BP clerk robbed

Staff Reports

A clerk at the BP gas station on state Route 154 was robbed Tuesday afternoon by a young man with a knife, according to village police.

The clerk reported just before 12:30 p.m. a young man believed to be in his early 20s walked into the gas station and asked for a pack of a cigarettes. She turned around to find the would-be robber holding a knife. He ordered her to give him money, but the clerk hesitated and the robber told her not to make him pull out his gun, although there was no indication he was armed with anything other than the knife.

► LISBON

The clerk gave him an undisclosed amount of money, along with the cigarettes, and the suspect walked out the front door and ran into a field heading west toward town.

The robber was described as about 6 foot tall with a slim build and wearing a red ball cap and black hooded sweatshirt.

American Legion will honor vets killed in action with memorial stone

By KEVIN HOWELL

Staff Writer

LEETONIA — The American Legion, Joe Williams Post 131, is seeking names of area veterans killed in action while serving the country.

The names of the veterans will be engraved on the post's Memorial Stone in front of the facility. The search will include Leetonia and its surrounding communities including Washingtonville, Columbiana, Salem, Lisbon and East Palestine.

According to post Commander Bill Kegelmeyer, following the death last month of Alliance native 1st Lt. Ashley White Stumpf, post members decided to update the stone first erected during the 1980s. It currently displays 22 names, including 18 from World War

SALEM Council considers cell usage

By MARY ANN GREIER

Staff Writer

City council will consider adoption of a more detailed cell phone usage policy to add to the city employee policy manual.

Mayor Jerry Wolford talked about the proposal briefly during his report to council Tuesday night, saying the state auditors want a more detailed manual for cell phone usage and that city Auditor Betty Brothers compiled one for council to consider.

Council President Mickey Cope Weaver asked if it was something that needed to be adopted as an ordinance. Law Director Brooke Zellers said the initial policy manual was adopted by council as an ordinance and any changes

Committee discusses mineral rights leasing, truck traffic

By MARY ANN GREIER

Staff Writer

SALEM — City council's Committee of the Whole discussed more options for leasing the mineral rights for city-owned land and took no action Tuesday, but did raise another issue for consideration:

truck traffic on State Street.

The discussion of truck traffic came up while talking about the shale leasing issue and the affect the large trucks associated with drilling could have, with Councilwoman Rita O'Leary questioning whether they could restrict that traffic to certain areas.

Councilman Dave Nestic said the city service director was looking into whether the city could restrict truck traffic on State Street since it is a state route. Mayor Jerry Wolford said he recently talked to some representatives of the Ohio Department of Transportation and they felt there was a legitimate reason that the city could prohibit truck traffic regardless of whether it was a state route.

Nestic said it would be a good issue for council to look into in the

Paterno stands to receive six-figure annual pension

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Former Penn State football coach Joe Paterno's long service at the university theoretically puts him in line for a pension of more than $500,000 a year, according to an Associated Press analysis of state public pension records.

Paterno's pension records obtained Tuesday from the State Employees' Retirement System credit him with more than 60 years in the system.

The formula used to determine benefits makes him eligible for a pension equal to 100 percent of the average of his three highest-salary years.

His pay rose from $541,000 to $568,000 over the past three full calendar years.

When Paterno retires, he will have to make a set of choices to determine his pension, including whether to designate a survivor to receive benefits after he dies and whether to obtain a one-time, lump-sum payment of his own contributions.

State Employees' Retirement System spokeswoman Pamela Hile said Internal Revenue Code and Retirement Code benefit limits may also apply, so the agency does not issue estimated pension benefits ahead of time.

There also is a long-service supplement that could boost Paterno to 110 percent of his final average salary.

A 2006 report on Pennsylvania state pensions said the largest pension at that time within SERS was $254,000, being collected by a Penn State surgery professor who had withdrawn a $554,000 lump sum.

Paterno, 84, lost his job as head football coach last week after his onetime top assistant Jerry Sandusky was charged with sexually abusing boys, including some on campus, for more than 15 years.

Paterno has not been charged with any crime, and state prosecutors have said he is not a target. But he has come under criticism for how he responded when a graduate assistant said he saw Sandusky sexually attacking a boy in the football team locker room shower.

A grand jury report said Paterno contacted the athletic director but did not go to police, and he has said he wishes he had done more.

Sandusky has denied the allegations against him, acknowledging he showered with young boys and hugged them but saying his behavior was nothing more than horseplay.

He told NBC News' "Rock Center" on Monday that he is not a pedophile but should not have showered with the boys he's charged with sexually assaulting.

The retirement system also confirmed Tuesday that Sandusky collects a $59,000 annual pension and withdrew $148,000 upon retirement.

Unusual looking area deer caught on video

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

PERRY TWP. — If area residents notice a brown and white animal that looks like a cross between a cow and a deer like area resident Mike While did Sunday, it's not a figment of their imagination or the result of a late night. It's a piebald deer and it may or may not be someone's pet. While captured video of the unusual looking deer at 6 a.m. while on his way home on Plymouth Place. He later learned it was someone's pet and had returned home.

"I thought I drove by a cow in my neighborhood," he said.

The morning had already taken an unusual turn when he saw a Boston Terrier in the road that looked like his neighbor's dog and when he opened his door, the dog jumped in the van with him.

Next thing he knew, a deer that looked like a cow was staring at him.

"It's a very rare mutation of deer," he said.

He happened to have a camera with him and starting filming, not knowing for sure what the animal was until he came home and looked it up online. The video was then placed on YouTube, garnering a lot of comments. A friend of While noticed a tag in the deer's ear. There is a deer farm outside of Salem, not far from the area where the video was taken.

Scott Angelo, state wildlife officer assigned to Columbiana County, said piebald deer represent less than 1 percent of the whitetail deer population and do occur in the wild. He said it's just a genetic variation that causes some deer to have white on them. It does not affect their health.

He also said they are not protected, but there are people who say there's folklore to not shoot anything albino or piebald because it could cause bad luck.

"It's unique to see — it's not something you see everyday," Angelo said.

While did say the dog belonged to his neighbor and also returned home safely.

POLICE

SALEM REPORTS

— Jennifer Birchak, of the Shell gas station, in the 2200 block of East State Street, called at 12:31 p.m. Tuesday to report a recent problem with someone removing a vast amount of paper towels from the dispensers near the fuel pumps. A customer witnessed a man emptying four towel dispensers and leaving the lot, but got the vehicle registration. An officer contacted the man, who admitted taking the towels but said he did not know there was a limit on them. He said he would contact the store to see if they wanted the towels returned. The officer confirmed that he did call the store after speaking with him.

— An employee of a business in the 2300 block of East State Street, reported at 12:05 p.m. Tuesday that a male customer walked out without paying for his meal. Another customer strongly encouraged the man to remain and wait for police. Upon arrival, an officer learned the man did make payment and the owner was satisfied.

— A resident of the 1400 block of South Lincoln Avenue, reported at 9:52 a.m. Tuesday that someone cashed a check he accidentally signed for more than $300 at Consumers Bank in Lisbon. The bank instructed him to file a police report.

— A resident of the 800 block of Aetna Street, reported a suspicious person in the area of Maple Street at 7:11 a.m. Monday. An officer located the person in question and determined it was one of the local paper delivery persons.

— Police responded to a 911 hangup call at 6:58 a.m. Tuesday in the 200 block of Hawley Avenue and met with a female tenant who reported through her front door that she was unable to unlock her front door from the interior. An officer climbed through the window and was able to unlock and open the front door and storm door. A second 911 call was received for the same situation. She was told to notify her landlord about the problem and was provided the police non-emergency phone line.

— An officer on patrol at 5:24 a.m. Tuesday on North Lincoln Avenue found an apportioned license plate on the sidewalk in front of KFC. An attempt to contact the owner was made with no results. The plate was placed in the police lost and found.

— A resident of the 400 block of Penn Avenue, reported at 4:52 a.m. Tuesday that both sensor lights were activated in her driveway and she was concerned. Police checked the area and did not find anyone. They also checked her garage, residence and vehicle and there appeared to be no evidence of tampering.

— A woman and her father came to the police station at 11:29 p.m. Monday to report she was assaulted by her boyfriend at a residence in the 800 block of Morris Avenue. She said she had planned to spend the night and they started arguing and he assaulted her and threatened her. As she was leaving, she said he threw rocks at her father's van. No injuries were reported and there was no damage to the van. An officer spoke to the boyfriend and a female witness and they denied any violence or threats or assault occurred. He was told she no longer wants any contact with him.

— Officers found two city barricades destroyed at 11:12 p.m. Monday in the area of Newgarden Avenue and the railroad tracks. The barricades had been placed there by the fire department to keep people from driving through the high water after the area flooded from the storm.

— An anonymous person spoke to police at 10:44 p.m. Monday about drug problems in the city. The information will be forwarded to the Columbiana County prosecutor's office.

— A resident of the 2200 block of Merle Road, called at 10:06 p.m. Monday to report a suspicious vehicle. An officer located the vehicle and spoke with the occupants who said they were just talking. Nothing suspicious was observed. They were told to move along.

— A resident of the 100 block of West Pershing Street, reported loud music at 8:15 p.m. Monday. A resident was advised of the complaint and turned the music off.

— Police received a report at 6:58 p.m. Monday for an ambulance needed in the 200 block of Vine Avenue for a small child who accidentally fell and struck her head, causing a cut on her forehead. She was taken to Salem Community Hospital for stitches.

— Sergei Voithov, 27, of South Broadway Avenue, was charged with assault after an anonymous caller reported a domestic in progress in the 400 block of South Broadway Avenue at 6:44 p.m. Monday. Additional charges against Voithov will be sent to the prosecutor's office for review.

— A woman in the 400 block of East Fourth Street reported at 5:47 p.m. Monday that a juvenile walked past her residence and made comments about her husband. An officer spoke with the juvenile and her grandfather and she denied being in the area and her grandfather confirmed her story.

— A resident of Arrowhead Bay Avenue, Columbiana, reported his pickup was struck by a deer while eastbound in the 2500 block of East State Street near Sleepy Hollow Sleep Shop at 5:44 p.m. Monday. The deer fled, with heavy damage caused to the left side of the pickup.

SHERIFF'S OFFICE

— Carrie Brown, state Route 170, Rogers, reported at 1:47 p.m. Friday she and her husband argued, which led him to grabbing her by the hair and neck then throwing her to the floor. She also reported he grabbed her stomach and called her a derogatory name. She then went outside to call for help. He claimed during the argument she came at him and he grabbed her to try to protect himself.

— Leslie Penrod, Rose Drive, Lisbon, reported he ex-boyfriend was banging on her door and harassing her at 10:09 p.m. Monday. Deputies checked the area, but could not find him.

— Patti Colon, Foundry Hill Road, Salineville, reported at 7:31 p.m. Monday she refused her roommate's request to borrow her vehicle Sunday, but he took it anyway. He reportedly told her he drove into Salineville, went to a local bar and became intoxicated, then on Monday he told her he does not know where the car is. Deputies spoke to the roommate, who said he took the car, went to a girl's house and slept with her, leaving the keys in the car overnight. In the morning, the car was missing. He threatened to find the person who took it and make an example out of them, which deputies warned him against doing. Colon declined to file any charges against her roommate.

MUNICIPAL COURT

LISBON — In Columbiana County Municipal Court on Tuesday, a Nov. 21 pretrial was set for Sergei V. Voithov, 27, South Broadway, Salem, charged with assault. Salem police allege he threw a microwave oven at a woman, striking her in the leg with it while in the process of destroying the interior of his home on Monday. Police found him hiding in the basement.

Corey D. Cope, 20, Sherman Street, Lisbon, was sentenced to 180 days in jail and fined $100 for theft for taking a wallet, MP3 player, three packs of cigarettes and $30 in a money bag from a vehicle owned by John Penrod in February.

Cameron Short, 20, West Euclid Avenue, Salem, was fined $850, required 80 hours of community service and had his license suspended for 180 days for OVI first offense, underage consumption, hit skip and marked lanes. An obstructing official business charge was dismissed.

Michael R. Jordan, 32, Washingtonville Road, Salem, was fined $350 for criminal damaging after he kicked the windshield of a woman's vehicle several times while she was giving him a ride home, causing the window to crack.

Michael Franklin, 48, Farr Street, Rogers, was fined $150, required 25 hours of community service and ordered not to harbor or own any domestic animals for cruelty to animals for the improper care of a dog between June 19 and July 27. A second count of cruelty to animals was dismissed.

Ryan P. Mills, 21, Rootstown, was fined $150 for speeding.

Joseph W. Kemp, 57, Orange Street, Beloit, was fined $150 for disorderly conduct amended from domestic violence.

Alexander L. Ingold, 29, Tower Road, Salem, was fined $100 for no license amended from driving under FRA suspension.

Tyler J. Smith, 21, state Route 39, Salineville, was fined $100 for speeding in a school zone.

Matthew E. Addis, 23, Retreat Road, Kensington, was fined $100 for unsafe vehicle amended from a traffic control device violation.

Debbie M. Ernst, 32, Depot Road, Salem, was fined $50 for use of an unauthorized plate.

Travis T. Stauffer, 31, Girard, and Shadi A. Murra, 36, Boardman, were each fined $30 for speeding.

Lindsay K. Manypenny, 29, Pritchard Avenue, Lisbon, was ordered to pay costs only for an expired plate.

Luke A. Keagy, 27, Darlington, Pa., was sentenced to eight days in jail for improper handling of a firearm and failure to yield the right of way. Keagy's firearm charge stemming from a loaded handgun found by Columbiana Police in Keagy's glove box, was reduced from a felony to a first degree misdemeanor.

A Dec. 6 pretrial was set for Edward J. Hough, 47, Carmel Achor Road, Rogers, charged with OVI first offense and unsafe vehicle.

A Dec. 12 pretrial was set for Dillon K. Allen, 18, Fife Coal Road, Wellsville, charged with aggravated menacing and assault for a fight on Sept. 2 at a Lisbon football game and a separate incident on Sept. 6 where Allen allegedly punched at a man while wearing a pair of brass knuckles.

A Dec. 13 pretrial was set for Jason D. Mullins, 27, North Union Avenue, Salem, charged with OVI second offense, driving under suspension and speeding.

A Dec. 13 pretrial was set for Lindsey Nicole Miller, 35, West Lincoln Way, Lisbon, charged with OVI first offense and failure to control.

Still a need for Ohio bargaining reform

Clearly, Ohio Gov. John Kasich and conservatives in the General Assembly overreached when they enacted the law commonly referred to as Senate Bill 5. By including multiple provisions limiting collective bargaining by public employees, Kasich and lawmakers set the law up for disaster.

And that is what happened last Tuesday, when voters used Issue 2 on the election ballot to order SB 5 be rescinded. More than 61 percent of ballots cast were against SB 5.

Using an astronomically expensive advertising blitz, unions opposed to SB 5 limited the scope of voters' attention to the matter. A prohibition on collective bargaining over public employee staffing might mean not enough police and firefighters to keep Ohioans safe, the unions insisted. The law and other Kasich-administration initiatives would cost 51,000 Ohio jobs, they added — assuming correctly many voters would see Issue 2 — wrongly — as a job-preservation measure.

Now Kasich and conservative lawmakers must decide whether to try again. The answer to that is yes — and no.

An omnibus law such as SB 5 has no chance of being implemented. Enacting anything like a new SB 5 would invite merely another massive defeat at the polls.

Several provisions in the defunct law would appeal to voters if enacted as separate pieces of legislation, however.

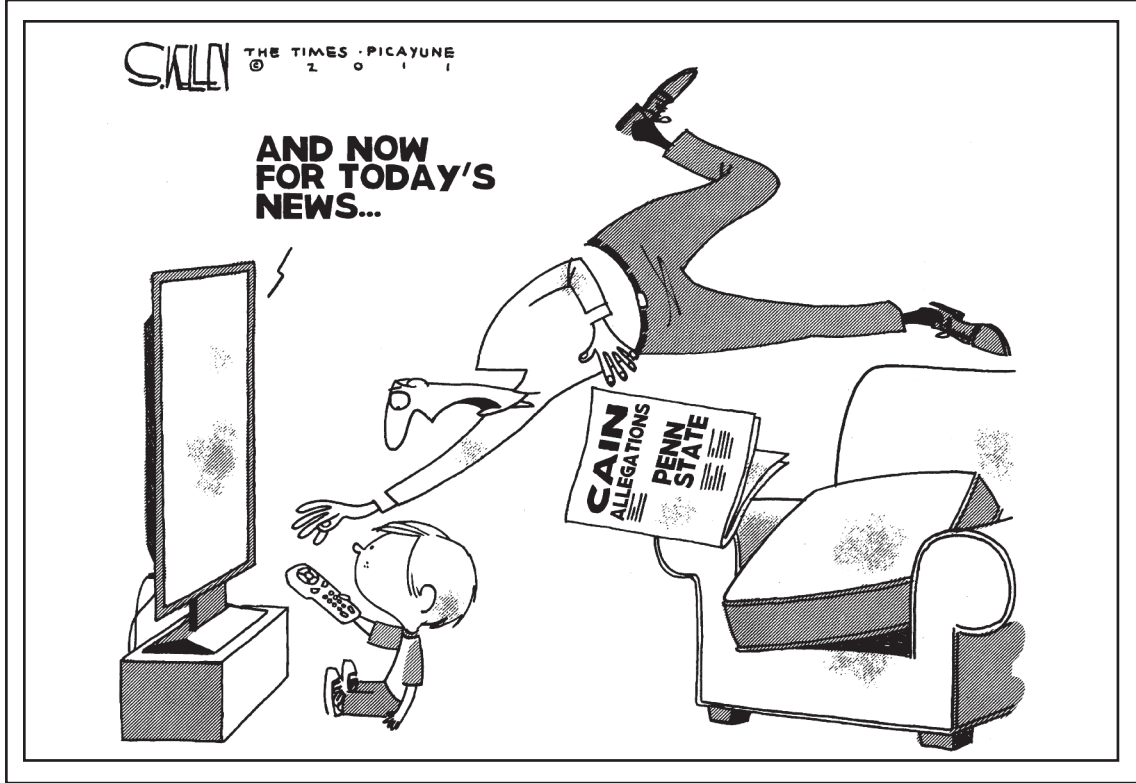

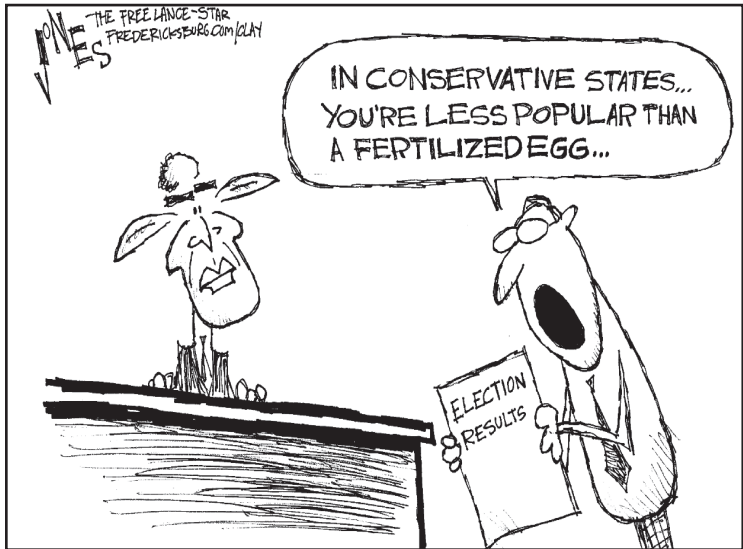

For example, SB 5 contained a provision requiring government employees pay at least 10 percent of the cost of funding their retirement benefits.

Few Buckeye State workers in the private sector enjoy defined-benefit pensions funded 90 percent by employers. Why should they — who pay the taxes used to keep public employee pension programs solvent — grant retirement benefits so much better than what they receive?

For those concerned about the quality of public schools in Ohio, another SB 5 provision made sense. It would have allowed cash-strapped school districts forced to lay off teachers to let the least effective go first, without taking seniority into account.

SB 5 forced voters into a take-it-or-leave-it situation. Many decided what they objected to in the law outweighed what they liked.

Breaking SB 5 up into a dozen or more individual parts would give voters more options, however. It is that route Kasich and legislators should choose to salvage something — for Ohio taxpayers — from the rout on Tuesday.

Kinder, gentler candidate

KATHLEEN PARKER

Most Americans would agree that the most memorable moment from Wednesday night's debate was when Rick um, um, um, whateverhisnameis couldn't remember the third leg of his own policy for streamlining the federal government.

With great conviction, Perry asserted that when he becomes president, he'll eliminate three agencies:

"It's three agencies of government when I get there that are gone -- Commerce, Education and, the, uh, what's the third one there, let's see. ..."

The 53-second eternity has been replayed sufficiently now that we needn't belabor the cringe-inducing amnesia of the 47th Texas governor. It was so bad that even disciples of schadenfreude ducked under their blankies and prayed for deliverance.

"Oops" was all that was left to Perry when he couldn't recall the third agency he would stomp beneath the heel of his Texas boot. "I can't," he said when pressed by moderator John Harwood. "Oops."

Oops, I can't remember? Oops, "I stepped in it" (as he said after the debate to reporters gathering for Perry's wake)? Or, oops, I don't really know what I think (as many undoubtedly concluded)? It's right there on my very own website -- RickPerry.org -- the candidate told several morning show hosts in a desperate media binge to salvage his campaign.

As Perry was free-falling into the abyss of lost thoughts Wednesday night, he turned to his fellow contestants as if to say, "Please, someone, can't you tell me what I think?"

Unhelpfully, Ron Paul suggested there were really five agencies he should cut. And then someone did try to help him, and this to me was the most memorable moment of the evening. From somewhere on the panel, a voice reached out to the struggling Texan, a suggestion that might help Perry gather himself and emerge from this utter humiliation.

The voice belonged to Mitt Romney. As Perry's brain was hardening into arctic pack ice, Romney suggested that maybe the third agency he wanted to eliminate was the EPA. Yeah, that's it! But no, it wasn't. Pressed by Harwood, Perry said it wasn't the EPA, but blast if he could remember what it was. (Later he said it was Energy.)

Romney's suggestion when most of the others were squirmingly silent was an act of pure kindness and self-sacrificing generosity. It was not especially noticeable. But if you were Rick Perry in that moment, you were well aware that Romney was the one who tried to save you. When Perry finally said, "Oops," it was Romney toward whom he looked.

Small, but not insignificant, this gesture of active empathy tells much about the man who extended it. He's a nice guy in a season of nastiness, a trait that may also be his greatest political failing.

Michael Medved, trying to figure out why Republicans don't love Romney, pointed to his lack of anger. These are angry times and people want their leader to be ticked off, surmised Medved. He may be right, both in theory and in his conclusion: This passion for anger is not good for the country.

Others insist that Romney can't earn people's confidence because he's too squeaky clean. Few can identify with a man who never touches coffee or alcohol, whose hair is as precise as the crease in his pants. Or, put another way, the figures in his business ledgers?

He seems preternaturally unflappable, which to some is too robotic, not-quite-human. We like some fallibility in our leaders and flaws in our protagonists. Perhaps Romney would benefit from a slight imperfection or some other handicap over which he has struggled.

Or might kindness and humility be handicaps in a mean, self-infatuated world?

Humility is a tough trait to communicate in a presidential campaign that requires confident self-promotion, though it is often apparent in Romney's debate face. He looks at others respectfully when they are speaking and his expression betrays patience and even a hopefulness that they will do well.

Romney isn't shy in reminding voters of his own accomplishments, but there are stories out there that tell another side to his character. Here's one related to me recently by someone close to the campaign:

Romney was shooting an ad on a hot day in a staffer's yard. While the photo shoot was being set up, Romney was asked to bide time in the cooler shade of the staffer's garage. When the staffer retrieved Romney 30 minutes later, he discovered that the candidate had swept and organized his garage.

A small thing. Or perhaps not.

Now it's the GOP booing the character issue

MONA CHAREN

I think I understand why the audience at Wednesday's CNBC debate booed Maria Bartiromo's question to Herman Cain about sexual harassment allegations. They don't believe there is any truth to them. They suspect, along with the candidate, that the women concerned are part of a liberal lynch mob out to smear another strong, conservative, black man. They know that accusations of sexual harassment are often nebulous and politically correct. If I guess correctly, they also believe — with considerable justification — that the press is less interested in the dry details of policy than in salacious tales of misbehavior. They resent being dragged into another smutty distraction.

As someone who was well disposed toward Herman Cain as a public figure, if not as a potential president, I cannot help recalling the response of Democrats to revelations about Bill Clinton. "We know all about it," one exasperated reader wrote to Newsweek Magazine, "and (set ital) we don't care (end ital)." In fact, the majority of Americans did not care, and it was not our finest moment as a nation.

Liberals, who professed to be appalled by the one accusation against Clarence Thomas (just one non-contemporaneous accusation — not four or five), dismissed Bill Clinton's behavior as no big deal. Stuart Taylor noted at the time that even if everything Anita Hill said about Clarence Thomas were true, it would not be nearly as serious as the allegations against Bill Clinton. Conservatives argued at the time, that character mattered. Liberals replied, in effect, that it didn't. But liberal hypocrisy, however malodorous, shouldn't justify our own. The booing, and some of the commentary among conservatives, can be interpreted to mean not only that we disbelieve the accusations, but also that they wouldn't trouble us even if they were true.

Alternatively, one gets the sense among some conservatives who are circling the wagons around Cain that the accusations are the reason to support him — despite his weaknesses on policy, experience and crisis management.

We don't know whether Cain is telling the truth that he "never sexually harassed anybody." I hope so. But we shouldn't be indifferent to the truth. No fewer than five women have filed formal or informal complaints against him. For days, he said he wasn't going to chase "anonymous" accusations. He continued this posture even after Sharon Bialek held a press conference.

It's certainly possible that the two women who received "settlements" from the National Restaurant Association were either overly sensitive or dishonest. But Cain, who initially denied the existence of settlements, has not encouraged the NRA to release all concerned confidentiality agreements, so that others can judge for themselves. He has not asked the NRA to disclose the findings, which he says proved at least one of the allegations to be "baseless." He has claimed that he does not know Bialek, yet witnesses saw them hugging at a Tea Party event a few weeks ago. If Bialek is telling the truth, it's an open question why she chose to embrace Cain. But if Cain is telling the truth, his memory lapses alone might disqualify him (along with the hapless Gov. Perry) from consideration for the presidency.

Meanwhile, Cain and his campaign have engaged in wild, unsubstantiated accusations of their own, lashing out at the Rick Perry campaign and accusing a staffer of orchestrating the leaks. Campaign Manager Mark Block later falsely suggested that Karen Kraushaar, one of the women involved in the NRA settlements, was the mother of Josh Kraushaar. "So we've come to find out that her son works at Politico," Block told Sean Hannity. Except that Josh Kraushaar (who now works for another publication) and Karen Kraushaar are not related. When Hannity asked whether they had checked out the story, Block said, "We've confirmed that he does indeed work at Politico and that's his mother, yes."

The ghost of Bill Clinton haunts the Cain campaign in other respects as well. After Bialek's press conference, the Cain campaign released a slashing attack on Bialek, itemizing personal bankruptcies, custody battles and other problems. It wasn't quite James Carville on Paula Jones ("If you drag a dollar bill through a trailer park . . .") but it wasn't uplifting either.

Bartiromo asked a perfectly appropriate question — character still matters.

Council

have been through ordinances. His recommendation was to adopt the new policy by ordinance, but he didn't think it was necessary to go through the Rules & Ordinances Committee.

When asked about the current policy in the manual, Brothers said it was one line to discourage the use of city-owned cell phones for personal use. During the annual audit earlier this year, she said the state auditors found the policy inadequate.

"We needed to get another one put together," she said. Using a model of a policy from the state auditors, Brothers penned a new policy which addresses the use of personal cell phones while at work and the use of city-owned cell phones for personal calls and discourages the use of cell phones while driving on behalf of the city.

"The city is in no way responsible if a user is cited in a jurisdiction that prohibits cellular usage while driving," the proposal says.

The proposal also noted that cell phone calls are not secure, telling employees to "use discretion in relaying confidential information."

In other business, Brothers said the pilot program for taxpayers to use credit cards to pay for income tax should be ready to go by the middle of January.

There will be no cost to the city, but taxpayers paying by credit card will be charged a convenience fee of 2.75 percent or $3.95, whichever is the least amount.

The payments will be taken through Official Payments and will be able to be taken in the office, over the phone or through the Internet.

Access for Internet payments will be through a link on the Salem city website. Visa, Mastercard and Discover Card will be accepted, along with electronic check payments.

If the pilot program works out, they may be able to use the credit cards for payment of other city services, such as utilities and zoning.

"We'll see how well it goes," she said.

Council approved an ordinance authorizing appropriations and transfers to pay for the state auditors for the regular audit, with $19,200 within the general fund, $6,400 within the water revenue fund and $6,400 within the wastewater revenue fund.

They also approved the appropriation within the capital improvement fund of up to $35,000 for a new pickup for the fire department, which had already been discussed and approved.

Service/Safety Director Steve Andres reported leaf pickup was continuing and will continue as long as people are putting out the bagged leaves. Parks Director Steve Faber said the parks department was also working on leaf pickup in all the parks.

He also offered thanks to the voters who supported renewal of the parks levy last week.

"We'll do our best to serve all the folks in Salem," he said.

During pleasure of council and during the reports of city officials, everybody was congratulating the winners in last week's election and thanking all the candidates for running and putting themselves out there, along with wishing everyone a happy Thanksgiving.

A Finance Committee meeting has been scheduled for 9 a.m. Nov. 23. A Utilities Committee meeting remains set for 6:45 p.m. Dec. 6.

"It shows our respect for veterans killed in the line of duty; it shows we have pride in our community, this area," Kegelmeyer explained. "Unfortunately, I know we've probably missed someone along the line and we'd like to get everyone if possible."

Kegelmeyer said the veterans do not have to be family of a post member.

"We know that (the veterans') families will probably want the respect," he noted. "They're heroes are what they are."

Although the goal is to have the stone updated by Memorial Day, Kegelmeyer said the update is a continuous project and community members are encouraged to submit names at any time.

Police chief: Car break-ins are back up

By LARRY SHIELDS
Staff Writer

GREENFORD — Car break-ins are back up, Police Chief Steve McDaniel told Green Township trustees at Tuesday's meeting.

McDaniel issued the same "lock your doors" warning to residents that he did at the last meeting, noting that "nobody did" after that.

"And we got hit again ... people need to lock their doors."

He said a Ravenna man was arrested in connection to the break-ins.

Brian K. Woofter, 40, is being held in Mahoning County jail on other charges and McDaniel said he is the "mastermind" behind a number of car break-ins, many occurring on Lisbon, Calla, Garfield and Beaver Creek roads.

McDaniel said Woofter led a group that has worked other areas including Canfield, Stark and Portage counties and Alliance.

"They don't mess with cars that are locked. They go up, try the door and if it opens it's fair game to them," McDaniel explained.

There will be additional charges filed, he said and Cpl. Rob Witten-soldner said the prime hours of operation for the thieves is usually from 9 p.m. until 5 a.m.

"They're looking for change and credit cards, those are the big things. They're passing by the cars that are locked," he said.

For October, McDaniel said the police recorded 435 events and drove 6,578 miles and noted that crashes, car versus deer, were up.

In other business, Fire Chief Todd Baird said a firefighter who was on the department for a year and failed to pass the firefighter's exam three times would have to be dismissed.

Trustees approved the dismissal with a 2-0 vote since Chairman George Toy was absent.

Baird also advised trustees on light issues, including a siren and emergency lights on two trucks (211 and 215) and requested additional lighting for inside the garage.

"It's always dark when we go there," he said, adding that the department will get its own radio frequency while noting a heater was installed in the ambulance.

In other business, Road Superintendent Rick Strabala said the bed on the 1-ton truck would need replacement by spring, noting they've welded holes in the floor.

"It's been fixed a couple of times," he said. He also advised trustees that the township has received right-of-way permission for ditching work in front of Green Star on Lisbon Road.

Trustee Mark Stepuk asked about winter preparedness.

"I hate to say snow ..." Stepuk said.

Strabala said two loads of No. 9 road salt was delivered and said the township "should be good to go."

Also, Zoning Officer William Pitts advised trustees on the status of nuisance properties, noting one that has a hearing scheduled on Nov. 3 before the Mahoning County Health Department.

"If he doesn't clean it up, he can deal with the health department," he said.

Pitts also requested that his wife, Barb, be appointed as secretary to the Zoning Board and the Zoning Board of Appeals, which trustees approved.

He also suggested getting alternates for both boards.

"It's a lot of work, because if we can't show up with a (full) board," he said and Stepuk said will be a reorganization meeting in January.

Also Stepuk said he was completing a $2,000 recycling grant with no matching funds required.

He said he would attempt to get with the Ruritans in submitting it.

"It's sort of a no-brainer," he said, "since it's no match."

Committee

As for the shale leasing, he said he would put together a meeting with the mayor and other parties who should be involved in the process, such as representatives of the Utilities Commission, and they would report back to the Committee of the Whole, which includes all seven members of council.

The Committee of the Whole already heard a presentation by a representative of DPS Penn, a company securing leases for Chesapeake Energy, about leasing city-owned property for mineral rights.

The city has more than 550 acres available for lease.

Last month, the committee heard a presentation about oil and gas drilling from Dr. Jeffrey C. Dick, an environmental petroleum geologist and chair and associate professor of geology at Youngstown State University.

Nestic told the committee that he, Wolford and Law Director Brooke Zellers met recently with a land lease aggregator who puts together lease deals for large groups as a means to get a better price for the group.

He said the city's options include dealing with DPS Penn, going it alone with an attorney and cutting a deal directly with a gas company or going with an aggregate group of landowners.

Nestic said it was his preference not to go it alone. He said the aggregator was pretty convincing and explained there are things in a lease that they would need to be cognizant of, such as the definition of a drilling unit.

He said the aggregator takes a percentage of the initial payment given for signing the lease, but does not get any part of the payment for mineral rights.

During questions about the land the city has available for lease, Utilities Superintendent Don Weingart said the city already has a gas lease that would have to be looked at. He said they get a check every three months for $35 for what it's producing.

It was also noted that a lot of the land deeded to the city was purchased through the Utilities Commission.

Window closing to avoid 2 Ohio primary elections

COLUMBUS (AP) — The leader of the Ohio House says state lawmakers are still discussing a revised congressional map and have yet to reach an agreement.

House Speaker William Batchelder says he and fellow Republicans had wanted to pass the measure Wednesday. But Batchelder spokesman Mike Dittoe says it doesn't make sense bring the bill to the House floor without the votes to make it take effect immediately.

Republicans would need seven votes from Democrats.

U.S. House district lines approved in September are in limbo pending a Democratic repeal effort.

State lawmakers would need to pass a revised map before Dec. 7 to avoid holding a presidential and U.S. House primary in June and other primary contests in March.

Wednesday is the last scheduled voting session for the Ohio House this month.

What's Your Christmas Antique Story...

Are you an antique collector that loves nothing more than discovering antiques and finding out what a particular antique is worth or where it came from?

Do you love the Christmas season and the special joy of finding a Christmas treasure that you know you will love and cherish forever to help celebrate that wonderful time of the year?

Then join the "Antiques and Collectibles Road Show" at Columbiana Antiques on Saturday, November 20, after the parade on Main Street during the city's annual "Christmas in Columbiana" festivities.

Store manager, Larry Deidrick, a knowledgeable antique-lover, has set up the "Christmas Antiques Road Show," where you can show off and talk about your special Christmas antiques finds and rare Christmas antique discoveries in this popular downtown antique mall.

If you're unsure of what your special Christmas antique treasure is worth, join the Christmas fun on November 20th and bring it in to find out!

Woman charged with recanting abduction story pleads no contest

HILL And, she had another story to explain her actions to Judge Mark Frost.

When asked by Frost what actually happened, Hill, 41, Commerce Street, Salineville, reiterated much of what she said originally:

She said she was abducted by two people along the edge of Cameron Road. She said there was a woman walking along the edge of the road carrying a baby doll and when Hill stopped to help her, she was shown a gun. Hill said she later found out there were no bullets in it.

She further claimed she was abducted and beaten as she drove just as she initially had reported on July 5. Investigators from the sheriff's department spent countless hours investigating the alleged incident over the next week.

In new details, Hill told Frost she was approached days later by a woman, who told her they were in trouble and needed help. Hill said they (presumably the people who she claimed had abducted her) were forced to do what they had done.

"They were living in a bad situation," Hill said, adding it was abusive and children were being molested.

So feeling like she needed to help these people, Hill said she went to the sheriff's department and asked them if she could drop the charges. At that point, the detective interrogated her and charged her with falsification.

Frost further questioned her decision-making in the story, noting, "So there are people out there who abducted someone and they are getting away with it?"

"You didn't trust the sheriff and the system to sort this thing out?" Frost asked Hill.

"I could help them out or I could crush them," Hill said of those responsible for her abduction. "I helped them."

Frost also asked her what she would do differently next time. Hill responded she would not stop to pick someone up. She would call the police instead.

Hill was sentenced to 180 days in jail with 170 suspended.

She was fined $250, ordered to perform 40 hours of community service, required to take her medication as prescribed and continue her counseling.

Frost also reminded her that investigating her story took up valuable time and the sheriff's department is already "stretched thin" sometimes having difficulty helping the people who need or want it.

United Local students holding wreaths sale
Orders are still being accepted for the Christmas wreath sale sponsored by the United Local Junior Class. Cost is $12 each or with a bow for $15. Orders may be sent in through any United Local student with your name, phone number, quantity of wreaths, and payment in an envelope marked Betty White-leather. Orders may also be mailed in to 8143 state Route 9, Hanoverton, Ohio 44423 or called in at 330-223-1521. The order deadline is Friday. The wreaths may be picked-up between 1 and 3 p.m. Dec. 1 in the high school office. All profits from this fund raiser assist in deferring costs for the students to attend the prom. (Submitted photo)

United Local will honor vets with production and dinner

Stage Left Youth Players on stage this weekend

Roethlisberger played through the injury Sunday

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Ben Roethlisberger has an unexpected home-work assignment during the Pittsburgh Steelers' bye week: protecting a fractured right thumb.

Roethlisberger injured the thumb on his throwing hand sometime during Pittsburgh's 24-17 win over Cincinnati on Sunday. He's not sure when it happened, only that he noticed it while coming out for the second half. "It was hard to determine it on the sideline, but we did all the tests (Monday), and it's fractured in there," Roethlisberger said.

Roethlisberger didn't miss a snap as the Steelers improved to 7-3. He completed 7 of 11 passes for 70 yards in the second half, including a perfect 4-for-4 during the game-winning drive in the third quarter. "It hurt, but (Steelers head trainer) John Norwig did a great job taping it up, making a quick splint out of tape and going with it," Roethlisberger said. "Squeezing the ball is the hardest part, but it's a good thing that I had a glove on it because that helps gripping it a little bit." This isn't the first time Roethlisberger has played with a busted thumb. He suffered a similar injury in 2005, though it didn't prevent him from

COLUMBUS — Everybody's got a solution for what ails Ohio State. Interim coach Luke Fickell said he was grilled by fans at a meeting with a booster group on Tuesday morning. "Sorry about that," he said after he showed up a few minutes late for his weekly news conference. "The Quarterback Club had a lot more questions today." One persistent member of that club wanted to know why the Buckeyes only run on first and second downs and only throw on third. "He told me when he was coaching high school, 'We threw it on first, threw it on second and then ran draw plays

MELBOURNE, Australia — The motto for Tiger Woods these days is to move forward, and that covers a lot of territory. Woods nearly made it through his entire interview Tuesday at the Presidents Cup before he was asked about the prospects of playing Adam Scott and caddie Steve Williams, who caused such a stir over a racial comment he made to disparage Woods two weeks ago. Would it not be better to face him early and get it out of the way? "It's already done," Woods said. "I addressed it last week and I said life goes forward, not backward." He is ready to put behind a summer of injuries, es-

Offensive line paving the way

Coppock, Blower benefitting from Rebels up front

COLUMBIANA — After Friday's victory over Louisville St. Thomas Aquinas, Crestview quarterback Adam Coppock credited his offensive line with being the reason he and running back Nick Blower are able to put so many points on the board and he was right.

Without the offensive line, Coppock would be sacked every play. Blower would never find a hole in the defense and kicker Zack Moore would never have been able to get his 57 extra points.

"Our offensive line right now is playing the best that we've played and they just keep getting better it seems every week," Crestview football coach Paul Cusick said. He said the line can adjust easily when he needs them to and they communicate well. "That's important with what we do because we play an up-tempo game where we don't huddle and they have to go right to the line, take the snap and go," Cusick said. On the outside of line are tackles Josh McDade and Mike Mayer supported by tight end Dimitri Gregory. "My favorite game memories are playing with (Mayer) on the left side or playing with (McDade) on the right side," Gregory said. "It's fun to double team with them both because you know that man 1929 — Southern California and Notre Dame play before 112,912 at Soldier Field in Chicago, with the Fighting Irish prevailing 13-12. It's the third time in the 1920s that the two schools attract more than 112,000 fans.

Nov. 16

1957 — Notre Dame ends Oklahoma's NCAA record 47-game winning streak with a 7-0 triumph.

1957 — Bill Russell of the Boston Celtics sets an NBA record with 49 rebounds in a 111-89 victory over the Philadelphia Warriors.

1962 — Wilt Chamberlain scores 73 points, including 45 in the first half, to lead the San Francisco Warriors to a 127-111 victory over the New York Knicks.

1968 — Ron Johnson rushes for 347 yards and scores five touchdowns to lead Michigan to a 34-9 rout of Wisconsin.

1980 — Doug Williams of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers passes for 486 yards and four touchdowns in a 38-30 loss to the Minnesota Vikings.

1982 — The NFL Management Council and the NFL Players' Association announce settlement of a 57-day player strike.

1991 — Gerry Thomas of No. 1 Florida State just misses a 34-yard field goal with 25 seconds left, giving No. 2 Miami a 17-16 victory.

1996 — Byron Hanspard of Texas Tech becomes the sixth major-college player to run for 2,000 yards in a season, rushing for 257 yards and four touchdowns in the Red Raiders' 56-21 victory over Southwestern Louisiana.

1996 — Corey Dillon sets an NCAA rushing record for a quarter, gaining 222 yards on 16 carries in the first period as No. 15 Washington overwhelms San Jose State 53-10.

1997 — Philadelphia's 10-10 tie at Baltimore is the first NFL tie since Kansas City tied Cleveland on Nov. 19, 1989.

2002 — Larry Johnson rushes for 327 yards, a career-high four TDs and shatters the 31-year-old school career rushing record, leading Penn State to a 58-25 victory over Indiana.

2008 — Jimmie Johnson locks up his third consecutive NASCAR championship with a solid 15th-place run in the final race of the season, beating Carl Edwards by 69 points. Johnson joins Cale Yarborough as the only drivers in NASCAR history to win three straight titles.

2008 — Pittsburgh rallies to beat San Diego 11-10, the first such final in NFL history, spanning 12,837 games.

2009 — The NFL fines Titans owner Bud Adams $250,000 for making an obscene gesture at Buffalo fans while celebrating Tennessee's 41-17 victory over the Bills.

2010 — Top-ranked Connecticut wins its 80th straight game, 65-64, holding on when No. 2 Baylor misses a long shot at the buzzer. Trailing 56-48 with 6:42 left in the game, Maya Moore and freshman Bria Hartley help UConn close the game on a 17-8 run.

PENN STATE SCANDAL

Sandusky TV interview could haunt him at trial

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Former Penn State assistant football coach Jerry Sandusky's admission that he showered with and "horsed around" with boys could be used by prosecutors trying to convict him of child sex-abuse charges.

Experts in criminal law and crisis management questioned Sandusky's decision to give a TV interview in which he said there was no abuse and that any activities in a campus shower with a boy were just horseplay, not molestation.

"Mr. Sandusky goes on worldwide television and admits he did everything the prosecution claims he did, except for the ultimate act of rape or sodomy? If I were a prosecutor, I'd be stunned," said Lynne Abraham, the former district attorney of Philadelphia. "I was stunned, and then I was revolted."

Abraham, who led a grand jury probe involving 63 accused priests from the Philadelphia archdiocese, was retained this week to lead an internal investigation of The Second Mile, the children's charity founded by Sandusky, from which he allegedly culled his victims.

The child sex-assault charges filed against Sandusky this month have toppled Penn State's longtime football coach, Joe Paterno, and the university's president, Graham Spanier. The school's athletic director and vice president are accused of not reporting what they knew to police and have left their posts.

Sandusky is charged with abusing eight boys over the span of 15 years. He told NBC on Monday that he was not a pedophile but, in retrospect, should not have showered with boys.

"I could say that I have done some of those things. I have horsed around with kids. I have showered after workouts. I have hugged them, and I have touched their legs without intent of sexual contact," Sandusky said Monday on NBC News' "Rock Center." "I am innocent of those charges."

When NBC's Bob Costas asked him whether he was sexually attracted to underage boys, Sandusky replied: "Sexually attracted, no. I enjoy young people, I love to be around them, but, no, I'm not sexually attracted to young boys."

Sandusky apparently decided to talk to Costas by phone Monday at the last minute, with the blessing of his attorney, Joseph Amendola, who was in the studio.

on third and it was really successful," Fickell said. Then he added, "If Penn State's listening, that might be our game plan."

There are plenty of problems for players, coaches and fans to address.

The Buckeyes (6-4, 3-3 Big Ten) got off to a miserable start, showed rare flashes of being able to move the ball, but ultimately fell 26-23 in overtime at Purdue on Saturday. Now they have to address all the things that went wrong, and some that have been going wrong all year, before taking on the 21st-ranked Nittany Lions (8-2, 5-1) on Saturday in their home finale.

The No. 1 problem facing the Buckeyes is an offense — particularly a passing game — that has had great difficulty making plays.

Over the last five games, they've completed just 27 of 63 passes (43 percent) for 401 yards, an average of just 80 yards per game.

Purdue dared the Buckeyes to throw the ball. And they couldn't.

"A lot of it has to do with where they're at with the quarterback position," Boilermakers coach Danny Hope said after the game. "Even though (Braxton Miller) is a very talented quarterback, he's a freshman, and normally a freshman quarterback can't come out there and manufacture a passing offense."

As a result, the Boilermakers crowded the line with eight or nine defenders and matched up with any receivers. As a result, Ohio State was limited to 166 yards on the ground — 101 yards fewer than it had averaged over the previous four games.

the defensive linemen and I felt (Blower) touch me as he went by then he was just gone," he said.

Half back Matt Hardenbrook said it's his job to protect Blower when he goes on the big runs.

"He's like my little bro out there. I'm supposed to lead block for him, make sure nothing bad happens to him and make those holes," he said.

He said he always tries to get in front of him and get the extra block, but once Blower's gone, he's gone.

Hardenbrook said some of his favorite moments in games were the hard hits where "you sacrifice everything, just put your head down and take the hit."

"You know you've got to take it and coming back to and seeing (Blower) in the end

Miller was 8 of 18 passing for 132 yards and two touchdowns.

"You've just got to be able to make a few yards and rely on some of those guys up front even if they are putting in the extra guys," Fickell said. "Obviously there are a lot more questions. We all know. We've said it a million times: Balance has got to be the key. We've got to create and find some more of that whether it's throwing it or screening it or drawing it like the guy from the Quarterback Club said."

Fickell said one of the problems is that receivers aren't getting open. The return of DeVier Posey might solve that.

Posey has had two different NCAA suspensions — both for accepting improper benefits, first from a tattoo-parlor owner for signed memorabilia and the second for being overpaid for a summer job — totaling 10 games. He returns to the Buckeyes just in time to play in his final game at Ohio Stadium.

His loss has been felt more than anyone might have guessed. He was the second-leading receiver last year with 53 catches for 848 yards and seven touchdowns. All of this year's wide-outs — in 10 games — have combined for 46 catches for 745 yards and five touchdowns.

Posey also brings a level of consistency, something sorely lacking in the receiving corps. He has caught a pass in 27 consecutive games.

Two other prominent players who served at least five-game suspensions for improper benefits, offensive tackle Mike Adams and running back Dan "Boom" Heron, started the very first game they were available.

But Fickell wasn't ready to declare Posey a starter.

"I don't know yet. We've got to go out there and see how that whole thing works out," he said. "He'll have an opportunity. We'll see how practice goes, and we'll see as we get closer to get game time."

Ohio State is also dealing with problems on defense — opposing teams have converted on 53 percent of their third-down plays over the last two games — and special teams. It was a blocked extra-point kick in the final minute that allowed Purdue to force the overtime. Fickell is confident the Buckeyes can bounce back from their latest defeat. He said they were upbeat when they showed up at the football facility the day after the game.

"Yes, they're disappointed. Yes, they're hurt," he said. "They've got a passion to play. They've got a passion to get better. They're not happy with where they are, so that was the greatest thing to see come Sunday."

across from me isn't going to get through."

Gregory's role on the field is to assist the tackles in sealing the edge or opening a hole on the outside.

"Me and McDade or me and (Mayer) just put our hands them and drop them in to the ground," he said.

McDade said the whole season has gone by fast, but he's enjoyed all of it.

"Double teaming with Dimitri is always fun," he said. "We take the dude next to us to the next level."

Mayer said one of his most memorable game moments was the first touchdown of the Cuyahoga Heights game.

"I barely just got in front of zone or seeing Coppock in the end zone, that feels great," he said.

Hardenbrook said there were a lot of questions about how good their line was going to be, but they are amazing.

"We're small, we're new, we're really surprising people," he said.

Cusick said they're playing great as a unit this year.

Between the tackles and the center are the guards, Tom Rambo and Dustin Gorby.

Rambo said his role on the field is to get in front of people, getting to where he needs to be and making holes for the ball carrier.

He said he's had a pleasure playing with the team the entire season, but could not identify one moment that stood out over the rest.

"I'm not really thinking about that right now," Rambo said. He said he is looking forward to Friday's game against Kirtland in Warren.

Gorby said it can sometimes be intimidating as a sophomore going against teams with bigger guys, but he just has to get lower than them and he can win.

"All the games have been memorable," Gorby said.

"It's been a great season coming in as a sophomore and starting."

Between the two guards is center Tyler Dickey who snaps the ball to Coppock.

"I haven't been in a whole lot of games this year because I've been out with an elbow injury," Dickey said. He missed five games but healed in time for playoffs.

"Everybody welcomed me back real easy, we were clicking again, it was good to be back," he said.

He blocks for the running backs Coppock.

"I play a small role on a big team," Dickey said.

Mayer praised Crestview's offensive linemen coach Dom Perry saying he's one of the best coaches he's ever played for.

"He's a heck of a guy," Mayer said.

As for Kirtland, Mayer said they're a quick team overall, but he knows they can beat them.

His partner on the line, Gregory said Kirtland seems quick up front and pretty big, but he predicted a win as well.

"We know it's going to be a tough match up this week, but we have all the confidence in the world to beat them," Gregory said.

Buford leads Ohio State to 81-74 win

COLUMBUS (AP) — Florida was hitting 3-pointers and the crowd was surprisingly quiet. It was a telling moment for Ohio State.

“It seemed like it was going to be a long night,” Buckeyes guard Aaron Craft said.

But with William Buford scoring 21 points, No. 3 Ohio State survived the seventh-ranked Gators’ quick start for an 81-74 win on Tuesday night.

Jared Sullinger added 16 points, Deshaun Thomas scored 15 and Craft had 13 points and seven assists for the Buckeyes (2-0), who forced 16 turnovers and hit 27 of 34 free throws to lead by double figures for most of the final 20 minutes.

“I didn’t know how we were going to play tonight,” coach Thad Matta said of his team, which has just one senior (Buford) and one junior. “During the drive in the morning I was saying, ‘What if? What if?’ But I thought we played with good composure. They knocked us early by making shots and our guys did a nice job of continuing to play and weathering the storm.”

Freshman Bradley Beal

had 17 points, Kenny Boynton 15 and Patric Young and Erik Murphy 14 apiece for the Gators (1-1), who have never beaten a top-3 team in a true road game. Down as much as 16 points, they got as close as five with under a minute left before Buford sealed it with two foul shots.

“Obviously, we got off to a really good start, which I think you want to do on the road,” Florida coach Billy Donovan said. “The difference was our defense in the first half was really, really good. For a period of time there, shots were not going in for us and we needed to have a better resiliency in terms of understanding that we have to go back and play defense.”

The game matched teams that won their conferences a year ago but were trying to replace three lost starters.

One of the new starters for Ohio State is Craft, a sixth man as a freshman last season who usually ended up playing 35 minutes a game. Donovan said the difference in the game was the pesty Craft.

“Clearly he dominated the game from start to finish,” he said. “He was the whole key. He physically manhandled our guys — steals, strips, loose balls and drives.”

The Gators jumped out to an 11-4 lead and the Buckeyes appeared to be back on their heels. By scoring 13 of the last 18 points of the half, they took a 35-32 lead.

With Sullinger controlling the lane, Buford scoring from both outside and inside, and Craft seeming to get a hand on every Florida pass and have a hand on every Ohio State assist, they pulled away.

“We did a good job adjusting as a team and getting it under control,” Craft said.

Ohio State scored the first five points of the half for an eight-point edge and never let the Gators cut into the lead until the final minute.

Still, Sullinger picked up his third foul with 13:58 left and soon after headed to the bench. With Evan Ravenel filling in and Buford and Craft setting the pace on offense, the Buckeyes didn’t blink at the loss of their pre-season All-American.

“Their guards are just terrific,” said Beal, a national high school player of the year last season. “From Aaron Craft on to Buford and all the others, they all contributed.”

Ravenel had two baskets in a 6-1 run for a 50-38 lead.

Buford scored six in a row for Ohio State to swell the lead to 59-44.

A rested Sullinger then returned to the lineup.

The foul line helped the Buckeyes maintain their advantage the rest of the way. Florida was just 13 of 21.

“Florida stung us early,” Matta said. “As young as we are, we were constantly making adjustments out of timeouts. We kept playing and offensively we did a better job of executing. We did not play perfect. I told the coaches, we’re going to look at this and there’s a lot of things we have to learn. But for our program, we beat a great basketball team tonight.”

Ohio State has won eight of the 12 meetings, but the Gators captured the big one. They beat the Buckeyes 84-75 to clinch their second straight national championship on April 2, 2007.

Sullinger said the win didn’t mean much.

“As young as we are, we’ve only played two games. They’ve only played two games,” he said. “We’re only going to get better and so are they. It’s just a stepping stone.”

WOODS FROM 1B

specialy after such a promising showing last week in the Australian Open when he was twice within one shot of the lead on the back nine and finished third, two shots behind, his best result against a full field in two years.

Woods even sounded resigned to moving beyond such a successful partnership with Steve Stricker.

It took a dozen years and 16 partners in the Presidents Cup and Ryder Cup until Woods found what appeared to be the perfect partner. Two years ago at Harding Park, they became the first tandem to win all four team matches in the Presidents Cup, and the first to go 4-0 in any cup in 30 years.

They won two out of three matches at the Ryder Cup last year.

But there were growing indications that U.S. captain Fred Couples might break them up for some matches when the Presidents Cup gets under way at Royal Melbourne.

“Hopefully, we’ll get put out there together,” Woods said. “I know that we feel very comfortable with one another and we were talking about it today. There’s a certain comfort level about each other’s games.”

He added, however, that the pairings for the week have not been decided.

“A lot of pairings have not been set in stone,” Woods said.

Woods was excited the way Stricker hit the ball in a practice round Tuesday, particularly because Stricker last competed Sept. 25 at the Tour Championship while dealing with a neck injury that weakened his left arm. The turf is firm at Royal Melbourne, yet Stricker never flinched when he had to go after a shot.

The problem isn’t finding a partner for Woods, rather finding a good fit for Dustin Johnson.

A year ago, the United States thought it had a dream pairing in Johnson and Phil Mickelson, a pair of swash-bucklers who often play money games against each other in practice rounds at the majors.

They lost both matches badly in Wales, with neither one reaching the 17th hole.

“Me and Phil will not be playing together this week,” Johnson said with a grin. “We do better playing against each other than with each other. We’re good buddies. We love playing each other. But as Phil put it, we didn’t have good energy.”

Where does that leave Johnson? Someone suggested Woods, and he didn’t blink.

“That’s a possibility,” Johnson said. “I don’t know if we’re supposed to be saying who we are playing with yet. ... Obviously, me and Tiger will be a great team if we do play together. It’s up to Captain Couples, whether he wants to put us together.”

Couples was to announce his pairings Wednesday for the opening ceremony.

This is the first time the Presidents Cup has been played at Royal Melbourne since the lone International win in 1998, and it was a rout. The 20½-11½ score was the biggest loss for the Americans in any cup.

That’s another part of Woods’ past he’s not interested in reliving, and this should be easy. All he has to do is look around him at a young American team, far different in some many ways from the team that showed up tired and unprepared 13 years ago.

Woods won his opening match with Couples, now on the Champions Tour and in his second stint as Presidents Cup captain. Five other players from that team are now on the 50-and-older tour. Woods was 22, by five years the youngest player. Now he has a receding hair line at 35, and only four other players — Stricker, Mickelson, Jim Furyk and David Toms — are older.

Woods was among nine Americans who played last week in Sydney or Singapore. At least this team, even Woods, can’t blame rust.

Royal Melbourne, meanwhile, looks pure as ever, including the firm turf on the greens that are faster than any the players have experienced since the final major of the year in August.

It’s a short course at 6,998 yards, though it’s all about angles and not simply overpowering the course.

No one knows the course better than International captain Greg Norman, a frequent winner at Royal Melbourne, or even Ernie Els, who once shot 60 in the third round, then had nines of 42-32 to hold off Adam Scott the next day.

Five players are from Australia, with all but Scott from Melbourne.

The course will be an advantage, but so will the crowd. Perhaps it’s no coincidence the only true “road” games for the Americans since this event began in 1994 were the only two times they didn’t win — Australia in 1998, a tie in South Africa in 2003.

“I don’t think we need to show our teeth,” Norman said. “The spirit of the competition is so deep, I know my guys are getting sick and tired of getting beaten. We won in ‘98 and that’s it, with another tie. And they want to win. I love to hear that type of talk from my players, because when you’re an individual and you are used to winning golf tournaments and you’re not winning a certain golf tournament as a team, you want to band together very, very tightly.”

“And that’s what I’m feeling this week with my guys,” he added.

“They are sick of getting beaten.”

BEN FROM 1B

leading the Steelers to their fifth Super Bowl title.

There should be no issues this time either, though Roethlisberger will continue to play with a splint. Pittsburgh travels to Kansas City on Nov. 27.

“I won’t have to throw for a week or so, (until) next Wednesday or whenever we practice next week,” Roethlisberger said. “So, that’ll be a good time for it to rest. For me, it’ll just be getting used to throwing with a splint on again and a glove on, which I’ve done before.”

Wide receiver Mike Wallace said he wasn’t aware Roethlisberger was even hurt, though the quarterback work a black brace during a shortened practice on Tuesday.

“I didn’t even notice to tell you the truth,” Wallace said.

It’s not unusual for Roethlisberger to play through minor injuries. He suffered a sprained foot in a loss to Houston on Oct. 2 then tied a franchise record with five touchdown passes in a victory over Tennessee.

“That’s just Ben,” Wallace said. “You know that something small isn’t going to slow him down like that.”

Roethlisberger has been playing some of the best football of his career during Pittsburgh’s surge following a 2-2 start. The Steelers have won five of six going into their bye week despite an inconsistent running game and a defense that’s put up its usual stellar numbers but has struggled to take the ball away.

No matter. Roethlisberger is completing 64 percent of his passes for 1,726 yards and 13 touchdowns against just four interceptions over the last six games and became the first quarterback in team history to top 300 yards in three straight games when he went over the mark against Arizona (361), New England (365) and Baltimore (330).

He didn’t quite get there against the Bengals, though he showcased his playcalling ability during a pair of no-huddle drives in the second half, including the 11-play, 81-yard march that ended with Rashard Mendenhall’s 9-yard touchdown drive that gave Pittsburgh the lead for good.

Roethlisberger said it was important for the Steelers to come back with an emphatic answer after the Bengals rallied from a 14-point deficit to tie the game at 17.

“That was kind of the mentality — ‘Let’s go no-huddle and try and get down there. Let’s answer,’” Roethlisberger said. “We take pride as an offense in wanting to be the best. It’s our time to do it, so let’s step up and score. We always want to answer. If I remember right, it was a pretty long drive, converting third downs. That’s huge.”

Particularly after Roethlisberger’s last shot at operating out of the no-huddle ended in disaster as Baltimore’s Terrell Suggs perfectly read Roethlisberger’s call for a bubble screen and came up with an interception deep in Ravens territory to end a Pittsburgh scoring threat in a game Baltimore eventually won, 23-20.

Don’t expect Roethlisberger to turn into Peyton Manning, running his own show and spending 20 seconds standing in the shotgun barking out signals. Yet it is a significant step in the process of making the Steelers one of the most versatile offenses in the league.

“We want to be dangerous,” Wallace said.

“We want to be able to beat teams in lots of different ways.”

Even if it means the glove on Roethlisberger’s hand has a little extra padding for the next few weeks.

Kent State beats West Virginia, 70-60

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Carlton Guyton’s 17 points led Kent State to a 70-60 victory over West Virginia on Tuesday, snapping the Mountaineers’ 36-game non-conference home winning streak.

That streak dated back to Nov. 26, 2005, when the Mountaineers lost 71-68 in overtime to LSU.

Randal Holt had 13 points, and Justin Greene added 12 in the Golden Flashes’ first game of the season.

“A great win for us, without a doubt,” said Kent State’s Rob Senderoff, in his opening game as the Golden Flash coach. “But at the same time we really are appreciative that Coach (Bob) Huggins would allow us to come here and play their team on national TV. Again, a great win, the guys played hard, and we competed.”

West Virginia (1-1) had four players in double figures. Kevin Jones grabbed 15; Jabarie Hinds had 13; Darryl “Truck” Bryant added 12; and Deniz Kilicli notched 11.

West Virginia led 41-36 on a Hinds steal and layup with 16:13 to go in the game. Kent State hustled back with a 15-3 run over 4 minutes, 4 seconds for a 51-44 advantage and never looked back.

The Kent State tear began with a Guyton 15-footer, followed by a Holt 3-point shot and then a Patrick Jackson layup off an Eric Gaines steal.

“I like to help my team, and that’s what I want to do,” Holt said. “If I can get my teammates going that’s great because once I get going, we all get going. We just started clicking and that’s what works for us.”

WVU coach Bob Huggins called timeout, but the stoppage did little good. Holt hit Chris Evans on back-to-back alley-oop baskets, and the Golden Flashes were on an 11-0 run.

NBA players file antitrust lawsuits against league

NEW YORK (AP) — Locked-out NBA players including Carmelo Anthony and Kevin Durant filed class-action antitrust lawsuits against the league on Tuesday in at least two states, saying David Stern’s ultimatums left them no other choice.

Attorney David Boies, who represented the NFL during that sport’s work stoppage and now has been brought aboard by basketball’s players, said the NBA lockout violates antitrust laws by refusing to allow players to work.

Boies added that Stern’s ultimatum to the now-disbanded union to accept the owners’ last economic model or face a harsher proposal “turned out to be a mistake” that strengthens the players’ case because it proves that the collective bargaining process had ended.

“If you’re in a poker game, and you run a bluff, and the bluff works, you’re a hero. If someone calls your bluff, you lose. I think the owners overplayed their hand,” Boies said at the players’ association headquarters. “They did a terrific job of taking a very hard line and pushing the players to make concession after concession after concession, but greed is not only a terrible thing — it’s a dangerous thing.”

Dangerous enough to cost the league billions of dollars in damages if players win.

The players are seeking “treble damages” — meaning triple the amount of the more than $2 billion they would have made under a full 2011-12 season — for what they argue is irreparable harm by preventing them from playing in their “very short” NBA careers.

“We haven’t seen Mr. Boies’ complaint yet, but it’s a shame that the players have chosen to litigate instead of negotiate,” NBA spokesman Tim Frank said in a statement. “They warned us from the early days of these negotiations that they would sue us if we didn’t satisfy them at the bargaining table, and they appear to have followed through on their threats.”

Boies acknowledged that the case could take months, but hoped there would be a settlement before too long.

“Nobody can tell you how long it’s going to take. We all know it’s possible to delay lawsuits for a while, but I think it is in everybody’s interest to try to resolve this promptly,” said Boies, speaking on behalf of the California filing. “The longer it goes on, the greater the damages that the teams will face, the greater the damages that the players will suffer, and perhaps most important of all, the longer basketball fans will be deprived of basketball. So we hope that this will move quickly.”

He insisted the players have shown their willingness to negotiate throughout.

“You can’t negotiate by yourself,” he said. “You can only negotiate if you’ve got somebody who’s willing to sit down and negotiate with you.”

Penguins stay hot, rally by Avalanche 6-3

PITTSBURGH (AP) — James Neal had a goal and two assists as the Pittsburgh Penguins rallied past the Colorado Avalanche 6-3 on Tuesday night.

Jordan Staal, Evgeni Malkin, Brooks Orpik, Pascal Dupuis and Kris Letang also scored for the Penguins, who scored four times in the third period against goalie Semyon Varlamov to overcome an early 3-1 deficit.

Neal’s power-play goal, his 12th tally of the season, in the third gave him at least one goal in each of Pittsburgh’s eight home games this season.

Marc-Andre Fleury shook off a rocky first period to finish with 24 saves.

Jay McClement, Matt Duchene and David Jones all scored first-period goals for the Avalanche, who lost to an Eastern Conference team for the first time this season.

The Avalanche had been 5-0 against Eastern Conference foes, and they appeared to be on their way to another win after lighting up Fleury in the opening 20 minutes.

Colorado beat Fleury three times in the period, the prettiest goal coming on a nifty play by the 20-year-old Duchene, who took a pass from Paul Stastny and tipped the puck between his legs to himself before easily slipping the puck into the net.

That seemed to awaken the Penguins, who dominated the final two periods.

The Penguins moved into a tie with Chicago for the most points in the NHL with 25 through 18 games, not bad for a club that is still playing without captain Sidney Crosby.

The 2007 NHL MVP is continuing his recovery from a pair of concussions sustained 10 months ago. Speculation has ramped up in the last two weeks that Crosby is inching closer to his highly anticipated return, though he has kept mum on the subject.

Crosby’s teammates are hardly bothered by the constant speculation. Pittsburgh is 34-17-8 in the 58 regular-season games since Crosby last played and have roared out of the gate this season behind an offense that has found an identity even without him.

► BUCKEYE PERISCOPE

COLUMBUS (AP) — What's brewing with the 2011 Ohio State Buckeyes ...
BUCKEYES BUZZ: Leading up to their final game at Ohio Stadium, interim coach Luke Fickell had kind words for the Buckeyes' seniors.
"These guys have battled through a lot," Fickell said. "I've got the utmost respect for them for how they've handled the situations. The way they've been in the locker room, I couldn't ask for anything truly more in the last six months than the way they've handled themselves, the way they've accepted me, and our coaching staff."
Twenty-four of them will come out the tunnel for the last time when the Buckeyes host No. 21 Penn State on Saturday at 3:30 p.m.: Mike Adams, Dionte Allen, Dan Bain, Joe Bauserman, Evan Blankenship, Mike Brewster, Bo DeLande, Garrett Dombrook, Nate Ebner, Derek Erwin, Donnie Evege, Dan Herron, Tony Jackson, Don Matheney, Chris Maxwell, Tyler Moeller, Nate Oliver, DeVier Posey, Chris Roark, Donald Senegal, J.B. Shugarts, Spencer Smith, Andrew Sweat and Solomon Thomas.

BRADLEY ON FICKELL: On the Big Ten coaches' teleconference on Tuesday, Penn State interim head coach Tom Bradley was asked about Fickell. Both have been thrust into the head coaching spot unexpectedly this year.
"I've known coach Fickell for a while now. We've seen each other on the road recruiting," Bradley said. "I think he's done an outstanding job. He's always been a first-class person. He's done things the right way. He's done just a wonderful job. He's one heck of a football coach. A lot of respect not only around here but around the nation."
INJURY REPORT: Fickell was asked about several players who have been helped off the field or hurt during the past couple of weeks.
LB Andrew Sweat sustained a concussion in the 26-23 overtime loss at Purdue.
"I don't know if he's going to be available for who knows how long," Fickell said.
DL Johnathan Hankins was also listed as questionable for Penn State after injuring his right knee last week.
"Right now it doesn't look probably real good," Fickell said. "We'll see as the week moves along."
OL J.B. Shugarts (leg) is making progress but was also termed "questionable."
KINDLING: For those looking for an uplifting message from seasons past ...

► GOLF NOTES

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Even though he was angry Tiger Woods fired him, Steve Williams had a feeling the 12-year relationship between caddie and the world's No. 1 player was going to end.
Williams sat down in New Zealand for an interview with Graham Bensinger on Yahoo! Sports in which he looks back with some regret at not having left after Woods won the Australian Masters, and how he doesn't think Woods will break Jack Nicklaus' record of 18 majors.
Most interesting about the interview is that it was taped 10 days before Williams got himself in trouble in Shanghai, where Williams was getting roasted at a caddie awards party and made a racial comment that disparaged Woods.
Yet the answers in the interview were not biting. It didn't appear that Williams saw this as a chance to stick it to his former boss, such as when he gave the TV interview at Firestone after Adam Scott won and Williams called it "the best win of my life." Twice he refused to take the bait on his split with Woods, dodging one question on whether Woods lied by saying Williams was fired face to face.
"We didn't click when we both got back together, back in April at Augusta," he said. "We didn't click like we used to. You always know that things are going to come to an end sometimes."
Williams said he was disappointed because "in anything you do in life, you like to go out on a high."
"When I look back, perhaps after Tiger competed down here in Australia at the Australian Masters, it was a very memorable win. I really enjoyed that tournament," Williams said. "That was the last tournament he played before all the events transpired. Perhaps I should have left him then." Asked if he thought that day about leaving, Williams said no.
"I didn't know what was going to happen," he said. "When I look back, maybe my gut feeling ... one part of me said that would be a good way to finish. It would be a good memory."
Woods has won 14 majors. As for the Nicklaus record, Williams pointed to Phil Mickelson's career record in the majors.
"Phil's a fantastic player. He has four majors, the next best number of major championships won besides Tiger in the time frame Tiger has been on tour," Williams said. "He has to replicate that kind of career. If Tiger didn't get injured in 2008 and had to have that long period away from the game, he very well could be there now."
"Regular competition and regular practice enables you to keep all your tools sharp," Williams said. "When you're not competing at a regular level, you're never ever going to be sharp. He's been unfortunate that he's had injury problems and personal problems that have kept him out of the game for periods of time."
Even so, it didn't sound as though he had entirely written off Woods' pursuit of Nicklaus' record.
"A guy that's that good, when he gets back in the rhythm and gets back in full fitness and full health, all those tools and all those assets, they get back to where they were very quickly," he said.
GREATEST SWING: Rare is any mention of Mickey Wright without reference to Ben Hogan calling it the best he ever saw. That comment dates to 1984, when Rhonda Glenn went to Fort Worth, Texas, for a rare interview with Hogan.
Glenn used to work in television before joining the USGA.
"I was setting up (two) tape recorders and told him Mickey Wright said to say hello," Glenn said in an email. "He leaned back in his desk chair with a big smile and looked off into the distance. "Mickey Wright ... greatest swing I ever saw. Boy, what a swing!"
Wright said she was "absolutely elated" when the comment got back to her.
"How would you feel someone like him said that?" she said. "I loved Hogan. I went out of my way to join Shady Oaks in the 1960s just to watch him every day. He became friendly with me, very complimentary. He was a real sweetheart. He may have been the 'Wee Ice Mon,' but he wasn't in person. He had beautiful blue eyes, and he was a lovely person."
That led to a question of Wright, however, on the best swing she ever saw.
In an essay published by the USGA this spring, the 76-year-old Wright mentioned the rhythmic beauty of Louise Suggs, the "pure, wild joyful beauty" of Seve Ballesteros and the mechanical beauty of Hogan.
In an interview, Wright also listed Gene Littler, who she first knew at La Jolla (Calif.) Country Club, and Billy Casper. She returned later in the interview to Phil Mickelson.
"Phil Mickelson has the best golf that there is, except that he gets past parallel at the top," she said. "If he didn't pass parallel ... I wish he'd figure out not to do that. It's a beautiful swing. I know he must know it."
LPGA TOUR FINALE: The LPGA Tour season ends this week with the Titleholders at Grand Cypress Resort, with a $1.5 million purse and very little on the line. This year, in large part, has been the Yani Tseng Tour.
Tseng, with seven wins on the LPGA Tour, will be going for her 12th win worldwide. It would be the most in golf since Annika Sorenstam won 13 times in 2002, including 11 on the LPGA Tour.
No one has been so dominant in women's golf since Sorenstam until Tseng's big year, and it can be measured in more than just trophies. She wrapped the points-based Player of the Year award more than a month before the season ended. Her lead in the Vare Trophy for lowest scoring average is nearly a full stroke — 69.56 to 70.54 — over Na Yeon Choi.
Tseng has earned $2,886,656 to lead the money list. That's more than the next two players — Cristie Kerr and Stacy Lewis — combined.
ASIAN AMATEUR: The biggest win last week might have come in Japan, when Asian Amateur champion Hideki Matsuyama rallied on the back nine and closed with an eagle for a 68 to win the Taiheiyo Masters by two shots.
The 19-year-old became only the third amateur to win on the Japan Golf Tour, and he beat a field that included Masters champion Charl Schwartzel and Ryo Ishikawa.
"I wanted to be just the low amateur here, but to my surprise, I won," Matsuyama said. "The experience of playing at the Masters, the biggest stage of all in golf, has helped me play as usual even in an intense final round like today."
Matsuyama tied for 27th at Augusta National this year. As winner of the Asian Amateur, an event sponsored by Augusta National and the Royal & Ancient Golf Club, he will return to the Masters in April.
DIVOTS: Rickie Fowler suddenly has a busy end to his season. He plans to play next week in the Australian PGA Championship at Coolom, before returning across the Pacific for the Chevron World Challenge. ... The Scottish Open will return next year to Castle Stuart, where Luke Donald won in an even shortened to 54 holes because of rain. Still to be determined is finding a title sponsor for the tournament after Barclays decided not to renew.
STAT OF THE WEEK: Seven players on the International team at the Presidents speak English as a second language — Ryo Ishikawa (Japanese); Y.E. Yang, K.J. Choi and K.T. Kim (Korean); and Ernie Els, Relief Goosen, Charl Schwartzel (Afrikaans).
FINAL WORD: "Anybody that ... jumped off that wagon, they jumped off way too quick. I have a feeling he's going to make people eat their words." — John Cook on Tiger Woods.

HOROSCOPE

By HOLIDAY MATHIS 11/16/11

Mars in healthful Virgo and Jupiter in the luxury station of Taurus form a harmonious angle, promoting financial growth. The Scorpio influences overhead suggest that it's possible to revisit dealings with new insight and honesty. New arrangements will be made that are more in line with the realities of everyone involved.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Wanting something (or someone) too much isn't good for you. There's a difference between channeling your passion well and being needy. Relax, and you'll play the game better.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Can you drown out a feeling with a thought? You can and do on a regular basis. Today, though, it might be simpler and healthier to let the feeling happen. In a moment, it will be over, and you'll be lighter for the experience.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You'll exercise your will over your moods, the environment and whatever oppressive forces are around. You'll do this just to prove to yourself and the universe who really is in charge.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). There will be a mess to clean up. And though this is a normal and expected part of life, it doesn't make it any more pleasant. You'll get the job done by handling one small area at a time.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You love how life always gives you the next thing to do. Today you probably won't see the succession clearly. You'll have to handle the first and second tasks before the second and third tasks become clear.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You do need more peace and quiet than other people right now. Just make sure that you're not running away from a problem or isolating yourself out of fear. Solitude will be healing when it's a destination and not an escape.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). The old influences just don't excite you like they used to. There's no time like the present to start a new collection of jokes that make you laugh, pictures that inspire you and sounds that make you want to move your body.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Giving attention to the things you don't want in your life is a sure way to make things hard for yourself. Instead, you will be a master of focus, putting your attention only on the things you want to develop.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Most people will not be able to keep up with your energy level now. They may look like they understand you, but this could be an act. Slow down, and give the other person a chance to follow you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You are as inspired by friendship as you are by loneliness. Complexities of character such as this will never cease to fascinate the people around you. You'll attract new fans with your mysterious ways.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You'll field unexpected opportunities. It won't be necessary to make a decision now. Keep thinking of your options. Tonight, you'll apply your talents to turning an ordinary event into something remarkable.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You are loved, but for some reason, you may not feel like you can safely let that love in. The ones who disappointed you in the past may have something to do with this. Challenge yourself to open up today.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Nov. 16). Your social scene will sparkle with animated and attractive characters. You'll love the feeling of belonging that grows through 2012. December brings the chance to vault financial obstacles. You'll gain recognition for your talent in May. In June, physical and competitive efforts lead to increased vitality and success. Cancer and Aquarius people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 30, 15, 3, 24 and 1.

Seasoned salt recipe

Heloise

Dear Heloise: Could you give me your recipe for SEA-SONED SALT? I made it before, and it was very good, but I can't find my recipe. -- Connie W., via email

This is a great seasoning that will save you money when you make it yourself. If you are watching your salt intake, you can use a salt substitute in place of the salt.

- You'll need:
- 1 cup salt (or salt substitute)
  - 2 tablespoons onion powder
  - 1 teaspoon garlic powder
  - 1 tablespoon well-ground celery seed
  - 2 teaspoons paprika
  - 1 teaspoon chili powder
  - 1/2 teaspoon cayenne pepper
  - 1 teaspoon dried, well-ground parsley flakes

Mix ingredients together. Store in a container with a tightfitting lid to keep out moisture. A glass spice jar that has a plastic lid with holes is perfect for keeping this seasoning within reach on the dinner table. If making a double or triple batch, use an empty, plastic Parmesan-cheese container. I have other easy and low-cost recipes for seasonings and more in my Heloise's Seasonings, Sauces and Substitutes pamphlet. To receive a copy, send $5 and a long, self-addressed, stamped (64 cents) envelope to: Heloise/SSS, P.O. Box 795001, San Antonio, TX 78279-5001. You've run out of celery for your favorite tuna or chicken salad? Try chopped coleslaw or water chestnuts for that added crunch. - Heloise

TEST YOUR HELOISE HINT IQ

Dear Readers: What meat popular today was once thought of as a throw-away portion of beef?

- ☐ tongue
- ☐ fajitas
- ☐ stew meat.

If you grill, you probably will know the answer -- it's fajitas, also known as skirt steak. Any Mexican restaurant here in South Texas has fajitas on the menu, and now they are known nationwide.

This meat is from the flank area of a cow. It has been served in these parts since the late '60s. It is delicious when grilled over mesquite wood (which we have a lot of here in Texas). -- Heloise

Formal complaint on informal letters

DEAR ABBY: Whenever I receive a business communication from someone unknown to me with my first name in the salutation, as in "Dear Robert," it immediately goes into the trash.

Being addressed by my first name in this context is just plain wrong. Since I don't know the person who is sending the correspondence, I find the informal tone to be highly improper.

Please remind your readers -- particularly those in business -- about your booklet on correspondence and communication, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

I have been accused of being "old school." However, there are rules and guidelines governing written communication, and it seems as though they are being ignored. Would you please inform people about the proper way to write? And is your "Letters" booklet still available? -- CALL ME "MISTER C.," SAN JOSE, CALIF.

DEAR MISTER C.: I hope that by the time this email sees print, you will have cooled off. The communications that offend you probably were sent as part of a mass mailing generated by a computer. If that isn't the case, then the individuals who drafted them may not have realized that in business correspondence, the salutation should read:

- Dear Ms. Smith
- Dear Mr. Carson

The "Letters" booklet is still available and covers additional salutations that are helpful to know, including how to address a senator or congressman, a clergyperson, etc. "How to Write Letters for All Occasions" can be ordered by sending a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus a check or money order for $6 (U.S. funds), to Dear Abby -- Letters Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, IL 61054-0447. Shipping and handling are included in the price.

My booklet also contains helpful suggestions for writing letters of congratulations; difficult topics to address such as letters of condolence for the loss of a parent, spouse or child; and thank-you letters for birthday gifts, shower gifts, wedding gifts and those that arrive at holiday time. (A tip: Keep a notepad handy and write down what immediately comes to mind when the gift is opened. This can be helpful if later you are at a loss for words!)

Judging from the high volume of email and snail mail I receive, letter composition is something that is not always effectively taught in school. My booklet can provide a helpful assist for anyone who needs a quick and easy tutorial, and it is particularly helpful for parents to use as a way to easily teach their children how to write using proper etiquette. Keep it in a drawer and dip into it as needed.

DEAR ABBY: I am 8 years old. At the bottom of a letter, sometimes people write XOXO. Which one means hug and which one means kiss? -- ANNA IN MISSOURI

DEAR ANNA: The "X" means kiss and the "O" signifies a hug.

P.S. Some people write "SWAK" on the flap of the envelope, which stands for "sealed with a kiss."

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

Eliminate foods for gas reduction

Dr. Donohue

ANSWER: Flatulence, the passage of rectal gas, occurs 10 to 20 times a day for almost everyone. Some of that gas comes from swallowed air. Eat food slowly to lessen the chances of getting air into the digestive tract. Most of the gas is due to the fermentation of foods by bacteria in the colon. A few illnesses are associated with excessive flatulence -- celiac disease and pancreatic insufficiency being two examples. The pancreas supplies enzymes to digest food. Without those enzymes, bacteria digest the food. I can't implicate the car accident as a cause.

Make a few adjustments to your diet. I'll name foods that are the most troublesome. Don't eliminate all of them at once. Pick two or three, and keep them out of your diet for two weeks. If you don't note a reduction in gas by two weeks, start eating those foods again and eliminate three others. Milk products, including cheeses and ice cream, fruits and carbonated beverages are three food-stuffs to eliminate in trial one. After two weeks, if there's no whiff of change, go back to eating those foods, and stop eating beans, peas and pastas. If a third trial is necessary,

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am in my 80s and have a problem. I had a car accident three years ago. Since then, I pass gas most of the time, and I can't hold it in. I am very embarrassed. Please tell me what causes it, or what I can do to prevent it. -- Anon.

get rid of cabbage, broccoli and cauliflower. Brussels sprouts and lentils are other gas producers. If you note that you are gassy after particular foods, then erase them from your diet.

Have you tried Gas-X, Phazyme or Beano? Do so.

If all this comes to naught, other options are available. Flat-D Innovations, Inc. makes a pad that is inserted into the underwear to absorb gas. The toll-free number is 866-354-0056 and their website is www.flat-d.com. The Under-Tec Corporation makes different products that soak up gas. Its toll-free number is 888-433-5913 and its website is www.under-tec.com. If you have no computer, surely a friend or relative does. You can see pictures of these products online.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My mother had severe abdominal pain. I called an ambulance. When the paramedics arrived, she started gasping and closed her eyes. They said she had a seizure and went into cardiac arrest. In the emergency room, the doctor said she probably had a ruptured aortic aneurysm. The death certificate said she had a myocardial infarct (heart attack). Which do you think it was? -- D.J.

ANSWER: If an autopsy was done, it will provide the definitive answer. Any tests done in the ER also would help make a diagnosis. The severe abdominal pain suggests an aneurysm. The pain of a heart attack can be felt in many places, not just the chest. It can be centered in the abdomen. I have to go with the death certificate. The doctor who signed it must have had evidence for the heart attack cause. You might be able to contact him about his reasons for believing that.

Unless ready to tie knot, leave her alone

Annie's Mailbox

Dear Annie: My girlfriend, "Sophie," and I broke up three months ago after a five-year relationship because of my inability to commit. While we were together, I was brutally honest about how I felt, even though I hated how unhappy she was listening to me. Sophie and I have taken multiple short breaks in the past. I saw her last month and apologized. I told her I had made the mistake of my life by letting her go. Apparently, I needed substantial time to realize what was important to me. Unfortunately, Sophie told me she no longer sees a future for us and asked me to stop calling. She said she'd contact me when she was ready to be friends.

I want to give her the time she has asked for, but I'm afraid if I wait too long, I will lose her forever. I now realize I desperately want to spend the rest of my life with her. But I have inflicted so much damage. If I ignore Sophie's request to give her time, it might only make matters worse. I would do anything to get her back. Should I go after her? -- M in Hawaii

Dear M: Are you going to propose? If so, go after her. If not, leave her alone. Your feelings are no longer trustworthy to Sophie. Unless you are ready for a lifetime commitment, ring in hand, do the girl a favor and let her find someone she knows won't walk out when he feels overwhelmed.

Dear Annie: I sympathize with "Maine Husband," who is the caregiver for his wife with multiple sclerosis. I'm sure his wife is extremely grateful to have him in her life. My husband has had to take over more and more of the household chores because of my disabilities, and I am so honored to have him. He makes my life a joy. When we are invited out and I don't feel well enough to go, I make sure I have everything I'll need for the few hours my husband will be gone. Then he can go and relax. I can always call him if I have a problem, but he feels better for getting out of the house, and I feel better knowing I am not taking up all of his time. "Maine" has to speak up for himself. Maybe if he asked the relatives to watch his wife for a few hours, they would understand his position. If they sat in a wheelchair all day, they might see how hard it is to rely on someone else to do all the simple things they take for granted.

There is a special place in heaven for people like my husband. -- C.

Lost A Pet ?

The first step is to make sure your pet is nowhere in your house or yard. Then follow these steps.

1. Call animal shelters and hospitals.

2. Visit them in person

3. Place an ad in the newspaper.

4. Check the newspaper's "found" ads.

5. Place eye-catching signs describing your pet in area businesses.

Time is of the essence when a pet is missing!
