those steps with everybody learning the offense. We were young last year." So far in fall camp, the line has been a bright spot. Safety Jermale Hines said that usually the defense dominates during the early workouts. But that hasn't been the case in the first few days. "Those guys have grown up and do a good job in the weight room and the film room," Hines said, shaking his head. "They know what they're doing now. So it's an even battle up there."

The backs have also noticed the efficiency in front of them.

'They (the linemen) are doing well right now — with the run and also the pass," Herron said. "They're protecting Terrelle pretty good too." For a change, the guys up front are basking in the praise and confident that they can add to their resume from a year "With the offensive line we have we don't care if we are going to run or pass," Boren said. "It all starts up front and last year we definitely built some confidence. As a unit we're real close."

Port Authority OKs site cleanup study contract

By TOM GIAMBRONI

Staff Writer

EAST LIVERPOOL - The next step in a plan to clean up abandoned industrial sites so they can be redeveloped was undertaken at Monday's meeting of the Columbiana County Port Authority.

The board agreed to contract with the environmental consulting firm of Tetra Tech NUS to compile a list of possible sites to be be targeted with $200,000 in federal cleanup money received in April.

"We've always said it makes more sense to pick a spot that was previously industrialized, clean it up and put it back into use," said port authority CEO Tracy Drake.

The grant from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency can be used only to assess industrial sites contaminated by petroleum products. The port authority had been seeking a companion $200,000 grant to assess any industrial site, regardless of the type of contamination, but the application was denied.

Lawrence Drane III, a senior project manager for Tetra, was at the meeting, and he said the first step is to meet with community leaders as quickly as possible to compile a list of possible contaminated industrial sites, or brownfields. Drake said particular emphasis will be given to those where there is already genuine interest from companies interested in redeveloping the site.

Drane said his company will review these sites based on available information and rank them in order of priority. Once this list is compiled, the next step is to conduct tests to determine the extent of petroleum contamination of the soil and/or groundwater at the particular site and the cost of remediating the contamination. The port authority intends to seek federal grant money in 2011 that can be used specifically for the cleanup.

The number of contamination assessments performed will depend on how many sites are selected by the port authority, Drane said. Tetra will be paid up to $192,800 from the grant, which is for two years.

Although Drake didn't get into specifics Monday about possible sites, he said in April there were a number of possible brownfield sites in the county that could benefit from petroleum contamination assessments such as the former dealership/truck stop in East Liverpool's East End, the former Sterling China Co. in Wellsville and the former Century truck stop in Columbiana could be redeveloped.

The port authority has already done this before with the former National property Refractories outside Columbiana. A federal brownfield grant was obtained several years ago to clean up the site, enabling an aluminum extrusion company to expand onto the property, creating 80 jobs.

Homebuilder confidence sinks

WASHINGTON (AP) - Homebuilder confidence dropped for the third straight month in August as the struggling economy and a flood of cheap foreclosed properties kept people from buying new homes.

The National Association of Home Builders said its monthly index of builders' sentiment about the housing market fell to 13, the lowest reading since March 2009. The index is adjusted for seasonal factors.

Readings below 50 indicate negative sentiment about the market. The last time the index was above 50 was in April 2006.

Stocks eke out gain despite malaise

NEW YORK (AP) - Stocks managed to break a four-day losing streak Monday by the slimmest of margins. Investors had no change of heart about the economy, however, and again poured money into the safety of U.S. Treasurys.

The Dow Jones industrial average fluctuated along with the other big market indexes throughout the day. The Dow closed down just over a point at 10,302.01, but the other indexes had slight gains. There were more winners than losers on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts said Monday's short buying spurt was a pause following four days of losses that sent the Dow down almost 400 points.

China reduces holdings of US debt

WASHINGTON (AP) - China reduced its holdings of U.S. Treasury debt for a second straight month in June while the holdings of Japan and Britain rose.

China's holdings fell by $24 billion to $843.7 billion, a decline of 2.7 percent, the Treasury Department said Monday in a monthly report on debt holdings.

Total foreign holdings of Treasury securities rose $45.6 billion to a total of $4 trillion, an increase of 1.2 percent.

The debt figures are being closely watched at a time when the U.S. government is running up record annual deficits. A drop in foreign demand would lead to higher interest rates in the United States. The yield on Treasuries rises when fewer people invest in them.

Fed survey finds easier lending

WASHINGTON (AP) - Banks have eased lending standards for small businesses for the first time in nearly four years, the Federal Reserve said Monday.

In its new survey of bank lending practices, the Fed found that the loosening of loan standards was occurring primarily at the country's largest domestic banks.

Banks had been reporting relaxed credit standards for big corporations. But the new survey marked the first indication that credit was beginning to ease for smaller companies.

Lowe's 2Q profit rises 10 %

NEW YORK (AP) – People bought more air conditioners and grills at Lowe's Cos. in early summer, boosting second-quarter net income 10 percent, but overall spending was hurt by hot weather and the weak economy, the home-improvement retailer said Monday.

The No. 2 home improvement retailer joined a long line of companies in sounding a cautious note about consumer spending and cut its yearly revenue guidance as worries grow about a stalling economy.

Dell to buy storage provider

SEATTLE (AP) - Dell Inc.'s purchase of a storage provider for $1.13 billion marks another step in the personal computer industry's quest to expand into more profitable businesses.

As PC prices have plummeted in recent years, computer manufacturers such as Dell and Hewlett-Packard Co. are moving to meet emerging demand for technology services - hoping they'll find better profit margins there.

With the acquisition of 3Par Inc., which makes enterprise data storage equipment, Dell is boosting its ability to help companies manage information technology in new ways, through services generally referred to as "cloud computing."

Barclays to pay $298M in sanctions

WASHINGTON (AP) – Barclays Bank PLC has agreed to pay $298 million over criminal allegations that it illegally engaged in financial transactions with banks in Cuba, Iran, Libya, Sudan and Burma, the Justice Department disclosed in court papers Monday.

The countries are all under economic and trade sanctions by the U.S. government.

FDA moves to withdraw BP drug

WASHINGTON (AP) - Federal health regulators are pushing to withdraw a blood pressure drug that has been on the market for 14 years in spite of the manufacturer's failure to submit evidence that it actually helps patients.

The Food and Drug Administration approved Shire Laboratories' drug ProAmatine in 1996 based on promising early results in treating low blood pressure. But the company has never conducted a mandatory follow-up study to actually prove the long-term benefits of the drug.

MARKET SUMMARY

China surges past Japan as No. 2 economy; US next?

BEIJING (AP) - China has eclipsed Japan as the world's secondbiggest economy after three decades of blistering growth that put overtaking the U.S. in reach within 10 years.

Japan is still far richer per person after confirming Monday that economic output fell behind its giant neighbor for the three months ending June 30. However, the news is more proof of China's arrival as a force that is altering the global balance of commercial, political and military power.

Analysts are already looking ahead to when China might match the United States in total output - which the World Bank and others say could be no more than a decade away.

"This means the world will pay more attention to China, especially when most Western countries are mired in the bog of debt problems," said economist Lu Zhengwei at Industrial Bank in Shanghai.

Unseating Japan – after earlier passing Germany, France and Britain - caps three decades of breakneck growth that has cemented a dramatic change in China's place in the world over just the past five years.

State-owned Chinese companies have emerged as major resource investors, pouring billions of dollars into mines and oil fields from Latin America to Iraq. Chinese pressure helped to win a bigger voice for developing economies in the World Bank and other global institutions.

On a human level, China's rise has allowed hundreds of millions of people to work their way out of poverty and sent a flood of students and tourists to the West. Its consumers are so avidly courted that companies from Detroit automakers to French handbag producers now design goods

Still, China's rise has produced glaring contradictions. The wealth gap between an elite who profited most from three decades of reform and its poor majority is so extreme that China has dozens of billionaires, while average income for the rest of its 1.3 billion people is among the world's low-

By contrast, Japan's people still are among the world's richest, with a per capita income of $37,800 last year, compared with China's $3,600. So are Americans at $42,240, their economy still by far the world's biggest.

According to Monday's report, Japan's nominal GDP was worth $1.286 trillion in the April-to-June quarter compared with $1.335 trillion for China. The figures are converted into dollars based on an average exchange rate for the quarter.

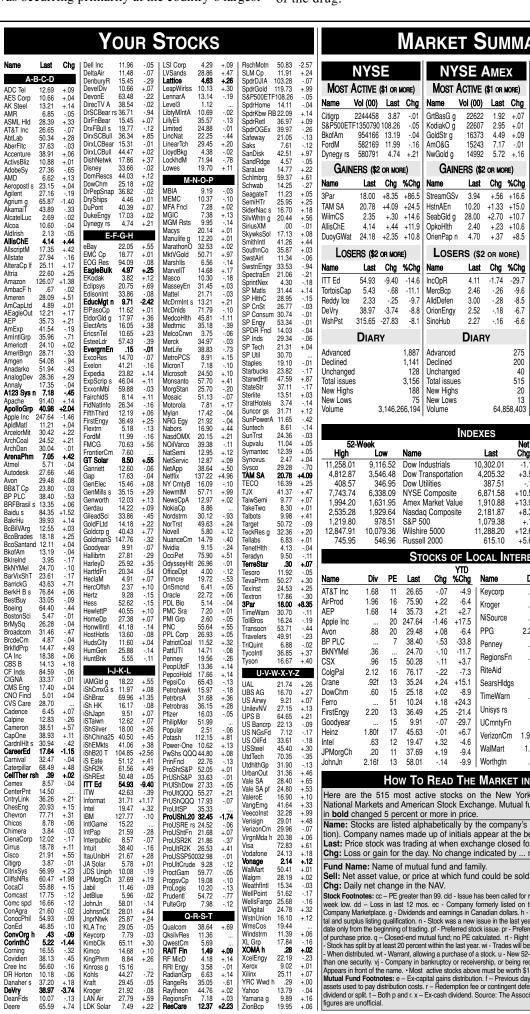

World stock markets mostly fell on the news that Japan's economy grew just 0.1 percent in the second quarter, far short of expectations and well below the 1.2 percent growth in the first quarter. The report follows signs last week that both the U.S. and Chinese economies are not growing as fast as earlier in the year.

In the midst of the global crisis, stimulus-driven Chinese growth that hit 11.9 percent in the first quarter this year before easing in the latest quarter helped to propel the world out of recession. Chinese demand for raw materials and other imports buoyed economies from Australia to South Korea

China uses more than half the world's iron ore and more than 40 percent of its steel, aluminum and coal. It passed the United States last year as the biggest auto market and Germany as the biggest exporter.

'We are at the point now where China is overtaking the U.S. to be the engine of growth in consumption," said Amar Gill, a researcher for brokerage CLSA Asia-Pacific Markets.

HOROSCOPE

BY HOLIDAY MATHIS TUESDAY, AUG. 17

The sun and the moon are both in fire signs, and the excitement is palpable. People are prone to riskier behavior under the Sagittarius moon, except they don't usually see it that way. The high dives of life just don't seem as scary during the adventurous Sagittarius lunar transit, and so more people are prone to jump off without resistance.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Due to the unique circumstances of your recent years, you have information to impart. You're a teacher, and the world is your classroom, filled with students — some willing, some difficult. You'll make an impression on all.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You could talk yourself into someone's approval or affection. The trick is in knowing when you've arrived. Then stop talking. Consider this rule of thumb: Don't sell it when it's already sold.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Your plan will take time to execute, and it will take even more time if you don't have the money to do it right. A fundraising effort will be necessary. And you have luck with this now.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). There will be lulls in the conversation. Don't feel that it's up to you to fill them. Breathe through them instead, and keep that lovely twinkle in your eye. The less you say the more intriguing you are.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You will be flattered. Whether this brings about a positive response from you will depend solely on the source. Hints of love will be welcome, as long they come from one whose love is welcome.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Once again, your attention to the details will serve you well. The difference in your approach and performance will be small, but the overall impression you make will be greatly enhanced by these minor adjustments.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You must be very assertive in order to get what you want. This will be especially true when you are dealing with institutions such as government departments, banks or schools.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Anyone who makes you feel funny about asking questions is up to no good. Do business with people who want you to understand how things work and to be satisfied with what you know.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Stick to the facts. Try to speak as succinctly as you can. Saying too much will make it seem like you're showing off. Refrain from elaboration when you get the feeling that it's unnecessary.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You put all the time and attention you have into a project. But when it's time for the unveiling, you may doubt yourself. Did you do enough? Will it go over as hoped? Be confident, and you'll be well received.

you'll be well received.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20Feb. 18). It feels like you've made more than your share of mistakes. If this is really true, you should be patting yourself on the back. It means you try harder and stretch yourself further than the average person.

PISCES (Feb. 19March 20). Someone's loud voice will interrupt your serene bubble of space. This person needs attention, but not from you. Do not get sucked in. Put your headphones on and source past.

and scurry past.
TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (August 17). Lead the way with your talent. You'll get a major career-related deal in October and possibly be vested with stock options. A sweet love connection has an impact on your life in the new year. You present a confident front in November, and doors swing open for you. You'll make stellar choices in business. Pisces and Virgo people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 40, 1, 23, 29 and 32,

Good medical manners

Heloise

Dear Heloise: I am writing in response to your admonition that it is important to be FRIENDLY AND COURTEOUS with customers, clients and friends. You have specifically mentioned bad experiences with nurses, techs and office staff being rude or standoffish to patients. (Heloise here: My comment was that many readers have expressed this opinion, not me.)

As a licensed medical professional, I am in total agreement with your recommendations, although there are two sides to this coin. If you are having patient care services, please be on time and have your doctor's orders, insurance card and authorization.

If we are running behind and you have to wait, it may be because others have arrived late, without an order or insurance card or authorization, and are demanding to be seen. We have to call the doctor or insurance carrier, which delays service for all.

Please do not take it out on those providing your service; take your complaints to a manager or supervisor. Sometimes things "come up" in the course of providing service. We strive to give each patient the time needed and schedule accordingly, but every person is unique.

We know you may be frightened, in pain and generally stressed out. We are trained to deal with these things, but you needn't take this out on us either. I am willing to bet that most of us understand that we are there to help you and realize our service to you pays our wages. Remember that kindness usually begets kindness. — Susan Upson, via email

Susan, how right you are! I have talked with physicians and office staff across the country for many, many years. Almost everyone tries to do a good job for the patient and does not intentionally mean to be rude, short-tempered or unpleasant. As one doctor said to me, "We are not a carwash, and cannot just run patients in and out in a set scheduled time."

Other patients may be late, and some wait until the physician is just about to walk out of the room to ask about another aliment or the "embarrassing question." Also, emergencies happen and must be taken care of then. Would you want your doctor to say: "Oh, sorry, out of time, I must move on to the next patient. Come back later or make another appointment?" And, if it's you or a family member with the emergency, I'm sure you would be understanding.

Thank you for you insightful letter. - Heloise

Current fashions offer little decent for women

DEAR ABBY: I am writing about the letter from "Can't Believe My Eyes" (June 20), who is bothered by the amount of cleavage women display everywhere. I have heard many negative comments in the workplace regarding women's tasteless attire. But most of the remarks I hear come from other women in stores while we try to shop for clothes. They are shocked at how little there is to buy that is "decent" to wear. They, as well as I, are tired of having to buy tank tops to wear under shirts or dresses that are cut too low or are too short. I have three daughters who dress for professional jobs. They, too, express similar frustration at finding clothing that is appropriate to wear. I am sure some women like plunging, skintight clothing, but from what I hear the majority do not. Store clerks get complaints and have passed them on to the buyers. - FRUSTRATED SHOP-PER IN WEST VIRGINIA

DEAR FRUSTRATED: I empathize with your frustration. The feedback from readers on this subject has been abundant, and many agree with you:

DEAR ABBY: As the mother of a well-endowed 13-year-old daughter, I agree with "Can't Believe My Eyes." I hate shopping for clothes with my daughter. It's not because she is difficult, but because the styles are so revealing. My daughter wants to dress trendy while I want her to stay covered up. I have the same problem when I shop for myself. We use tank tops and hidden safety pins to keep "the girls" under wraps. The problem is not lack of modesty of the wearer, but the clothing designers and manufacturers. — OKLAHOMA READER

DEAR ABBY: Hooray for "Can't Believe's" comments on cleavage at businesses and schools, but I'm more disturbed by the number of women — young and not so young — who show way too much in church. I'm a guy who appreciates God's handiwork, but please, ladies, don't showcase it in the pews. — DISTRACTED IN ROME, N.Y.

DEAR ABBY: Why do people feel the need to dictate the standards of appearance for everyone else? If it doesn't harm you, it's none of your business. If you don't like the employees where you shop, go somewhere else. I'm a 54-year-old guy who looks and dresses conservatively. My dentist has spiky hair with purple streaks and looks young enough to be in high school. My mechanic has a hole in his earlobe you could shove a quarter through. My electrician has tattoos on his face. But they all do great work, and I wouldn't trade 'em. Why force everyone into one narrow description of what's "acceptable"? I'm for ability over appearance. —

OPEN-MINDED IN PHOENIX DEAR ABBY: I've been in banking for 30 years and have seen many changes, especially after casual dress days started. Many younger women in the office didn't understand what that meant. Memos went out, but nothing changed until a female division manager was brought in to address the problem. I'll never forget what she said: "Look at yourself in the mirror before you leave for work and ask yourself if you look like you're going to 'get lucky.' If the answer is yes, then you need to change your clothes."

Abby, we never had a dress code problem again. -

Atrial fibrillation treatments many

Dr. Donohue

DEAR DR.
DONOHUE: Will you answer some questions on atrial fibrillation? I have been electrically cardioverted twice. Is there a procedure, a medicine or a device that ensures my heart stays in normal rhythm? I know other people who have atri-al fibrillation and have the same questions.

ANSWER: Atrial fibrillation is one of the most common heartbeat disturbances. It's a very fast and very irregular heartbeat. High blood pressure, plugged heart arteries, deformed heart valves, excessive alcohol use and an overactive thyroid gland are some of its causes

Atrial fibrillation presents two problems.
One is the rapid heartbeat, which exhausts the heart and the patient. The second is the irregular beat. One of its dangers is stagnation of blood in the atria, the upper heart chambers. Stagnant blood clots. Pieces of those clots can be swept in the circulation to brain arteries, where they obstruct those arteries and cause a stroke. This is the reason people with atrial fibrillation take blood-thinning medicines. A fibrillating heart cuts down on the heart's pumping ability, and that can produce fatigue.

A brief electric shock sometimes can establish a normal heartbeat. The chances for a permanent reversion to a normal heartbeat are best when fibrillation has been present for less than 48 hours.

Medicines can bring the beat back to normal. Two such medicines, and there are many others, are flecainide and amiodarone. If they don't work, some patients have to settle for drugs that yield a slow but irregular beat. Tenormin and digoxin are two examples. A person often can do quite well with a slowly but irregularly beating heart.

Ablation is a technique in which a doctor introduces a catheter into the heart from a surface blood vessel. The catheter is specially equipped to deliver radio waves to the heart. The waves inactivate the sites in the heart that are responsible for generating the abnormal rhythm. It's a very involved process requiring a highly specialized heart doctor.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I read in one of your columns about how a surgeon handling the intestines during an operation can cause adhesions to form. I have an inguinal hernia for several years and repeatedly push the protrusion back into place. What damage can result from this? Three of my doctors told me that many people do not have hernia surgery. I have had no success with different hernia belts. — S.A.

ANSWER: What you do and what a surgeon does are two different things. Surgeons have to push organs and intestines to one side to get to the place where they must operate. That can lead to adhesion (scar tissue) formation. You are pushing the abdominal covering (the hernia) back into the abdominal cavity. That doesn't produce adhesions.

Surgery is the only way to correct a hernia. If the hernia isn't large, isn't painful and can be pushed back into the abdomen without trouble, then immediate surgery isn't necessary. Many people go through life without surgical correction. The belt you used is called a truss. It works for some, but not for all

Not looking forward to second marriage

Annie's Mailbox Dear Annie: Today we received a wedding invitation that we were not looking forward to. You see, my husband's brother is getting married, and we don't ing an affair with his bride-to-be and left his family in chaos. He has made no effort to see his daughter. His only interest is that his exwife sells the house so he can get his half of the money.

We have not forsaken our sister-in-law and niece. We helped them as much as possible so they could get back on their feet and heal from this startling event and the subsequent divorce. They have moved to another area and are starting over. We love them and want to remain a part of their lives.

to remain a part of their lives.

We don't see the brother much, probably twice in the past year. The divorce was finalized a few days ago, and the wedding is in three weeks. Do we go and say nothing? Do we congratulate him, even though we feel he has done a horrible thing to his first wife and daughter?

We do love this brother and want to stay close, but we don't like being put in such an awkward position. How do we respond in order to maintain family relations and still live with our conscience? — Upset in Ohio

Dear Ohio: If you want to maintain a relationship with your brother-in-law, you must attend his wedding and be nice to his new bride. She will have some control over which relatives he stays in touch with. But we suggest you keep your congratulations subdued and leave as early as it is polite to do so.

SCH schedules Women's Health Event

SALEM – As Salem Community Hospital marks the 20th Anniversary of its annual Women's Health Event, it will present a keynote speaker with an inspiring message of perseverance that will resonate with guests from all backgrounds. Featured speaker Jackie Pflug will share her unbelievable story of survival on Sept. 23 at Avion on the Water Banquet Center, 2177 W. Western Reserve Road, Canfield. Doors open at 5:15 p.m. for registration, followed by dinner at 6 p.m. Pflug will share her experiences as a survivor of the 1985 hijacking of EgyptAir, where she sustained a gunshot wound to the head which left her partially blind. Her extraordinary skills for coping with physical and emotional trauma have inspired thousands. In her presentation, "The Courage to Succeed," she shares an amazing message of hope that motivates people to do their best, while infusing them with a renewed sense

Listeners will gain insight to help confront obstacles that challenge their perseverance, resilience and commitment to reaching their goals.

Tickets for the event are $25 and include the speaker's presentation, dinner, dessert and the Women's Wellness Information Booths which feature services available at Salem Community Hospital.

Tickets must be purchased in advance and will be sold only in the SCH public relations department. They can be purchased by phone by calling 330-332-7227, or in person, Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. At the time of purchase, guests will have the opportunity to reserve seating. The meal will be served buffet-style and consists of Chicken Blush (chicken with roasted peppers, artichokes and sun dried tomatoes in a light wine sauce); parsley buttered redskins; a vegetable and rolls. Requests for the vegetarian entree must be made at the time of ticket purchase. For more information call 330-332-7227.
