Berlin pushing for LEAP funds audit

By LARRY SHIELDS
 Staff Writer

SALEM — Councilman John Berlin wants citizens to contact their ward council representatives “to vote positively” on the Leverage for Efficiency, Accountability and Performance (LEAP) funds when comes before them.

Berlin said, “Your state senators and representatives voted 33-0 and 96-0 respectively, enacting SUB. S.B. 4 on March 30, 2011, which created the LEAP revolving loan fund.”

The program set up a $1.5M revolving loan fund for state agencies and local governments for audits and to find better ways to spend their tax dollars.

Berlin brought the issue of applying for LEAP funds before city council in early May and the finance committee approved submitting an application.

“Last week the city was informed by the auditor of state that the application was approved and now only requires formal acceptance by city council to get the audit started,” Berlin stated. “An estimate of the cost of the audit will arrive soon and the audit will take three to six months to complete.”

If council approves the audit, the city would borrow money from the state auditor and have one year from its completion to repay it. Repayment is required so that other cities and local governments will have state loan funds available to them in the future.

The state auditor said that savings of up to $23 for every $1 spent on an audit is possible.

Implementation of audit findings by city council and the savings derived would then be the source of the loan repayment funds, Berlin said.

Leetonia board to take more time before deciding on memorial for late school booster

By KEVIN HOWELL
 Staff Writer

LEETONIA — The school board will take some time to consider how to honor a late community member who played an instrumental role in the construction of several parts of the K-12 facility.

The board chose to discuss prior to its next board meeting in August month a proposition presented by Jason Ketterman at the regular board meeting Tuesday night to dedicate the bell tower on campus to Ed Smith, who died suddenly last month.

“I don’t know one person in the last 30 years who has put so much blood, so much sweat into this school,” Ketterman implored the board. “He loved this community and that is one of the reasons I love this community so much, because of people like him.”

Ketterman said that he has collected enough money through the community to pay for a 12-by-20 inch bronze plaque plus bust of Smith, who was instrumental in the construction of projects such as the bell tower and brick alumni wall.

But the board elected to wait to make a decision, considering that

School board member
Kurt Jennings

Smith himself was not an alumni and the bell tower is part of the Alumni Square, as noted by members of the Alumni Association.

“We fully recognize the effort he put into [the bell tower], and in no way diminish what he has done for the school, but the bell tower was an alumni project — not a school, not a community — and it would be inappropriate to dedicate it [to Smith],” said Jean Holt, speaking on behalf of the Alumni Association. “It kind of goes against what the Alumni Square is all about.”

She also noted that a lot of time, money and effort from a multitude of people went into saving the bell and erecting the tower.

“It would be unfair to single out just one person,” she said.

Holt said that the Alumni Association feels Smith should be recognized and offered a variety of other ways to immortalize him, such as placing the plaque on the rock by the tower, planting a grove of trees in his honor or naming the roadway around the school in his memory.

Board member Kurt Jennings indicated a middle ground should be met regarding how to honor Smith while leaving the door open to recognize future pillars of the school community.

“We want to find a way to honor the man, but in a way that there will be no opposition to why or how we do it,” he said.

In other business, the board took steps to create a preliminary plan to offer online lessons as an alternative to make up days for calamity days over five. The alternative would provide students the opportunity to complete their lessons online, or on a hard copy for those without Internet access, within a specified time following the end of the school year.

Also at the meeting, the board accepted the resignation of Victoria Gelet as high school science teacher, effective July 5; and hired

Cornhole tourney keeps memory of friend alive

By KEVIN HOWELL
Staff Writer

SALEM — Whoever said cornhole was just a game?

A group of Salem High School graduates are keeping the memory of a lost friend alive through their cornhole tournament, hosted every year since 2006.

SHS 1999 graduates Mike DeBarr, Matthew Wolf and Chad Copacia, with 2000 graduate Kenny Donnelly, started the Salem Cornhole Tournament following the death of classmate Lantz Bricker, a 1999 SHS graduate who died at the age of 25 when the plane he was piloting crashed shortly after takeoff on Jan. 31, 2005.

Currently the tournament serves as a fundraiser for the Lantz Bricker Scholarship Fund. The scholarship is awarded annually to a senior member of the Salem High School soccer team to assist with their college tuition.

"It really started as just a way for everybody to get together," said DeBarr, credited as the mastermind behind the tournament. "Then there was so much participation in it that we figured we could use it to raise money for the scholarship."

Since 2009, when the event became a fundraiser, the Salem Cornhole Tournament has generated over $2,000 for the scholarship.

But it is about more than just money.

"This tournament not only helps to fund a scholarship in Lantz's name, but it allows us to maintain a connection with Lantz and his memory," said Wolf. "I had a great friend in Lantz. So for me personally, this tournament provides an opportunity for all his buddies and family to get together and honor his memory while raising money to help a senior at Salem High School pay for college."

The group founded the scholarship at the time of Bricker's death using $20,000 raised through a silent auction, and the tournament's popularity has helped keep it going while serving as a reminder of what Bricker meant to his family and friends.

"It means a lot because the tournament always ends up with everybody sitting around sharing memories of Lantz," DeBarr noted. "It's a good way to remember him."

This year's event is scheduled for 2 p.m. Saturday at the Copacia family home, 476 Dayton Ave.

The majority of team entry fees goes directly to the Lantz Bricker Scholarship Fund, with the remaining money is used to help with food costs and other tournament expenses. There is also a 50/50 raffle during the tournament as well as Salem Cornhole logo can koozies sold on site, with all proceeds going directly toward the scholarship fund.

Committee continues effort to save church

By JO ANN BOBBY-GILBERT
Staff Writer

WELLSVILLE — Their church may have officially closed Saturday, but members of the Committee to Save Immaculate Conception Church (ICC) continued their efforts Monday night to get that status changed.

At its regular weekly meeting, committee member Dr. Frank Rivelle read aloud a letter he was to send Tuesday to Bishop George Murry, reiterating the committee's desire that a forensic audit of the church's finances be conducted.

Rivelle noted this was the third such request, saying Murry responded to the last request with one sentence: "Give me a reason."

The newest letter advised Murry that ICC had the "fortunate position" of being financially sound when the Rev. Peter Haladej began his tenure as administrator of both the Wellsville parish and St. Aloysius in East Liverpool in May 2009.

He wrote, "In particular, ICC, for at least the last 15 years, never experienced an operating deficit and had surplus funds and CDs; now we have nothing."

Rivelle advised the bishop that, during the first fiscal year of Haladej's administration, expenditures for the ICC rectory were listed as $30,551, yet no money was spent on the rectory. "No known improvements were made to the ICC's rectory," Rivelle emphasized.

He concluded, "Father P could easily allocate funds from ICC bank accounts to St. Al's rectory improvement. He didn't need a gun to get his hands on the funds. The parishioners want to know what happened to the thousands of dollars that are unaccounted for. Do I need more reasons?"

Rivelle questioned during the meeting whether the committee needs an attorney in this country, instead of the two canon lawyers it has stationed in Rome. "We're wasting time is what we're doing," Rivelle complained.

But others disagreed, stressing that the canon lawyers hired by the committee are necessary.

"Without our attorneys in Rome, we won't win our appeal," Frank Benedetto said. "We're not wasting time. If you think you're getting the church opened overnight, you're wrong. It's a slow process."

Committee spokeswoman Beverly Hentzell said, "These people have spent years appealing cases and they have an enormous success rate. We should follow the advice of our attorneys and our advocate. We don't need dissension, we don't need arguments. We're doing everything right."

At the recommendation of advocate Peter Borre - who got the suggestion from a committee member - it was agreed to ask the attorneys to request a high-ranking cardinal in Rome send a letter to Murry, asking that ICC be kept open pending outcome of the appeal.

It was stressed Murry does not have to agree to this request but will be asked to do so "out of the goodness of his heart."

Last week, members saw people removing unknown items from ICC and Dolly Brophy reported Monday that some of the boxes contained a Nativity imported from Italy that was paid for with pledges from church parishioners.

She said the set is one of only two like it made and had been insured for $8,000, saying, "They were smart; they took it out before the last Mass. They know they can't take anything during the appeal."

The committee decided against sending a letter demanding that the Nativity be returned to the church, but a member of St. Al's parish offered to try and get an inventory of what was removed for the committee.

Members still voiced their concerns about the upkeep of their closed church, questioning who will trim the hedges and mow the St. Elizabeth Cemetery which is inside the village's Spring Hill Cemetery.

Mayor Joe Surace - a committee member - said the church had paid for cutting the grass in the past, but said the village has not been contacted about the matter since the church closing was announced.

Brophy raised questions about church members paying taxes on a cemetery levy and said, if there is no longer a church, the village should cut the grass.

Nunzio Lombardoizzi pointed out, "Everyone knows if the Catholics say no to the levy, it would never pass," but Surace reminded him the levy is for the entire cemetery, not just St. Elizabeth's. Surace said he will contact church officials about the issue.

In other matters, Rivelle offered to contact the Jesuits or Franciscans in Jefferson County to ask if someone can celebrate Mass with parishioners at the prayer services they plan to hold outside ICC each Saturday afternoon.

Man held, 2 sought in Hillsville robberies

Staff Reports

NEW CASTLE, Pa. — One Columbiana County man is in custody and two others sought in connection with an alleged robbery and assault in Lawrence County near here.

Jonathan P. Cuning, with residences listed in both East Palestine and Youngstown, waived extradition back to Pennsylvania when he appeared in Columbiana County Municipal Court.

According to a story in the New Castle News, Cuning was charged in connection with two incidents that occurred in the Hillsville quarries behind the Sky King Fireworks facility in Mahoning Township.

On June 30, the rider of a Yamaha YZ250 dirt bike said he was riding in the quarries when he was stopped and attacked by three men, one of whom had a shotgun.

Two men fled in an ATV while the third took the dirt bike. A shot reportedly was fired in the area of the victim.

On Aug. 1, the New Castle News reported, two men approached three people riding Honda motorcycles. Again, a shotgun was displayed and the two men took two of the bikes.

The New Castle paper said that Mahoning Township officer Brian Magliocca and Pennsylvania state trooper Dan Mosura interviewed Cuning at the Columbiana County jail on July 16, and Cuning implicated two New Waterford men in the incidents.

Alex Jonathan Conkle, 17, Macklin Road, allegedly drove Cuning to the quarry on June 30. Craig Michael Urbach, 19, of Metz Road, allegedly assisted Cuning in the Aug. 1 robbery.

The New Castle paper said numerous charges have been filed against the two, including felony counts of robbery, conspiracy to commit robbery, conspiracy to commit theft and conspiracy to commit aggravated assault.

Neither Conkle nor Urbach are in custody, the New Castle paper said.

Cuning has been charged with 24 counts, including robbery, aggravated assault, theft, reckless endangerment and terroristic threats.

MUNICIPAL

LISBON — In Columbiana County Municipal Court Tuesday, an Aug. 1 preliminary hearing was set for Blaine Perry, 49, 1630 Commerce St., Wellsville, charged with assault on a peace officer after an incident last week. Perry's bond is set at $50,000.

Christian Jaeger, 28, 7443 Spillway Lot, Lisbon, was fined $1,175, sentenced to 60 days in jail, had his license suspended for a year and was ordered to complete 25 hours of community service for OVI second offense, OVI breathalyzer, driving under suspension and a marked lanes violation.

An Aug. 25 pretrial was set for Amanda Baddeley, 29, 480 W. Pershing St., Salem, charged with theft. Baddeley, an employee of Circle K on West State Street in Salem, had been allegedly stealing lottery tickets from the store during her shifts and had been claiming the winnings. The store owner said there is video surveillance evidence of Baddeley stealing tickets.

An Aug. 30 pretrial was set for Morgan Parker, 24, 464 Alice St., East Palestine, charged with theft. Parker allegedly stole $37 in merchandise from Salem Walmart last Friday.

Joseph Saker IV, 27, Youngstown, was fined $200 and sentenced to 10 days in jail for speeding. This was Saker's third speeding violation within 12 months.

An Aug. 30 pretrial was set for Dale Dennison, 21, 4735 McCracken Road, Salem, charged with criminal trespassing.

State must keep up fight against child sex traffickers

An estimate that more than 1,000 children are victims of sex trafficking each year in Ohio may be greeted with skepticism by some. That is a lot of children involved in a horrific crime, after all.

Sadly, the estimate may not be far off the mark.

For obvious reasons it is difficult to know how many children are forced into sex trafficking. But there is some solid, reliable information from an organization that helps victims of the offense.

During the past year alone, the Central Ohio Rescue and Restore Coalition, a reputable organization led by the Salvation Army, helped 60 victims of child sex trafficking. Given factors such as the coalition's limited reach geographically and the fact many victims do not seek help, it is clear the total number may well be 1,000.

Ohio Attorney General Mike DeWine, stressing "we must do everything in our power to stop this exploitation and abuse," has reactivated the state's Human Trafficking Commission. The panel, formed by former Attorney General Richard Cordray, had been inactive for a few months since Cordray left office. DeWine recognized the need for it to continue its work; it will meet again in mid-August.

Cordray was right to establish the commission and DeWine was correct to keep its work going. Child sex trafficking is a terrible crime that exploits the very weakest Ohioans, harming them physically and emotionally, sometimes for life.

Ohioans should provide the commission and law enforcement agencies working with it the resources needed to stamp out child sex trafficking and punish perpetrators severely.

President Barack Obama has called for $400 billion in defense spending cuts during the next 12 years. That may not be imprudent, given a new philosophy that calls for more use of focused weapons such as special forces and aerial drones than of massive troop deployments.

But a few liberals in Congress, with U.S. Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., in the lead, want much more. They are demanding $1 trillion in defense spending cuts over 12 years.

No area of government should be immune to spending discipline. But liberals whose knee-jerk reaction to cuts in other areas of government is a resounding "no" should not be permitted to put Americans' security in jeopardy. National defense is the one absolutely crucial responsibility of government, after all.

And now Norway: No place on Earth truly safe from crazed gunman

CAL THOMAS

When parents send their children off to summer camp, they reasonably expect them to return refreshed and more attuned with the world than when they left home. Even in their wildest nightmares, they don't foresee them returning in a pine box.

We must now add Norway to the expanding list of unsafe places that includes Columbine, Oklahoma City, the World Trade Center, London, Madrid, Ft. Hood and Virginia Tech. The host of the 1994 Winter Olympics and home to the Nobel Peace Prize has had its sense of safety and security violated in ways it could never have imagined; shattered by a crazed gunman with an inflated sense of self, on a mission from Hell where he'll soon be sent.

Police are calling the gunman, Anders Behring Breivik, a "Christian fundamentalist" because we must have labels (except when describing Muslim fundamentalists, which police, politicians and much of the media try to avoid for fear of angering Islamists). Breivik is as much a "Christian fundamentalist" as Judas Iscariot was and he deserves a similar fate.

Writing in London's Daily Telegraph, reporter Mark Hughes notes, "Norway's intelligence service had previously been criticized for its failure to keep track of suspected terror cells and the country was felt to be complacent about the prospect of a terror attack," according to secret cables from WikiLeaks files.

That may be true, but how does a government crack a "cell" that isn't a cell? Breivik only recently created a Facebook page and his 1,500-page manifesto ranted against Muslims (about 2 percent of Norway's population is made up of Muslim immigrants, and that number is growing) and indigenous Europeans, whom he accused of betraying their heritage. That none of his young victims are responsible for the conditions he railed against adds to the madness of this inexplicable event.

Listening to some of the survivors tell their stories is heartbreaking. It took Norway police 90 minutes to arrive on scene, probably because of the "diversionary" bomb Breivik exploded outside government offices in Oslo. Breivik used the time to hunt down more victims until police finally arrived.

Norway forbids civilians from carrying concealed weapons, or owning an automatic weapon, unless they are gun collectors. As in America, gun laws do not deter criminals who are determined to cause harm with a weapon. What would have deterred Breivik would have been a gun in the hands of a competent person capable of stopping his mass-murdering spree.

If Norway can be a site for terror, is there a safe place on Earth? The answer is no. There are no "safe" places; no one can be 100 percent safe. Does that mean everyone should be armed? Not necessarily. What it means is that for some countries, some people and some places, a way to make the environment as safe as humanly possible is to have properly armed and trained people who can respond to such events.

Would Anders Behring Breivik have thought twice about his killing spree if he had known in advance that someone would shoot back? That is impossible to know. But if someone on Utoeya Island had returned fire, there's a possibility that far fewer would have been killed. This approach may not be pleasant for some to contemplate, but the alternative is more personal and national mourning, as is now being experienced in Norway.

Education of Herman Cain

KATHLEEN PARKER

Politics Rule No. 1: Never say what you really think, especially before you think.

GOP presidential hopeful Herman Cain learned this lesson hard and fast when he asserted recently that communities have a right to thwart construction of mosques in their neighborhoods. Cain, who hails from Atlanta and is best known as the CEO of Godfather's Pizza, made those comments during a visit to Murfreesboro, Tenn., where residents have been trying to block a mosque for the past couple of years.

A few months earlier, a reporter asked Cain whether he'd be comfortable with a Muslim in his Cabinet, and Cain said, well, no, not really. He elaborated, but too late. The bell had gonged, the die was cast, and the meme had become truth.

If anti-Muslim rhetoric is tonic to the far right, it was gold to those on the left looking for a nugget to chew on. Cain had stepped in it and every effort to extricate himself has made things worse. As dozens have noted, Cain's anti-mosque position doesn't jibe with the U.S. Constitution he aims to defend.

I sat down with Cain recently and offered him an opportunity to clarify his position. After half an hour or so of discussion, he eventually acknowledged the error of his comments while offering the usual litany of explanations. Microphones in face, questions lobbed like grenades, words taken out of context.

He also correctly recognized that no matter what he says, those who want to demagogue this issue will continue, and the evidence bears him out. The original question, he says, was would he feel comfortable? And the immediate, reflexive, impolitic answer was that he wouldn't... unless they're committed to the Constitution rather than Shariah law.

What followed dot-dot-dot got lost in the ethers, but never mind. When you run for president, you run with the big dogs.

The surpassing truth, of course, is that Cain was just plain wrong. The law of the land prevails every time and Muslims, like everyone else, either play by the rules or they don't play. The reason things keep getting worse for Cain is because when he tries to explain, he's really trying to justify — and you can't justify "wrong."

What is also probably true is that on a deep-brain level, Cain, like many Americans, fundamentally distrusts Muslims for all the reasons we know. But, as Cain conceded, fear of Muslims and the Muslim-thrashing that certain politicians have engaged in is an exercise in stereotyping that wouldn't be tolerated in any other case. (Well, except for white males, but that's another book.)

Cain's own trashing from critics is, as we say, a teachable moment and fairness requires that we treat it as such. Politics Amendment No. 1: Everybody gets to say one stupid thing and stay in the race. Cain isn't a bigot or a hater, but he was uninformed and reacted as the relatively inexperienced politician that he is. He has thought better of it, as people are allowed to do, and his final statement is that all Americans acting within the law may practice their faith as they please. There now, that wasn't so hard.

A mathematician by training, a preacher by vocation and a successful businessman by occupation, Cain is at Ground Zero when it comes to media sophistication. One may reasonably argue that anyone running for president should know better, but those whose votes Cain currently courts don't care about this type of sophistication. In fact, the more the lamestream media come after him, the more they like him. See Sarah Palin.

But it's a great big country, the president serves the many not the few, and Cain will become a smarter politician. Meanwhile, his strength as a candidate is in his considerable business acumen. How he would lead as president is evident in his campaign structure. He's the CEO, naturally, and his top aides are vice presidents. He's developing a board of advisers (economy, agriculture, foreign policy, health care, etc.), and the chairperson of each advisory group will become his board of directors.

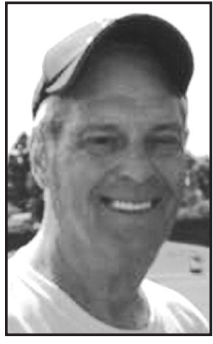

Cain's criticisms of President Obama largely focus on a management style that leads to lethargic decision-making (the Afghanistan surge, the BP oil spill). Whether Cain will get to test his own management style will depend foremost on whether he masters his tongue. In the meantime, he has some interesting ideas that are more compelling and urgent than whether Murfreesboro gets a mosque. He deserves a second hearing.

Wayne Walter will serve as Star Trax honorary starter

SALEM — Wayne Walter — the Reilly Stadium guy — is the official starter for the 2011 Star Trax Night 5K Race at 9 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 9.

Online race registration is available until Aug. 3 at <http://www.salemx-tramile.org>. Runners may also register the evening of the event at Reilly Stadium beginning at 7 p.m., but T-shirts will then be distributed on a first-come basis.

The Star Trax course winds through the neighborhoods around Centennial Park, starting and ending in the stadium on Ohio Avenue. A total of 72 trophies will be awarded to the top male and female runners overall, and the top three runners in 12 age categories.

As the maintenance man for the stadium Walter is the first to arrive before every event at the stadium and the last one to leave. On football game days, for instance, he opens the gates at 3 p.m. and turns the last lock after 11 p.m. He's thorough and conscientious in preparing for and cleaning up after events, and dealing with equipment breakdowns during games. "Anything that goes wrong, I'm supposed to fix," Walter said.

But it is the way he deals with students, which goes beyond his job description, that the X-tra Mile Club recognized by selecting him to start the race that typically draws more than 500 runners.

Walter knows nearly every student on every Salem High School team that plays at the stadium and every band member by name. He also connects with them.

Whether it is from his own high school and college athletic career, his experience as the parent of two boys who went on to play college football, or his years as an assistant girls basketball coach for Salem and United schools, Walter somehow seems to know when a teenager needs a quick nod of hello, when they need a wise-crack, and when they need a pep talk.

"Do the best you can for as long as you can," is the philosophy Walter has adopted after several significant health issues, and what he tries to convey to teens when they need encouragement.

"We're so please to have Wayne as this year's Star Trax Starter. He has made such a significant contribution to not just Salemsports, but also the Quaker marching band. I can't think of a more deserving person. Wayne is a good friend and we're very excited to honor him," said Ted Yuhaniak, Star Trax race director.

Walter spent his early years in Wheeling before moving to the area that is now in the West Branch School District. After graduating from Goshen Union High School he attended Ohio University where he played baseball and basketball from 1958 to 1962.

He finished his bachelor's degree in history at Mount Union College. Although prepared to teach, Walter's first job out of college was as plant superintendent at Sterling Trailer. He was the plant superintendent at Paxson Machine and then Electric Furnace Company before becoming a consultant. In 1998, after years as a fan in Salem's bleachers, he took the job as the stadium maintenance man.

Walter's favorite athletes to watch were his sons, Jeffrey and Bruce. Jeffrey, a 1980 SHS graduate, played football for two years at Kent State University where earned his bachelor's degree. He lives in Cuyahoga Falls with his wife, Stacy, and children, Michael and Hannah.

Bruce, a 1982 SHS graduate, played football for one year at Emporia State University in Emporia, Kansas, and three years at Kansas State University in Manhattan, Kansas. He graduated from Emporia State. He lives in Canada with his wife Cora and their son Kia. Walter was married for 42 years to Eileen Holtsinger Walter, a 1960 SHS graduate, before her death in 2003.

Star Trax is a fundraiser for the X-tra Mile Club, the booster organization for the Salem High School track and cross country teams. For additional information see www.salemx-tramile.org or contact Lori and Ted Yuhaniak, race directors, at 330-332-0550 or startrax@salem-x-tramile.org.

Graffiti vandals may have returned

Staff Reports

SALEM — Vandals who spray-painted graffiti on Reilly Stadium Sunday night may have returned to the scene of the crime 24 hours later.

City police responded to an anonymous call at 2:49 a.m. Tuesday in reference to people who were possibly spray-painting the wall at the stadium.

As officers arrived, several people were seen running northbound in front of the library. Police could not catch them.

Later, police returned to the stadium after another call that advised the people were back. The stadium was checked inside and around the sides with no one located.

At 3:24 a.m., officers were in the 400 block of Woodland Avenue during the second call back to the stadium, they were struck by small projectiles that appeared to have been thrown or projected from an unknown device. The particles struck two officers in Car 6 and the shift lieutenant standing between the cars.

Woodland is two short blocks east of the stadium.

There were no injuries or damage and the source of the particles was not located.

Overnight Sunday, vandals spray-painted three areas of the stadium. School maintenance supervisor Ken Hardy painted over the graffiti on Monday.

The next regular board meeting is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Aug. 18 at the K-12 campus.

Digger

The Grave Digger, driven by Randy Brown, is 11-feet tall and weighs six tons. It will take up the entire lane in the match race against the flame-throwing 300-mph "Jersey Thunder" jet dragster.

The dragster is driven by Terry Rosberg of Rockingham, N.C. He is a member of the Chippewa Cree Indian Tribe from Rocky Boy, Mont., and holds the record for being the "World's Fastest Native American."

Also appearing will be a full field (about 12) of 200 mile-per-hour, supercharged outlaw machines of the Supercharged Warriors, the "Super Cobra" jet Mustang Funny Car included, and hundreds of local racers and more.

"Grave Digger is an icon in the world of motorsports and to be able to bring the legendary machine to the Youngstown area for the only time this year will be a treat," said Jim Marchyshyn, Thunder Jam Operations Manager.

Crum said, "This is definitely the biggest event of the year ... the only time Grave Digger will be around here ... it uses massive drag slicks and does a heck-of-a-burnout."

The "Super Cobra" jet funny car will be on display at the Taco Bell restaurant on state Route 170 in Calcutta from 2 to 4 p.m. Friday, Aug. 5 and the Grave Digger will be at Chili's Bar and Grill, 7303 S. Market St., in Boardman from 5 to 8 p.m. on Friday.

Audit

Noting he was a minority (Republican) member of council, Berlin said, "I feel that increases in efficiency, accountability and performance are the keys to keeping taxes in check.

"The availability of LEAP Funds for a citywide audit is very welcome."

Berlin said that three times in the past two years a majority council approved placing tax issues on the ballot "which would have increased the amount of money that you, the taxpayers, would be paying by up to $2,000,000 per year.

"Each of the three tax increase issues failed by a wide margin, for an average of 70 percent of voters against increasing taxes."

BUSINESS HIGHLIGHTS

Threat to veto Boehner's House plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House threatened on Tuesday to veto emergency House legislation that aims to avert a threatened national default, a pre-emptive strike issued as Republican Speaker John Boehner labored to line up enough votes in his own party to pass the measure.

Boehner faced criticism from some conservatives in advance of an expected vote on Wednesday.

The bill would raise the debt limit by $1 trillion while making cuts to federal spending of $1.2 trillion — reductions that conservatives say aren't enough.

The measure also would establish a committee of lawmakers to recommend additional budget savings of $1.8 trillion, which would trigger an additional $1.6 trillion increase in the debt limit.

The White House objects to the requirement for a second vote before the 2012 elections.

Majority Leader Harry Reid said the measure stood no chance of passing the Senate even if it cleared the House. He pronounced it "dead on arrival."

Washington and the nation are staring down an Aug. 2 deadline to raise the debt limit or face national default.

Consumer confidence rises in July

NEW YORK (AP) — Two years into the recovery, Americans' confidence in the economy continues its rollercoaster ride.

As their short-term outlook on jobs and income eased somewhat amid a mix of optimistic and bad economic news, U.S. consumers' confidence rose slightly to 59.5 in July, according to a survey released Tuesday by a private research group.

That's up from a revised 57.6 in June — which marked a seven-month low in the measure — but still well below the reading of 90 that signals a healthy economy on the Conference Board's Consumer Confidence Index. It hasn't approached that level since the recession began in December 2007.

Spring buying gives housing market lift

WASHINGTON (AP) — Home prices rose for the second straight month in most major U.S. cities and are stabilizing after years of declines. But analysts say the trend in prices hardly signals a rebound for the troubled housing market.

A flurry of spring buyers is helping boost sales. At the same time, millions of foreclosures are in limbo, awaiting the results of a government investigation into improper practices by mortgage lenders. Once that probe is complete, banks will resume seizing homes and prices will likely fall again.

The Standard & Poor's Case-Shiller home-price index released Tuesday showed that prices rose in May in 16 of the 20 cities tracked.

Boston, Minneapolis and Washington topped the biggest monthly increases. Prices in Detroit, Las Vegas and Tampa, Fla. — three cities hit hardest by the housing crisis — fell to their lowest points since the recession began.

New-home sales fell 1 percent in June

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fewer people bought new homes in June, evidence that the housing market remains weak. Sales of new homes fell 1 percent last month to an annual rate of 312,000, the Commerce Department said Tuesday.

That's less than half the 700,000 that economists say is typical in healthy markets.

Last year was the worst for new-home sales on records dating back a half century. Through the first six months of this year, sales are lagging behind last year's totals.

Housing remains the weakest part of the U.S. economy. High unemployment, larger down payment requirements and tougher lending standards are preventing many people from buying homes. And some potential buyers who can clear those hurdles are holding off, worried that home prices have yet to bottom out.

Soros closing hedge fund

BOSTON (AP) — Billionaire investor George Soros is closing his nearly $26 billion hedge fund to outside investors so that it will be managed solely for the Soros family, according to a letter obtained by The Associated Press on Tuesday.

The letter, sent to investors in the Quantum Endowment Fund, says Soros Fund Management LLC is making the change because of new rules that will expand hedge fund disclosure requirements.

About $750 million of the total $25.5 billion in the fund is invested for outsiders, rather than the family, according to a person familiar with the matter. The person declined to be identified because he was not authorized to disclose details about the private company.

The $750 million is expected to be returned to outside investors by year's end.

McDonald's: Apple in every Happy Meal

NEW YORK (AP) — An apple a day may keep the doctor away. But when you put it in a Happy Meal, it might help keep regulators at bay too.

McDonald's on Tuesday said that it would add apple slices and reduce the portion of French fries in its children's meal boxes beginning this fall, effectively taking away consumers' current choice between either having apples with caramel dip or fries as a Happy Meal side.

The move by McDonald's, which has become a leader in moving from just burgers and fries to more nutritious fare like oatmeal and salads, comes as fast food chains face intense scrutiny from health officials and others who blame the industry for childhood obesity and other health-related problems. Some municipalities, including San Francisco, have even banned fast food restaurants from selling kids' meals with toys.

Wal-Mart offers video streaming on website

NEW YORK (AP) — Now playing: Movies at Walmart.com.

The world's largest retailer on Tuesday started streaming many movies the same day they come out on DVD, in a second bid for a share of popular movie rental and streaming website Netflix Inc.'s business and just two weeks after Netflix announced new price increases.

Wal-Mart Stores Inc. bought video-streaming service Vudu.com 18 months ago and now offers 20,000 titles that can be viewed on almost any device with Internet access, from computers to televisions to Sony's PlayStation3 and other Blu-Ray disc players.

Movies are available at Walmart.com to rent for $1 to $5.99 or to purchase for $4.99 and up. Wal-Mart is not offering subscriptions, making its service more similar to Apple Inc.'s iTunes, which charges $3.99 to rent newly released movies and $14.99 to buy a movie.

In addition to Netflix, another competitor streaming movies and TV shows by subscription is Hulu.com, which now offers a premium service for $7.99 a month with more back-season shows and more movies. Without a subscription, Hulu viewers can watch shows and movies free in exchange for watching advertising.

The movie offering fits with the Wal-Mart website's strategy of offering a "seamless continuous shopping service," said Steve Nave, senior vice president and general manager of Walmart.com.

Wal-Mart's announcement comes on the heels of Netflix saying it will raise rates and charge separately for streaming and rental DVDs. Its second price hike in eight months, Netflix's planned increases could amount to 60 percent for paying customers, starting Sept. 1. New subscribers have to pay the new prices immediately.

Netflix plans to charge $16 a month for services that used to cost $10 a month when bundled together, for example. It's still changing $8 a month for streaming, which it launched late last year. But instead of charging $2 for a plan that includes one DVD at a time by mail, the company will charge $8 and up for DVD plans.

Customers have taken to social media sites Facebook and Twitter to vent their anger over Netflix's increases, but executives said they anticipated the reaction. The company's willingness to risk alienating subscribers signals it needs more revenue to cover rising costs.

Through June, Netflix had 24.6 million subscribers in the U.S.

Wal-Mart, based in Bentonville, Ark., has tested the movie-rental waters before. It previously offered a DVD-by-mail service that cost $12.97 per month for two titles and $17.36 per month for three titles. But it ceded that program to Netflix in May 2005, letting customers continue their subscriptions with Los Gatos, Calif.-based Netflix until a rate hike. Apple is based in Cupertino, Calif.

HOROSCOPE

By HOLIDAY MATHIS 7/27/11

The Leo sun continues to put on a show — a human drama in which the characters in our lives are more vibrant and riveting than anything on prime time television. Tomorrow, Venus will join in on the action, so expect a twist in the plot. Tonight's communicative Gemini moon gives way to the touchy-feely lunar influence of Cancer.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Do not try to parent other people's children, even if you're paid to oversee them. Knowing the boundaries will save you from trouble. The principle will also apply today to adults who act like children.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You will witness inspiring examples of sharing and caring. Indeed, you may be the instigator of these acts, as you will be moved to express the deep affection you feel for loved ones.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You will praise good behavior in others. You'll do this subtly, so as not to come across as overbearing. You are practiced in the art of leading from behind.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You have poise, presence and a clear voice. You will ask for what you want, and you will get it. You have no need of qualifiers, such as, "I hate to bother you, but..." You have the confidence of a leader.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Someone is not who he says he is. The situation is a little like Dorothy and her friends visiting the Wizard of Oz. The one in power has to posture and pretend because that is what he thinks the citizens expect.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Your apprehensions will keep you from taking a risk that's not worth taking. However, when you see an opportunity that is right for you but scary because it's new, you will courageously seize the moment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You believe it's rude to ramble on to a captive audience. And yet, you will listen patiently to the one who has trouble getting to the point. That's how kind you are.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). There are those who believe that crying is a form of weakness and is to be avoided at all costs. They are forgetting that there is a healing balm inside every tear. Tolerate the tears of others, and of course, accept your own.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Be on the lookout for new treasures. There is an item very near you that would fit in perfectly with a collection or special interest of yours. Ask specific questions, and you'll find your way to it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You didn't sign up to be a role model, but that is what you have become. So embrace your position, and show everyone the way. It is one of your many purposes on the planet.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You feel wronged by someone. This person meant you no harm, but his or her selfishness has caused you extra work. Consider that on some level you may have agreed to this inconvenience.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). A ritual can help you release what is old and let in new light. This doesn't have to be a practice laid out for you by religion or tradition. You are free to create your own steps for releasing the past.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (July 27). Your easygoing way will attract good fortune to your personal life in August. Just don't brag, or loved ones will get jealous. You'll negotiate and strike a pretty deal in September. The improvements to your routine have you looking fantastic in November. Expect family additions in January. Invest in May. Taurus and Capricorn people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 20, 1, 6, 36 and 39.

From herbs to soda

Heloise

Dear Readers: Here are some FAVORITE FOOD HINTS from Heloise Central:

□ Store herbs on a revolving shelf and alphabetize them so they are easy to locate. Don't store spices above the stove or dishwasher. The heat and steam can cause them to deteriorate quickly.

□ Save large shaker containers (like Parmesan cheese) to put sugar, flour or powdered sugar in.

□ Want a healthy snack? Toast a piece of whole-wheat bread, spread just a little peanut butter on, and grate some Granny Smith or other tart apple over the top.

□ Add a slice of bread to a package or container of cookies to keep them from getting hard or to help soften them up.

□ Can't remember if you salted the water for pasta? Add a few grains of black pepper (just enough to see) when you salt the water.

□ Substitute club soda for water when making a German chocolate cake. The cake will end up moist and delicious!

— Heloise

CAKE DONE?

Dear Readers: When you run out of toothpicks and need to check the doneness of a cake, use a piece of uncooked spaghetti. This works just as well as toothpicks — no batter on the spaghetti means the cake is done. — Heloise

CLOUDY GLASSES

Dear Readers: The all-time most-often-asked question? What to do about cloudy drinking glasses. Don't have the problem now? You may in the future. Clip this column and put it in a safe place in case you need it.

Soak the glasses in warmed (not boiling) household vinegar for about an hour. Then use a nylon-net scrubber to get rid of any leftover cloudiness. My Heloise's Fantabulous Vinegar Hints and More pamphlet contains many money-saving hints. To receive it, mail $5 and a long, self-addressed, stamped (64 cents) envelope to: Heloise/Vinegar, P.O. Box 795001, San Antonio, TX 78279-5001. An easy way to clean plastic miniblinds is to use a solution of half white vinegar and half water. This will cut right through grit and grime. — Heloise

Neighborhood shrew shouldn't be scorned

DEAR ABBY: There's a venomous old woman who roams through our neighborhood looking for victims to embarrass, humiliate or annoy. She told a neighbor's 11-year-old granddaughter she looked like a slut because she was wearing shorts currently in fashion for the young. She habitually cuts in front of people in line at the supermarket, puts 25 items on the 15-item service line, etc. A new neighbor thought she should be treated with a little kindness. She had her opportunity recently when we were out to breakfast at a restaurant. The harridan sat alone (her husband refuses to be seen in public with her), and my friend commented to her on the beautiful day. Her response? "Don't waste my time with meaningless inanities!" She then proceeded to abuse the server by repeatedly sending her plate back, each time becoming more unpleasant. The girl ended up in tears. At that point, my friend walked over and said quietly, "I hope you don't think your advanced age justifies your meanness." The witch accused my friend of "slandering" her and left vowing never to return. This elicited a round of applause from the customers and staff.

Why do some people go through life behaving so outrageously? How can she derive satisfaction from being so hateful? — PUZZLED IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR PUZZLED: Ruling out the idea that the person you have described may be mentally disturbed, it's possible she may be so unhappy in her personal life that she's trying to make herself feel better by abusing others. She's a sad case. I'd like to think that when the other diners applauded, it was directed in support of your friend rather than at the disagreeable woman as she left the restaurant.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 34-year-old man, I have been divorced for a couple of years and have no children. I have been dating an incredible woman, "Nikki," who is a bit older than I am. She has three children. The elephant in the room has always been whether or not Nikki would want more children. We finally discussed it, and she confirmed that she does not. She said she's looking forward to the next phase of her life as her kids get older, which I understand. That conversation has led to a break in our relationship. We haven't spoken for the past two weeks, and it seems like two years. I am struggling with what to do. I have always wanted to be a dad. Would being a stepdad be as fulfilling for me? Is being in a good relationship more important? Having kids doesn't automatically make things great, right? Could I find someone as wonderful as Nikki, but who wants to have a kid? Abby, I'm conflicted, and you're the only one I could think of for advice. — JUMBLED IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

DEAR JUMBLED: Only you can decide whether being a stepfather to Nikki's children would be enough for you. For some men, it would be. For others, it wouldn't be enough. Of course, the primary relationship must be between the husband and wife. Children grow up, leave and establish lives of their own. And you're right, having kids doesn't "automatically" make things great if there is trouble in the relationship. While there are no guarantees you will find someone as wonderful as Nikki, the odds are very good that you will meet a woman — or more than one — whose goals are similar to yours and who would love to have a family with you. But it won't happen until you firmly decide exactly what you want.

Watchful waiting for prostate cancer

Dr. Donohue

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am an 80-year-old male whose annual physical exam was good. My wife and I have a good sex life. We've been married 61 years. However, my PSA rose to 5.7. My family doctor sent me to a urologist, who suggested a biopsy.

The urologist said my prostate gland is normal for my age and had no hard spots or lumps. My dad died at 87 due, in part, to prostate cancer. A brother also had difficulties. I read that at my age, I should enjoy life without such procedures. Your opinion, please. — B.M.

ANSWER: What to do when the prostate specific antigen (PSA) blood test is higher than normal is a controversial subject. Every year, about 192,000 men are diagnosed with prostate cancer. Close to 70 percent of those cancers are low-grade, meaning they don't pose a serious threat to life. Such cancers, depending on the man's age and his health, may not require any treatment other than scheduled monitoring.

One of the ingredients that goes into the mix for making a decision for "active surveillance" is what's seen on the biopsy. The pathologist examining the prostate tissue discovers if any cancer is present and assesses the cancer's stage and its potential to be an aggressive cancer. If the cancer is in its early stages and if its appearance is one that's not threatening, then the decision for treatment is something that can be discussed with the doctor. Quality of life is as important as exension of life. However, I believe you should have the biopsy. It has some rare complications, but it provides information not obtainable in any other way.

You are a very young 80-year-old. You have no other health problems that might shorten your life. You have a family history of prostate cancer. If the biopsy shows a low-grade cancer, then talk to the doctor about your wishes. One of those wishes could be active surveillance.

The booklet on the prostate gland discusses gland enlargement and cancer. Readers can order a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue — No. 1001, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Can. With the recipient's printed name and address.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am a 52-year-old male in good health. I am not a drinker or a smoker. My problem is premature ejaculation. I am on no medicines. Are there any vitamins or supplements that would help me? — Anon.

ANSWER: This discussion should start with your family doctor. The doctor can, after talking with you, decide if the problem is physical or psychological. Both are possible causes. Anxiety, depression and prostate gland inflammation are examples of things that can lead to your problem.

Sometimes simply starting and stopping and then restarting relations will solve the problem. A numbing agent like the combination of lidocaine and prilocaine cream might be helpful. A condom should be worn so that your partner isn't affected by the cream. Fluoxetine, paroxetine and sertraline are medicines that have been successful for some men. Vitamins or supplements are not likely to help.

Granddaughter moves in with boss

Annie's Mailbox

Dear Annie: My granddaughter, "Tammi," graduated high school at the end of May. She has been working at a pet store since last fall. This was her first real job, and she was both elated and proud. When I visited over the Christmas holidays, she took me to the store to meet her boss and the other teen employees. Tammi told me the boss had discussed the store's finances with her, that he didn't love his wife any longer, that he was getting a divorce, and on and on. I told her this is not something a 34-year-old employer would be sharing with an 18-year-old female employee unless he had an ulterior motive.

The day after her 19th birthday, Tammi left home and moved in with her boss, who is now divorced and shares custody of his 4-year-old child. She is absolutely enthralled with this guy, who is four years younger than her father. Our family is just sick over this. We've all tried talking to her, but she won't listen. She said we should lighten up and that her friends are all OK with it. I know for a fact that her best friend doesn't like this fellow and says he's mean to Tammi. My granddaughter says she's an adult and can do whatever she wants. How can we make her realize that this is a huge mistake? — Worried Sick in Illinois

Dear Worried: Unfortunately, Tammi is right — she is an adult and can make as many lousy decisions as she wants. Often, kids are attracted to what seems most outrageous to their families. Perhaps if you stop fighting her, Tammi will have less to rebel against. Welcome this man into your family as best you can, and let Tammi see him in context. She may decide he's not so outrageous after all. Or you might decide he's not as terrible a choice as you originally feared.

Tribe searching for trade partner

Antonetti open to all possibilities

By JIM INGRAM
Special to the Salem News

CLEVELAND — It takes two to tango so for now Chris Antonetti is break dancing.

Alone. "We'll do everything we can to make a deal," the Indians general manager said, "but it takes two parties to make one, and despite our best efforts things haven't aligned for us to execute one yet."

The non-waiver trade deadline is 4 p.m. Sunday, and it's very clear what the Indians need most: another hitter. Preferably two.

"The market is slower in developing that it has in years past," said Antonetti. "Our preference would have been to do something a few weeks ago, but we can't dictate the timing. Hopefully in the next couple of days some dominoes will fall and open up the market."

Browns getting ready to go back to work

Are you ready for some football?

BEREA (AP) — There was no heavy lifting, long wind sprints or hard hitting line drills at the Cleveland Browns' training facility Tuesday.

But players were back. And a day after the lockout ended, that's all that mattered.

Punter Reggie Hodges, defensive lineman Ahtyba Rubin and defensive backs Joe Hayden and T.J. Ward were there for what seemed more like freshman orientation than back-to-work day as the Browns began to look forward to their new-look season.

"We talked with one another," Rubin said, "because the big thing is we missed each other."

Indeed, they all agreed that the biggest void during the NFL's 4½-month long lockout was not being around buddies.

"Working out at home, it's good cause you're gonna still get the work in," said Hayden, the team's No. 1 draft pick two years ago and now a key member of the defense. "But just being around the dudes, making sure you're all hanging out together, going out to dinner, all that stuff. I think that was the one thing I missed the most."

Bengals won't trade Palmer

QB said he would retire if he's not traded

CINCINNATI (AP) — Bengals owner Mike Brown insisted on Tuesday that he won't trade quarterback Carson Palmer, who wants to leave one of the NFL's least-successful franchises.

Palmer, who has four years left on his contract, told the team in January that he would retire if he's not traded. The Bengals have only two winning seasons in the last 20 years, one of the worst stretches of futility in league history.

Brown said the club will move on without its franchise quarterback. The Bengals plan to hold their first training camp workout Saturday in Georgetown, Ky.

"I honestly like Carson Palmer," Brown said. "He was a splendid player for us. He's a good person. I wish him well. And he is retired. That is his choice. ... I'm not expecting him to be back."

Asked why he wouldn't trade Palmer and get some draft picks in return, Brown said it was a matter of principle.

Indians can't rally vs. Angels

Angels' Weaver wins eighth straight

CLEVELAND (AP) — Jered Weaver earned his eighth straight win as Mark Trumbo doubled home two runs and the Los Angeles Angels defeated the Cleveland Indians 2-1 on Tuesday night.

Weaver (14-4) gave up one run over seven innings — a home run by Matt LaPorta in the seventh — and lowered his ERA to 1.79, best in the majors. In going 8-0 in 12 starts since May 23, he has a 1.27 ERA over 92 1-3 innings.

Scott Downs worked the eighth for the Angels. Jordan Walden, who blew the save Monday night when Cleveland scored twice in the ninth to win 3-2, earned his 24th save in 31 chances.

It wasn't easy.

Cleveland loaded the bases with no outs. Walden then got LaPorta to ground into a home-to-first double play. That brought up rookie Jason Kipnis, whose first career hit won Monday's game. Walden pumped his fist in the air as he threw a third strike past Kipnis to close it out.

Trumbo delivered against Josh Tomlin (11-5) in the top of the seventh.

Bobby Abreu singled and moved up on a groundout. With two outs, Indians manager Manny Acta ordered Tomlin to intentionally walk hot-hitting Howie Kendrick to face Trumbo.

Kendrick had eight hits in his previous four games, is a .340 hitter in July during his career and is batting .324 on the road this year. Trumbo was in a 1-for-15 slide. The big first baseman broke out of it by lining a 1-2 pitch off the wall in right-center to easily drive home two runs.

The Angels, second in the AL West, have won five of seven. Cleveland, second in the AL Central, have dropped seven of 10.

Tomlin threw first-pitch strikes to 26 of 28 batters, not counting the intentional walk. The right-hander allowed two runs and four hits, striking out three over eight innings. Tomlin has worked at least five innings in each of his 33 career starts, tied with Pat Malone (1928-29) for the third-longest

Steelers happy to be in training

Handful of players arrive at facility

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Sure, there weren't any high-intensity cardiovascular workouts, no comprehensive study of play-book intricacies, no formal weightlifting. And certainly nothing close to a full-pads practice.

But that didn't matter to Pittsburgh Steelers second-year receiver Emmanuel Sanders. All he cared about on Tuesday was the fact that, at last, the Steelers had removed the metaphorical locks from the doors of the team's complex on the city's South Side.

"I am just happy to be back in the facility," he said, "and be around the coaches and be around the team."

One day after the NFL and its players' union announced the end of the 4 1-2 month lockout, Sanders was one of almost a dozen Steelers

Free-agent frenzy: wild times in NFL

By BARRY WILNER
Associated Press

The free agency free-for-all has begun, mostly with obscure names from the college ranks.

It will get wilder.

Contract negotiations for free agents and draft picks started Tuesday, with draftees able to sign right away. The big names among veterans — Nnamdi Asomugha, Antonio Holmes, Matt Hasselbeck — can't sign until Thursday, but their agents are negotiating deals right now.

Throw in dozens of players who will be cut, such as Dallas receiver Roy Williams and Baltimore tight end Todd Heap, which officially can't happen until Thursday, and it's "organized chaos," according to Colts general manager Chris Polian.

"It's a lot of stress, work, preparation. But it's what we all look forward to. It's our playoffs and our Super Bowl," agent Peter Schaffer said.

Indeed, several agents said they didn't expect to sleep Tuesday as the NFL reopened for business after 4½ months. In addition to their clients already in the league who are unrestricted or restricted free agents, they will have veterans released. And they are trying to set up youngsters, such as college starters safety Winston Venable of Boise State (Chicago) and quarterback Jerrod Johnson of Texas A&M (Philadelphia), with teams after they were passed over in April's draft.

"I always have a lot of guys in that category, and it's been absolutely nuts," said agent Joe Linta, who placed Michigan State tight end Charlie Gantt with the Chiefs and Cal receiver Jeremy Ross with the Patriots on Tuesday. He also fielded calls from a dozen teams for Utah defensive tackle Sealver Siliga before he signed with San Francisco.

"There are times when you are fielding four or five calls at once," added Linta. "Multiply, say, 10 guys you are trying to get signed by maybe three to 10 teams interested ... you do the math."

The math adds up to hundreds of transactions in a few days, as opposed to a few weeks had there not been a 4½-month labor stoppage.

"I think the best way to say it is whatever you can imagine, it's probably worse than that," Cardinals coach Ken Whisenhunt said. "There is multitasking at its most furious."

veterans — along with several rookies — who made an appearance.

The veterans showing up was more, well, for show than anything else.

Sanders arrived not long after fellow young receiver Antonio Brown did the same just after the 10 a.m. league-mandated official opening. The two good friends left at roughly the same time, too, after no more than two hours at the complex.

"We threw out on the field and ran a couple of routes," Sanders said. "And I beat (reserve cornerback Crezdon Butler) in ping pong. That's about it."

All-Pro linebacker James Harrison was the first player seen to arrive — but he spent only a few minutes unloading his red pickup truck. Embroiled in a controversy after making some off-color remarks targeting NFL commissioner Roger Goodell to Men's Journal magazine earlier this month, Harrison did not speak to reporters.

Neither did another Steeler who found himself in hot water after offseason comments, running back Rashard Mendenhall.

Officially, the Steelers did not allow the media from speaking with any of their players or coaches while on team property Tuesday. But some players exchanged informal pleasantries with the media, as well as with teammates and other team employees.

"Just being back and seeing all the coaches and your team-

"Carson signed a contract. He made a commitment. He gave his word," Brown said. "We relied on his word. We relied on his commitment. We expected him to perform here. He's going to walk away from his commitment. We aren't going to reward him for doing it."

Brown has traditionally taken a hard line on players trying to leave. Receiver Chad Ochocinco unsuccessfully lobbied for a trade three years ago, but Brown refused. Ochocinco has one year left on his deal, but is hoping to be released in the next few weeks.

Brown and coach Marvin Lewis declined to say anything about Ochocinco on Tuesday other than that he's under contract. The Bengals picked receiver A.J. Green in the first round of the draft, giving themselves his eventual replacement.

The Bengals drafted Andy Dalton in the second round last April. Brown indicated on Tuesday that he'll be the starter heading into camp, even though he hasn't been able to work with coaches because of the NFL's lockout. Jordan Palmer — Carson's younger brother — is the only experienced quarterback on the roster.

came in on their own for a quick workout or to view some training films were ever worried about the NFL season being in jeopardy.

"I had no doubt," Hayden said. "I felt as though we weren't gonna miss any games."

And they had high praise for the players who put in the long hours to hammer out the deal.

"I just let my player reps take care of it and now I'll be back at work again Friday," Rubin said. "Everything is basically the same, just like any other camp."

Ward concurred.

"We had complete faith in our team representatives and the NFLPA that they'd get it done with the owners," he said. "No one wants to see a season without football, so I was pretty sure it was all gonna get resolved."

The Browns, coming off a 5-11 season, need all the time they can get under new coach Pat Shurmur. He is transforming to a West Coast offense and will change the defense from a 3-4 alignment to a 4-3.

Ward is confident the defense will be ready for the season opener at home Sept. 11 against an AFC North rival, Cincinnati.

"It's not going to be as difficult as our defense was last year," Ward said. "We had a bunch of schemes and a bunch of techniques and calls that, I think at times, confused some

Normally, teams would bring in players to visit their facilities, have them work out and take physicals, perhaps even attend meetings and speak with potential future teammates. Some of that might happen in the next few days, particularly for a high-profile player such as Asomugha.

Most of it won't. "I think all of the guys realize this is going to be a whole new world," agent Jordan Woy said. "Most said, 'Listen, the bottom line is the team I'm with I like. If somebody out there is really interested, if they come with a great offer up front, then we'll look into that.'"

"They realize they're going to have to make quicker, probably less-informed decisions than they have in the past. They're just going to have to do best they can."

So are the teams. Sure, all 32 clubs have had more than enough extra time to watch video and dissect the games of every free agent on the market. Maybe that's not such a great think; overanalysis has destroyed the chances of many an NFL team through the years.

And now there's the added element of all those vets being released. "In this climate, anything's possible," said Ravens coach John Harbaugh, whose team will release Heap, receiver Derrick Mason and running back Willis McGahee.

"You may have an opportunity to bring some of those guys back. You may not. It just depends on how things shake out the next couple of days."

What also might shake out: shorter contracts. Teams might not be comfortable with long-term deals (the five- and six-year varieties) in this post-lockout climate. The big bucks could be there, but not for as many seasons.

"Being a free agent in 2011 doesn't necessarily mean that those players will all sign lucrative long-term deals," said agent Ben Dogra, who represents soon-to-be former Cowboy Williams. "You will see more short-term deals than ever before. Agents will have to project into free agency of 2012 as much as this year."

At least in 2012, things will return to normality.

mates is pretty exciting," Brown said from his black Jeep at the entrance to the complex's parking lot.

Other veterans on the premises Tuesday included defensive end Brett Keisel — his beard significantly shorter than it was during February's Super Bowl — as well as Pittsburgh's two starting guards from that 31-25 loss to the Green Bay Packers, Ramon Foster and Chris Kemoeatu.

Coach Mike Tomlin waved to reporters as he walked through the parking lot, and offensive coordinator Bruce Arians chatted informally while sitting in his convertible on his way out of the complex.

More than a dozen rookies showed up, some of them visiting the team's facility for the first time. Pittsburgh announced the signing of 18 undrafted free agents on Tuesday, and several slowly trickled into the facility. Director of football operations Kevin Colbert introduced a group of them to team chairman emeritus Dan Rooney during lunch in the cafeteria.

While, at times, negotiations between the league and its players became contentious, Steelers players' union representative Ryan Clark said there won't be any lingering effects in the relationship between the players and the Rooney family.

During his weekly morning show appearance on KDKA-FM in Pittsburgh, Clark said that after the new collective bargaining agreement was announced, Steelers president Art Rooney II thanked Clark for representing the team's players.

"The only owners I care back after Lewis decided to return even though Brown promised no significant changes in how the organization is run.

The Bengals originally planned to have players report at Georgetown College — a 90-mile drive south of Cincinnati — on Wednesday and have their first practice a day later. They pushed the schedule back by two days.

Players will have physicals at the stadium on Thursday and Friday morning, then report to Georgetown on Friday afternoon.

Players visited the stadium throughout the day, getting playbooks and meeting briefly with coaches who were busy trying to contact college free agents. Cincinnati has one of the NFL's smallest front offices, making a hectic time even more challenging.

"It's been a crazy day," offensive line coach Paul Alexander said. "In fact, all the linemen came through and I was able to spend about one minute with each guy and then, 'Get out of here, I've got to go try to sign some college free agents.'" about are the Rooneys," Clark said on the radio show. "As far as we're concerned, we're collectively ready to win championships. I'm ready for (Rooney) to give us his speech at the beginning of camp, and we're ready to go out and work."

"They've been good to us, and the deal is a good deal. It's not like they just put it out there and didn't give us anything ... It's time to play football and just put this all behind us."

Notes: Each of the team's seven draft picks showed up at the facility Tuesday. OSU makes it official: Pryor not coming back

Ex-QB is banned from any contact with the program for five years

COLUMBUS (AP) — Terrelle Pryor's lawyer wanted Ohio State to make it clear to the NFL that his client could not return to the Buckeyes. So Ohio State not only declared its former star quarterback would not have played at any time during the 2011 season but also banned him from any contact with the school's athletic program for the next five years.

In a letter from Ohio State athletic director Gene Smith dated Tuesday, Smith said that Pryor was ineligible because he failed to cooperate with NCAA and Ohio State investigators. He then added, "The university must also dissociate you from its athletic program for a period of five years."

That means that Pryor can have no contact with recruits or enrolled Buckeyes, cannot accept complimentary tickets to home games and cannot use the team's athletic facilities.

Smith didn't rule out the use of all campus facilities, however.

"Please note that this dissociation does NOT prohibit you from enrolling in classes at the university to complete your degree," Smith wrote. "As you know, I would encourage you to complete your degree."

There had been whispers that the NFL might not offer Pryor a spot in a potential supplemental draft in the waning days of this lockout-shortened summer because he had only been suspended for the first five games of the 2011 season for accepting improper benefits from a Columbus tattoo-parlor owner. Pryor was at the center of an ongoing series of controversies that led to coach Jim Tressel's forced resignation on May 30.

The NFL's rules state a supplemental draft is open to "any player who is ineligible." Since Pryor still could have played the second half of the 2011 season, there was still a question whether he could have regained his eligibility and played.

NFL spokesman Greg Aiello said the league has not decided anything about a prospective supplemental draft, nor has it considered the status of Pryor.

"We have not set a date for the supplemental draft nor made any determinations on the eligibility of individual players," Aiello said in an email to The Associated Press.

Pryor's Columbus lawyer,

Larry James, said he sought the letter from Smith to rule out any chance of Pryor playing again in college, although that seemed extremely unlikely since he has hired agent Drew Rosenhaus and has been working out in Florida for the past several weeks.

"When you don't cooperate (with the NCAA) it's the death knell," James said Tuesday. "Once you sign with an agent, once you fail to work with the NCAA, you're ineligible."

In other words, there's no turning back for Pryor, the nation's top quarterback recruit from Jeanette, Pa., who had success on the field but helped bring a lengthy NCAA investigation upon one of the nation's premier football powerhouses. After the NCAA began looking into players who traded signed memorabilia, trophies and championship rings to the tattoo-parlor owner, it led to five players — including Pryor — being suspended for the first five games this fall. (A sixth player was subsequently suspended.)

The university later learned that Tressel had known his players had accepted cash and tattoos for more than nine months but contrary to his contract and NCAA rules did not tell Smith, the NCAA or Ohio State's compliance department.

That led to Tressel being forced to resign on May 30.

Ohio State goes before the NCAA's committee on infractions on Aug. 12 in Indianapolis. The school has vacated the 2010 season, including its victory over Arkansas in the Sugar Bowl and has self-imposed a two-year NCAA probation. The infractions committee could accept those penalties or it could hand out stiffer sanctions, including bowl bans and recruiting limitations.

James said the letter from Smith was necessary to make it clear to the NFL that Pryor is out of options — other than a supplemental draft.

"I don't think anybody on this planet who's paying attention to this thought Terrelle was attempting to game the system" by leaving school early for the NFL, James said.

Smith's letter was also emailed to the NCAA, Ohio State athletic administration officials, lawyers, the university's ticket manager, interim coach Luke Fickell and all other Buckeyes coaches in all sports.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Penguins on Tuesday signed forward Jason Williams to a one-year contract, worth $600,000.

Williams, 30, is a 10-year NHL veteran who played in 27 games with Dallas last season, scoring five points. He is a 5-foot-11, 192-pound right wing, who has also played for Detroit, Chicago, Columbus, and Atlanta.

Williams was a member of the Red Wings' 2001-02 Stanley Cup championship squad, appearing in nine postseason games that spring.

He had his best season in 2005-06 with Detroit, posting career highs in games played (80), goals (21), assists (37), and points (58).

Williams is a native of London, Ontario, and has appeared in 447 regular-season NHL games. He has 93 career goals and 225 points.

The Penguins also signed defenseman Scott Harrington, their 6-foot, 200-pound second-round pick, to a three-year contract. Harrington, 18, was chosen with the 54th overall selection in June. He attended the Penguins' annual prospect development camp earlier this month.

Harrington is a native of Kingston, Ontario, who has played two seasons already with London, totaling 36 points.

Big Ten championship game tickets on sale July 30

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Tickets for the inaugural Big Ten championship game will go on sale to the general public on Saturday at 9 a.m. CDT.

The game is Dec. 3 at Lucas Oil Stadium in Indianapolis and will be televised by Fox Sports.

Tickets can be purchased through Ticketmaster at www.ticketmaster.com or (800) 745-3000. Cost is $50 to $125, and orders will be limited to eight tickets.

The game matches winners of the Legends and Leaders divisions, with the winner earning the conference title and a berth in either the Rose Bowl or BCS national championship game.

Indians GM Antonetti eager to deal

CLEVELAND (AP) — General manager Chris Antonetti is willing to deal any player to help the Cleveland Indians win now.

Antonetti said Tuesday that the time is right for the Indians, one game behind first-place Detroit in the AL Central entering Tuesday, to add a player or two. Now, he needs to find a trading partner willing to make what he deems is an equitable deal by Sunday's 4 p.m. non-waiver deadline.

The first-year GM said Cleveland is definitely in the market to add an offensive player and that he wouldn't rule out supplementing a strong pitching staff, either. Adding some salary to one of the game's lowest payrolls also isn't out of the question.

That's a switch for the money-conscious Indians.

Since winning the AL Central in 2007, the Indians have been midseason sellers, unloading high-priced veterans for prospects. Some of those younger players have Cleveland back in contention.

Toledo is preseason MAC favorite

DETROIT (AP) — Toledo is the preseason favorite to win the Mid-American Conference title.

The Rockets were tabbed to win the West division while defending champion Miami of Ohio was narrowly picked to win the East over Ohio. The poll of media covering the MAC was announced Tuesday during the conference's media day.

Toledo finished second in the West last fall before losing to Florida International in the final minute of the Little Caesars Pizza Bowl.

"The experience we have is our biggest plus," said coach Tim Beckman, who welcomes back 19 starters. "And I think we have very good team speed."

The Rockets have nine returning starters on an offense that features speedy wideout Eric Page. The junior had 1,105 yards receiving and eight touchdowns, and he also returned three kickoffs to the end zone last fall.

Oklahoma overwhelming favorite to win new Big 12

New round-robin schedule, familiar faces bode well for Sooners in 2011

DALLAS (AP) — Before Oklahoma won its first Big 12 title in 2000, and went on to the win the national championship that season, coach Bob Stoops had no idea how good his second year there would be.

That was the first of seven conference titles over the last 11 seasons when there were still 12 teams in the league.

Now in the new-look Big 12, with 10 teams playing a round-robin schedule instead of in divisions, there would be little surprise if the Sooners quickly add another trophy. The defending champions are overwhelming favorite to win the league again — and maybe more.

"Our offense is high powered, our defense brings a lot of playmakers back. It's a good combination," linebacker Travis Lewis said Tuesday as Big 12 media days wrapped up. "But right now all we are is potential. We've got to go out there and play."

The Sooners, who closed last season with a five-game winning streak that included wins over now-departed Nebraska in the Big 12 championship game and a 48-20 victory over Connecticut in the Fiesta Bowl, got 41 of 43 first-place votes in a preseason poll from media members who cover the league.

"This team has had a good attitude and a good chemistry," Stoops said. "They did a year ago, they carried it through the winter and the spring. We'll see where it goes with us."

Those feelings, bolstered by Lewis' sentiment, are good for a coach who in some seasons sensed that his teams felt entitled because of the long-term success at Oklahoma.

Stoops went from trying to convince his team that it was good enough to win in 2000, after the Sooners had some down seasons before he arrived, to a few years later reminding certain groups they hadn't done anything to feel that way.

"Now going into this season, though, after so many years and with the number of guys back, we expect it," Stoops said. "It's really convincing them expect to work first. ... And you have to have that attitude of something to prove to get it done, to finish it off."

Landry Jones, the starting quarterback who followed Heisman Trophy winner Sam Bradford at Oklahoma, trumped his impressive freshman season by throwing for a Big 12-high 4,718 yards and 38 touchdowns while setting school records with 405 completions and 617 attempts last year.

"He got a couple of years under his belt and I think this is finally his time," Lewis said. "I definitely think he's a national championship caliber-winning quarterback and this whole team has faith in him."

When Jones was asked about the perception by many that he took significant steps in his leadership of the team during the closing stretch last season, the quarterback certainly didn't disagree.

"Definitely in that Oklahoma State game, the Big 12 championship game and then the Fiesta Bowl, I was able to take some big strides for me as a player," he said. "I've kind of learned from Sam, kind of learned from people before me, talking to coach Heupel, him dealing with those expectations what it takes to lead a team through that."

Josh Heupel, the Sooners quarterbacks coach and co-offensive coordinator, was the quarterback for Stoops' 2000 national championship team.

Jones threw for 468 yards and four touchdowns in the regular season finale against Oklahoma State. Then Oklahoma rallied from a 17-point deficit in the Big 12 title game, when he threw for 342 yards and a touchdown and ran for another score while Lewis had an interception in the end zone and recovered two fumbles.

Jones also set Oklahoma bowl records with 429 yards and three touchdowns in the Fiesta Bowl. While Stoops' team is favored to win the conference and possibly contend for a national championship, Texas Tech's Tommy Tuberville and Kansas' Turner Gill both are trying to establish their teams as Big 12 contenders.

The Red Raiders were picked seventh and Kansas was four runs in six innings after winning his three previous outings over Cleveland.

Notes: Indians RHP Alex White, out since May 21 with a sore right middle finger, will throw a simulated two innings Wednesday. If all goes well, the rookie could get on a rehab assignment. ... According to the Elias Sports Bureau, Kipnis' RBI single Monday was the first time an Indians player first career hit was a walkoff. ... The Angels have scored two or fewer runs in four of their last six games, giving up just 11 runs over that time. ... Cleveland has totaled 12 runs over its last six games.

make one — if it makes sense. We're not going to make a deal just to make a deal."

Wishing and hoping

The man sort of caught in the middle this week — managing the team he has while thinking about the team he might have next week — is Manny Acta. "You do get excited when you think about the (trade) prospects that are out there, and who you might get," said Acta. "But for now we've got to do the best we can with what we've got."

Notes: According to the Elias Sports Bureau, since 1920, when the RBI became an official statistic, no Indians player had ever produced a walkoff hit with his first major league hit, as Jason Kipnis did Monday night. The last time it happened in the major leagues was on Sept. 5 of last year, by Florida's Scott Cousins.

Weaver has worked at least six innings in 30 consecutive starts.

The right-hander surpassed his win total from a year ago and his ERA is the lowest ever by an Angels pitcher through 22 starts. In six career starts at Progressive Field, Weaver is 4-0 with a 2.01 ERA.

One of Weaver's two non-quality starts this season came against the Indians, a 4-3 home loss May 7. He gave up seven hits and a season high-tying with that philosophy — sort of.

"We take this opportunity for us to make it to the post season seriously, but we've got to be mindful of the cost," he said. "We're prepared to do what's reasonable to help us get there, but we can't focus so much on the next 2 1/2 months that we make a foolish deal now that could negatively affect us in the next two or three years."

That said, Antonetti added that the Indians are willing to talk about anyone in their system in a potential deal, although it would seem highly unlikely that the Indians would be willing to part with one of their top four prospects — infielders Lonnie Chisenhall and Jason Kipnis and pitchers Alex White and Drew Pomeranz — in any such deal.

"For us to trade our most highly regarded young players,

The biggest domino is Mets outfielder Carlos Beltran, widely considered to be the best available hitter. However, Beltran, a client of hardball agent Scott Boras, can become a free agent after this season — and will. So he's basically a two-month rental for whichever team gets him.

The Indians have been linked to hitters such as Tampa Bay centerfielder B.J. Upton, San Diego outfielder Ryan Ludwick, and perhaps Astros outfielder Hunter Pence.

One school of thought is that if a team has a chance to win a division it should go all out to do so since a team like the Indians might not know when their next chance will come.

Antonetti said he agrees

▶ ON THE FRINGE

One small step leads to 1 big boast
JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Two tournaments came down to the last hole and produced emotions as different as the tours themselves. There were tears on the PGA Tour. There were boasts on the Nationwide Tour. Moments after Sean O'Hair won on the strongest tour in the world, his eyes filled with tears and he broke down during his brief TV interview. He had gone more than two years without winning, and his confidence was still fragile on the eve of the Canadian Open.

It was a reminder how hard it is to win on the PGA Tour. Hours earlier, NCAA champion John Peterson from LSU had a one-shot lead going into the final hole until he missed the fairway and took bogey. Harris English made a 10-foot birdie for a two-shot swing and the victory, joining Georgia teammate Russell Henley as amateurs to win on the Nationwide Tour this year. That two college players could contend in golf's version of Triple-A was not nearly as shocking as the comments that followed. "I knew I could beat all those guys," Peterson told Golf World magazine. And he was just getting warmed up. "The top guys in college, the top 20 or 30 guys, can beat the top 20, 30 guys on the PGA Tour," Peterson said. "Maybe with the exception of two or three guys who are constantly up there, like a Matt Kuchar or Luke Donald... those top 20 college guys will beat those top 20 or 30 PGA Tour guys, if given the opportunity."

The outrageous comment drew a chuckle from Scott Verplank, who won a PGA Tour event in 1985 before his senior year at Oklahoma State. "Great to have that enthusiasm, isn't it?" Verplank said Tuesday, sarcastic as ever. Verplank didn't entirely disagree. He often plays with some of the best college players, such as U.S. Amateur champion Peter Uihlein, Kevin Tway and Morgan Hoffman. He knows how good they are and what they're capable of doing. He just figures Peterson was off by a digit. "It's not 20 or 30 guys on tour," Verplank said. "It's about 200 or 300 players out here who are just as good. That's really not a wise statement. They also were playing on the Nationwide Tour. If you're going to compare that with the PGA Tour, you're making a mistake." No doubt, this has been a remarkable summer for amateur golf. UCLA freshman Patrick Cantlay has been the headliner, finishing in the top 25 in all four PGA Tour starts. That includes being low amateur at the U.S. Open, setting a course record with a 60 in the Travelers Championship and finishing in a tie for ninth in the Canadian Open. Across the Atlantic, 20-year-old Tom Lewis of England opened with a 65 at Royal St. George's for the lowest score ever by an amateur in the British Open. He became the first amateur in 43 years to be atop the leaderboard at golf's oldest championship. No doubt, these kids can play.
