Salem native to return as band director

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

SALEM — Hannah (Colian) McFarland, a former member of the Salem High School Band “The Pride of Salem,” will return to Reilly Stadium this fall as the band’s new director.

“I’m excited to be back in Salem...I’m really looking forward to being part of the Salem band again,” she said when contacted by phone.

The Salem school board met in special session Wednesday morning for some hirings, with McFarland selected as the instrumental music instructor/band director.

Superintendent Tom Bratten said she’ll be responsible for some elementary, but mostly junior high and high school instruction and oversee the marching band and concert band. Chris Rodack serves as the assistant band director and teaches fifth and sixth graders.

Valedictorian of the Salem High School Class of 2002, McFarland graduated from Grove City College in Grove City, Pa., with a bachelor’s degree in music education with a concentration in piano in May 2006. She was a member of her college marching band and in the summer of 2004, served in Salem as a marching band assistant.

She had been working since 2006 as middle school band director at Southampton Middle School in Courtland, Va., where she taught band to grades 6-8, implemented an elective music appreciation class for sixth graders and taught small group band lessons to fifth grade students at two elementary schools.

Cops after man who tried to lure girl into car

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

SALEM — City police are on the lookout for a man who has been approaching females from his car, asking for directions, then trying to lure them inside his vehicle.

A juvenile girl came to the police station at 12:06 p.m. Wednesday to report the latest incident, which occurred around 7:40 p.m. Tuesday on East State Street near Lincoln Avenue.

The girl said she was walking when a man in an eastbound silver car approached her and stopped, asking for directions to Columbiana. After she told him the directions, he kept talking and told her he was 36 and unemployed.

The report said he asked her to get into the car and she refused, then he demanded her to get in or he would “take her.” She quickly left the area and the car continued traveling east on State Street.

The man was described as white with brown curly hair with blond tint, blue eyes and chubby with one earring. He was the lone occupant of a long silver car with a black stripe on the lower portion of the car between the wheels only, with a sunroof and a spoiler.

Woman kidnapped, beaten, robbed after woman with doll tricks her into stopping

By TOM GIAMBRONI
Staff Writer

LISBON — A county woman was kidnapped, beaten and robbed after being lured into picking up a woman walking along a rural road holding what turned out to be a baby doll.

The crime occurred on Cameron Road in Madison Township at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday and the victim was Jean Hill, 40, according to the Columbiana County Sheriff's Office.

Hill was driving southeast in a pickup when she saw a young woman walking along Cameron Road holding what appeared to be a baby. Hill stopped and offered her a ride, and the woman got inside. It was then Hill realized the woman was actually carrying a baby doll.

The woman pulled a handgun and a second woman emerged from the weeds and climbed into the back seat of the truck and they ordered Hill to start driving to state Route 45, police said. The woman in the back seat began going through Hill's purse and throwing things at her, yelling how she had nothing of value.

The back seat suspect than grabbed Hill by the hair and began jerking her head around. The suspect also began slapping Hill on the side of the head.

The back seat suspect took money from Hill's purse and then, after examining her wallet, declared they had the wrong person before showing Hill's ID to the front seat suspect. This resulted in Hill being struck again.

The pair ordered Hill to pull over because they planned to steal her truck. Hill told them the truck was outfitted with a Lo-Jack tracking device because her husband was an auxiliary police officer and firefighter, which further enraged them.

They removed Hill from the truck and ordered her into the truck bed which had a truck bed cover. The suspects drove the truck for a while before stopping and taking items Hill had purchased from the store. They ordered Hill to count to 500 before coming out, and she counted to 1,000 before emerging and finding they had left the keys in the truck.

Shots fired in Leetonia

Staff Reports

LEETONIA — Two or three shots were fired late Wednesday night at the Shell gas station on Columbia Street.

The target is believed to be the owner, Amad Esmail.

According to Leetonia Police Chief John Soldano, Esmail was standing in the doorway to the station when a car pulled in. Words were exchanged, the chief said, before an occupant in the vehicle fired two or three rounds in Esmail's direction.

Esmail was not hit.

"It it very possible they were trying to get him," Soldano said.

A witness across the street said they heard the shots about 10:15 p.m. The witness heard four shots.

Nine millimeter casings were found.

Soldano said the Bureau of Criminal Investigations was called, and the state agency had a man on the scene Wednesday night.

Esmail is awaiting trial on eight charges stemming from an investigation into the sale of drugs at the Columbia Street station. Three Youngstown residents are serving prison terms for bringing drugs into town to be sold.

The charges against Esmail include two counts of aggravated trafficking in drugs and one count of aggravated possession of drugs, all first-degree felonies, three counts of trafficking in drugs, a third-degree felony, and two counts of possession of drugs, a fifth-degree felony.

Speaker to offer tips on aerospace industry Independents on ballot

By LARRY SHIELDS
Staff Writer

SALEM — As a result of the two-day Columbiana County Economic Summit in May, the Sustainable Opportunity Development Center is hosting a “How to do Business in the Ohio Aerospace Industry” luncheon from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. next Thursday (July 14).

The event, featuring guest speaker Dr. Michael Heil, president and CEO of the the Ohio Aerospace Industry, will be held at the Salem Community Center.

The cost is $25 and $20 if a company is a member of any Columbiana County Chamber of Commerce, Larry Kosiba, executive director of the SODC said. Payment can be made in advance or at the door.

Kosiba said interest from the summit underpinned the luncheon and there are 25 to 30 business already signed up. Companies can contact Kosiba by July 11 at 330-205-3050.

“I’m hoping for 40 or 50,” he said, adding he expected to see a Columbiana County day, “possibly in September or early October,” at NASA in Cleveland.

Kosiba said the OAI’s mission is to build Ohio’s aerospace economy through research and technology development; education and training; and through collaboration and information exchanges.

Kosiba, a retired U.S. Air Force lieutenant colonel, was stationed at Wright Patterson AFB, and worked with Heil who was appointed in January 2007 to lead the OAI strategic initiatives, and serve as ambassador for the organization’s economic development efforts.

Heil is a 1975 U.S. Air Force Academy graduate with a degree in engineering.

He was director of the Center for Space Studies and Research at the Air Force Institute of Technology and served as director of the Air Force Research Laboratory’s Propulsion Directorate with responsibilities for propulsion and power research facilities both at Wright-Patterson and Edwards Air Force Bases.

He oversaw facilities valued at more than $2.1 billion, while leading the efforts of more than 1,000 scientists, engineers and staff.

His responsibilities included ensuring the directorate’s $300 million annual budget produced cutting edge technology results for the Air Force and the nation.

He received his master’s degree in flight structures at Columbia University on a Guggenheim Fellowship and earned his doctorate in aerospace engineering from the Air Force Institute of Technology in 1986.

Heil performed engineering duties on the F-15, was a program manager on the C-17 and Advanced Cruise Missile and also served as deputy director of the Astronautics Laboratory; commander of the Phillips Laboratory and Arnold Engineering Development Center; commandant of the Air Force Institute of Technology; and was a special assistant to the commander of the Air Force Research Laboratory.

He also served in two Air Force acquisition centers, four defense laboratories, a test center, a major command staff, the Office of the Secretary of Defense, and the faculties of the Air Force Academy and Air Force Institute of Technology.

Kosiba said attracting a speaker of Heil’s caliber was a “natural extension of what I did before ... it’s a tremendous opportunity for (local) companies.”

Heil will speak on research and technology programs and opportunities; educational and training programs (including K-12 and beyond; and how to become part of OAI’s networking and information exchange.

Kosiba said he expected several area school superintendents to attend.

May’s economic summit, called “Teaming4Success 2011” was organized and hosted by the Salem Area Chamber of Commerce and the SODC.

More than 120 people attended the first day when Lt. Gov. Mary Taylor (R) was the luncheon headliner and close to 100 people attended throughout the second day.

LISBON — All 18 people who filed to run as independent candidates in the November election will be allowed to do so, following action taken Wednesday by the Columbiana County Board of Elections.

The board voted to certify all of the petitions after the staff reported no fatal flaws were found in any of candidacy petitions that would require any be disqualified. The following is the list of independent candidates:

Columbiana
Council: Jan Giba, Mary Calinger-Harrold, Richard McBane and Lowell Schloneger.

East Liverpool
Council-At-Large: Lawrence Applegate, Jerry Crabtree and David Baker.
Fourth Ward Council: Scott Barrett.

Salem
Mayor: Jerry Wolford.
First Ward Council: Dave Nestic
Fourth Ward Council: Randy Colian.

Wellsville
Mayor: Jack Cataldo, Susan Haugh and Nancy Murray.
Council: Donald Brown, Diane Dinch, John Morrow and Tonda Ross.

Board President Patty Colian abstained from voting on the candidacy petition of Randy Colian, who is her brother.

In other action, the board rehired Mark Guy to fill the clerk position he vacated three months ago to take a job in the Salem office of U.S. Rep. Bill Johnson, R-Marietta. He will be hired at his old salary of $9.40.

Guy was a Republican appointment, and board member David Johnson said he and the board's other Republican member James Beardsley asked Guy to apply for his old job.

"He did an excellent job ... and since we couldn't find a better replacement, we asked him to come back," Johnson said of Guy.

Man killed by grizzly at Yellowstone

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — A man out on a hike with his wife in Yellowstone National Park’s backcountry was killed by a female grizzly bear after the couple apparently surprised the bear and its cubs Wednesday, park officials said.

The attack was the first fatal bear mauling in the park since 1986.

“In an apparent attempt to defend a perceived threat to her cubs, the bear attacked and fatally wounded the man,” the park stated in a statement. “Another group of hikers nearby heard the victim’s wife crying out for help, and used a cell phone to call 911.”

Investigators have been interviewing the woman about the bear attack, which took place on the Wapiti Lake Trail, close to Canyon Village and near the middle of the park, park spokesman Al Nash said.

Park officials haven’t taken any action against the bear, he said.

“This is complicated because of where this has occurred,” Nash said. “It is in the backcountry of the park, and we have access challenges and limited communication.”

Park officials were working to clear the area of other hikers. All trails and backcountry campsites in the area have been closed and a warning sign has been posted on the trailhead.

Nash said authorities aren’t prepared to release the man’s name, age or hometown. He said more details probably won’t be released until Thursday, after the man’s family is notified.

Yellowstone and nearby surrounding areas are home to a growing number of grizzlies, at least 600 and some say more than 1,000. Once a rare sight, they’ve become an almost routine cause of tourists lining up at Yellowstone’s roadsides at the height of summer season.

Their growing numbers require constant vigilance by tourists and park workers alike, said Caleb Platt, a service station manager at Canyon Village.

Platt lives most of the year in Yellowstone and said over the last eight years he has had three fairly close run-ins with grizzlies while hiking.

“When it’s close and you realize it does see you, it gets the heart racing,” he told The Associated Press by phone.

He said he hadn’t heard about the nearby mauling.

He said he carries bear spray — pressurized hot-pepper oil in a can — so he’s able to defend himself in case a bear gets ever too close on the trail.

— A North Market Street woman reported Tuesday receiving threatening calls from an unknown man who had personal information about her and her daughter.

—A West Spruce Street woman reported Tuesday being threatened on Facebook by a man she knows. The officer read the message and there was no direct threat, other than the person said he would do what it takes to get his baby.

— A complaint was received about an unmowed lawn in the 200 block of South Lincoln Avenue. The caller said her son plays outside and she found two ticks on him, which she blamed on the high grass.

— A Sherman Street man reported Tuesday his neighbor has been complaining about his outdoor cooking fire pit, which is no more than 3 feet by 3 feet.

— A caller reported about a possible fight at the corner of Spruce and Market streets at 11:16 p.m. Tuesday. Police said there was no problem and the people found at the corner went home.

— A West Spruce Street man reported Wednesday being the victim of identity theft involving use of debit card.

COLUMBIANA

— Police removed Joshua Morris from a North Elm Street residence at 12:02 a.m. Tuesday and advised him that he will be arrested for criminal trespassing if he returns.

— Police recovered a Samsung T-Mobile cellular phone in Firestone Park at 7:38 a.m. Tuesday.

— Police confiscated a bag of marijuana near a pavilion in Firestone Park at 2:46 p.m. Tuesday.

— Police assisted the Fire Department in rescuing a dog that caught its head in the steel bars of its cage and was choking. According to police, the dog was saved.

LEETONIA

— An officer responded to a Waddell Street apartment at 12:59 a.m. June 19 for a report of loud neighbors who sounded as if they were arguing. The neighbors stated they were just loud people and agreed to keep the noise level as low as possible.

— An officer responded to the 100 block of Main Street at 2:12 a.m. June 19 for a report of intoxicated juveniles running through yards. The officer spoke with the mother of the juveniles in question and she stated they were all asleep in the living room, which the officer observed. The officer reported the issue has been ongoing since the end of school, but the juveniles scatter whenever an officer responds to the area.

— An officer investigated a report of two minor children running into the street in the 400 block of Columbia Street at 3:23 p.m. June 23.

— An officer investigated a report of an altercation between two female subjects at a High Street residence at 10:33 p.m. June 23.

— A Somer Street resident reported at 4:57 p.m. June 26 that her vehicle was egged.

— An officer investigated a reported break-in at a Cherry Fork Road business at 4:55 a.m. June 27.

— A Columbia Street resident reported vehicle damage at 4:19 p.m. June 29.

— An officer investigated a report of someone using the dumpster at a Main Street business to dispose of personal trash at 5:11 p.m. June 29.

— A Columbia Street woman reported at 10:23 a.m. Tuesday that someone had taken her debit card and used it without permission.

Which leaders
not doing job?

Barack Obama seems to have forgotten he is president of the United States — the nation's chief executive. We can think of no other explanation for his remarks last Wednesday.

Obama chastised Republicans — and, by extension, conservative Democrats — in Congress over negotiations to increase the nation's debt ceiling. If Congress does not approve that step by Aug. 2, the government may default on some financial obligations.

"They need to do their job," Obama said of congressional Republicans. "Now's the time to go ahead and make the tough choices. That's why they're called leaders," the president insisted during a press conference.

But agreement on a debt ceiling increase is being held up because conservative lawmakers — again, both Democrats and Republicans — are demanding substantial cuts in government spending to contain the explosion in deficits that has occurred on Obama's watch.

Obama and liberal lawmakers won't budge on that without tax increases.

So, who's not doing his job? Who's not making the tough choices? Who's not showing leadership?

The president, who until a few days ago wasn't even actively involved in negotiations over the budget, perhaps?

If it is pursued with vigor, the new anti-terrorism policy unveiled last week by the White House may prove effective.

During the administration of former President George W. Bush, the war against terrorism made use of large-scale military operations such as the invasion of Afghanistan. That may have been appropriate at the time, but a new strategy is called for now.

White House counterterrorism chief John Brennan explained the change to reporters on last Wednesday. More special operations missions by groups such as Navy SEAL teams and more use of attacks by unmanned aerial drones are envisioned. Fewer major military operations are in the mix.

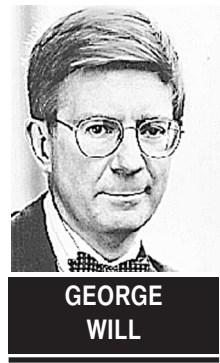

It makes sense to attack small terrorist cells with teams of highly trained operatives, not armies. And it is safer to strike at them with drones and similar weaponry than with ground troops.

Clearly, the new strategy will require shifts in thinking in the military — as well as intensive involvement by the State Department to convince other countries to allow U.S. strikes against terrorists.

But again, if the policy is used aggressively — as was the case in the U.S. operation that killed Osama bin Laden — it may well set terrorist organizations back on their heels. The key, of course, is to eliminate them before they can attack Americans. We urge President Barack Obama to make that the focus of the new strategy.

Republicans warming up for Alabi Ike in 2012 presidential campaign

GEORGE WILL

"If he popped up in the pinch he should of made a base hit and the reason he didn't was so-and-so. And if he cracked one for three bases he ought to had a home run, only the ball wasn't lively, or the wind brought it back, or he tripped on a lump o' dirt, roundin' first base."

— Ring Lardner
"Alibi Ike" (1915)

The Republicans' 2012 presidential nominee will run against Alibi Ike. Lardner, a Chicago sportswriter, created that character ("His right name was Frank X. Farrell, and I guess the X stood for 'Excuse me.'") who resembles Chicagoan Barack Obama. After blaming his predecessor for this and that, and after firing all the arrows in liberalism's quiver — the stimulus, cash for clunkers, etc. — Obama seems poised to blame the recovery's anemia on Republican resistance to simultaneously raising the debt ceiling and taxes.

So the Republican nominee's campaign theme can already be written. In 1960, candidate John Kennedy's theme was:

"We can do better." In 2012, the Republican candidate should say "Is this the best we can do?"

In the contest to determine who will wield those words, there have been three important recent developments: Michele Bachmann's swift ascent into the top tier of candidates, Tim Pawlenty's perch there becoming wobbly, and Jon Huntsman's mystifying approach to securing a place there.

Bachmann has been propelled by three strengths: Her natural aptitude, honed by considerable practice, has made her formidable at the presentational side of politics. She has perfect pitch for the nominating electorate's passions. And she has substantive private- and public-sector experience, as a tax lawyer and as a legislator on, among others, the House Intelligence Committee.

But she also has a deficiency — discipline — that can, if not promptly corrected, vitiate her assets. Unprepared for the intense scrutiny presidential campaigns receive, she trustingly repeats things told to her (confusing Concord, Mass., with Concord, N.H., and John Wayne with the mass murderer John Wayne Gacy), and she plunges into peripheral and utterly optional subjects she has not mastered (e.g., the Founders and slavery). Her staff, which is not ready for prime time, is not serving as a filter to protect her from eager but misinformed supporters, and from herself.

Pawlenty, a more ardent than discerning admirer of John McCain, is suddenly echoing McCain's unhistorical and nonsensical canard that skepticism about nation-building in Afghanistan and opposition to the intervention in Libya's civil war constitute isolationism. "America," Pawlenty says, astonishingly, "already has one political party devoted to decline, retrenchment and withdrawal. It does not need a second one." The Democratic Party supporting a Democratic president's plunge into Libya is devoted to "withdrawal"? If only.

Occasionally there are Democratic presidential candidates who appeal to people who really do not like Democrats (e.g., former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt in 1988), and Republicans who appeal to people who think Republicans are among nature's mistakes (e.g., Illinois Rep. John Anderson in 1980). Huntsman seems to be auditioning for this role, which is puzzling, because such people are not nominated.

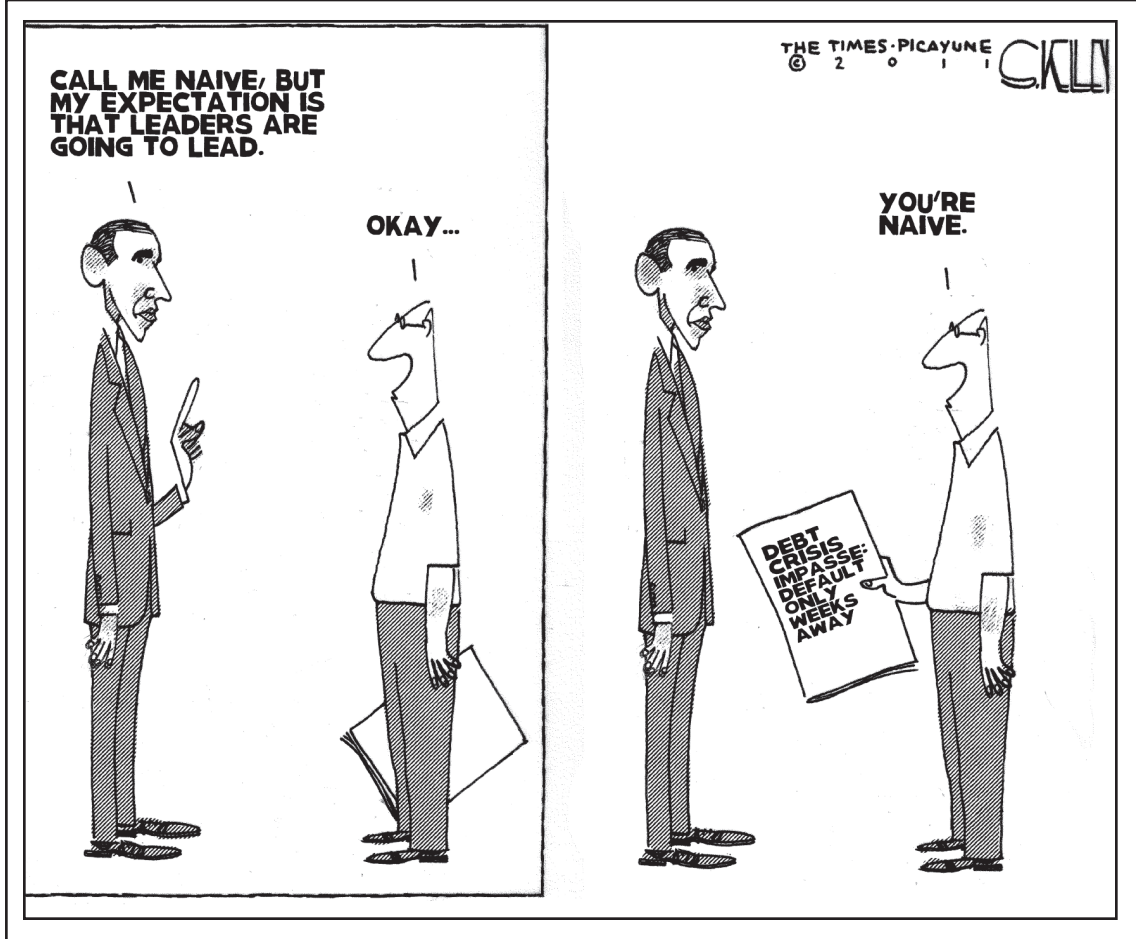

Huntsman's campaign manager, John Weaver, a former McCain man, believes the Republican Party "is nowhere near being a national governing party" — a view usually held by people called Democrats — and that the "simple reason" is: "No one wants to be around a bunch of cranks." Many of the cranks are called: The Republican nominating electorate.

Announcing his candidacy near the Statue of Liberty, where Ronald Reagan began his 1980 post-convention campaign, Huntsman promised "civility" because "I don't think you need to run down someone's reputation" when running for president. Actually, you do.

You must say why your opponent deserves a reputation for inadequacy. So Reagan at that spot said Jimmy Carter's "whole sorry record" was "a litany of despair, of broken promises, of sacred trusts abandoned and forgotten." Reagan said Carter's "cynical" proposals had produced "human tragedy, human misery, the crushing of the human spirit." Reagan's forthrightness was neither uncivil nor, in the electorate's November opinion, untrue.

Who will carry the "Is This the Best We Can Do?" banner? So far, the serene front-runner, Mitt Romney, has nothing to fear from Huntsman's politics of high-mindedness. Bachmann's saliency with social conservatives, and the lurchings of Pawlenty's campaign, threatens Pawlenty's all-in wager on Iowa. And the potential fragility of Bachmann's campaign turns attention to the last piece of the Republican puzzle — Texas' Gov. Rick Perry, a high-octane social and economic conservative whom nobody could confuse with Alibi Ike.

Good ship Tax Cut aground

FROMA HARROP

Poll after poll shows that the American people want higher taxes. That's not the same as liking higher taxes. The people have simply concluded that higher taxes are preferable to the alternative — so vividly portrayed in the Republican plan to do away with government guarantees in Medicare.

And Republicans don't even have that ugly option to offer anymore. After voters in western New York rioted over it by handing a formerly safe GOP congressional seat to a Democrat, many Republicans have been jumping ship. Odd that House Speaker John Boehner continues to sail on with nothing in the hold but a vague threat to let America default on its debt if ... if what? If Democrats refuse to make the drastic spending cuts Republicans are afraid to push.

What do the American people think? A Quinnipiac poll found that 69 percent, including nearly half of Republicans, want taxes raised on households making more than $250,000. A later Ipsos/Reuters polls shows three-fifths wanting to raise taxes to cut the deficit.

When President Obama recently urged Republicans to accept some tax increases as part of a deficit-cutting deal, the ship stayed dead in the water. "The American people know tax hikes destroy jobs," Boehner stated.

Is that so? Perhaps the people remember that in 1993 President Clinton signed a tax increase that helped set off an economic boom and job bonanza. Why? America had shown a willingness to start paying its bills, and investors responded with enthusiasm. In this case, higher taxes created jobs.

Clinton left a budget surplus that his successor, George W. Bush, quickly squandered with tax cuts. Even then, polls showed public support for them only on the understanding that the surpluses would continue. They famously did not.

Today, high-tax Sweden has only 7 percent unemployment, while ours is 9 percent. How come? Before the 2008 economic meltdown, Sweden prudently maintained a budget surplus equal to 3.6 percent of its economy. Bush's America was running a 3 percent deficit.

So guess which country was better prepared to weather the deep recession that followed? In the recent first quarter, Sweden's economy expanded at an annual rate of 6.4 percent, while ours grew a mere 1.9 percent. Meanwhile, no one in Sweden is threatening the health care security of anyone, much less the elderly.

Offering no serious deficit plan that the public can stomach, what Republicans have left is a political plan. Here's how it goes:

After the 1993 tax hike, Democrats suffered grievously at the polls. Though other factors were involved, Republicans pounded them on the tax increase, despite its affecting only high-income households. At the same time, they hearkened back to Ronald Reagan's famous tax cuts, even though the Gipper had also raised taxes 11 times, and still, the national debt doubled during his two terms.

Republicans also recall the beating President George H.W. Bush took from the party's anti-tax cultists after he broke his pledge, "Read my lips, no new taxes." That raising taxes was the responsible thing to do back then did the elder Bush little good.

Many voters who bought the voodoo that tax cuts automatically pay for themselves, and more, are older now, and some are wiser. America must curb spending for sure, but clearly no tolerable path away from the deficit cliff can skirt the revenue side — especially when federal tax collections (relative to the gross domestic product) are the lowest they've been in 60 years.

The Good Ship Tax Cut has run its last cruise. The hard fiscal realities are getting harder to ignore, prompting even recovering tax-a-phobes to take a sedative and say, "Yes, new taxes."

Ohio health law opponents file petitions

COLUMBUS (AP) — Opponents of the new federal health care overhaul are one step closer to having voters in the political bell-wether of Ohio decide whether the state constitution should be amended to keep people from being required to buy health insurance or face penalties.

Supporters of the amendment on Wednesday filed more than 546,000 signatures with Ohio Secretary of State Jon Husted. They need roughly 385,000 valid signatures for the amendment question to get on the Nov. 8 ballot.

The amendment's backers acknowledge that approval of the measure won't automatically exempt the state from the mandate in President Barack Obama's health care overhaul. But they say they hope to use the amendment to legally challenge the law.

The federal mandate is effective in 2014, when new competitive insurance markets open for business.

A coalition of tea party groups called the Ohio Liberty Council has been among the supporters pushing the amendment for more than a year.

The measure would add wording to the state's Bill of Rights to prohibit any federal, state or local law from forcing Ohio residents, employers or health care providers to participate in a health care system.

Chris Littleton, a co-founder of the Ohio Liberty Council, said the health insurance requirement fixes neither problems with access to health care nor the affordability of it. He contended it's too overreaching and opens the door for other federal directives.

"I have to get up and purchase a commercial product because the government says I have to do that," Littleton told reporters at a news conference Wednesday. "That is not a solution to health care. It simply increases the power of government to take part in the process."

The Obama administration has argued that the coverage requirements rest on a solid constitutional foundation: the power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce.

But critics say that does not give the government the right to direct people to buy specific goods or services.

Last week, a federal appeals court in Cincinnati affirmed the merits of the health care law, agreeing that the government can require a minimum amount of insurance for Americans.

Timothy Jost, a professor at Washington and Lee University law school in Virginia, said unless reversed by the U.S. Supreme Court, the ruling by the three-judge 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals already settles the question of whether Ohio residents would be required under the federal law to buy health insurance.

"At this point it serves no legal purpose," Jost said. "It's just a political statement."

The head of the Columbus-based 1851 Center for Constitutional Law, who helped draft the amendment, said the matter is still up in the air, given that the nation's highest court has yet to take it up.

"It's not just politics," said Maurice Thompson, the center's executive director. "Cases go through courts all the time, issues go back and forth. You can't always decide what you're going to do based upon what one lower court does or another lower court does."

The Beatty Buck, Then and Now

Editor's Note: Ten years ago, OVO's first cover story featured Mike Beatty's big buck. To celebrate our 10th Anniversary we wanted to see what life has been like for Beatty since taking the world record buck right here in Ohio.

By Ralph Scherder

On November 8, 2000, Mike Beatty's life changed forever. That's the day he killed a buck that would later score over 300 inches, Boone & Crockett, in Greene County, Ohio. At the time, it was the highest-scoring whitetail ever killed by a hunter.

Who among us hasn't had this dream? But for Beatty, who lives in Xenia, OH, that dream became reality, and it helped solidify a career in the outdoors.

"It started when that first picture was taken of me with the buck," recalls Beatty. "My career in the outdoor industry was launched overnight. And in the 10-plus years since then, I've done a lot of shows and met a lot of great people. I wouldn't trade it for anything."

For anyone unfamiliar with the story behind the Beatty Buck, here's a quick review:

The Beatty Buck

Score: 304 6/8 NT
When: Nov. 8, 2000
Where: Greene County, OH
Weapon: Mathews Z-Light compound bow
Pope & Young score: 294
Points: 39
Inside Spread: 25 7/8
Rank: *3rd all-time, 1st by a hunter
* No. 1 "Missouri Monarch" 333 7/8 (found dead near St. Louis, MO in 1981); No. 2 "Hole-In-The-Horn" 328 2/8 (found dead near Ravenna, OH in 1940).

Assuming it was the same big 8-point, he stood up, grabbed his bow, and began mentally preparing himself for the shot. As the buck got closer, though, Beatty realized it was a different deer. In re-telling the story, Beatty would describe the second buck as "even bigger and more massive rack – much bigger and much more massive!"

The buck lip curled when it caught wind of three scent bombs Beatty had hung near his stand. Although the deer was quartering toward him at only 12 yards, he seized the opportunity hoping the arrow would penetrate far enough into the chest cavity and into the vital organs.

The arrow hit home and the buck whirled and took off. Beatty watched it run for perhaps a hundred yards before it disappeared in the dense cover.

Beatty climbed out of his tree stand, found a single piece of arrow fletching but not the actual arrow. Not far from that he found dark red blood and knew he'd hit the deer. He waited a little over a half-hour and began trailing the deer. At first the trail was sparse, but the farther he went, the heavier it got, until it got so heavy that it looked as if red paint had been spilled all over the ground.

Still, he followed the blood trail almost 250 yards and found no deer. He then heard a deer snort and heard another deer milling around not far ahead. Unsure of whether or not it was the buck he'd hit, Beatty was faced with a dilemma: continue on or back out and return in the morning? He chose the latter.

Beatty climbed into his tree stand shortly after four o'clock in the afternoon. Around five o'clock he spotted a high, wide 8-point working toward him. It was a buck that Beatty and his son, Andrew, had been watching all summer long, and it was a shooter. Beatty drew but was unable to get a clear shot. As the buck walked away, Beatty grunted a few times and then lightly rattled a set of antlers. A few minutes later he let out a doe bleat.

After several bleats, he spotted movement roughly 30 yards away working up a thick

This was the original photo of Mike Beatty's monster buck that scored 304 6/8 with 39 points. The buck was taken with a Mathews Z-Light compound bow.

"It was the toughest decision I've ever had to make as a deer hunter," he says. When it began to pour rain in the middle of the night, Beatty questioned himself even more. Would there be any blood trail left to follow?

Beatty and his son, who was nine at the time, headed out at daylight to look for the massive buck. Rather than retrace the trail from the stand, they walked across a cattle pasture to pick up the buck's trail where Beatty had left off the night before. They no sooner walked over a high spot in the pasture when Andrew tugged on his dad's jacket and said, "Dad, there he is!"

Aged at only 4 1/2 years old, the buck sported a whopping 39 points and net-scored 304 6/8 inches, non-typical.

And so it began. In the past 10 years, Beatty has traveled all around the country showing off his buck and telling the story of how he killed it. And everywhere he has gone hunters have gathered around to hear him speak. "It's certainly an honor for me to have shot such a tremendous deer," says Beatty, "especially with a bow. But to be honest, my fondest memories of the 2000 season won't be of this buck. Instead, I'll most remember being able to share the deer season with my son Andrew."

Study: Long commutes could fatigue airline pilots

WASHINGTON (AP) — One in five airline pilots lives at least 750 miles from work, according to a study by scientific advisers to the government, raising concerns that long commutes to airports could lead to fatigue in the cockpit.

The calculations were based on home addresses of more than 25,000 pilots, according to a National Research Council report released Wednesday. Although a significant share of pilots list addresses hundreds of miles from their base, it's not clear that they routinely begin their commutes to work from those addresses, the report said.

The council acknowledged it is difficult to determine the safety risk associated with long commutes without more information about the practices of individual pilots.

Rule lets FDIC recover pay from failed bank execs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal regulators will be able to take back two years of pay from executives held responsible for a large bank's failure.

Executives deemed “negligent” and “substantially responsible” for a big bank's failure can lose all of their compensation from the previous two years under a rule approved Wednesday by the board of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

Banks objected to an earlier version of the rule, saying it would induce key executives to depart at the first sign of trouble rather than risking their compensation.

UK companies pull ads from scandal-rocked tabloid

LONDON (AP) — Companies rushed to pull ads from British tabloid News of the World on Wednesday amid public outcry over alleged phone hacking, but media mogul Rupert Murdoch insisted his top executive in Britain, Rebekah Brooks, would not resign.

As reports emerged that employees at the paper — owned by Murdoch's News Corp. media empire — hacked into the phones of missing schoolgirls and families of victims in London's 2005 terror attacks, the backlash from companies escalated.

Twitter and Facebook users listed companies that normally advertise with News of the World and urged people to contact them and demand that they pull their advertisements. Some companies, unwilling to alienate their customer base, agreed.

Some British legislators also called on regulators to block News Corp. from taking over British Sky Broadcasting.

Stock market shrugs off weak service sector report

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock indexes managed slight gains Wednesday as investors shrugged off slower growth in the U.S. service sector.

The Institute for Supply Management reported Wednesday that business growth slowed at U.S. service providers in June. Financial companies and health care providers reported the weakest results. On the positive side, June marked the 19th consecutive month of growth at service companies, which employ the majority of American workers. U.S. stocks had opened mixed after a broad sell-off in Europe and another interest rate hike in China.

Lagarde, taking over IMF, vows to diversify board

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new chief of the International Monetary Fund pledged Wednesday to diversify the global lending organization and give developing nations a greater voice on its board.

Christine Lagarde is the first woman to lead the IMF. She takes over after her predecessor, Dominique Strauss-Kahn, resigned in May to fight charges that he sexually assaulted a New York City hotel housekeeper.

Lagarde is under pressure to address the institution's long-standing reputation as a melting pot of Western elites — one that was known for male-dominated clubbiness. Lagarde said she will push to make the institution's staff more diverse. She said she will also continue reforms begun last year that increase the voting power of countries such as China and Brazil.

Facebook launches video calls, group chat features

NEW YORK (AP) — Quick on the heels of Google's launch of its latest social-networking venture, Facebook said Wednesday that its 750 million users will now be able to make video calls on the site.

The feature will be powered by the Internet phone service Skype. Facebook also redesigned its chat feature, so that the people a user messages the most often show up first.

Auto industry, seeing new life, on hiring spree

DETROIT (AP) — Volkswagen opened a plant in Tennessee last month with 2,000 workers. Honda is hiring 1,000 in Indiana to meet demand for its best-selling Civic. General Motors is looking for 2,500 in Detroit to build the Chevy Volt.

Two years after the end of the Great Recession, the auto industry is hiring again — and much faster than the rest of the economy. As an employer, it's growing faster than airplane manufacturers, shipbuilders, health care providers and the federal government.

The hiring spree is even more remarkable because memories of the U.S. auto industry's near-death experience are fresh. In 2009, General Motors and Chrysler both got government bailouts and entered bankruptcy, and auto sales hit a 30-year low.

In June of that year, about 623,000 people were employed by the auto industry in the United States, the fewest since the early 1980s. Now the figure is almost 700,000, a 12 percent increase.

Sales are back up, too, and automakers are hiring by the thousands to meet increased demand.

“The buzz is incredible around here about what opportunity we're going to get if we can build a great product,” says Ben Edwards, who went to work for Volkswagen in Chattanooga, Tenn., last year and is now a team leader on an assembly line that installs tires and seats.

Edwards was working as a general contractor until the housing market dried up. He says the pay at Volkswagen, which starts at $14.50 an hour, is fair and the benefits are generous.

Besides hiring 2,000 people itself, Volkswagen figures the plant, where it will make its new Passat, will create 9,000 spin-off jobs in the region, including 500 at auto-supplier plants that are springing up nearby.

Automakers are hiring again because car sales are rising. Americans bought 10.4 million cars and trucks in 2009 and 11.6 million in 2010. This year, they're on track to buy 13 million or more, and auto companies are adding shifts to meet the demand.

“Everybody got so lean and mean during the downturn that they're trying to rebuild staff,” says Charles Chesbrough, a senior economist with IHS Automotive.

The auto industry's 12 percent increase in jobs compares with a 0.2 percent gain for the economy as a whole, excluding farming and adjusted for seasonal variation, since June 2009. The Labor Department reports Friday on jobs gained or lost last month.

In a normal economic recovery, improvement in the housing market leads the way by creating construction jobs. But home prices haven't stopped falling, and the construction industry has shed 8 percent of its workers since June 2009 — 474,000 jobs in all.

The gains in the auto industry have been small by comparison. But they do create positive ripple effects for the economy. The Center for Automotive Research estimates that every new auto manufacturing job leads to nine other jobs — from parts makers to restaurants that feed auto workers.

The auto gains have been widespread, with the Midwest the biggest beneficiary. In Ohio alone, auto manufacturing jobs have risen 31 percent the past two years, while parts makers in Michigan have added nearly 20,000 jobs.

Parts jobs are also up 15 percent in Alabama, where workers make parts for Mercedes SUVs and Honda minivans, and in Kentucky, where the Chevrolet Corvette and Toyota Camry are made.

Before the turnaround, new auto jobs were scarce. Detroit's auto companies had too many factories, high wages and bloated bureaucratic management. Jobs began disappearing in 2006 and 2007 as U.S. automakers tried desperately to restructure. Dozens of auto suppliers were pushed into bankruptcy.

Then came 2008, when gas prices spiked and the financial crisis struck. The industry lost almost one in every four of its jobs. By the time GM and Chrysler got out of bankruptcy, in June 2009, the industry employed about half as many people as it did in 2000.

Sales and profits have risen ever since, and payrolls have followed.

GM, Ford and Chrysler are all making money for the first time since the mid-2000s and adding workers to build popular models like the revamped Ford Explorer. Foreign companies, stung by the high cost of exporting cars to the U.S. when the dollar is weak, are racing to build more products here.

Quakertown Trolley trip focuses on Underground Railroad

SALEM — As part of Salem’s Artisan’s Weekend, the Quakertown Trolley will offer a trolley tour of Salem’s Underground Railroad homes at 1:30 p.m. Sunday, July 17. Jeanne Martinelli, docent of the Salem Historical Society’s Freedom Hall, dressed as a Salem Quaker, will take the passengers back in time to the year 1856. Through the telling of many stories, the travelers will return to the present with a better understanding of the plight of slaves, the working of the UGRR, and the abolitionist movement that flourished in Salem prior to the Civil War. Since the homes are private and entrances not possible, flashed on a screen inside the trolley will be over 100 slides to show pictures of the insides of the homes, the Underground Railroad hiding places, and several abolitionists who lived in or visited them. The slides will also help clarify the historical information presented during the program. The tour will last approximately one hour. Cost is $10 a person. Pre-sale reservations are encouraged as seating is limited and may be obtained calling the Salem Historical Society, 330-337-8514.

South Range board OKs contract for track

By KEVIN HOWELL
Staff Writer

BEAVER TOWNSHIP — The South Range Local school board Wednesday morning awarded a bid for an all-weather track facility at the K-12 Campus. The board hired United Civil Contractors of Hubbard for $611,700 for Phase II of the project, which includes the track itself, as well as the venues inside the track, the fencing surrounding the facility and the parking lot, according to schools Superintendent Dennis Dunham. The board received three other bids ranging from $627,775 to $747,798. The track will be built east of state Route 46 across from the K-12 campus using funds from the sale of the Greenford and North Lima facilities that are earmarked for construction projects only. The board had originally awarded the project, along with the site construction, to Jim Santini Builder Inc. of Washingtonville in July 2010, but had to reject the track portion a month later because the Ohio School Facilities Commission would not release the appropriate amount of funds until it was apparent the K-12 campus construction would not go over budget. Treasurer Jim Phillips noted that with all the alternatives and financial adjustments to project cost last year, the current bid for the track project is approximately the same as the previous unaltered one. In other business the board hired Sarah Stark as a high school math teacher and Renae Yaniglos as EMIS coordinator and superintendent’s secretary.

Salem residents report rash of thefts from vehicles overnight

SALEM — Several residents early Wednesday reported their vehicles were broken into overnight, including an Oak Street man whose window was broken to make entry. Daniel Shea, of the 2300 block of Oak Street, called at 9:42 a.m. to report the driver’s side window broken on the locked vehicle parked in his driveway. Missing items included an iPod Touch, $60 in cash from his wallet and $250 in additional cash missing from his girlfriend’s tip apron. The first break-in call came about 3:12 a.m. from Joseph Watson of Aetna Street who said his son went to leave for work and found the interior of his car ransacked. The car had been parked on Homewood Avenue at Aetna. Watson checked his company car at the same spot and discovered his wallet stolen. An officer started checking the area for other vehicles that may have been entered and located Watson’s wallet inside a sewer drain on the west side of Homewood. The wallet still had the contents inside. While checking the area for other vehicles that had been entered, an officer at 6:15 a.m. on Fairview Court found a car ransacked. The owner was contacted, but nothing was found missing other than a few quarters. Craig Berger, of the 300 block of Jennings Avenue, reported at 8:06 a.m. that someone entered three vehicles parked in his drive, including those belonging to his visiting sons. A GPS unit was stolen from each of the three vehicles. Michelle Vanhorn, of the 900 block of Franklin Avenue, called at 11:07 a.m. to report her purse containing several credit cards, insurance cards, other forms of identification some cash and a checkbook was stolen from her truck parked in her driveway.

Saturday events set at Alliance Hospital

ALLIANCE – Alliance Community Hospital is announcing back-to-back Saturday events in July to benefit community members.

On Saturday, July 9, the hospital will host a free community carnival in the Discharge Circle area from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. “We wanted to commemorate our founding in 1901, as well as our move to our new facility in 2006 and felt the best way to honor our history as a hospital was to provide a community event that was equally educational and fun,” said Patty Kimerer, PWE, director of public relations and the foundation at ACH.

The carnival is free and open to the community and will include a disc jockey, clowns, a dunk tank, festival games, an integrative therapies section (including a meet-and-greet with the ACH Pet Therapy Dogs) and several tents offering displays of historical events in Alliance as well as exhibits chronicling various ACH highlights through the years since its inception. Information on hospital programs, services, clinical specialties and support groups will also be available.

“We’ve been working hard to have lots of hospital-specific history on hand, as well as all the traditional foods, sights, and sounds that go along with a community festival,” said Charlotte Furbee, ACH’s Gift and Snack Shop manager and organizer of the event.

The carnival will offer balloons, cotton candy, games of skill and luck, and even the chance to win a goldfish or two.

“We want this to be a great afternoon of family fun that affords the community a unique walk down memory lane in Alliance -- with a little health and wellness education mixed in for good measure,” Kimerer said.

On July 16, the Alliance Visiting Nurse Association and Hospice, a department of Alliance Community Hospital, will sell hot dogs in the parking lot of the Lowe’s home improvement store from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

“We’re so pleased to be partnering with Lowe’s for this project because it will benefit those who need relief during the hottest months of summer,” said Lori Williams, RN, BSN, MSN GC-C and marketing liaison for AVNAH.

Williams explained that Home Energy Assistance Program (HEAP) of Ohio, which typically helps community residents in need to secure free room air conditioning units, has cut their funding for 2011.

“We are well aware of the need in our region and those we serve. We go into these homes and know there are many people who rely on HEAP for assistance throughout summer,” Williams said.

Williams said that AVNAH and Lowe’s will donate all proceeds from the hot dog sale to purchase air conditioners for as many of their patients in need as is possible.

“These are just two small examples of ways we are offering community outreach to those whom we are proud and privileged to serve,” said Kimerer.

“As a Planetree facility, we go to great lengths to offer high clinical quality and also realize that compassion, empathy, and integrative therapies are of huge importance to our patients, visitors, and community, as well,” she said.

SHERIFF

— A deputy was asked to check on the welfare of a person living at the Butler Mobile Home Park, U.S. Route 62, Salem, at 8:18 p.m. Monday. A man was found sitting in his living room and he appeared to be fine and did not know why anyone would call the sheriff's office.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Ohio State tries its best to focus on football

Buckeyes still have to wait until August for the NCAA's punishment for past infractions

By RUSTY MILLER
Associated Press

The weight room has been a place to retreat for the Ohio State Buckeyes this summer. Going through workouts, the Buckeyes have tried to shut out all the bad news stemming from an NCAA investigation into a memorabilia-for-cash and tattoos scandal that has cost Ohio State its coach and its quarterback. Jim Tressel resigned in May and soon after that QB Terrelle Pryor decided to give up his senior season for a shot at the NFL. Suddenly, the Buckeyes aren't just getting themselves ready to run and tackle and block; they're also surrounded by people who want to know what went wrong and how this will all end. "You stay focused. You have tunnel vision," linebacker Andrew Sweat said Wednesday. "Obviously, people are entitled to their opinion but you just move forward." From inside the Woody Hayes Athletic Center, it's also been easier not to think about the impending NCAA sanctions that could take away the goals of playing for a Big Ten title or going to a bowl game.

The players are attempting to ignore the outside world, and all the talk about what was done or wasn't done. When it comes right down to it, each player is responsible for taking care of his own business. And a player's business is just getting ready for another season. The Buckeyes are trying to eliminate emotion from the equation. "If you let stuff anger you, and stuff out in the media affect what you do on a normal day, especially because we're in here every day, it's going to affect you and it's going to affect the way you train," fullback Zach Boren said. "We kind of let everything go — in one ear and out the other kind of a thing." Tressel has been replaced by interim coach Luke Fickell, formerly Ohio State's linebackers coach and co-defensive coordinator. But no one really expects the Buckeyes to change

PITTSBURGH — Save for a few veterans, the Pittsburgh Pirates are new to this pennant race thing. They are sure to learn some difficult lessons along the way. Pitcher Charlie Morton and his teammates stumbled upon one in an 8-2 loss against the last-place Houston Astros on Wednesday night. No matter how good things appear to be, they can change faster than the Pittsburgh weather. For five innings, Morton never looked better. He took a three-hit shutout and 1-0 lead into the sixth inning, when the bottom dropped out all of a sudden. The Astros strung together a half-dozen hits, and with the benefit of two errors, they scored five runs and never looked back the rest of the way. The nightmare began when rookie shortstop Chase d'Arnaud hurried a throw that allowed fleet-footed center fielder Michael Bourn to reach base. The next four batters delivered RBI hits — third baseman Angel Sanchez (double), right fielder Hunter Pence (single),

Carlos Lee (triple) and second baseman Jeff Keppinger (double). Shortstop Clint Barmes capped the avalanche with an RBI single, after which Morton (7-5) left the game. Before that inning, the right-hander had struck out six batters. The loss was his third in the last four starts. It wasn't the best of times for center fielder Andrew Mc- See BUCS, 3B

Jeter doubles, three shy of 3,000 hits

By TOM WITHERS

CLEVELAND — Derek Jeter pulled within three hits of 3,000 for his career, lining a double in three at-bats against Cleveland's Justin Masterson, who shut down the powerful New York Yankees for eight scoreless innings and led the Indians to a 5-3 win on Wednesday night. Jeter went 1 for 3 and also drew a walk from Masterson (7-6), who was backed up by two sensational plays from All-Star shortstop Asdrubal Cabrera in the eighth. Rookie Lonnie Chisenhall hit his first career homer for Cleveland, which took two of three from the AL East leaders. The Central-leading Indians scored two runs in the first off starter Phil Hughes (0-2), but spent most of the night wasting scoring chances. They left the bases loaded twice and stranded 13 runners. Masterson allowed three hits, struck out six, walked two and got just his second win since April 26. He turned it over in the ninth to Cleveland's bullpen, but reliever Vinnie Pestano couldn't finish it out and gave up three runs. Closer Chris Perez came on and got three outs for his 21st save. The game ended with Jeter on deck — just as he is for 3,000. His quest to become the 28th major leaguer — and first purebred pinstriper — to reach 3,000 will resume on Thursday night against Tampa Bay at Yankee Stadium, his professional home since 1995. COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Annika Sorenstam's return to the scene of her first win in a major hasn't sparked any thoughts of a comeback. The Hall of Famer is simply far more inter-much for the upcoming season. Preseason drills have followed the familiar template that was laid down the previous 10 seasons under Tressel.

The rhythm to the fast approaching season also hasn't changed: Freshmen report on Aug. 6, veterans show up a day later, the first official practice of the preseason is Aug. 8. The opening game of the season is Sept. 3 at noon against Akron at Ohio Stadium.

But before that, Ohio State goes before the NCAA's committee on infractions on Aug. 12. That group will decide in the following weeks whether the current Buckeyes get to play for a Big Ten title — this is the first season for a conference championship game between the two new divisions — or if they will get to play in a bowl game. Meanwhile, there's work to be done and the players try to keep their eyes on what they must do.

“It would definitely be something that you hope that you could have because it's something that you're used to, something that you look forward to during the season,” safety Orhian Johnson said, referring to playing for the league title or in the postseason. “But there's nothing that we can do about it. It's really out of our hands right now. All we can do is worry about Akron and starting the season off.”

Besides, with the Buckeyes losing all but three players who started on defense in the 31-26 win over Arkansas in the Sugar Bowl, there are plenty of opportunities out there. On offense, the Buckeyes are missing four starters — but have been heavily hit by suspensions. Leading-rusher Dan “Boom” Herron, No. 2 receiver DeVier Posey and starting left tackle Mike Adams are among four players (backup defensive lineman Solomon Thomas is the other) who will sit out the first five games for accepting cash and discounted tattoos from a Columbus tattoo-parlor owner. Pryor was also scheduled to sit out those games before he bolted for a possible supplemental draft.

Those left behind will try to make the most of the situation and to keep their heads up.

“I preach to the younger players if you don't get better each and every day then none of your goals are going to happen,” Sweat said. “I try to just preach on being humble to young guys. And just be a sponge and take everything in. And work hard every day.”

The 40-year-old Sorenstam did more socializing than swinging as she entertained the gallery.

“Once I made the decision to step away, I stepped away,” said Sorenstam, who wrapped up her career after the 2008 season. “I practice very little; I play very little.”

In March, Sorenstam gave birth to her second child, Will, who was born premature at just 27 weeks. He's now been home for nearly two months and is up to almost 10 pounds.

Soon, he's even going to start traveling with the family, which also includes Sorenstam's 22-month-old daughter, Ava.

“My little buddy Will is doing great,” Sorenstam said. “It's been a tough start for our little man, but he's a fighter.”

“Life is good. I love being a mom, and I love just the things I'm doing.”

Sorenstam still remains active in the sport even if she hardly plays. She's set up a golf academy and foundation, along with serving on the advisory board for the LPGA.

“I've taken my competitive drive in a different area. I'm very competitive in the business world,” said Sorenstam, who also designs courses, has a clothing line and even is a partner in a vineyard, complete with her own signature wine. “I get my competitive fix there.”

Still, Sorenstam keeps close tabs on the tour. She's impressed with the play of Yani Tseng, who at 22 is the youngest to win four LPGA majors.

many great things. She's really taken the No. 1 spot to another level," Sorenstam said. "She wants to be the best. She wants to be the face of the LPGA. I mean, she's got the game."

Not that long ago, it looked as though Michelle Wie could be the next big thing in the sport. Now 21 years old, Wie is still searching for her first victory at a major.

"When she came out there was a lot of buzz, a lot of potential from this young lady," Sorenstam said. "I would say she has not performed to her expectations or her potential. Hopefully that will come in the next — maybe this year or the next few years to follow."

In Sorenstam's estimation, Wie definitely has the game to be a contender in a major. But it may boil down to commitment. Wie is also working on her degree at Stanford.

"She's very distracted with school, doesn't really play as much full time as I thought she would. I think she needs to come out here and compete more regularly," Sorenstam said.

"But she certainly has a lot of potential."

"The physical part is there. Sometimes, you wonder if she's mentally strong enough to finish at the top. She has a few victories, but has not really been able to really break through, in my opinion."

PLANE TRUTH: For Paula Creamer, one of the spoils of winning the U.S. Open last summer was her ride in an F-16 jet.

And no, she didn't get sick, despite the jarring flight with the U.S. Air Force Thunderbirds.

"It was a great opportunity," Creamer said.

The 24-year-old will be paired with Yani Tseng for the first two days of the tournament, a matchup Creamer likes.

"She's the player to beat," Creamer said. "However, it is Thursday and Friday, so you can't dwell too much about what's going on out there."

"That is going to be the big key: just taking care of my own business. I can't control what she does."

NFL labor: time getting tight

NEW YORK (AP) — NFL owners and players need to go into hurry-up mode as time gets short to reach labor peace.

Although both sides say progress has been made in the last month of meetings in various locations, the prospect of postponing the opening of training camps grows stronger every day. Lawyers for the NFL and the players’ association sorted out contract language and details Wednesday for a second straight day, hoping it could speed the process in reaching a new collective bargaining agreement.

A person with knowledge of the situation told The Associated Press that attorneys met at a Manhattan law firm’s headquarters. The person spoke on condition of anonymity because a judge has directed that details of the court-ordered mediated negotiations not be disclosed.

NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell and NFLPA chief DeMaurice Smith plan to return to the negotiations Thursday, along with several owners and players. They all know that some training camps are set to open in less than three weeks and the first exhibition game, at the Pro Football Hall of Fame inductions, is Aug. 7 in Canton, Ohio. The St. Louis Rams and Chicago Bears are scheduled for that game.

“Everyone’s back is up against the wall,” said economic consultant Dr. Jessica Horewitz, a director at Gnarus Advisors who consulted with Smith on the finer points of NFL labor before he was elected executive director of the players association. “The last few details of the contract have to be hammered out, but I believe the big issues are pretty wrapped up: the salary cap and revenue share with the players.

“I think it will be steady progress, and if we don’t have something by the 15th. I don’t think it will long after that.”

Marc Ganis, president of Chicago-based sports business consulting firm Sportscorp Ltd., and a keen observer of the league’s business side, also sees something getting done in the next week or so.

“They are now up against a hard deadline,” Ganis said. “July 15 is effectively a hard deadline to make sure to get all the preseason games in. If they go beyond July 15, you likely start losing preseason games and it means less money is available overall to do a deal to satisfy both parties.

“Once you start losing real and serious money that can’t be replaced, getting a deal done becomes much more difficult.” Canceling a full week-end of preseason games would cost upward of $60 million in lost revenues. That lessens the overall income for the league that the two sides are battling over. Sure, players don’t get paid for the preseason (except for a per diem), but reducing the total pie certainly affects them.

Ralph Cindrich, an attorney and player agent who has been involved in every NFL labor dispute, believes neither the owners nor the players felt any motivation to close a deal until now. He cites late June and very early in July as normally a dead time in pro football, anyway.

“It is now that time when pressure has to be put on both sides,” he said. “This is just too strong of a business not to find a solution. You go worldwide and spend a month overseas, you can see how we are in a fragile economy, and to mess with this successful business will have a devastating effect.

“I do see it getting done, it’s too good a product not to get done. But I can see the tough owners taking it into overtime, causing a cancellation of the first preseason game.”

Hall of Fame president Steve Perry has said the game is being planned to go on as scheduled on Aug. 7.

There’s much more than opening up training camps and staging preseason games that must be straightened out soon. Free agency, for example. Depending on the rules, hundreds of players could become available.

The longer it takes to reach a deal, the more frenzied the free agency signing period will be.

Teams still need to instruct rookies they drafted and sign rookies who were not selected in April.

Those clubs with new coaches haven’t been able to install offenses or defenses or learn unfamiliar playbooks.

General managers don’t know what the salary cap will be; 2010 didn’t have a cap.

The regular season is scheduled to begin Sept. 8 with New Orleans at Green Bay.

and old versions, have never hosted any player getting his 3,000th hit.

Jeter would be the first, perhaps fitting for the only player to reach the milestone having spent his entire career as a member of the Yankees.

Ruth, Gehrig, Mantle, DiMaggio and Berra didn’t get nearly as close as Jeter, the team’s career hits leader and one of the most popular players in history. And now, he’s just three solid swings from standing alone among the Yankees’ legion of Hall of Fame sluggers.

Hitless in his first three appearances, the 12-time All-Star doubled with one out in the eighth. He went to third on a sharp grounder that Cabrera ran down on the first-base side of second, spun and threw out the speedy Curtis Granderson. Cabrera, who almost didn’t play because of a sprained right ankle, wasn’t done.

With the Indians shifting right for left-hander Mark Teixeira, Cabrera went even farther into short right field before making a sliding stop of a hard-hit grounder. He popped to his feet and threw out Teixeira, punctuating his second defensive gem in minutes by pumping his fist.

Jeter came in 5 for 12 in his career against Masterson, but went 0 for 2 with a strikeout and walk before his 479th career double, a Jeter-esque shot on an inside-out swing to right field.

Jeter had to talk his way into staying in manager Joe Girardi’s lineup so as not to interrupt his pursuit of 3,000.

Following Tuesday night’s game, Girardi was leaning toward sitting his captain, who just completed a three-week stint on the disabled list with a calf injury. Jeter helped persuade Girardi, who said his talk with Jeter and a night to sleep on his decision gave him a greater appreciation for the player’s twisted journey to 3,000.

“He wants to get this done with so he can go on and be Derek Jeter, not Derek Jeter pursuing 3,000 hits,” Girardi said. “That’s the sense I got from him. If I was going for 3,000 hits, I don’t know if I would want a day to think about. I would want to get back out there.

“I really did sleep on it. And, no, I didn’t dream about it.”

There shouldn’t be any doubt about Jeter playing the next few days in New York, where fans have been critical of his game over the past two years. He said he would like to reach the 3,000 plateau at home, and he’ll have four games to get there before the All-Star break.

Hughes was activated before the game to make his first start since April 14. He had been on the disabled list with shoulder inflammation. The right-hander allowed two runs and six hits in five innings.

Hughes was in trouble right away — some of it his doing, some of it by others.

He walked leadoff hitter Michael Brantley in the first and Cabrera, who left Tuesday night’s game in the fourth inning when he rolled his ankle, singled. Travis Hafner followed with an RBI single before Hughes struck out Carlos Santana on a ball in the dirt that got away from catcher Russell Martin.

Cabrera broke for third on the play, and Martin’s throw was wide of the bag, scoring Cleveland’s second run.

Chisenhall’s homer made it 3-0 in seventh, and the Indians added two in the eighth on a bases-loaded walk and Grady Sizemore’s sacrifice fly.

Sizemore also made a nice defensive play in the fifth, robbing Nick Swisher of extra bases with a leaping grab at the wall in right-center.

BUCS FROM 1B

Cutchen as well. The center fielder bobbled the Sanchez hit for an error, then he came up short in an attempt to grab the Lee line drive that rolled to the fence. The visitors tacked on three runs at the expense of relievers Daniel McCutchen and Daniel Moskos in the ninth inning. Even though Astros starter Bud Norris (5-6) lost both of his previous starts against the Pirates this season, he pitched well both times.

Once again, Norris kept his team in the game, only this time the offense did its part. In seven innings, the right-hander allowed two runs on seven hits and a pair of bases on balls.

McCutchen drove home both runs on an RBI single in the first inning and a groundout in the sixth.

PGA FROM 1B

one-shot lead, where I shoot 60 and I’m down by one,” Stricker said Wednesday. “Whatever way you want to look at it, it’s pretty remarkable.”

Never before had two scores that low been recorded on a single day in a PGA event. Stricker went on to win the tournament for the second straight year, beating Goydos by two strokes, and now faces the task of winning a tournament three years in a row, another rare feat.

It’s been done only 20 times on the tour, most recently by Tiger Woods, who completed a three-peat at the Bridgestone Invitational in 2007.

Adding to the challenge Stricker will face when he tees off Thursday is one of the strongest fields at the Deere Classic, which many of golf’s marquee names skip because it falls a week before the British Open.

Still, the last two British Open champions are here, Stewart Cink (2009) and Louis Oosthuizen (2010). Also playing are Mark Wilson, a two-time winner on the tour this year, Zach Johnson, David Toms, Davis Love III and Jason Day, the 23-year-old Australian who finished second at this year’s Masters and U.S. Open.

Oh, yes, Goydos is back, too, re-igniting some of the buzz he created with his iconic round a year ago, a score duplicated later that summer by Stuart Appleby at the Greenbrier Classic.

“I was not ready for the national story it became, quite frankly,” Goydos said. “I thought it was a cool thing to accomplish personally, but I really didn’t think it would be that big of a deal. I was wrong.”

More surprising to Goydos than leading by only one after his magical round was what he saw the next day, when he played in the afternoon.

“I went to Starbucks and got a hot chocolate and a pastry of some sort, came back to my room, flipped on the computer and I was three back,” he said. “That was more of like, what? I’m not even leading or part of the story anymore.”

Stricker will be part of the story until he falters on the TPC Deere Run course, which hasn’t happened recently.

“You like that extra pressure,” Stricker said. “Hopefully, I can get an opportunity again coming down the stretch on Sunday. But it’s a long road. You got to play good. There’s a lot of good players here this week, so it’ll be tough.”

At No. 5 in the world, the 44-year-old from Madison, Wis., is the highest-ranked American. He won the Memorial last month, leads the tour in birdies and putting average and is fourth in scoring.

“He’s a machine,” Johnson said. He certainly was last year, when he set a tournament record for 36 holes and broke the PGA record for 54 holes after a third-round 62. Given the condition of the course, scores like that aren’t likely to be repeated this week.

Last year, rain softened the course and left it vulnerable to low scores. It’s drier now, so the greens and fairways are firmer.

“Fairways are bouncing a little bit,” Love said. “The greens are bouncing a little bit, which is nice. And you’ve got to watch out for Steve Stricker again and the guys that usually play well here.

“But if it stays like it is now, scores probably won’t be as low.”

Oosthuizen is playing in the Deere Classic for the first time and came partly out of curiosity. He bought a John Deere tractor for his farm in South Africa after winning the British Open and wanted to see what the company was all about, so he toured a Deere assembly plant Tuesday.

Wouldn’t he have been better off playing in the Scottish Open this week instead of checking out the cab of a combine?

“It was 50-50,” Oosthuizen said. “But at the end of the day, you’re going to play in perfect weather over here. In Scotland, you can get not great weather and I just felt I’d rather have a proper week where I can play and work a bit on my game.

“I’ve known links golf quite a while and I didn’t feel it was necessary for me to play a links golf course before the Open.”

Besides, Deere has chartered a jet to fly golfers to England on Sunday night.

“A 10-hour flight, I think it will be,” Oosthuizen said. “So it’s a bit better than the trip I had to take here, which was 36 hours at the end of the day.”

Dahlkvist, Fischer lead Sweden to 2-1 win over US

WOLFSBURG, Germany (AP) — Lisa Dahlkvist converted a penalty and Nilla Fischer scored from a deflected free kick Wednesday as Sweden won 2-1 to beat the Americans for the first time at the World Cup.

Abby Wambach’s first goal of the tournament in the 67th minute helped the Americans back in the game. But just as they have all year, they squandered many other chances to score.

It’s the fourth loss since November for the world’s No. 1 team after going more than two years without a defeat, and their second to Sweden this year. It’s only Sweden’s fifth victory against the U.S. in 30 games, and first in four World Cup meetings.

As Group C winner, Sweden will play Australia the quarterfinals Sunday in Augsburg. The Americans will face Brazil, whom they beat in the last two Olympic finals, in Dresden.

“It was one of the better matches,” Sweden coach Thomas Dennerby said. “To get nine points in the group phrase, that’s really good.”

As the final whistle sounded, Sweden’s players rushed onto the field, gathered in a circle and began dancing. They then took a victory lap around the field, delighting the many Swedish fans in the crowd of 23,468 who whistled and cheered.

Both teams were already through to the quarterfinals. But, with the edge in goal differential, the Americans needed only a draw to avoid meeting Brazil. Led by Marta, the five-time FIFA player of the year, Brazil was runner-up to the U.S. at the 2008 and 2004 Olympics, and finished second to Germany at the 2007 World Cup.

Levet breaks shin in lake jump, skips British Open

INVERNESS, Scotland (AP) — Thomas Levet’s exuberant celebration of jumping into a lake after winning his home tournament in France last weekend has cost him a place in the British Open.

Levet withdrew Wednesday from the year’s third major after being ruled out for six weeks with a broken shin. He broke the bone when jumping into a lake to celebrate his victory at the French Open on Sunday.

His spot at Royal St. George’s will go to Robert Garrigus of the United States.

“I am extremely disappointed to miss out on the Open Championship, but my specialist has advised me to have an operation on the fracture,” said the 42-year-old Levet.

Levet’s celebration at the 18th green of Le Golf National outside Paris were criticized by Colin Montgomerie, who played alongside the Frenchman in Europe’s Ryder Cup-winning side in 2004.

Montgomerie has seen other players do the same thing while celebrating victories — Paul McGinley did so after holing the winning putt for Europe at the Belfry in 2002 — and doesn’t see the point.

“I think it’s the silliest thing that players have done over the years, I really do,” Montgomerie said Wednesday. “I’ve always been suspect about people diving into lakes that don’t know how deep it is and what’s in there.

“There could be a spike in there, whatever. It’s not the way to celebrate and let’s hope that’s the last time that ever happens. It’s not the way to celebrate a golf tournament win by taking the next three months off because you’ve hurt yourself.”

Mickelson to change approach at British Open

INVERNESS, Scotland (AP) — Phil Mickelson is banking on a change in strategy on the greens in the next two weeks to break his tournament drought in Britain.

The American left-hander has finished in the top 10 at the British Open just once — at Troon in 2004 — and is using this week’s Scottish Open, on a links course at Castle Stuart, as preparation for the year’s third major.

Mickelson acknowledged Wednesday that his failure to master British greens is the root of the problem.

“The biggest reason is the greens,” the sixth-ranked Mickelson said. “I have not putted well. The grass is a little bit more coarse, a little thicker, has a little bit more effect, and you need to putt with less break and more aggression is what I’ve come to find.

“I’m going to try to do that this week and next week and see if that doesn’t combat some of the issues that I’ve had putting here.”

With the British Open starting at Royal St. George’s in southeast England next week, Mickelson also will use the warmup event in Scotland to try out new strategies in his famed short game.

“Having a week now to be able to see the way the ball reacts, get my mind adjusted to the short-game shots, as well as the full shots, how the ball reacts, I think is going to play a big effect — a big positive effect — in my performances,” he said.

► PIRATES NOTES

By Paul Ladewski
PITTSBURGH — In an attempt to deflect criticism for his questionable selections on the National League All-Star team, San Francisco Giants manager Bruce Bochy questioned Pittsburgh Pirates skipper Clint Hurdle and Florida Marlins counterpart Jack McKeon for their reluctance to lobby on behalf of their own players. “I don’t think lobbying is part of what you do in that position,” Hurdle responded before the game against the Houston Astros on Wednesday night. “He earned that opportunity. Their organization earned that opportunity by winning the National League championship.”
The two have known each other since they were teenagers.
“There’s disappointment on both sides,” Hurdle said. “I love Boch. I have the most professional respect for Boch. He’s a better manager than I’ll ever be. My feelings came from the heart, and if he felt disrespect or hurtful, then I’ll apologize for that. That doesn’t change my feelings.”
Bochy bypassed Pirates pitcher Kevin Correia and outfielder Andrew McCutchen among others. He selected Giants pitchers Matt Cain, Tim Lincecum and Ryan Vogelsong, while the players chose Brian Wilson, the Giants closer.
Correia could receive an invitation as a replacement player. Cain and the Philadelphia Phillies’ Cole Hamels are scheduled to start on Sunday afternoon, which would take them out of All-Star Game consideration. According to the players’ vote, Correia is the next starter in line.
In 2008, when Hurdle was the National League manager, two of his fourth-place Colorado Rockies were on the team. Outfielder Matt Holliday got there in a vote of the fans, while Hurdle chose 11-game-winner Aaron Cook on his own.
LEFT ISN’T RIGHT: The left side of the Pirates infield has amounted to a crash course for farmhands in recent weeks, and it’s likely to remain that way until after the All-Star break.
Shortstop Ronny Cedeno (concussion) hasn’t been cleared to play, while third baseman Pedro Alvarez (strained left quadriceps) will continue his rehabilitation assignment with Triple A Indianapolis for the remainder of the week.
On Wednesday afternoon, Cedeno underwent more concussion tests, the results of which weren’t immediately known.
Asked whether he expected the veteran to play this week, Hurdle said, “No, no. We’re still working through some things, so that would be premature.” Cedeno reported no recurrence of the dizziness and headaches that he had experienced last week.
“I feel nothing like that,” he said. “I feel better. I’ve never had a concussion before, so I don’t know what to expect. Maybe I will be back next week. We’ll see what (the tests) say.” For Alvarez, the concerns were psychological as well as physical in nature. Initially, he became tentative at the plate and in the field as a result of the injury, and the goal was to have him return with a clear head.

HOROSCOPE

By HOLIDAY MATHIS
07/07/11

The Libra moon eases the way for people trying to work out their differences. Also, Mars in Gemini forms a harmonious alignment with Saturn in Libra, helping along the healing of broken relationships. Libra neutralizes Saturn's harsher qualities, and it should be easier to create an atmosphere of openness and sharing.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You'll get a sign that things are about to change for the better in a relationship. Perhaps this won't come as a source of elation, but you will likely feel cheerful and optimistic about your future with the other person.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You often avoid strong emotions, but such intense feelings can be helpful at times. For instance, your anger can make you more powerful than a wild beast. Use your strong feelings judiciously.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). People will do annoying things that have nothing to do with you, so be sure not to take any of it personally. You may find their behavior irritating, but you'll blow it off much quicker when you know it's not really about you.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You want a change, and your desire for it is the ingredient that will make it happen. As you let your desire move you, it strengthens. The stronger you desire the faster the change will come about.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). The more you expose people to your ideas the more they will like them. So keep making your pitch, telling your story and winning supporters one by one. You will soon go from being "an acquired taste" to having mainstream appeal.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). What appears to be an everyday encounter may seem stressful to you. Because of your particular sensitivities, you realize there is much more going on than most people would see. Try to relax and take it all in stride.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You'll persuade someone subtly and without being detected. Perhaps even you don't realize that you are doing this. But when you want something so much, it's hard to keep yourself from going for it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). A good lawyer does not present all of the information he has about his client during the opening statement. Likewise, you have the rapt attention of your "jury" as you take your time in revealing the truth.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). There are too many people influencing you now. It will do you no good to want something just because others do. If you still don't know what your true wants are, ask them to speak to you a little louder.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). It has been said that any item of clothing can be attractive with a confident, passionate person inside it. However, it's difficult to feel either confident or passionate if you hate what you're wearing. Another reason to shop...

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You are in a competitive mood. The best competitor now is not a person, but the general idea that is the status quo. Go for mastery and excellence in all things.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Your deepest craving is to be accepted and adored. Realizing that this is something you have in common with most humans, you lavish others with praise and they do the same for you.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (July 7). You'll love the interaction this month as lively characters enter your world. Fun and unexpected travel precedes hard work during the highly productive month of September. You'll express yourself in a safe environment and develop your gifts through October. November brings the payoff of a long-term investment. Libra and Aries people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 3, 6, 25, 43 and 23.

‘Force-flushing’ works

Heloise

Dear Heloise: I have a TOILET-CLEANING HINT and a question. My mom taught me to "force flush" the toilet for better cleaning. I quickly pour about 1/2 bucket of water into the toilet bowl. This forces the water down the drain without allowing the bowl to fill back up.

My question is: Is this a safe way to clean the toilet? It really does make cleaning easier, because the water doesn't dilute the cleaner. — Julie Rogers, via email

Julie, this is a safe method for cleaning your toilet and an old hint, going back to my mother's column in the 1960s! Especially if your toilet has lime marks, you can use this method, then cover the marks with commercial lime remover or paper towels soaked in vinegar. Just don't flush the paper towels down the toilet when done! For more money-saving ways to use vinegar around your house, send for my six-page vinegar pamphlet that is chock-full of great vinegar hints. To receive a copy, just send $5 and a long, stamped (64 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Heloise/Vinegar, P.O. Box 795001, San Antonio, TX 78279-5001. To keep the smell of fresh paint at bay, place a few shallow pans of vinegar around the room. — Heloise

WIND-CHIME STORAGE

Dear Heloise: I was hanging my wind chimes today and thought your readers would like to know how I store them.

I take each wind chime and place it on cardboard. I tape the chimes to the top. I fold the cardboard over and tape it shut. Once I have all my chimes individually secured, I place them in small plastic bags. I use the ones that come from places that I have ordered clothing, etc., from. This sure saves me from having to untangle the chimes when I am ready to hang them. — Pat Zoccali, Warren, Ohio

Pat, a perfect storage hint. Say hello to my friends in Warren; I enjoyed my visit several years ago when speaking for the Town Hall series. Also, your paper, the Tribune Chronicle, is a longtime friend! — Heloise

QUICK FIX

Dear Heloise: In a pinch, if your sink's stopper will not stop the water from draining out, put a piece of plastic wrap over the drain before placing the stopper on top, and it will form a tight seal. No more water leaking down the drain! — Nancy D., Louisville, Ky.

Wedding production opens with proposal

FRDEAR ABBY: Has the marriage proposal become an invited ceremony like the wedding, or am I out of touch? A few months ago friends and family were invited to a beach near Seattle for the proposal. Our grandson and his live-in went for a short seaplane ride. The plane returned, beached and the couple got out. Then, surrounded by the throng on the sand — and videotaped — grandson proposed on bended knee and she, of course, accepted.

Because we did not attend, my daughter is still not speaking to us. The young couple will fly to Maui in a few months for the wedding. We are among the invited, but the trip is too much for us. Your comments, please. — BAFFLED IN BRUNSWICK, MAINE

DEAR BAFFLED: I have heard of brides getting carried away and turning their wedding ceremony into the equivalent of a stage production, but this is the first time I have heard about a mother of the groom issuing a command performance for the proposal. Heaven only knows what she's planning for the birth of their first child.

DEAR ABBY: I am with a man who treats me and my kids great. He is kind, caring and very generous. I trust him. However, I have been in a couple of bad relationships. For some reason, I'm drawn to "bad" boys. I'm not sure if I really love this man because there is no "spark." None! Should I stay with someone who is a really great person and treats me good — but there is no passion — and learn to live with it, or do I end the relationship? — NOT SURE WHAT TO DO IN CANADA

DEAR NOT SURE: You might as well end the relationship now because sooner or later you will become bored and it will end anyway. The man you're seeing deserves to have someone who fully appreciates what he has to offer, which you seem unable to do. Continue dating "bad boys" until you finally stop confusing anxiety and disappointment with excitement. You appear to be one of those women who has to learn what's important through pain. You have my sympathy.

DEAR ABBY: My husband (second marriage) keeps in touch with his ex-wife. At one point, it was several times a day. I expressed my concerns to him and told him I didn't like it and saw no need for it. It stopped — but only for a while. I know, because I check his call and text log. I know I shouldn't do that, but recently I found some text messages saying, "Sorry I haven't called you." That's not what's bothering me, though. It's how they signed off. She writes, "Love you," and he writes, "Love you mostest!" Abby, that's what he says to me. How do I talk to him about this? I snooped. — SNOOPED ON THE EAST COAST

DEAR SNOOPED: I don't blame you for feeling hurt and threatened by this. Almost any woman would. When he's in a relaxed mood and you can talk without interruption, ask him if he is still in love with his ex-wife. If he says no, ask why he feels the need to remain in communication with her and why he's telling her he loves her "mostest." Expect him to go on the attack because you snooped. But you wouldn't have done it if your intuition hadn't made you feel insecure. And it turns out you were right.

When blood-making cells go AWOL

Dr. Donohue

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am a 75-year-old woman whose life has come to a halt. I have no energy. I did see a doctor, who gave me a very thorough exam and sent out blood to the lab. My doctor thinks I have something called myelodysplasia, a word totally foreign to me. Is it a form of cancer? Is it treatable? — G.K.

ANSWER: Myelodysplasia (MY-uh-low-dis-PLAY-see-uh) isn't cancer. It's an illness in which the bone marrow's blood-making cells have gone AWOL. "Myelo" refers to bone marrow; "dys" indicates abnormal function; and "plasia" is a word meaning "production of." Myelodysplasia is a group of bone marrow diseases that produce poorly formed, poorly functioning and too few blood cells. It strikes at older ages. A deficit of red blood cells is anemia, the reason why you have no energy. Too few white blood cells makes a person more susceptible to infection. And too few platelets, the clotting cells, brings on bruises and bleeding.

A word more about red blood cells is required. They bring oxygen to all parts of the body. Without a normal supply, you're not getting enough oxygen to body cells and organs. Oxygen is their energy. Fatigue is guaranteed in such a situation.

The doctor might ask for a bone marrow examination. It's most helpful in identifying which of the myelodysplasias you have and what is the most appropriate treatment.

Sometimes myelodysplasia progresses very slowly. For others, it's a more aggressive illness. One treatment is medicine that increases red blood cell production. Blood transfusions might be required. Two medicines, Vidaza and Dacogen, restore genes affected by this process to a more normal function. The ultimate treatment — when it is feasible and when the patient is up to it — involves a bone marrow transplant.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Will you kindly tell me what is the appropriate time interval for a repeat colonoscopy? I have different information from doctors. I had my first colonoscopy when I was 51. The doctor who performed it said I didn't need another until I was 61. A different doctor says I need a repeat at 56. Which is it? — E.P.

ANSWER: If no polyps were found on your first exam and if you have no close relatives who have had colon cancer, then the usual time for the next exam is 10 years. Otherwise, it is five years.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: When my mother was 63, she developed type 2 diabetes. Four years later, she died of a heart attack. She wasn't a smoker.

Am I likely to meet the same fate as my mother? I am 47 and do not have diabetes.

ANSWER: For readers not familiar with diabetes terms, type 2 diabetes is what used to be called "adult-onset diabetes." It is usually treated with oral medicines and diet. Type 1 diabetes used to be called "juvenile diabetes" and requires insulin treatment.

Just because your mother had diabetes at age 63 does not mean that you are destined to have it too. Type 2 diabetes is more affected by genetic influences than type 1, but you received only half of your genes from your mother.

Furthermore, you can somewhat blunt the genetic influences for diabetes if you stay on the lean side, exercise daily and adhere to a healthy diet, one low in sugars and fats and high in grains, fruits and vegetables.

She can't forgive in-laws' affair

Annie's Mailbox

Dear Annie: I work in a family business along with my parents, my brother and my sister. Two years ago, my brother's wife and my sister's husband also worked there, but they had an affair and moved away together. Three months later, they both returned to their spouses. Their marriages are reconciled, but they are not allowed back in the family business.

I refuse to attend any event that includes the two of them. I am so upset about what they did to my family that I will not speak to either of them. The problem is, my sister is constantly telling me that I have to accept her husband and stop being so stubborn. I keep telling her what they did is not acceptable and I do not have to be around either one of them.

What do you suggest? Am I wrong to feel this way? — Confused

Dear Confused: You are not wrong. Their behavior was reprehensible. However, avoiding family events where these in-laws will be present mostly hurts your sister and brother. They are having a hard enough time with their marriages. It surely is additional punishment to know the affair has also caused an estrangement with their sibling. Etiquette quite helpfully provides a solution. It's called "snubbing." Attend these family events, and be loving toward your sister and brother and aloof toward the miscreants. Your behavior will make your disapproval abundantly clear.

can General Financial Services, Inc. filed a Complaint for Money, Reformation, Foreclosure and Other Equitable Relief on March 7, 2011, in the Columbiana County Common Pleas Court, Case No. 2011 CV 197, on the property described as follows:

Parcel No. 03-00978.00 (a complete legal description of the real estate can be obtained from the County Auditor's Office), Georgetown Road, Salem, Ohio

And that there remains due and owing the principal balance of $92,428.73, less Insurance Premium Refund in the amount of $802.79, plus interest through February 14, 2011 in the amount of $4,280.45, plus late charges of $207.98, plus insufficient funds charges in the amount of $20.00, plus interest on the principal balance after February 14, 2011 at the rate of 10.00% per annum, and costs: that the defendants named in the Complaint may have an interest in said property; therefore, Plaintiff demands that it be found to have a good, valid and subsisting lien on said premises, for the amount owing; that the Defendants equity of redemption be foreclosed; that all the parties be required to answer as to their interest in said premises or be forever barred from asserting any interest therein; that all liens on said premises be marshaled and their priorities determined; that said premises be sold as upon execution and the proceeds of said sale be applied according to law; and for such other relief as is just and equitable.

Defendants first herein above mentioned are further notified that they are required to answer said complaint on or before July 7th, which includes twenty-eight (28) days from the last date of publication, or judgement may be rendered as demanded therein.

Vine Street, and extends back therefrom to an alley and Ambrose Avenue, be the same more or less, but subject to all legal highways.

The prayer is to foreclose all interest owned by you and for costs. You are required to answer the Complaint within 28 days after the last publication of this notice which will be published once a week for three successive weeks. The last publication will be made on the 7 day of July, 2011, and the 28 days for answer will commence on that date.

In case of your failure to answer or otherwise respond as required by the Ohio Rules of Civil Procedure, judgement by default will be rendered against you for the relief demanded in the Complaint

LEGAL NOTICE

Notice is given that the property at 7337 W. South Range Rd. Salem, Ohio 44460, also known as Parcel 09-035-0-01600, has been declared a public nuisance by the Green Township Trustees due to excess vegetation, garbage, refuse and or other debris per the guidelines contained at Section 505.87 of the Ohio Revised Code and that the owner is ordered to abate, control, or remove the vegetation, garbage, refuse and other debris.

If within seven (7) days after publication of this notice, the owner of the land fails to abate control, or remove the vegetation, garbage, 2 piles of branches, refuse or other debris, or no agreement for its abatement, control, or removal is entered into, the Green Township Board of Trustees shall provide for the abatement, control, or removal and may employ the necessary labor, materials and equipment to perform the task. All expenses incurred shall, when approved by the Board of Trustees, be paid out of the Township general fund. The expenses when approved shall be entered upon the tax duplicate, as a lien upon the land and shall be collected as other taxes, and returned to Green Township and placed in Township general fund.
