Blimp visiting Cruise

By LARRY SHIELDS

Staff Writer

The Goodyear Blimp "Spirit of Goodyear" will arrive over Salem at approximately 5:30 p.m. today, according to Eddie Ogden, public relations manager for Goodyear airship operations.

Ogden said the blimp will appear at the request of the Salem Tire, the Goodyear Tire dealer in Salem that has changed ownership.

Jim Stockton and Kyle Cranmer took over the store last December,

The 2011 Quaker City Weekend Cruise kick-off cruise at the Dunkin' Donut on the east side of town filled up the parking lot with hot cars and the music of D.J. Big Rick on Thursday night. The cruise attracted dozens of street cruisers and hot rods including this two-tone '67 Plymouth sitting next to a two-tone, historically-plated Buick. Stockton said Thursday.

The store is located at 2300 E. State St.

Weather permitting, the blimp will "cruise" over Salem for about an hour.

Stockton said they have been working on getting the blimp for the Quaker City Weekend Cruise for about 10 months.

"We're excited," he said noting the Salem cruise is big deal.

So is the blimp.

Ogden said they have about an hour window and Stockton said the blimp will fly over Salem exclusively.

The blimp is scheduled later to appear in Norwalk where the NHRA is holding the Summit Racing Equipment Nationals this weekend at Summit Motorsports Park.

The QCWC continues today with a number of events including classic car s show a Centennial Park from 6 to 9 p.m. The event is hosted by the Salem Visiting Nurses.

Police Chief Floor: No tolerance policy in effect

By LARRY SHIELDS

SALEM — Police Chief Bob Floor said his officers will have a no tolerance policy to guide them regarding peeling tires, reckless operation and speeding during the Quaker City Weekend Cruise.

Floor said extra officers will be

Salem officers will enforce laws against peeling tires, reckless op and speeding during Quaker City Cruise on patrol along with the highway patrol and Columbiana County sheriff.

He advised motorists, especially on Friday and Saturday evenings, to expect traffic delays on State Street. He recommended they use Pershing Street, one block south of State Street, which will take them from Georgetown Road on the west to Butcher Road on the east.

During the parade at 6 p.m. Saturday, East and West State Street from Jennings Ave. to S. Lincoln Ave.; S. Lincoln Ave. from E. State St. to E. Pershing St.; and E. Pershing St. from S. Lincoln Ave. to S. Lundy Ave., will be closed from 5:45 to 6:45 p.m.

Apparent seizure leads to multi-vehicle crash

Salem and Perry Township emergency crews tend to the driver of a vehicle smashed during a multi-vehicle crash around 4:30 p.m. Thursday on South Lincoln Avenue at the railroad tracks. According to an officer on scene, the driver apparently suffered a seizure while crossing the tracks northbound before striking a van stopped at Chestnut Grove Road. He then reportedly accelerated across the roadway and struck a parked vehicle at an auto sales business, shoving it into other vehicles on the lot. The driver was transported to the Salem Community Hospital for non-life threatening injuries. (Salem News photo by Kevin Howell)

Irving Standing Soldier and his family plan to offer samples of their culture in the form of frybread so they can return to their Sioux roots in South Dakota for volunteer work at a cultural event next month.

For the past six summers, the family has packed up the family van, picked up a handful of other Native American boys from cities in Ohio, and traveled to Wanblee, located in the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation, to experience the ways of their ancestors.

Out of work for the past two years, Standing Soldier, who was born in Wanblee, didn't think they would be able to make the trip this year to help out or educate the other boys about their culture.

But then a fundraiser was suggested, featuring the American Indian frybread he and his wife have made for friends for years, to help pay for the trip.

The fundraiser will be held from 4 to 8 p.m. July 8 at Holy Trinity Lutheran Church on State Street in Salem.

The dinner will feature frybread tacos for $5 or just the frybread itself for a reduced price.

Take-outs will be available by calling 234-567-6066 to place an order.

Red Cross blood drive scheduled at hospital

SALEM – An American Red Cross blood drive will be held from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. July 6 in the Salem Community Hospital’s second floor classrooms. Regular “lifesavers” who have not given since May 11 are eligible, and first-time lifesavers are always welcome.

During the summer months, the pool of lifesavers often decreases due to vacations, school breaks, sports and donors’ other commitments. During this time of year, however, the need for blood and blood products remains constant. Outdoor, household and traffic accidents are more likely to occur during the summer. As the recent devastation in Missouri has shown, severe weather can also have disastrous consequences, making it vital to have an adequate supply of all blood types available in the region.

The American Red Cross is making a special plea for type O negative blood donors during the critical summer months. Although individuals with all blood types are encouraged to give, type O negative donors are strongly encouraged to donate. Type O negative is in particularly high demand because it can be transfused to patients with any blood type, especially in emergency situations. In addition to saving the lives of accident victims, blood donors supply the blood products needed for surgeries and the treatment of chronic health conditions and inherited blood disorders. To schedule an appointment call 330-332-7227.

Salem High Class of 1940 will meet July 5

SALEM – The Salem High School Class of 1940 will meet for lunch at noon July 5 at the Salem Hills Golf and Country Club.

Clerks arrested during tobacco compliance checks

SEBRING — Clerks at three Sebring businesses were arrested during a series of tobacco compliance checks jointly conducted by the Sebring and Alliance police departments on Tuesday.

Jill Corbett, 47, 136 E. Oregon Ave., Sebring, at West Oregon Express; Jennifer Stuller, 24, 236 Alabama Ave Apt. 13, Sebring, at Circle K; and Mary Roosa, 55, 266 W. Pennsylvania Ave., Sebring, at Sebring Drive Thru; were all charged with sales of tobacco to minors, a fourth-degree misdemeanor.

Each pleaded no contest Thursday in Mahoning County Court No. 3 in Sebring. They were fined $10 plus $131 in court costs and sentenced to 30 days in jail (suspended), 20 hours of community service and six months probation, according to online court dockets. The compliance checks were conducted in response to citizen complaints to both departments regarding sales to minors at area businesses. Not all stores visited were subjects of a complaint. A 16-year-old volunteer acting as an agent for the police entered the businesses and attempted to purchase cigarettes. Following successful purchases, officers approached and arrested the seller. The volunteer visited 21 businesses, including five in Sebring, during the four-hour operation and successfully purchased cigarettes from 10.

Those arrested in Alliance included Jay Leasure, 24, clerk at Circle K North; Richard Watson, 60, manager at Watson’s Drive Thru; Rebecca Toole, 30, clerk at L+B Cigarettes; Joshua Mudrick, 20, clerk at Get-Go; Charles Dean, 56, clerk at Bier Depot; Robert Maylone, 52, clerk at Sheetz; and Michael McFeely, 36, clerk at Mom’s drive Thru. All were charged with sales of tobacco to minors and scheduled to appear for arraignment in the Alliance Municipal Court.

Masked man robs Circle K in Lisbon

LISBON — The Circle K convenience on North Market Street store was robbed after 2 a.m. Thursday by a masked man who walked in demanding money.

The suspect, described as a white male of slender build, walked into the store at 2:06 a.m. wearing a blue ski mask and told the clerk he wanted the money from the cash register, according to Lisbon Police Detective Dan Downard.

“There was no indication he was armed,” nor did he make any threats, Downard said.

The clerk, who was alone in the store at the time and the only employee working, did as she was told and handed over the money, and the suspect left the area on foot.

In addition to the ski mask, the suspect was wearing one red glove, one pink-gray glove, blue plaid shorts and a green long-sleeved shirt with the photograph of an eagle on the front.

Anyone with information is asked to contact the police department at 330-424-7810.

New Waterford man will serve five months probation

By DEANNE JOHNSON

Staff Writer

LISBON — Shaun S. Bundy, the New Waterford man who changed his plea to guilty on 13 felony counts including burglary, theft and vandalism, will serve five years probation.

Bundy changed his plea before Judge Ashley Pike this week on the charges which stemmed from a 2008 secret indictment. Bundy has been serving time in a rehabilitational facility in Pennsylvania and will continue to do so during some of his remaining probation time.

The charges against Bundy accused him of breaking into an East Clark Street home of Melissa Elbert and Brian Cavanaugh in March 2008, EP China on West Main Street on two different occasions in July 2006 and taking copper wiring from the building, taking copper, aluminum and scrap metal belonging to Friend Equipment on East Taggart Street in September and October 2005. He further was accused of theft of copper wiring from Lakewood Chemical on Darlington Road, Negley, in May 2006. He further was charged with damaging the properties at EP China, Friend Equipment and Lakewood Chemicals.

In total he pleaded guilty to burglary, four counts of breaking and entering, four counts of theft and four counts of vandalism.

This law is not doing Ohioans any big favors

Robert Sommers may or may not have been the best candidate to become Ohio's new state superintendent of schools. State Board of Education members apparently thought he held promise; they placed him on their list of three finalists for the job.

But Sommers removed his name from contention last week. He explained lawyers advised him he would be hampered severely in his ability to do the job, because of state ethics laws.

Sommers now serves as Gov. John Kasich's education adviser. Because of that, had he been named new superintendent, he would have been prohibited from having contact with the governor's office for a full year.

That is purely and simply absurd.

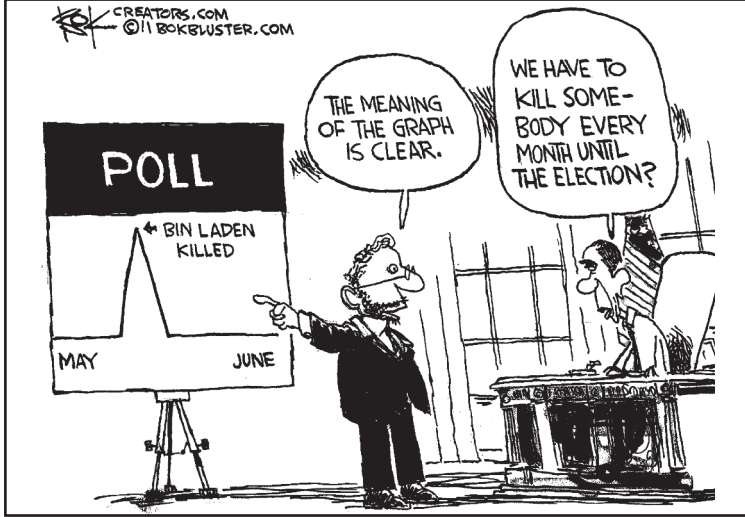

We understand why the no-contact law was put in place. It was intended to keep state officials from leaving the government, then raking in big bucks as lobbyists with inside connections. That makes sense — but frankly, it doesn't seem to do much to padlock the revolving door in state government.

We are a bit puzzled concerning why Sommers was not aware of the statute until last week. He has been a candidate for state superintendent for several weeks; one might have expected him to check the ethics laws before throwing his hat into the ring.

Regardless of that, however, the law is doing Ohioans no favors if it prevents knowledgeable, dedicated people from, in effect, making a jump from one agency of government to another. State legislators may want to look at the statutes to ensure a similar fiasco is prevented in the future.

Jon Huntsman: McCain on Wheels

Jon Huntsman wants you to know he rides a dirt bike. On real dirt! He's Salt of the Earth. Grease of the Garage. Dragster on the Dunes. Huntsman's runnin' and gunnin' for president. But underneath the Steve McQueen costumery, this made-for-cable-TV Moderate Speed Racer is a creaky old John McCain on Wheels.

The former Utah Republican governor and Obama ambassador to China is the answer to an election-year problem that doesn't exist. The quadrennial "problem," in the minds of Beltway GOP strategists and liberal media chin-pullers, is that the Republican Party isn't moderate, civil, self-critical or inclusive enough.

Huntsman is the latest no-labels flavor of the month, a straw man of the same people who have spent the past year smearing entitlement reformers as senior citizen-killers, budget hawks as Hitler's spawn, border-security activists as racists, and leading GOP women as sluts, nuts and bimbos.

Just like the failed 2008 GOP contender whose consultants are now fueling the Huntsman bid, McCain 2.0 is a big-spending accommodationist more in tune with the Democratic elite than with the conservative rank-and-file. In the shadow of the Statue of Liberty on Tuesday, Huntsman assailed the current economic crisis overseen by the Obama administration as "totally unacceptable" and "totally un-American."

Yet, Huntsman retains nothing but "respect" for his former boss in the White House and laments the loss of "civility" wrought by "corrosive" political debates.

This is all you need to know about the manufacturing of the Huntsman candidacy: Swooning reporters far outnumbered supporters at the kick-off in Liberty Park and at a follow-up rally in New Hampshire. CNN's enamored anchor Wolf Blitzer gushed: "Here's what I especially liked about Jon Huntsman's presidential announcement in front of the Statue of Liberty. He called for some civility in the race for the White House. Unlike several of the other Republican candidates, he did not open with a blistering assault on President Obama."

Yeah. Who do all those uncivil Republicans running against Obama think they are — opposing the opposition with oppositional rhetoric? Heaven forfend.

Former McCain mastermind John Weaver, now a key Huntsman strategist, said this week the campaign will be "mellow." More like "marshmallow." Instead of trashing enemies by name, they'll keep it vague and mushy. Huntsman has been buoyed by months of glowing coverage from left-leaning, dead-tree media, whose reporters have lapped up his trashing of the GOP as "devoid of ideas" and "a very narrow party of angry people." See? No names. No nasty. Embrace the civility!

While politely paying lip service to principles of tea party fiscal restraint, Huntsman hopes no one remembers how 2,000 Utah tea party activists booed him in April 2009 so corrosively it could have stripped the paint off a fleet of Harleys.

Utah conservatives raised their voices at the seminal tea party rally against Huntsman for championing $1.6 billion in Obama stimulus funds (Huntsman wanted even more money than that) — and against GOP Sen. Orrin Hatch and then-GOP Sen. Bob Bennett for backing the Bush-Obama TARP bailout.

The grassroots message: "Send them home!" A year later, voters ousted Bennett from the GOP primary after four profligate terms in office. And Hatch is in for the fight of his entrenched incumbent life.

While state governments across the country are rejecting or repealing onerous cap-and-trade environmental regulations, Huntsman is a climate-change Republican who backed radical emissions limits and green job fantasies. Just like McCain 1.0 did.

While state governments across the country follow Arizona's immigration enforcement model and Washington repeatedly rejects mass amnesty programs in the face of 9 percent unemployment, Huntsman supports the costly DREAM Act, an illegal alien bailout with a wider "path to citizenship." Just like McCain 1.0 did.

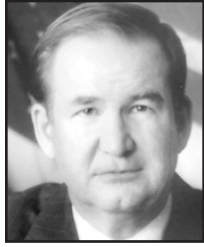

While state governments rein in middle-class entitlement spending and Washington turns to means-testing, Huntsman turned the SCHIP government-funded health plan for low-income children into a universal health insurance mandate. McCain 1.0 was for SCHIP before he was against it.

McCain's Straight Talk Express ran out of gas when his former media paramours inevitably turned against him — and his gambit to out-big government the Democrats blew up in his two faces. So it will be with McHuntsman and his campaign wheels to nowhere.

The Dumbing-Down of America — Children are not learning

PAT BUCHANAN

"Is our children learning?" as George W. Bush so famously asked.

Well, no, they are not learning, especially the history of their country, the school subject at which America's young perform at their worst.

On history tests given to 31,000 pupils by the National Assessment of Education Progress, the "Nation's Report Card," most fourth-graders could not identify a picture of Abraham Lincoln or a reason why he was important.

Most eighth-graders could not identify an advantage American forces had in the Revolutionary War. Twelfth-graders did not know why America entered World War II or that China was North Korea's ally in the Korean War.

Only 20 percent of fourth-graders attained even a "proficient" score in the test. By eighth grade, only 17 percent were judged proficient.

By 12th grade, 12 percent. Only a tiny fraction was graded "advanced," indicating a superior knowledge of American history.

Given an excerpt from the Supreme Court's 1954 decision Brown v. Board of Education — "We conclude that in the field of public education, separate but equal has no place, separate education facilities are inherently unequal" — and asked what social problem the court was seeking to correct, 2 percent of high school seniors answered "segregation."

As these were multiple-choice questions, notes Diane Ravitch, the education historian, the answer "was right in front of them."

A poster put out by the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, circa 1940, was shown and the question asked, "The poster above seeks to protect America and aid Britain in the struggle against ..." Four countries were listed as possible answers.

A majority did not identify Germany, though the poster contained a clue. The boot about to trample the Statue of Liberty had a huge swastika on the sole.

"We're raising young people who are, by and large, historically illiterate," historian David McCullough told The Wall Street Journal.

"History textbooks," added McCullough, "are 'badly written.' Many texts have been made 'so politically correct as to be comic. Very minor characters that are currently fashionable are given considerable space, whereas people of major consequence' — such as inventor Thomas Edison — 'are given very little space or none at all.'"

Trendies and minorities have their sensibilities massaged in the new history, which is, says McCullough, "often taught in categories — women's history, African American history, environmental history — so that many students have no sense of chronology ... no idea of what followed what."

But if the generations coming out of our schools do not know our past, do not who we are or what we have done as a people, how will they come to love America, refute her enemies or lead her confidently?

This appalling ignorance among American young must be laid at the feet of an education industry that has consumed trillions of tax dollars in recent decades.

Comes the retort: History was neglected because Bush, with No Child Left Behind, overemphasized reading and math.

Yet the same day the NAEP history scores were reported, The New York Times reported on the academic performance of New York state high school students in math and English. The results were stunning.

Of state students who entered ninth grade in 2006, only 37 percent were ready for college by June 2010. In New York City, the figure was 21 percent, one in five, ready for college.

In Yonkers, 14.5 percent of the students who entered high school in 2006 were ready for college in June 2010. In Rochester County, the figure was 6 percent.

And the racial gap, 45 years after the federal and state governments undertook heroic exertions to close it, is wide open across the Empire State.

While 51 percent of white freshman in 2006 and 56 percent of Asian students were ready for college in June 2010, only 13 percent of New York state's black students and 15 percent of Hispanics were deemed ready.

The implications of these tests are alarming, not only for New York but for the country we shall become in this century.

In 1960, there were 18 million black Americans and few Hispanics in a total population of 160 million.

By 2050, African Americans and Hispanics combined will, at 200 million, roughly equal white Americans in number.

If the racial gap in academic achievement persists for the next 40 years, as it has for the last 40, virtually all of the superior positions in the New Economy and knowledge-based professions will be held by Asians and whites, with blacks and Hispanics largely relegated to the service sector.

America will then face both a racial and class crisis.

The only way to achieve equality of rewards and results then will be via relentless use of the redistributive power of government — steep tax rates on the successful, and annual wealth transfers to the less successful.

It will be affirmative action, race preferences, ethnic quotas and contract set-asides, ad infinitum — not a prescription for racial peace or social tranquility.

Census shows whites lose US majority among babies

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time, more than half of the children under age 2 in the U.S. are minorities, part of a sweeping race change and a growing age divide between mostly white, older Americans and fast-growing younger ethnic populations that could reshape government policies.

Preliminary census estimates also show the share of African-American households headed by women — mostly single mothers — now exceeds African-American households with married couples, reflecting the trend of declining U.S. marriages overall.

The findings, based on the latest government data, offer a preview of final 2010 census results being released this summer that provide detailed breakdowns by age, race and household relationships.

Demographers say the numbers provide the clearest confirmation yet of a changing social order, one in which racial and ethnic minorities will become the U.S. majority by midcentury.

“We’re moving toward an acknowledgment that we’re living in a different world than the 1950s, where married or two-parent heterosexual couples are now no longer the norm for a lot of kids, especially kids of color,” said Laura Speer, coordinator of the Kids Count project for the Baltimore-based Annie E. Casey Foundation.

“It’s clear the younger generation is very demographically different from the elderly, something to keep in mind as politics plays out on how programs for the elderly get supported,” she said. “It’s critical that children are able to grow to compete internationally and keep state economies rolling.”

Currently, non-Hispanic whites make up just under half of all children 3 years old, which is the youngest age group shown in the Census Bureau’s October 2009 annual survey, its most recent.

In 1990, more than 60 percent of children in that age group were white.

William H. Frey, a demographer at the Brookings Institution who analyzed the data, said figures in the 2009 survey can sometimes be inexact compared with the 2010 census, which queries the entire nation.

But he said when factoring in the 2010 data released so far, minorities outnumber whites among babies under age 2.

The preliminary figures are based on an analysis of the Current Population Survey as well as the 2009 American Community Survey, which sampled 3 million U.S. households to determine that whites made up 51 percent of babies younger than 2.

After taking into account a larger-than-expected jump in the minority child population in the 2010 census, the share of white babies falls below 50 percent.

Twelve states and the District of Columbia now have white populations below 50 percent among children under age 5 — Hawaii, California, New Mexico, Texas, Arizona, Nevada, Florida, Maryland, Georgia, New Jersey, New York and Mississippi. That’s up from six states and the District of Columbia in 2000.

At current growth rates, seven more states could flip to “minority-majority” status among small children in the next decade: Illinois, North Carolina, Virginia, Colorado, Connecticut, South Carolina and Delaware.

By contrast, whites make up the vast majority of older Americans — 80 percent of seniors 65 and older and roughly 73 percent of people ages 45-64. Many states with high percentages of white seniors also have particularly large shares of minority children, including Arizona, Nevada, California, Texas and Florida.

In California, for instance, the median age for whites jumped from 40.3 in 2000 to 44.6 years old, even as the state’s overall median age remained one of the nation’s lowest at 35.2 due to minority births — a sign of the rapid race change under way, according to 2010 census data released Thursday. California’s minorities now make up 58 percent of the state’s population, up from 51 percent in 2000.

“The recent emergence of this cultural generation gap in states with fast growth of young Hispanics has spurred heated discussions of immigration and the use of government services,” Frey said. “But the new census, which will show a minority majority of our youngest Americans, makes plain that our future labor force is absolutely dependent on our ability to integrate and educate a new diverse child population.”

Kenneth Johnson, a sociology professor and senior demographer at the University of New Hampshire, noted that much of the race change is being driven by increases in younger Hispanic women having more children than do white women, who have lower birth rates and as a group are moving beyond their prime childbearing years.

Because minority births are driving the rapid changes in the population, “any institution that touches or is impacted by children will be the first to feel the impact,” Johnson said, citing as an example child and maternal health care that will have to be attentive to minorities’ needs.

The numbers come amid public debate over hotly contested federal and state issues, from immigration and gay marriage to the rising cost of government benefits such as Medicare and Medicaid, that are resonating in different ways by region and demographics.

Alabama became the latest state this month to pass a wide-ranging anti-immigration law, which in part requires schools to report students’ immigration status to state authorities.

That follows tough immigration measures passed in similarly Republican-leaning states such as Georgia, Arizona and South Carolina.

But governors in Massachusetts, New York and Illinois, which long have been home to numerous immigrants, have opted out of the federal Secure Communities program that aims to deport dangerous criminals, saying it has made illegal immigrants afraid of reporting crimes to police. California may soon opt out as well.

States also are divided by region in their attitudes about old-age benefits and gay marriage, which is legal in five states and the District of Columbia.

Among African-Americans, U.S. households headed by women — mostly single mothers but also adult women living with siblings or elderly parents — represented roughly 30 percent of all African-American households, compared with the 28 percent share of married-couple African-American households. It was the first time the number of female-headed households surpassed those of married couples among any race group, according to census records reviewed by Frey dating back to 1950.

While the number of black single mothers has been gradually declining, overall marriages among blacks are decreasing faster. That reflects a broader U.S. trend of declining marriage rates as well as increases in non-family households made up of people living alone, or with unmarried partners or other non-relatives.

Female-headed households make up a 19 percent share among Hispanics and 9 percent each for whites and Asians.

Other findings:
— Multigenerational households composed of families with grandparents, parents and children were most common among Hispanics, particularly in California, Maryland, Illinois, Nevada and Texas, all states where they represented roughly 1 in 10 Latino households.

— Roughly 581,000, or a half percent, of U.S. households are composed of same-sex unmarried couples, representing nearly 1 in 10 households with unmarried partners. Unmarried gay couples made up the biggest shares in states in the Northeast and West, led by the District of Columbia, Oregon, Delaware, Massachusetts, Maine and Vermont. The largest numbers were in California and New York, which is now considering a gay marriage law.

— Minorities comprise a majority of renters in 10 states, plus the District of Columbia — Hawaii, Texas, California, Georgia, Maryland, New Mexico, Mississippi, New Jersey, Louisiana and New York.

Tony Perkins, president of the Washington, D.C.-based Family Research Council, a conservative interest group, emphasized the economic impact of the decline of traditional families, noting that single-parent families are often the most dependent on government assistance.

“The decline of the traditional family will have to correct itself if we are to continue as a society,” Perkins said, citing a responsibility of individuals and churches. “We don’t need another dose of big government, but a new Hippocratic oath of ‘do no harm’ that doesn’t interfere with family formation or seek to redefine family.”

East Palestine graduate receives UK excellence in teaching recognition

LEXINGTON, Ky. — East Palestine High School graduate Kimberly Ward Anderson, Ph.D., Gill Eminent Professor in chemical engineering, has been selected as the 2011 recipient of the Henry Mason Lutes Award for Excellence in Teaching. Dr. Anderson received the award at the University of Kentucky College of Engineering’s Tau Beta Pi Awards banquet on April 12.

The annual award was established to recognize and reward outstanding teaching accomplishments.

Recipients of the award are expected not only to be outstanding teachers, but individuals who are or can become, role models for other faculty.

Recipients must also have exhibited excellent teaching over a sustained period of time, have exhibited imagination and exceptional dedication to student needs and demonstrated the ability to challenge and inspire students.

An instructor at UK for 24 years, Dr. Anderson believes that “an outstanding teacher goes beyond the classroom setting and provides positive mentoring in many different ways. In my years of teaching at UK, I have not only taught graduate and undergraduate courses, but have also engaged students in learning by providing opportunities for them to participate in independent research activities. My overall goal as an instructor is to engage each and every student in active learning and to instill the confidence that they need to function as independent engineers and scientists.”

In letters of support, former undergraduate student Kevin Baldrige wrote “She is clear about what she expects and provides the instruction necessary to understand the importance of assignments. In addition, the assignments she gives are imaginative in their real world applicability.”

Another former student, Jenna Shapiro wrote “As a senior in chemical engineering, I have had the privilege of having Dr. Anderson as a teacher for three of my undergraduate courses.

Additionally, she has served as my research advisor since I began research during my senior year of high school. Because of my initial research experiences in Dr. Andersen’s lab, I became a chemical engineering major. I credit much of my success in my undergraduate career to her guidance and dedication, both as a teacher and advisor.”

A highly decorated professional, Dr. Anderson was awarded the National Science Foundation Presidential Young Investigator Award in 1991, the Excellence Award in Undergraduate Education from the University of Kentucky in 1991, the National Institutes of Health Shannon Award in 1992, the Gill Eminent Professorship at UK in 2002, the Sarah Bennett Holmes Award for promoting women students in the UK College of Engineering, the UK Research Professorship Award in 2010 and was named the Outstanding Teacher in chemical engineering in 2011.

Dr. Anderson claims numerous professional society memberships including the American Institute of Chemical Engineers, the Biomedical Engineering Society, the Society of Biological Engineering, the Society of Women Engineers, the Women in Engineering Program Advocates Network and American Society for Engineering Education.

She is a member of the Tau Beta Pi Engineering Honor Society, the Omega Chi Epsilon Chemical Engineering Honor Society, the Sigma XI Scientific Research Society and the Omicron Delta Kappa Society.

Her areas of research specialization include theological properties of cell membranes including adhesion and deformation properties, biofunctional membranes and enzyme immobilization, biocompatible surfaces, nanocomposite hydrogels, bioluminescence, cell-based biosensors, biofouling of surfaces and cancer detection and treatment.

Dr. Anderson graduated from East Palestine High School in 1977 and received a B.S. in chemical engineering from Youngstown State University in 1981.

She received her Ph.D. in chemical engineering/biomedical engineering, as well as a Postdoctorate Fellow in bioengineering from Carnegie Mellon University.

She is the daughter of Louise Ward of New Waterford and the late Lester Ward.

Arizona death may be linked to European E. coli

ATLANTA (AP) — Health officials say the death of an Arizona resident who recently traveled to Germany may be linked to the food-poisoning outbreak in Europe. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention on Thursday said the death is under investigation.

The Arizona resident had a severe E. coli complication that can lead to kidney failure.

If confirmed, it would be the first U.S. death tied to the outbreak.

So far, there have been five confirmed cases in the United States connected to the outbreak.

Those cases are in Michigan, Massachusetts, Wisconsin and North Carolina.

Officials have traced the outbreak to raw vegetable sprouts from a farm in northern Germany.

Park Service: Pa. 9/11 memorial to be ‘healing’

SHANKSVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Flight 93 Memorial is beginning to emerge from the Pennsylvania woods and fields where the plane plunged to earth in the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, and the National Park Service says the memorial will be ready for opening ceremonies on the 10th anniversary of that day when four planes were hijacked and nearly 3,000 people were killed.

Visitors will be able to follow a walkway just over 100 yards away from where the plane crashed. The design features dark concrete paths and a long, white marble wall inscribed with the names of the 40 passengers and crew who died.

“It’s intended to be a memorial site, and focus on their actions, as opposed to try and re-create an historical event,” said Keith Newlin, park service superintendent for Western Pennsylvania. “They were fighting over the skies for 35 minutes before they came to this site. Their resting place is here.”

Flight 93 was traveling from Newark, N.J., to San Francisco when it was hijacked with the likely goal of crashing into the White House or Capitol building, the 9/11 Commission found.

Passengers tried to overpower the hijackers but the plane crashed into a field near rural Shanksville, about 65 miles southeast of Pittsburgh. Elsewhere that day, two planes took down the World Trade Center towers and another crashed into the Pentagon.

Newlin said the Flight 93 Memorial uses a few basic materials. “It’s intended to give people a healing experience,” he said.

Some remains are still interred at the crash site so access will be restricted there.

During a Thursday tour, geese visited the wetlands and workers placed dark concrete benches alongside recently planted grass.

Extensive landscaping work has already been done at the memorial site. About $50 million in Visitors to the current temporary memorial brave the rain and watch the continuing construction for the permanent Flight 93 Memorial beyond the flag-lined fence on June 16, in Shanksville, Pa. public and private money has been raised for the project, according to the Families of Flight 93 group. The first phase, including a ring road leading to the site, a memorial plaza, and a parking area, is expected to cost about $60 million.

Future plans call for 40 memorial groves of 40 trees each, an interactive visitor center, and a “Tower of the Voices” featuring 40 wind chimes.

Desperate Democrats eye tax cut as jobs booster

WASHINGTON (AP) — Desperate to boost employment and their bleak poll numbers, the White House and Democrats in Congress are turning to a Republican idea for stimulating the economy: tax cuts.

With little chance of passing a bill to stimulate the economy through more government spending, some Democrats now want to give employers a break on their Social Security payroll taxes and possibly extend a break for workers.

The most prominent idea would continue and maybe expand the payroll tax cut for individuals enacted in December that expires at the end of the year. Some Senate Democrats also want to revive an expired payroll tax holiday for companies that hire unemployed workers.

Sen. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., said gloomy unemployment reports are a wake-up call that the economic recovery is on shaky ground. New poll numbers also show that more and more Americans are unhappy with the way President Barack Obama and Democrats in general are handling the economy and unemployment.

Some 59 percent of adults said they disapprove of the way Obama is handling the economy and unemployment, a new high, according to an Associated Press-GfK poll. Americans are about evenly divided on which party they trust to do a better job on the economy, though Democrats have lost their edge on handling taxes, according to the poll.

Democrats are eager to turn those numbers around as they head into the 2012 election cycle. But Republicans aren’t eager to help them, even if it means passing up the opportunity to enact tax cuts.

Schumer said tax cuts are not the first choice of many Democrats — some would prefer a package of spending on infrastructure and roads.

“By putting it on the table, it shows how willing we are to work with the Republicans to create jobs,” he said. “It’s pro-business, it’s a tax cut, and many Republicans have been for it in the past.”

Republicans, however, have been lukewarm to short-term cuts in Social Security taxes as a way to boost the economy. Some Democrats also oppose them out of fears they could undermine funding for Social Security.

House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, called proposals to extend or expand the payroll tax cut “another little short-term gimmick.” House Budget Committee Chairman Paul Ryan, R-Wis., likened the idea to a “sugar high.”

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, co-sponsored a temporary payroll tax holiday for companies that hired unemployed workers last year. However, he said he would have to see convincing evidence that it helped create jobs before supporting a new one.

“We need to make sure the payroll tax cut is not just some other stimulus gimmick,” he said in an interview.

Democrats cite Republican reluctance to embrace short-term Social Security tax cuts as evidence that the GOP is looking for political gain from the poor economy.

“They believe that a weak economy is their best chance at winning the next election,” said Sen. Dick Durbin, D-Ill. Hatch called such accusations “a dog-gone joke” and said Democrats “are panicked.”

The debate is playing out as the White House and congressional leaders try to find ways to reduce annual budget deficits as part of a deal to let the government go deeper into debt. The focus on deficit reduction is limiting what Congress can do to spur the economy in the short term. Republicans scoff at Democratic proposals to juice the economy through more government spending.

Culture

Trevor, 8-year-old Andrew and 4-year-old Mato. Their sons were all born here, but Irving and Susan were both born on Indian reservations — Irving at Pine Ridge and Susan at Rosebud, both of Lakota descent and the Sioux nation. They met through Susan’s adoptive parents, who worked at the boarding school he attended in Montana, associated with Allegheny Wesleyan College located just outside Salem.

He attended college at Allegheny Wesleyan and remained in the Salem area, saying there was no future on the reservation. He later realized he was denying his heritage and denying his children the chance to learn about their culture and decided to teach them. They went to a Native American center in Youngstown, started going to pow wows or cultural gatherings and even joined a drum group.

Six years ago they made their first trip to the July event in Wanblee and he figured the boys wouldn’t want to come back, but they did, so then they started bringing other boys they had met around Ohio so they could learn from the experience, too.

“The effects it had on my children were so profound. It made them better boys and better workers and makes them proud of who they are,” Standing Soldier said.

The Pine Ridge Indian Reservation is known as one of the poorest, but he said “the culture is very rich still and the traditions are very rich still.”

They spend more than a week camping in the prairie with no electricity and only cold water — much like their ancestors lived. They volunteer by chopping wood, cooking and toting water and soak up the traditions while there by learning the traditional languages and ceremonies. They also hear the oral stories which have been passed from generation to generation.

Standing Soldier said some ceremonies are as old as their people and remain sacred. Through these events, they are able to pass on the ancient ways to the children who no longer live on the reservation.

In return for the children working, he said “they learn the language, they learn patience, they learn to live without Ipods and iPhones and the Internet and they learn how to give and receive respect.”

Sam said his favorite part is the camping out and volunteering, which has helped him learn about his culture. His father said he learned life skills and cultural heritage which he can incorporate into his daily life here in Ohio.

This weekend, they’ll be traveling to a pow wow in Dayton with the drum group. Standing Soldier has also spoken about his Native American culture at schools and at civic group meetings as a means to educate others.

prize wheel while the entertainment includes prize drawings for all registered participants, 50/50 raffle, corn hole games and Stormn’ Normn’ providing the music.

There are specific prizes for registered vehicles and the prize wheel is open for anyone to play, Parks Director Steve Faber said.

“We have many prizes and bigger prizes for the registered cars,” he said.

The event is open to antique vehicle 25 years or older, Faber said, adding that if someone shows up with a 20-year-old vehicle they are welcome.

Last year 79 cars were entered.

Wayne Laffere of Salem, a representative of the Tri-County Antique Auto Club said the vehicles are mostly from the 50s up through the early 70s. “They’re anxious to be here. They like the park and the quiet, laid-back atmosphere.”

“Our goal is to add another dimension to what happens with the hot rodders,” Faber said. “People put time, countless hours into their cars and this is a part of owning them — showing them off. “They don’t want to just keep them in the garage and not have anyone see them. We hope people come out. Spectators can enjoy the music and cars. We like people to come out and appreciated the hard work the people have put into their cars.”

Faber said the overall event is something everyone should get involved with ... the city and clubs.

“We’re not asking for a change in lifestyle,” he said. “We’re showing people what Salem is.”

be on the lookout for children.

“This is a family event with children and adults of all ages standing close to the cruise route to watch the cruisers,” he said.

He advised people “who wish to show off their burn-out abilities” to use the Stadium GM Burn Out Pit. The burn-out pit is located across the street from the Stadium GM showroom at 292 W. State St.

Floor said officers will be watching for people consuming or possessing alcoholic beverages outside of designated areas.

“Again, for the safety and well-being of all we will be enforcing a no tolerance policy on open containers and public intoxication.”

The department wants people to come out and “enjoy the food and fun,” Floor said.

Obama releasing 30M barrels of from reserves

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wary of a new surge in gas prices, the Obama administration said Thursday it is selling off 30 million barrels of oil from the country’s emergency reserves as part of a broader international response to lost oil supplies caused by turmoil in the Middle East and North Africa, particularly Libya.

The release from the U.S. Strategic Petroleum Reserve will be the largest ever, amounting to half of a 60 million-barrel international infusion of oil planned for the world market over the next month.

Even so, the 30 million barrels to be sold by the United States represents less than two days’ worth of domestic oil consumption and about three days of oil imports. White House officials would not predict how the release will affect prices at the pump, although the move is intended to increase U.S. supplies during the peak summer driving season. “We are taking this action in response to the ongoing loss of crude oil due to supply disruptions in Libya and other countries and their impact on the global economic recovery,” Energy Secretary Steven Chu said.

The move comes as retail gasoline prices dropped for the 20th consecutive day, down a penny from Wednesday, to $3.61 per gallon, according to the AAA Daily Fuel Gauge Report. That’s about 21 cents lower than a month ago. The timing brought criticism from business groups and Republican lawmakers, who accused President Barack Obama of playing politics with the country’s oil reserves, which are intended to address emergencies.

“The Strategic Petroleum Reserve is an emergency lifeline to protect our nation against critical shortages in our oil supply and shouldn’t be used as a Strategic Political Reserve to boost the popularity of elected officials,” said Charles Drevna, president of the National Petrochemical & Refiners Association.

The administration’s action will do little to benefit consumers while leaving the nation vulnerable to hurricanes or other natural disasters, or a foreign crisis that causes a real supply shortage, said House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio. “By tapping the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, the president is using a national security instrument to address his domestic political problems,” Boehner said.

“This action threatens our ability to respond to a genuine national security crisis.” Even some Democrats were puzzled by the move. “This decision would have been more timely if made when the disruption in Libyan oil supplies first occurred” in February, said Sen. Jeff Bingaman, D-N.M.

Cavs stock up in draft

Cleveland takes Irving first, Tristan Thompson second

INDEPENDENCE — This summer, Cleveland's making all the decisions.

Moving further away from LeBron James' maddening departure, the Cavaliers selected Duke point guard Kyrie Irving with the No. 1 pick in Thursday's NBA draft, an expected-and-safe pick for a franchise that had to endure a 63-loss season after being abandoned last July short of a championship.

Irving played only 11 games last season for the Blue Devils because of a toe injury, but that didn't scare off the Cavaliers, who strongly considered Arizona forward Derrick Williams before settling on the 6-foot-2 Irving, the class of what is considered one of the weakest drafts in years.

Irving is the third point guard taken first overall in the past four years, joining John Wall, who went to Washington in 2010 and Derrick Rose, chosen by Chicago in 2008.

With the No. 4 pick, the Cavaliers selected Texas forward Tristan Thompson, a selection that was viewed as a bit of a surprise. The team was reportedly interested in Lithuania center Jonas Valanciunas, but may have been turned off by his uncertain contract situation with a pro club in his home country.

Thompson, who is from Toronto, only played one year with the Longhorns, averaging 13.1 points and 7.6 rebounds.

His addition could mean the Cavaliers, who also have the Nos. 32 and 54 picks, are seriously shopping power forward J.J. Hickson, an immense physical talent who has shown flashes of stardom but whose on-court lapses frustrated coach Byron Scott last season.

For the Cavaliers, this draft signals the start of a new era —

Ohio State trustees to review program

By ANDREW HUGGINS

COLUMBUS — Ohio State University trustees will spend up to six weeks reviewing the athletic program after the scandal that led to the suspension of five players and the forced resignation of football coach Jim Tressel.

"We want to assure ourselves that there are no new issues in any existing athletics matters that have not been dealt with," Robert Schottenstein said Thursday during the trustees' audit committee meeting. "And I will say today that we believe that is the case."

In the first public comments from a member of the board of decision-makers that oversees the university, Schottenstein added that the school reported every alleged football team violation it was aware of to the NCAA.

"The process and decision-making to date by the university has in our judgment been fundamentally sound," said Schottenstein, chairman of the audit committee. "For the most part, we believe our compliance protocols in athletics are good."

Schottenstein, who did not directly address Tressel's resignation, promised additional comment from trustees when the full board meets Friday.

Tressel's successful, 10-year Ohio State coaching career ended in disgrace when he stepped down after failing to tell alert his superiors that players were getting improper benefits under NCAA rules.

The coach knew players received cash and tattoos for autographs, championship rings and equipment and did not tell anyone at Ohio State or the NCAA for more than nine months. NCAA rules — and Tressel's contract — specify that he must disclose any and all information about possible violations.

"When our university discovered anything that appeared to be an NCAA violation, it was timely reviewed and timely reported to the NCAA," Schottenstein said. "There has CROMWELL, Conn. (AP) — Michael Bradley had a one-stroke lead when first-round play in the Travelers Championship was suspended for the day Thursday.

Bradley was 6 under with two holes left when play was stopped at 11:30 a.m. at TPC River Highlands.

"You know what, it's unfortunate," Bradley said. "The course is unplayable. There's a lot of water on the course."

Officials reopened the driving range late in the afternoon and hoped to resume play at 5:45 p.m. after emptying the bunkers of waters and using squeegees on several fairways. But another shower forced more delays and officials eventually decided not to restart play before 7 a.m. Friday.

"All the good work they'd done, they lost," said Mark Russell, the PGA Tour's vice president of rules and competition.

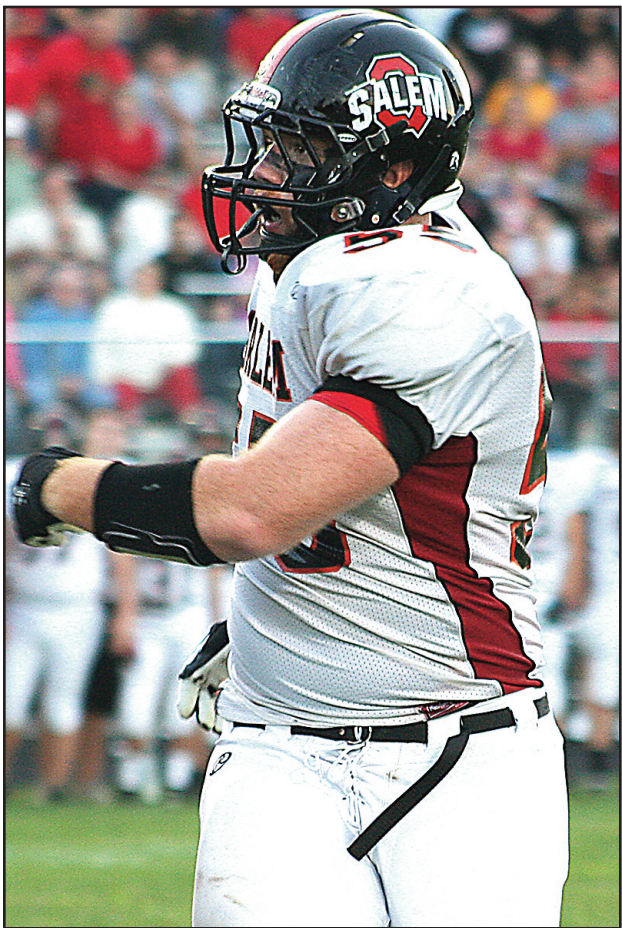

PGA Tour officials said the course received just over an inch of rain in the 6½ hours before play was called for the SALEM — Two Salem seniors who were instrumental in guiding the Quakers to back-to-back playoff appearances, including the school's first ever playoff win, will get one more chance to show why the perception of football in Salem has drastically changed.

Mike King and Eric Bailey will compete in next week's 32nd Annual Stateline Classic at Geneva College.

"It means a lot to be selected to play in the game and that I can represent my school and community one more time," King said.

King was an All-American Conference All-Star as a defensive lineman, and also was named First Team Northeast Inland All-District Defense. King originally intended to play football at Notre Dame College in Ohio, but has since decided to compete in track and field at Kent State.

"I'm going to leave it all on the field," he said of Thursday's contest.

For Bailey, he's relishing the opportunity as well and looks forward to playing alongside his teammate as well as other area standouts.

"It's great to have one more chance to play," he said. "With Mike King and with all the great athletes around the area. We're going to go out and do the best we can to win."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The authors of the Mitchell Report on performance-enhancing drugs in Major League Baseball were ordered to give pitching legend Roger Clemens more of the evidence they used to accuse him of using steroids and human growth hormone.

U.S. District Judge Reggie Walton, in a ruling filed Thursday, said Clemens needs the investigators' notes of interviews with his accusers to defend himself in a criminal trial next month on charges he lied when he denied using drugs.

The notes were taken when the investigators questioned steroids dealer Kirk Radomski and longtime Clemens trainer Brian McNamee. Both said they provided drugs for the seven-time Cy Young winner. Clemens has denied the accusation.

Walton gave the Mitchell Report investigators until Saturday to say whether they plan to appeal. An appeal could threaten to delay the July 6

Yani Tseng leads LPGA Championship

Paula Creamer trails by one stroke

PITTSFORD, N.Y. (AP) — No matter how hard she tried, Paula Creamer couldn't quite catch Yani Tseng. Neither could anyone else.

Tseng, the top-ranked player in the world, shot a 6-under 66 on Thursday to take a one-shot lead over Creamer after the first round of the LPGA Championship.

The 22-year-old Tseng, already the youngest player to win three majors, made five birdies on the front nine and three more on the back to go with a pair of bogeys as she began her quest for another major title.

"I tried to put it on the fairways as much as I could," said Tseng, who finished second to Stacy Lewis at the Kraft Nabisco Championship in March, the first major of the year. "When you put it on the fairways, you have more chance to make birdies. The second shot I hit it very good."

Did she ever.

Among her eight birdie putts on what was mostly a sunny, calm day at Locust Hill Country Club, none was longer than the 8-footer she made at No. 15. And although Tseng hit only six of 14 fairways, her strength allowed her to hit solid shots out of the thick rough and she was able to reach 15 of 18 greens in regulation. And she was nearly flawless on the short holes, birdieing all four par 3s on a course that had been softened somewhat by an overnight thunderstorm.

Still, she faltered twice when she failed off the tee. She bogeyed the par-4 13th hole after hitting a "terrible drive" and missing a 12-foot putt for par, then pulled her drive at

No. 16, another par 4, and missed an 8-foot par putt.

"It's hard to put it on (the) fairway. The course is really narrow," Tseng said. "At Kraft, I tried my best. That's all I can do. Actually, last night I did think a little bit about Kraft. I try not to think too much."

Leading Creamer by one shot heading to the 18th tee, Tseng recovered from a bad tee shot that landed in the thick right rough. She hit a 9-iron onto the ridge above the hole, then watched as it rolled down within 4 feet of the pin and calmly sank the birdie putt.

"I'm enjoying what's happening right now," said Tseng, who won the State Farm Classic two weeks ago for her second LPGA Tour victory of the season. "The last few weeks just gave me lots of confidence for my putting and my driving, too. So that helps a lot for a major golf course. (It) make me very comfortable."

Angela Stanford, Meena Lee, Diana D'Alessio and Stacy Prammanasudh were 4 under, and Morgan Pressell, Stacy Lewis, Ryann O'Toole, Amy Hung, Minea Blomqvist, Jennifer Johnson and Hee Young Park were 3 under.

Defending champion Cristie Kerr, who was ailing with a light case of the flu, shot an even-par 72.

Creamer withdrew from this tournament two years ago — before it became a major — with an injury to her left thumb, and last year finished tied for 42nd, never going lower than her first-round 71.

She was pumped after a solid first round that matched her best at Locust Hill.

"Normally, I shoot myself in the foot after the first day with putting pressure on myself and wanting to do so well," said Creamer, who went out in the morning in a threesome right behind Tseng. "It's nice to be on the other side going into tomorrow. I just need to keep it going and try to make as many birdies as I can."

Creamer missed a terrific chance to tie — or even take the lead — when she misread a 45-foot eagle putt at the par-5 17th hole and ended up three-putting for par. She then rallied with a birdie at 18, hitting a 7-iron from 150 yards within 2 feet of the pin.

"I gave myself a lot of opportunities. I made a lot of good putts," Creamer said. "I kind of was kicking myself after 17. I had a good birdie chance there, just two putts. But I finished strong, and I feel good about where I'm sitting."

A year ago, Kerr overpowered Locust Hill. She won by 12 shots, finishing at 19-under 269 to win her second major. That matched the lowest score in relation to par in a women's major and tied for the second-largest in the history of major championships.

That was a distant memory on this day.

Fighting a mild case of the flu, Kerr never found that magic despite starting birdie, birdie as the gallery roared its approval.

Then it stopped. Kerr made bogey at the par-3 fifth hole and had two more at Nos. 10 and 14.

"I think that's hard to duplicate. This is a different year — 6 under is leading. It's not like somebody's shooting 10 under," said Kerr, who began feeling ill on Wednesday night and didn't sleep well. "I felt a little bit uptight today just because I wasn't feeling that great. I was trying maybe to force things a little bit. I've got to go out and get some rest and get in a good mindset for tomorrow."

Still, a birdie at No. 17 and a nice par save at the closing hole put Kerr, second in the world rankings, in a good frame of mind.

"I couldn't find the rhythm and hit some really bad shots out there, and it still could have been 2 or 3 under," Kerr said. "So, considering everything, I'll be OK for tomorrow. They (the clutch putts on the final two holes) were pretty big for the mindset going into the next three days. Having shot even the first day is a lot different than shooting 2 over."

Cavaliers take Irving with No. 1 pick in NBA draft

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Kyrie Irving traveled just a few miles down the road to become the No. 1 pick in the NBA draft.

The players that followed him came from across the globe.

The Cleveland Cavaliers selected Irving with the No. 1 pick in a draft filled with international players, confident his foot is healthy enough to lead the rebuilding effort that follows LeBron James' departure.

Loudly cheered by family and friends not far from where he starred at St. Patrick's High School in Elizabeth, Irving showed no signs of the toe injury on his right foot that limited him to 11 games last season as he walked up the stairs to shake hands with Commissioner David Stern.

"I didn't have any doubts about going to No. 1. I was looking to the organization to pick who they felt was the right choice," Irving said. "But now to this moment, from being a fan of the NBA draft and now being drafted, it's a special feeling in my heart and knowing that my friends and family were together, it's a memory I'm going to remember for the rest of my life."

Three of the first six players taken were from Europe, capitalizing on the absence of some American college players who might have gone in their spots and made this a stronger draft. It was the first time four international players who didn't play at a U.S. college were selected in the lottery.

Even Irving has international ties. He was born in Australia while his father, Drederick, played professionally there and said he might be interested in playing for the Australian national team.

After grabbing him with their first No. 1 pick since taking James in 2003, the Cavs used the No. 4 selection on Texas forward Tristan Thompson. They were the first team since the 1983 Houston Rockets with two top-four picks.

The Minnesota Timberwolves took Arizona forward Derrick Williams with the No. 2 pick. The Utah Jazz then took Turkish big man Enes Kanter third with their first of two lottery selections.

The league's uncertain labor situation hung over the draft, and likely weakened it. Potential top-10 picks such as Jared Sullinger of Ohio State and Harrison Barnes were among those who decided to stay in school, without knowing when their rookie seasons would have started.

Stern, who could lock out his players next week if a deal for a new collective bargaining agreement is not reached, was booed when he came onto the stage at the Prudential Center, which is hosting the draft while its usual home, Madison Square Garden, is undergoing summer work.

one they hope will someday end with owner Dan Gilbert being handed the Larry O'Brien Trophy.

There's still a lot of work to be done, but in the 19-year-old Irving, the Cavaliers believe they have a cornerstone player who can lead them back to where James took them before bolting as a free agent.

Irving has drawn comparisons to New Orleans guard Chris Paul, one of the league's premier playmakers and a player Scott coached with the Hornets.

The Cavaliers kept their draft plans under lock and key. They closed their player workouts to the media and general manager Chris Grant adopted the bunker mentality in the days leading up to the event. He may be feeling extra pressure to get it right for Gilbert, who famously predicted his team would win a title before James does.

There was no margin for error, which is why the Cavaliers took their time before finally settling on Irving. Cleveland was the only team he worked out for, and when he visited, the Cavaliers put him through a grueling 2½-hour workout and did extensive medical tests to make sure his foot was fully healed.

Besides Irving's physical gifts, the Cavaliers were also impressed with his character. Before anointing him as the next face of the franchise, Cleveland wanted to minimize its risk and make sure, as best as the Cavaliers could, that they were investing in someone the city could grow to love.

Gilbert has acknowledged making some mistakes with James, and is determined to avoid any future problems as he rebuilds his basketball team.

Cleveland fans are eager for the Cavaliers to get back near the top. James never delivered on his pledge to bring them a title, and then crushed their hopes and dreams last summer when he announced on his nationally televised special, dubbed "The Decision," that he was taking his talents to South Beach.

But the pain is subsiding, and finally the Cavaliers are feeling like the worst is behind them.

never been any attempt to act with concealment or with indifference towards the

In addition to the Tressell situation, the NCAA also is looking into player car deals and other possible violations.

Five players were suspended for the first five games of the upcoming season, including quarterback Terrelle Pryor, who announced this month he was leaving the university. He hopes to make himself available for the NFL's supplemental draft.

In a brief meeting with reporters after the audit committee meeting, Schottenstein said trustees have determined that the university's own investigation of the memorabilia scandal "was complete, sound and very thorough." Schottenstein also repeated that the university is not aware of any other athletic department problems.

"Not that we know of at this point," he said. "But we're not done."

NFL owners, players meeting again

By BARRY WILNER
Associated Press

NFL owners and players have met for the second straight day in Hull, Mass., 18 miles south of Boston, as they attempt to close in on a new collective bargaining agreement.

Jonathan Colter, general manager of the Nantasket Beach Resort, told The Associated Press that some of the participants still were “up there” in the conference room late Thursday afternoon.

But none of the owners or players was scheduled to stay at the resort Thursday night, meaning this set of meetings is over unless they are moved elsewhere, Colter said.

Among those in attendance are Commissioner Roger Goodell and members of his labor committee, and players association chief DeMaurice Smith and several players.

“Some of them didn’t stay and were dropped off here,” Colter added. “We were honored to host the NFL owners and players association over the past few days.”

The two sides have exchanged proposals on a variety of issues after meetings over the last three weeks in suburban Chicago and New York, and on the Maryland shore. The main topic has been how to divide revenues — $9.3 billion last year — and league owners were briefed this week on a plan that would give the players just under 50 percent of total income. An off-the-top expense credit of about $1 billion that went to the owners would be eliminated.

Also being discussed are a rookie wage scale and a more specific breakdown of benefits for retired players.

A lengthy new CBA — between six and eight years, for example — would enable the league to turn to its broadcast partners and negotiate more lucrative contracts. One item that has the players’ support is a salary floor keeping teams within 90 percent of the cap. Recently, particularly in 2010 when there was no cap, several teams whose revenue streams don’t match up with the richer clubs did not spend anywhere near what those teams did.

The proposal would require the full salary cap spending to be in cash. “Through our player reps, things sound really good,” Rams wide receiver Mark Clayton said. “From the players’ perspective, we’re kind of set with what we want.”

“We pretty much agreed to what our (players association) was fighting for on our behalf. It sounds like a lot of what we asked for, apart from the finances, they’ve been able to agree upon. At that point, we’re just kind of waiting to get the final say-so and just roll it out ...”

Feds get more time to decide on Bonds retrial

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A federal judge on Thursday gave prosecutors more time to decide whether home run record-holder Barry Bonds should face another perjury trial.

Bonds’ criminal trial ended inconclusively April 13 when a jury convicted the seven-time MVP on an obstruction of justice count but deadlocked on three perjury charges, the allegations at the heart of the government’s case. Prosecutors tried to show that Bonds lied about using performance-enhancing drugs, which the slugger maintained he never knowingly took.

U.S. District Judge Susan Illston granted prosecutors’ request for more time to decide whether to try the case again, over the objections of Bonds’ attorney, Allen Ruby. Ruby wanted to know immediately whether the government would continue its yearslong pursuit of Major League Baseball’s career home runs leader.

But the judge testily told Ruby that prosecutors had no obligation to announce their intention until the court resolves Bonds’ motion for outright acquittal or a new trial on the obstruction conviction. Bonds’ attorneys say that the jury erred in concluding the slugger’s rambling answer to a question about injecting steroids was meant to mislead a grand jury’s investigation into sports doping.

“It seems to me manifestly unlikely a decision like that is going to be made until a decision on the motion is made,” Illston said.

The two sides are next scheduled back in court on Aug. 26 to wrangle over the obstruction conviction.

The prosecution of Bonds was the last and highest-profile case arising from a sprawling sports doping investigation that shut down a steroids distribution ring headquartered at the Bay Area Laboratory Co-Operative, better known as BALCO.

Bonds and two dozen other athletes from various sports testified before a grand jury in 2003 about their connection to BALCO. Bonds was one of five people charged with lying to the grand jury or federal investigators about using steroids. Track star Marion Jones and former Pro Bowl defensive lineman Dana Stubblefield pleaded guilty while Bonds was one of three to demand a trial.

He was initially charged in 2007 and only went to trial after years of delays.

Based on the outcome of two similar BALCO cases, Bonds is expected to receive a sentence of house arrest if the obstruction conviction holds up.

A majority of jurors said they voted to acquit Bonds on charges that he lied to the grand jury when he denied knowingly taking steroids and other performance-enhancing drugs.

They voted 11-1 to convict him of lying when he testified that no one but his doctor ever injected him with anything, but one holdout juror would not budge.

Stenson shoots 64 to take 1st-round lead in Munich

MUNICH, Germany (AP) — Henrik Stenson shot an 8-under 64 in poor weather Thursday to take a one-shot lead after the opening round of the BMW International Open.

Stenson was among the late starters who had to endure a rainfall that made for higher scoring in the afternoon, but the Swedish star still managed seven birdies and an eagle to go along with a lone bogey.

“I don’t have much to complain about,” Stenson said. “I think the course played a shot tougher this afternoon, but if you are playing good, then you can still hit a good number.”

Gary Boyd of England was second after setting the early clubhouse lead with a 65, despite a bogey on the last hole. Three players were tied for third, a further stroke back.

Stenson eagled the par-5 sixth hole to reach the turn in 5 under. He nearly eagled the 18th as well but missed a 4-foot putt and had to settle for a birdie.

“It would have been nice to make that, it would have been even sweeter,” said Stenson, who also chipped in for birdie at the 14th. “I just misjudged it. I tried to go left of center and I didn’t think it would break to the left, but it did. I probably pulled it a bit too.”

Paul Lawrie was among four players to shoot 66, also helped by an eagle on the sixth. He joined James Kruger, Tim Sluiter and Danny Willett two strokes behind the leader.

Colin Montgomerie celebrated his 48th birthday with a 2-under 70, but wasn’t happy about the weather. On the 14th, he was forced to drop his ball out of a puddle in a bunker.

“I’m getting to that stage where I should be spending birthday days on a beach in the Bahamas, and not having to be drenched out here,” he said. “This was a horrific day.”

Sindelar still awaiting breakthrough win

ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP) — When Joey Sindelar celebrated his 50th birthday in March 2008, he hit the ground running on the Champions Tour.

After carding three top-5s in his first eight starts, including a tie for third in the Senior PGA Championship at Oak Hill, it seemed a matter of time before he would notch that first victory.

Well, the clock’s still ticking. Sindelar is preparing for Friday’s opening round of the Dick’s Sporting Goods Open.

“I’m not going to say I’m surprised, but I will say disappointed and anxious to get it over with,” said Sindelar, who’s healthy again. “But you look at the kind of golf that’s getting played out here — you’ve got to play golf. This is no gift. Every month we get another guy who’s very, very equipped to win.”

“When that win finally comes — and I hope it does — it’ll be very emotional I’m sure. I just try to keep honing my game and doing better. I feel like I’m getting better.”

In more ways than one.

The one top-10 in eight starts this year is OK. Not limping around a golf course is much better.

In April, Sindelar was forced to withdraw from the Liberty Mutual Legends of Golf because of a bad back. An MRI and X-rays revealed a “vicious” case of arthritis, and Sindelar has begun an exercise regimen to strengthen his core and keep it strong.

“If we don’t pay attention, this will continue to annoy me, I think,” he said.

And he won’t soon forget that pulmonary embolism he suffered during the third round of the Charles Schwab Cup Championships in October 2009.

“When it was happening, they kept checking all my cardiovascular stuff and I kept saying, ‘But I already know I’m fine.’ I didn’t have any pain,” he said. “That was what was odd. If I’d have had pain in my lungs or in my legs where the clot came from, they would have figured it out.”

A CAT scan found evidence of a problem behind Sindelar’s left knee, and he counts himself a lucky man. Doctors told him his right lung had completely shut down and the left lung was close, too.

NBA union: We won’t take bad deal to avoid lockout

NEW YORK (AP) — With NBA stars from veteran Kevin Garnett to Rookie of the Year Blake Griffin standing behind him, union president Derek Fisher said Thursday that players won’t accept a bad deal to avert a work stoppage.

“We’d love to avoid a lockout, but we’re unified in the sense of not being afraid if that’s what we’re faced with,” the Lakers guard said.

Player representatives from each team were in town for their summer meeting and were updated on the state of negotiations with owners. The collective bargaining agreement expires June 30, and the sides remain far apart headed into another session Friday.

Garnett and Paul Pierce from the Celtics, the Clippers’ Griffin, the Hornets’ Chris Paul and Jason Terry of the NBA champion Dallas Mavericks were among the 60 players who joined Fisher at the front of the news conference. Garnett said owners want “control.”

“It’s unfortunate, to be honest, because we have great momentum right now,” said Garnett, whose massive contract in Minnesota was a catalyst for the changes owners sought that led to the 1998 lockout.

“I think the league is, as far as anticipation and the leading stories and the careers that you can follow, you know Dirk finally winning, I mean there’s multiple stories that are intriguing right now and it’s just unfortunate that we’re all going through this right now to sort of slow that down.”

The sides swapped proposals Tuesday, but that brought them no closer. The league proposed what it called a “flex” salary cap, in which teams would be targeted to spend $62 million but could exceed that through the use of various exceptions. But there’s an eventual ceiling at an unspecified amount, so players still consider it a hard cap.

It’s similar to the NHL’s salary cap system, which was instituted after a work stoppage in 2004-05 and which NBPA executive director Billy Hunter called “the worst deal in all of professional sports.”

Hunter said NHL owners could only win such an agreement after breaking their players’ union, and contends NBA owners’ intend to lock out their players with similar hopes.

“Now they haven’t been able to impose that deal on us yet, but what they’re proposing even makes the NHL’s deal look good,” Hunter said. “In order to get that, it’s my belief that you have to do the same kind of damage, impose the same kind of damage on us. You have to break the spirit and will and resolve of the NBA players in order to achieve what they want.”

► WILLIAMS SISTERS

Serena Williams wonders why she, Venus got Court 2
WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Serena Williams wonders why she and her older sister Venus have played once each on Court 2 at Wimbledon this year — instead of Centre Court or Court 1.

After winning her second-round match Thursday on Court 2, four-time Wimbledon champion Serena was asked about being put in that venue, where five-time champion Venus won Monday. Each also has played one match on Centre Court this week.

"They like to put us on Court 2 — me and Venus — for whatever reason," Serena said. "I haven't figured it out yet. Maybe one day we'll figure it out."

Told of Serena's comments, tournament spokesman Johnny Perkins said there was no intentional snub, noting that several factors go into scheduling decisions, including TV broadcasting considerations, where players stand in the draw, and what ticket-buyers want to see. "I don't think it's anything deliberate, clearly," Perkins said. "It's a hugely complex jigsaw puzzle. Everyone probably looks at it from their own point of view, so she's obviously quite entitled to."

The Williams sisters have combined to win nine of the past 11 Wimbledon singles championships, including Serena's titles in 2009 and 2010.

"I don't really think about it. I don't make it a big issue," Serena said about the scheduling. "I think at some point, maybe I should."

Stacey Allaster, the head of the women's professional tennis tour, said in a statement: "Serena Williams is a four-time Wimbledon singles champion, the defending champion of Wimbledon and a 13-time Grand Slam singles champion. I share her disappointment."

WTA CEO Allaster continued: "Scheduling decisions at Wimbledon are made by the All England Club and only they would be able to explain the rationale behind their decision for the scheduling of Serena's match today."

Rafael Nadal, Roger Federer, Novak Djokovic, Andy Murray and Andy Roddick have had all of their matches scheduled for Centre Court or Court 1 so far this year.

"Yeah," Serena said, "they're never moved across." The Court 2 she played in Thursday was built before the start of the 2009 tournament and holds about 4,063 spectators — 7,330 fewer than Court 1, and 10,916 fewer than Centre Court. For years before that, the name "Court 2" at the All England Club was assigned to a venue about half the size and a few minutes' walk away. That old Court 2 was known as the "Graveyard of Champions" because of a series of surprise losses by top players — including Serena against Jill Craybas in the third round in 2005. That particular match actually originally was scheduled for Centre Court but was shifted when others there went long. Jimmy Connors, John McEnroe and Pete Sampras — in his final match at the All England Club — all lost on the old Court 2. After watching his daughter defeat Simona Halep of Romania 3-6, 6-2, 6-1 in the new Court 2 on Thursday, Richard Williams downplayed the issue of court placement.

► PIRATES NOTES

By Paul Ladewski
PITTSBURGH — It appears that Chase d'Arnaud will get his first taste of the major leagues this weekend, and the infielder won't be the only Pittsburgh Pirates farmhand to join the parent club soon.

While the team had an open date on Thursday, rookie third baseman Josh Harrison was sent to Indianapolis. D'Arnaud is expected to be promoted from the Triple A club in advance of the series opener against the Boston Red Sox on Friday night.

"These are the first in a series of moves to come in the next week to 10 days," general manager Neal Huntington said.

Pitcher Brad Lincoln and outfielder Alex Presley appear to be next in line for promotions, as the team prepares for a make-up doubleheader and an interleague road series against the Toronto Blue Jays in the days ahead.

After a slow start, d'Arnaud came on strong in the last two months. In 62 games, he had a .280 batting average and 17 stolen bases. He played 39 games at shortstop and 20 at second base.

D'Arnaud and outfielder Starling Marte will represent the organization in the annual Futures Game, which will be played in Phoenix on July 12.

Harrison had a .283 batting average and four RBI in 16 games, all of them as a starter. "Josh did a solid job, and we expect him to help us at the major league level again this season," Huntington said.

On the heels of three impressive starts in a row, Lincoln is the likely choice to start one of the games in the July 2 doubleheader versus the Washington Nationals on the road.

In his last three appearances, Lincoln allowed three earned runs in 20 1/3 innings. In that span, he gave up 20 hits and three bases on balls.

Overall, the right-hander has a 6-6 record and 3.82 ERA in 13 appearances this season.

Presley started the day with a .330 batting average, which ranked third in the International League. He also had eight home runs and 17 stolen bases in 72 games.

OUT OF THE WOODWORK: Brandon Wood figures to get the brunt of the time at third base, while Pedro Ciriaco is available in reserve.

Wood had at least one hit in his last three games (4 of 9).

"I've worked with (batting coach) Gregg (Ritchie) on some things, and the results have been good," he said. "I had a hitch in my swing that we smoothed out. Now I'm quicker to the ball and can drive it more often."

The one-time Los Angeles Angel said a five-letter word was the best advice of all.

"Gregg and (manager) Clint (Hurdle) told me to relax," he said. "That's the biggest difference between here and Anaheim. Now I just play the game, have fun and let the rest take care of itself."

TURN ON THE FANS: In excess of 100,000 fans are expected to attend the three-game series against the Red Sox this weekend.

Families are encouraged to arrive to PNC Park early because of limited parking options. The Roberto Clemente Bridge will be closed to vehicles after noon on Friday, 4 p.m. on Saturday and 8 a.m. on Sunday.

DUE NEXT: Jon Lester (9-3, 3.70) will oppose Paul Maholm (3-8, 3.29) in the series opener (7:05, Root Sports, WPGF-FM).

The Red Sox have scratched flu-ridden Josh Beckett from his start on Saturday night. Ex-Pirate Tim Wakefield will take the assignment.

HOROSCOPE

By HOLIDAY MATHIS 6/24/11

The Aries moon brings zest to the day's events. The energy builds up, and it must be released somehow. It could fly out in a burst of aggression, celebration or creativity. Your best bet is to decide ahead of time how you'll use this fuel and plan for its expression. It may be difficult to get to sleep tonight after all the excitement.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You'll meet someone who can help you advance your interests. You laugh and have fun talking to this person. Is there enough common ground to build something meaningful? You'll find out next week.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You will heighten your awareness through instruction, especially if you're the teacher. As you show someone how to accomplish a task, you will see how it could be done better.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Neophobia, the fear of change or anything new, is not something from which you would normally suffer. Still, you like to have a general sense of where things are going. Encourage loved ones to keep you abreast of breaking news.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You care what your friends, colleagues and the community at large think of you. You will knock yourself out to please them. Your selflessness will be strongly felt, and your approval rating will soar.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). It will be challenging to stay tuned in as someone else tells you what to do. You're just not in the mood for following directions. You'd much rather have the satisfaction of figuring it out for yourself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). A spirit of adventure will lead you to spend time with people whose backgrounds and preferences are different from yours. Peel off the labels, and you'll find that you're all the same underneath.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Avoid the fantasy that once a certain problem is solved, you'll coast on easy street for a while. There will always be new obstacles, and that's what makes this journey so fun. Persist and persevere.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). It will be lucky for you to make a request of a friend. Do this as far in advance of the event as you possibly can. Give the other person plenty of time to warm up to the idea of what he or she will be doing for you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Two options will be presented to you, one right after the other. This makes the compare-and-contrast element of your decision making quite easy, and by the end of the day, the answer will be clear.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). When you know you don't know but you act anyway, the result can be quite hilarious. Just be sure not to make these kinds of snap decisions about anything that could put your safety in question.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Don't worry about the mistakes you'll make. A joyful life is filled with mistakes. There is no thrill in living without risk. You'll mess up, which is what makes getting it right so wonderful.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You are open to opportunities to work with those with different strengths and talents. Volunteer to help in any way necessary — it will change your life for the better. Together, you will accomplish a shared vision.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (June 24). Worldly success means nothing to you unless you have personal success with the people you love. You'll enjoy the attention of admirers in July. You'll move on from outworn duties in August and take on new responsibilities. September shows increased social power. A dietary change ushers in excellent health. Pisces and Leo people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 6, 31, 6, 34 and 42.

Surprise in bedspread

Heloise

Dear Heloise: I have a big problem! I sent my king-size bedspread to the dry cleaner to be dry-cleaned. I got it back, and as I was putting it on the bed, a couple of dead BEDBUGS fell on my clean bed. I rolled up the bedspread immediately and put it back in its plastic container. Do I take it back to the dry cleaner, and if so, then will I be assured that all the bugs are gone? — Lynne M., Plano, Texas

First of all, you need to be sure that they truly are bedbugs. They often can be mistaken for fleas or ticks. The Environmental Protection Agency (www.epa.gov) has a link on its website that can help you identify bedbugs.

We checked with a couple of dry cleaners, and both said they would gladly dry-clean a bedspread again if this situation happened at their store. You certainly could take it to be cleaned again, but since the bugs that fell out were dead, it probably wouldn't do anything further. You may want to put the bedspread in the dryer on high heat (as an added protection), since heat is the only true killer of these pests, according to research. — Heloise

TRAVEL HINT

Dear Heloise: Before I go on a trip where I will be traveling through the airport and ending at a hotel, I always make sure to have several dollars in $1 denominations with me for tipping. People in the service industry work very hard, and they appreciate a tip. I also always tip the folks who clean my hotel room. — Karon, via email

FOAM DISPENSER

Dear Heloise: I love your column. I filled my foam soap dispenser per your advice. However, I need to let you know that you should not use any soap with particles in it. The little beads clog up the pump, and it will not work. They are difficult to remove. The soap needs to be clear. — Diana, via email

You are right, and for others who want to do this, the ratio is 1 part soap to 5 parts water. — Heloise

CHECK PROTECTOR

Dear Heloise: Mistakenly write on the plastic check protector in your checkbook? Place a sticker or two on the protector, and it will remind you to move the protector between checks. — Suzanne Hackett, Texarkana, Texas

Husband puts friends first after offshore work

DEAR ABBY: My husband, "Ed," and I have been together for six years, married for two. This is the second marriage for both of us. We have children from our first marriages.

Ed works offshore. He's gone 21 days and here 21 days. The three weeks he's gone, I work, take care of the house and the kids, do the yard work, etc. When he comes home, I want him to myself the first weekend — I don't want to share him with his friends. I'd like to do fun things with him sometimes, just the two of us.

Ed says I have to understand his friends are important. He says I'm selfish and jealous. He doesn't show affection very well either (except behind closed doors), and I am a very affectionate person. Am I asking too much from him? I am considering counseling, but I'm unsure whether Ed would go. — BORED AND LONELY IN MISSISSIPPI

DEAR BORED AND LONELY: Counseling is an excellent idea, and if Ed won't go, you should go without him. Asking your husband to spend two days of one-on-one time with you when he returns from three weeks away isn't too much, and it's not selfish. He needs to reorganize his priorities and put you higher on the list than his buddies.

Affection is supposed to be spontaneous, and you shouldn't have to beg for it. What you describe going on behind closed doors sounds more like plain old sex and a whole lot less like affection. Unless your husband is willing to put more effort into your marriage, I can't see you living until death do you part on a starvation diet — and you can tell both your husband and your counselor I said so.

DEAR ABBY: I know you get many letters from people who are unemployed, depressed and don't know how to climb out of the funk. I was laid off from my management position three weeks after giving birth to my first child. Talk about depressing.

After several months of recovering from a difficult birth, I contacted my local SPCA and began volunteering. Not only do I help by feeding and cleaning the kitties, but I am using my professional skills to help them with photography, graphic design and fundraising. I'm still looking for work and getting occasional interviews. And in those interviews, potential employers always seem impressed with my volunteer work.

I'm writing to encourage anyone who is unemployed to find charitable organizations to work with. Offer your professional skills. It is something to get up for and do during the day. It also looks good on your resume and makes you feel great. — UNPAID FOR NOW, BUT HAPPY IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR HAPPY: That's a valuable suggestion, and thank you for it. At this point, 13.9 million Americans are unemployed. Many suffer from depression because, through no fault of their own, they have been unable to find jobs. When people feel embarrassed, frustrated and angry, they tend to isolate themselves, which doesn't help and can be unhealthy.

The more connections you make, the greater your chances for finding permanent employment, because in the final analysis it's all about people and relationships. I wish you luck in your job search. Whoever hires you will be lucky to have you.

Bedwetting punishment unwarranted conflict between my husband and me? — H.N.

ANSWER: The first thing I recommend is for your husband to realize that this isn't a voluntary act by the child. Punishment shouldn't be considered. No one has the answer to why some children cannot hold urine throughout the night. The child might have a slightly smaller-than-normal bladder that will enlarge as he grows older. Or it might be that the nerve connections to the bladder are not yet functioning. Don't blame the boy, don't punish him and don't humiliate him.

You can explain to your son that holding the urge to empty his bladder during the day for a little longer time will stretch the bladder and could keep him dry during the night. The boy's fluid intake should be managed in such a way that he drinks 40 percent of the total intake in the morning, another 40 percent in the afternoon and 20 percent in the evening.

Alarms that sound at the first drops of fluid often work. The sensor device is placed on a mat on the bed or in the boy's pajamas. The boy wakens, goes to the bathroom, returns to his room and changes his pajamas if need be. Or you can set an alarm to waken the boy two or three hours after

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My son is 7 and he still wets the bed. My husband can't imagine why he does this, and he believes it's willful. He thinks the boy needs to be punished. I don't. What do you recommend for this situation, which is a source of going to sleep for a trip to the bathroom. Medicines are a help when they are judiciously used for special occasions, like sleeping at a friend's house or at camp. First, test the medicine a couple of times to see how the boy responds to it. The one most often prescribed is desmopressin, DDAVP, which decreases urine production during the night. DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Every evening I drink two cans of beer and have been doing so for many years. I'm not overweight, and I don't have high blood pressure. The beer doesn't make me groggy. I like it. In the past month, on two occasions, about half an hour after the second can, my heart begins to beat fast. It lasts maybe 15 minutes. I have no chest pain when it happens. Do you think that alcohol is the reason? — M.D.

ANSWER: It could be. It's strange that beer would have this effect on you after years of drinking a modest amount. I can't say for sure. You can get to the bottom of this in two ways. One is not to drink and see if these heart speed-ups stop. The other is to see a doctor for a complete exam to possibly include wearing a heart monitor that records all heartbeats that occur during the wearing time. That discloses the kind of beats that happen. Maybe it would be better to do both. The final proof would be to resume drinking after a month of abstinence to determine if the attacks return. Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Daughter let herself go, trashes room

Annie's Mailbox

Two years ago, Olivia decided to return to school and moved back in with us. She works full time, goes to classes and has managed to pay off her creditors. She is saving money to buy a car. We do not charge rent, but she does pay for her own gas and personal items. The problem? Olivia is a sweet girl, but she is really letting herself go. She has gained a considerable amount of weight and doesn't seem to care about her appearance. However, what is really tipping me over is her room. It is an absolute mess — clothes all over the floor, the bed and stuffed in the closet, and dirty dishes, garbage and makeup strewn

Dear Annie: I'm so frustrated right now. Our 22-year-old daughter, "Olivia," is living at home with my husband, our 17-year-old son and me. A while back, she quit college and moved in with her friends, which turned out to be a financial disaster. Two years ago, Olivia decided to return to school and moved back in with us. She works full time, goes to classes and has managed to pay off her creditors. She is saving money to buy a car. We do not charge rent, but she does pay for her own gas and personal items. The problem? Olivia is a sweet girl, but she is really letting herself go. She has gained a considerable amount of weight and doesn't seem to care about her appearance. However, what is really tipping me over is her room. It is an absolute mess — clothes all over the floor, the bed and stuffed in the closet, and dirty dishes, garbage and makeup strewn about. I can't even walk through the room. Every time I look in there, it just makes me sick and angry. I don't do her laundry, but can't recall her doing it, either, so she must be wearing dirty clothes. Her father and I have begged and threatened, but nothing gets her to clean up. All she says is "I'll get to it" or "I'm too busy." But when she's not at work or at school, she's sleeping, watching TV or visiting her boyfriend. I'm ready to kick her out, but I'm afraid she will quit college and get in financial trouble again. Olivia has one year left of school. Should I put up with this disgusting room until then? — At the End of my Tether in South Dakota

Dear S.D.: If you are too worried to throw her out, then yes, you'll have to put up with the mess until she graduates. Olivia may be slovenly or depressed, and her schedule may be so busy that she needs more downtime than most. If you think she may be depressed, please suggest she visit the college counseling department. Whatever the reason, you are not obligated to go into Olivia's room if it is too stressful for you. Close the door.
