Finance committee approves city budget

By LARRY SHIELDS

Staff Writer

The finance committee approved the 2011 city budget and Mayor Jerry Wolford recommended staying with the Morris Financial Group and the Anthem health insurance package for another year on Thursday.

Auditor Jim Armeni presented the budget fund-by-fund noting estimate expenses were set at $4.5 million on revenues that would leave a negative balance of about $29,000.

Chairman Bret Apple said, "At least on paper it's cutting in the right direction."

The budget has to be submitted to the Columbiana County budget commission by Aug. 1.

Along with approving the budget, the committee voted to place the $147,000 aggregation money into the capital improvement fund.

Councilman Brian Whitehill said there will be some decision making on it.

Armeni said the budget was "what we believe to be a realistic estimate" noting the parks and health departments are sustaining themselves.

Drug charges possible

By DEANNE JOHNSON

Staff Writer

Three Salem residents could face charges through the Drug Enforcement Agency after reportedly buying heroin in Youngstown.

According to Salem Lt. Don Beeson, DEA agents on Thursday witnessed three people riding in a taxi to a known drug area in Youngstown and a subsequent purchase of drugs. The DEA agents then followed the taxi toward the Salem area and notified Salem police about the vehicle's approach on North Lincoln Avenue.

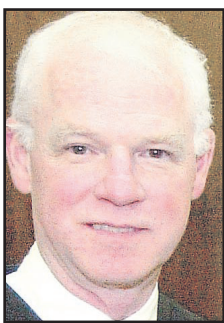

The taxi was stopped on a speeding violation at about 12:56 p.m. and all three Salem residents were detained. A drug dog checked the vehicle and

Judge puts resignation in writing for governor

JUDGE TOBIN

By MARY ANN GREIER

Staff Writer

LISBON — Judge David Tobin put his resignation in writing May 27 — now the fate of his Common Pleas Court bench rests with the governor.

According to his letter to Gov. Ted Strickland, the resignation takes effect at midnight July 2. He also explained the arrangements he's made with the Supreme Court of Ohio for visiting judges to fill the void.

"Since there is a contested election this year for this judgeship and time is short, I have contacted the Supreme Court who has agreed to appoint visiting judges to fill in until someone is elected if you choose not to make an appointment," Tobin wrote.

Amanda Wurst, press secretary for the governor, confirmed receipt of the letter and said Thursday "we are aware of the situation."

"There have been no decisions made at this time as to how to proceed, but we will consult with the Supreme Court before making a decision," she said.

When asked if the governor has ever not made an appointment to fill a vacant post, she said there have been different situations when vacancies remained open. She said in this case, they'll have to look at the situation and consult with the Supreme Court.

United Local BOE appoints athletic director

By KEVIN HOWELL

Staff Writer

HANOVERTON — The United Local school board Thursday night hired a new athletic director.

The board hired Chuck Greenwood, a current keyboard instructor and former athletic director and basketball coach at the school, effective Aug. 1, 2010, through July 31, 2013.

"[Greenwood] has a lot of experience, not only in coaching, but analyzing, as well," said schools Superintendent RuthAnn Rinto.

According to Rinto, 14 people applied for the position, and Greenwood was one of three interviewed by the board.

In other news, the board also hired Nome Baker as band director, Jordan Phillips as an elementary teacher and Karen Rhodes as a kindergarten readiness intervention specialist; promoted Karrie Varagliotti from part-time to full-time ele-

Random acts of senseless sporting

Your dose of (in)sanity in this (in)sane sports world

Talk about payback. Englishman Lee Westwood nearly wasn't granted an exemption into this week's St. Jude Classic. A regular on the European Tour as well as perennial leaderboard staple, Westwood fired a 7-under 63 to lead by a shot in Memphis after one round Thursday.

Westwood, by and large, is more known for his near-misses/chokes than victories. He kills in Europe, with some 20 wins, and has four more in Japan. But he's won only once on the PGA Tour and that was back in 1998. He lost the lead at last year's Players Championship, lost it at this year's Masters, was in the lead in the final round of last year's British Open, and was a shot away from being in the Rocco Mediate/Tiger Woods U.S. Open playoff in 2008. He's killed for three rounds a number of times only to gag down the stretch.

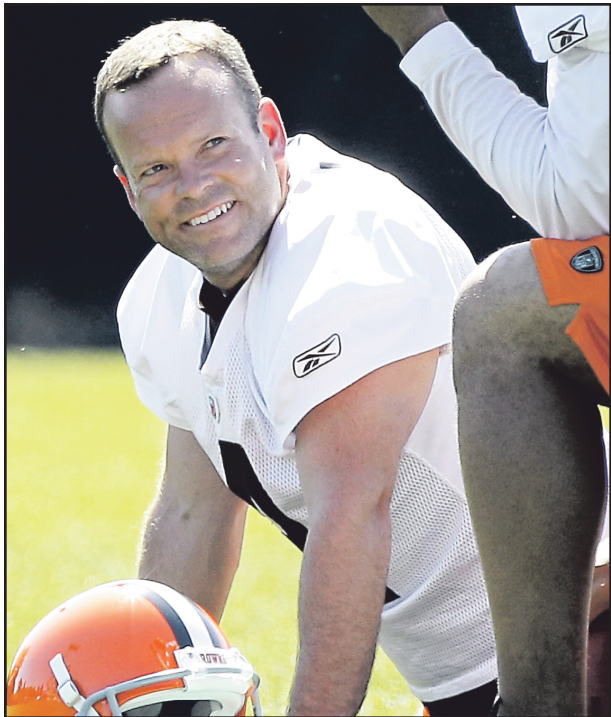

A win at the St. Jude would probably do little to change the perception of golf's third-ranked player. It might help, but until he gets it done on the final day of a higher profile tournament in America, fan's respect for him will likely remain across the pond. Regardless, I'd certainly look for him to be on the top of the leaderboard at next week's U.S. Open at some point. Maybe this time he'll stay there.

► Nebraska in the Big Ten would certainly up the conference's profile given some recent lean years (see Michigan, specifically). The school could decide as early as today whether it wants out of the Big 12, and I'd love to see it happen. Ohio State is the odds on favorite to win it all this year in Vegas, and their schedule certainly sets up nicely for them with eight home games including Penn State and Michigan. The only real tests for the Buckeyes, assuming they live up to the hype, are Miami in week two, but that's also in Columbus, and at Wisconsin Oct. 16. Iowa could be a tough road game as well but it's hard to gauge the Hawkeyes. They vaulted into the national spotlight last year winning games despite numerous turnovers before it finally catching up to them. If Ohio-native Ricky Stanzani turns it around at the quarterback position and the team limits turnovers, that could be a huge game come Nov. 20.

► Tom Izzo could be the next Cleveland Cavaliers coach. Makes no difference whatsoever. The team flat out quit against the Celtics earlier in the postseason, and nothing Mike Brown was going to say would've changed that. Izzo would have even less pull than Brown assuming LeBron returns. Despite all the team's ownership crying to the contrary, James comes back, he runs the show. There's no reason the Cavaliers shouldn't have won the Eastern Conference this year. LeBron quit

Cleveland veteran in contract dispute

BEREA — Phil Dawson avoided kicking up any controversy.

Cleveland's long-time, steady kicker reported to the Browns' mandatory minicamp on Thursday after skipping the club's voluntary workouts in an apparent contract dispute.

from Cleveland's 1999 expansion team, has been seeking a new, long-term deal from the Browns for several seasons. He's in the final year of a contract with a base salary of $1 million — at the bottom end of the pay scale for NFL kickers.

Following the morning workout, Dawson politely declined to address his contract status and would not comment on

Izzo talks to Cavaliers

MSU coach tours team's facilities, speaks with owners

CLEVELAND (AP) — Tom Izzo has flirted with the NBA before.

He may finally be ready to commit.

Michigan State's highly respected coach visited the Cleveland Cavaliers on Thursday to get a firsthand inspection of a franchise undergoing a major makeover as it prepares to try and re-sign LeBron James, the free-agent-of-a-generation.

After flying to Cleveland in one of Cavs owner Dan Gilbert's jets, Izzo spent several hours visiting with members of the front office and touring the team's facilities.

Izzo, who has been courted by pro teams in the past, is believed to be mulling a contract worth up to $6 million a season from the Cavaliers, who fired Mike Brown last month after they lost in the second round of the playoffs to Boston despite having the league's best regular-season record for the second straight year.

It is not known if Izzo gave the Cavs a decision or a timetable for one.

If Izzo and Cleveland do not come to terms, the team could turn its attention to former New Orleans and New Jersey coach Byron Scott, whose resume would make him attractive to Cleveland. Scott won three NBA titles as a player and has experience in coaching such stars as Jason Kidd and Chris Paul.

A phone message to Scott's agent, Brian McInerney, was not immediately returned.

New Cleveland general manager Chris Grant said the Cavaliers have spoken to a "number" of candidates, but did not divulge any names. The team has inquired about Milwaukee assistant Kelvin Sampson.

Izzo recently said he would stay with the Spartans until they won another national title. But earlier this week, Izzo seemed to have a change of heart and met with his current players. He told them to continue to work hard, but did not say if he was leaving the school, associate head coach Mark Montgomery said.

The day began with Izzo on campus in East Lansing, Mich., but by early afternoon he was in Cleveland. His plane was scheduled to land at Burke Lakefront Airport, but was diverted to Cuyahoga County Airport in Richmond Heights, Ohio, because the Cavaliers wanted to avoid TV cameras.

'Dumb, immature'

Roethlisberger apologizes to family, friends, Steeler nation

By ALAN ROBINSON
Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — A contrite Ben Roethlisberger said he got caught up in being a caricature called Big Ben, not the grounded player and person he once was, leading to his off-field problems and affecting his play as the Steelers quarterback.

"Big Ben just kept building up. It ended up coming off the field. It kept taking over. Superman kept taking over Clark Kent and you just never saw who Ben Roethlisberger was any more," Roethlisberger told KDKA-TV. "At the time, I didn't see it. I was gaining everything but I was losing a lot of who I was raised to be. It got so overwhelming, it consumed me."

In his first detailed interviews since a Georgia college student accused him of sexually assaulting her in a nightclub bathroom on March 5, Roethlisberger told two Pittsburgh stations he doesn't have an alcohol problem. Before the alleged assault, Roethlisberger and his party ordered considerable amounts of alcohol.

When the NFL announced Roethlisberger's six-game suspension on April 21, commissioner Roger Goodell said the quarterback was required to undergo evaluation. Neither the league nor Roethlisberger have detailed what was being evaluated or how long the evaluations would last.

While Roethlisberger told KDKA there were drinking issues on his late mother's side of the family, he said his father, Ken, never permitted alcohol in their house, even when the quarterback played at Miami (Ohio).

Roethlisberger didn't promise he wouldn't use alcohol again, but said he must make "smart" decisions. "Moving forward, you have to make sure you make the right decision, and that right decision is something I'm going to have to make, when that (alcohol) situation presents itself," he told KDKA in an interview that was aired Thursday. "You can't stop living, but you've got to live smart."

He did promise he won't go back to being the ego-driven, rude and boorish person he was before, not only in public but in private.

Among those he has consulted for advice are former Steelers coach Bill Cowher — Roethlisberger said the two are much closer than they were before — and former Steelers running back Merril Hoge, now an NFL analyst.

The interviews were aired one day after 60 audio and video clips from the investigation were released by the Georgia Bureau of Investigation.

In several, his 20-year-old accuser said she felt powerless to stop a short-tempered Roethlisberger from having sex with her, even though she told him over and over again to stop.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Lee Westwood prefers competition the week before a major to tune up his play. The Englishman looks quite ready now for the U.S. Open based on his opening round at the St. Jude Classic.

Westwood took advantage of no wind and a rain-softened course to shoot a 7-under 63 Thursday that equaled his best on the PGA Tour and gave him a one-stroke lead in the suspended first round. The world's No. 3-ranked player tied the course record for the back nine with a 29 with four of his five birdies and an eagle. He parred out his final eight holes.

"Pleased with the start, 63 is always a good start," Westwood said. "I couldn't be disappointed with that. Could have been better, but I'm not going to cry too much about missing from 4

Aging Kentucky con man admits to murdering four in Ohio, Wisconsin

JEFFERSON, Wis. (AP) — A young Edward Edwards once told a nun he wanted to be crook. After a stint on the FBI's Most Wanted List and time in prison, he said he wanted to be reformed.

Instead, he now says, he became a murderer.

The ailing 76-year-old former con man, who once described himself as a cross between John Dillinger and Don Juan, admitted from his wheelchair Wednesday to killing a young Wisconsin couple in 1980. Edwards also agreed to plead guilty Friday to fatally shooting a young Ohio couple in 1977.

He was being transported Thursday to Summit County, Ohio, where he was to enter his guilty pleas in court on Friday.

All four slayings came years after Edwards claimed to have turned his life around and started talking to others about avoiding a life of crime.

"It's just one more step on the way to hell for him," Patrick Hack, brother of 19-year-old victim Tim Hack, said of Edwards' confessions.

Edwards, of Louisville, Ky., was arrested last July after DNA connected him to the deaths of Hack and his 19-year-old girlfriend, Kelly Drew. The couple disappeared from a Wisconsin wedding reception in August 1980. Their bodies were found weeks later in the woods. Investigators believe Hack was stabbed and Drew strangled. Drew's clothes and underwear were slashed to ribbons.

In April, Edwards confessed to Ohio authorities that he also shot Bill Lavaco, 21, of Doylestown and Judith Straub, 18, of Sterling in the neck at close range and left their bodies in a park in August 1977.

His attorney, Jeffrey De La Rosa, said he didn't know if more details ever would become known. Patrick Hack said he didn't need to hear more.

"If he told you something, would you believe him?" he said.

Born in Akron, Ohio, in 1933, Edwards wrote in his 1972 autobiography "Metamorphosis of a Criminal" that he spent his early years being beaten by nuns in an orphanage. When a nun asked him what he wanted to be, he told her, "'Sister, I'm gonna be a crook, and I'm gonna be a good one.'"

Ruggedly handsome and just as cunning, he traveled the country in the 1950s, hitchhiking, forging checks and having sex.

According to his book, he escaped from jail in Akron in 1955 by pushing past a guard and fled across the country, holding up gas stations for money. He never wore a mask because he wanted to be famous.

In 1961 he landed on the FBI's Ten Most Wanted Fugitives List. He eventually was captured in Atlanta.

He said a guard at the federal prison in Leavenworth, Kan., turned his life around. When paroled in 1967, he remade himself into an inspirational speaker and eventually married.

In 1980, he began working as a handyman at the reception hall where Hack and Drew were last seen. Investigators questioned him shortly after the couple disappeared, and he abruptly left the state. He drifted to Pennsylvania where he burned down a rented house and in 1982 was sentenced to more than 2 years in prison for arson.

His movements in the 1990s remain a mystery. Police in Louisville said he moved into a trailer park on the outskirts of town in 2000. A woman who answered the phone at the trailer home Wednesday declined to comment and hung up without identifying herself.

Wisconsin investigators submitted DNA taken from semen found on Drew's pants to state analysts in 2007. They matched it to DNA from Edwards in June 2009. Police have not said what led them to obtain DNA from him.

Edwards suffers from diabetes, is confined to a wheelchair and often showed up at court hearings hooked to an oxygen tank. He's been getting medical treatment at a state prison in Waupun.

A grand jury in Ohio indicted Edwards Wednesday on two counts of aggravated murder in Lavaco and Straub's deaths. He signed a deal agreeing to plead guilty to all four homicides and entered his plea to Hack and Drew's deaths in a Wisconsin courtroom.

Ohio prosecutors plan to seek two consecutive life sentences. He'll then be sentenced for the Hack and Drew homicides in Wisconsin, where he faces two mandatory life sentences.

Then he goes back to Ohio to start serving his time. De La Rosa said Edwards signed the agreement to spare his wife, his family and the victims' families from sitting through a trial. Drew's brother, Mike Drew, said he was surprised but glad.

"I was hoping it would come to this," Mike Drew said.

Finance

estimated $2.65 million for 2011, and Councilman Dave Nestic asked for an accounting for the decrease.

Armeni said it reflected the layoffs. On March 3, eight employees were posted to "indefinite layoff." He also noted an increase in costs due to unemployment.

He noted that the police and fire pension funds, paid for with real estate taxes and employee contributions is augmented with money from the general fund.

Nestic asked if the tax applied was dictated by law and Armeni said it was, adding it was a dollar amount that has gone down "and is being phased out, which means the general fund will pick up any difference."

Armeni pointed out that the bond retirement fund, which is paid at $200,000 this year will increase to $219,000 in 2011.

"The payments seem manageable up to 2016," he said, "then we'll see a lot of debt fall off, and you'll see a very low debt."

He said the zero-interest loans the city received through agencies like the Ohio Public Works Commission are in the fund but it's the bond payments that cost.

A special assessment made in 1992 for the $3.4 million downtown renovation will be retired in 2011, Armeni said. That project set new bricks and lamp posts along State Street and on some side streets and alley ways.

He said the capital improvement fund was on track to exceed $315,000 in the industrial park fund and there was a $10,000 retainer on the purchase of Quaker City Raceway property from that fund.

There is one property left in the industrial park west which Service Safety Director Steve Andes said was sold but the owner has failed to build on it within the required 24 months. He said the owner purchased it about four years ago and the city has "sat on it" because it would cost $30,000 to get it back.

Armeni also pointed out the water department has estimated receipts of $2.5 million, a number which he called "pretty consistent" year to year. The wastewater side is a "sitting on $12.5 million" but there are issues at the plant, he said.

Wolford, after weighing the quotes from the Morris Financial Group and Arcuri and Associates in Columbiana, said he felt it was best to "maintain the contract with Anthem" until July of 2011 when all four city union contracts will expire together.

"The consensus was that to change now would open up a lot of areas," Wolford said, with not much in savings.

"Personally, I do not think this is the time to do any major changes."

There is a $56,689 or 5 percent increase in premiums this year and Armeni said he allowed for a 10 percent increase. There was no increase in last year's premium and Council President Mickey Cope Weaver asked why there wasn't and if the 5 percent increase was negotiable.

Armeni said there was a 3 percent increase last year but it was offset by the successful employee participation in the Employee Resource Council (ERC) which put on annual health fairs.

He said the city had a credit equal to the three percent.

"We're in a group," he said, adding the premium would have been four times higher if the city wasn't in a group.

Whitehill said each contract allows for the insurance portion to be opened up and Wolford said it was a good plan that was negotiated over the years and suggested starting union negotiations earlier next year. Whitehill suggested beginning in February or March.

Wolford said the unions want to make sure everyone's treated fairly.

In other business, Nestic said the Al-liance company that made the original (renovation) bricks offered to "desalinate" them and wanted to do a free test patch and Andres said, "I don't know if I'll do that."

Nestic said he didn't see why they wouldn't try and Andres said there was a problem with drilling into the concrete pad. He the salt is pulled from the crushed limestone, through the sand to the bricks and drilling drain holes wouldn't stop that. He also noted that many bricks are worn a three-quarters to an inch and he didn't want to put "old worn-out bricks back."

"The jury is still out" he said regarding the test that could take a day.

Asked what would happen if the test proved successful, Nestic said, "The question is whose going to pay?"

Nestic also asked if there was a law preventing semi-trucks hauling double-trailers on city streets, noting they were responsible for tearing up bricks at intersections.

Police Lt. Don Beeson attended the meeting and advised there was no law preventing them.

"Doubles are OK," he said, adding that triple trailers are not allowed off the interstates and Wolford said it was just a problem "we have to live with." During Mayor Alvahn Mondell's administration portable truck scales were used to suppress truck traffic.

Nestic also noted, "We've got some grass growing" on North Ellsworth Avenue.

A city ordinance prohibits grass being more than 8 inches high and Apple said there was tall grass on Pearce Circle and Whitehill said there was also tall grass in the alley by the Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurant.

Train kills Ohio man on bridge

MILAN, Ohio (AP) — Authorities say an Ohio man who wanted to dive off a bridge into a river was struck and killed by a train before he could jump.

The young man and a friend had climbed onto the bridge above the Huron River near Milan, about 60 miles southeast of Toledo.

Authorities say one of them jumped in time, but 19-year-old Stefen McKinney of Norwalk didn't make it.

He was pronounced dead at the scene.

McKinney was with a group of six or seven young adults who had gathered along the river to swim and enjoy the outdoors.

Celtics, Big Baby, tie up series 2-2

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics have tied up the NBA finals, and they owe it more to "Big Baby" than the Big Three.

Backup Glen "Big Baby" Davis scored half of his 18 points in the fourth quarter, leading the Celtics bench as Boston pulled away from the Los Angeles Lakers to win 96-89 on Thursday night and even the best-of-seven series at two games apiece.

Game 5 is Sunday night in Boston. The Celtics' win guaranteed them a trip back to Los Angeles and averted a 3-1 deficit that has never been overcome in NBA finals history.

Kobe Bryant scored 33 points and Pau Gasol had 21 for the Lakers.

Paul Pierce scored 19 points, Kevin Garnett had 13 and Ray

Allen bounced back from a seven-quarter shooting slump to score 12 points for Boston.

But the new Big Three that led the Celtics to their 17th NBA title in 2008 — beating the Lakers in the finals — was on the bench for much of the fourth-quarter run that gave Boston the lead for good.

"I don't think guys really care and that's why we're here, it really is," Boston coach Doc Rivers said of the extra minutes for the bench. "... It was great, you know. That's the loudest I've seen our bench, the starters cheering from the bench. It was terrific."

Bryant hit three straight 3-pointers to give the Lakers a 62-58 lead with 1:25 left in the third. Davis' putback left the Celtics trailing by two points

Indians rally back twice to beat Red Sox 8-7

CLEVELAND (AP) — Russell Branyan hit a two-out, two-run single in the ninth inning Thursday night, rallying the Cleveland Indians to a crazy 8-7 win over the Boston Red Sox.

Cleveland overcame three errors in one inning by third baseman Andy Marte, a blown save by Kerry Wood and an eighth-inning disruption by two unruly fans.

Adrian Beltre's two-out, two-run homer in the ninth off Wood (1-2) put Boston ahead 7-6.

The Indians quickly loaded the bases with no outs in the bottom half against Daniel Bard (1-2). Bard, closing while Jonathan Papelbon is on the bereavement list, then struck out Travis Hafner and retired Johnny Peralta on a foulout.

But Branyan delivered, looping a single over second baseman Dustin Pedroia in shallow right field.

The game was interrupted when two young men, one wearing a LeBron James jersey, sprinted across the outfield. One waved a bag of resin, creating a stream that resembled smoke. James' pregame ritual at Cleveland Cavaliers games is loading his hands with powder and tossing it in the air.

One of the fans slid to the ground as security personnel pursued him, the other tried to get over a wall but was shoved back by fans onto the field. Both men were handcuffed, hustled into the Indians bullpen and taken out of Progressive Field.

Earlier this season, a fan ran on the field in Philadelphia and was stopped with a Taser.

Wood got two fast outs in the ninth before hitting J.D.

Drew in the right leg with a pitch. Beltre then hit his eighth homer to put Boston ahead. Beltre is 5 for 14 (.358) with three homers and seven RBIs in his career against Wood, who blew his second save in six tries.

The Indians loaded the bases on walks to Trevor Crowe and Austin Kearns around an opposite-field double by Shin-Soo Choo. Two outs later, Branyan won it.

One night after handing the Red Sox an 11-0 loss, their worst of the season, the Indians finally gained a second consecutive home victory for the first time since winning four in a row at Progressive Field on April 15-18.

Lou Marson's two-run single in the sixth put Cleveland ahead 6-5 against Boston starter Jon Lester.

Marte helped atone for his miscues with an RBI single that got the Indians within 5-4 in the sixth. Marson followed with a slicing opposite-field bloop to score two more.

Marte become the first major leaguer with three errors in an inning since Chicago White Sox third baseman Andy Gonzalez on Aug. 30, 2007. According to the Elias Sports Bureau, the last Indians player to err three times in an inning was shortstop Frank Duffy on Sept. 24, 1972 — in the 11th inning of the first game of a doubleheader against the New York Yankees.

Marte bobbled a ground ball by Kevin Youkilis with the bases loaded, scoring one run. Later, he made two errors on one play as two runs scored when he mishandled a grounder hit by Mike Cameron, scrambled after it and threw wildly to first.

Lester gave up six runs and nine hits over six innings. He struck out eight with one walk after going 7-0 with a 1.29 ERA in nine previous starts since a loss to Tampa Bay on April 18.

NOTES: Boston DH David Ortiz was 0 for 4 and is 3 for 33 (.084) in June. ... Youkilis left with a mild back spasm in the seventh. He went 0 for 3 after driving in 11 runs in nine games, going 15 for 35 (.429). ... Red Sox manager Terry Francona said Papelbon will be activated Friday. ... Red Sox RHP Daisuke Matsuzaka threw a bullpen session. He was sent to the team hotel Wednesday with stomach flu. ... Cleveland's Jason Donald played second base for the first time in the majors. A career shortstop, he started making the switch at Triple-A Columbus before being called up May 18 when SS Asdrubal Cabrera sustained a broken left arm. ... Red Sox 2B Dustin Pedroia was 2 for 5, snapping an 0-for-15 slump.

Nationals top Pirates 4-2, get 1st sweep of season

WASHINGTON (AP) — Adam Dunn homered for the third straight game, Livan Hernandez made an lead stand up and the Washington Nationals beat Pittsburgh 4-2 Thursday night to become the last team in the majors to sweep a series this season.

Stephen Strasburg started off the three-game sweep by winning his big league debut Tuesday night before a sellout crowd of 40,315. The next two nights were tame events by comparison — drawing 40,637 for both games combined — but all three count equally as wins for a Nationals team that has pulled within a game of .500.

Hernandez (5-3) allowed two runs over six innings for his first win in more than a month despite a respectable string of starts.

With regular closer Matt Capps getting the night off, Tyler Clippard sent the side down in order in the ninth for his first career save.

Dunn homered in each game against the Pirates. Dunn and Josh Willingham connected in the fourth inning, sending Pittsburgh toward its fifth loss in a row.

Zach Duke (3-7) pitched better after two subpar outings but suffered again from a lack of run support. He allowed three runs — two earned — over five innings and scored Pittsburgh's first run after leading off the sixth with a double.

Dunn gave the Nationals the lead when he hit a curveball into the middle deck in right field in the fourth inning for his 13th home run of the season.

Two batters later, Willingham got his 12th homer when he took Duke's full-count fastball to left-center to make the score 2-0.

The Nationals added an unearned run in the fifth. Dunn singled, was balked to second, then scored on third baseman Andy LaRoche's errant throw to first on a grounder by Ryan Zimmerman.

The Pirates got two in the sixth, an inning that began with back-to-back doubles by Duke and Jose Tabata. Speedy outfielder Tabata, who made his major league debut Wednesday, is now 3 for 8 in his first two games.

The Nationals loaded the bases with none out in the sixth on a walk and two singles, but Evan Meek — whose ERA sits at 0.76 — got pinch-hitter Willie Harris to line into a double play and retired Cristian Guzman on a groundout.

Washington also wasted Ian

Desmond's leadoff double in the seventh, stranding him at third, but Michael Morse's first homer of the season capped his three-hit night and gave the Nationals an insurance run in the eighth.

NOTES: Ryan Doumit returned for the Pirates after missing three games with concussion-like symptoms from taking a foul tip off his face mask, but he started at first base for the first time since 2007. Manager John Russell said Doumit might resume catching duties on Sunday. ... The Nationals went 4-2 over six games at Nationals Park, their fourth straight winning homestand.

DAWSON FROM 1B

on his absence from OTAs.

"I'm just not going to open that can," he said.

While the Browns have been mostly atrocious during 11 dreary seasons, Dawson has been one of their few bright spots.

He is the team's third-leading career scorer and has kicked the second-most field goals (229), behind only Hall of Famer Lou Groza (234). Dawson has made 229 of 275 attempts (83.3 percent), ranking him eighth among kickers on the league's career list.

Perhaps more impressively,

Dawson has been accurate in Cleveland, where the swirling winds and cold temperatures make it one of the toughest places to kick.

Dawson was asked if he felt unappreciated by the Browns, who have undergone several front-office changes since he signed.

"I feel good about what I've done," he said.

Cleveland's new front office may be taking a wait-and-see-attitude when it comes to Dawson and whether to engage in new talks about a contract extension. Browns coach Eric Mangini praised Dawson, a co-captain last season, saying he was pleased with the job he has done.

Dawson laughed when reminded about the less-than-ideal conditions he has had to perform in during games in the Browns' lakefront stadium, where the wind seems to blow in every direction.

"Kicking in Cleveland gives you gray hair, but keeps you young," the 35-year-old said.

Preferring to keep any demands private, Dawson would not say if he intends to boycott Cleveland's training camp, which opens next month.

"I'm just enjoying a beautiful day today and we'll see," he said.

The 11-year veteran missed five games last season with a calf injury, but made 17 of 19 field goal tries, including his final six. Dawson has endured all the upheaval in Cleveland, and said there hasn't been a time where he took his roster spot for granted.

"Regardless if there's a new regime or not, you have to prove yourself every year anyways," he said.

"Especially at my position. There's only 32 of them and there's always somebody waiting for that phone to ring. So whether you have a new coaching staff or a new front office, or whatever the case may be, you've got to prove yourself not only every year, but each and every day.

"That's kind of been my mentality my whole career."

Players were subject to a fine if they did not attend coach Mangini's minicamp, but that didn't stop three restricted free agents from staying away..

As expected, linebackers D'Qwell Jackson and Matt Roth and safety Abram Elam were absent. Running back Jerome Harrison was also on the field, and fullback Lawrence Vickers arrived late after handling some family legal issues.

Both Elam and Roth are represented by agent Drew Rosenhaus. The restricted free agents have until June 3 to sign their one-year tenders before the team can reduce the offers.

BEN FROM 1B

Lawyers did not permit the questions to be asked, so the two-time Super Bowl winner was not asked about the Milledgeville, Ga., nightclub incident, although he faces no charges. But he said his family members know what happened that night.

Roethlisberger also hinted that living a role rather than living a life may have affected him on the field, too. The Steelers went 9-7 and missed the playoffs last season, one season after winning the Super Bowl, even though he had his best season statistically since being a first-round draft pick in 2004.

"I've wanted to apologize to them (fans) for so many things. For being immature, for being dumb, for being young, for not knowing any better," he told WTAE. "For getting caught up in everything that was thrown my way. ... In my heart, I know I haven't been the best person, the best quarterback for the Steelers, I'm not talking just on the field, I'm talking off the field."

Roethlisberger said he is sorry that his behavior hurt and saddened his parents, sister and other family members. His sister, Carlee, was a member of Oklahoma's NCAA women's basketball Final Four team, yet she told reporters he did not attend one of her games last season.

Already, he said, family members can tell a difference in him since the Georgia incident.

"My dad said to me about a month ago, it's good to have my son back," Roethlisberger told WTAE. "That killed me because my dad's been my best friend. For him to say that to me really let me know I wasn't who he raised me to be."

Roethlisberger gave the interviews upon the advice of consultants hired to help him and the Steelers rebuild his badly damaged public image. He promised several times that fans won't see the bad Roethlisberger — rather than the popular, championship-winning player of before — any longer.

"I know I've slipped, stumbled ... but you'll see a new Ben," he told KDKA.

He also said it is important for him to regain his status as a role model, even though some parents have ordered their children not to wear his No. 7 jersey any longer. Some families chose to mail their jerseys to the Steelers as a sign of their disgust.

"Those chapters in my life, I've closed that book and I'm not opening them up," he told WTAE. "It only matters what I do from here on out. That's what I'm excited about — showing people, proving to people, fans, teammates, my family, the commissioner, everybody, who Ben Roethlisberger is. And that Ben is here to stay."

POLICE

SALEM REPORTS

Assist Children’s Services

Police responded to the 400 block of Ohio Ave. at 1:22 p.m. Thursday after receiving a call from about a situation with a family with eight children living in unsanitary conditions. A decision was made to removed them until conditions improved. A family friend and a relative agreed to take the children and a caseworker advised they would be in contact with the family to assure it was cleaned up.

Fight

Police responded to the 900 block of E. 3rd St. at 10:58 p.m. Wednesday regarding a report of a fight and spoke to all involved who said there had been a shoving match between two people. Officers advised it was a civil problem and no charges were filed.

Neighbor dispute

Police responded to the 100 block of W. Pershing St. at 11:22 a.m. Thursday for a verbal dispute between the female complainant and a downstairs tenant. When she leaves and returns she claims he makes harassing remarks. Police spoke to the man and he denied it and both said they would try to keep the peace.

Theft

Police responded to the 100 block of Jennings Ave. at 9:57 p.m. Wednesday where the complainant advised the residence was entered and several items taken.

Graffiti

Police responded to the 100 block of Rose Ave. at 4:43 p.m. Wednesday where there was fresh graffiti spray painted on the complainant’s fence. Photos were taken.

Police observed new graffiti while on patrol at 7:25 a.m. Thursday on the west side of the overpass in the 400 block of W. State St.

Suspicious person

Police patrolling in the 700 block of Arch St. at 12:36 a.m. Thursday observed what appeared to be an under 18-year-old make. It was learned he was 16 but had said he was 17 and lived just up the street. He was asked his birthday and he couldn’t provide the correct year and he became nervous, shaking and stuttering. He was placed under arrest for a curfew violation and when he was handcuffed he began to tighten up and pull away and had to be warned to relax and not resist. He was asked if he had weapons or drugs on his person and he admitted to having marijuana and clear plastic bag with it was found in a pocket. He was released to his father.

Threats

Police responded to the 100 block of Penn Ave. at 12:47 p.m. Thursday where an intoxicated female was causing problems and was advised she was not wanted at the establishment and had some difficulty understanding that. She was advised she would be arrested if she returned.

Suspicious persons

Police were on patrol west-bound on Mullins St. at 2:29 a.m. Thursday and observed three to four people near the Suburban Market parking lot. They appeared to be looking around. After crossing the railroad tracks two or three took off running northbound. Police observed two people, one known to police and one advised that two people just ran to his residence, in the front door and out the back door and suggested police could enter his residence and provided the name of one of the juvenile suspects. While checking the area officers found an outstanding warrant from Trumbull County on the male who was not known to police, Daniel A. McWilliams of 714 Newgarden Ave. Two officers located one of th suspects who fled near the car wash on Arch St. who fled again and police continued searching but were unable to locate him. McWilliams was transported to Canfield and turned over to Trumbull County deputies.

Stabbing

Police responded to the 500 block of E. Pershing St. at 4:39 a.m. Thursday for a report of an assault and found the victim near the railroad tracks. She said she had been assaulted by her boyfriend and had a visible cut to her left arm and scratches on her neck and one eye. She was taken to the hospital.

BWD employee accused of threatening boss pleads no contest to disorderly conduct

By DEANNE JOHNSON
Staff Writer

LISBON — The Buckeye Water District employee who was accused of threatening his boss when he came to work at the Salineville water plant intoxicated in March pleaded no contest to disorderly conduct before Judge Mark Frost Thursday in county Municipal Court.

Karl Reed, 53, Parshall Road, Wellsville, told Frost he had been drinking that day, not only because his father he was close to had died two weeks earlier, but also to mask the withdrawals from pain medication he had been abusing.

After suffering an ACL injury, Reed said his addiction to pain medication began five or six years earlier and grew until he was taking 10 to 15 Vicodin per day. He believed he was managing despite his drug use.

His wife, who was in the courtroom, told Frost she knew when he started drinking and that he needed help for pain medication, but she could not help him until he was ready to help himself.

Now in counseling and using Suboxone, a drug used to help those addicted to pain medication step down gradually, Reed said he feels the best he has in a long time.

“In all honesty, I haven’t felt this free in years,” Reed said, adding prior to this his “whole life centered around trying to obtain more pills.”

His wife agreed things are better now, telling the judge, “This is the man I married 21 years ago.”

Frost said the fact that Reed was disciplined by the Buckeye Water District but allowed to stay employed with the company tells him Reed must be considered a responsible employee except for this serious incident.

The judge allowed a misdemeanor menacing charge to be dismissed and fined Reed $150 on the disorderly conduct charge. He also ordered him to continue with his treatment and counseling and to perform 25 hours community service. He is on probation for a year.

SHERIFF’S OFFICE

— Cindy Burt, Fairfield School Road, Columbiana, called for a deputy at 5:37 p.m. Wednesday to show that someone drove through her fence.

—Tim Seevers, Cusick Road, West Point, reported being awakened by a barking dog just before 2 a.m. Tuesday and looking outside to see someone climbing in a window at his neighbor’s home and then leaving through the front door. Seevers said the intruder fled on foot when he yelled. The suspect was described as a white male, 6-foot tall, slight build, clean shaven and wearing blue jeans and a gray T-shirt.

— Priscilla Kale, state Route 644, Summitville, reported Wednesday her mail box was smashed and a piece of her lawn furniture placed in the roadway, where it was struck.

SECRET INDICTMENT

LISBON — A Youngstown resident accused of stealing money from an elderly man was served Wednesday with a secret indictment for a felony charge.

Chris Zelonish, 40, was charged by the Columbiana County grand jury with theft, a fourth-degree felony.

Documents alleged Zelonish stole cash money from the victim from May to July 2009.

Also served with a secret indictment was Jamie Loterbaugh, 36, of Corning, for non-support of dependents, a fifth-degree felony. Documents alleged Loterbaugh failed to pay child support for one child from March 2, 2008 to March 31 this year.

SALEM FIRE DEPT.

Firefighters responded to the the 400 block of W. Wilson St. at 1:12 p.m. Thursday for a report of a fire that had just been extinguished on a building next to the railroad tracks by railroad employees who were working in the area. They stated they didn’t notice the fire immediately and extinguished it. The cause was undetermined.

Colorado flips first card in realignment

Buffalos are making move to Pac-10; Nebraska could go to Big Ten

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — College athletics are on the verge of a monumental shift, a realignment that could disintegrate one conference, turn others into 16-school goliaths and have huge financial implications on some of the biggest programs in the country.

The first card flipped on Thursday, when Colorado ditched the Big 12 for the Pac-10. Next up are Nebraska and Missouri, both facing decisions that could spark another exodus and the collapse of the Big 12.

“(Now) the first move is made, I think you’ll see the dominos start falling,” said Joel Maxcey, sports economist at the University of Georgia.

It’s already been a wild ride.

The Big Ten started it off by exploring plans to expand, an effort it hoped would add more eyes to its successful cable network and reach the NCAA minimum of 12 teams required to hold a conference championship game in football.

The Big Ten’s big grab led to harried calls between rivals, political ploys and behind-the-scenes maneuvering as schools across the country look to make sure they’re not standing alone, pockets empty, when the music stops.

Colorado took a pre-emptive strike, deciding to head west to the Pac-10 instead of waiting to see what everyone else was going to do.

The next move could come Friday, when Nebraska and Missouri face a stay-or-go ultimatum from the Big 12.

Nebraska seems most likely to go.

The Cornhuskers have longstanding ties with many of the schools in the Big 12’s North Division — they’ve played Kansas and Missouri in football since the 1890s — but Big Ten money might be too much to pass up.

Nebraska’s regents are scheduled to meet Friday to discuss conference realignment. Colorado’s decision to bolt early could play a role in the decision, though it might already be a done deal.

“It doesn’t say anything,” Nebraska athletic director Tom Osborne said of Colorado’s announcement. “I really have no comment on this. I’m not saying we’re gone or not gone. Until we have a definite decision, I’m not saying anything else.” Missouri faces a more difficult challenge.

The school has expressed interest in joining the Big Ten and seemed to be a good fit with its proximity and heated rivalry with Illinois. But Missouri apparently became a less-popular choice for the conference in recent weeks and the university’s curator said Thursday the school had not been invited to join the Big Ten. Even if Missouri decides to stay in the Big 12, the school could be left to forage amid the scraps of the Big 12 or searching for another, lower-profile, less-profitable conference.

“There’s a lot of concern among alumni about what happens to Mizzou and how this works out,” said Todd McCubbin, executive director of the Missouri Alumni Association.

The next round of movement could be the most volatile.

The Big Ten appears to be interested in adding Notre Dame — as most conferences would — though Fighting Irish athletic director Jack Swarbrick said Thursday that the school’s position hasn’t changed and wouldn’t comment on realignment. The Big Ten might also be looking east, to pilfer schools from the Big East.

The biggest move could come from the Pac-10.

Now that the conference has Colorado, it could set its sights on the Big 12’s South Division, reportedly interested in inviting Texas, Texas A&M, Texas Tech, Oklahoma and Oklahoma State to form a 16-team megaconference.

Officials from rival schools Texas and Texas A&M met Thursday to discuss their athletic futures, while Oklahoma and Oklahoma are keeping options open while hoping the Big 12 stays afloat.

The conference realignment could leave five schools on the outside looking in.

The expansion plans are driven by football, by far the biggest earner in college athletics, and schools that don’t have strong gridiron traditions could get ignored.

Kansas, despite its storied basketball program, Kansas State, Baylor and Iowa State don’t have strong football programs and have the added negative of being in sparsely populated areas of the country.

If those schools are unable to piece together something from the scraps of a ravaged Big 12, they might be forced to join smaller conferences, a demotion that would not only be embarrassing, but potentially devastating financially.

“To actually change the whole scope of athletics and leave some schools out in the cold that have meant so much for the NCAA and for other institutions, to me, is a pretty tough pill to swallow,” Kansas basketball coach Bill Self said.

A massive realignment could further concentrate the power to the biggest and richest schools. Some schools in BCS conferences will be left out in the cold. Long-standing rivalries may be mothballed, traditions cast aside in the name of money. A lot of change could happen in a short period of time.

“College sports, a lot of it is about traditions and rivalries and things like that, and there’ll definitely be some changes,” Maxcey said. “In general, college sports moves kind of slow and I think some of those changes will disappoint some fans of college sports.”

IZZO FROM 1B

Cavs owner Dan Gilbert did arrive at Burke, which is a short drive from Quicken Loans Arena, the Cavs’ downtown home.

Izzo’s interest in the Cavs’ job could hinge on James’ future. The two-time MVP can become a free agent July 1, and is expected to entertain offers from several teams. It is not known if Izzo has contacted James to see whether Cleveland remains one of his possible destinations. Last week, James told CNN’s Larry King that Cavs, his team for the past seven seasons, have “an edge” to re-sign him.

Gilbert has been ultra-secretive in his pursuit of Izzo, whom he has known for years.

Grant, who recently took over when Danny Ferry resigned, confirmed this week the team has had contact with Izzo but would not comment on whether an offer has been made to the 55-year-old. Gilbert is a Michigan State graduate.

Michigan State athletic director Mark Hollis said in a statement that Izzo “made me aware he is meeting with Cleveland.” Hollis added that details of any meetings are “between him and me.”

Text messages were sent to Izzo on Thursday.

Izzo has been at the school since 1983 and has been the Spartans coach since 1995, leading them to six Final Fours in the past 12 years. He has spurned previous overtures from the NBA, most notably from the Atlanta Hawks, who offered him a five-year deal in 2000. Izzo must weigh leaving a familiar situation that pays $3 million a year for probably as long as he wants the job, and perhaps a legacy that would put him among college basketball’s all-time greats, for a chance to coach in a player-first league and a team that doesn’t know if it will have James next season. In recent years, several successful college coaches, including Rick Pitino, Tim Floyd and John Calipari, have struggled in switching to the pro game while Hall of Fame coach Larry Brown is a rare exception.

Several of Izzo’s former players believe he’s ready for the leap.

“I don’t think coach would have a problem getting respect in an NBA locker room,” Hornets guard Morris Peterson said. “I think guys will buy into what he’s telling them because he has a gift with people. Izz is one of the smartest coaches in basketball and one of the nicest guys around.”

Milwaukee Bucks guard Charlie Bell said Izzo may have to alter his intensity when he talks to players who are making more than him and perhaps a superstar in James who would have more power.

“I’ve heard he’s not as hard on guys as he used to be,” Bell said. “He’d have to tone it down even more in the pros.”

feet on the last.”

Not bad for someone who flew from London to San Francisco to play 27 holes Sunday at Pebble Beach with another 18 Monday before heading to Memphis. Westwood played nine holes Tuesday and a practice round Wednesday in his first visit to this course, but wound up with near-perfect scoring conditions in the eighth group off the 10th tee Thursday.

“My caddie said normally there’s a bit of breeze that blows. You try and score when you get your morning time on the first two days when it’s fairly calm, so that’s what I tried to do,” Westwood said.

Casey Wittenberg shot a 64, Padraig Harrington had a 65 and Tim Petrovic, John Senden and Bob Estes were among eight tied at 66 before a severe thunderstorm stopped play for nearly an hour. The round was suspended with 20 golfers left on the course.

No one teeing off in the afternoon cracked the leaderboard with muggy conditions smothering the course with 100-degree heat, and wind that usually toughens this course staying relatively still before the storms developed.

“It was probably as easy conditions as you will get out here on Southwind,” said Garrett Willis, who shot 66 in the morning.

Defending champ Brian Gay, who was under par each round in winning a year ago, opened with a 73. Jordan Spieth, the Texas teen who became the sixth-youngest player to make a PGA cut at the Byron Nelson last month, shot a 73.

Westwood is playing on a sponsor’s exemption extended after being originally turned down. That prompted him to joke to reporters at the time it might be due to his sponsorship deal with UPS for an event in a town where rival FedEx is headquartered. He had been given an exemption two years ago, then withdrew a week before the tournament.

“I’ve never been to Memphis, so it’s somewhere I wanted to come and play,” Westwood said. “It’s the week before the U.S. Open. I like to be competitive before a major championship. I played Houston before the Masters. Being competitive means more to me than actually adapting to the conditions. ... I like to get used to making the 3-, 4-footers when they mean something.”

Westwood mixed good putting with strong iron play, needing only 11 of his 24 putts through his first 10 holes. He rolled in a 30-footer on the par-4 15th and a 15-footer on the par-4 18th for birdies. He stuck a 5-wood within 4 feet to set up his eagle putt on the par-4 No. 16.

The putter failed him on his 18th hole, the par-4 No. 9, as he just missed from 4 feet.

Westwood matched the 63 he shot during the third-round of the 2005 World Golf Championships-Bridgestone Invitational. The 37-year-old Englishman is playing well this year, having made the cut in all seven events here this year including second at the Masters with four top 10s.

He got started with an 8-foot birdie putt on No. 12, then hit a 5-iron to 5 feet on the par-3 14th for a birdie-birdie-eagle stretch. After a 29 on the back side to match the mark last shot by Tom Pernice Jr. in 2004, Westwood said he wasn’t even aware of that mark.

Did he think of cracking 60 as he made the turn to the easier side?

“I didn’t dwell on that for too long,” Westwood said. “I’ve had a chance to shoot 59 before. You tend not to do it when you let your mind get away from you a little bit. I was just trying to hit good shots really and carry on doing what I had been doing on the front nine.”

Westwood hit into the water on the par-5 third before just missing with the putter on Nos. 4 and 5. He saved par on No. 7 with a 15-footer.

Wittenberg, who lives next to the course, took advantage of his local knowledge and his father carrying his bag to equal his low round on the PGA Tour. This is his first start this year on a sponsor’s exemption, and he said he’s relaxed knowing he didn’t qualify for the U.S. Open.

Wittenberg has missed his last four cuts on the Nationwide Tour this season.

“My expectations are really kind of low. I knew if I could come out here and hit good golf shots that maybe I could get something going,” Wittenberg said.

DIVOTS: Robert Allenby, ranked 13th in the world, withdrew due to illness after nine holes. He was 5 over on the back nine. David Gossett withdrew after shooting 47 on the front nine with a hamstring injury, and Jerod Turner also withdrew. ... Billy Mayfair had a hole-in-one on No. 8, using a 7-iron from 170 yards. Will MacKenzie followed five groups later with his own hole-in-one using the same club.

and the team followed suit.

He could be the greatest player of all time, but personally I think he’s happier being a celebrity. Thankfully he hasn’t release a rap album yet. You can say what you want about Kobe Bryant, but Bryant wins titles. Until LeBron can consistently make his team better, he’ll never reach the status of Bryant, or a Michael Jordan or even a Magic Johnson.

► The Browns have a nice little setup going on. New coach, new attitude, decent draft and the rest of their conference, with the exception of maybe the Ravens seems to be collapsing around them. If this trend continues, maybe, just maybe Cleveland can field a winner. Browns fans will take one away way they can get it.

► The Cincinnati Reds currently are by and large the best of the regional MLB teams. That’s not saying too much right now with the struggles of the Pirates and more notably the Indians, who are looking more and more like the ragtag bunch at the beginning of the movie Major League every day. For crying out loud, third baseman Andy Marte had three errors in one inning yesterday. Three! The Pirates have shown some promise but simply haven’t been consistent. The Reds, in recent years anyway, have shown promise only to collapse usually right around this time.

But Cincy has won 21 of its 35 games from behind, and has won 12 times in its final at-bat. Seems like something special is brewing in southwest Ohio, and it might just be the Reds’ year.

“Remember fans, Tuesday is die hard night. Free admission for anyone who was alive the last time the Indians won the pennant.”

‘til next time ...

USC hit hard by NCAA sanctions

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The NCAA threw the book at storied Southern California on Thursday with a two-year bowl ban, four years’ probation, loss of scholarships and forfeits of an entire year’s games for improper benefits to Heisman Trophy winner Reggie Bush dating to the Trojans’ 2004 national championship.

USC was penalized for a lack of institutional control in the ruling by the NCAA following its four-year investigation. The report cited numerous improper benefits for Bush and former basketball player O.J. Mayo, who spent just one year with the Trojans.

The coaches who presided over the alleged misdeeds — football’s Pete Carroll and basketball’s Tim Floyd — left USC in the past year. USC reacted with uniform outrage to the harshness of the sanctions, promising an appeal.

“I’m absolutely shocked and disappointed in the findings of the NCAA,” Carroll said in a video statement produced by the NFL’s Seattle Seahawks, who hired him in January. “I never thought it would come to this.”

The penalties include the loss of 30 football scholarships over three years and vacating 14 victories in which Bush played from December 2004 through the 2005 season. USC beat Oklahoma in the BCS title game on Jan. 4, 2005, and won 12 games during Bush’s Heisman-winning 2005 season, which ended with a loss to Texas in the 2006 BCS title game.

Bill Hancock, the executive director of the BCS, said a committee will meet to consider vacating USC’s 2004 championship. While no action would go into effect until USC’s appeals are heard by the NCAA, Hancock said there would be no 2004 champion if USC’s victory is vacated.

“I take the same stance as our university,” new football coach Lane Kiffin said. “There is some guilt, but the punishment is too severe. That’s why the appeal process is taking place.”

The rulings are a sharp repudiation of the Trojans’ decade of stunning football success under Carroll, who won seven straight Pac-10 titles and two national championships before abruptly returning to the NFL.

The NCAA says Bush received lavish gifts from two fledgling sports marketers hoping to sign him. The men paid for everything from hotel stays and a rent-free home where Bush’s family apparently lived to a limousine and a new suit when he accepted his Heisman Trophy in New York in December 2005.

The NCAA found that Bush, identified as a “former football student-athlete,” was ineligible beginning at least by December 2004, a ruling that could open discussion of the revocation of the New Orleans Saints star’s Heisman. Members of the Heisman Trust have said they might review Bush’s award if he were ruled ineligible by the NCAA.

Fans buying tickets to see Strasburg road show

CLEVELAND (AP) — Stephen Strasburg’s sensational start for Washington is selling tickets in Cleveland.

The Indians’ ticket office has been busy taking orders for the rookie right-hander’s second career start Sunday. Averaging a major league-low 15,468 thru 25 dates, the Indians sold 8,100 tickets in the past seven days to the final game of the interleague series against the Nationals.

“We are excited to play host to the young man’s first major league road start,” said Bob DiBiasio, the Indians’ vice president of public relations. DiBiasio said about 2,000 tickets were sold Thursday.

Phillips rallies Reds over Giants 7-6

CINCINNATI (AP) — The last-minute Reds made it look so easy again.

Brandon Phillips’ fourth hit, a two-run triple off a nearly perfect reliever Guillermo Mota in the eighth inning, rallied Cincinnati to yet another late win on Thursday, 7-6 over the San Francisco Giants.

“I don’t know if you expect it, but I know everybody believes, from the players to the administrative assistants to the grounds crew,” manager Dusty Baker said. “Don’t turn off the TV if we’ve still got bats in our hands.”

The Reds lead the majors with 12 wins in their final at-bat. They’ve got 21 comeback wins — out of 35 victories overall — which also is the best around. “You can’t give up on us,” said rookie starter Mike Leake, who got the benefit of this turnaround. “We’re a pretty good team.”

Especially when things look really dire.

Mota (0-2) had allowed only three runs all season. He opened the eighth by giving up a single and a double, then went to a full count before Phillips hit an opposite-field triple, trying it at 6. Joey Votto then singled up the middle — Mota misjudged the bouncing ball — for the winning hit.

“I should have gotten that ball,” Mota said. “If I get that ball, we’re still playing now — it’s a tied game.”

Left-hander Arthur Rhodes (2-1) retired five batters, his longest appearance in two years, for the win. Francisco Cordero retired the side in the ninth, getting his 17th save in 21 tries.

The Reds opened a 1 1/2-game lead over idle St. Louis in the NL Central, the latest in a season that Cincinnati has been in first place since June 17, 2002, their final year at Cinergy Field. They finished 78-84 that year under manager Bob Boone.

Feng takes early lead at State Farm LPGA Classic

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Shanshan Feng made five early birdies and shot an 8-under 64 on Thursday, taking a one-stroke lead over Juli Inkster and Na Yeon Choi after the first round of the State Farm LPGA Classic.

Meena Lee, Alena Sharp, Anna Nordqvist, M.J. Hur and Song-Hee Kim were two shots back on a crowded leaderboard at Panther Creek Country Club. Seven other players were within three shots of the lead, including Cristie Kerr and Sophie Gustafson.

Feng’s round was so clean, her only near-blemish came on the 410-yard, par-4 18th, when she had a poor stance on her second shot. She was forced to pitch out, knocked a three-quarter pitching wedge to 8 feet and made a sidehill putt with a deft touch to save par.

“Leading after the first round doesn’t mean you’re going to win the tournament,” Feng said. “It’s just the first round. If this was Sunday, I’d be watching every group finish.” The only Chinese-born player on the LPGA Tour made several lengthy putts during her bogey-free round, although her pro-am playing partners from a day earlier might have been wondering what was going on. “I’m still a little sorry from yesterday because I didn’t make too many putts yesterday in the pro-am,” Feng said. “I made some today.”

Inkster was 2 over through six holes after a four-putt double bogey on No. 3 when she finally started to make some putts of her own. Six holes later, Inkster was suddenly at 4 under.

A mixed blessing in the speed ruling

Ohio Supreme Court justices have dropped a decidedly mixed blessing on Buckeye State police officers and sheriff's deputies. We urge them to be very careful in how they handle it.

Last week, the high court ruled "that a person may be convicted of speeding purely if it looked to a police officer that the motorist was going too fast," according to The Associated Press.

In a 5-1 decision, the court held that if law enforcement officers are trained and experienced in watching for speeders and are certified by a training academy, they can rely on their own judgment to ticket speeders. No other verification, such as a radar read-out, is necessary.

Of course, motorists who are driving recklessly should be stopped and ticketed. At some point, if they continue to behave irresponsibly when behind the wheel, they should lose their driver's licenses.

But judging the speed of a moving object can be very, very difficult. The accuracy of such observations depends on a variety of factors in addition to those cited by the court. For example, an officer's ability to gauge speed may be good early in his shift when he sees a car passing several others. But what about later in the day, when he is tired and spots a car alone on the road?

We think most law enforcement officers like equipment such as radar guns that eliminates, or at least minimizes, the judgment calls they have to make. We doubt many in our area will decide the court's ruling means it is open season on motorists traveling just a few miles an hour above the limit.

Given the legal entanglements that could result from disputes over whether officers' perceptions of speed were accurate, that is a good thing.

On occasions when police spot a vehicle clearly far in excess of the speed limit, but do not have radar or other technology available, the court's ruling may be helpful. That involves a clear and present danger to the traveling public's safety. But for day-to-day enforcement of traffic laws, we encourage police in our area to continue to rely on radar and other speed detection equipment.

Misdemeanors or crimes?

PAT

On this matter of offering federal jobs to potential candidates to induce them not to run against Senate Democratic incumbents, this White House is drifting dangerously close to the falls.

Colorado's Andrew Romanoff has now confirmed that White House Deputy Chief of Staff Jim Messina trolled three federal jobs in front of him, if he would desert and not run against incumbent Sen. Michael Bennet.

And Romanoff has produced an e-mail where Messina presents the three-job menu, one of which might be his, if he passed up the Senate run. Two were with the Agency for International Development. The third was director of the U.S. Trade and Development Agency.

All three are juicy plums. Romanoff and Messina both say no hard offer was made. And Robert Gibbs has assured the press the president had no idea Messina was talking to Romanoff about federal jobs that only Obama can fill.

But if Obama knew nothing of the Messina-Romanoff talks, who did? For Messina cannot appoint anyone to anything. Has Messina's boss, Rahm Emanuel, been given the franchise to offer a dessert tray of federal jobs to people he wants to keep out of Democratic primaries?

An independent investigation needs to be conducted to determine whether Chicago-style politics has been introduced into the West Wing.

For in the week since White House Counsel Robert Bauer issued his two-page report on his investigation into whether Rep. Joe Sestak was offered a job to stay out of the Pennsylvania Senate primary, that report has become scarcely credible.

Consider. Repeatedly, Sestak said he had been offered a job if he would not run. The job was widely thought to be secretary of the navy. If true, Sestak was charging someone high at the White House with having committed a felony: offering a federal job to influence the outcome of a federal election.

What made the issue combustible was that only Obama can appoint the navy secretary. Though no one suggested Obama made the offer, the White House denied any offer had been made.

When Sestak won the primary, the media began to press. Sestak stonewalled, repeating only he was offered a job and turned it down.

Came then the report of Bauer, which purported to clear up the conflicting statements.

What had happened, we were told, was that President Clinton, at the behest of Rahm, called Sestak to urge him not to run against Arlen Specter, but to stay in the House, adding that Joe might serve on the president's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board. Sestak hastily confirmed that this was the "job" he had been offered — in a one-minute exchange in a single conversation with Clinton.

No one else, says Sestak, contacted him with any offer any time.

Bauer's report appeared to put the matter to rest. For PFIAB is a non-paying advisory board. Thus, Sestak had not really been offered a job, and even the seat on the PFIAB board had been but a suggestion by Clinton.

The story has now begun to crumble. First, a seat on the prestigious PFIAB, with access to the nation's secrets and a valid claim to be an adviser to the president, is certainly a thing of value. For the White House to offer it to get Sestak not to run would appear a clear violation of the anti-bribery statute.

Second, as columnist Byron York reports, members of Congress are not permitted to sit on presidential boards. Clinton was suggesting that Sestak take a slot on PFIAB, which Joe could not take as long as he stayed in Congress, which Clinton was urging him to do.

Is it possible Rahm and Clinton did not know of this prohibition?

Another problem has arisen with the Bauer report. Sestak insists the one-minute chat with Clinton was it. Not before, not during the Clinton call, not after, did anyone from the White House talk to him about not running.

But the report says "efforts" were made to determine if Sestak would be interested in serving on a presidential board "in June and July of 2009."

This suggests multiple White House contacts with Sestak.

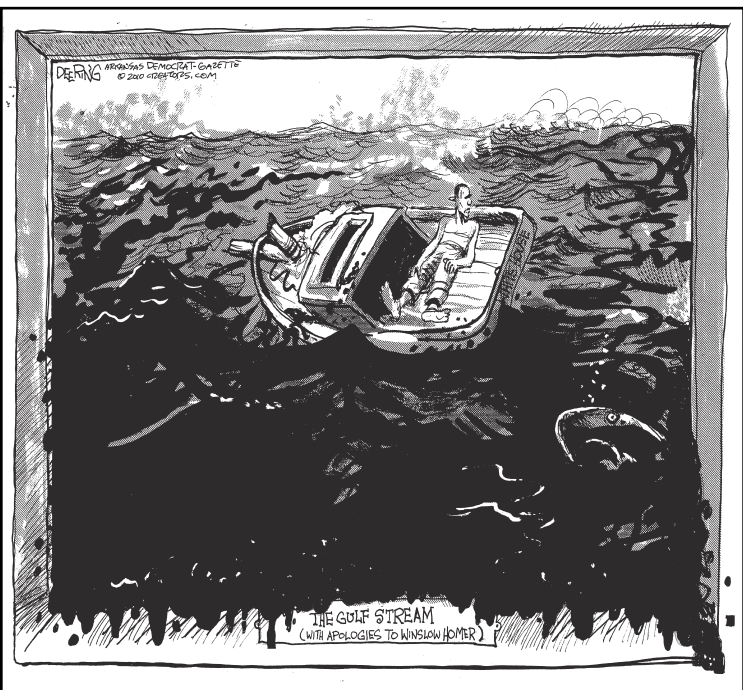

Who else talked to Joe? Another emissary like Clinton? What arguments did they use to persuade Sestak not to run, if they did not offer him something? For Joe was deeply angered at having been passed over by the White House in his planned run for a Senate seat in favor of a GOP reject like Arlen Specter.

The White House claims Obama knew nothing about any of this.

But is it credible that White House Chief of Staff Rahm colluded with ex-President Clinton to get Sestak out of the Pennsylvania Senate race and the president of the United States was left in the dark?

Not to be a cynic, but the Rahm-Clinton-Sestak-PFIAB story rings of a concoction upon which all agreed — to get the White House off the sticky wicket onto which Joe's earlier honesty had placed the West Wing.

This thing could metastasize, big-time.

Theory being nibbled to death by facts

GEORGE WILL

WASHINGTON — Concerning the job numbers from May, one can almost echo Henry James' exclamation after examining letters pertaining to Lord Byron's incest: "Nauseating, perhaps, but how quite inexpressibly significant." Except that the May numbers' significance can be expressed: A theory is being nibbled to death by facts.

Private-sector job creation almost stopped in May. The 41,000 jobs created were dwarfed by the 411,000 temporary and low-wage government jobs needed to administer the census.

Last year's stimulus having failed to hold unemployment below 8 percent as predicted, Barack Obama might advocate another stimulus — amending Article I, Section 2 of the Constitution, which mandates a census every 10 years. If it were every year, he could take credit for creating 564,000 — the current number of census takers — permanent jobs.

May's 41,000 jobs were one-fifth of the April number and substantially fewer than half the number needed to keep pace with the normal growth of the labor force. This is evidence against the theory that a growing government can be counted on to produce prosperity because a government dollar spent has a reliable multiplier effect as it ripples through the economy from which the government took the dollar.

Today's evidence suggesting sluggish job creation might give pause to a less confident person than Obama. But pauses are not in his repertoire of governance. Instead, yielding to what must be a metabolic urge toward statism, he says the Gulf oil spill is yet another reason for yet another explosion of government's control of economic life.

The spill supposedly makes it urgent to adopt a large tax increase in the form of cap-and-trade energy legislation, which also is climate legislation, the primary purpose of which is, or once was, to combat global warming, such as it is.

At any time, some economic conditions would be better than others, but the more certainty about conditions the better. Today investors and employers are certain that uncertainties are multiplying.

They are uncertain about when interest rates will rise, and by how much. They do not know how badly the economy will be burdened by the expiration, approximately 200 days from now, of the Bush tax cuts on high earners — aka investors and employers. They know the costs of Obamacare will be higher than was advertised, but not how much higher. They do not know the potential costs of cap-and-trade and other energy policies. They do not know if "card check" — abolition of the right of secret ballot elections in unionization decisions — will pass, or how much the economy will be injured by making unions more muscular. They do not know how the functioning of the financial sector will be altered and impeded by the many new regulatory rules and agencies created by the financial reform legislation. The economy has become dependent on government stimulation of demand, and no one knows what will happen as the stimulus spending wanes.

Uncertainty is a consequence of hyperkinetic government, which is a consequence of the governmental confidence that is a consequence of progressivism. The premise of progressivism is that all will be well if enough power is concentrated in Washington, and enough Washington power is concentrated in the executive branch, and enough really clever experts are concentrated in the executive branch. This is why the government's perceived impotence concerning the Gulf oil spill is subversive of the Obama administration's master narrative.

Obama is the first president whose presidential campaign was his qualification for the office he sought. He almost said so on Sept. 1, 2008, as a large hurricane made landfall on the Gulf Coast. Megan McArdle of the Atlantic has resurrected Obama's answer when he was asked if could handle such a crisis.

Using perhaps the royal plural — a harbinger of grandiosity to come — Obama cited the size, cost and complexity of his campaign: "Our ability to manage large systems and to execute, I think, has been made clear over the last couple of years," and "indicates the degree to which we can provide the kinds of support and good service that the American people expect."

Progressives generally, and Obama especially, encourage expectations as large as the 1,428-page (cap-and-trade), 1,566-page (financial reform) and 2,409-page (health care) bills they churn out as "comprehensive" solutions to this and that. For a proper progressive, anything short of a "comprehensive" solution to, say, the problem of illegal immigration is unworthy of consideration. For today's progressive president, the prospect of a jobless recovery is a comprehensive nightmare.

Farmer in cow abuse case pleads not guilty

MARYSVILLE (AP) — An Ohio dairy farm worker accused of abusing cows in an undercover video has pleaded not guilty to 12 counts of cruelty to animals. An attorney for 25-year-old Billy Joe Gregg Jr. entered the plea Wednesday, and Gregg appeared on a video conference Thursday in a separate court to pleaded not guilty to a felony gun charge. An animal welfare group says video it recorded for an undercover investigation showed Gregg and others beating cows with crowbars and poking them with pitchforks at Conklin Dairy Farms Inc. The farm has condemned the video footage and says it fired Gregg, who remains in jail on $100,000 bond. A trial for the animal cruelty charges is scheduled for Aug. 16.

Vote ends Saturday for statue in US Capitol

COLUMBUS (AP) — Ohioans have until Saturday to vote for a new statue that will represent their state in the U.S. Capitol’s Statuary Hall. That’s when voting ends at the Statehouse in Columbus and at 35 other sites affiliated with the Ohio Historical Society, the Cincinnati Museum Center and the Cleveland-based Western Reserve Historical Society. Results will be announced in late July. The state is seeking to replace the statue of William Allen, a 19th century congressman and governor who supported Southern slave owners and portrayed blacks as savages. Among the finalists: inventor Thomas Edison, athlete Jesse Owens, writer Harriet Beecher Stowe and the Wright brothers. Ballots also may be downloaded at www.legacyforohio.org and mailed or e-mailed for tabulating.

Defamation cases apply to nonresidents

COLUMBUS (AP) — The Ohio Supreme Court says businesses can pursue defamation lawsuits against residents of other states who disparage their products on the Internet. In a 4-2 decision Thursday, the justices said a Knox County court was wrong not to take up a case in which a Virginia man posted negative comments about Kauffman Racing Equipment. Scott Roberts posted critical comments on racing-related websites after the Ohio company declined to refund $3,000 for what he called a defective engine block. Justice Paul Pfeifer, writing for the majority, said Ohio courts could hear the case because Roberts’ comments were viewed by Ohioans. Justices Terrence O’Donnell and Judith Ann Lanzinger dissented, say Roberts’ statements fell short of the legal standard to establish a strong connection to Ohio.

Bipartisan panel ready to meet on budget

COLUMBUS (AP) — Republicans and Democrats who are on a panel to find solutions to Ohio’s looming state budget deficit finally appear ready to meet, nearly a year after the group was formed. Sen. Shannon Jones, a Republican from Springboro, sent a letter Wednesday to fellow commission members proposing that the six-member committee meet June 29, with a second meeting July 7. Key Democrats, including state Sen. Dale Miller of Cleveland, say the dates are doable. Catherine Turcer of the government watchdog group Ohio Citizen Action blames election-year politics for the 11-month delay. Ohio faces an estimated $8 billion hole in the 2012-2013 budget. Filling the hole won’t be easy because the state can’t count on federal stimulus funds and other one-time state money that was used to balance the current $50.5 billion budget.

Dayton wants money owed in unpaid tickets

DAYTON (AP) — The city of Dayton is going after motorists who have unpaid traffic tickets for running red lights. City Manager Tim Riordan says he gave the OK for staff to pursue legal means against more than 170 people or businesses that have five or more unpaid tickets. He says civil suits are as far as the city will go, for now. Dayton has nearly $4 million in unpaid fines since cameras were installed in 2003 to catch drivers who run red lights. The city is owed about $1.3 million, the rest is owed to Redflex, an Arizona-based company that installed and maintains the cameras.

Sextuplets are born in Columbus

COLUMBUS (AP) — The father of sextuplets born in Ohio says he might have to work some overtime to support his new family. Rozonno McGhee of Columbus says he’s a proud and happy new dad.

The 30-year-old carpet cleaning specialist spoke Wednesday, hours after his wife Mia gave birth by cesarean section to four boys and two girls at Ohio State University Medical Center. A team of about 50 medical staff members oversaw the delivery.

The first baby weighed in at a fraction over 2 pounds and the smallest at 1 pound, 12 ounces. The babies will remain at the hospital for about three months as physicians monitor them for any health problems. Fewer than 200 deliveries of sextuplets have occurred in the United States. It’s only the second in Ohio.

Teachers sue Cleveland school district

CLEVELAND (AP) — A union representing Cleveland teachers has filed a lawsuit against the city school district seeking to stop a plan that will require hundreds of teachers to reapply for their jobs.

Union leaders say the plan by school CEO Eugene Sanders needs to follow procedures spelled out in their contract. Sanders accuses the union of clinging to a system that fills positions by seniority. The plan calls for removing teachers at 14 elementary schools and eight high schools and forcing them to reapply for jobs. Teachers who don’t reapply will remain with the district but will lose a chance to try for specific positions. The move comes at a time when the district is trying to close a $20.9 million budget gap and is asking teachers to accept a 4.6 percent pay cut.

Man on 800-mile bike ride to attend reunion

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio (AP) — An Ohio man is on an 800-mile bike ride to attend his 50th high school class reunion in Massachusetts. P eter Noonan of Springfield hit the road May 20 and is expected to arrive Thursday at Deerfield Academy, his old prep school in Deerfield, Mass. The 68-year-old Noonan says he’s in good shape and thought the ride would be a nice way to see the country. But, Noonan says he won’t be cycling back. The bike will be loaded in a car for the trip back to Ohio. Noonan says 800 miles one way is enough to make his point.

Ohio tornado victims overwhelmed by generosity

MILLBURY, Ohio (AP) — Patrol cars have arrived from Akron. School buses are coming from Columbus. Buckets filled with cleaning supplies and boxes of clothes are stacked in a church basement.

Relief workers have been overwhelmed by donations to help those who lost their homes in the tornadoes that hit northwest Ohio last weekend.

One woman was moved to donate a bike after seeing pictures of a child’s bike that had been lodged in to the second floor of a home.

Kari Brackett, who lives in the township that was hit hardest, said she had no excuse but to donate the extra bike.

“Having kids in my home, I know that they would be lost without their bikes,” she said.

A line of storms that ripped through the Midwest over the weekend spawned tornadoes that touched down in Fulton, Ottawa and Wood counties.

The worst damage was southeast of Toledo where five people died and about 100 homes were destroyed or severely damaged by a tornado that cut an 8-mile path through small towns and farm fields late Saturday night.

Hundreds of volunteers have shown up since early Sunday to help clean up debris in fields and yards, some getting on their hands and knees to sift through rubble and look for family pictures, jewelry and anything else salvageable.

Homeowners say it has meant a lot.

“They just can’t believe the help they have received,” said Carolyn Schermbeck, a spokeswoman for Mainstreet Church, one of the collections sites.

The church had so many supplies that it stopped taking donations Tuesday.

The American Red Cross also stopped taking clothing and supplies. It said it’s greatest need now is money to help the storm victims.

On Friday, school bus drivers from Columbus will deliver 10 buses for use this summer at Lake High School, which was destroyed in the storm. The tornado also damaged several of the school district’s buses.

Earlier this week, the University of Akron donated two police cruisers to Lake Township’s police department, which lost six vehicles — half its fleet — in the tornado.

“I’m almost speechless. I can’t thank them enough,” said Lake Township police Chief Mark Hummer. His department’s offices also took a direct blow and were demolished. They’ve now moved into a temporary police station in a former state patrol post.

Judge

Ohio law gives the power of filling judicial vacancies in Ohio courts to the governor. After he was elected, Strickland created the Ohio Judicial Appointments Recommendations Panel to help in the selection process, with at-large and regional members appointed to the panel.

The panel evaluates the qualifications of the applicants who apply for an opening and then make recommendations to the governor, usually giving him three choices. Interviews take place in Columbus. Information about the panel and current vacancies are posted on the OJARP Web site at <http://ojarp.org>.

Tobin talked about the plans for visiting judges previously, noting he and Judge C. Ashley Pike both discussed the idea. He said the Supreme Court was going to appoint three different visiting judges, with one to handle civil cases, one to handle criminal and one to fill in as needed on either side of the docket.

Pike and Tobin also issued a miscellaneous judgment on May 20 giving authority to the Common Pleas Court magistrates to handle some duties allowed by law. On the criminal side, he said the magistrates will be limited to bond hearings, arraignments and initial appearances and misdemeanor cases, if there are any. On the civil side, magistrates can do just about everything except a jury trial (unless both parties of the case agree to allow it).

“I think this setup will work well. With the two judges, there won’t be any delays,” Tobin said.

He first announced his plans to leave the bench last December. He said the governor could decide to appoint whomever is elected in November to serve the remainder of his term until their elected term begins Jan. 1. He could also appoint someone now as interim judge by following the appointment process and selecting someone from those who apply.

Wurst said the amount of time the process takes can vary. East Liverpool Municipal Court Judge Melissa Byers-Emmerling is the Democratic candidate for Tobin’s seat. The Republican candidate is Juvenile Court Magistrate Scott Washam.

If either one of them decided to seek interim appointment to Tobin’s bench, if applications are taken, they would have to resign their current posts before taking the new job. If they lost the election, they would be out of both jobs.

Common Pleas Court judges are paid $121,350, with the county contributing $14,000 of that amount, and the state paying the remaining $107,350.

In the case of visiting judges, if the judge is an active working judge from another county, Columbiana County pays $50 a day for his or her services.

If the visiting judge is retired, the Supreme Court of Ohio pays the cost.

Technically, Tobin already retired at the beginning of this term, his fourth.

The move enabled him to begin drawing his retirement pay from the Ohio Public Employees Retirement System in 2005 besides receiving his salary as a full-time working judge.

One man was found with a baggie of suspected heroin, while another man was found with a syringe. A woman with them had both a baggie of suspected heroin and two syringes with the caps on hidden in her bra.

Beeson said the DEA will be processing the suspected drugs and filing any charges against the three people, who were released for now.

The three people reportedly paid the taxi driver $80 cash to make the trip to Youngstown. At this time, it is not believed the driver will face charges.

Besides Salem police, both Perry Township police and the DEA agents were involved in the stop.

mentary library/media specialist; and accepted the retirement of fifth-grade teacher Susan Smith, who has been with the district for 17 years.

The board also approved 4-1 to hire Jackie Sanor, currently an interpreter at the school through the ESC, as a half-time sign language teacher for the 2010-2011 school year. Board President John Zehentbauer cast the dissenting vote.

Additionally the board approved a short-term contract with Waypoint Medicaid Administrative Services to investigate free of charge the feasibility of recovering Medicaid funding for students with special needs to which the district is entitled a portion.

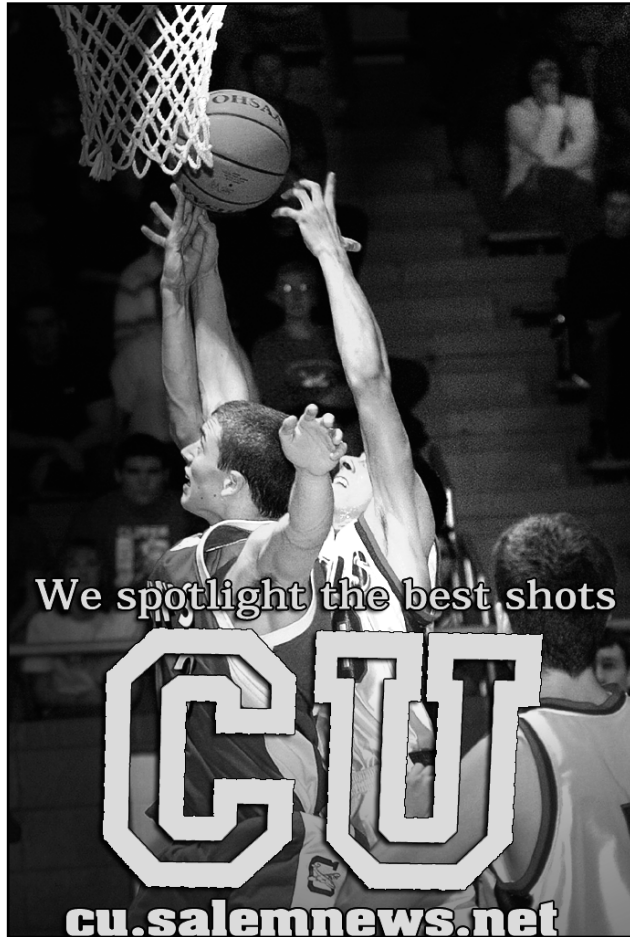

Rinto noted that after the findings are presented, the board will have the opportunity to pursue the recovery of the funds at a cost of 7 percent of the findings.

Also at the meeting, high school Principal Bill Young reported that intervention specialist and student advisor Betty Whiteleather received the Tom Downing Ruritan Award for community service and dedication to students; the middle and high school received the Buckeye Best Healthy School Award for the fourth consecutive year; and school board member Sue Drotleff received the Ohio High School Athletic Association (OHSAA) State Award for Sportsman, Ethics & Integrity.

A special board meeting is scheduled for 8 a.m. June 24 in the high school library.

The next regular board meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. July 8 in the high school library.

HOROSCOPE

BY HOLIDAY MATHIS
FRIDAY, JUNE 11
 Mercury in Gemini forms a squared angle to Mars in Virgo. Keep it simple. Less is more, so leave well enough alone. All it takes is one dumb move to upset the delicate social balance, so in most cases it's best to do and say nothing. Even the most clear-cut arrangement can get complicated by a small mistake or oversight. Observe and wait.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). A loved one is likely to go on and on about something that doesn't interest you in the least. Then this person doesn't seem to want to listen when it's your turn. It's a sign that you need to find some common ground -- and fast!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Deadlines whiz by. It could be something like forgetting to put the garbage can out on the pickup day, missing the mailman or forgetting to call someone on a birthday. The effect will be minor.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You'll be making a memory, so do it up in a way you'll be proud of later when you look back. If you surround yourself with the people who cheer you on, this happens quite naturally.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). There's someone you'd like to contact, but you'll have trouble hooking up for the call. It will probably seem like this isn't meant to be. But really, it's just a matter of timing. Try again next week.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You'll accept your loved one as he is and in the process realize he's not exactly who you thought he was, or who you wanted him to be. And yet, it's going to work out. All is perfect.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Everyone needs your kindness. The one who looks like he has it all together might actually be struggling in ways you wouldn't imagine. And the one who's not so nice will be put into place by your calm, peaceful attitude.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). If you and a loved one were stranded on a desert island, what would you do together? The conversations you would have and the games you would play are excellent activities for today. Spoil each other with attention.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Those who don't warm up to many people will feel safe around you. It's not so much what you say but the way you say things that is most effective. Your connection with a Pisces is especially nice.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). There is something in the way you deal with people that intimidates a colleague. This person is used to taking a softer and more round-about route. You, on the other hand, prefer to get to the point.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). An expert will give you some constructive criticism. Some would be defensive in hearing these notes. However, if you apply them, your positive results will be immediate.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Your contribution to a young person's life may not be appreciated in the moment, or even in the year. But you can be sure that your doing the right thing makes a difference.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). In the name of being agreeable, you might ignore the irritating thing your loved one is doing. Indeed, the behavior might end on its own. But if it doesn't by Monday, lovingly bring it up.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (June 11). Your influence grows through the year. In July, you'll curb your ambition in order to tend to the needs of loved ones, especially those younger than you. This generosity you bestow will have a long-term impact on the lives of others. A financial perk comes in August. New transportation makes life easier in October. Cancer and Scorpio people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 5, 10, 25, 49 and 31.

The look of your lawn

Heloise

Dear Readers: How does your lawn look? Here are some helpful hints for MAINTAINING A HEALTHY LAWN.

When watering the lawn, give it a good soaking. Watering for too short a time or not using enough water leads to shallow, weaker roots. Watering at night or very early in the morning is better for the lawn and your water bill, because less water will be lost to evaporation.

Before mowing, look at the lawn to check for disease. Patches that are darker, droopy, wilted, bald or brown can signal that there may be disease. Remember that some cooler-season grasses will start to brown during the hot summer months.

The lawn does go through cycles to protect it from drought and excessive heat. This is normal, and one reason that the lawn might be brown.

Sharpen your lawn-mower blades once a year; dull blades don't cut the grass well!

If you have specific questions about your lawn, contact a plant nursery, cooperative extension service or your local university's plant-pathology department. — Heloise

TRAVEL HINT

Dear Heloise: I was cutting down my travel file and discovered that many of the road maps I had didn't have a date on the front of them, especially those from hotel chains. A date would be so helpful in deciding which ones were outdated. — Sally in New Mexico

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

Dear Heloise: I worked in a veterinarian clinic for many years, and the doctor never had time to drink coffee. Then he took in a partner, and the first thing he did was buy a coffee maker, and I learned to make coffee. I don't drink it, and my husband uses instant.

After a while, the coffeepot became clogged with mineral deposits, and I decided to clean it with vinegar. Well, apparently I didn't get it rinsed out, and when the vet took a drink, he spit it out. He didn't care for my "pickled coffee"! — Joan Huddleston, Laurel, Neb.

I love vinegar, but vinegary coffee is not on my "tasty" list! For most cleaning jobs, use the cheap white or cider vinegar, and in cooking and foods, use the wine, malt and balsamic varieties. Soooo many vinegars to choose from! — Heloise

Commuter torn between boss and much closer job

DEAR ABBY: I am 23 years old and I adore my job and my boss. There is only one problem — I must commute more than an hour each way, and the drive (especially with gas prices these days) is killing me. I have been with the company for more than a year, and I recently heard that the parent corporation is hiring for a position similar to mine in the town that I live in. I desperately want to apply for the transfer, but I have no idea how to approach the subject with my boss, since I feel I owe her so much. She hired me for the position when I was fresh out of college with absolutely no experience. Abby, help me! How do I ask to leave a job that I love? — SATISFIED EMPLOYEE IN VAL-DOSTA, GA.

DEAR EMPLOYEE: You are confusing a business relationship with one that is personal. You are also not the first person to want to leave a job because the commute is tiring and expensive.

Go to your boss, tell her you heard a position is opening up close to home, and that you would like to transfer for the reasons you told me. Then ask if she will put in a good word for you. When she hears why you want to be closer to home, I'm sure she'll do it.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend, "Jonah," and I share a loving and fun relationship. Apparently, I am better than average looking. I know this because people constantly ask my boyfriend, "Wow, how did you get her?" or, "Man, you must pay her to date you!" I always give Jonah hugs and tell him how attracted I am to him, which is true. My problem is the attention I've been receiving has started to affect HIM. Now he makes comments about how fat he is (he's not), or that his skin is bad (everyone gets zits!), or that I should leave him for someone "better" looking. Abby, I love this man and want to marry him. How do I convince Jonah that he's my hot, sexy boyfriend whom I love to pieces? — HOT MAMA IN OREGON

DEAR HOT MAMA: I can't script you, but when Jonah starts putting himself down, try something like this: "You're not giving yourself — or me — enough credit. Life isn't a beauty contest. You appeal to me on MANY levels, and your looks are just part of the reason I'm attracted to you. Those other men are jealous of what we have together, and none of them can hold a candle to you."

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for a year. It's my second marriage and his first. Because we were unable to afford a wedding at the time, we married at the courthouse. We are now having a wedding so we can share this with our family and friends. Some of our friends and family think we are wasting money or looking for gifts. We have not registered anywhere and have made no gift requests. Are we making a mistake? Should we simply have taken the money we're spending on this special day and put it toward a trip for us? — BLUSHING BRIDE IN MICHIGAN

DEAR BLUSHING BRIDE: Your mistake may have been in calling your celebration a "wedding." If you had called it a "renewal of vows with family and friends" it might have been more warmly received. As to whether you should have taken the money you're spending and used it for a honeymoon, I think it's a little late to be second-guessing yourself — don't you?

Dry eyes promote excessive tears

Dr. Donohue

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have dry eyes. It's very disturbing, because they have induced an increased tear production, and the tears interfere with my vision. I do use artificial tears, but they help only for a short while. Can you provide any advice? — F.Z.

ANSWER: It sounds contradictory to say that dry eyes cause watery eyes. But it's true. Dry eyes shift the tear glands into high gear, and they produce torrents of tears. Treating the tearing hinges on finding the cause for your dry eyes.

Medicines sometimes are to blame. Drugs used for many digestive problems, some antidepressants, Parkinson's disease medicines and sleeping pills are only a few of the drugs that dry the eyes.

Illnesses that do it include thyroid gland disorders, psoriasis, rosacea and Sjogren's (SHOW-grins) syndrome. You might not be familiar with Sjogren's, but it's not such a rare thing. It's an immune attack on the tear glands, the salivary glands or both. When both are under attack, as they frequently are in this illness, the result is dry eyes and dry mouth.

You might try a different brand of artificial tears, or you could try artificial tears without any preservatives. Those kinds of tears are expensive. Restasis, a prescription medicine, often can lead to a satisfactory solution to the dry-eyes problem.

You can't successfully treat this condition on your own. You need the help of an eye doctor to pinpoint the problem and suggest the best treatment for you. It could be that dry eyes aren't the reason for your watery eyes. Perhaps you have an entirely different cause, such as a blocked tear duct. That duct drains tears from the eyes. A plugged duct doesn't, and tears stream down the cheeks. An eye doctor often can unplug the duct with a simple office procedure.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I went to give blood at the Red Cross. The receiving bottle had only an inch of blood and then bubbled. They finally stopped the procedure and said, "We are not going to get a pint from you." My heartbeat is 58, and I read where it should be 60 to 100. Is that the reason I couldn't produce a pint of blood? I am not athletic. What can I do to produce more blood? — J.A.

ANSWER: There's nothing wrong with you. The needle or the tube inserted in your vein abutted against the vein wall. Blood couldn't get through. A heartbeat of 58 is no danger if you have no symptoms, and you don't.

Something missing in relationship

Annie's Mailbox

Dear Annie: I am 60 and have been in a relationship with "James" for nine years. He is 76 and a kind man. When we met, his wife had died six weeks earlier. I had been widowed for four years.

We live together in my home. I never go to his. James never treats me as a wife because we are not married. My children are OK with our relationship. His children, however, have a hard time accepting me. Only one of his daughters treats me nicely.

When I met James, he felt like a life-saver. We've had great times together, but when it comes to his kids, I'm always left out. We also have no sex life. What do you suggest I do? I don't want to be fighting all the time, yet I don't want to be alone. It's also very hard to find a good man. — Frustrated

Dear Frustrated: If James began seeing you six weeks after his wife died, we can understand why his children might have had a hard time accepting you. And the fact that after nine years he doesn't treat you as a lifetime partner indicates he still is not fully committed to you. His children can see that and use it to drive a wedge. If James doesn't insist that they show you more respect, nothing will change.

One of the major mistakes a woman can make is believing her life is only worthwhile if there is a man in it. Don't be so afraid to be alone that you remain in a relationship that doesn't make you happy.

Dear Annie: "It's Cold in Maine" was upset with her granddaughter's language on Facebook. One would think a 21-year-old college student would be interested in projecting a more professional attitude on a Facebook page that might be seen by future employers. There will always be someone who will pull photos and comments out of cyberspace and often at the most inopportune time, ruining that job or promotion they worked so hard for. Skeletons have a way of falling out the closet.

We grew up in a different time. Most parents want their children to be brighter, smarter and better educated than they were, simply because it will take that much more knowledge and money to support them through life in the manner they would like. I'd like to share some great wisdom that my mother gave me:

1. I cannot stand between you and what will hurt you as you travel through life.
2. Think twice before you speak.
3. Never put anything in writing that will come back to haunt you.
4. Fools' names and fools' faces are often seen in public places. — Chicago Dear Chicago: Excellent advice for everyone. Thank you.
