Salem Firefighter Third Class Brandon Lucas recites his oath of office at the direction of Mayor Jerry Wolford earlier this week. Lucas, who previously worked as a transitional firefighter for the department, joined the squad full-time Thursday. Chief Jeff Hughes said Lucas will replace Capt. Mike Mahouski, whose retirement is pending, awaiting a decision from the Ohio Police and Fire Pension Board. (Submitted photo)

Salem adds firefighter as veteran prepares to retire

SALEM — The Salem City Fire Department welcomed a new full-time firefighter Thursday while awaiting approval of the pending retirement of one of its veterans.

Brandon Lucas was sworn in this week as a Firefighter Third Class to replace Capt. Mike Mahouski, who's been off on medical leave since earlier this year.

Mahouski, a 20-year veteran with the department, submitted his paperwork for retirement and has a hearing pending before the Ohio Police and Fire Pension Board on June 29. A workers' compensation case filed last year remains pending in Columbiana County Common Pleas Court.

Lucas, a certified paramedic, previously worked for the department as a transitional firefighter, filling in as needed. He was a volunteer firefighter with the Dellroy Fire Department and worked as a paramedic for a private ambulance service. His starting salary will be $29,000 per year since he's a certified paramedic.

"The reason we brought him on board now is to get the overtime under control," Fire Chief Jeff Hughes said.

With Mahouski missing from the lineup, he said he's had to use overtime to fill the spot. Vacations have also played into the use of overtime to keep the department at the four-person minimum for on-duty staffing.

Hughes didn't have the current figures for overtime, but said "we've probably spent half of what was budgeted easily. Hopefully this will curb that back. We'll be back to full strength."

Once the retirement is approved for Mahouski, the department will have 16

County can get share of US lead abatement grant

By TOM GIAMBRONI

LISBON — Columbiana County is one of 36 counties that will benefit from $2.1 million in federal money awarded Ohio to remove lead paint from the homes of low-income residents.

The release of funding from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to the Ohio Department of Health was announced Thursday.

"It can cost a family living in a lead-contaminated home thousands of dollars to have the lead professionally controlled or abated. This grant will give us the ability to assist hundreds of property owners who otherwise could not afford to make these critical changes," said ODH Director Dr. Ted Wymso, in a news release.

Of the $2.1 million being allocated, $1.5 million will go to the 30 Ohio's counties within the federally designated Appalachian region, which includes Columbiana County.

ODH Jennifer House official said they have yet to determine how much each county will be allocated, but they are working through the Ohio Association of Community Action Agencies to identify homes, determine income eligibility and hire contractors.

County CAA Executive Director Carol Bretz said there is enough funding to perform lead abatement on only 150 homes within all 36 counties, "so no one agency is going to get a lot of units."

House said the first priority will be those homes already designated by the ODH as a lead hazard, which means a child who lived there was found to have blood lead levels in excess of 10 micrograms per deciliter of blood. There were 25 such homes in the county as of 2009. "It doesn't necessarily mean the people currently living there have a child who was poisoned by lead paint but at some point some child did," House said.

The manufacture of lead paint was banned in 1978, and homes built before 1950 are believed to pose the greatest lead hazard to young children. According to the ODH, 36 percent of children between six months and 6 years old live in homes built before 1950, and there are more than 20,000 homes in the county that fall in that category.

House said the program is for households at 50 percent to 80 percent of their county's median income, which in Columbiana County's case was $34,266 as of the 2000 census, and lead abatements can cost up to $8,000. The home does not necessarily have to be owned by the occupant.

The Ohio Department of Development provided $200,000 toward the project, with the Ohio Housing Financing Agency contributing $100,000, while participating CAAs are committing $300,000 for lead abatement, home weatherization and energy efficiency improvements in low-income homes.

Bretz said her board has yet to authorize the CAA's participation in the program, but she expects they will give their approval.

Southern Local vandal faces possible 60 days in county jail

By MATTHEW SCHOMER
Staff Writer

LISBON — A recent graduate of Southern Local High School admitted in court Tuesday his guilt in breaking into the school and causing damage that resulted in the response of three fire departments.

Michael Hipsley, 18, state Route 39, Salineville, pleaded guilty to a third-degree misdemeanor charge of criminal mischief. County Municipal Court Judge Mark Frost gave Hipsley the maximum possible sentence of 60 days in the county jail and a $500 fine, but he scheduled a review and restitution hearing for 1 p.m. June 9.

The jail sentence, if not suspended, will not begin until after the review hearing.

According to an affidavit in the case, Hipsley broke into the school around 1 a.m. May 20, emptied a fire extinguisher, left minnows in the drinking fountains and left other fish products about the school. A report with the Sheriff's Office also noted the restrooms were flooded with paper towels having been placed over the drains.

The powder from the fire extinguisher set off the fire alarm, which resulted in the response from three local fire departments and the county Sheriff's Office.

"I really don't have a reason ... I regret doing it. That's why I turned myself in," Hipsley told Frost in court.

While Hipsley has a clean record, which Frost said will be taken into account at the review hearing, the judge noted the court has a responsibility to try to deter others from carrying out similar activities.

"There was a pretty serious thing done that needs to be deterred in the future ... Frankly, that factor is very much at play here," he said.

Assistant Prosecutor Don Humphrey Jr. noted Southern Local Superintendent James Herring would like to have input on Hipsley's sentencing.

Frost voiced his opinion that Hipsley's actions could have been considered felony vandalism. Humphrey said the prosecutor's office concurred with that assessment.

Democrats look at loggerheads with GOP over deficit reduction

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats emerged from a meeting with President Barack Obama on Thursday sounding at loggerheads with the GOP over how to reduce the deficit as a crucial deadline for U.S. creditworthiness approaches.

Democratic leaders talking to reporters outside the White House emphasized the need for new revenues as part of any deficit-cutting deal — which generally means new taxes or fees adamantly opposed by Republicans.

They bashed GOP plans to remake Medicare and simultaneously insisted compromise would be reached and acknowledged that the hardest work remains to be done.

"This is a thousand-mile journey that we're on here, and we are taking some first steps," said Rep. James Clyburn, D-S.C.

At stake is an unprecedented default on U.S. debt obligations if Congress fails to raise the federal government's borrowing limit by Aug. 2. The Treasury Department warns failure to act would plunge the economy into crisis.

Romney opens formal presidential bid with challenge to Obama

STRATHAM, N.H. (AP) — Just as Mitt Romney declared he's in, it's suddenly looking like he might have more big-name competition for the Republican presidential nomination.

While Romney made his candidacy official in New Hampshire on Thursday, political stars Sarah Palin and Rudy Giuliani caused a stir of their own with visits to the first-in-the-nation primary state. Both made sure to assail the health care law approved while Romney was governor of neighboring Massachusetts.

And rumblings about Texas Gov. Rick Perry, New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie and Rep. Michele Bachmann of Minnesota further challenged Romney's standing as the closest thing the GOP has to a front-runner to take on President Barack Obama in November 2012. Bachmann plans to take part in a presidential debate in New Hampshire on June 13, an aide said Thursday.

Unswayed by possible competitors, Romney declared to cheers on a sunny farm in southern New Hampshire, "I'm Mitt Romney and I believe in America. And I'm running for president of the United States."

The former governor and business executive aggressively challenged Democratic President Obama while trying to pitch himself to the coalition that makes up the modern GOP: fiscal conservatives, social conservatives, evangelicals and libertarians. Romney included nods to all as he sought to make himself the candidate with the broadest appeal and best shot at sending Obama home to Chicago as a one-term president.

New Englanders give thanks that tornado death toll wasn't worse

MONSON, Mass. (AP) — The sight of flattened homes, peeled-off roofs and the toppled steeple of a 140-year-old church stunned New Englanders after deadly tornadoes swept through Massachusetts, striking an area of the country that rarely sees such severe twisters.

The storms, which came with fair warning but still shocked with their intensity, killed at least three people, injured about 200 and wreaked damage in a string of 18 cities and villages across central and western Massachusetts.

Tornadoes are not unheard of in New England — the downtown of Connecticut's largest city was devastated by one last June — so many people heeded warnings. That didn't guarantee their survival; among the dead was a mother who shielded her teenage daughter as they huddled in a bathtub.

But in many cases, doing the right thing — quickly — helped save lives.

Karen Irla, 50, was leaving Adams Hometown Market in the picturesque village of Monson when she heard children on their bicycles yelling, "Look at that tornado!"

NJ Governor Christie reimburses state for helicopter trips

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — After a firestorm of criticism, New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie made an about-face Thursday, reimbursing the state for his personal use of a state police helicopter because he said the story had become a distraction from the real problems facing the state.

Remaining unapologetic about his use of the helicopter to attend two of his son's baseball games and a political dinner with GOP campaign contributors from Iowa, Christie said that he has reimbursed the state about $2,100 and asked the state Republican Party to pay about $1,200 for his trip to see the donors.

Christie said of the two baseball game trips that he was just trying to balance his role as governor and as a father.

"I'm governor 24-7 ... but I am also a father. And the fact of the matter is sometime when you are a governor, you do not control your schedule," he said at a bill signing ceremony in Denville.

Christie's reversal came a day after a spokesman said the governor would not make a reimbursement, defending the trips as appropriate. On Thursday, Christie said state police told him he wasn't required to reimburse the state for use of the helicopter, but told reporters, "I also understand this is a really fun media story for all of you."

Hundreds of dead in South Sudan military attack on rebel group

JUBA, Sudan (AP) — Southern Sudan soldiers attacking a rival ethnic group fired indiscriminately on unarmed men, women and children at a remote Nile River village, killing or wounding hundreds of civilians, according to witness accounts in a confidential U.N. report.

A U.N. team that traveled to the village 11 days after the April 23 killings saw more than two dozen corpses and said grass-roofed mud huts clearly contained many more bodies, but the toll of 254 dead civilians from a local official has not been independently verified.

The three U.N. reports obtained by The Associated Press are the first accounts of mass civilian casualties in the southern village of Kaldak caused by soldiers from Southern Sudan. One report was labeled "Confidential & Sensitive Information," another was "UN RESTRICTED," and the third had no apparent classification.

The Texas-sized south voted in January to secede from Sudan and becomes independent in July. It has been strongly supported by the U.S. and other Western nations.

While the Khartoum-based Sudanese government has been vilified for carrying out genocide in Darfur and for invading Abyei — a central region contested by the north and south — last month, the reports obtained by AP raise serious questions about human rights abuses carried out by southern forces, known as the Sudan People's Liberation Army, and about how much control their leaders have over them.

Man, 73, opens fire in Arizona, killing 5, before killing himself, police say

YUMA, Ariz. (AP) — A 73-year-old man opened fire Thursday in southern Arizona, killing five people and wounding one other before fatally shooting himself, authorities said. Yuma police identified the suspected shooter as Carey Hal Dyess of Yuma.

The timeline of events wasn't immediately clear, but police said they responded to the first call at about 9:30 a.m. and found Dyess dead two hours later.

One of the victims, an adult male, was killed inside a business in the downtown Yuma area, investigators said.

The shooting forced officials block off a city street and lock down the nearby Yuma County Courthouse and some area schools. No one was injured at the courthouse or schools, and the buildings were later reopened.

Dyess fatally shot four other people elsewhere in Yuma County, police allege. The wounded person was flown to a Phoenix-area hospital.

Sex offender who kidnapped, raped Calif girl held 18 years will spend rest of life in prison

PLACERVILLE, Calif. (AP) — Jaycee Dugard refused to "waste another second" in the presence of the married couple she said stole her life. She didn't want to be in a northern California courtroom Thursday as 60-year-old Phillip Garrido, the serial sex offender who kidnapped, raped and held her captive for 18 years, was ordered to spend the rest of his life in prison and his wife, Nancy, 55, was given a decades-long sentence.

The feelings the 31-year-old victim had never been able to express while she was held prisoner did make it into court.

"I chose not to be here today because I refuse to waste another second of my life in your presence," Dugard said in a statement read aloud by her mother, the first public comments about her experience since police found her 22 months ago. "As I think of all of those years I am angry because you stole my life and that of my family."

"Everything you have ever done to me has been wrong and someday I hope you can see that," she wrote, directing her words to Phillip Garrido. "I hated every second of everyday of 18 years because of you and the sexual perversion you forced on me."

Sony probing claim hackers stole user information

LONDON (AP) — Sony Pictures said Thursday it is investigating a statement from hackers claiming to have stolen more than 1 million pieces of user information. A group of hackers calling itself LulzSec said it has compromised users' personal information, including passwords, email addresses, phone numbers, home addresses, dates of birth, and all Sony opt-in data associated with their accounts.

— Marra McFarland, 23, East Third Street, Salem, was cited for rules governing overtaking and passing of vehicles at 2:55 p.m. May 26 on state Route 45 in Salem Township after Talia Hagler, 35, state Route 45, Lisbon, attempted to turn her vehicle into a private driveway and McFarland's vehicle struck Hagler's vehicle while trying to pass it.

— Kelsey Loiselle, 17, Alliance, was cited for a stop sign violation at 10:04 p.m. May 22 on Hartley Road in Knox Township after she failed to stop her southbound vehicle for a stop sign and struck an embankment and a utility pole.

FIRE REPORTS

SALEM

— Firefighters explained the open burning laws to property owner Larry Leider, of the 1400 block of North Ellsworth Avenue, after a citizen called at 9:40 a.m. Thursday to complain about a neighbor open burning and creating heavy smoke. When firefighters arrived, very little smoke was being created by the fire. The resident was burning wood and yard brush. He advised he would no longer burn in a barrel or burn brush. He was told he could burn seasoned dry wood in fire pit.

— Firefighters responded at 10 a.m. Tuesday after receiving a call about a large amount of smoke in the 400 block of West Pershing Street. They discovered tires caught fire, with a worker explaining it was an accident. The fire was extinguished. The workers were told they can't burn tires.

BIRTH

Chief from Parker-Broderick case faces new charges

MARTINS FERRY, Ohio (AP) — New charges have been filed against an ex-police chief now in prison over a break-in at the Ohio home of a surrogate who bore twins for Sarah Jessica Parker and Matthew Broderick.

The Times Leader of Martins Ferry reports that a Belmont County grand jury on Wednesday indicted former Martins Ferry Chief Barry Carpenter on charges of stealing firearms from the police department. Special Prosecutor Shawn Hervey said Thursday that Carpenter was indicted on three firearms theft counts.

SHERIFF

— A state Route 154, Negley, woman called for a deputy at 7 a.m. Wednesday after John Lewis showed up at her door, saying he was being chased. Lewis, who lives in East Palestine, told the deputy he spent the night at the home of Sam Bailey, Pioneer Road, when some people showed up accusing him of being a "narc" and telling him he had better run, which he did. He said one of the people who chased him did so while driving a semi-truck. The deputy did not find any of the chasers about.

— A state Route 164, Leetonia, man reported arriving home at 4:11 p.m. Wednesday to find the door to his house and garage kicked in and two ATVs moved from the garage.

— A state Route 39, Salineville, resident reported at 9 a.m. Wednesday someone entered her home and yelled "hello." This set her dogs to barking and they ran to the door. Waldron never caught a glimpse of whoever was there, but nothing appeared to be missing from her home.

— A Taylor Road, Negley, woman called for a deputy at 2:36 p.m. Tuesday in regard to a dispute with their neighbors. The deputy advised the parties to leave each other alone, and to resolve any property line dispute by going to court.

Salem man to be sentenced for sex with teen girl, 14

LISBON — A Salem man is scheduled to be sentenced on Aug. 4 after pleading as charged to engaging in sexual conduct with an underage girl.

Stephen A. Ward, 29, East Fourth Street, pleaded guilty this week in Columbiana County Common Pleas Court to unlawful sexual conduct with a minor. He admitted engaging in sex with a 14-year-old girl in Salem on July 25, 2009.

Supreme Court sides with states on immigration

An important victory for Americans who believe in controlling immigration was handed down last week by the U.S. Supreme Court — which at the same time served up a major defeat for President Barack Obama.

States and even municipalities daring to restrict illegal immigration in any way have felt the wrath of Obama's Justice Department. While claiming he wants to control U.S. borders, the president opposes those who really attempt to do so.

Justice Department lawyers insist only the federal government can legally restrict immigration. That puts Washington at odds with states such as Arizona that have enacted their own statutes on the subject.

A 2007 Arizona law penalizes businesses that hire illegal immigrants. A lawsuit challenging the statute was decided this week by the nation's highest court.

By a 5-3 vote, with one abstention, justices ruled Arizona can enforce the law. States do have some authority regarding illegal immigration, the court ruled.

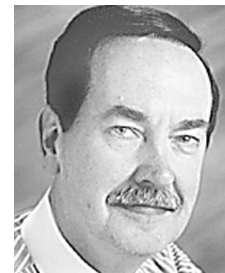

Obviously, details of the case at hand differ from situations involving other local and state immigration rules. The court could at some point rule against such laws.

But for now, justices appear to have pulled the rug out from under one of Obama's key contentions. It amounts to a position that even if he and federal agencies aren't doing a good job stemming the flow of illegal immigrants into the United States, no one else is allowed to tackle the task.

Again, that may be a bad development for Obama — but it is excellent news for Americans who are insisting that someone do something about our nation's porous borders.

What Arab spring?

CAL THOMAS

The upheaval in Yemen and the possibility that al-Qaida might take over, turning that country into a stronger terrorist base than it already is, should give pause to American and European policy in the Arab world.

At its recently concluded G-8 meeting of industrial economies in Deauville, France, Western governments pledged $40 billion to "newly democratic" nations in North Africa and the Middle East. One might as well throw money at Chicago and hope for electoral reform so the dead are no longer allowed to vote on Election Day.

In spring, one usually cultivates a lawn so that new vegetation can take root and grow. In the Arab world where this money is targeted the only roots you'll find are the roots of oppression and terrorism. If Western nations think what is happening in Tunisia and Egypt will lead to real democracy where competing political parties, ideologies and faiths have a fair and equal opportunity of being debated they are seriously deluded. The money would have a better chance of financing a winning streak in a Las Vegas casino.

If these countries were seriously pursuing democracy and needed only money to complete their transformation, there is plenty of money in the region that could be used to help them. According to the U.S. Department of Energy, OPEC income is expected to rise this year above the $200 billion increase of 2010. That would be around $833 billion, the Energy Information Administration forecasts. That's money the United States and the rest of the G-8 have paid oil-producing nations at prices ranging from $4 to $7 a gallon, depending on the country.

If money alone could foster democracy in North Africa and the Middle East, there are plenty of Arab countries with loads of it -- chiefly Saudi Arabia. Yet the Saudis have shown very little interest in an "Arab spring," preferring to remain instead in the doldrums of an Arab winter.

Democracy doesn't spring up of its own accord. It must have a base from which it can blossom. That was a point made by Timur Kuran, a professor of economics and political science at Duke University, in a recent op-ed column for The New York Times entitled "The Weak Foundations of Arab Democracy." Kuran wrote, "Democracy requires checks and balances, and it is largely through civil society that citizens protect their rights as individuals, force policymakers to accommodate their interests, and limit abuses of state authority. Civil society also promotes a culture of bargaining and gives future leaders the skills to articulate ideas, form coalitions and govern."

None of this exists in any of the nations to which the G-8 has pledged its support. In Egypt, supposedly the most progressive of the Arab states, fundamentalist Muslims still persecute Coptic Christians. The radical Muslim Brotherhood, which at the start of the revolution claimed no interest in political power, is now active in its pursuit of victory in the upcoming election and hints that it might revoke Egypt's peace treaty with Israel.

The problems in North Africa and the Middle East can't be solved by money. What's needed is a change in outlook. Radical Islam forces women into second-class status; it is rooted, not in optimism, but in pessimism. Radical Islamists appear to serve an angry God who commands them to kill those who do not believe as they do, but this belief will do little to lift the Arab world out of the religious and political deep freeze that holds it back from true progress.

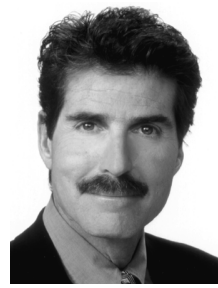

In C.S. Lewis' "The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe," Narnia has been transformed by a white witch into a land where it is "always winter, but never Christmas." That pretty much describes the lands of North Africa and the Middle East where the "white witch" is radical Islam and spring will never arrive as long as it holds sway over the minds and hearts of the people.

Government help like minimum wage laws actually hurts Blacks

JOHN STOSSELL

The other day, I went to Times Square to ask people what government should do to help poor people. Most everyone agreed on the answer: "more social programs and a higher minimum wage."

It's intuitive to think that way. I used to think that, too. When President Johnson declared a "war on poverty," he said "compassionate government" was the road to prosperity for poor people. That made sense to me. At Princeton, I was taught that government's central planners had the solution to poverty.

But then I watched them work. Government spent trillions of dollars on poverty programs, and the poverty level stayed stuck at about 12 percent of the population. It's stayed there for about 40 years.

Now I understand that that government poverty programs encourage people to stay dependent. There's money in it. They policymakers would have known this 25 years ago had they read "The State Against Blacks." The author, an economist, said poverty programs destroy the natural mechanisms that have always enabled poor people to lift themselves out of poverty.

That author is Walter Williams of George Mason University. Williams, who is black, says "there's a huge segment of the black population for whom upward mobility is elusive, and it's because of the welfare state — because of government."

Williams elaborates in a new book, "Race and Economics." A chief culprit, he insists, is the minimum wage.

"Let's not look at the intentions behind minimum wage," he said. "We have to ask, what are the effects? Put yourself in the place of an employer who must pay $7.25 no matter whom you hire. Will that employer hire a person who can only add $3 or $4 of value per hour?"

He will not. And so fewer young people get hired and "get their feet on the bottom rung of the economic ladder." This hurts all young people, but black teens most, he says, because "many of them get a fraudulent education in the public school system. So a law that discriminates against low-skill people has a doubly negative effect on black teenagers. The unemployment rate among black teens today is unprecedented in U.S. history. In the '40s, black teenage unemployment was less than white teenage unemploy-

And yet a Pew survey says 83 percent of Americans support raising the minimum wage.

"People have the misguided notion that the minimum wage is an anti-poverty tool."

Economists understand the truth. A survey of the American Economic Association found that 90 percent of economists say the minimum wage increases unemployment.

Williams says the minimum wage law has also been a tool of racism. In his book "South Africa's War Against Capitalism," he studied that country's labor markets during apartheid:

"White racist unions in South Africa that would never have a black as a member were the major supporters of minimum wage laws. Their stated purpose was to protect white workers from having to compete with low-skill, low-wage black workers. In the United States we found some of the same reasoning for support of a super minimum-wage law," the Davis-Bacon Act, which forces taxpayers to pay union-like wages for government-funded construction projects.

Williams says other programs designed to help the poor — like welfare payments — have wrecked the lives of millions of black people. He likens the welfare state to a "drug pusher" that keeps people dependent and in poverty.

"The welfare state has done to black Americans what slavery (and Jim Crow and racism) could not have done ... break up the black family. Today, just slightly over 30 percent of black kids live in two-parent families. Historically, from the 1870s on ... 75-90 percent of black kids lived in two-parent families."

Why does the welfare state create illegitimacy?

"(Without welfare,) people would decide, 'I'm going to go out and get a job, I'm going to live more responsibly.'" And that would include getting married before having children, something the welfare system discourages.

I believe the creators of the welfare state had good intentions, but good intentions aren't good enough. Even if deficit spending were not bankrupting America — which it is — America should end these programs.

Fairfield trustees seek road levy renewal

By LARRY SHIELDS
Staff Writer

FAIRFIELD TOWNSHIP — Trustees approved two resolutions to place a road levy renewal on the November ballot.

Trustee Chairman Bob Hum said at Thursday's regular meeting the county auditor needed to certify the amount and Fiscal Officer Pat Hoffmaster said the auditor also had to prepare paperwork to place it on the ballot.

Both resolutions were passed with 3-0 votes and Hoffmaster said township residents "have been so supportive" of the road issue while Trustee Barry Miner underscored the importance of maintaining the township's 48 miles through preventive maintenance.

He said it would cost about $280,000 to pave Crestview Road and the township will continue with preventive maintenance until Issue II money appears.

"It's very costly to pave anything," he said, adding, "we're very fortunate for the residents who have always supported it. This is very important."

He compared Fairfield to other townships, saying, "Our road boys do a fantastic job."

Hum pointed to the fact it was a renewal with "no increase to anyone."

In other business, the township will get in line for a used siren from the Shippingport Nuclear Power Plant after approving a resolution with a 3-0 vote.

Hum recalled that 12 or 16 years ago it was proposed to "place sirens around the township" and he learned the Shippingport plant was updating and just received federal money for new sirens. Hum said the information was obtained from the Columbiana County EMA.

"It's a free siren, all we have to do is go get it," Hum said, "(and) put it on the roof here or on a pole." He suggested tying it in with another government body like Columbiana, New Waterford or Leetonia.

Road Supervisor Denny Farmer wondered about activating it and Hum said, "I know they're not 110 (volts) ... we should put our name on the list."

Miner suggested tying into Columbiana's siren at the pool.

"I think we should at least explore it," he said.

Hoffmaster asked about how many sirens.

"We only want one and this building is centrally located," Hum said, while noting the prevailing wind is from the west.

Miner said, "I think it's an excellent idea" and trustees approved placing the township on the EMA list with a 3-0 vote.

In other business, Trustee Carl Garwood received a complaint about tall grass obstructing motorist's view of road on the south side of state Route 558 and Lower Elkton Road.

Garwood explained that a woman on Lower Elkton Road said she couldn't see to pull out.

He inspected the intersection.

"She is absolutely correct. Something needs to be done with that. But it isn't our grass," Garwood said, adding that otherwise he would have handled it himself.

Garwood also commended the county engineer's road crew during a road reclaiming operation. "It was a pleasure to work with our people and the county's people," he said.

He explained the reclaimer broke and the county had two mechanics respond, one within a half hour.

"They were just super," he said.

Trustees will attempt to coordinate the paving of Crestview Road, from state Route 7 to Fairfield School Road, set for late June or early July, with the railroad that runs north and south, which has black-top work scheduled.

Farmer said he would call to make the arrangements.

Also, trustees approved appraisal adjustments to the insurance policy on township vehicles. Miner asked if "everything's straightened out?" Hum replied it was and trustees voted to accept the insurance letter, dated May 5, with the authorized changes.

firefighters, a figure which includes the chief. Firefighters work shifts of 24 hours on, then 48 hrs off, with four on duty at all times.

Hughes said they'll actually save money with Lucas since he's a Firefighter Third Class. Last year, the department had three firefighters laid off, but they've all been recalled. Two firefighters are being paid through a grant the chief secured earlier this year through the Staffing for Adequate Fire and Emergency Response program known as SAFER.

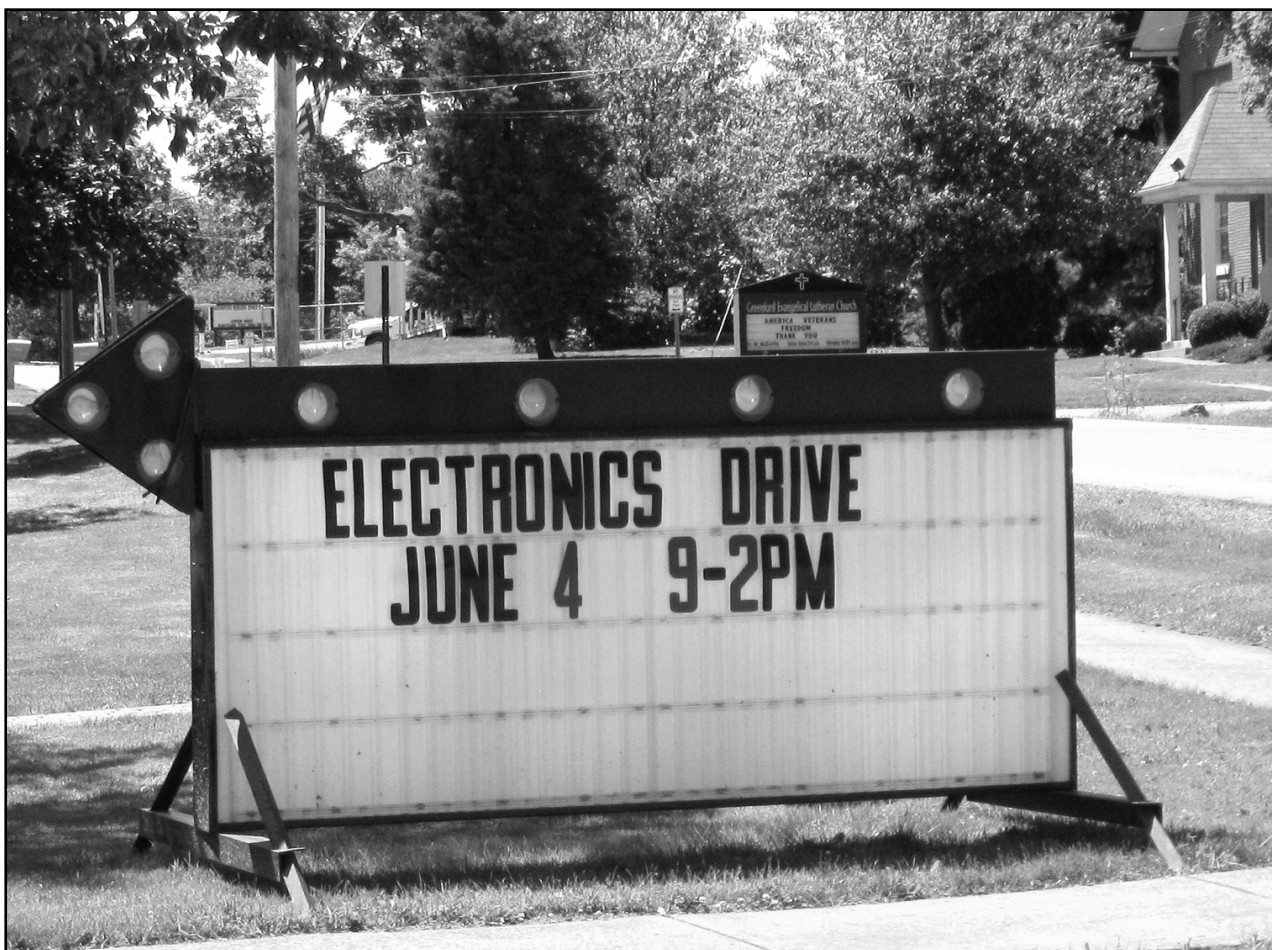

Once Mahouski's retirement becomes official, a captain's position will be open, creating a flurry of promotions to fill that spot and the corresponding spots created from the initial promotion. Hughes said the people to fill the spots have already been selected, based on scores on the promotion exams already taken. The test for captains took place on May 16, followed by the test for lieutenants and inspectors on May 23.

Lt. Jeff Olinger will become the new captain, with Inspector Steve Mix slated to become the new lieutenant and Firefighter Derek Day to become the new inspector.

Hughes said it's tough losing someone with experience, noting the department is becoming younger and younger, but he also said the firefighters are always looking for ways to better themselves through additional training.

"They're a good group of people to have working for me," he said.

Trial date for former liquor control agent pushed back

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

A trial date for a former undercover liquor control agent from Salem came and went last month in Summit County with no trial and no new date set.

Joseph Chamberlain, 30, of 1390 Carole Drive, Salem, was scheduled to face trial on May 16 for a charge of unauthorized use of property — unauthorized access to computer systems, a fifth-degree felony punishable by a year in prison.

According to a journal entry signed by Judge Tammy O'Brien of Summit County Common Pleas Court, the trial date was continued until further notice. A status hearing was set for May 26, but that too was continued, according to Laurie Cramer, communications director for the prosecutor's office.

She said a new status conference has been scheduled for 1 p.m. June 30.

The charge against Chamberlain accuses him of misusing computer access to the Ohio Law Enforcement Gateway known as OHLEG, a secured site used by law enforcement to share information.

The indictment alleged that from Sept. 13, 2009 through Sept. 6, 2010 in Summit County and in a continuing course of criminal conduct in Columbiana County, Chamberlain knowingly gained access, attempted to gain access, caused access to be granted or disseminated information gained from access to OHLEG without the consent or beyond the scope of the express or implied consent of the superintendent of the Bureau of Criminal Identification and Investigation.

Chamberlain was placed on paid administrative leave from his job with the Ohio Investigative Unit in the fall, but was later terminated for internal discipline, according to Julie Hinds, an Ohio Investigative Unit spokesman.

Police shoot gator twice, then realize it's fake

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — Police responding to a rare alligator sighting in suburban Kansas City took quick action to dispatch of the beast, shooting it in the head, as instructed, while it lurked menacingly in the weeds leading down to a pond.

It wasn't until a second rifle shot bounced off the reptile's head that the officers realized they had mortally wounded a concrete lawn ornament.

A resident of a subdivision near the pond called police Saturday evening to report that his children spotted the alligator while they were playing in some nearby woods.

After consulting a conservation agent, who told them to kill the gator if they felt it posed a danger, one of the officers shot it twice in the head before realizing something was up, said Tom Gentry, an Independence police spokesman.

"It didn't move," Gentry said. "They inched up closer and closer and discovered it was a mock-up of a real alligator made to look like it was real."

BUSINESS HIGHLIGHTS

Fewer people applied for jobless benefits WASHINGTON (AP) — Fewer people applied for unemployment benefits last week, but applications remain stuck at a level that signals weak job growth.

The number of applications for unemployment benefits dropped 6,000 to a seasonally adjusted 422,000, the Labor Department said Thursday. It was the third drop in four weeks. But the declines follow much bigger increases in April.

Applications dropped to 375,000 in late February — a level consistent with sustainable job growth. But for the past eight weeks, applications have stayed above 400,000. The four-week average, a less volatile measure, fell for the second straight week but remained high at 425,500.

More job seekers give up, reducing rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Where did all the workers go? The labor force — those who have a job or are looking for one — is getting smaller, even though the economy is growing and steadily adding jobs. That trend defies the rules of a normal economic recovery.

Nobody is sure why it's happening. Economists think some of the missing workers have retired, have entered college or are getting by on government disability checks. Others have probably just given up looking for work.

Pinched by gas, shoppers pull

NEW YORK (AP) — Shoppers are pulling back on spending on discretionary items like clothing and home goods as gasoline and groceries eat up more of their paychecks.

Those pressures led many retailers on Thursday to report only modest revenue increases in May, the latest sign of the economy hitting a soft patch.

Retailers that cater to wealthy shoppers and warehouse clubs like Costco that also sell gas reported the biggest gains. Revenue rose 5.4 percent overall at stores open at least a year among 27 retailers, according to the International Council of Shopping Centers. Excluding gasoline, the figure rose 3.7 percent.

AP Source: Goldman Sachs subpoenaed

NEW YORK (AP) — Goldman Sachs Group Inc. was subpoenaed by the Manhattan District Attorney's office over the investment bank's activities leading up to the financial crisis, a person familiar with the matter told The Associated Press.

Shares of Goldman fell nearly 2 percent to $133.88 a share after Bloomberg News reported earlier Thursday that the bank had been subpoenaed. The stock ended the day down 1.3 percent at $134.38 a share. Goldman's shares are down 20 percent so far this year and are at levels not seen since last July.

Goldman has been watched by lawmakers and regulators since marketing risky investments that bet on the housing market's success just before the mortgage meltdown. Simultaneously the bank ranked hundreds of dollars from its own bets that the housing market would collapse. Those gains have also made it the target of intense media scrutiny and public outrage.

Moody's warns US on debt downgrade

WASHINGTON (AP) — A credit rating agency is warning the U.S. government that it could lose its sterling debt rating if Congress and the Obama administration don't reach an agreement to raise the nation's borrowing limit. Moody's Investors Service said Thursday that if the parties fail to make progress soon, it would put the U.S. rating under review for a possible downgrade. That's because there's a "very small but rising risk" that the government will default on its debts.

Standard & Poor's, another major credit rating agency, issued a similar warning in April.

Moody's warns big banks of downgrades

NEW YORK (AP) — Moody's Investors Service said Thursday that it was reviewing the ratings of Bank of America Corp. Citigroup Inc. and Wells Fargo & Co. for possible downgrades.

The ratings agency gives the three banks fairly strong investment-grade credit ratings. But those grades are based on Moody's assumption that the federal government would prevent them from failing in a crisis. Moody's said Thursday that this "too big to fail" presumption may no longer be true.

Groupon files for hotly anticipated IPO

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Rapidly growing online coupon seller Groupon Inc. is offering its most tantalizing deal yet — an initial public offering of stock likely to intensify a debate about whether an investment bubble is forming around promising but still unproven Internet companies.

Groupon took the first step toward selling its stock on Wall Street by filing its IPO papers Wednesday. The much-anticipated filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission comes just two weeks after LinkedIn Corp., a popular Internet service for professional networking service, saw its shares double in their first day of trading, evoking memories of the early stages of the dot-com boom in the 1990s.

Groupon, based in Chicago, offers its subscribers the chance to purchase daily discounts targeted to their city and preferences. For example, a subscriber might pay $20 for a $40 gift certificate to a spa, restaurant, car wash or yoga studio.

Big student debt could limit schools' aid

NEW YORK (AP) — The government is moving forward with its crackdown on the country's for-profit schools, aiming to protect students from taking on too much debt to attend schools that do nothing for their job prospects.

But student advocates protest that the final version of the Department of Education's "gainful employment" rule, released Thursday, is way too soft. Meanwhile, schools and industry lobbyists rail that the DOE has no legal standing to impose the rule at all.

E. coli outbreak in Europe blamed on 'super-toxic' strain

LONDON (AP) — Scientists on Thursday blamed Europe's worst recorded food-poisoning outbreak on a "super-toxic" strain of E. coli bacteria that may be brand new.

But while suspicion has fallen on raw tomatoes, cucumbers and lettuce as the source of the germ, researchers have been unable to pinpoint the food responsible for the frightening illness, which has killed at least 18 people, sickened more than 1,600 and spread to at least 10 European countries.

An alarming number of victims — about 500 — have developed kidney complications that can be deadly.

Chinese and German scientists analyzed the DNA of the E. coli bacteria and determined that the outbreak was caused by "an entirely new, super-toxic" strain that contains several antibiotic-resistant genes, according to a statement from the Shenzhen, China-based laboratory BGI. It said the strain appeared to be a combination of two types of E. coli.

"This is a unique strain that has never been isolated from patients before," Hilde Kruse, a food safety expert at the World Health Organization, told The Associated Press. The new strain has "various characteristics that make it more virulent and toxin-producing" than the many E. coli strains people naturally carry in their intestines.

However, Dr. Robert Tauxe, a foodborne-disease expert at the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, questioned whether the strain is truly new, saying it had previously caused a single case in Korea in the 1990s. He said genetic fingerprints may vary from specimen to specimen, but that is not unusual.

"Though it appears to have been around awhile, it hasn't called attention to itself as a major public health problem before," Tauxe said.

Elsewhere in Europe, Russia extended a ban on vegetables from Spain and Germany to the entire European Union to try to stop the outbreak spreading east, a move the EU quickly called disproportionate and Italy's farmers denounced as "absurd." No deaths or infections have been reported in Russia.

In Hamburg, Philipp, a 29-year-old photojournalist, was hospitalized on Monday after falling ill. He would not provide his last name because he did not want people to know he had the E. coli strain.

After suffering from stomach aches and bloody stools, he developed neurological symptoms and couldn't feel his left arm or leg. Despite three blood plasma transfusions to wash the toxins out of his blood, he hasn't improved.

Philipp said he is still eating some vegetables the night before he got sick.

Some scientists suspect the deadly E. coli might have been in manure used to fertilize vegetables.

Kruse said it is not uncommon for bacteria to evolve and swap genes. It is difficult to explain why the new strain came from, she said, but bacteria from humans and animals easily trade genes. Previous E. coli outbreaks have mainly hit children and the elderly, but this one is disproportionately affecting adults, especially women. Kruse said there might be something particular about the bacteria strain that makes it more dangerous for adults.

HOROSCOPE

By HOLIDAY MATHIS
6/3/11

The ruler of imagination and dreams welcomes us to contemplate our deeply held beliefs today as he goes retrograde in Pisces. Neptune is heading back to the familiar territory of Aquarius, where he resided from 1998 until April 2011. In August, Neptune will finally reach Aquarius and bring on a cycle of nostalgia, but it won't last long.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Your world is not the same world as the one your next-door neighbor experiences. Understanding the differences will make you a very wise person. Your powers are greater than you know.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You will be in an enterprising mood and not likely to wait for others to show you where the opportunities for fun and profit lie. Anyway, it's likely that none will exist until you arrive on the scene and create them.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You'll make a positive impression, and the ensuing connection shows promise. Yet, you may be unsure about the nature of this relationship and where to take it next. Take it slow, and keep an open mind.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). How you frame things makes all the difference in how they are received. For instance, when a job seems beneath you but you still have to do it, give it a new title — the fancier the better.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). New sources of inspiration are affecting your mental process. As your imagination continues to work on a problem, unusual thoughts pop to mind and your dreams take a highly creative turn, as well.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). The normal rules of etiquette may go out the window because there is more pressing business at hand. You may even invite yourself to someone's house or show up unexpectedly, but your reason will be good.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). People are talking about an array of wacky topics. You have a charming way of focusing the attention on what's wonderful about life in general. Everyone around you will feel calm and secure.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). What you do in pursuit of a hobby will open your horizons in other ways, as well. A new source of income opens to you. This could be the start of something significant.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Relationships are a push-and-pull dance, and you'd rather be on the "pull" end of things. It is more interesting and less tiring to reel the other person in with your enchanting personality than to be pushy.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). A sympathetic ear is welcome, although it's not the best role you could take on right now with a certain someone. Instead of being nurturing and sympathetic, be an exciting and compelling force.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). There is someone you want to like, and you want this person to like you, too. You hope this person will continue to play the little game you've got going. Hint: Flattery is the fastest way to get through the door.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You would love to be a source of surprise and delight to others, which is why you will keep some of your plans a secret. So much depends on your ability to manage the expectations of those around you.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (June 3). You'll sample many options through this month and then finally decide on the best course. That's when you become tremendously tenacious and confident and people will move to accommodate you as you work steadily toward your goals. New relationships start in August. September brings a windfall. Aquarius and Sagittarius people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 30, 1, 11, 14 and 15.

Hurricane medication alert

Heloise

Dear Heloise: With the start of HURRICANE SEASON, I wanted to remind readers of something important to have on hand in case of a hurricane: allergy medications! After Hurricane Ike hit Houston in 2008, all of the downed trees and wind-stirred vegetation made my daughter's allergies go crazy, resulting in asthma. Since she usually only has fall allergies, I didn't have the proper medications and an inhaler on hand. Pharmacies were closed for days, so it made for a scary situation that could have been easily avoided with a little planning. — Elizabeth B., Houston

Elizabeth, thank you for this reminder! It's certainly something I never would have thought of. — Heloise

DRYER CAUTION

Dear Heloise: I had to pass this on: I have a dryer that is about 15 years old and thought it was on its last leg. It would dry sometimes, and sometimes not. The heat was not as hot as it should have been. At times, I had to run a load twice, and it still was damp. So naturally, I was prepared to buy a new one.

We were told to remove the back panel (this may be a bit difficult, so it would be best to have a professional do this task — Heloise) to see if lint had built up on the inside. What a shock — I could not believe the amount of lint.

I always cleaned the lint filter after a couple of loads, and it was piped to go outside, and that also was cleaned. It was not a matter of not being cleaned — this just happens over time.

We were told that this should be done every couple of years. Now it is working great, as good as new. This saved us from putting out a lot of money on a new dryer. — Sandy Boro, Plattsburgh, Neb.

TRAVEL HINT

Dear Heloise: When packing for a trip, I couldn't find the small, plastic bag that attaches inside my luggage. I use this bag for toiletries and consider it an extra layer of protection against leaks.

I simply put my toiletry kit in the plastic zipper bag that had once contained the new sheets I had just bought. The kit fit with some room to spare, and I did not worry about leaks in my luggage. — Thomas S., via email

Surprised to learn of former student's love

DEAR ABBY: I am a teacher with a dilemma. I have taught for 10 years and connected with thousands of former students. With the Internet and social networking, I am able to keep in touch with many of them. I enjoy knowing what they're doing in their college careers and beyond.

One student I've kept in touch with recently admitted his romantic love for me. "Kyle" is now in his 20s and on his own. As his teacher 10 years ago, I'd never have dreamed of this happening. What's difficult is I think I reciprocate those feelings. I never expected the man I connect with most to be a former student, but Kyle is an adult and I know him as such.

I'm not sure what to do. I'm aware of my professional boundaries as a teacher and would never cross those lines with a student or minor. What do you do when your former student is an adult, you live in a small town and you're drawn to each other? This could be the love I've been waiting for my entire life. Would it be totally inappropriate if I followed my heart? — WONDERING IN WYOMING

DEAR WONDERING: No. Because Kyle is an adult, and when he was your student there was no flirting (I presume), I see nothing unethical about pursuing the relationship. However, if your romance becomes fodder for gossip — and it very well might — you should be prepared to relocate.

DEAR ABBY: I went to the zoo with my daughter's class as a chaperone. While we were there, I saw several children begin climbing the walls of some of the exhibits. They were not part of the group from our school. I promptly asked the children "nicely" not to climb on the exhibits for fear they would hurt themselves or fall in.

A parent who heard me ask her son to get down began yelling and cursing at me in front of my daughter and the other children. I said, "I'm sorry," and walked on.

I don't feel I did anything wrong. I was trying to warn the boy that what he was doing was dangerous. Did I do the wrong thing? Or should I have talked to a member of the zoo staff about what happened? Please advise what you would do if someone's child did what I witnessed. — VIGILANT PARENT IN OKLAHOMA CITY

DEAR VIGILANT PARENT: Candidly, I probably would have reflexively done exactly what you did — get the child out of harm's way. However, the prudent way to handle a situation like the one you encountered would have been to alert the zoo staff or security personnel so they could handle it.

DEAR ABBY: In our golfing circle there's a single, 47-year-old professional woman with two children. We thought we knew her. Come to find out, she has been involved for the last five years with a married man who has a child.

We're uncomfortable having her around us now. None of us is perfect, but a woman who would take another's man and wreck a home is one thing most women can't stand. What, if anything, should we do? — TEE'D OFF IN ALABAMA

DEAR TEE'D OFF: Before deciding what to do, talk privately with the woman, tell her what you have learned and hear what she has to say about it. After that, you'll know what (or what not) to do.

Infant problem requires surgery

Dr. Donohue

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My grandson, my only grandchild, has had a constipation problem since his birth. He is 6 months old now. My daughter has spoken to his pediatrician about this on many occasions. The doctor suggested mineral oil. On her last visit, he told her he wanted to check the baby for megacolon. I know what colon means, and I know that mega is big, but I don't know what megacolon is. Will you please explain this? — A.W.

ANSWER: Congenital megacolon is a segment of colon in which nerve cells have failed to establish a connection during fetal development. Without such connections, that part of the colon has weak to zero muscle contractions. The colon can't move undigested food through it.

When a large segment of colon has no nerve connections, signs of trouble are present from birth. The colon fills and expands with feces — the "mega" of "megacolon." The infant doesn't pass stool. With involvement of a smaller section of colon, constipation is the main sign, but the infant can still pass stool less often and with difficulty.

Congenital megacolon isn't the only cause of infant constipation. An anatomically narrow colon (a birth defect), too little thyroid hormone, low blood potassium and high blood calcium are other causes.

One way of establishing the megacolon diagnosis is through a biopsy of the rectum. A doctor can do it without having to hospitalize the baby. Microscopic examination of the tissue demonstrates the lack of nerve connections.

Correction of the problem is removal of the involved section of the colon and then hooking the colon back together.

Another name for this disorder is Hirschsprung disease.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I take an oral medicine for diabetes. I keep a record of my blood sugar readings. I have my own blood sugar meter. What is considered normal for a fasting reading and for a reading after eating? — T.S.

ANSWER: A fasting blood sugar (plasma glucose) ought to be 130 mg/dL (7.2 mmol/L) or less. "Fasting" means no food in the preceding eight to 12 hours.

Two hours after eating, the reading should be less than 180 (10).

The hemoglobin A1c value gives an idea of what your blood sugar averaged in the preceding three to four months. It should be less than 7 percent. The American Association of Clinical Endocrinology sets 6.5 percent as the desirable reading for HbA1c.

The diabetes booklet provides answers to many questions on this common disorder. To obtain a copy, write to Dr. Donohue — No. 402, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Can. with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

Daughter did't tell him she had child

Annie's Mailbox

Dear Annie: I have two daughters, "Kathy" and her younger sister, "Carly," both in their late 20s. Carly and I have always had a rocky relationship, stemming from my being the disciplinarian since my wife refused to do it. Kathy always seemed more understanding and forgiving.

After Carly graduated and I no longer sent her monthly checks, she stopped speaking to me. She only contacted me when she needed something. Last fall, she had my first grandchild. I didn't even know she was pregnant until I got a card from her a few months after the baby was born. I still don't know the baby's name, sex or birth date or if Carly married the father. I don't even know who the father is.

I'm heartbroken, not only because Carly kept it a secret, but because Kathy also kept it from me. Kathy says she didn't want to get involved because it was between Carly and me. How do I deal with this? — Need Help in Kentucky

Dear Kentucky: You must forgive Kathy.

She was between a rock and a hard place, but she was right that the decision to inform you belonged to her sister.

Instead of focusing on how much this hurt, try to look for ways to mend your relationship with both of your daughters, especially Carly. You might even ask Kathy for help and suggestions. And sometimes a new grandchild can provide a reason to repair an estrangement. We hope so.

Dear Annie: Why do you try to find a reason (sleep apnea, low testosterone, etc.) for a man's low sex drive? Let's be honest. It's called getting older. Do you seriously expect men who are 50, 60

ACROSS OUR COMMUNITIES

EP rabies clinic set Saturday

EAST PALESTINE – The East Palestine Rabies Vaccination Clinic will be open from 1 to 3 p.m. Saturday at the East Main Street Fire Station. Cost is $5 per pet.

Alice Street sale extended

EAST PALESTINE – The Alice Street sale has extended to the business district on Saturday. Businesses in East Palestine will be participating in the annual Alice Street sale by bringing merchandise to the sidewalk.

Pluck It In The Bucket

MCCONNELSVILLE – Pluck It In The Bucket begins at 1 p.m. Saturday in Miner's Memorial Park along state Route 78 in McConnelsville. Mining and folk songs will be provided by The Big Muskie Bucket Impromptu String Band.

Pluck It In The Bucket is a free concert inside this world's largest dragline bucket. The bucket is all that is left of the machine known as Big Muskie.

This group of musician friends decided to check an item off of a buddy's bucket list, which was to play "Paradise" by John Prine inside the bucket. "Paradise" is about the destructiveness of strip mining. Although "Paradise" is not about Big Muskie itself, the machine was similar. Big Muskie moved so much earth and altered so much land that when Ohio passed strip mine reclamation laws, Big Muskie had to be destroyed.

Music continues until the rangers kick everybody out of the bucket. There will be a jam session after that and the band will be playing "Paradise."

East Palestine BOE to meet

EAST PALESTINE – The East Palestine City School District Board of Education will meet at 6 p.m. Monday in the EPES Media Center.

Home care interviews

Salem theater kick off

SALEM – The Salem Community Theatre will kick off its 2011-12 season in

Log House Museum

The Log House Museum in Columbiana will be opening for the summer months on Saturday. Museum hours from are 2 to 4 p.m. every Saturday and Sunday. All the displays in the lower level have been changed or added to and a new exhibit contains a hunting and fishing collection. The existing mastodon exhibit has been enhanced with information added including a large hand painted mural by Ralph Lumley of a mastodon in its natural habitat. In the annex, a Civil War display commemorates the 150th anniversary of that war. Dick and Gary Weber are showing their Harvey S. Firestone memorabilia. A special outdoor exhibit from 2 to 4 p.m. Saturday will be antique toy cars and trucks presented by Mike Solmen of Leetonia. He will also show his restored 1931 Ford truck. This exhibit is weather permitting. Pictured is Solmen with a toy truck in front of the Log House. (Submitted photo)

September with the swashbuckling adventure, "The Three Musketeers." Auditions are set at 7 p.m. June 12 and 13 at the theater. This updated version of the Alexander Dumas timeless classic tale of heroism, treachery, close escapes and above all, honor, has great roles available for women and men from ages 16 to 60. Roles include the young hot-tempered D'Artagnan, who travels to Paris to join the fabled Musketeers. His younger sister Sabine, who much to his dismay accompanies him; the evil, deadly and ever beautiful Milady DeWinter; the villainous Cardinal Richelieu; the lethal former musketeer Rochefort, the king and queen of France, and of course, the legendary Three Musketeers, Athos, Porthos, and Aramis, along with other great roles. Rehearsals are set to begin in July, with "Musketeer School" for all characters requiring fight scenes. This fast paced action/adventure/comedy opens Sept. 9.

Pittsburgh blows lead

Mets come up with biggest rally since 2000

NEW YORK (AP) — Neil Walker belted a two-run homer, and every bunt, blooper and bleeder from the rest of the Pirates' lineup seemed to be landing for a hit.

They had a seven-run lead on the New York Mets by the middle of the third inning.

Then it all went away.

Carlos Beltran's three-run homer started New York's rally and Pittsburgh failed to find an answer, watching the Mets pull off their biggest comeback in more than a decade for a brutally disheartening 9-8 loss on Thursday.

"That's why you play nine innings and that's what makes the game a challenge," Pittsburgh manager Clint Hurdle said. "Nothing is a given."

Beltran homered in the bottom of the third, then hit a leadoff double in the sixth as the Mets scored four times to tie it 7-all. Ruben Tejada delivered a go-ahead sacrifice fly off Jose Veras (1-2) in the eighth and Beltran drew a bases-loaded walk later in the inning.

It was the Mets' biggest rally to win since June 30, 2000, when they overcame an 8-1 deficit by scoring 10 times in the eighth to beat Atlanta 11-8, STATS LLC said.

The Mets' beat-up bullpen hung tough through the final four innings to salvage a split of the four-game series. Jason Isringhausen (1-0) worked the eighth and Francisco Rodriguez overcame an RBI single by Walker in the ninth for his 16th save.

"Completing the task is what we need to take from this," Hurdle said. "People at this level, no matter how hard, no one's going to give up."

Rangers wrangle Cleveland

Cleveland can't hold onto early lead

CLEVELAND (AP) — Endy Chavez had four hits and the Texas Rangers overcame a three-run deficit to beat the Cleveland Indians 7-4 Thursday night.

Yorvit Torrealba drove in two runs and Nelson Cruz twice doubled to start three-run rallies as the defending AL champions won for the fourth time in their last five road games.

Chavez had a run-scoring triple and scored in a three-run sixth against Carlos Carrasco (4-3) that put Texas ahead 6-3. His ninth four-hit game tied a career high. Since being recalled from Triple-A Round Rock on May 14, he is hitting .415 (17 of 41).

The Rangers had only one hit through four innings before tying the score at 3 in the fifth.

Cleveland dropped to 19-7 at home and 20-7 when scoring first. Carrasco couldn't hold a 3-0 lead but the Indians still have the best record in the AL.

Michael Kirkman (1-0) earned his first career win. The left-hander allowed one run over three innings in his 18th career relief outing. Neftali Perez pitched the ninth for his 12th save in 15 chances.

The Indians went 2 for 12 with runners in scoring position, twice making three straight outs with two runners on base.

Cleveland scored three times off Rangers starter Dave Bush in the second. Travis Buck and Orlando Cabrera each had run-scoring singles and another run scored on an DUBLIN — Rory McIlroy only gets to play three regular PGA Tour events this year. He showed Thursday why the Memorial Tournament was one of them.

On a Muirfield Village course that already ranks among his favorites, McIlroy had a birdie putt on his last eight holes and converted half of them on his way to a 6-under 66 to join Chris Riley in the lead after the first round.

McIlroy hit the ball so pure that he shot 32 on the front nine despite missing three birdie putts inside 8 feet.

"A great way to start the tournament," McIlroy said.

The 22-year-old from Northern Ireland narrowly made the cut at Wentworth in the BMW PGA Championship and wound up in a tie for 24th. Asked the difference between last week and this week, he replied, "It's about 30 degrees warmer."

A tournament known for its sloppy weather has been spectacular, and it showed in the scoring on a well-manicured course.

Chris DiMarco and Josh Teater were at 67, followed by a large group at 68 that included Steve Stricker, Dustin Johnson, Stewart Cink and Rickie Fowler, the runner-up at GALLOWAY TOWNSHIP, N.J. — Paula Creamer came to the ShopRite LPGA Classic a year ago wondering whether her surgically repaired left thumb would hold up for three days of play.

Her outlook on golf is much different these days, and it starts when she walks into her kitchen in Orlando.

Sitting on the table and serving as its centerpiece is the U.S. Women's Open trophy, the major that Creamer won shortly after returning to the LPGA Tour.

Creamer isn't satisfied with that or her current No. 11 ranking in women's golf. She wants to be up there with No. 1 ranked Yani Tseng, No. 2 Suzann Pettersen, No. 3 Jiyai Shin and No. 4 Cristie Kerr, the top-ranked American.

COLUMBUS (AP) — The lawyer for Ohio State quarterback Terelle Pryor has questioned the facts in a Sports Illustrated special report on the Buckeyes' NCAA problems, saying the story is "90-percent wrong."

Columbus attorney Larry James also said there is nothing out of the ordinary about the cars Pryor has driven or purchased.

"I think there's a misperception about Terelle, there's a misperception about the overall program as brought about in part by the Sports Illustrated article that everybody's just taken to the bank," James said Thursday.

In a lengthy cover story in this week's Sports Illustrated, released on Monday just hours after coach Jim Tressell's forced resignation, investigative reporter George Dohrmann writes that there was a country-club atmosphere at a local tattoo shop for Buckeyes players and that at least 28 of them are either known or alleged to have traded or sold memorabilia in violation of NCAA rules.

APNewsBreak: Justice Department to meet with BCS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department's antitrust division will meet with the BCS this summer, following up on concerns the department raised with the NCAA about college football's postseason format.

Bowl Championship Series executive director Bill Hancock told the Associated Press on Thursday that a Justice Department attorney last week asked for a voluntary background briefing on how the BCS operates. Hancock said he agreed to provide one, but that no date has been set yet.

"We view it as an opportunity to make it clear that the BCS was crafted very carefully with antitrust laws in mind," Hancock said.

The Justice Department initially raised its concerns with the NCAA, asking why there wasn't a playoff for college football's highest level and said there were "serious questions" about whether the current format to determine a national champion complies with antitrust laws.

But NCAA President Mark Emmert responded in a letter last month that the department's questions were best directed to the BCS.

Critics who have urged the department to investigate the BCS contend it unfairly gives some schools preferential access to the title game and lucrative, top-tier bowls at the end of the season.

Hancock said he wasn't concerned with the Justice Department's request for a meeting. "We take seriously any connection in Washington, and we're certainly taking this seriously," he said. "But I view it as an opportunity, because we're confident that the BCS is on strong legal ground."

Under the BCS, the champions of six conferences have automatic bids to play in top-tier bowl games; the other five conferences don't.

But Hancock said that the BCS, which was established in 1998, has improved access to such bowls for those other five conferences. According to the BCS, schools from those conferences played in such bowls only six times in 54 years, while under the BCS, it happened seven times in the past seven years. Hancock said the system has done a better job pitting the top two teams in a championship game.

Texas A&M athletic director Bill Byrne said at the Big 12 meetings in Kansas City that if the Justice Department were to break up the BCS, "I suspect what we will do is go right back to the old bowl system and the conferences will make their deals — the same things we used to have."

"Then it will give (the media) the opportunity to write editorials about how we should have a playoff system or bring the BCS back."

Hancock said the meeting will be the first the BCS has had with the department at least since he joined the organization in 2005.

He said he did not think that the meeting signaled an investigation. "Their staff made it clear this was simply a request for information," Hancock said. "They also said our cooperation was voluntary."

Justice Department spokeswoman Gina Talamona said the department continues to review information provided to it to determine whether to open an investigation into the legality of the current system under antitrust laws.

"It's not unusual for us to have discussions with knowledgeable parties on a particular matter," she added, but declined to confirm who the department was meeting with.

Matthew Sanderson, co-founder of Playoff PAC, which wants the BCS replaced with a championship playoff system, called the meeting "yet another sign that the Justice Department may be moving toward a formal investigation. The scandal-plagued BCS is in trouble on multiple fronts."

Even if there is no federal investigation, the BCS is already under fire from at least one state. The attorney general of Utah, Mark Shurtleff, has said he plans to file an antitrust lawsuit against the BCS. Before he was sworn in as president, Barack Obama said in 2008 that he was going to "throw my weight around a little bit" to nudge college football toward a playoff system.

In this Jan. 4, 2005 file photo, Southern California quarterback Matt Leinart rubs the head of coach Pete Carroll during the trophy presentation after beating Oklahoma 55-19 in the Orange Bowl at Pro Player Stadium in Miami. Now that the NCAA has denied Southern California's appeal to reduce sanctions imposed on its football program, Bowl Championship Series officials will consider whether to strip the Trojans of their 2004 title. BCS executive director Bill Hancock says there is no timetable for that decision, but he expected it to happen "sooner, rather than later." (AP Photo) 1932 — Lou Gehrig becomes the first major league player to hit four consecutive home runs in a game, giving the New York Yankees a 20-13 win over the Philadelphia A's. Gehrig's feat is overshadowed by the resignation of John McGraw, manager of the New York Giants for 30 years.

1944 — Bounding Home, ridden by G.L. Smith, wins the Belmont Stakes by one-half length over Pensive, the winner of the Kentucky Derby and Preakness.

1984 — Patty Sheehan wins the LPGA championship by a record 10 strokes over Beth Daniel and Pat Bradley.

1991 — Thomas Hearns becomes a world champion for the sixth time, capturing the World Boxing Association's light-heavyweight title with a 12-round unanimous decision over Virgil Hill.

1992 — Chicago's Michael Jordan scores a record 35 points, including a record six 3-pointers, in the first half as the Bulls beat Portland 122-89 in the opening game of the NBA finals. Jordan finishes with 39 points and Chicago is only two points shy of the largest victory margin in the finals.

1995 — Pedro Martinez of Montreal pitches nine perfect innings against San Diego before giving up a leadoff double to Bip Roberts in the 10th inning of the Expos' 1-0 win.

1999 — Four days after her first LPGA Tour victory, Kelli Kuehne ties the Women's U.S. Open record with an 8-under 64 in the first round to take a one-stroke lead over Juli Inkster.

2001 — Karrie Webb wins the U.S. Women's Open in a runaway for the second year in a row. Webb shoots a 1-under 69 for an eight-stroke victory, the largest margin at a Women's Open in 21 years.

2004 — Calgary ties an NHL record with its 10th road win of the playoffs with a 3-2 overtime victory over Tampa Bay in Game 5 of the Stanley Cup finals. The New Jersey Devils also won 10 road playoff games during their championship seasons of 1995 and 2000.

2006 — Jeff Burton has the biggest come-from-behind win ever in a Busch race, overcoming a 36th-place starting position in the Dover 200 for his second victory of the season.

the Memorial last year. Rocco Mediate was also at 68.

Fifty-one players in the 120-man field broke par.

Luke Donald, in his debut as the No. 1 player in the world ranking, recovered from a slow start by making four straight birdies toward the end of his round for a 70. He played with Masters champion Charl Schwartzel and four-time major champion Phil Mickelson, who each had a 72. Mickelson did that without making a single birdie on the par 5s.

Riley was in the first group to play in the morning and relied heavily on his putter and relied heavily on his putter to take advantage of the smooth greens, although scoring conditions were not much different in the afternoon.

"The less I think, the better I play," Riley said. "And today, I didn't have time to think. The pace of play was so good and I didn't stand around and think about shots. I just played golf."

This is the last tournament for McIlroy before the U.S. Open, a chance for the No. 6 player in the world to atone for his 80 in the final round that cost him a chance to win the Masters. That collapse hasn't stayed with him long. He was third the next week in Malaysia, and while he missed the cut while defending his title at Quail Hollow, he reached the quarterfinals of the World Match Play in Spain.

And now, the U.S. Open beckons — along with a chance to win on another stronger course in America.

"This is one of my favorite weeks of the year, one of my favorite courses," McIlroy said. "I feel as if it really does set up well for me. I like these sort of golf courses, the likes of here and Akron (Firestone) and Quail Hollow. And I'm swinging well, I'm hitting it good and I'm holing a few putts. Hopefully, I can keep it going for the next three days."

McIlroy likes to play the game through the air, the brand of golf most often seen in America.

But he doesn't get out as often. By giving up his PGA Tour membership, he is allowed to play only 10 tournaments. That includes the four majors and three World Golf Championships, with The Players Championship not counting against his number — although McIlroy chose not to play this year.

And that's probably not going to change soon.

"Even if I did win, I still probably wouldn't take my card up," McIlroy said. "As a European and playing in some European events over the summer, like the French Open and the Irish Open, we have a very busy summer of golf. And I felt like after the PGA last year at Whistling Straits, I wanted to take a couple of weeks off just to refresh. You couldn't really do it. You had a week off and then straight to the (FedEx Cup) playoffs. It was a lot of golf over a short period of time."

There's a lot of golf left in this tournament, as McIlroy knows well. And there are plenty of players behind him. Riley, Teater and DiMarco, who all played in the morning, are all ranked out of the top 250 in the world. Fowler is off to a slow start this year, but he looks right at home at the Memorial. Stricker has never had a top 10 at Muirfield Village in 11 tries, a strange statistic he would like to change. And then there's Johnson, who feels his game is about where it was last summer, when he nearly won two majors.

Donald has nine consecutive top 10s and is off to a solid start. For the 33-year-old from England, it felt slightly different from other tournaments, just because of the ranking attached to his name. "It feels good," Donald said. "I'm excited to be there and looking forward to the challenges. I heard a few 'No. 1' shouts and stuff like that, so you feed off that."

DIVOTS: Nick Watney, the No. 15 player in the world, had to withdraw because of an illness. He was replaced by Kevin Stadler, who didn't bring his regular caddie with him fearing he might not get in. Stadler turned to Rich Schlaack, who once caddied for Bob Estes and Steve Flesch until retiring years ago. "I'll lose 20 pounds by the weekend," Schlaack said. ... The tournament is down to 118 players because Derek Lamely withdrew after he was 10 over through 12 holes, and Joost Luiten of the Netherlands was disqualified. ... Kenny Perry, a three-time winner at the Memorial, was among four players who shots in the 80s.

ShopRite event at the Seaview Resort's Bay Course. "It's tough right now, and I'm not quite in that mix yet. I don't know what I am in the rankings, but I want to be higher without a doubt. I want to be No. 1 American, and I want to be the No. 1 player in the world, but that's not going to change overnight. I know that it's going to take some time."

Like many players on the LPGA Tour, Creamer has had difficulty finding her game this year with the lack of tournaments. The ShopRite is only the eighth official tour event and the second consecutive one in New Jersey.

The Sybase Match Play Championship was held in late May and then players had a week off with some playing in an unofficial event in Brazil.

Creamer, who has been working on swing changes this season, played well at Sybase, finishing tied for fifth. She lost in the quarterfinals to Kerr, who finished runner-up to Pettersen.

"I'm just trying to get it back, trying to get in contention on Sundays," said Creamer, who will turn 25 in August. "I miss it. I miss being in the winner's circle."

Creamer has nine wins on the LPGA Tour and two others on Japan's LPGA Tour. Her only win since 2008 came last year when she captured her first major in winning the U.S. Women's Open at Oakmont.

"I feel like I matured so much as a golfer and a person that week," Creamer said. "It was the hardest golf course I ever played and the fact that I won by four there shows that I can play, I can be out there, I can be the best player, and it motivates me more and more."

Creamer is excited coming back to ShopRite this year. She nearly wrote a storybook return last year after a three-month layoff. She was within a shot of the lead after two rounds before fading to seventh in the tournament won by Ai Miyazato.

The seaside course has been lengthened slightly and made tougher with fescue being put around the bunkers. And when the wind is blowing like it did on Wednesday and Thursday, the course will play even tougher.

"This golf course needs to play harder," Creamer said. "But it shows that not necessarily adding tons of length everywhere makes the golf course harder. Bringing the fairways in and changing the style of it is actually going to be a good thing. Length isn't everything."

Miyazato added even the grass seems thicker this year, so scores won't be as low.

"I love this golf course because I enjoyed it so much every time that I'm playing over here," said Miyazato, ranked No. 7. "It's because it doesn't just favor the long hitters. But this is a course that favors the long hitters and short hitters, and course management comes into play a lot."

The tournament lost one of its top attractions on Wednesday when Pettersen withdrew because of a lingering battle with the flu.

Tseng also is a question mark. She only played nine holes in Wednesday's pro-am because her shoulder hurt. However, she was hitting ball on Thursday and is expected to play.

NFL and players meet, court date next

Labor dispute has reached a critical stage

By BARRY WILNER
Associated Press

From talks in front of a mediator to arguments before an appeals court, the NFL's labor dispute has reached a critical stage.

The league and its players completed three straight days of not-so-secret talks Thursday. Now they head to court in St. Louis for a ruling that could prove pivotal in the nearly three-month lockout.

And while three judges from the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals consider whether to allow the lockout to continue, further talks between NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell, several owners, NFLPA chief DeMaurice Smith and some of his players might be held elsewhere.

Training camps, meanwhile, normally would open in about seven weeks. This, of course, is no normal year for pro football.

Ben Leber, one of 10 plaintiffs on the still-pending antitrust lawsuit against the league, said the players haven't discussed a specific drop-dead date for reaching an agreement to ensure the on-time start of training camps. But he said it's necessary to have one in order to reach a deal.

"Both sides have a day, whether they want to make it public or not," Leber said. "The biggest challenge is going to lie with whose day is going to come up first. Once it got to this point, I think it was just a good guess based on most corporate labor disputes that nothing was going to get done until the 11th hour. Now it depends on which 11th hour gets here first."

Goodell and owners Jerry Jones, Robert Kraft and John Mara were among those joined in a Chicago suburb by Smith and a group of players, including NFLPA president Kevin Mawae, before U.S. Magistrate Judge Arthur Boylan. Both sides issued statements saying they would honor a court-ordered confidentiality agreement. Boylan then canceled mediation sessions scheduled for Tuesday and Wednesday in Minneapolis.

A person with knowledge of the talks told The Associated Press that the term "settlement negotiations" doesn't necessarily mean an agreement is near. The person, speaking on condition of anonymity because of the judge's confidentiality order, said the cancellation of next week's sessions was simply a way to keep the process as private as possible.

More likely than any continued mediation with Boylan would be similar secret meetings between the league and players, who have been locked out by owners since March 12.

In the past, the clandestine approach has been a step toward successful negotiations between the league and NFLPA. Such meetings between former union executive director Gene Upshaw and former Commissioner Paul Tagliabue often led to progress on a new collective bargaining agreement.

The NFL was granted a delay in the execution of an injunction against the lockout in late April. Goodell, Smith and several owners are expected to be in court Friday.

The hearing might not be followed by a decision for weeks, although one sports labor expert believes it will be expedited. With the scheduled start to the regular season barely three months away, urgency is becoming the name of the game.

"They know that they have to move fast. We all know that training camps open in mid-July," said Jay Krupin of the Washington-based firm EpsteinBeckerGreen. "I wouldn't be surprised if some of their clerks are already starting writing their opinion."

New Orleans Saints safety Darren Sharper said he hasn't heard of specific drop-dead dates being discussed, but he believes by start of August, "something has to be etched in stone," as far as a new agreement.

"It looks bleak right now, but I'm thinking that something has to get worked out because too many people will be affected negatively if it does not get worked out," Sharper said.

At least the two sides were meeting for the last three days. Jones said it simply was good to be talking again, although not all the 32 team owners were made aware of the meetings before they began.

Indianapolis Colts owner Jim Irsay said last week he believed some decisions on opening training camps in late July needed to be made by July 4.

Cavaliers' Davis looking forward to draft picks

CLEVELAND (AP) — Baron Davis wore a Cleveland Indians jersey and cap Thursday night, and he's already excited about the future of his basketball team.

Davis took part in a first-pitch ceremony prior to the Indians' game against the Texas Rangers.

The Cleveland Cavaliers guard hosted a group of youngsters from a Cleveland public schools program in a suite for the evening.

The Cavaliers, who lost 63 games in their first season without LeBron James, own the first and fourth picks in the first round of the NBA Draft.

Davis says: "I thought it was great for the organization. I'm glad luck is on our side. I think those two picks will make us a better basketball team."

Notre Dame OT Romine transfers to Tulsa

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Former Notre Dame offensive tackle Matt Romine has transferred to Tulsa.

Romine played in nine games and started three times for the Fighting Irish last season as a junior. Tulsa announced Thursday that Romine had enrolled as a graduate student and will use his final year of eligibility with the Golden Hurricane.

Romine played in 24 games during his time at Notre Dame. He attended Tulsa's Union High School, where he played for new Golden Hurricane coach Bill Blankenship.

Tulsa won 28-27 at Notre Dame last season and ended up ranked No. 24 in the final AP poll.

Horne's 64 leads Wales Open; McDowell 3 back

NEWPORT, Wales (AP) — South African journeyman Keith Horne led the Wales Open after shooting a 7-under 64 in the opening round Thursday, with defending champion Graeme McDowell trailing by three strokes at Celtic Manor.

Horne made birdies on five of the last eight holes on his Wales Open debut, his 100th tournament on the European Tour since 2000. He shot 30 on the back nine of the links course.

Horne turned pro at 25 and turns 40 next week. He secured his European Tour card last year and is still seeking his first tour win.

"The golf course was playing as easy as it's going to play," said the 289th-ranked Horne. "The front nine was pretty tough because it was a bit cold and the ball wasn't going that far. The pins were pretty difficult on the front nine, too."

"Once I started to warm up myself and make a few birdies, I actually really enjoyed the back nine."

Ryder Cup player Peter Hanson was second after making four straight birdies from No. 14 in shooting a 65. The Swede was followed by English pair Steve Webster and Paul Broadhurst plus Alvaro Velasco of Spain, who all shot 66.

McDowell, Hanson's playing partner, was next in a group of six. He eagled the par-4 No. 15 with a 30-foot putt. But he failed with a birdie attempt at the next, the same hole where his 20-footer clinched victory over Hunter Mahan in the Ryder Cup last October.

"I guess I've used all my magic up on that green," McDowell said. "Overall, I'm very happy with the way I played. The course is running pretty fast and firm, so it's playing reasonably short. The greens are not as good as I've seen them here at Celtic Manor. The greens are very receptive and very soft and there's quite a lot of growth on them, so they are tough to putt on."

"Generally, very happy with 4-under par, very happy with the way I struck the ball and there were a lot of good things, a lot of positives out there."

John Daly, suffering from an ailing back, made four bogeys on the front nine and two on the back in a 77.

Elliot Saltman of Scotland, who completed a three-month ban from the European Tour last month for marking his ball incorrectly, had a hole-in-one at No. 17. He followed it up with an eagle in a round of 73, the same score as his brother Lloyd.

McDowell won the U.S. Open champion after a victory at the Wales Open last year. Despite missing the cut at the BMW PGA Championship at Wentworth last week, the Northern Irishman is mostly pleased with his game.

"I feel like I've got a better understanding for my golf swing and what I'm trying to do with it," McDowell said. "I can see my way around the golf course now. I was really happy with that ball flight, to see that coming back into my game was nice, and I drove the ball really solidly today as well."

Hanson, McDowell, Miguel Angel Jimenez and Ross Fisher are the only Ryder Cup players in the field, although captain Colin Montgomerie and vice captains Darren Clarke and Thomas Bjorn are also playing. Fisher failed to come through qualifying for the U.S. Open on Monday. He needs to play well at Celtic Manor if he is to regain a place in the top 50 and win a place at the tournament on Washington's Congressional course from June 16-19.

Bruins moving on after Burrows avoids bite ban

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — The Vancouver Canucks don't understand the big fuss about a little bite.

Neither did the NHL.

Vancouver forward Alex Burrows avoided a suspension in the Stanley Cup finals Thursday when league officials decided they couldn't prove he deliberately bit the finger of Boston's Patrice Bergeron during the Canucks' series-opening 1-0 victory.

Although the Bruins weren't terribly happy about NHL disciplinarian Mike Murphy's decision, both teams realize they've got bigger issues than the after-the-whistle shenanigans that happen constantly in the NHL, particularly under playoff intensity.

After all, players have been biting, gouging, facewashing, elbowing, grabbing, spearing — and don't forget punching — since probably the first period of the first game after Canada invented hockey.

"That's how French guys say hello to one another," joked

Alexandre Bolduc, who centered the Canucks' fourth line in Game 1. "You want to show respect, you put your fingers in someone's mouth."

Daniel and Henrik Sedin were relieved that such a silly incident didn't sideline their linemate early in what's shaping up as a gritty, goalie-dominated series heading into Game 2 on Saturday night.

Roberto Luongo shut out the Bruins with 36 saves, and Boston's Tim Thomas matched him in a penalty-plagued game featuring six power plays for each team. Raffi Torres finally scored with 18.5 seconds to play, giving Vancouver a series-opening victory and the accompanying 77 percent historic probability of winning its first Stanley Cup title.

"We need him out there," said NHL scoring champion Daniel Sedin, who took eight shots without a goal in Game 1. "He plays in every situation. Big part of this team. Obviously, we're happy to have him inside the rink."

Burrows wasn't made available to reporters after the Canucks' light practice Thursday at the University of British Columbia. The Bruins refused to get indignant about the NHL's decision, with Boston coach Claude Julien cautioning his players against whining about a single play in a chippy game. "I'm over it," Bergeron said Thursday after the Bruins' workout. "I'm looking forward to the next game. We've got to get back in the series. Like I said last night, it's the league's decision, and I've got to let them make it. ... I don't want to whine about that stuff. I don't care." After the game, Bergeron declared Burrows had bitten him while they scuffled after the first-period buzzer, even showing his bandaged right index finger and saying he planned to take antibiotics.

In the television replay that seemingly played on an infinite loop in Vancouver's bars and restaurants Wednesday night, Bergeron's gloved right index finger sure appeared to go into Burrows' mouth. Bergeron claimed Burrows then bit down on him, but Burrows denied it.

"It's too bad that something like that has to happen in the Stanley Cup finals," Julien said. "I think there's better ways of resolving issues than getting to that." Bergeron scoffed at the notion he had deliberately put his finger in Burrows' mouth. Both players had their gloves in each other's face at different points of the scuffle.

"We were both facewashing each other, and I didn't need to put my finger in his mouth," Bergeron said. "Why would I do that?"

Although fighting usually drops in the postseason, old-time hockey never goes out of style. Scrums and shoving matches have occurred after any whistle involving physical play throughout the 22-season career of Mark Recchi, Boston's veteran forward.

"That's part of the game — not the biting, but the physical play and the stuff after the whistle," said Recchi.

winds gusting up to 35 mph and bounced off the billboards overhanging the bullpens in right-center field.

"Fastball right down the middle," Pelfrey said. "That ball went a long way."

The Pirates tacked on another run in the third, when Dusty Brown walked, moved to second on pitcher Paul Maholm's base hit and scored on Paul's third single in as many innings.

"He had an outstanding game," Hurdle said of his speedy leadoff man, who swiped a pair of bases and scored three times. "He made a lot of things happen out there. It was good to see."

The Mets' rally began when Jose Reyes hit a two-out single in the third. Justin Turner followed with a single before Beltran launched a 1-2 pitch from Maholm into the teeth of the wind, the ball slamming off the facing of the second deck in left field.

New York pulled even in the sixth. Beltran doubled off the wall and Jason Bay drew a walk before Maholm retired the next two hitters. Then things unraveled for the left-hander. Nick Evans walked to load the bases and Tejada sent a two-run single to right. Daniel Murphy's pinch-hit RBI single knocked Maholm from the game, and Chris Resop's first delivery to Reyes wound up at the backstop, allowing Tejada to scamper home with the tying run.

Maholm allowed six earned runs to snap a string of 13 straight games by Pirates starters with two earned runs or fewer, the longest stretch by a major league team this season and the longest by Pittsburgh since September 1968.

"I lost my rhythm in the sixth and they took advantage of that," Maholm said. "They spot me seven and I give it up. It's not something that should happen and hopefully it won't happen again. They got off to a great start and I screwed it up."

NOTES: The Mets optioned LHP Mike O'Connor to Triple-A Buffalo after the game. They will make a corresponding roster move before Friday night's game against Atlanta. ... Mets RHP Taylor Buchholz (right shoulder fatigue) went on the DL to make room for Reyes, retroactive to May 30. ... Ronny Cedeno has gone 40 games without an error, the longest streak by a Pirates SS since Jack Wilson went 42 games in 2008.

There's too much pride involved."

Walker finished with four RBIs, Xavier Paul had a career-high four hits and Andrew McCutchen drove in a pair of runs for the Pirates, who had been playing better on the road.

They won their 17th game away from PNC Park on Wednesday night, matching their total from all of last season, and had won seven of 10 series as the visiting club.

The success looked as if it would continue early on.

Seven of the first 12 Pittsburgh batters singled off Mike Pelfrey. No. 13 was Walker, whose two-run shot in the second inning sliced through fall, with another player suspended for one game.

"Obviously, if you know these other kids that are in this Sports Illustrated article, if you spent any time around them, you know that that story is 90-percent wrong on those kids," James said.

Scott Novak, a spokesman for Sports Illustrated, said, "We stand by our reporting."

James said his firm had represented five of the players who have been suspended for accepting improper benefits from tattoo-parlor owner Edward Rife.

Asked again if he were saying the SI story was factually wrong, James said, "Factually, about the other kids, you will find in due time."

James said he didn't know if the players might have legal recourse against the magazine and hadn't looked at it because, "You've got to get through the first crisis first."

That crisis is the NCAA's investigation into improper benefits to Buckeyes players, and Tressel's knowledge of and a coverup of those violations. Ohio State spokesman Jim Lynch says the university is cooperating with the NCAA in an open investigation of the football program.

Among the areas the NCAA is looking into is the cars driven by Pryor over the past three years, The Columbus Dispatch has reported.

James would not say whether Pryor and his mother, Thomasina Pryor of Jeannette, Pa., have been interviewed by the NCAA yet.

Asked if he was representing the Pryors in NCAA matters, James said, "I hate to comment on that, as you know all those matters are confidential. But if you were to make that assumption you would not be incorrect." James provided the purchase agreement for the 2007 Nissan 350Z with more than 80,000 miles that Terrelle Pryor has been driving to workouts this week. Pryor's mother signed for the car, which cost $18,401.56. The Pryors traded in a Dodge Charger valued at $7,253, lowering the cost to $11,435.06 with the addition of all taxes, fees and ancillary charges.

James said Pryor's car situation has been blown out of proportion.

"Over that time period, he may have had three or four loaner cars, period," he said. "So you take the three cars that the mom purchased over that time period, and the loaner cars, and this is how the story gets turned into a tornado."

Officials at the Ohio Department of Public Safety said Wednesday that Pryor's driving privileges in the state had been suspended because he failed to produce proof of insurance when pulled over for a stop-sign violation on Feb. 19.

But James said Thursday that was not the case and that Pryor has always been insured.

"He's always had insurance. He had insurance during this time period," he said.

"It's my understanding that his license has been reinstated since he has shown proof. And I have a copy of the insurance policy in place at the time of the stop."

Canucks, Bruins go back to school during break

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Although Bruno Mars' skating probably needs work, the Hawaiian singer is upstaging the Stanley Cup finals this week.

Vancouver's Rogers Arena is occupied by concerts Thursday and Friday, forcing the Vancouver Canucks and Boston Bruins to go back to school for practice before Game 2 on Saturday night.

The clubs are working out Thursday and Friday at Thunderbird Arena on the University of British Columbia's picturesque campus southwest of downtown Vancouver. The complex also hosted men's and women's hockey games during the Vancouver Olympics last year.

Rogers Arena employees began dismantling the Canucks' boards and glass moments after Game 1 in preparation for a show by four-decade-old British band Supertramp on Thursday night. Mars and Janelle Monae take over Friday.

Both teams practiced only lightly on Thursday, with most of Vancouver's key players staying off the ice.

HANSEN'S HEROICS: Canucks forward Janrik Hansen is the first Dane to play for the Stanley Cup, and he credits Swedish coaching for the recent increase in NHL players from Denmark.

But after a slow start to his NHL career that included several stretches of healthy scratches, Hansen's willingness to adopt a decidedly Canadian style of play has kept him in the Canucks' lineup, even putting him in a big third-line role in the postseason.

"I got a couple of wakeup calls," Hansen said Thursday. "Obviously not being in a lineup is a big one. If you want to play on a team that's going to be competitive and compete for the Cup, you need to fill whatever role is given to you. You look at our lineup, there's only so many players that can play on the first and second line. If you don't have the skills that they do, you have to find a different way to contribute."

Hansen made a beautiful pass to set up Raffi Torres' goal with 18.5 seconds left in Vancouver's 1-0 win Wednesday night. He combined with third-line mates Torres and Maxim Lapierre to produce 10 hits and 10 shots, including several great scoring chances before the decisive goal.

Hansen didn't reach the NHL in a straight line, going back to the Canucks' AHL affiliate in Winnipeg for training stretches in recent years. He played alongside three-time Stanley Cup champion Mike Keane with the Manitoba Moose.

"I think he had a great role model in Mike Keane, who really helped him with positional play, penalty killing," Vancouver coach Alain Vigneault said. "It's paid off. He's been with us now for a couple consecutive years. He's logging important minutes. Last night was a great game where he used his skill set. He's real good when he plays with an edge. He played with an edge last night, and that came in very handy for us."

Hansen has two goals, five assists and a plus-7 rating while playing in each of Vancouver's 19 playoff games.

BOYCHUK'S BLUNDERS?: Johnny Boychuk has been on the ice for the last seven goals scored against the Bruins in the playoffs, but coach Claude Julien isn't about to air any complaints about the defenseman.

"Let's put it this way: At this time of the year, I'm not going to come in here and criticize my players," Julien said during a news conference following practice. "We're going to deal with it internally. I think what we have to do here is re-group as a team and play better."

In the final minute of Game 1, Boychuk lost the puck to Ryan Kesler. Vancouver's star center eventually got the puck to Jannik Hansen, who fed Raffi Torres for the game-winning goal — and further cemented many Bruins fans' frustrations with Boychuk.

"I think if you ask him, he knows he probably could have played that last goal a lot better," Julien said. "We all know that, but we all need to move on right now." Boychuk also has made important contributions to the Bruins' playoff run, including the game-winning goal in the series-clinching victory in Boston's second-round sweep of Philadelphia.

HIP CHECK: If Keith Ballard replaces injured defenseman Dan Hamhuis in the Canucks' lineup for Game 2 on Saturday, there's at least one thing the Canucks won't lose: The threat of big hip checks. Hamhuis was injured while going low to send big Bruins forward Milan Lucic head over heels in Game 1 Wednesday. Although Hamhuis staggered off the ice after the play, Vancouver coach Alain Vigneault declined to update his sturdy defenseman's condition, only saying he's day-to-day. Ballard is the logical choice to replace him, and the veteran blueliner has a history of sending opponents spinning in the air by lowering his hips — a lost art in the NHL.
