The Pride of Salem

Salem High School's new band director, Hannah McFarland, directs her troops as they practice their pregame show in the high school parking lot Thursday afternoon. The band will make its debut under McFarland and assistant band director Julianne Piatt during the Grande Parade set for 6 p.m. Saturday. The band also plans to perform during the Jamboree Scrimmage football game between Salem and East Liverpool at Reilly Stadium on Aug. 18, with the first varsity football game set for Aug. 25 at home against LaBrae. Parade spectators asked to wear red, white and blue, bring flags to wave

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

SALEM — Salem Grande Parade officials are asking spectators to wear their patriotic red, white and blue and bring small American flags to wave as part of this year's parade theme, "Celebrating Salem's Heritage & Freedom."

The parade steps off at 6 p.m. Saturday from Union Avenue, traveling west on State Street through the downtown area, turning north on Ellsworth Avenue and disbanding at Second Street.

Salem Area Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Audrey Null said they've got 85 units signed up to march and they're expecting the parade to last at least an hour.

The Salem High School Marching Band "Pride of Salem" will kick off its debut with new director and band alumnus Hannah McFarland during the parade.

Girl scouts and boy scouts will carry flags and any citizens interested can join the parade to carry a flag. Anyone interested in walking with a flag should be at the First Christian Church on East Sixth Street by 5:15 p.m. Saturday.

In keeping with the patriotic theme, this year's parade will honor World War II veterans in recognition of the 70th anniversary of the war for the United States. A 14-foot flatbed courtesy of Karl Griggs from KLG in Salem will carry the participating World War II veterans.

The veterans to be honored include: Placido Bongiovanni, Glen Paulin, Bill Galchick, Tony Viola, Roy Guthrie, Ray Greenisen, Charles Hawkins and Elmer Reed, all of Salem; Joseph Kowalski of Florida; Carl Miller of Carrollton; and Larry Page and Ilene Hall, both of Canton. Hall is the only woman in the group.

The parade is part of the Salem International Festival which kicks off at 5 p.m. today in the municipal lot off of Pershing Street and Penn Avenue and continues at 3 p.m. Saturday, featuring a variety of ethnic food offerings and entertainment.

Mayor vetoes Internet cafe ordinance

Wolford wants device fee included in law

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

SALEM — Mayor Jerry Wolford used his veto power Thursday to keep the recently passed Internet cafe ordinance from becoming law, saying he's against elimination of the annual $500 terminal device fee.

"I approve of the spirit of the ordinance — I don't approve of the deletion of the terminal fee from $500 to zero. I think it needs to be revisited," Wolford said.

City council unanimously approved the regulations for sweepstakes Internet cafe businesses on Aug. 2 with the emergency clause in place, not long after the Rules & Ordinances Committee of city council voted to amend the legislation in its meeting, also on Aug. 2.

Committee member Councilwoman Mary Ann Dzuracky moved to recommend the legislation to council, but without the $500 per terminal fee, after the owner of one of the cafes said the fee would hurt his business.

She suggested just going with the $5,000 annual fee for now, adding they could revisit the terminal fee later if necessary. Committee member Councilman K. Bret Apple agreed. All three committee members, including Committee Chair Councilman John Berlin, voted for the measure minus the per machine fee. All seven council members voted for the legislation as presented, without the terminal fee.

State law allows the mayor to veto an ordinance or resolution within 10 days after its passage or adoption and return it with his objections to the legislative authority, or if it's not in session, to the next regular meeting. Council is taking its August recess and voted to cancel the meeting that would have been set for Aug. 16. The next council meeting isn't scheduled until Sept. 6.

When the mayor vetoes legislation and returns it with his objections, the legislative authority may, after 10 days, reconsider it and vote to approve it by two-thirds vote of all the members. According to Wolford, six council members would need to vote in favor to override his veto.

In his written objections, he called the removal of the fee by Berlin's committee an "eleventh hour act" which will cost the city more than $48,000 in fees, based on an estimated 24 devices in each of the four Internet cafes already established in the city.

During a previous committee meeting, an employee of an Internet cafe explained that

Lewis Refuse owner buys part of old Colfor site

By LARRY SHIELDS
Staff Writer

SALEM — Four acres and two industrial buildings at 887 S. Broadway Ave. were purchased by Lewis Refuse of Kensington for $190,000 at an absolute auction on Thursday.

The property, formerly home to Colfor Mfg., was sold by RD Swindell Enterprises Inc.

Kiko Auctions registered 70 bidders from Pennsylvania and Ohio.

A number of pieces of heavy equipment including, lifts, a dozer, frontend loader, crane and forklifts were also auctioned off separately.

Lewis Refuse owner Al Lewis said his plans are tentative. "I'm really not sure yet, recycling if anything," he said about the property use adding the facility could be used for sorting recycled materials.

Lewis holds the recycling contract at the Salem recycling site on South Ellsworth Avenue, which is one of the most active in the Carroll-Columbiana-Harrison County Solid Waste District.

There was also the possibility of moving some or all of the company's Kensington operations, including all 15 refuse trucks, to Salem.

United Local OKs online work for calamity days

By KEVIN HOWELL
Staff Writer

HANOVERTON — The United Local school board Thursday night approved a resolution allowing the district to offer online course work in lieu of excess calamity days this school year. The board approved 3-1 the measure that will provide students the opportunity to complete their lessons online, or on a hard copy for those without Internet access, within two weeks following up to three missed days over the five permitted by the state.

Board President Sue Drotleff cast the dissenting vote, expressing displeasure with the extended length of time students will have to complete assignments and the logistics of determining who has computer access. Board member Lora Chestnut was absent.

Schools Superintendent RuthAnn Rinto noted that the teachers union has already approved the measure.

In other business, David Starcher, building and grounds supervisor, reported that his staff is using new cleaning equipment to clean restrooms. The machine spray washes and vacuum dries the facilities at the building, eliminating the wiping and mopping that often spreads the dirt and germs, he said. He also noted that the machine enables its user to clean one restroom in approximately 15 to 20 minutes, cutting almost in half the time it had taken prior.

Also at the meeting, the board renewed its contract with Don Harrison as water supply technical supervisor at a cost of $800 per year and $10 per hour for emergency service for three years effective Aug. 1; and renewed its rental agreement with the Columbiana County Community Action Agency for the United Head Start preschool program at the campus for $1,100 per month.

The board also approved payment of $17 per hour up to $200 (chairman up to $250) to faculty members on the state required Local Professional Development Committee (LPDC), which meets monthly to review certificated staff's continuing education hours and completed course work. Teachers Curtis Jones and Brenda Sarchet, as well as a third one to be named later, will serve on the committee.

The board approved foreign exchange student 15-year-old Maximilian Alber of Hamburg, Germany, who will stay in Winona with the Howard and Karina Martin family.

Rinto noted to the board that educational consultant Ron Victor will be assisting the levy committee during the upcoming campaign to pass the school's 3.92-mill, 37-year bond issue in November to build a new school. Victor will be paid through the committee and architect.

Salem Historical Society plans ethnic displays

SALEM — To further promote the varied ethnic backgrounds of Salem residents, the Salem Historical Society is holding an exhibit in the Museum building showcasing some of these nationalities.

A special addition to any previous exhibits are items from the Guatemalans, the "new guys in town." Sister Mary Ann from St. Paul's is organizing the display from this country.

Italy, Romania, Slovak, and England all are among the other countries represented, and from our country, authentic Native American artifacts. Eight different cultures will be represented.

Hours are Friday evening, 5 to 8 p.m., Saturday from 2 to 5 p.m., and Sunday during our regular tour time of 1 to 4 p.m. On Friday and Saturday, Elaine Reiter will be representing Lucretia Canja, Romania heroine of the Olt, and former resident of Salem. Admission is the alley entrance for this free exhibit.

We celebrate Salem's diversity. As you visit the exhibits in the Meeting Room, the recently-restored player piano will provide a serenade of ethnic music.

Pa. man indicted for failure to appear

LISBON — A man who failed to appear in March to face charges for allegedly taking a loaded handgun into the Platinum Bar in Wellsville, was served a secret indictment issued by the Columbiana County grand jury. Michael R. Motton, 21, Ambridge, Pa., was served a secret indictment for failure to appear on the charge Wednesday in Beaver County, Pa. According to court documents, Motton was supposed to appear March 14 as the defendant for a fourth-degree felony for illegal possession of a firearm in a liquor establishment and failed to do so. The grand jury issued a secret indictment in March for failure to appear on a felony charge. Motton is now scheduled to appear before Judge C. Ashley Pike on Friday on the original charge, which stemmed from his alleged possession of a loaded Glock .45-caliber handgun in the front pocket of his hooded sweatshirt on Nov. 21.

POLICE REPORTS

SALEM
— A man in the 700 block of Prospect Street, called at 1:13 a.m. Thursday to report possible gunshots. He said he heard what sounded like a gunshot, then saw a man wearing dark clothing run from the area. Officers checked around, but didn't find anything.
— A woman in the 700 block of East Fifth Street, called at 9:02 p.m. Wednesday to report a suspicious person. An officer located the man sitting in the middle of an alley. He said he was just talking on his phone, but agreed to move to avoid further problems.
— Police were called at 9:02 p.m. Wednesday to a parking lot on West State Street for a reckless driver, with officers met by several patrons of Dunkin Donuts who claimed a vehicle passed them in excess of 70 mph in Perry Township driving recklessly. They said the vehicle swerved toward a pedestrian walking along the sidewalk within the city limits, then pulled into the business and two occupants went inside. The pedestrian was told not much could be done since no one could identify the driver. An officer spoke to the two occupants and told them the error of their ways. The report said the officer also contacted immigration in regard to the two occupants, but nothing was going to be done at this time.
— A woman reported at 7:34 p.m. Wednesday that while at Reilly Stadium she found an ignition key with remote that fits a Mercedes.
— An anonymous caller at 7:34 p.m. Wednesday reported a loud explosion in the 800 block of Newgarden Avenue. An officer checked the area and everything appeared to be okay.
— Michael Fisher, 36, of 264 Brookly Ave., was cited for failure to assure clear distance after his northbound van on Sharp Avenue struck the rear of a northbound car driven by John A. Tolson, 26, of 36580 Butcher Road, who had applied his brakes at the West Wilson Street intersection at 6:40 p.m. Wednesday.
— An anonymous person at 5:41 p.m. Wednesday turned in a wallet found in the 100 block of South Broadway Avenue. The owner was contacted to claim it.
— A woman in the 500 block of Aetna Street, called at 5:21 p.m. Wednesday to have police check the well-being of a juvenile. An officer spoke to a mother and son who affirmed all was okay. They had an argument, but both had calmed down.
— Teresa Hoffmeyer, 25, of East Rochester, was cited for left of center after she turned her head to check on her child and her pickup traveled left of center while turning east-bound onto East State Street from Lincoln Avenue, side-swiping the left side of a car driven by Brian Cunningham, 47, of 837 E. Third St., who was in the left turn lane heading west on East State Street at 7:09 p.m. Wednesday.
— A woman called at 4:49 p.m. Wednesday to report a suspicious male in the 900 block of East State Street. An officer located the man near Vine Avenue and he apologized for alarming anyone.
PERRY TOWNSHIP
— Police were called at 1:24 p.m. Wednesday to the 200 block of Idaho Boulevard for a property dispute. All parties were told to stay on their own side of the property line.
— Police were called at 9:34 p.m. Tuesday to the 1200 block of Andrew Avenue for a possible overdose. An officer found a woman took too much of her prescribed medication. She was taken to the emergency room at Salem Community Hospital.
— An officer with help from an Ohio Edison employee moved a tree to open up the northbound lane of traffic on state Route 9 at 6:04 a.m. Tuesday.
— A woman in the 200 block of Idaho Avenue called at 8:47 p.m. Monday to report her neighbor mowed grass and blew the cut grass onto her vehicle.
— A woman in the 600 block of Pidgeon Road reported at 6:39 p.m. Monday that someone used her credit card number and charged over $100 in fraudulent charges.
— Police were called at 4:33 p.m. Monday for a possible suicide attempt at a residence in the 1100 block of Prospect Street. The report said Annette K. Duvall, of 1133 Custody St., was taken into custody for disorderly conduct.
— A caller at 11:37 a.m. Monday reported a son's 4-wheeler stolen out of the grandparents' garage in the 1100 block of Prospect Street Extension, but then the 4-wheeler was retrieved from a residence in the 700 block of Newgarden Avenue. The report said the investigation showed that the 4-wheeler ending up at a Newgarden Avenue property was part of a money dispute with another person.
— Police were called at 1:58 a.m., 2:02 a.m. and 2:04 a.m. Monday to three properties in the 700 block of Cunningham Road for thefts from vehicles. Items missing included $5 worth of change from one vehicle, about $25 in change and cash from another vehicle and coins and CDs valued at $30 from the third vehicle.
— Police responded at 7:56 p.m. Sunday to the 1100 block of Prospect Street for an unruly juvenile, telling the juvenile he had to listen to his guardian.
— Dillon Rhodes, 19, of 587 Florida Ave., and Abigail Pasco, 18, of 2225 Kennedy Drive, were each charged with underage consumption after police stopped a vehicle for several violations at 11:57 p.m. Aug. 6. The passengers were found to be under the age of 21 and under the influence of alcoholic beverages. The driver was given a verbal warning.
— Police were called for a welfare check on a child at 5 p.m. Aug. 6 in the 1200 block of West Perry Street after a resident found a small child wandering around. While the officer was speaking with the child and two other people, the child's mother arrived. She said the child was outside with two other children when she became ill and went inside briefly. While she was inside, the child walked down the street.
— Police received a call at 10:13 a.m. Aug. 6 from Salem Golf Club reporting someone tipped over a port-a-jon on the property during the night.

OURSIDE

Lawmakers need to act like adults

Hard-drinking office holders are the stuff of political lore. More than a few important decisions, both at the state and federal levels, have been made over a couple of shot glasses.

But most of the time, that occurs in private. When alcohol abuse among politicians spills out into the public, sometimes putting constituents in jeopardy, it's time for a reminder about behaving like adults.

Ohio House of Representatives Speaker William G. Batchelder had to issue one a few days ago. The Republican leader quietly called lawmakers from his party together to remind them the voters did not send them to Columbus to engage in "Animal House"-type carousing.

Just during the past few months, some legislators — two representatives and a state senator — have found themselves in the headlines for all the wrong reasons.

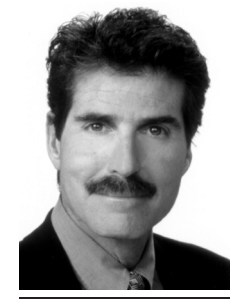

One, former state Rep. Robert Mecklenborg of Hamilton County, hit a sort of jackpot by being arrested for DUI while he had a stripper in his car. Another, state Rep. Jerrod Martin of Beaver Creek, was ticketed for DUI while two children were riding in his car. Finally, state Sen. Kris Jordan of Powell was accused by his wife of physically abusing her after drinking too much (Jordan was not charged).

The vast majority of legislators work hard and conscientiously, avoiding behavior such as public abuse of alcohol because they are mature adults. A handful don't seem to have reached that stage, yet, however.

We assume part of Batchelder's message to his colleagues was that if they choose to misbehave, they're on their own. Responsible legislators should not have to cover for their immature peers — who probably won't be in Columbus very long anyway, once voters learn about their misdeeds.

A government that kills: Mileage standards lead to less-safe cars

JOHN STOSSELL

President Obama has declared that auto companies' fleets must average 54.5 miles per gallon by 2025, almost double the current 27.5. Standing at his side when he made the announcement were executives from the Big Three automakers.

The New York Times reported: "It is an extraordinary shift in the relationship between the companies and Washington. But a lot has happened in the last four years, notably the $80 billion federal bailout of General Motors, Chrysler and scores of their suppliers, which removed any itch for a politically charged battle from the carmakers."

Right. They're happy to agree to stupid rules, since they are now dependent on government favors.

Obama said that under his new rule, "everyone wins. Consumers pay less for fuel, the economy as a whole runs more efficiently."

Sounds impressive, but he didn't mention the costs. The Center for Automotive Research says the new standard will raise the price of cars by about $7,000. You'd need to save a lot on fuel to break even.

But that's not the worst of it. The new rules will kill people.

Sam Kazman of the Competitive Enterprise Institute explained this to me. The MPG standard "has been killing people for the last 30 years," Kazman said.

How can that be?

"It forces cars to be ... made smaller and lighter. ... They are simply worse in just about every type of auto collision."

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration actually backs Kazman up. It estimates that smaller cars are responsible for an additional 2,000 deaths each year.

Imagine that — a government safety agency promotes a rule that kills people.

"Think about the minute risks that agencies like Environmental Protection Agency go into a tizzy about. ... If any private product had a death toll one fraction of what the miles-per-gallon rules cost, that product would have been yanked off the market years ago."

Do we at least end up using less gasoline and saving money?

No, given the increased upfront cost of the car. "It is not clear that it saves people money," Kazman said. "If these technologies in fact save people money, you don't need a government law to force them down people's throats."

Right. We're not stupid.

Bob Deans of the Natural Resources Defense Council, one of America's biggest environmental groups, said that Kazman and I are wrong.

"Cars like the Chevy Cruise — 42 miles per gallon — get top marks on safety. The Ford Focus, more than 40 miles per gallon — top marks in safety. We're getting safer cars, and they're not coming at the expense of fuel efficiency."

Deans added: "By increasing that gas mileage for our auto fleet, we can cut our oil consumption in this country by 4 million barrels per day by 2030. That would almost wipe out our OPEC purchases daily. It will make our country stronger."

But we use oil for lots of things. If we cut gasoline use by a third, unlikely as that would be, we'd still only reduce our fossil fuel use by 7 percent. That does not make much difference for $7,000 a car and 2,000 extra deaths each year.

"It's not necessarily a smaller car that we're talking about," Deans replied. "You look at Chevy Malibu. That is a 3,400-pound car. It's not a small car. It's getting 33-miles to the gallon. We believe Detroit can do this."

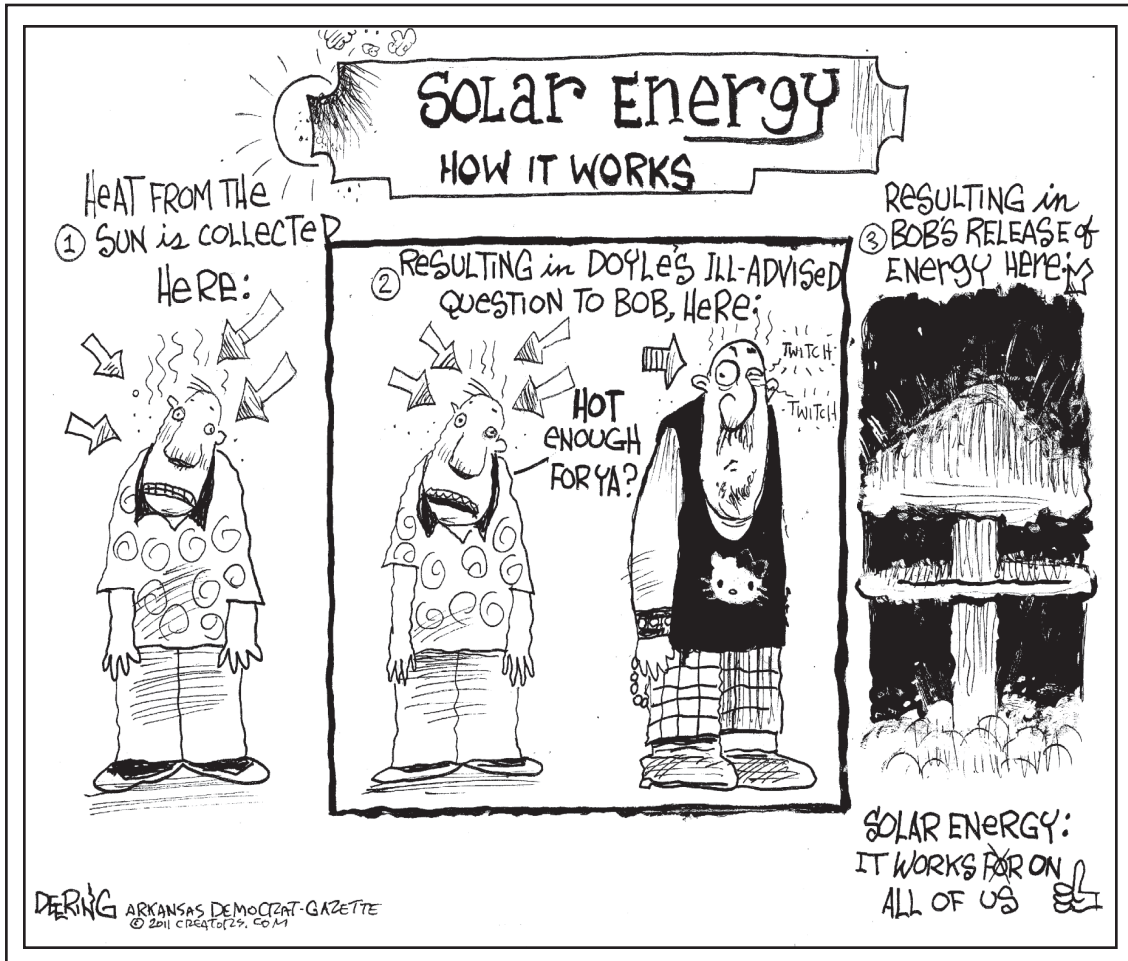

Maybe they can. Maybe they can't. If they could, I'd think they would do it to meet consumer demand. They'd do it without government forcing it on us.

"New technologies can make cars safer," Kazman acknowledged. "The point is, if you put the technologies in a large, heavier car, that car will be safer still. ... None of the proponents of these standards would acknowledge (the lives lost). It's always win-win, and that is nonsense."

Life involves tradeoffs. If we want to minimize deaths from auto accidents, we may use more fuel than we might otherwise use. Who should make that decision, the government? Or you and I?

In the land of the supposedly free, that really should not be a tough question.

Team Obama: Defining weird

KATHLEEN PARKER

Just what is the meaning of weird? It's hard to put a finger on weird when nearly everyone has turned pro, but President Obama is planning to make Mitt Romney the face of "weird."

So go reports that Obama's re-election campaign is plotting a personal assault on Romney to portray him as inauthentic, unprincipled and "weird."

One can say many things about Romney. Shiny as a new penny, smooth as a petra stone, homespun as an Appalachian quilt. But weird?

Only if you were born after 1970. For older Americans, Romney is what we used to know as straight as an arrow, clean as a whistle, the picture of dad in Cleavertown. He's been married to the same woman for decades, raised five sons, has 16 grandchildren, made a lot of money legally, been elected governor in a liberal state and, what else? Oh, yes, he was a missionary during his college years.

By today's standards, this indeed may make Romney weird. (And, yes, he once did put his dog in a cage on top of the car during a family vacation when there apparently wasn't room for him. Can we move on?)

Given the above history, one may assume that weird means uncool, which Romney surely is. He was even uncool as a youth, showing up for his first date with wife Ann in a car with chilled grape juice. It is entirely likely that a President Romney would not convene a beer summit.

But what else might weird mean? It sounds smackingly like code for that which must go unspoken -- that Mormon thing.

Of course Obama would never make such a suggestion. Religion is a private matter, after all, and a man who spent 20 years listening to the raves and rants of the Rev. Jeremiah Wright can't point a finger when it comes to religious preferences.

Obama wouldn't, anyway. That's not who he is. He fundamentally doesn't care what, when, where or how people worship in their own space. Nor do those who would re-elect the president.

But sometimes a great notion comes along, and a subliminal message in a presidential campaign is a terrible thing to waste. Obama, whom John McCain once referred to as "that one," has people all around him dropping "weird" into sentences with Romney. It won't take long for the idea to attach itself to the American psyche, just enough to make some wonder whether they really want a "weird" person as a nominee, especially with all those other Republicans being so thoroughly grounded.

Romney may be challenged legitimately for changing his position on important issues such as abortion. He can be challenged for succumbing to the pledge imperative now demanded of candidates by social conservatives, such as his recent promise to push through a constitutional amendment declaring marriage as between a man and woman.

He is also a sitting duck on health care. Obama can't stop reminding Americans that he modeled his plan on the program Romney pushed through in Massachusetts when he was governor.

These are for Romney to explain, but changing one's mind is no grounds for disqualification. Nor is being uncool or "weird," or for that matter, being Mormon. We've become enamored in this country of the idea that presidents have to be someone with whom you'd like to have a beer, an impossible standard if you happen to be Mormon, and a dumb standard besides.

It is also conventional wisdom that the next leader is always the opposite of the previous. If 2008 was the season for cool, then 2012 may be a time for uncool. Given the weird attacks from Team Obama, it appears that the president fears as much.

No injuries reported during armed standoff

By JO ANN BOBBY-GILBERT
Staff Writer

SALINEVILLE — No one was hurt during a standoff last night at a home on Haiti Road.

Eventually, the woman involved was arrested on state Route 39 about a quarter-mile away. It is believed she snuck out the back of the small, one-story house and went through the woods before being picked up by authorities.

The woman kept police at bay for a couple hours. Unconfirmed reports indicated police initially responded to a domestic situation.

Allen Haueter, the county's chief deputy sheriff, said he and Sheriff Ray Stone were both at home when they were called to a reported burglary in Columbiana.

They were en route there when they got a report that a woman was breaking out windows at the Haiti Road home.

Haueter responded along with a female Salineville officer. As they were driving up to the house, they heard the first shot. They then heard some men who were outside yelling that she was shooting.

As the two officers came to the house, the woman came to a window. Haueter told her to come outside and she reportedly said, "That's not going to happen."

She then fired at Haueter and the other officer, missing them and narrowly missing a lady in a house across the street, the chief deputy said.

The woman then backed away from the window and turned off all the lights, Haueter said. From that point on, police heard no response from her.

The county sheriff's special response team (SRT) responded along with police from Salineville and Lisbon, the highway patrol and Highlandtown firefighters.

A call was made for Mahoning County's armored truck but the situation was resolved before it arrived.

During the standoff, an officer used a bullhorn to communicate with the woman, saying things like, "Bonnie, come out and talk to us," and, "Is there anybody you want to talk to."

Reportedly, the woman's daughter was on the way from her home in West Virginia.

When the SRT team started approaching the back door, they got a call that a woman in a camouflage hoodie was walking on Route 39. Patrol trooper Todd Jester and patrol Sgt. Chuck Land responded and took her into custody.

The woman, who did not have a weapon on her, was taken into custody without incident. Her only injury was a cut on her wrist.

Fee

customers buy sweepstakes cards and then put them in the machines to play games. Each card has predetermined prizes, sort of like an instant lottery ticket. The device fee would have been on each machine.

Wolford said city Planning & Zoning Officer Patrick Morrissey worked hard on the legislation and surveyed 15 northeast Ohio communities with similar ordinances, noting all of them charged terminal device fees. Many of the device fees ranged from $30 to $45 per month, with some charging flat fees of $500 per year for each device. He said the city of Columbiana doesn't allow the Internet cafes and Alliance is currently considering legislation.

Wolford said with the way the legislation was changed by the committee and then passed by council the same night, there was no time for rebuttal. He said he had no recourse.

Berlin disagreed when contacted by phone about the veto, saying the legislation could have been amended even though it was already passed. As an example he pointed to the recent changes to the trash ordinance, noting a change was made to the language after passage.

He mentioned Wolford's comment about the "eleventh hour act" and said he didn't want to hold up the legislation because of the section dealing with locations. The ordinance restricted locations for Internet cafes to certain zoning areas and away from a school, library, public playground, church or establishment with a liquor permit.

Now that it's no longer passed, Berlin said that opens the door for some of these businesses to locate in places where they're not wanted, next to schools, a library, playgrounds, churches or bars. "I'm looking out for the citizens and children of Salem. I can worry about the fees later," he said.

The four locations already in place would have been grandfathered when it came to the locations. They wouldn't have had to move, but any new ones would have had to follow the regulations regarding where they locate.

Berlin recognized all the hard work Morrissey put into the legislation and said he advised them there were inquiries in the past year for locations at Sparkle Market, an empty lot on West State Street where a car business used to be located and a store front at the plaza in front of Walmart.

The location at Sparkle Market would be near a children's daycare center and a church. The one on West State Street would also be near a church. He pointed out there are any number of empty storefronts up for lease near bars or churches or other restricted areas.

He said the veto was remiss on the part of the mayor. "I believe he's made two and two come up to five," Berlin said. Dzuracky when contacted said she thought $5,000 a year was enough on a small business. Tacking on the $500 per terminal fee would have cost a considerable amount of money. She said she wasn't surprised about the mayor's veto because he had told her about his plan.

"We'll have to see where we go from there," she said. Wolford said he's hoping to set up a meeting within the next three weeks with the Rules & Ordinances Committee so Morrissey can justify the need for the terminal fee.

Wolford: Audit would likely revisit past failures

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

SALEM — Mayor Jerry Wolford clarified his comments from a recent meeting regarding a proposed performance audit, making it clear that he's not in favor of a fire district or outsourcing of the police department.

He's also not in favor of the city possibly paying $45,000 for a state performance audit, one that he thinks could result in recommendations the city has already tried to do with failing results.

"It's a waste of money to revisit something that's already been shot down," he said Thursday.

During the Finance Committee of city council meeting on Tuesday, the discussion focused on a proposed performance audit the state auditor's office would perform to look at city operations and see if ways exist to possibly save money. The cost has been estimated at $45,000, with a loan program allowing the state to front the money, with the city to repay the loan with any savings realized from implementing the state's recommendations.

If no savings are found, the city won't have to pay back the money, but the auditor's office has said performance audits usually find ways to save money. A representative of the state auditor's office said during a recent meeting that many of the recommendations deal with personnel, since the majority of spending deals with personnel.

Wolford said he talked to the state auditors about some of the cost-saving measures looked at previously in the city and the fact that they didn't work out, and in the case of the fire district, cost the city more money due to the legal challenges raised against the idea.

The issues included: a merger with Perry Township, which voters defeated; a fire district with Perry Township, which council approved but voters turned down; a regional income tax, which council didn't consider; and a suggestion of outsourcing police services to the Sheriff's Office, which wasn't seen as a positive idea.

Wolford put out a challenge, asking that any council members who vote in favor of spending the $45,000 for the performance audit, put in writing that they'll look at those issues if they're recommended in the audit.

He felt there may have been a misunderstanding that he was in favor of looking at a fire district again, but he said that's not the case. He said that all he was trying to say was that if council wants to commit the $45,000, which is an estimate, then it's only fair that they consider implementation of whatever's recommended by the state.

"Are the council members going to have the political courage to implement the savings they say we can find?" he said.

The proposal for the performance audit remains pending, with council the next stop.

Board gives Goll power to negotiate water deal

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

SALEM — The city Utilities Commission gave chairman Geoff Goll authority to sign a deal to provide water for oil and gas well drillers, with discussions pending with another company wanting to lease city land for oil and gas rights.

The commission has been working on drafting an agreement with LBG Land Services, a company which wants to buy water from the city to then resell to oil and gas well drillers. The original proposal asked for a two-year contract to purchase 200,000 to 300,000 gallons of water per day at a price of $10 per 1,000 gallons of bulk water purchased.

The Finance and Utilities Committees of city council agreed to have the commission negotiate the contract, with the income from the sale to be split 50/50 between the water fund and the city's general fund.

On Tuesday, the commission gave Goll authority to enter into the contract. The mayor also has to sign it and LBG Land Services must agree to it before it becomes official. Details of the deal will be released once the contract has been finalized.

Prior to that, the commission heard a presentation from Nick Calk of Dale Property Service Penn, also known as DPS Penn, an oil and gas leasing firm for the Chesapeake Energy Corporation. Calk explained how the company has already come to terms with several entities in the area, including the Columbiana County Commissioners. The commissioners bid out the leases, with DPS Penn winning the lease, which was originally set at $2,250 per acre. The county renegotiated and got the price up to $2,700 per acre. The county has 568 acres to lease. The deal also gives the county 17.5 percent in royalties if gas or oil is found.

Calk said he was there to answer questions or gauge the commission's interest in leasing.

"Under the same terms you gave the county?" Goll asked.

Calk said if they decide to put it out for bid, it wouldn't be good for his company to put out any numbers at this point. It was estimated the city has about 630 acres in the city's name, with about 580 acres of that purchased by the commission.

Goll commented that he would hope any funds generated from oil and gas leases would go back to the commission to reimburse the commission for the land purchases. He said he wanted to just throw that out there for any city council members in the room. Councilwoman Rita O'Leary and Councilman John Berlin were both there, along with Council President Mickey Cope Weaver and Mayor Jerry Wolford, who introduced Calk.

Calk said if his company won the bid, if that's the route they choose, they would enter a letter of intent and then take 120 business days to work out the contract. The city would get paid upon signature of the document.

Weaver suggested a meeting of the Committee of the Whole to discuss the idea, with Goll suggesting leaving it in the hands of the mayor to set up a meeting.

In other business, the commission changed its policy regarding collection of delinquent accounts. Previously, the commission would take the list of delinquent accounts and place a lien against them by certifying them to the county auditor, but they noticed that in some cases, properties were being sold before the liens were certified. Goll said the new owner can't be charged with the prior debt if they haven't received service for a lien.

Under the new policy, ownership will be verified before placing liens on properties. They also agreed to use a collection agency to try to collect on those bad debts that can't be certified due to the property changing hands, but with each case coming before the commission first.

In another bill-related matter, the commission voted 2-0, with Goll abstaining, to deny a reduction in the sewer bill for the Salem Golf Club related to a pool leak. Goll abstained since he's a member of the club. The club had been advised to install a water meter to measure the amount of water related to the pool but didn't do it. In the past, the commission had reduced the bill as a consideration for water that didn't go through the sanitary sewer. Since the club didn't follow the recommendation for a meter, the commission decided against granting a credit this year.

The commission also:

- took no action on discussion to extend water to the Bill Galchick property on Granite Avenue since there was no formal request in front of them, with options to be explained to the Galchick family.
- approved a water and sewer tap application for Robert Yuhanick of Beechwood Road.
- approved a request for sanitary sewer service from Henry Spack of Depot Road.
- approved a contract with Boak & Sons of Youngstown for $19,998 for the chlorine and laboratory roof replacement at the water treatment plant, noting that the other two bids, which were less, didn't include removal of the existing light weight concrete from the main decking.

Lewis said new jobs were "possible" but didn't expect any movement for six months.

The two buildings total 26,930 square feet in industrial space and the building fronting the west side of South Broadway Avenue lists 9,400 square feet and includes heavy electrical service (5,000 amps), a 50-foot high ceiling, 6,800 square feet of assembly area, city utilities along with room for expansion and parking.

The other building on South Broadway Avenue, behind building No. 1, has 17,500 square feet with 2,000 amps electrical service, office space and a 6,000 square foot assembly area.

The terms were 10 percent down with the balance due at 45 days.

Auctioneer Russ Kiko said the they were good buildings and "it's a good time to buy."

Swindell Enterprises retains 117,000 square feet at the end of East Perry Street.

A dozer once owned by Campf's in Salem was auctioned for $8,750 while a forklift bid out at $2,300. A Dyna Pac four-foot blacktop pavement roller that Perry Township Road Supervisor Darreck Ferrell and Trustee Chairman Cliff Mix were interested in bidding on went for $1,400.

ACROSS OUR COMMUNITIES

Mobile food pantry in Beloit today

BELOIT — Second Harvest Food Bank will distribute food from a mobile pantry from 10 a.m. to noon today at Bunker Hill United Methodist Church, 15096 W. Middletown Road. This is the first monthly distribution in Goshen Township. Recipients will receive a pre-packaged box of non-perishable food items and should bring photo identification. The mobile pantry delivers food to people in Mahoning County that may not have access or transportation to a food bank member agency pantry. The food bank also operates a mobile pantry site at Lakeview Assembly of God in Lake Milton the first Monday of each month. For information visit www.mahoningvalleysecondharvest.org or call 330-792-5522.

SALEM — Girls of the Salem High School Class of 1957 will meet for lunch at noon Aug. 18 at the Guilford Lake Grille.

Little Friends Preschool registration

SALEM — The Little Friends Preschool is accepting registration for the 2011-12 school year. The preschool offers many unique features including daily Bible time and a true Christian atmosphere, car-side drop-off and pick-up for parent convenience, and a school board made up of members of Salem First Friends Church. The preschool takes great measures to ensure the well being and safety of each child while they are at preschool, including low child-to-teacher ratios and a secure locked down building. New this fall is before and after school care, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Cost is $5 per hour per child, preschool age only. Those who register before Aug. 19 will receive a $10 discount on a registration fee. For more information visit www.lfpreschool.org or call 330-332-4905.

Back to school blood drive set

SALEM — Salem Community Hospital will hold its "Back to School...Back to Giving" blood drive from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Sept. 7 in the hospital's second floor classrooms. Past donors who have not given since July 13 are eligible, and new donors are always welcome. Appointments may be made by calling 330-332-7227. The entire blood donation process takes just an hour to complete.

Car, bike, and truck show at Beaver Creek

EAST LIVERPOOL — Friends of Beaver Creek State Park is hosting a car, bike and truck show from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Aug. 21 in Pioneer Village, 10201 Echo Dell Road. Any and all kinds of vehicles are most welcome. There is a $5 entry fee for each show vehicle. The first 50 vehicles will receive a dash plaque with the name and date of the show. Spectators will vote for the winning vehicles.

A pancake and sausage breakfast will be served from 8 a.m. to noon. Events are to include a Chinese Auction and also a 50/50 drawing. Stealth DJ will provide music with any requests being encouraged. The trading post will be open with ice cream, snacks, fishing poles, etc.

Salem seniors invited to dance

SALEM — All senior citizens, age 60 and over, are invited to a dance from 4 to 7 p.m. Sept. 10 at the Salem Community Center, 1098 N. Ellsworth Ave. Admission is free, however, only 200 reservations are available. Tickets may be obtained by calling 330-420-0325. The reservation deadline is Sept. 6. Formal attire is encouraged. This year's theme is "Boogie Down Memory Lane." There will be a DJ, dance contests, door prizes, refreshments, and photo keepsakes.

Southern Local hires Louis Ramunno as interim superintendent

By JO ANN BOBBY-GILBERT

Staff Writer

HIGHLANDTOWN — While in no hurry to name a permanent replacement for Superintendent James Herring, the Southern Local Board of Education took just three minutes to name a temporary replacement during a special meeting Thursday.

With board member Linda Morris absent, other members voted unanimously to hire Louis Ramunno as interim superintendent for the 2011-2012 school year for $350 per day.

No stranger to interim positions, Ramunno served in similar superintendent spots at Salem, Leetonia and East Liverpool. He is a retired superintendent from West Branch School District and will begin his duties at Southern Tuesday.

Board President John Sawyer had said at the regular meeting last week the district is taking its time to find a replacement for Herring, who left to take the superintendent's job at East Liverpool.

After Thursday's appointment of Ramunno, Sawyer said that now the board "has a year to really look things over, which will come back to reward us."

Apparently, the board interviewed Ramunno and one other candidate - a former Leetonia administrator - at some point between last week's meeting and Thursday's.

Referring to those interviews, Sawyer commended his fellow board members, saying, "I really appreciate the reception you gave both of our interviewees."

In another move during Thursday's three-minute meeting, the board reaffirmed the appointment of former high school Principal Carol Vollnoge as assistant superintendent and State Improvement Grant (SIG) coordinator.

She had been named to both positions at an earlier meeting but then had temporarily been given the interim superintendent's spot at a subsequent special meeting upon Herring's resignation to fill in any gaps until an interim could be hired.

FIRE

SALEM

Salem firefighters answered three separate calls to remove bats from homes on Fifth Street Wednesday night. The first call came at 9:10 p.m. at the home of Katie Stuckey in the 100 block, but the bat could not be found. At 9:47 p.m., they were called to the home of Katharine Elliot in the 500 block for a bat in the house and successfully removed the animal. At 10:05 p.m., they were called back to the Stuckey residence, found the bat and removed it. According to fire call records, the city department is 100 calls ahead of the number of calls by this time last year, with close to 900 calls so far.

Grace Pentecostal Church hosting Sunday School in the Park

SALEM – Grace Pentecostal Church is hosting its second annual Sunday School in the Park event at 11 a.m. Sunday at Waterworth Memorial Park.

The church organized the free event last year as a way to reach out to the community and Pastor Roland Schwendeman said it was a success.

"We had a lot of people stop by who were interested in what we were doing. Telling the community about Jesus Christ isn't something that has to be done in a building, but anywhere we are," he said.

This year's theme is "Faith, Friends and Family."

Children and parents alike can enjoy live musical entertainment, puppet shows, and games. A bounce house will also be available for children.

Teenagers are also invited to attend, as there will be something for everyone. Youth Leaders Chalmer and Elizabeth Perkins hope the local group can be an example for those who are trying to live for Christ in their local schools.

"Students have to make choices every day and unfortunately, some of those choices can have devastating consequences. We want them to know that at Grace Pentecostal they can connect with others who may be facing similar circumstances, but more importantly, we want to see students form a relationship with Christ and fulfill their potential as young adults making a difference in their community," Chalmer Perkins said.

Those who attend the event will have the opportunity to register for free prize give-aways, which will be distributed throughout the day.

Prizes include children's bicycles and toys and gift cards for local stores.

Free food, including hot dogs, hamburgers, popcorn, and cotton candy will also be available.

The event will be held in Pavilion No. 9.

Grace Pentecostal Church is located at 960 W. State Street. Worship services are held at 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. Sundays and 7 p.m. Wednesdays. More information can be found online at www.gracepentecostal-salem.org, or by calling 330-337-3633.

No day at the beach

Tiger spends too much time in the water and sand

JOHNS CREEK, Ga. — Steve Stricker had a shot at history and Tiger Woods made some of his own.

Just not the kind he wanted. What a wild first day at the PGA Championship.

Stricker missed a 10-foot birdie putt at his final hole Thursday, just a hair away from becoming the first player to shoot 62 in a major championship. He had no complaints, though, about settling for a 7-under score and the opening-round lead at Atlanta Athletic Club.

"I realized it was for 62 but didn't realize it was for history," Stricker said. "I hit a good putt. It just didn't go in. All in all, a good day."

For Woods, a miserable one. Seemingly spending as much time in water and sand as he did on the green stuff, Woods returned to the major scene with a major thud — a 77 that was his worst round ever at the PGA.

A 15th major title? Forget about it. Woods will need a major turnaround just to make the cut.

Beyond Stricker and Woods, there

After all the turmoil, questions loom for Buckeyes

By RUSTY MILLER

COLUMBUS — The 2010 season was vacated. The head coach's job was vacated. Now a bunch of 20-somethings coming off summer vacation are left with the previously unfathomable task of picking up the pieces at tattered Ohio State.

"We still hold ourselves to a high standard," says Joe Bauserman, an unknown backup quarterback who now may hold the Buckeyes' season in his hands. "We expect to win and that's what we're going to do."

But expecting to win and actually doing it are two dramatically different things heading into the most troublesome of Ohio State's 122 seasons of bedrock football. The program has never faced anything like this.

4 candidates, 1 QB job at Ohio State

COLUMBUS (AP) — There are tall ones, fast ones, strong-armed ones, an old one and a young one. Ohio State's stable of quarterbacks includes everything but an experienced one.

After Terrelle Pryor gave up his final year of eligibility this summer, the Buckeyes were left with four candidates to take over his job. They range from a wily 25-year-old veteran to an acclaimed freshman just learn-

Let's hope Hillis can hold on

BEREA (AP) — The past offseason and his first training camp under Pat Shurmur are all about changing one dubious distinction for Peyton Hillis.

The Madden 12 cover boy led the entire NFL in fumbles last year. Hillis coughed up the football eight times and lost five of them. On an offense as challenged as the Browns were to score points in 2010 those fumbles weren't only drive killers; they were game killers. The fumbles were critical in losses to Tampa Bay and Buffalo.

It is easier to focus on what Hillis did right last season — 1,177 yards rushing and 11 rushing touchdowns to go with 61 catches and two receiving touchdowns. Hillis scored exactly half of the Browns offensive touchdowns.

Things could get messy in opener

By JOSEPH WHITE

WASHINGTON — Evan Royster has never been through anything like it. Not in high school in Virginia, not in college at Penn State. He's a sixth-round draft pick who started at Square One two weeks ago learning the complex NFL play book of the Washington Redskins offense.

And now he's got a game to play. "It's almost like not going to class for whole semester — and then trying to cram for a final exam," he said.

Preseason NFL games are already notoriously sloppy, over-long and sleep-inducing, but things should be more adventurous than usual this time around. No one is expecting a clinic when the Redskins host the Pittsburgh Steelers on Friday night.

"I know everybody will run full speed," Pittsburgh running back Rashard Mendenhall said. "But things won't be as clean as they normally would."

The NFL lockout kept teams from holding offseason conditioning sessions, mini-

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Irish ambition: Make a BCS bowl

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Brian Kelly sees progress every day. His players know where to line up and how he likes to practice after more than a year in his system. That's a start for the Notre Dame coach headed into his second season of the high-profile job.

His goal is to get the Irish into a BCS bowl game this season — and win it, of course — and show that the program has returned to the national spotlight. But starting with an opener against South Florida on Sept. 3, the Irish have to prove that they are ready and good enough to make the climb back.

"I know this football team; they know us. I think that's the strength," Kelly said. "We've got a tough schedule we have to navigate through. We're playing three Big Ten teams, three teams from the ACC, two teams from the Pac-12, Mountain West. ... We don't get any warm-up games."

"My point is, we're very confident, we believe in our strengths, but we got a tough schedule," he said. "That's going to be the challenge."

One of his biggest decisions could come in less than two weeks when he names his starting quarterback. Dayne Crist, whose last two seasons have ended with knee surgeries, is hoping to win his job back against a field that includes three other players.

Tommy Rees stepped in when Crist was injured Oct. 30 against Tulsa — one of the Irish's toughest losses last season — and led Notre Dame to four straight wins to close the season, including a victory over nationally ranked Utah, a win at Southern California and a triumph over Miami in the Sun Bowl. The Irish finished 8-5.

Sophomore Andrew Hendrix and freshman Everett Golson are also in the QB derby, but it's no secret that Crist and Rees are the front-runners for the job.

The ups and downs of Kelly's first season stretched off the field, too. A student videographer died in October after the tower in which he was filming football practice fell over in high winds. Kelly acknowledged it was his decision to practice outside that day and called the aftermath of Declan Sullivan's death one of the most difficult periods of his life.

The school also agreed to changes in how it handles allegations of sexual assault and misconduct, months after a student from neighboring St. Mary's College reportedly accused a Notre Dame football player of touching her. She later committed suicide.

And in March, Kelly suspended leading receiver Michael Floyd after his third alcohol-related brush with the law in the past two years. Floyd, who has caught more TD passes than any player in school history, was reinstated this month after Kelly said he was convinced the junior had taken the necessary steps to be allowed back on the team.

Floyd missed all of spring drills but was allowed to participate in voluntary offseason workouts with his teammates. Floyd has 28 TD catches and 171 receptions overall for 2,539 yards and will likely end up as Notre Dame's career leader in all three categories.

"He can make certain plays that other guys can't," Rees said of Floyd, who caught 79 balls for 1,025 yards and scored 12 TDs a year ago.

Kelly and the quarterbacks will have a veteran offensive line that returns four starters (center Braxton Cave, guard Trevor Robinson and tackles Zack Martin and Taylor Dever) and four skill players — Floyd, wide receiver Theo Riddick, tight end Tyler Eifert, and running back Cierre Wood. Another returning wideout, TJ Jones, drew early praise from Kelly for his play.

Notre Dame's 3-4 defense is headed by ferocious inside linebacker Manti T'eo, the team's leading tackler last season who sat out most of the spring after arthroscopic knee surgery.

"It's been cleared up since summer. The knee is fine," said T'eo, whose 133 tackles last season were the most by a Notre Dame player since 1983. Carlo Calabrese, who started eight games last year, is battling Dan Fox to line up on the inside again next to T'eo. Returning senior Darius Fleming mans one outside linebacker spot with Prince Shembo and Danny Spond candidates on the other side.

The Irish return senior defensive ends Ethan Johnson and Kapron Lewis-Moore, and highly touted freshman Aaron Lynch adds depth. Senior Sean Cwynar will likely start at nose guard.

The secondary is experienced, headed by team captain and safety Harrison Smith, who intercepted three passes in the Sun Bowl. The corners are Gary Gray, who started all 13 games last season, and Robert Blanton, who played in every game.

Place-kicker David Ruffer, a former walk-on, earned a scholarship this season and is 23 of 24 on field goals, including 18 of 19 last season.

Among Kelly's concerns are the return game and depth at running back where Wood and Jonas Gray are 1-2. Notre Dame might have to use freshmen in backup spots.

But now that his spread offense has been installed, the coaches and players have forged relationships and know what to expect of one another. Kelly has made his system work in previous successful stops at Grand Valley State, Central Michigan and Cincinnati.

But, as he has said many times, it's a completely different deal in South Bend.

"I don't know at Notre Dame that you can pick out a bowl. We don't have a lot of options for bowls. It's BCS for us," Kelly said.

"If it's a conference championship at Cincinnati or a MAC championship at Central Michigan, it was a national championship at Grand Valley, it's here at the University of

Pitt hoping for breakthrough under Todd Graham

PITTSBURGH (AP) — New Pittsburgh coach Todd Graham hasn't coached a down with the Panthers yet, but he's already put his stamp on the program.

Graham is overseeing renovations at the team's football complex on the city's South Side, and there isn't a detail that escapes him.

From the flatscreen televisions on the walls, to the secretary's desk outside his office, Graham is embracing the job with such zeal, it would make the host of a home renovation show on HGTV blush.

The former Tulsa coach sees the facility as an extension of the energy he's trying to bring to the Panthers. And he sets the tone the moment a player walks through the front door.

Two steps inside the facility a rope hangs from the wall, a reminder to his players that they're in this thing together.

"He wants us to hold that rope, to know that if someone is hanging off the cliff we need to hold on and help them," said senior defensive lineman Myles Caragein. "He's about teamwork and holding each other accountable and sticking with them."

It's a message that resonates well at Pitt, which is emerging from a bumpy breakup with former coach Dave Wannstedt, who was forced out last December after six uneven seasons, leading to a chaotic month that saw the Panthers have three head coaches.

Pitt initially hired Miami (Ohio) coach Mike Haywood, but he was fired after being on the job two weeks following his arrest on a domestic violence charge. Defensive coordinator Phil Bennett coached the Panthers to a win over Kentucky in the BBVA Compass Bowl before Graham was hired on Jan. 10.

During his first team meeting, Graham promised the seniors he would focus on winning now. With the talent on the roster, he didn't see a reason to wait.

"The key for us winning the championship are the guys that are returning starters, the core," Graham said.

He ended up giving each of his players a T-shirt with the phrase "pay the price" on the front and "keep the change" on the back during spring drills, a reminder to them that he's here for a reason: To help a program, that always found a way to fall just short of expectations, take the final step toward Big East prominence.

"We don't want to revert back to old habits," Graham said. "We want a different result ... and that's a championship."

To get there, Graham is bringing along the up-tempo offensive system that helped make the Golden Hurricane a perennial contender in Conference USA. And this is a roster dotted with skill players that were just out of his reach while he was at Tulsa. So, Graham can hardly contain his glee about the possibilities.

Running back Ray Graham proved to be a capable complement to star Dion Lewis, rushing for 922 yards and eight touchdowns last year. Lewis was then drafted by the Philadelphia Eagles.

So, Ray Graham knows it's his turn to lead the legacy that stretches from Lewis back to LeSean McCoy, Curtis Martin, the late Craig "Ironhead" Heyward and Heisman Trophy winner, Tony Dorsett.

It's a challenge he has embraced, though he'll do it while working within a very different system than the smash-mouth one traditionally favored by Pitt. The Panthers will work without a huddle and typically have three or four receivers on the field at one time.

Yet Ray Graham doesn't think the shotgun-heavy formations means the Panthers won't be able to run it when they want to.

"People think it's going to be like a spread and we're going to pass all the time. We're not," he said. "With the line we have, we think we can go and just do our thing."

It'll be quarterback Tino Sunseri's job to make sure the ball gets where it needs to go, whether it's in his star running back's hands or elsewhere. His coach expects Sunseri to do things "two or three times" faster than he normally would.

That's going to lead to some mistakes. Graham is fine with that so long as the miscues don't include turnovers. Sunseri showed he could be efficient last year while throwing for 2,686 yards and 16 touchdowns against nine interceptions. To be effective, though, he'll also have to be a credible threat with his legs, though he laughed when asked if that means he has to run like former West Virginia star Pat White.

"Not quite," Sunseri said. "But I know that if they have to prepare for me running, that's only going to help everybody else."

Graham understands it's almost impossible for Sunseri to grasp the finer points of offensive coordinator Mike Norvell's attack in eight months. He doesn't need Sunseri to be the hero ... as long as he's not the goat.

"Being the quarterback in this system is very difficult," Graham said. "But the offense can operate at full potential as long as we don't turn the football over."

Graham thinks if the Panthers snap the ball 80 times a game, at least five of those plays should finish in the end zone. Do the math and that's at least 35 points a game, a number that would go a long way in the jumbled Big East.

camp and other workouts. Usually by now most everyone is in football shape and well versed in the Xs and Os. Not this year.

"Nobody's been through a situation like this ever," Washington coach Mike Shanahan said. "It's quite different, but everybody's under the same microscope. Everybody's adhering to the same rules, so you've got to make sure you've got the edge. ... I think you understand that mistakes are going to happen."

Well, it's not quite the same for everybody. A quick comparison of the rosters proves that.

The Steelers are the reigning AFC champs and a hallmark of stability. All 22 starting jobs are pretty much set, barring injury or unexpected performances in pre-season or training camp. The team signed only one veteran free agent — tight end John Gilmore, listed as third-string on the depth chart — in the mad rush following the end of the lockout.

Redskins fans must look at that last fact and wrinkle their brows. Only one veteran free agent?

Owner Dan Snyder could match that total in his sleep. Washington has added a least a dozen veteran free agents to a team that has finished last in the NFC East for three years running.

Conversely, the Redskins have only 18 pre-2011 draft picks on their roster. The Steelers have 31. Washington is trying to figure who's going to start at quarterback, running back and receiver, while the best drama Pittsburgh can offer are battles for third-string quarterback, No. 5 receiver and punter.

In other words, the Redskins have a lot more to accomplish in August with a lot of new people. The debut, therefore, could be quite messy.

"May be more sloppy, but we'll adjust," said Washington defensive tackle Barry Cofield, a free agent signing from the New York Giants. "You may understand that your technique and certain things like that might not be there, but your effort and your mentality and your aggressiveness have to be there regardless. So it may not be perfect, but as long as guys are flying around and playing hard, I think we'll be happy."

Tribe can't complete sweep

CLEVELAND (AP) — Justin Verlander gave Detroit exactly what it needed, becoming baseball's first 17-game winner as the division-leading Tigers avoided being swept by Cleveland and opened a three-game lead in the AL Central with a 4-3 win over the second-place Indians on Thursday night.

Verlander (17-5) allowed three hits and struck out 10 in seven dominant innings to earn career win No. 100 as the Tigers ended a 13-game losing streak in Cleveland. He was also on the mound for Detroit's previous win at Progressive Field on May 8, 2010.

In taking the series finale, the Tigers kept some distance over the Indians, who did trim one game off Detroit's lead over the past three days. The teams will play 10 more times this season, including a season-ending three-game series at Comerica Park from Sept. 26-28.

Fausto Carmona (5-12) gave the Indians a solid outing, but they couldn't do enough against Verlander, who was in control once again in what has been a Cy Young Award-caliber season.

Joaquin Benoit pitched a 1-2-3 eighth and flawless closer Jose Valverde worked the ninth for his 33rd consecutive save, breaking the single-season club record he shared with Guillermo Hernandez, who did it in 1984.

Carlos Santana homered for Cleveland.

After dropping the first two games of the series, the Tigers were counting on Verlander, their undisputed ace who has thrown one no-hitter and flirted with several others this season, to come through.

He delivered.

Relying mostly on his fastball and working both sides of the plate, Verlander had the Indians flailing at air. He also got a big assist from center fielder Austin Jackson, who made a sensational, leaping catch against the center-field wall in the sixth inning to preserve Detroit's 4-3 lead.

With a runner on first and one out, Santana sent a drive to straightaway center. Jackson sprinted back, tracking the ball with each stride as neared the warning track. He stopped under the wall, jumped and snagged Santana's deep shot that looked as if it would have stayed in the park. Verlander waved his glove in thanks to Jackson.

Indians manager Manny Acta conducted his pregame meeting with reporters in a room below the Indians' dugout, where it was less noisy. Acta has lost his voice and could only whisper his comments.

He made it loud and clear, however, that the Indians needed to be aggressive against Verlander.

"You have to try and get your pitch and not miss it," he said.

He was on the money.

Verlander led 4-0 after the Tigers scored three times in the second. And with one of baseball's best on the mound, that deficit must have felt like 40-0 to the Indians.

However, Santana hit a one-out homer, his 18th, in the bottom half to give Cleveland new life. Then, some uncharacteristic wildness by Verlander in the third helped the Indians close within one.

Verlander walked No. 9 hitter Lou Marson with one out and put rookie Jason Kipnis on with a two-out walk. Asdrubal Cabrera fell behind 1-2 before pulling a two-run double into the right-field corner. As Cabrera scooted into second standing up, Verlander dropped his head in disappointment.

It was the only time he showed emotion. Otherwise, Verlander was cold and nasty.

He took the mound with a 1-0 lead after the Tigers scored an unearned run in their first at-bat.

Jackson led off with a routine grounder, but third baseman Lonnie Chisenhall's throw sailed over Santana's head and into the photographer's pen. Jackson moved up on a groundout and scored when Magglio Ordonez hit a liner toward the gap that right fielder Kosuke Fukudome snagged with a diving catch.

After the third out, Cabrera and Santana had a heated exchange in the dugout and had to be separated by Carmona and others.

The Tigers made it 4-0 in the second on RBI singles by Alex Avila and Wilson Betemit, and a perfectly executed suicide squeeze by Jackson.

Carmona, who has had many starts unravel because of one bad inning, allowed three earned runs and seven hits in seven innings.

NOTES: Indians OF Michael Brantley missed his second straight game with a sore right wrist. Brantley says he's fine, but Acta wanted to give him an extra day's rest. ... The Tigers were without OF Brennan Boesch. He has a sprained right thumb and likely will miss at least a few games. ... The Indians open a three-game series Friday with Minnesota. Cleveland's Justin Masterson (9-7), who pitched just two innings before being pulled after a 2-hour rain delay on Tuesday, will come back and start on short rest against Carl Pavano (6-9). "He's such a big horse," Indians pitching coach Tim Lincecum said of the 6-foot-6 Masterson, "he could probably do that every time."

But those fumbles got under Hillis' skin the way fleas chew on a dog. So he decided to do something about it while the NFL lockout was preventing him from being part of any kind of workout in the Browns' training facility.

"I've done a lot of ball security things in the offseason — some fun stuff with some kids to help me out," Hillis said after practice Thursday. "I'd always carry a ball with me everywhere and I'd tell the kids 'If you can knock it out, I'll give you some money.' The kids really enjoyed that. I got a lot more people trying to hit the ball than I was used to."

Hillis carried that ball around when he was in the Cleveland area and when he was back home in Conway, Ark. His wallet didn't get any thinner because no one successfully stripped the ball from him.

It is probably safe to assume no one trying to tomahawk the ball from Hillis' grasp was as big, strong or fierce as Raven linebacker Ray Lewis, but whatever works for Hillis works for the Browns, because Hillis is going to be an integral part of the West Coast offense.

Here is another safe assumption: Hillis isn't going to change his running style, meaning he isn't going to find a soft place to land when a tackler gets a hand on him just to avoid fumbling. If he thinks he can get one blade of grass closer to the goal line his legs are going to keep churning until he can go no more.

"At the end of the day, I'm trying to win ballgames; I'm trying to get those extra yards," Hillis said. "That's not an excuse. I still have to protect the football. It's just the way I play the game. What happens is going to happen. I'll take the criticism along the way."

Coach Pat Shurmur jokingly covered his ears when a reporter asked about Hillis fumbling. The question was heard anyway. Shurmur talked about how running backs coach Gary Brown (a holdover from Eric Mangini's staff) uses ball control drills in practice.

"He's much like any player," Shurmur said. "We demand they take care of the football and then throw them out there and let him play."

"He's an impressive guy. He has a very physical presence — not only in his size, but the way he plays the game. He's very critical of himself if he makes mistakes and typically you don't see an error repeat itself."

Eerily, the War Room scouting report on Hillis coming out of the University of Arkansas, where he shared the backfield with the more famous Darren McFadden and Felix Jones, cautioned: "Concerns about fumbles ... durability questions."

The War Room also nailed Hillis' strengths. They just didn't show until 2010; otherwise the Broncos never would have given him away in exchange for former Browns quarterback Brady Quinn. The Broncos drafted Hillis in the seventh round in 2008.

"Excellent receiver out of the backfield," the report read. "... much better athlete than the typical fullback ... keeps his pad level low and keeps moving forward ... natural hands ... takes good angles in the blocking game ... good balance and able to break tackles with strength."

The trade is already a steal for the Browns. It will be even better if Hillis resolves his fumbling problem.

TIGER

was Rory McIlroy banging his hand on an ill-advised shot off a tree root, Ryo Ishikawa spending so much time in the water he needed a snorkel, and two patched-up greens caused by mowers gone wild.

Stricker showed it was possible to go low by keeping the ball in the fairway. He tore up the tough back nine with a 5-under 30 and played a bogey-free round, leaving him two shots ahead of Jerry Kelly among those with morning tee times.

It was the 11th time a player has shot 63 in the year's final major, and the 25th time overall.

"I really had no expectations coming into today's round," the 44-year-old Stricker said. "I didn't make too many birdies the first three days during the practice rounds. I got off to a good start, and it kind of got me going."

McIlroy, the U.S. Open champion, got off to a painful start, taking an ill-advised swing at his ball resting against a tree root on the third hole.

He let the 7-iron fall from his hands as soon as he struck the ball, and flexed his wrist in obvious pain. He walked to the next hole holding an ice compress on his arm. Finally, at the fifth, he was checked out by PGA Tour physical therapist Jeff Hendra.

Apparently reassured that he couldn't hurt it any worse, McIlroy played on. He had the wrist taped up to provide extra support and managed to grind out an even-par 70.

Stricker has never won one of golf's biggest championships — he's 0-for-52 — and the Americans are mired in their longest major drought of the modern era.

It's early, but maybe he'll take care of both in the same week.

Stricker amazingly made birdies at both the 15th — the longest par-3 on the course — and the 18th, a lengthy par-4 that has water hugging the left side of the fairway and guarding the front of the green.

The Americans sure need a boost. They haven't won a major since Phil Mickelson triumphed at the 2010 Masters, coming up short at six in a row. During that span, Northern Ireland has captured three championships, South Africa two and Germany one.

Stricker is the highest-ranked American in the world rankings, a spot that used to be controlled by Woods.

Not anymore.

Woods knocked two balls in the water and spent enough time in the bunkers to feel like he was on a beach vacation. The result was predictable: Three double bogeys and five bogeys.

He headed to the clubhouse a colossal 14 strokes off the lead, having put up the same score as 57-year-old Jerry Pate.

"I'm not down," Woods said. "I'm really angry right now."

His previous worst round in the PGA was a 75, and the only time he posted a higher score in a major was that 81 in the third round of the British Open, played in awful conditions at Muirfield.

That result was stunning because Woods was in his prime, a superb player in the midst of winning 14 major titles.

Now, he looks like just one of the crowd, at best. Woods hasn't won a major championship since his stirring playoff win at the 2008 U.S. Open — on a leg that needed major surgery.

Since then, his marriage has fallen apart, his reputation has taken a beating and his game is not the least bit intimidating.

Fully recovered from a leg injury that caused him to miss both the U.S. Open and the British Open, Woods got off to a strong start with birdies on three of the first five holes, briefly grabbing a share of the lead.

Then Bad Tiger showed up again.

The trouble began at the 253-yard 15th, the over-the-top par 3 that is both long and protected by water. Woods went with an iron but it wasn't quite enough, the ball plopping into the pond that runs along the right side of the hole. He reached down slowly to retrieve his tee and went on to make the first of his double bogeys.

At the 16th, a wild drive led to more problems. Woods landed in a fairway bunker to the right, knocked his approach into the gallery on the left, flopped it into another bunker and settled for a bogey.

Woods took another double bogey at the brutal 18th after plugging his tee shot in, yes, another bunker. He could only gouge it out, found more sand with his third shot and failed to get up-and-down from there.

His momentum totally stymied by a 2-over 37 at the turn, Woods staggered toward the finish. He started the front side with three more bogeys in the first four holes, then dunked another ball in the water at the sixth to set up his third double bogey on a sweltering day in the Deep South.

Woods closed with an appropriate finish. His approach landed in the bunker in front of the ninth green, his blast-out went far past the flag, and he missed the par putt.

At least Woods fared better than Ishikawa, the Japanese star thought to be a contender coming off a strong showing at Firestone last week.

The 19-year-old put six balls in the water and finishing with an 85 — pretty much assured of missing the cut before much of the field even got on the course.

Dustin Johnson was looking to make up for a gaffe on the 72nd hole that cost him a chance to win last year's PGA.

Johnson appeared headed for a three-way playoff at Whistling Straits until the PGA of America pointed out that he grounded his club in a ragged patch of dirt that was actually a bunker.

He had to assess himself a two-stroke penalty, which left Martin Kaymer to beat Bubba Watson for the Wanamaker Trophy.

Johnson has a lot of work to do just to put himself in that position again, opening with a 75.

Kaymer began defense of his title with 72. Watson had a wild round on his way to a 74, stringing together four straight birdies early in the round, then stumbling through five straight bogeys — and a double bogey at the end.

Shaun Micheel, one of the PGA's most surprising winners in 2003, is at it again. He opened with a 66.

Everyone raved about the condition of the 7,467-yard course in the sprawling suburbs northeast of Atlanta, which was the home club of Bobby Jones and had hosted three previous majors.

But a baffling mishap the evening before left two ugly patches in the 14th and 17th greens.

Apparently, a quick rise in the humidity caused the brushes on two mowers to stick in the grass, ripping the impeccable greens. Head groundskeeper Ken Mangum had to bring in sod for a quick patch job and the PGA of America ruled that the affected areas would be treated as ground under repair, allowing golfers to move their ball if it landed there or they had to putt through it.

"We felt like our hearts had been ripped out," Mangum said. "It's a little bit like cutting yourself with a razor on your wedding day."

Rodman, Class of '11 to enter hoops Hall of Fame

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — The acknowledgement list could only belong to Dennis Rodman.

There were coaches Phil Jackson and fellow inductee Tex Winter. He mentioned teammate Michael Jordan, along with rockers Eddie Vedder and Motley Crue. And he thanked that guy Stern who's coming to see him Friday night.

That's Howard Stern, not the NBA commissioner. Rodman's uncommon blend of basketball and entertainment has arrived at the sport's birthplace, where he will be enshrined in the Naismith Memorial Hall of Fame on Friday as part of the 10-person class of 2011.

"I really didn't play the game to be in the Hall of Fame. That wasn't my job," Rodman said. "My job was to go out there and win ballgames, have a good time and take care of my family. As long as the people had a good time, that was my main objective."

NCAA committee approves increase in APR cutline

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — NCAA leaders are finally backing up their words with actions.

Less than 24 hours after President Mark Emmert called for immediate changes in college sports, the NCAA's board of directors approved a measure that would include postseason bans if teams fall below the new Academic Progress Rate cutline. The new mark for the four-year rolling average will increase from 900 to 930. In October, NCAA leaders will consider when the new rules will take effect.

While the APR discussion was already on Thursday's docket before this week's two-day presidential retreat, it was the first chance university presidents could prove this time would be different.

They did.

"The very clear message from them (university presidents) was to start doing things now in August when you have the Division I board meeting and when you come back in October, in January, in April, this is something that needs to be done as Mark says in months, not years," Oregon State president Ed Ray said. "I think they would feel very good with the actions the board took, and saw that we are moving quickly and responsibly forward."

BUCKS FROM 1B

A scandal centered on a tattoo-parlor owner giving cash and discounts for memorabilia to several players grew geometrically. After players were suspended for the start of the 2011 season, it was discovered coach Jim Tressel had known about their complicity for more than nine months and had kept the information to himself — contrary to NCAA rules and his own contract.

After a torrent of daily revelations, rumor and innuendo, Tressel's startlingly successful decade in Columbus came to a disgraceful end when he was forced out on May 30. Shortly thereafter, Tressel's pet player, three-year starting quarterback Terrelle Pryor, announced he was giving up his senior season to make an end run at an NFL career. Seeking to mollify the NCAA, Ohio State has vacated its 12-1 season a year ago (including wins over rival Michigan and in the Sugar Bowl against Arkansas), and has tagged itself with two years of NCAA probation. It won't find out until September at the earliest if the NCAA accepts those sanctions or wants to pile on more. Now Luke Fickell, a line-backers coach the previous nine years at his alma mater, is the interim head coach. He calls the last few months "a whirlwind, exciting, crazy, emotional." Now that all the accusations and allegations have given way to actually taking the field and practicing, the next few weeks figure to be all of that and more. Even without the controversy, the NCAA investigation, the suspensions and the departures, this would be a tumultuous preseason. The Buckeyes must replace seven starters on defense and four on offense, not to mention being without four prime contributors (leading rusher Dan Herron, top receiver DeVier Posey, starting offensive lineman Mike Adams and backup defensive lineman Solomon Thomas) who were suspended for the first five games of the fast approaching season.

First on the to-do list is quarterback, where Pryor had taken almost every snap for the past two years. There are four candidates to replace him, each with his own distinct qualities and shortcomings. Bauserman, a former minor-league baseball player who is an avid hunter, has his sights set on the job. He's the most experienced. Kenny Guiton, a redshirt sophomore, is more mobile and just as good a passer. Second-year freshman Taylor Graham is tall and has a strong arm, just like his father Kent, a former Ohio State quarterback. Neither he nor Guiton have ever really faced opposing fire. Braxton Miller, the prize of the newest recruiting class, is raw and talented. He looks lost at times during drills but shows great potential. Guiton might be the safest bet because he is the most versatile candidate. "I feel like I've done some great things out there; I feel like I've done some things I need to work on," he said, echoing words that could be used to describe all four of the quarterbacks. "I'll get better."

Another critical area is wide receiver, where the Buckeyes lost MVP Dane Sanzenbacher. Until Posey gets back on the field, those green quarterbacks will have to rely on replacements who have a combined 12 catches in their college careers. On defense, holes left by graduated linemen Dexter Laramore and Cameron Heyward, linebackers Ross Homan and Brian Rolle and backs Chimdi Chekwa, Aaron Gant, Jermale Hines and Devon Torrence are gaping. There are plenty of worthy fill-ins, but much like the situation with the NCAA, no one knows for sure how it'll all work itself out. Despite questions about personnel, Fickell said there are no doubts about the Buckeyes' motivation. "The attitudes are right. Guys are working together as a team," he said. "They understand it's all about each other. They've got the right focus." Almost no one outside of the locker room expects much of the Buckeyes, winners of a record-tying six straight Big Ten titles until last year was erased from the memory banks. With the months of turmoil in their past, the specter of more NCAA penalties hanging over the program and the loss of all those departed stars, many are predicting four, five or even more losses. Ohio State hasn't lost six in a season since 1999.

"Yeah, it drives us a little bit because it's always in the back of your head," fullback Zach Boren says. "We're so used to being, you know, the Big Ten champions and stuff like that, or ranked No. 1 preseason or whatever. But we look it as kind of fun. It's kind of fun being the underdog for once. It's a change of scenery." After the past few months, a change of scenery in Columbus is welcome. It remains to be seen if it'll be fun.

ing the playbook, from the lanky son of a former NFL and Ohio State quarterback to an almost overlooked add-on who has surprised many. Interim coach Luke Fickell says all will get a chance to prove what they can do, but the clock is ticking on winnowing the list down soon as the days melt away before the Sept. 3 opener against Akron. "We're trying to evaluate them as a whole, see what they do," he said of process during this week's first Buckeyes' practices. "(See) what our program needs, what our offense needs, and then figure out who's the best fit for what we do." Joe Bauserman, Kenny Guiton, Taylor Graham and Braxton Miller battled it out for practice time during the spring while Pryor mended after surgery. When Pryor, a central figure in Ohio State's ongoing problems with the NCAA, announced he was going to quit college and try to make it in the NFL, an important decision became a make-or-break decision. "They've been competing their butts off," quarterbacks coach Nick Siciliano said. "They know what's on the line and they're coming out there to work every day." Bauserman, a 6-foot-1, 230-pound fifth-year senior, has seen action in 24 games the last three years after coming to Ohio State when his minor-league baseball career with the Pittsburgh Pirates wilted. Still, he's only thrown 47 passes, completing 25, for 320 yards with two touchdowns and one interception. He said the coaches are looking for the same thing from the quarterbacks that they are from the entire team. "Just to be consistent," he said. "No turnovers and be tough." Bauserman, from Strasburg, Va., isn't the most mobile or the best thrower or the smartest or the most athletic. But he's not last in any of those categories. "Joe's a competitive guy," Fickell said. "Joe can do pretty much most of it. He can move, he's decently athletic and he can stand back there at times, too." Guiton only saw time in five games a year ago, throwing an interception and completing a pass for a 5-yard gain in his only two attempts. He did gain 21 yards on just five rushes, though. With decent size at 6-2, 195, the redshirt sophomore from Houston was almost an afterthought as a recruit three years ago after Ohio State was unable to sign another highly touted prospect. He believes it is his versatility which makes him the best man for the job. "I feel like I'm a dual threat," he said. "I can bring many things to the table and that's what I'll try to show." Siciliano likes his off-the-field attributes. "He's got great leadership and great communication," he said. "And he's shown he's a tough kid." Graham is the son of former Ohio State quarterback Kent Graham, who spent 11 years in the NFL with six teams from 1992-2002. A redshirt freshman, the 6-4, 225-pounder from Wheaton, Ill., looks the part of a pocket passer. He's got the quick release of his father and appears to have the best arm of the quartet. "Of course I'd love to start," he said. "Every guy here would, all the quarterbacks. There's no denying that. That's why we came here. That's what I look forward to." Fickell mentioned that Graham isn't as mobile as the other three, but believes his size can be an advantage. He also said it'll be interesting to see how things shake out when Graham is tested during August practices. "We have the opportunity to see how he does in situations where his strengths are," he said. Miller is a blue-chip recruit out of suburban Dayton, Ohio, who graduated early so he could enroll at Ohio State in January and play spring ball. Big but with speed at 6-3 and 210, he's still trying to learn the playbook while impressing the coaches. His position coach has kept a watchful eye on him. "He's very mechanically sound," Siciliano said. "He doesn't have many flaws in his throwing motion, so he's been fine so far." Miller tries to learn four plays every day. He studies them back at the team hotel, then tries to show his knowledge on the field. The next day, he adds four more plays. "I just take everything in like a sponge," he said. Fickell said he wouldn't have a problem starting a true freshman because none of the four have a lot of experience. "They're all young in their own way, meaning they haven't taken a whole lot of snaps in front of 106,000," he said. "So, to me, it's most important who fits what our team does best and who can jell into that. Obviously, we have to do what they do well. But it's important that they can do what our team does well too."

HOROSCOPE

By HOLIDAY MATHIS
8/12/11

There's fun to be had on this eve of the full moon in Aquarius. Connect with new and old friends to make memories. People will be even more riveted than usual by what's novel, eccentric and strange. If you have a talent, story, collection or treasure that is off the beaten path, now is the time to bring it out and show it off.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). There will be an adjustment to your domestic life. It will happen slowly over the next seven days. You'll be more comfortable at the end of it, but it will be a process.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You will find yourself in a position to stand up for those who cannot stand up for themselves. You'll do an excellent job at this, especially if you don't give it too much thought. Shoot from the hip, and do what's right.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). When is there going to be a time to explore the interest that captured your imagination so thoroughly when you were a child? You may just find the time today.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You know better than to be annoyed by the skeptics. Indeed, you are grateful for them because they spur you on to do and become more. You will be highly motivated now, eager to prove the skeptics wrong.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You'll be in a wild and exploratory mood. Ask questions, and you'll find good answers. Are they the right answers? Probably not. But they are good enough to keep you interested and asking more.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Make it easy for people to find you, and prepare to be surprised. Though you don't necessarily want to talk to everyone from your past, there are a few people you will happily get to know all over again.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You will be in a position to either hear or give a confession. The admission could lead to redemption or condemnation. Much hangs in the balance here. Be compassionate with yourself and others.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). An unobtainable person has a magnetic appeal to you. Perhaps this is someone who is in no position to return your affection. The situation allows you to explore the complexities of emotion.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Family will hold a mirror up to you whether or not you are in the mood to look at yourself. Their way of reflecting you is a gift, though it may not feel that way just now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). People enjoy exchanging stories about misfortune. Stay out of the conversation. It's a kind of competition, though there is no real benefit to winning.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). It is easy to get caught up in your own thinking. Thoughts can double back on themselves and drag you inside them like a powerful riptide. To avoid getting carried away, stop the thought process early on.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). There's a hero in your midst -- someone who will gallantly slay the dragon for you. It may not be the one you think it is. Note that some of the best knights don't wear armor.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (August 12). Make it a point to be around people who are as goal-oriented as you are. A change to your domestic life will be introduced in September. November brings financial improvement. You'll be helped by family members who want you to succeed. Your personal life sparkles with new friendships in February. Aquarius and Sagittarius people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 47, 3, 22, 15 and 4.

Squeegee to rescue

Heloise

Dear Heloise: I've found that my MIRRORS AND WINDOWS get super-clean and streak-free if I use regular window cleaner, paper towels and a squeegee!

I spray the window or mirror (Heloise here: Don't spray a mirror that is inset or framed, because the cleaner can get in between), then swirl the cleaner with the paper towel to break up any spots. I wipe horizontally with the squeegee and wipe the rubber of the squeegee with a paper towel after each pass. This may not be a new hint for some, but it is for me! — Karon in Texas

Great! Squeegees are wonderful for cleaning windows and large mirrors. And commercial window cleaner is fine, but did you know that white vinegar is a wonderful, cheap and readily available glass cleaner? And that's only one use for it. If you would like to read about the many uses for vinegar, I have compiled a pamphlet. To receive one, send $5 and a stamped (64 cents), self-addressed, business-size envelope to: Heloise/Vinegar, P.O. Box 795001, San Antonio, TX 78279-5001. Suffering from sunburn? Some apple-cider vinegar on a washcloth dabbed on the skin can soothe the burn. — Heloise

CARRY-ON CONCERN

Dear Readers: Aerosol cans and traveling by air usually don't mix! They CAN BE flammable, so what are the rules for flying with aerosol cans?

According to the Transportation Security Administration, or TSA (www.tsa.gov), you are allowed to have in your carry-on bag aerosol cans that are "personal, medicinal or toilet" items, 3 ounces or less.

You are NOT allowed to have certain flammable aerosols in either checked or carry-on luggage. Some examples are:

- laundry starch
- static remover
- spray paints or lubricants
- surface disinfectants.

— Heloise

EASY-ACCESS EARRINGS

Dear Heloise: I had a hard time keeping up with the pierced earrings I wore. I purchased a plastic needlepoint canvas (the one with the largest holes they had (this is called "aida" — Heloise)).

I took some dental floss and sewed the plastic canvas to a hanger, and now I can hang it on the wall or on the rod with my clothes. I put hoop earrings out toward the edge of the canvas and the regular post earrings in the middle. — Barbara J., via email

DEAR READERS: Yesterday I shared some of the emails you sent when "Alison in Ashland, Ore." asked you to name your heroes. Today I am sharing more. If you have found them to be as uplifting and energizing as I have, at a time when most of the news we read today has been so depressing, read on:

DEAR ABBY: Elizabeth Smart is my hero. She went on a forced ride and nine-month stay in hell, came back and has triumphed over that horror with grace, dignity and amazing maturity. — DR. MARK M. IN UTAH

DEAR ABBY: One of our family heroes is Ruby Bridges. Only 6 years old, a black child in the South, Ruby attended an all-white elementary school in New Orleans, enduring isolation, harassment and even death threats. Thanks to Ruby and all Americans who helped to break down racial barriers in education. — MELINDA IN VIRGINIA

DEAR ABBY: My hero happens to be famous, but that's NOT why she's my hero. It's Tina Turner. She started young and became famous because she had an amazing talent. However, when her marriage dissolved, she was reduced to manual labor to support herself and her children. She struggled to get her career back and, after years, regained her place in the entertainment world. She's my hero because she fell, got back up (no one did it for her) and made her place once again. She's a great example of human perseverance and I really admire her. — TAMARA G., ORLANDO, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding real heroes, I nominate the journalists and writers who, at risk to their own lives, report the truth on what's happening in war-torn countries or in countries ruled by dictators. These brave men and women work under threats of murder, torture and/or imprisonment. — BRENDA IN ATLANTA

DEAR ABBY: My hero, Ken, is now 90. He's one of the few remaining vets who walked Bataan and survived, after 3 1/2 years as a Japanese POW. He returned beaten and broken to marry and produce 10 children whom he loved intensely. His captivity made him a more loving husband, father and friend, and never did I hear him express hatred for his captors. With so much hatred and violence in this world, Ken had the secret to spiritual and physical inner peace. I'll not have another hero to match him. — DICK H., ROSEVILLE, MINN.

DEAR ABBY: A real hero is someone who donates an organ so that someone else may live. A real hero is someone who donates time to feed the hungry at a mission or sit with the elderly. There is a difference, to me, between a hero and someone who is brave. — LARRY S., FLEMINGSBURG, KY.

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago, a plane crashed in a river near Washington, D.C. It was winter and a helicopter was plucking survivors out of the freezing water. One woman had a broken arm and was unable to continue holding onto the rope suspended from the helicopter. She fell back into the river, soon to perish. A young bystander jumped, fully clothed, into the freezing water and brought her back to the bank. That, to me, is a real hero. — RICK G., METAIRIE, LA.

Reunion picnics and food poisoning

Dr. Donohue

DEAR DR.

DONOHUE: We're planning a family reunion at the end of this month. My family is large. Although we live in the same general area, some have to travel for three hours to reach our picnic site. Everyone is bringing food. I wonder about the best way to keep this food safe. I'd hate to see us have an outbreak of food poisoning. — S.B.

ANSWER: More than 200 different bacteria and viruses cause food poisoning. Taking a few simple precautions can keep you free of food poisoning. Undercooked meat, especially hamburgers, unwashed raw vegetables and unwashed fruits are the sources of most trouble.

In preparing foods, hands have to be washed before and after handling raw food. People shouldn't go from one food to a completely different one without washing. Meat must be brought to an inner temperature of 165 F. A food thermometer is an essential piece of equipment. Whoever brings raw foods must keep them refrigerated in an insulated container packed with ice. The people coming from a distance of three hours should check the container halfway to the picnic destination to see if they need to purchase more ice. Raw fruits and vegetables have to be washed in running tap water and gently rubbed while under the water.

A few common-sense steps will keep you and your family out of trouble.
