Band with Salem ties — Downplay — nearing major label record release

By LARRY SHIELDS
Staff Writer

Almost every up and coming band, at least those that take it seriously, starts with a general idea that its members want to hone their craft well enough and garner a fan base large enough to get signed by a record label and hopefully make it big. Failing that, most musicians at least revel the idea of being able to play music for a living.

But since the record label route to stardom isn't exactly what it used to be with the demise of CD and album sales, it's no small feat that a band with local ties to Salem managed to not only get signed, but signed by a major label.

"We're the first hard rock band to sign with Epic Records in the last five years," said Dustin Bates, lead singer for Downplay.

The band originated in Salem be-

Celebrating freedom of expression

Columbiana artist donates painting to Ohio Statehouse

COLUMBIANA — "Freedom is never more than one generation away from extinction."

These words, spoken by Ronald Reagan in 1961, inspired the painting that a Columbiana artist donated to the Ohio Statehouse during last Wednesday's Senate session.

Artist Ray Simon said the painting, called "Generations of Freedom," is a reminder that freedom must be protected and that difficult decisions are often required to ensure liberty.

"America has quite frequently taken four steps back," Simon said. "But by the grace of God, she has always been able to take four-and-a-quarter steps forward, and that's why I painted the painting."

Simon said the painting's stormy skies represent much of America's past, with the rays of light breaking

4th festivities

Community members celebrated the July Fourth holiday Sunday with a variety of festivities in Waterworth Memorial Park. The Salem-Perry Township Crime Watch hosted the activities which included a petting zoo, a bounce house, face painting, a corn hole tournament, a dunk tank, concession stands and live entertainment. Fireworks followed. Now in its fourth year, the event is the only fundraiser for the organization, according to Crime Watch Director Roe Haskin. This year was the largest it had ever been, he noted. Above, Trenton McCoy, 5, with his father, Robert, of Salem, makes friends with an alpaca from the Ponytails petting zoo. At right, George Bosworth, 7, Lisbon, relaxes with a snow cone. No new-money levy for Leetonia

Marks third straight ballot schools not asking voters for more funds

► LEETONIA

By KEVIN HOWELL
Staff Writer

The Leetonia school board will not attempt a new-money levy in November, marking the third consecutive regular ballot without an attempt.

The board had until the end of July to file if it wished to place a levy on the November ballot.

Instead it is eyeing the May 2012 primary for a possible levy, two years after the most recent attempt to use local tax dollars to stem an impending operating deficit. Residents had voted against a levy seven times in two years at that point.

Since that election, though, the board, with cooperation from staff and administration, has been able to avoid the forecasted deficit.

Facing a projected operating deficit and failing multiple attempts at a new-money levy, the board has made numerous cost-cutting measures the past two years in an effort to avoid operating in the red without asking for additional tax money.

Schools Superintendent Rob Mehno noted at the March board meeting that when he took over in 2009, the school was projected to be over $661,000 in deficit by fiscal year 2012 and that the cuts in those two years have helped delay that deficit at least another year.

"I have to acknowledge the staff and teachers and administrators for the money saving measures the past couple years," Mehno said. "And the community especially for supporting the renewal levy, without which we would really be in trouble right now."

"All have put the district first and that leaves us nearly two years since asking for new money."

The district is projected to have a $25,961 carry over next July, but there will be cash flow problems in the winter months when there are no tax collections, Mehno noted. He said the district will probably be able to borrow from the state to get through the down times, but will have to pay interest on the amount.

If the district does run out of money, it will likely be placed in fiscal caution, according to school Treasurer Jennifer Coldsnow.

The board collectively expressed the feeling that the budget was not reliable enough as yet to determine the appropriate amount needed from a levy, so it opted to wait until at least the spring primary.

Had the board elected to go in November, the district would have begun collecting taxes in January if it had passed. Now it will have to wait until January 2013 to

On July 4, 1776, the Declaration of Independence was adopted by delegates to the Second Continental Congress in Philadelphia. In 1802, the United States Military Academy officially opened at West Point, N.Y. In 1831, the fifth president of the United States, James Monroe, died in New York City at age 73. In 1872, the 30th president of the United States, Calvin Coolidge, was born in Plymouth, Vt. In 1894, the Republic of Hawaii was proclaimed. (Hawaii was annexed by the United States four years later.) In 1910, in what was billed as "The Fight of the Century," black world heavyweight boxing champion Jack Johnson defeated white former champ James J. Jeffries in Reno, Nev.

through the clouds symbolizing hope and the future. The light shines onto the eagle's nest, which Simon said represents home.

"Like the careful architecture of an eagle's nest, our homes are our safe-houses," Simon said. "And like the eggs in the nest, our most important asset is our children."

The eggs are wrapped in silhouettes of the world's continents, as Simon said he believes children across the world have benefited from the existence of America.

"I wanted to do a painting that shared the tremendous impact this nation has made around the world in the brief 200-plus years she's been here," Simon said.

Simon, already an artist in his own right, began painting patriotic works more than 15 years ago and later established a partnership with Wilbert Funeral Services in Chicago. Through this partnership, he has donated more than 6,000 personalized commemorative paintings to families of fallen soldiers, which includes nearly every causality of Operation Iraqi Freedom and the war in Afghanistan.

"Ray has touched lives not just in eastern Ohio but around the country with his art work," State Sen. Jason Wilson said of Simon's work in a press release.

"His talent combined with his patriotism creates his ability to put words, feelings and historical events into masterpieces."

Simon said the loss of his father in World War II and appreciating his own personal freedoms have served as inspiration for his work.

"I have the freedom to sit in a living room and watch TV," Simon said. "That's why I paint these paintings."

Accident on 11

Two people were taken by North Star ambulance to East Liverpool City Hospital after a two-vehicle accident on state Route 11 at the southbound Calcutta on-ramp Sunday afternoon. One of them, Frances Shenton, was driving a Cavalier through the construction zone when a Blazer driven by a 16-year-old Pennsylvania girl entering the single lane on Route 11 cut in front of her, causing the Cavalier to hit her from behind. According to St. Clair Township police, the Blazer went around another vehicle that was yielding for the Route 11 traffic. An expectant mother and another young child were in the back seat of the Cavalier and were to be checked for possible injuries. The baby was properly confined in a car seat and did not appear to be injured. The Pennsylvania teen was cited by patrolman Scott Mick for failure to yield. Neither her nor her passenger were hurt. Sylvester S. "Sye" Dolinar

November 23, 1914 - June 29, 2011

PORTLAND, ORE. — Sye was born in Moon Run, Pa., to Josephine and Frank Dolinar. He was first of seven children. His parents, sister Mary and brother William preceded him in death. Sisters Amalia, Ann and Frances; and brother Henry and sister-in-law Loraine all reside in the Portland area.

Sye married Joyce Hollinger in 1943 in Ohio where he had lived from the age of 10. He served in World War II as corporal with the 157th Infantry Regiment.

He returned to work at Morgan Engineering Co. as a welder and studied with them and became a Draftsman. He and his brother, Henry, formed Dolinar Brothers Building Contractors Co. and built many beautiful homes in Salem.

In 1956 Sye and his wife plus their three children moved to Oregon. After five years, they moved into a home he built where they remained until shortly before he spent his last days at St. Andrews Care Center, with Northwest Hospice adding to his care.

Sye loved to walk, ski, hunt and fish but best of all to build things. He retired in 1980 from Hanna Industries.

The youngest son, Sylvester Jr., died in 1994. Sye leaves his wife Joyce; daughter Sharyn (William) Park of Canby, Ore.; son John (Sarah) of New York City; and six grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. He was much loved and will be greatly missed.

Graveside service with military honors were held Friday at Lincoln Memorial Cemetery followed by a Celebration of Life at the Dolinar home.

Ohio agencies considered stricter lake toxin limit

COLUMBUS (AP) — The toxin standard adopted for warning swimmers to avoid Ohio lakes is more than three times more lenient than initially proposed after some officials warned that unwarranted stringency could have a negative impact on the tourism economy, a newspaper reported Sunday.

Public records obtained by The Columbus Dispatch show that officials at the state departments of health, environmental protection and natural resources were poised in early May to issue a no-touch warning at beaches if levels of the liver toxin microcystin measured at 6 parts per billion and there had been a human illness or pet death.

By the time the levels were announced to Ohioans in mid-June, the standard had changed to 20 parts per billion, following warnings of economic ramifications by directors at environmental protection and natural resources. A softer warning, against wading and swimming, is triggered by the 6-parts level.

"The impact is economic, and there is not a right or wrong answer, it is strictly a policy call," Ohio EPA Director Scott Nally wrote in a June 6 email to Gov. John Kasich's cabinet secretary.

The system adopted does not place the public at risk, said Theodore Wymyslo, director of the Health Department.

"We have a very good document here that safeguards public health," he said.

Microcystin is a blue-green algae that can lead to skin rashes, sore throat, congestion or digestive problems, and can kill small animals.

The 20-parts-per-billion level matches one set by the World Health Organization for adult swimmers. Ohio officials had suggested the 6 parts-per-billion level in an effort to better protect children.

The Dispatch reports that Nally said he wanted be sure everything was based on science and that officials were not "inadvertently or over-sensitively closing or shutting something down."

He was joined by Ohio Department of Natural Resources Director David Mustine.

Mayor candidate in Ohio says she's been threatened

AKRON (AP) — A woman seeking the Democratic nomination for an Ohio mayoral seat has reported receiving threats that she'll be blackballed and run out of town if she doesn't drop out of the race. Political novice Janice Davis filed about two weeks ago to run as the third candidate in the party's primary for Akron mayor. The Akron Beacon Journal reports she filed a police report June 24 about threatening phone calls, emails and visits made to her home and her mother's home.

Los Alamos evacuation order lifted, but tribes fear destruction of sacred sites

LOS ALAMOS, N.M. (AP) — A smattering of summer rain gave a boost to firefighters battling a huge forest fire near Los Alamos, giving authorities enough confidence to allow about 12,000 people to return home for the first time in nearly a week.

Residents rolled into town Sunday morning, honking their horns and waving to firefighters as the word got out that the roadblocks were lifted and the narrow two lane highway cut into the side of a mesa leading to Los Alamos was open. They had fled en masse on Monday as the fast-moving fire approached the city and its nuclear laboratory.

"Thank, you! Thank, You! Thank, you!," yelled Amy Riehl, an assistant manager at the Smith's grocery store as she arrived in Los Alamos to help keep the store open for returning residents.

"It's scary, but all of the resources here this time, they were ready. They did a magnificent job," said Michael Shields, eyes tearing up as he returned home to his apartment in the heart of the town.

The town was last evacuated because of the 2000 Cerro Grande fire. That time, residents returned to a town that had lost 200 homes, several businesses and had to cope with damaged utilities and other county enterprises. This time around, residents were returning to a town that is completely intact, although the fire destroyed 63 homes west of town.

Military hopes new type commander will avert chaos and failures of Hurricane Katrina response

PETERSON AIR FORCE BASE, Colo. (AP) — The Defense Department is grooming a new type of commander to coordinate the military response to domestic disasters, hoping to save lives by avoiding some of the chaos that plagued the Hurricane Katrina rescue effort.

The officers, called dual-status commanders, would be able to lead both active-duty and National Guard troops — a power that requires special training and authority because of legal restrictions on the use of the armed forces on U.S. soil.

No one commander had that authority in the aftermath of Katrina, and military and civilian experts say the lack of coordination contributed to the nightmarish delays, duplications and gaps in the huge rescue effort.

"It was just like a solid wall was between the two entities," said Georgia National Guard Col. Michael Scholes, who was part of the Katrina response.

Top Defense Department officials believe dual-status commanders are the key to reducing at least some of those failures.

With turn in Strauss-Kahn case, some experts say DA will have to drop it, others see a chance

NEW YORK (AP) — At first, prosecutors said their sexual assault case against Dominique Strauss-Kahn was growing more formidable by the day. Six weeks later, they said his accuser's history of lying raised major red flags, but they weren't dropping the case, at least for now.

With the former International Monetary Fund leader freed from house arrest because the case has weakened, prosecutors aren't saying what their next move may be.

Some legal experts say prosecutors will all but have to abandon the case because of the damage to the accuser's overall credibility, even if they believe Strauss-Kahn attacked the woman, a housekeeper at a New York City hotel where he was staying. Still, at least one former high-level prosecutor thinks the case isn't doomed.

For now, Manhattan District Attorney Cyrus R. Vance Jr. is saying only that prosecutors will keep investigating "until we have uncovered all relevant facts."

"Sometimes the road to get to the truth has twists and turns in it, which are not al-

Teams gauge damage from Exxon spill into Montana's Yellowstone River; most of oil likely lost

LAUREL, Mont. (AP) — Teams of federal and state workers fanned out Sunday along Montana's famed Yellowstone River to gauge the environmental damage from a ruptured Exxon Mobil pipeline that spewed tens of thousands of gallons of crude oil into the waterway.

The break near Billings, in south-central Montana, fouled the riverbank and forced municipalities and irrigation districts to close intakes.

An Environmental Protection Agency spokeswoman Sonya Penneck said an unspecified amount of oil could be seen some 40 miles downriver during a fly-over Sunday, and there were other reports of oil as far as 100 miles away near the town of Hysham.

But an Exxon Mobil Corp. executive said shoreline damage appeared to be limited to the Yellowstone between Laurel and Billings, which includes about 20 miles of river.

Exxon Mobil Pipeline Co. President Gary Pruessing said company observers flying over the river had seen "very little soiling" beyond Billings, and that the oil appeared to be evaporating and dissipating into the river as the flooded Yellowstone carries it downstream.

Germany, 9/11, Iraq: After 1972 draft notice, last Army conscript stayed on willingly

FORT BELVOIR, Va. (AP) — A homemade wind chime with the word "Whining" under a red slash is made from metal parts put in his leg after a parachute accident. Every Sunday he trims his crew cut. He didn't join the Army willingly, but as Command Sgt. Maj. Jeff Mellinger prepares to retire, he's grateful he found his calling.

Mellinger was drafted to fight in the Vietnam War, and the Army believes he's the last draftee to retire, after 39 years. Most did their two years and left. But Mellinger had found home.

"I think I'm pretty good at it, but I like it. That's the bottom line. I love being a soldier and I love being around soldiers," he said.

Mellinger's motto is simple: No whining — as the wind chime attests.

When the draft notice arrived in the mail in 1972 at his home in Eugene, Ore., tens of thousands of troops had been killed. Anti-war protests were rampant. Draft cards were being burned and returning soldiers were treated as part of the problem. The military wasn't a popular job.

OURSIDE

Rejoice in our independence and our personal liberties

This isn't just the Fourth of July. It's Independence Day, and we hope fervently Americans use the occasion to really think about what that means.

When the nation's founders agreed on the declaration that residents of the then-colonies would separate from Great Britain and form a new nation, they were not merely proclaiming independence from the English crown. Most would have been content to remain subjects of King George III and the British Parliament, had that government not been so oppressive. For years many of the founders strove in vain to convince London to allow Americans basic liberties — the self-evident rights enumerated in the Declaration of Independence.

It was these rights, not mere separation, that motivated the founders and millions of Americans who joined them in risking their all in the Revolutionary War. They sought independence of the people, by the people and for the people.

Too often, in what is a natural impulse among human beings, we are willing to sacrifice liberty for what we perceive as security, both financial and physical. In doing so, as we are learning now in relation to the staggering national debt, we often forfeit both.

It often is claimed the founders could not have envisioned the world we live in today, that our nation's basic documents of government — the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution and the Bill of Rights — are antiquated. The same is said of the spirit that animated Americans in 1776.

But not a single challenge facing us as a people today was not understood by the founders, or thoughtful Americans in the beginning. A glance at debates over our form of government, such as those contained in the "Federalist Papers," makes that clear. National debt, conflict against what we now would call terrorists, government mandates in the name of the collective good — even environmental concerns — were debated then.

Our great nation's founders and Americans for more than two centuries have concluded personal liberties and limited government were the best means of safeguarding the welfare of both individuals and the people as a whole. They came down firmly on the side of independence.

Today, then, let us rejoice not just in our independence as a nation, but also in our liberties as Americans. Let us, in short, celebrate Independence Day, and rededicate ourselves to the principles behind it.

LONDON — Big Labor looks the same wherever you go: petulant, irrational and wholly aggrieved beyond its means. I'm here on vacation with family as some 750,000 public-sector employees strike in protest over modest pension reform proposals. It's a taste of Wisconsin on the Thames.

U.K. government teachers are just as shameless and entitlement-mongering as their American counterparts. More than half of England's schools shut down on Thursday as union members took to the streets.

Borrowing a trademark tactic employed by Democrats Against Fiscal Responsibility from Madison and Milwaukee, Wis., to Washington, D.C., British educators used their students and children as kiddie human shields. "HANDS OFF ME MA'S PENSION" read a doe-eyed little girl's sign in Liverpool. The militant National Union of Teachers plastered their placards with infant-sized, pastel-colored handprints.

Simon Shaw, a teachers' union rep in Woodford Green, complained to his local newspaper: "The government is stealing our money, and working till 65 or 68 is not realistic. How do teachers relate to children or have the energy for them at that age?" Asra Haque, a union protester and teacher in Kingsbury, piled on: "What the government is doing makes us feel like we are part of a dictatorship."

On Twitter, a socialist activist proclaimed "solidarity" between strikers in London and democracy marchers in Egypt. The supposedly fascist measures at issue involve an average hike in teachers' pension contributions of about 3 percent and, in keeping with demographic reality, a gentle nudge in the retirement age to 68 by 2020.

Striking teachers waved banners crying for "FAIR PENSIONS FOR ALL," but as Treasury statistics released in England revealed this week, public-union workers rake in the most generous pensions of all. A "mid-ranking teacher on $32,000 a year will receive a final salary pension that is the equivalent of having built up a $500,000 pension pot. This is 20 times higher than the average private sector scheme, according to figures from the Office for National Statistics," the U.K. Telegraph reported. "Private sector workers would have to save more than 20 percent of their salaries for 40 years — more than $500 a month for a similarly paid person — to amass the same amount in a defined contribution pension." And each and every British family "faces a total bill of $13,500" for the striking teachers' pensions.

Defined benefits plans are increasingly an anachronism in the modern workplace, but Big Labor obstinately refuses to get with the times. More sobering for the children for whom the teachers' unions purport to speak, the U.K. faces a future that is "old and broke." An analysis by the pro-free-market think tank Reform released here this week shows that Britain faces a demographic "timebomb" of an estimated 1.4 million seniors over 65 in the next five years — adding a tax burden of $32 billion for pensions and nearly $40 billion for healthcare by 2041 (not adjusted for inflation).

The report's authors make conclusions that sound eerily familiar to entitlement-reformers across the pond: "The biggest challenge in encouraging action is that people think that dealing with the problem can be put off. Often population aging is seen as a problem for 2040 or 2050, which is well beyond the attention span of many policy makers and media commentators. But the fiscal effects will be felt much earlier than that. The case for moving quickly is also not just a fiscal one. Any changes will create a group of people who lose out in the transition. Putting off reform will increase the costs of change and make the group of transitional losers larger."

Left-wing teachers around the world spend many hours lecturing their students about the need for a "sustainable environment." Too bad they don't practice what they teach when it comes to their own unsustainable demands.

Stand-up time for Obama: President finally comes out swinging

With President Obama finally joining the negotiations with Republican leaders on the impasse over raising the federal debt limit, he's also made his most forceful statement yet on fair sharing of the burden.

In his news conference Wednesday, the president picked up the gauntlet tossed by House Speaker John Boehner and Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell, who insisted any tax cuts must be off the table. It's a challenge the president can no longer afford to ignore.

The issue of continued cuts to the rich goes to the heart of the difference between the two major parties, both ideologically and morally, and his fellow Democrats know it.

Many of them had become tired of Obama's willingness to let the Republican leaders take the offensive on the fiscal and economic crises, as he played the pragmatic conciliator. He did show a tougher side in the bitter 2010 midterm congressional campaign, only to lose Democratic control of the House.

He then resumed his resilient nature, acknowledging he had taken a "shel-lacking" and promising to try harder to do business with the Republicans.

In the post-election budget deal he struck with them, Obama surrendered to the GOP blackmail on retaining the tax cuts for the rich as the price of saving his cherished middle-class cuts. Many fellow Democrats still have not forgiven him for what they saw as a cave-in on the best issue they had against the Republicans.

Now the president has a second shot at it, and in the latest news conference he signaled that he intends to play his hand with more fervor than previously. Doing so surely will invite the familiar Republican cry of class warfare -- pitting the middle-class and the poor against the wealthiest Americans.

There is no earthly reason for Obama to avoid this debate. The Republicans do control the House, but Obama's party still holds the Senate and he remains in the Oval Office.

With that occupancy, however, goes the responsibility of keeping the government going, and he and the country can't allow the opposition party to continue to the blackmail on tax cuts without a bigger fight.

He made a good start on it in his news conference, declaring that ending or trimming the tax cuts and tax breaks for the rich are essential and fair.

"The revenue we're talking about isn't coming out of the pockets of middle-class families that are struggling," he said. "It's coming out of folks who are doing extraordinarily well and are enjoying the lowest rates since before I was born. If you are a wealthy CEO or a hedge fund manager in America right now, your taxes are lower than they have ever been. ... And you can afford it. You'll still be able to ride on your corporate jet. You're just going to have to pay a little more."

In the argument on tax cuts for millionaires and billionaires, the Republicans continue to ignore the fact they were created in the first place for only ten years as part of the bounty handed to them by President George W. Bush in 2001, after inheriting a surplus from Bill Clinton.

The cuts' defenders characterize their lapse as a "tax increase" rather than the law's original intent, which they want to overturn by making the taxes permanent.

In the compromise at the end of 2010, Obama agreed to a two-year extension.

In the new conference, Obama also assailed the members of Congress for their work routine, noting "they're in one week, they're out one week," compared to his own heavy schedule. "You stay here; let's get it done," he demanded, regarding the debt-limit crisis facing an Aug. 2 deadline. Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid quickly announced he would be calling the Senate back early from its July 4 recess, but it's the leaders who need to be in town.

Whether Obama will sustain this more commanding posture in the heated debate and negotiations in the critical month ahead will be watched with particular interest by fellow Democrats of wavering enthusiasm, if not yet disillusionment. Party liberals especially have waited a long time for him to come out swinging, and wonder whether it will last.

Explorers put EMS, law skills to the test

By ANTHONY DOMINIC
Staff Writer

COLUMBIANA — Members of the Columbiana Explorers put their EMS and law enforcement training skills to the test during the Columbiana Police Department's Murder Mystery Crime Weekend held last weekend.

The annual event featured 42 participants, all from local high schools and communities, performing the work of police officers, EMTs and extras in pre-arranged and controlled environments.

The theme of this year's event was serial killing.

Patrolman and Explorer adviser Kevin Kloss said participants experienced a wide variety of on-the-job situations such as traffic stops, drunk drivers and crime scenes investigations.

"It's really the total culmination of their yearly training," Kloss said. "Within a safe environment, we really put them out there into action, and I was really pleased with how they performed."

The Explorers are young adults, ages 14-21, who meet at least twice a month to gain experience in their field of interest. Police Chief Tim Gladis said the free program is responsible for developing half of the Columbiana Police Department's roster.

"We're able to develop the kids from explorers into the next step which is auxiliary officers," Gladis said. "And eventually, if they pass their civil tests, they can get on as part-time and full-time officers."

Anyone interested in the program can contact Kloss at the Columbiana Police Department.

Casey Anthony weeps as prosecutor calls her a liar

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Casey Anthony briefly wept Sunday as prosecutors told jurors during closing arguments that she murdered her 2-year-old daughter Caylee to reclaim the carefree life she had before the girl was born.

Prosecutors portrayed Anthony as a young mother who killed her daughter because she got in the way of her love life.

"Something needed to be sacrificed, that something was either the life she wanted or the life thrust upon her. She chose to sacrifice her child," prosecutor Jeff Ashton said during his 90-minute argument.

Defense attorney Jose Baez said the prosecutors' case was so weak they tried to portray Anthony as "a lying, no-good slut" and that their forensic evidence was based on a "fantasy." He said Caylee's death was "an accident that snowballed out of control."

Prosecutors contend Caylee was suffocated with duct tape by her mother, who then crafted elaborate lies to mislead investigators and her parents. Defense attorneys countered that the toddler accidentally drowned in the family swimming pool, and that Casey in fact was hiding emotional distress caused by alleged sexual abuse from her father. Her father has denied that claim.

Judge Belvin Perry ruled Sunday morning that there was no evidence of such abuse and that the defense could not allude to it in closing arguments. Jury deliberations are now expected to begin Monday after the prosecution gives its rebuttal arguments. Baez began his closing argument by telling jurors they have more questions than answers, including the biggest: How did Caylee die? Neither prosecutors nor the defense have offered firm proof of how Caylee died.

"It can never be proven," he said.

Baez spent most of his four-hour argument attacking the prosecution's forensic evidence. He said the prosecution's air analysis of the trunk of Anthony's car, which allegedly showed air molecules consistent with decomposition, could not be duplicated. He said no one could prove a stain found in the trunk was caused by Caylee's body decomposing there. And witnesses showed maggots found in the trunk came from a bag of trash that was found there, he said.

"They throw enough against the wall and see what sticks. That is what they're doing ... right down to the cause of death," Baez said. He later conceded his client had told elaborate lies and invented imaginary friends and even a fake father for Caylee, but he said that doesn't mean she killed her daughter.

He also attacked Anthony's father, George Anthony, as unreliable. He said that a suicide note that George Anthony wrote in January 2009 that claimed no knowledge of what happened to Caylee was self-serving and that the attempt was a fraud. He said George Anthony claimed he was going to kill himself with a six-pack of beer and some high-blood pressure medicine.

Earlier during prosecution's closing argument, Casey Anthony appeared mostly stone-faced for about the first 45 minutes, but she began to cry when Ashton said the story that Caylee drowned was also false.

Ashton, the prosecutor, said Caylee's death wasn't an accident because three pieces of duct tape were placed on her face — one on the mouth, one on the nose and one over those to be "thorough."

The case has played out on national TV since Caylee's disappearance in the summer of 2008 and continued through her mother's trial, with spectators traveling from all over the U.S. to jockey for coveted seats in the courtroom gallery. Anthony, a single mother, was 22 when her daughter died. No one has come forward as the father of Caylee.

Ashton began his closing argument by showing a video of Anthony playing with Caylee, causing Anthony to apparently choke back tears. But she quickly regained her composure. He then told the jury that Anthony worried Caylee was getting to the age where she would have told Anthony's parents that the woman was spending her days and nights with her boyfriend — not going to work and leaving Caylee with a nanny.

"Casey is very bright," Ashton said. "Her lies are very detailed. ... But when Casey wants to do what Casey wants to do, she finds a way."

The prosecutor then described the lies Anthony told her parents, George and Cindy Anthony, about why she couldn't come home and why she couldn't produce Caylee after the toddler was last seen June 16, 2008: that she was with a nanny named Zanny, a woman who doesn't exist; that Anthony and her daughter were spending time in Jacksonville with a rich boyfriend who doesn't exist; and that Zanny had been hospitalized after an out-of-town traffic accident and that they were spending time with her.

It only fell apart, Ashton said, a month later when a junk yard told George and Cindy Anthony their daughter's car had been towed. When they picked it up, they discovered a foul odor — George Anthony, a former police officer, and the tow yard operator said it smelled like human decomposition.

Cindy Anthony then tracked down her daughter. When she couldn't produce Caylee, her parents called police. Casey Anthony then told investigators she worked at Universal Studios theme park as an event planner. She went so far as to take them there, talk her way past security, take them to an office building. She gave up the lie as she was walking down the hall. Ashton then attacked the defense contention that Caylee drowned and that George Anthony helped Casey Anthony cover it up. No one faced with an accidental drowning would do that instead of calling 911, Ashton said.

fore relocating to Athens and Ohio University, said Bates, a 1999 Salem High School graduate.

The band, now Columbus-based, is set for a midwestern swing that will include opening gigs in Toledo, Chicago, St. Paul, MN, and Lansing, Mich., after a week of rehearsing and while waiting for its major label debut.

Downplay recently played at the The Wing Warehouse during the Quaker City Weekend Cruise, continuing its habit of returning to Bates' hometown at least once a year.

The five-member group with guitarist Trevor Connor and bass guitarist Corey Catlett, both from Columbus, and guitar player Evan McKeever and drummer Brian Weir (sometimes Patrick), both from Cleveland, worked with record producer Dave Fortman in New Orleans where they cut their first album.

Fortman got his break in the music business as guitarist for 80/early 90s rockers Ugly Kid Joe. Since he's produced a multi-platinum seller for Evanescence and worked with Slipknot, Anthrax and Mudvayne.

Downplay landed the Epic contract a year ago this month and expects that major label debut soon. Epic is owned by Sony who is also home to Michael Jackson's releases.

"We're waiting for Epic to give a release date," Bates said, noting Downplay toured with Puddle of Mudd (a top 20 hit maker) for two-and-a-half months.

The working title is

"Sleep" and the album will have 12 songs and two bonus tracks available for download from iTunes as well as a different track from Amazon, he said.

Downplay cut its first original record in 2006 and recorded three since, said Bates, who along with duties as lead singer, also writes and composes original material.

He noted the band's name was derived from that.

The group started as primarily a cover-band between all-Salem friends, Bates explained, but he didn't want the original material they performed downplayed.

"Don't downplay the original music," he said.

Holder of an electrical engineering degree and a masters degree in avionic engineering, Bates said he was moving toward a Ph.D at Ohio University "clear up until the record deal."

The current group has been together since early May with two new members who could make the commitment to travel.

In Salem, he started off with a band called Scratch Resistance that played Ragni's and Irish Bob's in Youngstown with local drummer with Brandon Hill.

"I probably played with three or four bands before Downplay," said Bates, who was in the marching and concert bands in high school.

Reaching the record contract has "been a long process," he said. "It didn't come easy. I wrote 60 songs for this record and I co-wrote (others)," he said, explaining he might give some of the copyrighted material to other bands.

He's not worried about royalties, he said, noting that will be worked out if a band launches a hit.

The record deal could lead anywhere.

Bates said, "We're hoping to achieve a certain level of status."

College for Kids held at Kent State campuses

Future Iron Chef competitors, environmentalists, college professors and zoologists in grades one through sixth were at Kent State University at East Liverpool and Salem last week as part of the campus' College for Kids. The week-long "college" hosted an array of classes including: Kid's Cafe Cooking School, Amazing Animals and Math Magic.

"The kids are very interested in learning new skills," said Lauren O'Donnell who taught "Green Up/It Matters," which focuses on environmental initiatives, along with Kid's Cafe.

"We do a lot of hands-on activities and they want to do everything!" O'Donnell said. She taught 9, 10 and 11-year olds proper table etiquette, table manners, food safety and nutrition while helping them prepare different "kid friendly" meals.

"The kids created their own restaurant with its own name, logo and menu," she said. They also practices hosting and playing waiter and waitress.

Kid friendly meals included French toast, salsa and quesadillas, fruit parfaits, veggie pizza and no bake cookies.

During each of the five-day classes O'Donnell helped her students make two meals. "We tried to pick meals that the kids could make themselves with a little bit of supervision," she said.

Program Coordinator Sondra O'Donnell said that when looking at the events available to children this summer she didn't see a lot of fun, educational programs available in the area. "College for Kids gives our local children interesting and engaging activities that promote learning, while at the same time being engaging and fun," she said. "Plus, due to the generosity of the East Liverpool and Salem Rotary Clubs, along with private donors, we're able to give numerous scholarships to students who perhaps would otherwise be unable to attend."

College for Kids is a cross-campus event that is also being held during the summer at Kent State University at Tuscarawas. Between Kent State East Liverpool and Salem more than 80 students attended the summer classes. Additional classes held between the two campuses include: Amazing Animals, which explore children's books based on unique animals; Math Magic, which uses M&Ms to help students work their "magic" through addition and subtraction; Marketing for Young Entrepreneurs, which encourages students to create products and design advertisements and logos to market their new business and Trip Around the World, where students "visit" other countries to learn about different people, food, traditions and culture.

Warming ocean could melt ice faster than first believed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Warming air from climate change isn't the only thing that will speed ice melting near the poles — so will the warming water beneath the ice, a new study points out.

Increased melting of ice in Greenland and parts of Antarctica has been reported as a consequence of global warming, potentially raising sea levels. But little attention has been paid to the impact of warmer water beneath the ice.

Now, Jianjun Yin of the University of Arizona and colleagues report the warming water could mean polar ice melting faster than had been expected.

Their report was published Sunday in the journal Nature Geoscience.

While melting floating ice won't raise sea level, ice flowing into the sea from glaciers often reaches the bottom, and grounded ice melted by warm water around it can produce added water to the sea.

"Ocean warming is very important compared to atmospheric warming because water has a much larger heat capacity than air," Yin explained.

"If you put an ice cube in a warm room, it will melt in several hours. But if you put an ice cube in a cup of warm water, it will disappear in just minutes."

In addition, Yin explained, if floating ice along the coastal areas melts it will allow the flow of glaciers to accelerate, bringing more ice into the seas.

"This means that both Greenland and Antarctica are probably going to melt faster than the scientific community previously thought," co-author Jonathan T. Overpeck said in a statement.

Overpeck, co-director of the University of Arizona's Institute of the Environment, said: "This paper adds to the evidence that we could have sea level rise by the end of this century of around 1 meter and a good deal more in succeeding centuries."

The subsurface ocean along the Greenland coast could warm as much as 3.6 degrees Fahrenheit (2 Celsius) by 2100, the researchers reported.

The warming along the coast of Antarctica would be somewhat less, they calculated, at 0.9 degree F (0.5 C).

Ohio Turnpike lease plans bring toll hike fears

TOLEDO (AP) — Leasing Ohio's busy toll road that links the East Coast with the Midwest has the potential to bring billions of dollars to the cash-strapped state. It also could bring higher tolls and drive more traffic onto routes that meander through small towns, opponents say.

The governor wants to lease the Ohio Turnpike to a private operator, following the lead of a handful of states and cities that have pocketed cash for their toll roads in recent years. Governments strapped by the Great Recession also are turning to selling off and leasing office towers, warehouses and prisons.

"We can get a big chunk of money that can be used to improve our infrastructure in the state," Ohio Gov. John Kasich said Friday during a news conference. "Indiana did it. Indiana made a lot of progress."

Neighboring Indiana last week marked the five-year anniversary of its $3.8 billion lease of the Indiana Toll Road to foreign investors. The state has spent much of the money on highway projects and put $500 million into an investment fund for future road construction. Chicago leased an 8-mile highway for nearly $2 billion five years ago, and an Australian company bought a 99-year lease on Pocahontas Parkway in Virginia. But a plan to lease the Pennsylvania Turnpike fell through in recent years, in part because of fierce opposition from state and federal lawmakers.

Ohio's new budget allows the state to lease nearly all of Interstate 80, which carries about 50 million vehicles each year across northern Ohio from Pennsylvania to Indiana. It also gives the state's legislature some control over any potential deals after concerns were raised about whether a new owner would take care of the highway.

Much of the resistance is being led by officials from Ohio counties along the 241-mile turnpike, which is funded through tolls and the sale of gas and food at rest stops.

"It's a terribly unfair deal for northern Ohioans who have largely paid for the turnpike over the years," said Tim Brown, a commissioner in Wood County, just south of Toledo. "It's no different than a tax increase for us."

Among the main concerns is that tolls are almost certain to go up if a private operator takes over.

Tolls have nearly doubled since investors took over the Indiana Toll Road. A 10 percent increase took effect on Friday, bringing the price to cross the northern half of the state to $9 for most cars.

County officials in Ohio want to make sure there would be limits on future toll increases if the state's toll road is leased. It's now $15 for cars making a full trip. The turnpike collected a record $236 million from motorists last year.

By comparison, Pennsylvania charges $32 to travel all 357 miles on its turnpike. Kasich, a Republican, views the Ohio Turnpike as an asset that has potential to bring more revenue at a time when the state just completed a series of spending cuts to fill an estimated $6 billion budget hole. He thinks the state could get at least $2.5 billion in leasing it and has said the money would pay for work on roads, bridges and harbors without raising taxes.

No deals are in the works yet. Kasich officials have said they envision a 30-year lease with an initial payment and a piece of annual toll revenues.

Still, there are many more details to work out. A five-county planning body in northeast Ohio wants most of the money to go toward projects in northern Ohio, where the turnpike money is generated. It also wants to make sure there are guarantees that a private operator will keep up with highway maintenance. The concern is that if the road becomes too costly or goes downhill, businesses that rely on the route might relocate or it will be tougher to attract new companies.

Donations helping Texas ex-cheerleader in legal fight

SILSBEE, Texas (AP) — Rakheem Bolton approached the free-throw line as his school's cheerleading squad rooted for him to hit the shot during a 2009 playoff game.

One cheerleader stepped away from the group, folded her arms and stood in silence, refusing to cheer for the star athlete who she says raped her at a party in this Southeast Texas town.

Now, two years later, that silent protest is drawing new attention across the nation as the result of an unusual series of events. Those events left the family of the victim, who was then 16, facing $40,000 in penalties from the legal proceedings that followed the incident, while her alleged attacker was freed after reduced charges.

An online campaign is now under way to help the family with the legal costs, which were assessed by a judge who dismissed the lawsuit they filed after she was suspended as a cheerleader for her protest.

The effort has gained momentum on Facebook and Twitter and collected more than $23,000. An appeal of the financial penalty is pending in federal court.

"It's really an awful statement to send on how you treat a teenage sexual assault victim," said Alex DiBranco, whose petition on Change.org has gathered more than 94,000 signatures asking the district to not to make the family pay the fees. DiBranco, a New York-based women's rights advocate, got involved after reading about the case.

The controversy is renewing debate about how the school and courts handled a sensitive matter involving teenagers, allegations made but not yet proven and a victim in a sexual incident.

Silsbee Mayor Herbert Muckleroy, a former school superintendent in the town of 7,000, said he supported how the criminal case was handled, but has doubts about making the girl's family pay the school district $40,000. "I just wish it could have been settled and over with and let the community settle back in," he said.

The father of the girl, who is now 19, said he cannot accept that a rape victim and her family are being punished.

"I will never give up hope that in some form or fashion there will be justice, (and) hope that our story will help another family, another girl that's been through this," said Craig S., 44, whose last name is being withheld to protect his daughter's identity.

The Associated Press does not identify sexual assault victims.

The girl's allegations stem from an October 2008 party in which she claims she was pulled into a darkened room with Bolton and several others and raped under a pool table while she was drunk. Bolton and two others were arrested after the party. A grand jury declined to indict him in January 2009.

A second grand jury indicted him 10 months later. Bolton eventually pleaded guilty to a lesser assault charge in a plea deal and was given a suspended one-year sentence.

Charges were dropped against two others indicted in the incident.

The girl, who was reinstated to the cheerleading squad two weeks after being suspended, filed a federal lawsuit in May 2009, claiming the school district violated her First Amendment rights as well as her rights to liberty, property and equal protection under the Fourteenth Amendment.

In court documents, school officials said they were justified in punishing her, saying that at the time of the 2009 playoff game Bolton was not facing any charges. Her conduct violated school rules and her allegations appeared to be "the story of a girl who became angry with a boy about something that may or may not have happened at a private party," the schools' attorneys said.

Silsbee school district officials and their attorney have declined further comment on the case.

U.S. District Judge Thad Heartfield in Beaumont ruled the girl's lawsuit was "without foundation."

"There are no facts to support a finding that the school, or its officials, owed her any additional process," Heartfield wrote, and ordered the family to pay the district's legal costs. The case was appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court, which in May declined to review it, leaving the legal fees the only issue pending.

The girl's father acknowledged that his daughter did not object to the plea deal for Bolton. He said she wanted some admission of guilt from him.

David Barlow, the special prosecutor who handled the case, said, "This was the best outcome that could have resulted, given the law and the facts."

Bolton's grandmother, who declined to give her name, said her grandson is now in college and just wants to be left alone. His accuser, who graduated from high school last year, also declined to be interviewed, her father said.

The school district remains unwilling to give the girl's family a break on the payment. "I think the district has a fiduciary responsibility and obligation to the taxpayers to try to collect on any money that is due them," said school board President John Griffin.

But news on the case reached sympathetic ears in others parts of the country. After reading about the case, Jessica Mills, an actress and writer in Los Angeles, started an online fundraising campaign to help pay the costs.

"I just thought this girl, she's been through so much already, regardless of the right and wrongs and legalities of it," said Mills, who with her friend set up the "Help the Cheerleader" web site, which lets people donate money to a bank account set up by the cheerleader's attorney.

The girl's father said he is humbled by the rising balance, mostly from donations of less than $20.

He runs a landscaping business, and said paying the money would be a financial hardship.

He said his daughter has had her ups and downs. After graduating in 2010, she took a year off and plans to attend Lamar University in Beaumont in the fall.

Around Silsbee, the incident continues to produce mixed feelings. Resident Terrell McArthur said he agrees with the girl's decision not to cheer for the person she believed raped her. However, the costs are a separate matter.

"It went through the judicial process," McArthur said. "I don't feel like anybody here in Silsbee needs to start taking up donations."

Happy birthday to the United States of America, born this day in 1776, making it a Cancer country. The crab is the sign of patriotism, and the birth chart of the United States boasts four luminaries in the realm of Cancer -- the sun, Mercury, Venus and Jupiter. The moon was in innovative Aquarius the day the Declaration of Independence was signed.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Safe topics include your location, the weather and current events, especially sports, art and entertainment. Stick to those, and you'll make and keep friends. This is not a good time, however, to talk about other people you know.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). There are too many aspects to your personality to say that you are one person. You are many people, and there are many more you could be. A new, better and more joyful part of your personality will take the reins today.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You get the feeling that the stakes have been raised, and you respond by asking more of yourself. You call on yourself to get involved and to invest great emotion in all you do.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Moods are as temporary as clouds. They can lift, drift and descend like fog. Savor the sweet emotional weather, and when things turn gray, realize that it will soon pass.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). The reason your plans come together so nicely is that you rule with genuine caring and kindness. Others sense that you're on their side and that you want only the best for them.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You have so much going for you now, including your great sense of humor. Just look at who's laughing at your jokes. You'll find the response so flattering.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You'll explore and learn. No matter how much knowledge you attain, it only makes you wonder more. There's always another "aha" moment in your future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Just as you wouldn't eat every meal at a donut shop, you have a way of pacing life's other treats so that you can best enjoy them. Your good fortune will come to you only as fast as you are able to handle it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). When you do something nice for people, they don't always respond right away, and that is perplexing to you. It does drive home the point that it's best to choose an action that is its own reward.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Fear is the enemy. It wants to get in your way today, but don't let it. The opportunities that are presented are rare and must be seized. There's something exciting unfolding, and all you have to do is say "yes."

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Anger does have a positive side. It's an affirmation of your emotional involvement. You get angry only because you care so much. The positive side of anger will be rewarding.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You are acting in the service of your love. That doesn't automatically guarantee that you will make the choice that best suits the other person's needs or wants, but it does give you the best odds for a successful relationship.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (July 4). You will listen to your muses and let inspiration flow through you. You'll do good in the world, and you'll do it in a way that no one else can. Through July and August, you are preparing to win. The work will not seem difficult, but it will require daily practice. You'll sign a new deal in September. November brings travel. Capricorn and Aquarius people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 50, 46, 42, 36 and 21.

Poison protection

Heloise

Dear Heloise: Because children are naturally very curious and playful, SPRAY BOTTLES filled with cleaning agents (homemade and commercial) and indoor-plant liquid fertilizer should be specifically labeled in thick, black permanent marker. Each spray bottle should be identified with the contents and, if needed, an unhappy face for a poisonous mixture.

I would recommend that the telephone number of your state's Poison Control Center be posted on the refrigerator. Also, this makes your home safe for furry friends, too. -- Margarette Mattern, Temple, Texas

You are right, especially when making up homemade cleaning solutions. I always write on a 3-by-5-inch card what the solution is (vinegar and water, 1/3 rubbing alcohol and 2/3 water), plus the date. This is then taped to the bottle with packing tape. The national Poison Control Center number is 800-222-1222, and it should be posted in every home. Your call will be routed according to the area code and exchange of the phone number you are calling from. If you are using a cellphone, you will reach either the Poison Control Center in the area where you are, or in the "home" area of your cellphone. -- Heloise

FAST FACTS

Dear Readers: Here are some uses for shower caps from hotels:

- Keep one in the car in case of unexpected rain.
- Place one over a camera while near water on vacation.
- Place around the bottom of a hanging plant before watering to catch runoff.
- Use to keep shoes from touching clothing when packing.
- Use to collect and carry seashells.

-- Heloise

SQUEAKY SHOES

Dear Heloise: I read your hints every day and need help on a problem I now have, which is squeaky shoes. Maybe you can help. -- Debra O. in Bucyrus, Ohio

Here is one thing you can try: Make sure there is no moisture in your shoes by sprinkling cornstarch or talcum powder inside before and after you wear them. Shoes made from man-made materials can squeak; you can take them to a shoe-repair shop and ask for advice. Finally, if you are not happy with the shoes, take them back to the store. -- Heloise

Single woman needs no sympathy as 'solo'

DEAR ABBY: I am a divorcee and happy with my life. I'm healthy, have a great job, wonderful grown children, many good friends and several hobbies I enjoy. I'm busy and every day is full. My issue is the way some people treat the fact that I'm "solo." When they see me, they ask whether I have a man in my life yet, and when I say I don't, they look downcast and offer me their sympathy. Please tell your readers that for a woman to be solo isn't a tragedy. Certainly, I hope one day to meet someone wonderful to share my life with, but until then I'm happy to be on my own. I'm doing great and I don't like people treating me as if my being single is some sort of failure. -- PARTY OF ONE IN WISCONSIN

DEAR PARTY OF ONE: If I had to wager, I would bet the people you've described are older. For people in their generation there was social and economic pressure to couple up and be married. With more women completing their education and earning enough to live well on their own, there is less of that pressure today. I'm passing your message along, but try to remember that the folks you're encountering mean well -- even if their way of expressing it is outdated and clumsy.

DEAR ABBY: A new church member joined our group. She's the nicest, most generous, genuinely kind person, and she is loved and appreciated by all. The problem is, she reeks with an awful body odor. She breeds dogs, and the smell is ingrained in her clothing, hair, car, etc. She always volunteers to work in the kitchen, and yesterday she did -- in spite of my having politely told her we had enough volunteers. Many of the people didn't want what she touched, including me. How should we approach telling her about her body odor without offending or hurting her? -- CONFUSED CHRISTIAN IN DETROIT

DEAR CONFUSED CHRISTIAN: The woman's strong body odor may be because of poor hygiene or her profession, but it could also be a symptom of illness. Someone should talk to her about it. To do so would be doing her a favor and not hurtful. The person I'm nominating for that job would be your minister.

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating a man I'll call Eugene for many years. We have both been married before and we both have children. We're engaged, but if I marry him, I know I will never be No. 1 in his life. His children and family will always come first. I don't know what his former wife did to him, but shouldn't your spouse rank somewhere at the top? I have a lot of time invested in this relationship. His children have no connection with me at all. This doesn't bother Eugene. It bothers me greatly. Can these types of issues be worked out? -- FRIEND WITHOUT BENEFITS

DEAR FRIEND: Yes, if you and Eugene are willing to admit there are issues that need to be worked out and are willing to get premarital counseling. While Eugene's children -- and yours -- might always come first, if you are going to have a successful marriage you should rank right up there with them. While you may never have an emotional tie with his children, you deserve to be treated with the same kindness and respect that you give them.

Viruses not only cause of hepatitis

Dr. Donohue

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: For the past year, my wife has had to deal with autoimmune hepatitis. It's something that hardly anyone knows about or understands, and that makes it even more difficult to cope with. Everyone and where the skin develops an itch.

Quite often, a liver biopsy is the procedure that provides evidence of autoimmune hepatitis.

Prednisone, one of the cortisone drugs, often is the treatment of choice. It reins in an out-of-control immune system. Another immune-modifying drug, azathioprine, can be added to the regimen. It sounds like your wife is responding well to treatment (from parts of your letter that I had to delete).

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My husband tells me he has sickle cell trait. He never mentioned it before we were married. What implications does this have for his and our children's health?

We're planning to start a family, but I would like to know if that's a good idea for us. -- J.P.

ANSWER: Sickle cell anemia results when both the mother and the father have the sickle cell gene. Sickle cell trait occurs when either the mother or the father has the gene. The sickle cell gene is widespread in Africa, among American blacks (8 percent to 10 percent), in many Mediterranean peoples, in those from the Middle East and in some parts of India.

Sickle cell trait is, for the most part, a benign condition having little to no influence on a person's life or health. You can start your family immediately without any fears.

Sickle cell anemia is a serious condition. Prolonged, exhausting exercise in heat has been linked to the sudden death of a few individuals with sickle cell trait. Division I college athletic programs require testing for sickle cell trait in all their athletes so that precautions can be taken not to overtax those carrying the gene, especially in hot weather.

Statue's inscription fitting for holiday

Annie's Mailbox

Dear Readers: Happy Fourth of July! We hope you are enjoying your holiday weekend with friends and family, watching fireworks and firing up the grill. Here's something that was sent to our mailbox a while back, and we saved it for today:

The New Colossus by Emma Lazarus
Not like the brazen giant of Greek fame,
With conquering limbs astride from land to land;

Here at our sea-washed, sunset gates shall stand
A mighty woman with a torch, whose flame

Is the imprisoned lightning, and her name
Mother of Exiles. From her beacon-hand

Glow world-wide welcome; her mild eyes command
The air-bridged harbor that twin cities frame.

"Keep ancient lands, your storied pomp!" cries she
With silent lips. "Give me your tired, your poor,

Your huddled masses yearning to breathe free,
The wretched refuse of your teeming shore.

Send these, the homeless, tempest-tost to me,
I lift my lamp beside the golden door!"

Dear Annie: Several years ago, you printed the words written on the base of the Statue of Liberty. A lot of people seem to have forgotten they exist and what they mean. My parents were immigrants, and because they came to the U.S., their children had the opportunity and motivation to become doctors, lawyers and artists who pay taxes and contribute to American society. Could you please print those inspiring words again? -- Tolerant in Chicago

Dear Tolerant: Thank you for asking. Here they are, and on the most appropriate occasion we could think of:

Cincy glad to be done with interleague

CINCINNATI (AP) — Edgar Renteria's few homers tend to be memorable.

Renteria hit his first homer since his World Series MVP performance, helping the Cincinnati Reds break out of their offensive slump and beat the Cleveland Indians 7-5 on Sunday, their only win of the season against their intrastate rival.

Renteria's solo shot barely cleared the wall in right field and put the Reds up 7-2 in the fifth, putting the Reds in line for a breakthrough win. The Indians took five of six in the series, matching their best result. The Reds went 5-1 in 2008.

"That's what we needed," Renteria said. "It's the same

Pirates rough up Nationals

Correia, McCutcheon lead Bucs over Washington, 10-2

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates didn't need their All-Star on Sunday. The closer is superfluous when it's an eight-run game.

Instead, a pair of maybe-could-have-beens again made the case that, perhaps, these Pirates are deserving of more attention than the black-and-gold teams of recent past.

Kevin Correia won his 11th game, and Andrew McCutcheon had three hits to cap a prolific series as Pittsburgh cruised to a 10-2 win over the Washington Nationals.

Pittsburgh will wake up on the Fourth of July with a winning record for the first time since 1999. Correia's nine road victories are tops in baseball. McCutcheon had nine hits, including six for extra bases, in the four-game series to raise his average to .294. If they were anyone but the Pirates, perhaps there would be three All-Stars instead of just reliever Joel Hanrahan, who earned the team's lone nod when the selections were announced earlier in the day.

"It's up to us to change that," McCutcheon said. "The majority of people look at us as just being 'the Pirates,' and they're going to say it's 'the Pirates' until we show a difference. That's just fuel for the fire for us as a team to continue surprising teams every time we show up. Win a series here, win a series there. Sweep a team here, sweep a team there. Next thing you know they're going, 'Hey, these Pirates are the real deal.'"

Correia (11-6) allowed two runs and six hits over six innings to become the first Pirates pitcher to win 11 games before the All-Star break since Jim Bibby in 1980. He's tied for the majors lead in wins with Jair Jurrjens, Roy Halladay, C.C. Sabathia and Justin Verlander.

Correia said he was more focused on his start than the All-Star selection show, but he likes that the club was at least in the mix for more than one spot.

"We had a few guys that deserved a look, and that's good," Correia said. "I don't think this team's had that in the past. It's been 'a guy's got to make it, so a guy goes.'"

Pittsburgh's 10 runs matched a season-high as the club moved two games over .500 for the ninth time this season, where they keep hitting a barrier that so far has stopped them cold. They are 0-8 when trying to get to three games

Edges K.J. Choi by two strokes; Fowler falters

Bogey free

By DOUG FERGUSON
Associated Press

NEWTOWN SQUARE, Pa. — Never mind that Nick Watney was the highest-ranked player at the AT&T National, or that he won a World Golf Championship in March. Stepping to the first tee Sunday in a tie for the lead at the AT&T National, he had reason to feel overlooked.

After being announced, one fan called out, "Go, Rickie!" Several other fans in the large gallery wore bright orange shirts and flat-brimmed caps to show their support for Rickie Fowler, a 22-year-old who was tied for the lead and going after that first PGA Tour win.

"He's obviously a very popular player. I think his time is definitely coming," Watney said. "I would say there were probably a few more Fowler fans out there. But it is what it is. Sometimes you play away games or whatever."

Watney doesn't have the panache of Fowler, but his game is starting to get plenty of attention.

Playing the weekend at Aronimink in a staggering 12 under, and going the final 27 holes without a bogey, Watney closed with a 4-under 66 for a two-shot victory over K.J. Choi (67) to win for the second time this year and move to No. 10 in the world.

New No. 1 Djokovic beats Nadal for Wimbledon title

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Until Sunday, Novak Djokovic never managed to win a grass-court tournament of any sort, let alone Wimbledon.

Until Sunday, Djokovic never was able to beat Rafael Nadal in a Grand Slam match, let alone a final.

Until this marvelous — and nearly perfect — year, Djokovic was very good. Now he's great.

After outrunning, outswinging and, for stretches, dominating defending champion Nadal, winning 6-4, 6-1, 1-6, 6-3 for his first title at the All England Club and third major championship overall, Djokovic crouched on Center Court, reached down, plucked some blades of grass and shoved them in his mouth.

Jose Bautista top vote-getter

NEW YORK (AP) — Derek Jeter, David Ortiz and Roy Halladay led the usual slew of Yankees, Red Sox and Phillies picked for the All-Star game. Joining in this year, a Brew Crew.

Outfielder Ryan Braun, first baseman Prince Fielder and second baseman Rickie Weeks made up a Milwaukee trio elected by fans to start July 12 in Phoenix. Quite a haul, the largest ever for a small-market team better known for sausage races than pennant races.

"It means the Milwaukee Brewers have arrived on the national scene," Braun, the top NL vote-getter, said Sunday before the Central co-leaders visited Minnesota.

Fielder and Weeks were among several players who overcame voting deficits in the final week. Mets shortstop Jose Reyes, Dodgers outfielder Matt Kemp and Detroit catcher Alex Avila also rallied late to earn starting spots.

Toronto outfielder Jose Bautista, the reigning home run champion, drew a record 7.4 million votes. He became the first Blue Jays player elected to start since Carlos Delgado in 2003.

Bautista homered Saturday off Halladay, then hit his major league-leading 27th homer Sunday against Philadelphia's Cliff Lee.

Indians' Perez, Cabrera make All-Star team

By JIM INGRAHAM
The Lorain Morning Journal

CLEVELAND — There have been years when the Indians dominated the American League All-Star team, and there have been years when they were afterthoughts — years in which only one Tribe player made it, and, in many cases, only because there's a rule that at least one Indian HAD to make it.

In 1952 the Indians had a team-record seven players named to the AL team. In the All-Star game that year, eight of the nine AL starters, and 15 of the 26 players on the AL team were either Indians or Yankees.

In 20 other years — including six of the last nine — the Indians have had the obligatory one player selected to the All-Star team.

This year: two, shortstop Asdrubal Cabrera and closer Chris Perez.

That's a rather light representation for a team that has been in first place for most of the first half of the season, and for a good chunk of it had the best record in the majors.

The reason the Indians didn't have more all-stars is because the strength of the Indians is their bullpen, but it's almost impossible for a non-closer to be selected to the All-Star team.

At the start of play Sunday the Indians had three of the top six relievers in the American League, as measured by ERA. Joe Smith (0.99) was No.1, Vinnie Pestano (1.47) was No.5 and Rafael Perez (1.60) was No.6.

That's right, Smith, with an ERA of 0.99 is not an All-Star.

But neither is CC Sabathia, who if the season ended today would probably be second to Justin Verlander in the Cy Young voting.

Sabathia is the most glaring omission from the AL team. He is scheduled to pitch on Sunday, the day before the All-Star break, and pitchers who do that are ineligible to pitch in the All-Star game, which probably made it easy to leave Sabathia off the team.

However, Verlander is also scheduled to pitch Sunday, but he made the AL team, so go figure.

Almost half the team in the AL had just one player selected: Minnesota, Kansas City, Chicago, Oakland, Toronto, and Baltimore.

The Yankees, as usual, led with six players on the team, while the Red Sox, Rangers, and Tigers had four each.

Josh Tomlin certainly deserved consideration as a third Tribe All-Star. Tomlin has the numbers, but not the name or reputation to make the team yet.

Cabrera was the only Indians position player who deserved consideration. Actually, he deserved to be the starter at shortstop for one very good reason: he's been the best shortstop in the American League this season. But as long as Derek Jeter is playing shortstop for the Yankees, nobody else will be the starter at that position for the American League.

Cabrera, however, made an impressive showing. He drew over 4 million votes from the fans — but still finished half a million votes behind Jeter. The selection of Cabrera and Perez is a testament to an area of the operation that the Indians have quietly excelled in the last several years — being able to identify and acquire future stars from other organizations.

The Indians got Cabrera in a 2006 trade with Seattle. The cost? Eduardo Perez.

A month after the Cabrera heist the Indians went back to Seattle again and stole Shin-Soo Choo in exchange for Ben Broussard.

Chris Perez was acquired from St. Louis in one of the Indians' give-up trades in the middle of the 2008 season. They traded Mark DeRosa, who hasn't been healthy since, in exchange for Perez.

Perhaps the Indians' most deserving All-Star, however, is Manager Manny Acta, who will be in Phoenix for the game, as a coach on Manager Ron Washington's AL staff.

Acta would be my choice as the half-season Manager of the Year in the American League. I don't know how a manager could have a better half season.

Coming out of spring training the four players the Indians absolutely needed big seasons from were Fausto Carmona, Shin-Soo Choo, Travis Hafner, and Grady Sizemore.

Carmona has been horrible, and how he's hurt. Choo has been horrible, and now he's hurt. Sizemore has been horrible, and has been on the disabled list two different times. Hafner has been very good, but because of an injury and interleague play he has only started 35 of the Indians' 82 games.

Three other starting pitchers, Carlos Carrasco, Mitch Talbot, and Alex White, have spent time on the disabled list.

Despite all that — and only having two players on the All-Star team — the Indians reached the halfway point of the season in first place in the Central Division. Acta's steady hand, leadership, and knack for handling players have been a major reason why.

tories — the United States and Canada and the Dominican," Bautista said. "I can't even describe how good that feels."

The AL starting lineup: Adrian Gonzalez at first base, Robinson Cano at second, Jeter at shortstop, Alex Rodriguez at third base, with Bautista, Josh Hamilton and Curtis Granderson in the outfield, Avila behind the plate and Ortiz at designated hitter.

The NL starters: Fielder at first, Weeks at second, Reyes at short, Placido Polanco at third, with Braun, Kemp and Lance Berkman in the outfield and Brian McCann catching. San Francisco manager Bruce Bochy will choose the DH.

Fans can vote on MLB.com through Thursday for the 34th player on each side. Injuries are sure to impact the final rosters, too — three-time NL MVP Albert Pujols was left off while recovering from a broken left wrist and Reyes is nursing a hamstring problem.

Once again, the league that wins will get home-field advantage in the World Series. Led by McCann, the NL won last year for the first time since 1996.

Phillies aces Cole Hamels, Halladay and Lee were part of the 13-man NL staff, showing why Philadelphia has the best record in the majors. The World Series champion San Francisco Giants put four pitchers on the squad: Tim Lincecum, Matt Cain, Brian Wilson and Ryan Vogelsong.

Vogelsong will certainly be among the feel-good stories in Arizona. At 33, he'd spent the previous four years in Japan and the minors before getting called up early this season.

Jeter, a 12-time All-Star set to come off the disabled list Monday, will be among six New York Yankees heading to the desert. Also going are 14-time All-Star Rodriguez, Cano, Granderson, closer Mariano Rivera and backup catcher Russell Martin.

The 37-year-old Jeter always seems to be a lightning rod when it comes to awards and honors, ratcheting up the debate of popularity vs. production. He's in the midst of another down year and has been hurt — Cleveland shortstop Asdrubal Cabrera is having a breakout season and made the AL team as a backup, deserving Jhonny Peralta of Detroit was left off.

The Yankees own the best record in the AL, although two of their stars were among the notable omissions: CC Sabathia, tied for the major league high in wins, and first baseman Mark Teixeira, among the leaders in homers and RBIs.

The rival Red Sox put four players on the team: Gonzalez, Ortiz, pitcher Josh Beckett and outfielder Jacoby Ellsbury.

"Seems like the Yankees always take care of all the All-Star voting every year, so it's just disappointing to not see more Red Sox on that team," Boston ace Jon Lester said.

Texas manager Ron Washington will guide the AL team. Rangers pitcher C.J. Wilson made the club over Sabathia.

"There wasn't a whole lot of choices on left-handed relievers and C.J. has the experience of doing that," Washington said. "He's deserving, as far as I'm concerned, to be on the All-Star team, so I chose him."

This year's squad includes 13 first-time All-Stars in the AL and 11 in the NL. Among them will be closer Joel Hanrahan, Pittsburgh's lone representative.

Hanrahan said he won't mind changing his All-Star over.

The Pirates were due for a laugh after playing mostly tight ones for much of the season. They scored three in the first, five in the second. McCutchen had three hits and would have had four were it not for Roger Bernadina's diving catch on the warning track in the left field corner.

"It's nice for the bats to show up and have a feel-good day on offense," Pittsburgh manager Clint Hurdle said. "But I think we're built more for the other. I don't know how many more of these we'll get, but when we get 'em we'll take 'em."

The Pirates battered Jason Marquis (7-3), who lost for the first time in eight starts. He lasted only 1 1-3 innings, allowing seven runs and eight hits as the Nationals again fell below .500 and dropped to 2-5 under manager Davey Johnson. Washington has already allowed 10 or more runs twice under Johnson, matching the number times it happened in 78 games under Jim Rigglesman and John McLaren.

"I don't like to get beat," Johnson said. "It wasn't any fun today."

two men on base in the first and flying out to center with a runner on base in the third to drop his batting average to .223.

The fans' tepid reaction was much kinder than it was on Saturday, when he was booed loudly during the second game of a doubleheader.

Werth declined to speak to reporters for the second straight day. Johnson said Werth is sore and will probably miss a day or two.

Such nagging injuries are a mounting problem for the Nationals. Michael Morse, the team's best hitter, sat out Sunday with a bruised forearm and will likely miss Monday's game as well.

"I'm real concerned about it," Johnson said. "Nobody's 100 percent."

NOTES: There wasn't much of a feeling that Hanrahan and Tyler Clippard would be future All-Stars when they were part of the Nationals bullpen in 2008 and 2009. On Sunday, they both were named to the NL squad. Hanrahan has tied a Pirates record with 24 consecutive converted save chances. "It is kind of ironic," Hanrahan said. "I went into that (Washington) clubhouse plenty of times hanging my head, looking for answers, trying to figure out where my career was going — really searching for everything. To be here now, riding high, hearing the announcement I made the All-Star team — that's really a good feeling." Clippard didn't figure he'd have much of a shot because he's a setup man, but he has 57 strikeouts, 15 walks and a 1.96 ERA for the Nationals. He has allowed only 6 of 31 inherited runners to score. "I knew there was maybe an outside shot," Clippard said. "But I didn't really take it seriously and maybe that's probably a good thing."

... Morse will be on a fan ballot to determine the final NL All-Star spot. ... The Pirates sent RHP Brad Lincoln to Triple-A Indianapolis and recalled RHP Chris Leroux. ... Nationals 43-year-old first baseman Matt Stairs beat out an infield hit in the first inning. He was starting in the field for the first time since April 12.

thing if you hit one like that or it goes 500 feet — they call it a home run. It's always nice to hit one."

Chris Heisey also homered off Mitch Talbot (2-5), who has struggled since returning from a sore elbow. The Reds piled up six runs and 10 hits in his four innings.

Mike Leake (8-4) became the Reds' first eight-game winner, matching his career high with eight strikeouts in six innings. Cincinnati Cordero pitched the ninth for his 17th save in 19 chances.

Five players learned before the game that they'll be headed to Arizona for the All-Star game next week — Cleveland's Asdrubal Cabrera and Chris Perez, Cincinnati's Joey Votto, Brandon Phillips and Jay Bruce. Instead of the stars, the reserves rallied Cincinnati to its win.

Renteria had a pair of hits, including his first homer in 130 at-bats this season. He hit three for the Giants last season, and two more in the World Series.

Heisey also had a pair of hits during a rare start in center field. Miguel Cairo filled in at third base and had a pair of hits and scored twice.

Cincinnati is delighted to be done with interleague play. The defending NL Central champions went only 6-12 against the American League, in keeping them stuck a few games out of first place at the season's midpoint.

"Thank you, Lord!" Phillips said. "I'm glad interleague is over because they roughed us up this year. We're not playing to our potential, but I think we'll be all right."

By contrast, the AL Central-leading Indians prospered, going 11-7 in interleague games even though they couldn't use DH Travis Hafner on the road.

The Reds have struggled to hit with runners on base. They stranded 12 — seven in scoring position — during a 3-1 loss to Cleveland on Saturday, unable to get a clutch hit.

They put together a bunch of them on Sunday that went between fielders, over outstretched gloves and — in Renteria's case — barely over the outfield wall. His solo homer in the sixth barely cleared the yellow padding atop the wall in right and made it 7-2.

It was another disappointing showing for Talbot, who was on the disabled list in May with a sore pitching elbow. In eight starts since returning, he is 1-5 and has allowed 31 earned runs in 40 2-3 innings.

"It's usually the first inning that gets me," said Talbot, who didn't have a problem with it this time. "Once I get through that, I cruise. I'm not too sure what happened today."

Since a brief demotion in May, Leake has been one of the Reds' most consistent starters, going 5-2 with a 2.89 ERA in eight appearances. Shelley Duncan hit a two-run homer in the second, and Grady Sizemore had a two-run single in the sixth.

"I thought it was a pretty solid outing," Leake said. "I gave up four runs, but I only gave up four hits. I was trying to keep them in the game."

NOTES: The Indians lead the all-time series 39-36. ... Cabrera is the first Indians SS to make the All-Star game since Omar Vizquel in 2002, Perez the first closer since Bob Wickman in 2005. ... OF Travis Buck missed his second straight game with a tight left hamstring. ... RH Fausto Carmona went on the 15-day DL with a strained right thigh, suffered during his tumble at first base on Saturday. Perez, who had been in Florida for his grandmother's funeral, was activated off the bereavement list. ... Renteria's homer was the first by a Reds SS this season. It gave Renteria 900 career RBIs.

Watson blames distracting French fans for MC

SAINT-QUENTIN-EN-YVELINES, France (AP) — American golfer Bubba Watson missed the cut Friday at the French Open, suggesting fan behavior and poor security contributed to his disappointing performance.

Watson shot a 3-over 74 in the second round for a 6-over 148 total on the Albatross course.

"It's not a normal tournament," Watson said. "There's cameras, there's phones, there's everything. There's no security. I don't know which holes to walk through. There's no ropes."

Watson has won two titles this year but rarely plays in Europe. He was apparently affected by the permissive culture in France that allows spectators to snap photos and record videos during play.

"I'm not used to that," Watson said. "I'm not saying it's bad. It's just something I'm not used to, I'm not comfortable with. It's very strange to me. Just very uncomfortable."

The American lefty complained that the rules were not respected by the fans.

"Every tee says 'no phones, no video cameras' and on every tee there's hundreds," Watson said.

Tournament director David Probyn was disappointed for Watson but hopes that he will come back, saying the player would be welcome.

"It's a shame Bubba has felt that way," Probyn said. "I'm absolutely sure that other players have been put off by it ... but I haven't had any other complaint this week."

Probyn disagreed with Watson's comments on security issues. However, he acknowledged the culture on the European Tour was different from its American counterpart.

"Every fairway is roped. We've got marshals on every hole," Probyn said. "It's probably true to say that we do not use professional security in the same way as they do on the PGA Tour." He also said the European Tour was trying to adapt to spectators using mobile phones and other gadgets on a daily basis. "It's kind of reality wherever you go," he added. "It is then about educating people. How to use them and where to use them, and that's something that you'll see changing over the short to middle term."

Watson said he came to Europe to experience a new culture. "The reason to come over here was just to experience it," Watson said this week before the start of the tournament. "I've played on the U.S. Tour the whole time and just wanted to come over here, just to experience a different culture, a different life, a different golf, a different atmosphere."

But soon Watson felt homesick after carding a 3-over 74 in the first round.

"I miss my home," Watson said Thursday.

Some of the most famous landmarks in the world, apparently didn't stick with him after touring Paris on Tuesday.

"I don't know the names of all the things, the big tower, Eiffel Tower, an arch (Arc de Triomphe), whatever I rode around in a circle," he said. "And then what's that — it starts with an 'L' — Louvre, something like that. One of those."

After saying it might be his last time playing in Europe, Watson said he would play the British Open in two weeks. He wasn't sure if he would fulfill his commitment to play the Scandinavian Masters in Sweden.

PGA

FROM 1B

Watney, whose other win this year was a World Golf Championship against an elite field at Dorol, also put himself atop the FedEx Cup standings and the PGA Tour money list for the first time.

"It's a very addictive feeling to be out there and under the gun," said Watney, who had rounds of 62-66 on the weekend. "To be able to hit good shots and putts is why I play, really."

And to think that with only 27 holes left in the tournament, Watney was trying to keep from getting left behind. Ten birdies, an eagle and no bogeys later, he was posing with the silver trophy of a Liberty Bell and wondering how much better he could get.

Watney finished on 13-under 267, tying the tournament record by Tiger Woods in 2009 when it was played at Congressional. The tournament is scheduled to return to Congressional next year.

Charles Howell III earned quite a consolation prize. He played bogey-free in the final round for a 6-under 66 to tie for third with Adam Scott (68) and Jeff Overton (67). That made him eligible for the British Open in two weeks as the top finisher from the top five who wasn't already exempt.

Fowler had another learning experience.

He fell out of the hunt early with a double bogey on the second hole when he hit three straight shots without losing his turn. From a tough spot in the bunker, he came up well short of the green, barely got his putt up the slope, then ran his bogey attempt a nervy 3 feet beyond the hole. That became a three-shot swing when Watney made birdie, and Fowler never caught up. He finished with a 74 to tie for 13th.

"I just couldn't get anything going today," he said.

Watney didn't give anyone much of a chance. He took the outright lead with a wedge into 10 feet for birdie on No. 2, and holed a 20-foot birdie putt on the par-5 fifth. Despite leaving himself in a tough spot in the bunker on the par-5 ninth, he blasted out to 2 feet for another birdie.

Even so, his biggest putts were for par.

Watney saved par from bunkers on No. 4 with a 20-foot putt, and from No. 7 with a putt from about 12 feet. His biggest par save might have been the par-3 eighth, which yielded only two birdies in the final round.

Overton had reached 9 under and was making a move, and Choi had birdied the previous to also reach 9 under. Watney's shot went over the green, and he putted up the slope to 18 feet. He made the par putt to keep his cushion.

"That was big not to drop a shot after hitting a good shot, and keep momentum heading to the back nine," Watney said.

The final challenge came from Choi, who trailed by four shots at one point. He slowly made up ground, then closed in on Watney after the turn with a bending, downhill birdie putt on the 11th and a pair of long birdie putts on the 12th and 14th holes, the last one tying for the lead.

Momentum was with Choi, only the South Korean knew better. The par-4 15th played at 503 yards into a slight breeze, following by the par-5 16th that was reachable in two.

"When I tied him on the 14th hole, I knew that there was still a lot of holes to go, and I knew the remaining holes were more favorable to Nick Watney," Choi said. "I knew the 15th hole would be a turning point. That was a key hole, player was having the least bit of trouble holding serve. Nadal went up 30-love in that 10th game, but Djokovic then won four consecutive points to claim the first set.

"Rafael was too nervous at that big moment," said Toni Nadal, the player's coach and uncle.

Djokovic ran away with the second set, by doing precisely what Nadal has to so many opponents: sprinting to chase down apparent winners and get them back over the net, extending the point. According to the AP's tally, Djokovic won 18 of the match's 28 points that lasted 10 strokes or more.

"When you play against these players, and they are playing unbelievable, the normal thing is (to) lose," said Nadal, who punched his racket after missing one forehand in the last game.

Djokovic's forehand was mostly on-target. He hit 22 winners and only four unforced errors through two sets, and never faced a break point — or even was taken to deuce — on his serve during that span.

But there was no way it could continue to be that easy, both because Djokovic simply couldn't sustain that level of spectacular play forever, and because the resilient Nadal wasn't likely to pack it in.

As gray clouds began to gather overhead, shutting out the azure sky, Nadal picked up his game, and Djokovic finally faltered somewhat, saying later: "I relaxed a little bit too much in the start of the third set. I wasn't focused."

Nadal broke twice in that set, the second time when Djokovic contributed his lone double-fault of the afternoon, and suddenly it appeared that things were more competitive. As it turned out, the third set was merely a half-hour aberration during a 2½-hour coronation, because Djokovic regained the upper hand.

He led 4-3 in the fourth set when Nadal played a shaky game, double-faulting, pushing a backhand wide, then slapping a forehand into the net on and I missed it. So I think that was the turning point of the match."

Choi pulled his shot into the left rough, then tried to hit 5-wood toward the green. The thick grass shut his club and sent the shot into a bunker, some 60 yards from the pin, and so close to the side that his legs were pressed against the edge of the bunker. Choi hit a solid shot, but it took one more hop into the rough, he chipped out to 12 feet and missed the putt.

Watney was just short of the green and lagged his putt from 75 feet to 5 feet, converting yet another important par.

On the next hole, Watney used his power to smash a drive that left him only a 7-iron to the green, and he again hit a good lag for a two-putt birdie. His seventh and final par save came from just behind the 17th green, and his chip stopped 2 feet from the cup.

Watney earned $1.116 million and became the first player this year to top $4 million on tour.

"I'm overjoyed to be in here as the winner," Watney said. "It was a very difficult, long day. K.J. played great golf and he kept coming and coming. And that makes it even more rewarding."

an 11-stroke point that Djokovic kept alive by sliding into position and nearly doing the splits while hitting a backhand.

That gave Djokovic three break points, and on the second, Nadal missed a backhand on the 15th stroke.

Now with a chance to serve it out, Djokovic was cool and composed — and even a little crafty, playing serve-and-volley for only the third time all match. His backhand volley gave him a championship point, and Djokovic converted it when Nadal sent a backhand long.

As Djokovic reveled in his newfound status as Wimbledon winner, Nadal was left to contemplate his first loss to someone other than Federer in a Grand Slam final.

During this tournament, Djokovic recalled watching Wimbledon two decades ago as a kid in war-torn Serbia and thinking that he'd love to play tennis.

On Sunday, there he was, on the most famous court in the world, with Serbian President Boris Tadic up in the Royal Box.

Djokovic already was the first man from Serbia to win any Grand Slam title. Now he's the first to win Wimbledon and the first to earn the No. 1 ranking, and he'll be feted at a downtown square in Belgrade on Monday.

Whatever Djokovic had to overcome — a lack of self-belief and fitness issues, among them — the biggest obstacles might very well have been a couple of guys named Federer and Nadal.

"It's very hard for four years to be No. 3, you know? You cannot (make this) step, this one step to move on. Now he did it, so this is the most important thing," Djokovic's mother, Dijana, said Sunday evening.

When a reporter began a question by saying,

"For years, it's been Rafa, Roger, Rafa, Roger," Mom interrupted to clarify: "Yeah, now it's Novak, Novak, Novak."

John Cook wins Montreal Championship

BLAINVILLE, Quebec (AP) — John Cook won the Montreal Championship for his third Champions Tour title of the year, closing with a 6-under 66 on Sunday for a tournament-record 21-under 195 total.

Cook, the runner-up last year at Fontainebleau Golf Club, beat Taiwan's Lu Chien-soon (70) by three strokes. Joey Sindelar (68) was third at 17 under, and Bill Glasson (64), Corey Pavin (67) and Dan Forsman (68) were another stroke back. Canadian Rod Spittle broke the course record with a 62 to finish at 15 under.

"I thought 20 would have a good chance," Cook said. "I got off to a great start and that kind of let me then relax a little bit and go ahead and free swing it because 20 was my number that I thought was going to be close, have a chance, maybe a playoff, so all day I was thinking that. Once I got to 20, I wanted to get to 21."

Cook also won the season-opening Mitsubishi Electric Championship in Hawaii in January and topped Jay Don Blake in a playoff in the Outback Steakhouse Pro-Am in Florida in April. Cook has eight victories on the 50-and-over tour after winning 11 times on the PGA Tour.

"To win coming from behind and win from being ahead, it's two different animals, really," Cook said. "Mr. Lu did a nice job and he kind of got things going on the back side there and made some beautiful birdies coming down the stretch. He just battled all day and he wasn't giving up."

Spittle, from Niagara Falls, Ontario, began the round in a tie for 49th. "I expect to win sometimes this year and this is just a great boost of confidence," Spittle said.

Earnhardt Jr. furious after frustration at Daytona

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Dale Earnhardt Jr. made it clear he's no fan of the current style of restrictor plate racing before he even arrived at Daytona International Speedway.

"I'm not looking forward to going to Daytona, not with the way the drafting is there," he said a week before Saturday night's race.

"It's really weird and kinda wrong on some levels to race that way," he said the day the track opened.

But if there was any doubt, he ended it after a frustrating 19th-place finish that had his passionate army of fans accusing Hendrick Motorsports teammate Jimmie Johnson of sabotaging Earnhardt's chance to win.

"I am really ticked off. It was a foolish ... race. I don't know what to tell you," he fumed. "I don't like this kind of racing and you know it."

Earnhardt didn't appear to be "ticked off" at Johnson, the teammate he partnered with for the second consecutive plate race. He had pushed Johnson to the win at Talladega in April, and Johnson said all week he was willing to return the favor at Daytona.

There once was a time when Earnhardt didn't need help to win at Daytona, when he could just slice his way to the front and hold off a train of traffic in the closing laps. That's how he did it 10 years ago, on his first visit to the track following his father's fatal accident in the 2001 Daytona 500. And that's how he did it 17 months ago, when he charged from 10th to second in the breathtaking final two laps of the season-opener.

But the racing has changed dramatically since then, and drivers now need to create a two-car hookup to get around Daytona. They use one spotter, with the lead driver taking traffic signals, guiding the trailing driver, who is stuck in a perpetual blind spot as he's glued to the rear bumper.

The tandem racing debuted at the start of the season, was elevated to a more sophisticated level at Talladega, and led almost every driver to pick a partner and devise a strategy even before they got to Daytona.

"I'd rather have control of my own destiny and be able to go out there and race and just do my own work and worry about my own self," Earnhardt said on Thursday. "Been growing up all these years racin' for No. 1, lookin' out for No. 1, doing my job. This is what I need to do, I need to do this to get up through the pack. This is how my car drives. Now you are doing it so different. Your thought process and everything you think about during the race is nothing near that."

"It is just different and weird."

Wimbledon leaving NBC, appears headed to ESPN

NEW YORK (AP) — Wimbledon is leaving NBC after 43 years and appears headed to ESPN.

NBC said in a statement Sunday that "while we would have liked to have continued our relationship, we were simply outbid."

A person with knowledge of the negotiations confirmed that ESPN was working on a contract with the All England Club to televise all of the Grand Slam tournament.

The person spoke on condition of anonymity because the deal was not ready to be announced.

The switch was first reported by SportsBusiness Journal.

ESPN had owned the rights to extensively televise early rounds of Wimbledon, with NBC picking up coverage as the tournament progressed, culminating with the "Breakfast at Wimbledon" broadcasts of the finals.

It would be the latest major sporting event to move from the traditional four over-the-air networks to cable. College football's Bowl Championship Series title games are on ESPN, and NCAA basketball's Final Four will be on TBS in alternating years starting in 2016.

Months into its new partnership with Comcast, NBC is losing a marquee event. The network did keep an even bigger one when it outbid ESPN and Fox last month for four Olympics.

This year was the 32nd anniversary of "Breakfast at Wimbledon," with coverage ending Sunday when Novak Djokovic beat Rafael Nadal in the men's final.

Derek Jeter goes 1 for 2 in Double-A rehab start

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Derek Jeter is ready to return to the New York Yankees.

Jeter went 1 for 2 with a bunt single, a walk and a throwing error in six innings Sunday night in his second rehab start with Double-A Trenton as he looks to return from a right calf strain.

The Yankees captain, named to his 12th All-Star team earlier Sunday, needs six more hits to become the 28th major leaguer to reach 3,000. He is batting .260 in 62 games this season.

He likely will continue his quest for 3,000 on Monday in Cleveland. Asked after Sunday's game if he'd be playing Monday, Jeter replied, "Yup."

Yankees general manager Brian Cashman, who watched both games in Trenton, said Jeter would be in the Yankees' lineup against the Indians.

"He's good to go," Cashman said. "I haven't talked to (Yankees manager) Joe (Girardi) about it but he's ready to go. He'll play tomorrow."

TITLE

"I felt like an animal. I wanted to see how it tastes. It tastes good," Djokovic said later, his eyes wide and his smile contagious. "It came spontaneously, really. I didn't plan to do it. I didn't know what to do for my excitement and joy."

Putting together one of the best seasons by any athlete in any sport in recent memory, Djokovic is 48-1 with eight titles in 2011, including major trophies from the Australian Open and Wimbledon. On Monday, he will rise from No. 2 to No. 1 in the ATP rankings, overtaking Nadal, a switch that was guaranteed by virtue of Djokovic's victory in the semifinals Friday.

"I want to win more Grand Slams," said Djokovic, the first man since Andre Agassi in 1992 to win his first grass title at Wimbledon. "I will not definitely stop here, even though I have achieved (the) two biggest things in my life in three days."

Which, perhaps, is why he engaged in such a lengthy and original celebration, even tossing several rackets into the stands, the sort of crowd-pleasing gesture for which Djokovic (it's pronounced JOE-ko-vich) long has been known.

Indeed, early in his career, Djokovic stood out less for his shot-making than for his showmanship — check out his spot-on impersonations of other pros, including Nadal, on YouTube — and a hard-to-explain propensity for losing, or even quitting during, late-round matches at majors.

Right now, though, the 24-year-old from Serbia is the total package, with the bona fides to prove it.

He credits a handful of factors with helping him truly excel recently: more maturity; confidence from helping Serbia win its first Davis Cup title in December; and a gluten-free diet he doesn't like to discuss in any detail.

Djokovic's only loss all season came against 16-time major champion Roger Federer in the French Open semifinals a month ago, Djokovic's seventh exit from a Grand Slam tournament in the final four.

For so many years, Federer and Nadal ruled tennis. One or the other was No. 1 every week since February 2004. One or the other won 22 of the last 26 Grand Slam tournaments, including Nadal's 10 titles.

But now Djokovic owns three of the other four trophies in that span — 2009 U.S. Open champion Juan Martin del Potro has the other — and finally elbowed his way past that pair in the rankings.

"We all know the careers of Nadal and Federer. ... They have been the two most dominant players in the world the last five years. They have won most of the majors," Djokovic said. "So sometimes it did feel a little bit frustrating when you kind of get to the later stages of a Grand Slam — meaning last four, last eight — and then you have to meet them. They always come up with their best tennis when it matters the most. ... I always believed that I have (enough) quality to beat those two guys."

Djokovic is 0-5 against Nadal at Grand Slam tournaments entering Sunday — including retirements from a 2006 French Open quarterfinal and 2007 Wimbledon semifinal.

A more significant head-to-head record, though, is one both men acknowledged played a role Sunday: Remarkably, Djokovic is 5-0 against Nadal this year, all in tournament finals, two on hard courts, two on clay courts, and now one on grass.

"When one player beat you five times, (it's) because today my game don't bother him a lot," Nadal said after his 20-match Wimbledon winning streak ended. "Probably, the mental part is little bit dangerous for me."

That showed at the first key point, 40 minutes into the final. Djokovic led 5-4, but neither

GOLF NOTES

Tiger signs autographs
(AP) — Tiger Woods made a cameo appearance at the AT&T National and caused a stir when he stopped to sign some autographs. Fans rushed the rail as security implored them to move back and stop crushing a row of kids. The crowd eased back and Woods signed autographs for several minutes. Woods, who sat out with injuries, was all smiles in a purple-and-white striped polo and jeans. When one small fan said, "It's nice to meet you in person," Woods looked up with a smile and said thank you. Woods met the winners of a contest in which fans hunted the course for a winning hidden ticket that also got them a copy of his video game, other prizes, and pictures with him. He took several pictures with the family on the putting green. He did not talk to reporters except for one TV interview.
CANTLAY CANT MISS: Patrick Cantlay, a sophomore-to-be at UCLA, ended his memorable month in the big leagues with a 67 on Sunday to tie for 20th at the AT&T National. Cantlay, who won the Jack Nicklaus Award as the nation's top Division I golfer, qualified for the U.S. Open, then tied for 21st at Congressional and was low amateur. A week later, he set a course record at the TPC River Highlands with 10-under 60 in the second round, the lowest score ever by an amateur. He ended up in a tie for 24th. Cantlay became the first amateur since Ricky Barnes in 2003 to make three cuts in one season.

Sports Writer

The Salem News is accepting applications for a sports staff position. Applicants should possess requisite journalism skills and the ability to multi-task. Duties would include writing, photography and building pages. Recent college graduates encouraged to apply. Experience preferred but will train the right candidate for this entry-level position with potential for advancement within the Ogdon Newspapers family. Job requires 35-38 hours weekly, mostly evenings over five days. Some weekend work required. Send resumes including clips to:
