Property next to Reilly School bought for parking

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

SALEM — The city school board agreed Monday to buy a house on Ohio Avenue as a means to expand the parking lot at the landlocked Reilly Elementary School and make it safer.

The property at 541 Ohio Avenue is located at the southeast corner of the parking lot off of Ohio Avenue and will be purchased for $55,000 with permanent improvement funds.

Board member Jeff Cushman, who serves as chairman of the district Building and Grounds Committee, said the property came up for sale and the property owner came down in price to what school officials thought was a fair price.

Plans call for the buildings on the property to be razed so the school parking lot can be re-designed for safety purposes and increased parking.

“We have buses and cars competing for the same space,” Cushman explained.

He estimated they could add 30 or 40 parking spaces or maybe install some type of turnaround. At both Buckeye and Southeast elementary schools, dedicated bus lanes were created to increase safety.

The permanent improvement fund has close to $600,000 in it and must be used to increase safety or educational opportunities for students. The fund cannot be used for day-to-day operations, such as utilities, or employee salaries or benefits.

“These are things we should be doing,” board president Nick Bush said about the purchase.

The school board also approved the latest five-year financial forecast, with the report still showing a growing deficit and the balance with the cash carryover hitting negative numbers by fiscal year 2014.

According to the report, the deficit by the end of this school year, fiscal year 2012, will be $384,201, but the district will remain in the black due to the cash carryover, which will disappear by the third year of the forecast. The bottom line at the end of fiscal year 2012, with the cash carryover, will be $1,296,031.

By the end of next year, fiscal year 2013, those numbers will get worse. The deficit will grow to $1,220,152 and the balance with the carryover will be $75,878. At the end of fiscal year 2014, the deficit will be $1,403,581 and the balance with the carryover will be $1,327,703 in the red. Each year after that, the numbers get worse.

District Treasurer Jill Rowe again talked about the $1.3 million

Route 517 crash

Pamela Davis, 41, Wellsville, gets checked out inside her vehicle after a two-vehicle collision at the intersection of state Route 517 and Fairfield School Road Monday afternoon. In the back, Ethel Melton, 76, Salem, is taken in a Columbiana ambulance to Salem Community Hospital with minor injuries. According to Trooper Brian Cavanaugh, Melton had been northbound on Fairfield School Road in her green car, which is somewhat visible behind Davis' red car. Melton pulled from the stop sign and into the path of Davis, who was westbound on state Route 517. Columbiana EMS and New Waterford firefighters assisted at the accident. Davis also went to Salem Community Hospital to be checked for minor injuries. (Salem News photo by Deanne Johnson)

Smith to fill Washingtonville council slot

By LARRY SHIELDS
Staff Writer

WASHINGTONVILLE

Before swearing in just-appointed Councilman Jim Smith, village council purchased a 2012 Ford F-250 from Donnell Ford in Salem on Monday.

Smith who served on council for a couple of years as an appointee will serve out the two months on councilwoman Sharon Janovec's four-year

Janovec resigned for personal reasons in August but her name is on the Nov. 8 ballot for reelection.

Smith, 61, said he accepted the appointment “to help the village.”

Council went into executive session before making the appointment.

Chris Milsom, Eileen Russell and Smith applied for the position but Russell asked that her name be removed from consideration in a letter to Mayor Norm Sommers.

Council President Pro Tem Renee Jackson said Janovec, who will win her seat back with a single vote, will have to advise the village of her intentions before Dec. 31.

The first council meeting will be on Jan 2 and there could be two openings with Jackson's vacant seat which no one in the village chose to run for.

Councilwoman Theresa Allison abstained in voting for Smith saying she didn't like the way he performed the last time he served on council.

Any registered voter in the village will be welcome to apply for any council openings.

Engineers check National Cathedral for quake damage

WASHINGTON (AP) — The same engineers who captivated tourists and passersby by rappelling down the Washington Monument began a similar operation Monday at the National Cathedral, the other major landmark to be damaged by an earthquake that shook the nation's capital.

The "difficult access team" from Wiss, Janney, Elstner Associates, Inc. began its work Monday when Emma Cardini emerged at the top of a 234-foot tower. She was joined minutes later by Katie Francis and, using ropes and harnesses, the two women efficiently worked their way down the front of the building.

The inspection is expected to last

Back on the bus, Obama seeks aid for states; mocks GOP as jobs bill splintered

FLETCHER, N.C. (AP) — Rolling through small Southern towns in a campaign-style bus, President Barack Obama on Monday pressed lawmakers back in Washington to start taking up pieces of his rejected jobs bill and mocked the Republicans who had shot it down in total. The Senate moved to vote soon on one part, a plan to help states hire teachers, but the proposal seemed doomed.

Deep in the mountains of politically important North Carolina, Obama soaked up the region's autumn beauty at the same time he assailed foes of his jobs legislation, accusing them of failing to listen to the public.

Back at the Capitol, Senate Democrats announced they would act first on a single part of Obama's plan, a longshot bid to help states hire teachers and police. A Senate vote could come as soon as the end of the week. If not, it would probably fall into November because the Senate plans to take a break next week, even as Obama urges quick action.

In North Carolina, the president directed his most pointed remarks at Senate Republicans, who last week blocked action on his full $447 billion proposal combining tax cuts and new spending.

"Essentially they said no to you," Obama told a supportive crowd outside Asheville. Noting that Republicans will now get a chance to vote on elements of his jobs agenda one by one, he said: "Maybe they just couldn't understand the whole thing all at once. So we're going to break it up into bite-size pieces."

Israel, Hamas complete final preparations for complex prisoner exchange

JERUSALEM (AP) — The elaborate machinery of a prisoner swap deal between two bitter enemies swung into motion Monday, as hundreds of Palestinians and one Israeli soldier prepared to return home in one of the most dramatic recent developments in the otherwise deadlocked Israel-Palestinian conflict.

The Israel-Hamas deal, to take place Tuesday morning, is going ahead despite criticism and court appeals in Israel against the release of 1,027 Palestinians for a single captured Armored Corps sergeant, Gilad Schalit, held by militants in Gaza since 2006.

The exchange, negotiated through mediators because Israel and Hamas will not talk directly to each other, involves a delicate series of staged releases, each one triggering the next.

When it is over, Schalit — 19 years old at the time of his capture, and 25 now — will be free, ending what for Israel has been a prolonged and painful saga. Israel was forced to acknowledge that it had no way of rescuing Schalit in a military operation, though the soldier was held no more than a few miles from its border.

Instead, Israel agreed to a lopsided prisoner exchange that Hamas officials have openly said will encourage them to capture more soldiers, and which will free Palestinians convicted of some of the deadliest attacks against Israeli civilians in recent memory.

World's population hits 7B; challenges abound, notably in Asia and sub-Saharan Africa

She's a 40-year-old mother of eight, with a ninth child due soon. The family homestead in a Burundi village is too small to provide enough food, and three of the children have quit school for lack of money to pay required fees.

"I regret to have made all those children," says Godelive Ndageramiwe. "If I were to start over, I would only make two or three."

At Ahmed Kasadha's prosperous farm in eastern Uganda, it's a different story.

"My father had 25 children — I have only 14 so far, and expect to produce more in the future," says Kasadha, who has two wives. He considers a large family a sign of success and a guarantee of support in his old age.

By the time Ndageramiwe's ninth child arrives, and any further members of the Kasadha clan, the world's population will have passed a momentous milestone. As of Oct. 31, according to the U.N. Population Fund, there will be 7 billion people sharing Earth's land and resources.

Libyan forces seize most of Bani Walid, one of last remaining Gadhafi strongholds

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Libyan revolutionary forces have captured almost all of Bani Walid, one of Moammar Gadhafi's last remaining strongholds, but still face pockets of resistance as they try to end a weeks-long standoff, officials said Monday.

day.

Fierce resistance in Bani Walid and Gadhafi's hometown of Sirte has prevented Libya's new leaders from declaring full victory and setting a timeline for elections. It has been more than two months since the former rebels gained control of the rest of the oil-rich North African nation.

In a step toward normalcy, the transitional leadership council confirmed it has signed an agreement with NATO that partially lifts the no-fly zone imposed in March over the country, allowing resumption of some flights without seeking NATO approval. The embargo was imposed as part of the U.N. Security Council resolution that authorized airstrikes to protect civilians from Gadhafi's regime.

Anwar Elfeitori, the minister of transportation and communications, said the agreement signed Thursday in Malta will make it easier to transport wounded fighters from the front lines for treatment.

"The partial lifting of the air embargo will help with the transportation of the casualties, which is the No. 1 priority at this time, as well as facilitate the movement of people between Libya and the rest of the world," Elfeitori told The Associated Press in an interview.

Discovery of 4 disabled people in Philly basement exposes alleged benefit-theft scheme

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The landlord of the apartment building at first thought a circuit breaker had tripped when he went to the basement Saturday and found all the lights were out. Then he realized all six bulbs had been removed, and he heard dogs barking inside a boiler room, its door chained shut.

He removed the chain, stepped into the dank, foul-smelling room and lifted a pile of blankets. Several sets of human eyes stared back at him.

Turgut Gozleveli had stumbled upon four mentally disabled adults, all weak and malnourished, and one chained to the boiler.

He may have also stumbled upon a vast scheme — stretching from Philadelphia to Norfolk Va., and West Palm Beach, Fla. — to steal the Social Security disability checks of defenseless and vulnerable people, authorities said.

Philadelphia police on Saturday arrested three adults staying in an apartment upstairs, including the alleged ringleader, Linda Ann Weston, 51, who had been convicted of murder in a 1981 starvation death.

about two weeks, said Dan Lemieux, who heads WJE's Fairfax, Va., office and is supervising the project. The engineers are looking for loose, cracked or unstable stones that could pose a risk to people on the ground. Those stones will be removed before the cathedral's scheduled reopening on Nov. 12.

Last week, stone masons removed 2 tons of stonework from a pinnacle damaged by the 5.8-magnitude earthquake on Aug. 23. Three of the four pinnacles on the 300-foot central tower were severely damaged and the 2-ton section had shifted off its base.

The 4-foot-tall top portions of the pinnacles, called the finials, fell off during the earthquake and crashed onto the cathedral roof. The cathedral sustained additional damage during Hurricane Irene, the Category 1 storm that blew through Washington five days after the quake.

Initial repairs to the cathedral are expected to cost at least $15 million, and the price tag for fully restoring the building remains unknown. The cathedral was completed in 1990 after 83 years of work. A campaign has begun to raise $25 million by the end of 2012.

Steve Jobs changed entire industries

That you are able to read this editorial today, no matter in what format you are reading it in, is a tribute to the work of Steve Jobs.

If you are reading the printed version, you are looking at a page that was designed on an Apple Mac computer, as are many publications. If you are looking at an electronic version, you may be reading it on an iPhone or iPad.

In any case, you have access to the information thanks to the vision and drive of Jobs, who died earlier this month at the age of 56.

Few people in the history of our planet had the vision that Jobs had, and his death is cause for reflection.

Jobs founded Apple computers and invented gadgets that rocketed the technological era into warp speed. From the Macintosh computer to the iPod to the iPhone, Jobs changed society and altered the course of entire industries, especially the cell phone and music industries.

The man brilliantly turned Apple from a company he started in his garage into a global giant worth $351 billion. In his brilliance he purchased Pixar for $10 million and sold it for $7.4 billion.

Jobs did not invent the portable digital music player. He improved on it and gave us the iPod, a device that not only changed how we listen to music, it changed the entire music industry.

He did not invent the smart phone. He improved on it and gave us the iPhone, a device that has changed the way we interact with the world.

Jobs did not invent the portable computer. He improved on it and gave us the iPad, the tablet with the touch screen that in just a short period of time has spawned countless imitators and will forever change the way we look at computers.

Each device took the concept of form following function to a new level. Jobs ensured that those who work for Apple take great pride in designing products that not only perform well, but look good and feel good in the hands of the user. The software that makes the products work, including iTunes and the App Store, is simple to access, aiding in the use of Apple products.

Jobs had a knack for taking the most complex of devices and designing them so the least tech-savvy among us could make them work and find pleasure in them. Apple products ship with only a rudimentary guide, a quick-start sheet if you will, and the understanding that their owners will intuitively know how to make the devices work.

The degree to which he changed the world can be likened to Thomas Edison, Andrew Carnegie and Henry Ford.

Appropriately, Jobs was mourned worldwide by people who held up pictures of candles on their iPads, researched his biography on Macintosh computers and tapped tributes on iPhones.

Friday, thousands stood in lines in seven countries, sometimes all night long, to buy the latest iPhone, some turning the wait into a tribute to Jobs.

While his inventions serve as tools for people and businesses, his life should serve as a tool of a different sort for parents, teachers and mentors. He's an inspiration, a model for young people to emulate.

“You think YOU’VE got troubles?!”

Inevitability not a strategy

MARK SHIELDS

Shortly after the cooling of the Earth -- when I was still a young man -- I worked around the country in political campaigns. One of the first rules of politics, my sainted precinct committeewoman had taught me, is that there was no such thing as a bandwagon effect in campaigns. She was right.

Still, self-anointed political sages, everywhere I traveled, would insist that "people around here like to be with the winner." So, they argued, it was important that by leaking to the press polls favorable to their candidate and by publicizing the endorsements of their candidate by major public figures, the campaign would persuade voters that, long before the voting, the race was effectively over and they, the voters, had better hurry to get aboard the Victory Express. They were wrong.

Think about it. If the conventional wisdom proclaims that Smith is going to win the upcoming election and Brown is going to lose, which candidate's workers will be motivated to work harder and to make more voter contacts, and which candidate's supporters will be more inclined to think about what being on the winning side could mean for them personally?

Inevitability is not a winning campaign strategy. Take my word for it. In 1971, I was political director for the presidential campaign of an exceptional man, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine. Muskie was the strongest Democrat challenger, according to all the polls, when matched against the incumbent Republican in the White House, Richard M. Nixon.

To demonstrate our candidate's breadth of appeal and to discourage the other Democrats from seeking the nomination, we in the Muskie campaign rolled out as impressive an array of endorsements as anyone could remember.

There were distinguished figures from the FDR and Harry Truman administrations, Averell Harriman and Clark Clifford, along with a powerful array of Democratic governors (John Gilligan of Ohio, Milton Shapp of Pennsylvania, Wendell Ford of Kentucky, Cecil Andrus of Idaho, Calvin Rampton of Utah), as well as prominent U.S. senators, including Adlai Stevenson of Illinois, Phil Hart of Michigan, Tom Eagleton and Stuart Symington of Missouri, John Tunney of California and Harold Hughes of Iowa.

Just in case you might have forgotten 1972 history, long-shot underdog candidate Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota derailed the Muskie bandwagon and captured the Democratic nomination.

More recently, we had the inevitability of Hillary Clinton and former New York Mayor Rudy Giuliani, who, four years ago this month in the Gallup Poll, was leading the race for the GOP presidential nomination with 32 percent of the vote ahead of former Tennessee Sen. Fred Thompson, who had 23 percent. In third place was a cash-strapped John McCain with 15 percent, ahead of former Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney with 10 percent. Nearly out of sight with a paltry 6 percent was former Arkansas Gov. Mike Huckabee.

Less than three months later, Huckabee would win the Iowa presidential caucuses and McCain would win the New Hampshire primary.

Clinton in October 2007 led by the landslide margin of 44 percent to 19 percent over Barack Obama, some of whose supporters were openly questioning his strategy and style. Clinton's nomination was a given.

Now we see the 2012 version of the Inevitability Strategy. After four polished, gaffe-free debate performances and after securing the ringing endorsement of his most charismatic potential challenger, New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie, Romney secured the blessing of former House Speaker Denny Hastert and respected Mississippi Sen. Thad Cochran, along with a team of the GOP's leading fundraisers.

This race is far from over, however. Romney, who was at 30 percent among Republican voters in the July Wall Street Journal-NBC News poll and at 23 percent in August, remains at 23 percent in October.

He and his people would do well to remember the inevitability of "Presidents" Ed Muskie, Rudy Giuliani and Hillary Clinton, and know that their opponents are right this minute scheming, dreaming, scrapping and sweating to prove there really is no bandwagon effect in American politics.

Mormons rule: ‘Cult’ candidates best prepared in GOP field

KATHLEEN PARKER

Rather than worrying about whether Mormons worship the right God in the right way, Republicans should insist that only Mormons run for president.

Only half-joking.

Anyone watching the Republican debates, especially last Tuesday night's on the economy, can't be missing the obvious. The two smartest, coolest, most independent, and least ideological -- this is to say, most presidential and electable -- candidates are the two Mormons, Mitt Romney and Jon Huntsman.

Instead of wondering what's up with Mormons, Americans should be asking: Whoa, what do they know that we don't?

It is utterly ludicrous that at this point in our history some conservatives insist on raising the question of religious belief in a presidential election. The latest embarrassment comes from a Texas pastor and Rick Perry supporter, who said recently that Mormonism is a cult.

If the "cult" of Mormonism means you raise a solid family, work hard, make money and do good for the greater community of mankind, then by all means pass the Kool-Aid.

Regrettably, we have but one presidency and two Mormons. Both Romney and Huntsman, as former governors, would bring considerable talent to the White House -- Romney primarily on the economy and Huntsman, also one-time ambassador to China, on foreign policy. If anything, Republicans should be trying to figure out how best to use them both.

Two Mormons on one ticket? Wouldn't happen, but it might/could/should.

Romney has been at politics longer and, according Republican tradition, it's his turn. He's paid his dues and, most important, raised lots of cash for fellow Republicans. He's pulled his weight for the party as few others have, even hitting the campaign trail for John McCain after dropping out of the race in 2008.

He's also the candidate most qualified to win a national election, where swing votes and independents matter. The Republican "base," which insists on a purity test on social issues, and tea party conservatives, who insist on a perfect record of anti-government rhetoric, may as well be working for the Democratic National Committee.

For those needing a primer on why it's un-American and counterproductive, not to mention medieval, to also require a religious test, Romney provided an eloquent lesson four years ago. In his "Faith in America" speech, he reminded Americans of why and the ways we honor freedom of religion in this country. Romney recognized the role of religious life in the public square and acknowledged the divine source of liberty. But he also declined to dignify the insistence of some that he explain his personal beliefs:

"There are some who would have a presidential candidate describe and explain his church's distinctive doctrines. To do so would enable the very religious test the Founders prohibited in the Constitution. No candidate should become the spokesman for his faith. For if he becomes president, he will need the prayers of the people of all faiths."

The text of Romney's speech can easily be found. While we're in a reading mood, please get thee to a Kindle, Nook, iPad or other electronic device of your choosing -- or better, a library or bookstore -- and feast your eyes upon "Elmer Gantry." For good measure, you might also pick up Robert Penn Warren's "All The King's Men." If you are unfamiliar with these two titles, please surrender your voter registration card to the nearest dumpster.

The use and abuse of religion to advance politically is a scourge on any nation, and no witness to Islamist theocracy should doubt it. Less dramatically, it is simply bad form. Americans of a certain age remember when preachers preached and politicians didn't. Tent revivals took place on the outskirts of small towns, not in mega-coliseums led by presidential contenders. (See Rick Perry.)

Sometimes, especially within the African-American community, the roles of politician and preacher have overlapped. Even Republican contender Herman Cain is, in addition to being a businessman, a minister. This intersection has been tolerated because the black church historically was the only place those isolated by segregation could congregate and speak openly about issues of concern, including voting rights. The tradition remains, but the need for the overlap has expired. Bless Cain for saying so last Sunday on CNN's "State of the Union."

Asked about the Mormonism-as-cult comment, Cain replied:

"I'm not running for theologian in chief. ... I am not going to do an analysis of Mormonism vs. Christianity."

Amen, brother.

in state cuts the district is experiencing. She shared with board members some telling figures provided by the Ohio Department of Education which showed how many districts were in fiscal oversight, how many were projecting low fund balances and how many were projecting deficits as part of their five-year forecasts.

The numbers were shared at a recent meeting she attended where maps were shown of the state to correspond to the numbers. By the end of the five years, there was a noticeable increase of red on the map, representing 135 districts with deficits. The number for the fiscal year 2011 was 8.

“A lot of the districts are in the same boat we’re in,” Rowe said, adding they’re wondering “what is the state going to do to help us?”

She said the state budget and the cuts to education have been a detriment to the district.

“Surely Columbus is seeing this,” Cushman said.

In other business, Superintendent Tom Bratten said he sent a letter of thanks to the Salem Community Foundation, which last week agreed to provide the district with another $25,000 for the district’s technology initiative. The group had already provided an initial $25,000 for the program, which is bringing iPads into the classrooms at an estimated cost of $470,000 over this year and next year.

The board also approved the list of athletic supplementals for winter and spring sports, with no changes in the varsity coaching positions, hired substitutes, approved a part-time office worker and an instructor for Hannah E. Mullins School of Practical Nursing, approved volunteer Lisa Price to teach flute lessons at Southeast Elementary, hired a part-time bus driver, approved student activity fundraisers for the year, approved family medical leave for a high school cafeteria worker and approved “Singin’ in the Rain” as the spring musical for the high school.

The next meeting will be a special meeting at 9 a.m. Oct. 27 at the central office regarding some personnel contracts. Regular meetings, which are the third Monday of the month, will be held at Southeast Elementary in November and at Buckeye Elementary in December.

Board President Ralph Wince thanked district residents for approving the project when they did.

“Now we have a facility we can definitely be proud of,” he said.

In other news, the board approved the five-year financial forecast submitted by Treasurer Jim Phillips.

The forecast, which predicts a deficit of just over $142,000 by fiscal year 2014, is based on averages of September expenditures, Phillips noted, a departure from his usual trend analysis of several prior months. Previous forecasts have estimated a deficit of over $1 million during the same time period, he added.

Due to the freezes the board approved in the newest teacher and classified union contracts, the forecast will be in flux for a while, Phillips continued. He said he will review it after October and November and update it then if there is a drastic change in the outlook.

Also at the meeting the board accepted the retirement effective Jan. 27, 2012, of Maintenance Supervisor Ed Chismar, who has been with the district for 14 years; and approved as interim maintenance supervisor Dean Pagnotta effective immediately through June 30, 2012, at a rate of $250 per week.

The next regular board meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Nov. 21 in the band room.

Donnell Ford Commercial Account Manager Neil Taylor gave a detailed presentation for an F-250 Super Duty regular cab with a 6.2 V8 and an automatic transmission. The truck will be prepared for a snow plow.

Taylor said the truck should be delivered in early to mid-December and will be equipped with all-terrain tires and a full-sized replacement and is capable of hauling over 10,000 lbs.

The plow will be installed at Myers Equipment in Canfield and strobe lights for the $28,266 truck were discussed. The purchase includes a three-year, 36,000 mile warranty and a five-year, 60,000 mile warranty on the drive train.

Jackson said since they had a year on the option, they will look at buying an extended warranty later.

“We’ll look at the extended warranty in January,” Jackson said.

“If you don’t put the miles on it you need the years.”

The truck, silver with cloth seats, will be shared by the departments.

In other business, the village will host a Trick or Treat party from 5 to 7 p.m., Oct. 31 with hot dogs, chips, candy and juice available from a donation by the VFW ladies auxiliary.

“People out trick or treating that might want to stop,” Jackson said, adding they were looking for volunteers to help.

County schools honored for reaching top

By DEANNE JOHNSON
Staff Writer

LISBON — Local schools reaching goals were honored last week at a luncheon at the Mahoning County Career and Technical Center.

Superintendent Anna Marie Vaughn shared news of event with the board of the Columbiana County Education Service Center Monday.

Of those honored, two county schools received most improved schools recognition — Beaver Local's Calcutta Elementary School and Lisbon's McKinley Elementary School. Calcutta Elementary was also among those which achieved excellent with distinction levels, joining the East Palestine Elementary School, and West Branch's Knox Elementary School and Middle School.

The county schools which received excellent recognition were also honored — McKinley Elementary, Beaver Local's High School, Middle School and Rogers Elementary School; Columbiana's High School,

South Side Middle School and Joshua Dixon Elementary; the Crestview Elementary, High School and Middle School; East Palestine's High School; Leetonia Elementary School; Salem's Reilly Elementary School, Junior High School, Southeast Elementary; United Local's Elementary School and High School; Wellsville's Garfield Elementary; and West Branch's Beloit Elementary and High School.

Another item Vaughn talked to the board about was concerns about Ohio House Bill 136, which she said will allow students to attend private schools, while pulling money in the form of vouchers away from public school districts. Students will be allowed to take the district's funding with them and use it to help pay their tuition. Even those students already paying for a private education will be eligible for the voucher program.

Vaughn pointed out the local public schools are already struggling to make ends meet and cannot afford to lose more funding.

Judy Herron, director of curriculum, also reported on the three local schools working toward Race To the Top. Yet all the schools are learning the new academic content standards all the schools will soon have to adhere to. Teachers from each district have now been trained and are returning to their own districts to work with all the other teachers.

In other matters the board:

— Approved the resignation of Cindy Wright, a classroom assistant.

— Approved a contract with Portage County ESC to provide consultant services for math and science standards.

— Approved a contract with Southern Local to provide in-school suspension services.

— Approved a recognition for the ESC bus drivers. Vaughn pointed out bus drivers for the ESC cover 20,000 miles per month.

The next meeting of the ESC is scheduled for 4:30 p.m. Nov. 21.

IRS: Cuts would hurt service, raise deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation that would trim hundreds of millions of dollars from the Internal Revenue Service budget would force significant cuts in the services it provides taxpayers and cost the government $4 billion annually in lost revenue, the agency warned Congress on Monday.

In a letter to lawmakers, IRS Commissioner Douglas Shulman said the budget cuts “would lead to noticeable degradation of both service and enforcement and would have a serious detrimental impact on voluntary compliance for years to come.”

The House Appropriations Committee has approved a bill that would provide $11.5 billion for the IRS in fiscal 2012, which began Oct. 1. That is $600 million less than it received last year and $1.8 billion less than President Barack Obama requested.

The Senate Appropriations Committee version of the bill would provide $11.7 billion. The cuts are part of an effort by lawmakers to curb spending at a time when annual federal budget deficits have reached $1.3 trillion.

With cuts of that magnitude, IRS answers to taxpayers’ letters would be delayed by up to five months and about half of those telephoning the agency would not get through, Shulman wrote. As examples, he said that would mean problems for individuals and small businesses that have fallen behind paying their taxes and want to reach the IRS to work out payment plans before they are penalized.

Shulman said the budget cuts would hurt revenue collections because it would force the agency to shrink its staffing levels, and thus to reduce its collection activities. The $4 billion in yearly lost revenue would far outweigh the cuts in agency spending, he said.

“In other words, these budget cuts will result in a direct increase to the nation’s deficit,” Shulman wrote.

Shulman said the proposed cuts are already forcing his agency to reduce spending, because it would not have enough time to implement them if it waited until the congressional budget process is completed.

Lawmakers will try to help the IRS ease the cuts’ impact, but with the government’s debt problem, “making do with less will be the rule, not the exception,” said Max Gleichman, spokesman for Sen. Richard Durbin, D-Ill., who chairs the Senate Appropriations Committee panel that wrote the spending bill.

Rep. Jo Ann Emerson, R-Mo., who leads the House Appropriations subcommittee that authored that chamber’s legislation, said the cuts were designed to avoid hurting collections and services but added, “Like families across the country, the IRS will have to do more with less.”

Cellphone companies to warn as plans approach limit

NEW YORK (AP) — Cellphone companies pledged Monday to warn subscribers before they go over their monthly limits for calling minutes, text messages and data use.

The pledge comes in response to a threat of regulation by the Federal Communications Commission, which wants to curb nasty surprises in the monthly bills of wireless subscribers.

CTIA — The Wireless Association, a trade group representing the major cellphone companies, said they’re also promising to warn subscribers that they’re paying roaming fees if they travel abroad.

The warnings will arrive as text messages, and subscribers won’t need to sign up for them — they’ll arrive automatically. CTIA said its member will have warnings in place on at least half their plans in a year and all of them in two years.

AT&T Inc. and Verizon Wireless, the two largest carriers, already provide text-message warnings on their data plans, but not on text messaging or calls. Instead, subscribers have to look up their usage data.

The announcement was made jointly by the CTIA and the FCC, which credited Consumer’s Union, the publisher of Consumer Report, for raising awareness of the issue. The magazine had found that many of its subscribers had been startled by high monthly bills.

Curbing occasional high bills is unlikely to have much of a financial effect at phone companies. Analyst Michael McCormack at Nomura Securities noted that the companies say that only a few percent of their subscribers exceed their allotments in a month. The trend over the past few years of making calls to other cellphones “free,” or not counting toward the plan limits, has reduced the number of people who go over on calling minutes, he said.

Phone companies are also moving away from charging for each text message or selling “buckets” of 500 messages per month. Rather, they have moved toward offering unlimited text messaging.

The biggest remaining “bill shock” problem for consumers may be in international data roaming, McCormack said. Someone who travels abroad with a smartphone might use it sparingly for calls, but be unaware that apps are using data in the background, racking up big fees that only become apparent when the bill arrives.

The alerts are voluntary for the phone companies, but FCC Chairman Julius Genachowski made it clear that the agency would step in if companies fail to police themselves.

Kathleen Grillo, senior vice president for federal regulatory affairs at Verizon Communication Inc., said the voluntary approach was preferable because things change quickly in the wireless world and regulations don’t always keep up.

“The result is an industry code that will serve consumers better than rules that would soon be outdated,” she said.

Asked at the press conference why it would take two years to fully implement the warnings, CTIA President Steve Largent said phone companies have to reconfigure their systems.

BUSINESS HIGHLIGHTS

Free apps for furious BlackBerry users
TORONTO (AP) — The BlackBerry has left a bitter taste in the mouths of its users.

Trying to make amends for massive outages last week, Research In Motion on Monday promised BlackBerry users free premium apps and a month of technical support. But the apology is unlikely to placate miffed customers who are considering whether to part with the tarnished brand in favor of more popular devices such as Apple’s newest iPhone.

Jim Balsillie, one of the company’s two CEOs, acknowledged in an interview with The Associated Press on Monday that his company has come under intense pressure. Even so, Balsillie defended RIM’s handling of the crisis, the company’s worst outage ever. He noted that RIM has survived rough times before.

The Canadian company said it will give BlackBerry users free apps worth more than $100. The apps will be available over the coming weeks on BlackBerry App World. They include iSpeech Translator, Bejeweled and Texas Hold’em Poker 2. The offer runs until the end of the year.

For its enterprise customers, Research in Motion will offer a month of free technical support.

Germany dampens hopes for summit

BERLIN (AP) — German finance chief Wolfgang Schaeuble dampened expectations of an upcoming EU summit, saying Monday that it would not provide a comprehensive solution to the euro-zone debt crisis that threatens to cause another global recession.

Markets have rallied for days on hopes for the plan, which is widely expected to focus on lightning Greece’s debt load, making banks raise more money and boosting the scope of the eurozone bailout fund’s lending capacities.

Schaeuble said that leaders expected to adopt a five-point plan to address instability within the euro-zone but that more work would still needed to be done.

Factory output up on rising demand

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. factories produced more goods in September for a third straight month, the latest signal that the economy is rebounding from its summer slump.

They made more airplanes, trucks and home electronics last month to meet rising demand, the Federal Reserve said Monday.

The 0.4 percent increase in factory output followed other promising signs in September. Hiring increased slightly, and retail sales grew by the most in seven months.

IBM revenue falls short

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — IBM raised its full-year guidance again on Monday, offering fresh evidence of the company’s ability to wring profit from technology services and software contracts.

But questions about growth reared up as IBM’s third-quarter revenue fell slightly short of Wall Street’s target — a disappointment for a company that usually exceeds expectations. IBM’s stock fell in extended trading.

Net income was $3.84 billion, or $3.19 per share, up 7 percent from $3.59 billion, or $2.82 per share, a year ago. Excluding one-time items, it earned $3.28 per share, 6 cents more than the average estimate from analysts surveyed by FactSet.

Revenue rose 8 percent to $26.16 billion, slightly less than the $26.26 billion analysts had expected.

Citigroup earnings rise to $3.8B

NEW YORK (AP) — Citigroup Inc.’s third-quarter earnings rose 74 percent as more of its customers paid their bills on time, leading to lower losses from loans. An accounting gain also boosted income.

Monday’s results reflected Citigroup’s seventh straight quarter of income growth. Citigroup was one of the biggest recipients of taxpayer support during the financial crisis. It received $45 billion in bailouts funds and was partly owned by the government until December 2010.

The New York bank’s net income rose 74 percent, to $3.8 billion, due to lower losses from loans and an accounting gain related to the valuation of the bank’s own debt. Citi’s stock fell 1.7 percent to close at $27.93, less than other banks stocks. Citi is the nation’s third-biggest bank measured by assets.

Wells Fargo 3Q profit up 21%

NEW YORK (AP) — Wells Fargo & Co.’s CEO John Stumpf says he understands the “angst and anger” being expressed by the protesters at Occupy Wall Street and its spinoff sites around the country.

“This downturn has been too long. Unemployment is too high. And people are hurting. We get that,” he said on Monday in response to a question on the demonstrations. Stumpf was speaking on a conference call to discuss third-quarter results for the nation’s largest mortgage lender and its fourth-largest bank by assets.

Weak economic conditions worked against Wells Fargo during the quarter that ended Sept. 30. The San Francisco bank’s income jumped 21 percent, but that was driven largely by having fewer problem loans outstanding. That allowed the bank to reduce the amount of money set aside to cover defaults. Accounting rules require banks to count that those funds as income.

Ultra-low interest rates also hurt the bank’s results by reducing the income it gets from lending. As a result, the bank reported revenue that was lower than Wall Street expected.

Branson and NM officials dedicate space terminal

UPHAM, N.M. (AP) — With his usual flare, British billionaire Richard Branson rappelled from a balcony, shook up a big bottle of champagne and took a swig while christening the world’s first built-from-scratch commercial spaceport on Monday.

Branson’s Virgin Galactic will stage its commercial space tourism venture from Spaceport America in a remote patch of desert in southern New Mexico.

Branson was joined by Gov. Susana Martinez, astronaut Buzz Aldrin and scores of would-be space travelers at the terminal-hangar for the dedication. It had been nearly a year since Branson was in New Mexico to celebrate the completion of the runway.

“The building is absolutely magnificent,” he said. “It is literally out of this world, and that’s what we were aiming at creating.”

With the spaceport and mothership completed, the company is now finalizing its rocket tests.

“We’re ticking the final boxes on the way to space,” Branson said.

He hopes enough powered test flights of Virgin Galactic’s sleek spacecraft can be done by the end of 2012 to start commercial suborbital flights from the spaceport soon after.

More than 450 people have purchased tickets to fly with Virgin Galactic. About 150 of them attended the ceremony.

Before getting to enter the hangar, the crowd was treated to a flyover by WhiteKnightTwo, the mothership that one day will help take space tourists on suborbital flights.

The $209 million taxpayer-financed spaceport will be a launch station for people and payloads on the rocket ships being developed for Virgin Galactic. With custom metal paneling and massive panes of glass, the state-of-the-art terminal rises from the desert floor to face the nearly 2-mile concrete runway. The building will house Virgin Galactic’s spacecraft, mission control and a preparation area for travelers.

It was six years ago that Virgin Galactic and New Mexico officials reached an agreement to build the spaceport. Officials said the completion of the terminal and hangar marks another major milestone that brings the dream of rocketing tourists into space closer to reality.

Still, the question many are asking is when the first ships will launch from Spaceport America. It was Branson who once predicted the maiden passenger flight would take off in 2007.

Branson acknowledged the wait in an interview Monday. He and his two children will be among the first to fly, and he said he wants to ensure he can bring them home safely. “We want to be sure we’ve really tested the craft through and through before turning it over to the astronauts who bought tickets to go up,” he said. “If it takes a bit longer, we’ll take a little bit longer.”

Commercial service will start up after the company gets a license from the Federal Aviation Administration. NASA has already signed a $4.5 million contract with the company for up to three chartered research flights.

Tickets for rides aboard WhiteKnightTwo cost $200,000. The 1 1/2-hour flights will include about five minutes of weightlessness and views of Earth that until now only astronauts have been able to experience.

Like development of the spacecraft, construction of the 110,152-square-foot terminal and hangar facility has been complicated. There were delays, building code problems, contractor disputes and costly change orders.

2 Ohio Dems argue over collective bargaining law

CLEVELAND (AP) — Two Democrats debated the state’s overhaul of collective bargaining rights on Monday, a former congressman saying it scapegoats public employee unions and a former Cincinnati city councilman saying it evens the playing field with private sector workers.

Cincinnati great-grandmother Marlene Quinn, who appeared in a TV ad backing the law’s repeal before a group opposing repeal used her statements in an ad defending the law, made a cameo appearance at the City Club of Cleveland debate.

“I wanted to hear both sides of the story, and I think they did a good job, both of them,” Quinn said after the debate. While reiterating her opposition to the law, she added, “They had good points.”

Quinn, sitting at a table reserved for opponents of the law, nodded and applauded in agreement with former Cleveland-area congressman Dennis Eckart’s arguments against the law. As for Jeff Berding, a backer of the law who resigned from the Cincinnati City Council earlier this year, she said, “I think I did vote for him once or twice.”

Among other changes, the Ohio law bans public worker strikes and limits the collective bargaining abilities of more than 350,000 teachers, firefighters, police officers and other public employees. Workers could negotiate on wages but not on their pension or health care benefits.

The ad opposing the law shows Quinn’s great-granddaughter, Zoey, being rescued by a firefighter. Zoey arrived at the luncheon ballroom with her great-grandmother but left before the debate began. The City Club traditionally hosts election-season debates involving candidates and policy issues.

Eckart played to the hometown crowd, frequently mentioning Cleveland issues to cast his opposition to the law. He said the law makes public employees scapegoats for economic problems and for state cuts in aid to local governments.

Berding relied heavily on his experience dealing with budget issues while serving on the Cincinnati City Council. He said the law would fairly require public employees’ contributions to their pensions and health insurance.

“People make this about (Republican Gov. John Kasich), and you can make this about some partisanship,” Berding told an audience dominated by union backers who oppose the law. “But if you are on the front lines trying to balance your budget, you would know that in states all over this country, including states with Democratic governors, Democratic representatives, Democratic mayors, all facing the consequences of the downturn, and we’re trying to balance our budgets without raising taxes.”

Eckart highlighted Quinn’s situation on the issue of firefighter overtime.

“To suggest that if I work beyond my time I should be denied overtime goes to the very heart of how Kasich and his cronies see this situation,” he said. “Somehow that firefighter is being penalized in a way for a fire that burned too long. Now that is just patently unfair. It’s unsafe for the homeowner, and ask Marlene sitting back there, whose great-granddaughter was saved because a Cincinnati fire team was able to respond, stay on the scene and get their job done.”

Kasich has told supporters of the law that it’s a matter of jobs and fairness. He said during a Sunday rally at the Dublin Pub in Dayton that the law helps local government control costs, which he said is good for business and jobs.

Residents vote Nov. 8 on whether the law should be tossed out.

KSU student found dead in dorm

KENT (AP) — An investigator says a student from Pennsylvania found dead in an Ohio college dorm room may have died up to six days earlier.

Coroner’s investigator Tom Decker says there was a slight odor coming from the room at Kent State University where the body of 26-year-old James Barnes of Midland, Pa., was found Sunday.

University police had gone to the Leebrick Hall room after a relative reported the family had not heard from Barnes in a while.

Decker says there was no evidence of foul play. He says a ruling on the cause of death will have to await tests on what was in Barnes’ system.

University spokeswoman Emily Vincent says Barnes was a first-semester graduate student pursuing a business degree. She says he did not have a roommate.

Advantage Advertising establishes office

By LARRY SHIELDS
Staff Writer

SALEM — After 20 years of operating an advertising business and selling promotional gifts from his home, Dave Navoyosky moved to 672 E. 2nd St. where a ribbon-cutting ceremony was held with the Salem Chamber of Commerce on Monday.

Next month will be the 20th year for Advantage Advertising and Navoyosky, 63, recalled getting started by “going to businesses in Lisbon, Canfield and Salem” selling on a part-time basis to supplement his income as a painter.

A move to the Internet in 2005 was like a business relaunch.

“It really started taking off,” Navoyosky said, adding that he built his web pages to make it easier for customers to navigate.

But Navoyosky wanted a stronger physical presence and “a public place to hire sales people” noting he has a couple of businesses that sell gifts and promotional items with logos.

Eugenia Tullis also works with Navoyosky as an “outside, independent sales representative.”

Navoyosky said, “Our philosophy is to help businesses impress their customers. We do that by putting their logo on quality business gifts and promotional products.

“Our most popular items are calendars, Mag-Lite flashlights, pocket knives, Leatherman tools and Lufkin tape measures.”

He added that pens, caps, travel mugs and yard signs “are also good sellers.”

The biggest part of our customers are online and Google “is real nice to us,” he said, explaining the search engine directs users to his two websites — Advantage-Advertising.com and Log-knives.com — on the first index page when typed in.

“If you’re not on the first page of Google, you’re nowhere,” he said.

Once shopping cart orders are concluded, Advantage-Advertising.com and Logo-knives.com ships direct from the imprinter from multiple locations around the country.

For example, a BIC pen order can be shipped as soon as the next day while “a lot of time things will take two or three weeks,” he explained.

“I’m guessing maybe two-thirds to three-quarters of our business is online,” he said.

The East Second Street store is open from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, with other hours by appointment.

Navoyosky can be reached at 330-337-6220 and Tullis can be reached at 330-272-1902.

Taste in Salem

Tickets are on sale for the 15th annual Taste in Salem extravaganza to be held on Wednesday, Oct. 26, at the Salem Golf Club. Over a dozen local area restaurants, bakeries and delis will offer their delicious cuisine to patrons of the event that donates proceeds to the Northern Columbiana County United Way campaign. Local businesses offer donations to several raffle giveaways. Shown in the photo are Gary and B.J. Abrams, this year’s “Heart and Soul” award recipients. Each year, individuals from the area who have been very community minded and have shared their time and talents are honored at the event. Tickets are $30 per person and $35 at the door and are available at the Salem Area Chamber of Commerce office. (Submitted photo)

Leetonia school to open for indoor walking

LEETONIA — The Leetonia Schools will again be open to community members for indoor walking beginning Oct. 24. The building will be open from 6:30 to 7:15 a.m. and 3 to 5 p.m. on Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Walkers will be able to walk all halls from 6:30 to 7:15 a.m.; middle and high school halls from 3 to 4 p.m.; and the elementary hallway from 4 to 5 p.m.

Walkers should enter through the right main front door and sign in/register in the lobby. The walking program will only run during the days when school is in session. There will be no medical professionals on-site during walking hours. Walkers are encouraged to walk in small groups and carry cell phones for emergencies since school phones will not be available during walking hours.

For information call Susan Frenger (administrative secretary) at 330-427-6594 Ext. 1001.

Avoid Halloween scare: Don’t drink and drive

Halloween should be a time for scary costumes, trick or treating and good fun. But unfortunately, it has become a very dangerous and deadly night of the year due to impaired driving. Too many people still don’t understand that alcohol, drugs and driving don’t mix. Impaired driving is no accident — nor is it a victimless crime. Too many lives are being lost and we need everyone’s help to stop it.

According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, 41 percent of all highway fatalities across the nation on Halloween night involved a driver or a motorcycle operator with a Blood Alcohol Concentration (BAC) of .08 or higher, which is illegal in every state.

Driving impaired is simply not worth the risk. The consequences are serious and real, especially when you risk killing yourself or someone else. On a night such as Halloween, children dressed in costumes can run out onto streets and roadways, and damage could be staggering. In addition, the trauma and financial costs of a crash or an arrest for driving while impaired can be significant.

Following these simple tips can help ensure that everyone enjoys their Halloween celebration:

- Plan a safe way home before the festivities begin; designate a sober driver and give that person your keys.
- If you’re impaired, use a taxi, call a sober friend or family member, or use public transportation so you are sure to get home safely.
- If you see a drunk driver on the road, don’t hesitate to contact local law enforcement or 1-800-GRAB-DUI for the Highway Patrol on state highways.

Factors converged in crash that killed Dan Wheldon

Coroner says 33-year old died of blunt head trauma

By JENNA FRYER
Associated Press

The perfect storm: A high-banked oval crowded with the largest field of the season. Inexperienced or impatient drivers racing at more than 220 mph. Absolutely no room for error.

What was supposed to be a season-ending showdown at Las Vegas Motor Speedway became instead a script for disaster Sunday: a fiery 15-car crash that killed popular two-time Indianapolis 500 winner Dan Wheldon and left the shaken auto racing community to deal with uncomfortable questions. Clark County Coroner Michael Murphy says Wheldon died of blunt head trauma.

Wheldon was pronounced dead at 1:54 p.m. Sunday at University Medical Center in Las Vegas.

The drivers knew the Las Vegas race was going to present challenges even before the season began.

The sleek, open-wheel machines of IndyCar had not raced at the track since 2000, and the now-defunct Champ Car Series was last there in 2005. Some of the drivers had been there before, but many had not. None had raced an IndyCar there since the track's 2006 reconfiguration added "progressive banking" designed to increase side-by-side racing.

So there was some initial fretting when

Half bad Steelers?

Steelers shrug off sluggish 2nd half

By WILL GRAVES

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Steelers cautioned each other about a let down after rolling to halftime with a commanding 14-point lead over Jacksonville on Sunday.

It happened anyway.

Though the Steelers hung on for a 17-13 win, their inability to move the ball on offense and get off the field on defense in the second half continued a troubling trend for a club that considers itself one of the AFC's elite.

Managing one half of good football is easy. Two is a problem.

Though Pittsburgh (4-2) has won four of five, it has only dominated in spurts. The first half against the Jaguars, Seahawks and Titans. The first quarter against Indianapolis.

Good enough to win against the league's also-rans. The Steelers know it's not good enough to get them where they want to go.

"Maybe I need to keep the guys going," quarterback Ben Roethlisberger said. "I felt like I tried to do that, but maybe I didn't do enough."

A week after lighting up Tennessee for five touchdowns on mostly throws underneath, Roethlisberger tried to air it out against the Jaguars. It worked for 30 minutes. He hit Mike

Rangers, Cardinals to meet for the 1st time in a long time

Albert Pujols and Josh Hamilton in a matchup of MVP sluggers. Nelson Cruz and David Freese becoming bigger names with each home run swing. Pitching staffs full of shaky starters and shutdown relievers.

Plus a Rally Squirrel and the Claw.

The Texas Rangers and St. Louis Cardinals, with a lot of symmetry, are all set to get acquainted in the World Series.

Leave it to ol' Arthur Rhodes to make the introductions. The 41-year-old lefty specialist began the year with Texas, wound up in St. Louis and is likely to get a ring either way.

Besides, it takes someone who's been around a bit to remember the last time these teams played.

It was 2004, in a three-game set in Texas. Even in this era of interleague play, that's the only time the Cardinals and Rangers have met when it meant something. According to STATS LLC, that matches the fewest games between a pair of opponents in the majors, tying Mets-White Sox.

Game 1 is Wednesday night in St. Louis, with aces Chris Carpenter of the Cardinals and C.J. Wilson set to start. The opening odds see Texas as a small favorite.

"The Rangers are scary. They're a scary team," said Freese, the NLCS MVP. "You

Buckeyes' Simon says give me awards

COLUMBUS (AP) — What’s brewing with the 2011 Ohio State Buckeyes ...

BUCKEYES BUZZ: It was a lazy day, so to speak, for the Buckeyes. Since they’ve got a bye week on Sat-urday, they have altered the schedule somewhat. They took Sunday off rather than doing filmwork and condi-tioning.

Team spokesman Jerry Emig said players only lifted weights Monday. He said the team would return to its regu-lar routine with full practices on Tues-day, Wednesday and Thursday.

BIG TEN HONORS: The season is more than half over and finally the Buckeyes have their first Big Ten player of the week.

DT John Simon was selected after a career-best eight tackles in the 17-7 victory over previously unbeaten and 16th-ranked Illinois. He also hit a per-sonal best with four tackles for a loss, one off the Ohio State record, includ-ing two sacks.

Illinois came in averaging 35 points a game.

The offensive player of the week will be on the Buckeyes’ radar screen this and next week. Wisconsin RB Montee Ball ran for three TDs and passed for one in the Badgers’ rout of Indiana. He rushed for 142 yards on 14 carries and scored on runs of 5, 35 and 54 yards. He also tossed a 25-yard scoring pass to QB Russell Wilson — giving him more passing yards on Sat-urday than Ohio State had.

The Big Ten special teams player of the week was Penn State P/K Anthony Fera, who kicked three field goals in a 23-18 win over Purdue and dropped three punts inside the Boilermakers’

The freshman of the week was Ohio native (Cincinnati Moeller HS) Mike Sadler, who averaged 41 yards on five punts in Michigan State’s victory over previously unbeaten Michigan.

He caught his sixth TD pass on Saturday against Illinois, a 17-yarder from Brax-ton Miller that was the only completion of the day for Ohio State in its 17-7 win over the Illini.

Earlier this season against Akron, Stoneburner became the first TE in modern Ohio State history to catch three TDs in a game. Bob Grimes caught four touchdown passes vs. Washington State in a 1952 game. STEELERS FROM 1B

Wallace for a pair of deep completions — including a 28-yard touchdown — and Em-manuel Sanders for another.

In the second half he contin-ued to test Jacksonville. Though Wallace and company had little trouble getting behind the secondary, Roethlisberger couldn’t get them the ball on a windy day at Heinz Field. Roethlisberger completed just 1 of 5 passes after the break.

“My biggest thing is just don’t underthrow it, but they got up in the wind and just kept going,” Roethlisberger said. “I got to connect on them. That’s on me.”

Though he was hardly alone in his frustration. The Steelers had a chance to go up 21-0 in the second quarter after run-ning back Rashard Mendenhall ripped off a 68-yard run. Two plunges into the line and a fade pass Antonio Brown that flut-tered over Brown’s head forced the Steelers to settle for a field goal.

A touchdown would have likely forced the Jaguars to abandon the run completely and rely on rookie Blaine Gab-bert. Instead the stand seemed to revitalize Jacksonville’s de-fense. The Steelers wouldn’t score again, though kicker Shaun Suisham missed a 46-yard field goal wide left.

“We (want to be) a team that is good and executes on third down and in the red zone and not turn the ball over,” Pitts-burgh wide receiver Hines Ward said. “If we do that, we’re a pretty good ball club. We just have to be consistent. We are not doing it on a consistent level yet. But we’re getting there.”

The Steelers will need to get there soon if they want to prove their slow start is just that and not indicative of another Super Bowl hangover.

Pittsburgh travels to Arizona (1-4) next Sunday before a two-game homestand against New England and Baltimore. The Cardinals are no pushovers, and the Steelers are just 1-2 on the road this year, with the victory a 23-20 escape against winless Indianapolis.

Hanging with the Patriots and the Ravens — who have more combined wins (9) than the four teams Pittsburgh has beaten (6) — will require more than a solid half, and the Steel-ers know it.

“We have to keep the same intensity the whole game,” Wallace said.

On both sides of the ball.

Though Pittsburgh’s defense limited the Jaguars to 209 yards, Jacksonville made enough plays in the second half to hang around. The Jaguars scored their only touchdown on a 17-play, 80-yard drive that took nearly 10 minutes off the clock.

The drive included an auto-matic first down after Pitts-burgh’s Ryan Mundy roughed Jacksonville punter Nick Har-ris and a fourth-down conver-sion.

“They continued running the ball and we just did a bad job of tackling,” Pittsburgh line-backer LaMarr Woodley said.

And a poor job of putting a team away, again.

Still, the Steelers would rather apologize for sluggish play in a win than the alterna-tive. Despite their somewhat bumpy start, they’re right where they expected entering the meat of the season.

“We won the game,” Ward said, “that’s all that matters.”

SERIES FROM 1B

look at that lineup, you look at that staff. It’s going to be a battle.”

“I think we’re a team that can match up with them a lit-tle bit. And they’re confident, we’re confident. It’s been a tough road. I’ve definitely been watching the ALCS for sure. That’s some good ball over there,” he said.

Consider this an old-school World Series: top names on both sides, many of them fac-ing each other for the first time — the way it was before AL and NL clubs began play-ing each other all through the summer.

Think of Ted Williams vs. Stan Musial, maybe.

Musial, in fact, might even be at the ballpark next week. The 90-year Hall of Famer who helped the Cardinals win three World Series crowns was at Busch Stadium during the playoffs for pregame ceremonies.

Stan the Man and the Car-dinals beat Williams and the Red Sox in the 1946 Series. More than a quarter-century later, Williams became the first manager in Texas history after the franchise moved from Washington.

It took a lot longer for Texas to finally reach the Se-ries. Hamilton, Cruz, Michael Young and the Rangers made their first appearance last year, only to get shut down by San Francisco’s pitching in a five-game wipeout.

“We weren’t very happy with the results, and we cer-tainly knew that we were a better team than we showed,” manager Ron Washington said.

The Series shifts to Arling-ton for Game 3 next Saturday. The next day, there will be a doubleheader in Texas, of sorts — St. Louis Rams at Dallas Cowboys, then Cardi-nals at Rangers.

St. Louis has won 10 Series titles, second most to the New York Yankees’ 27. Manager Tony La Russa, Pujols and the Cardinals last took it in 2006, helped by Series MVP David Eckstein.

This year, hardly anyone expected St. Louis to make it this far, especially when it was 10½ games out of a playoff spot on Aug. 25. A sensational run in the last month, plus a tremendous collapse by At-lanta, gave the Cardinals the NL wild-card slot on the final day of the regular season.

The Cardinals did what many fans considered almost impossible in the first round — they eliminated the heav-ily favored Phillies. Carpenter outdueled Roy Halladay 1-0 in the decisive Game 5, then St. Louis relied on its bullpen every day to beat Milwaukee in the NL championship se-ries.

Jason Motte, Fernando Salas, Octavio Dotel, Marc Rzepczynski and the Cards’ crew shut down Prince Fielder and the Brewers, capped by a 12-6 win in Game 6 Sunday night.

A resurgent Lance Berk-man, Matt Holliday and the emerging Freese got a boost in the lineup from trade-dead-line addition Rafael Furcal, one of several moves by gen-eral manager John Mozeliak that worked out well.

The Cardinals also got help — some might believe — from a squirrel that scam-pered right in front of home plate during a playoff game in St. Louis.

The Rangers powered to the AL West title this year and hope to show the Claw, their hand signal for big hits, a lot starting this week.

Texas began the playoffs by beating Tampa Bay in four games and mashed Detroit in the six-game ALCS. Cruz was an MVP monster against the Tigers, hitting an LCS-record six home runs with 13 RBIs.

Closer Neftali Feliz, Alexi Ogando, Scott Feldman and two of GM Jon Daniels’ addi-tions — Mike Adams and Michael Gonzalez — keyed a bullpen that dominated the postseason.

Now it’s on to Busch Sta-dium for the opener. The NL holds home-field advantage this year because it won the All-Star game, with Fielder’s homer off Wilson the big hit. The weather forecast calls for clear skies, a welcome relief in a postseason dotted by rain.

And, oh, about those previ-ous Cardinals-Rangers games. St. Louis won two of three in June 2004, with the Cardinals’ lone loss coming when Young and Texas ham-mered Carpenter.

Carpenter will see a packed Texas lineup, including Young, in the opener.

“I haven’t thought a lick about it,” Carpenter said after Sunday night’s clincher. “I’m excited for our ballclub, I’m excited for our organization. Unbelievable. This group of guys, I’ve been saying all year long, it’s the most amaz-ing group of guys I’ve been around.”

Browns deal with more Hillis drama

Running back nursing sprained hamstring

BEREA (AP) — No matter the coast or the opponent, Peyton Hillis can't seem to outrun the drama.

Cleveland's running back, who since the season started has been involved in controversies surrounding contract negotiations with the Browns and his decision to sit out a game with strep throat, is again at the center of a mini-mystery surrounding an injury he sustained in Sunday's game at Oakland.

Hillis is nursing a strained left hamstring, an injury Browns coach Pat Shurmur said happened on a carry in the first quarter of Sunday's 24-17 loss to the Raiders. An MRI taken Monday confirmed Hillis' injury, and Shurmur said it's too early to say he'll miss this week's game against Seattle.

"Those injuries can take a couple of days or they can take however long," Shurmur said. "But it's a hamstring injury."

OK, that much is clear.

Here's where it gets a tad confusing.

On Sunday, the Browns did not announce Hillis' injury until late in the third quarter, leading to speculation Shurmur was benching his player. As Hillis stood on the sideline holding his helmet, TV commentators wondered why Hillis wasn't in the game when the Browns (2-3) were within striking distance and had planned to feature him against the Raiders.

So, coach, was Hillis hurt? "That's an easy one," Shurmur said Monday during his news conference. "You can be assured that he had a hamstring injury. That you can be assured."

Later, in an attempt to clarify any vagaries surrounding Hillis' injury, Shurmur unintentionally added new elements of uncertainty.

After Hillis got hurt, Shurmur said he was told by Cleveland's trainers the bruising back was "only to be used in emergencies." And, Shurmur implied that Hillis, who returned to the game for two plays in the fourth quarter to help with pass protection, did so without permission.

"He just kind of ran back in there," Shurmur said. "We knew that he was injured and he was just as a last resort he had to go in and play."

Hillis came back in to replace second-year back Montario Hardesty, who struggled with his blocking and nearly got quarterback Colt McCoy hurt on a blindside blitz.

Shurmur later backtracked on his comments regarding Hillis' unexpected return, saying he was sent into the game by Cleveland's coaches.

"We were aware he went back on the field to pass protect," Shurmur said. "He didn't go out there on his own."

Shurmur said he was unaware of the long delay between Hillis getting hurt and it being announced by the Browns' public relations staff. At one point, reporters were told Hillis was not hurt.

"In the heat of the game, the last thing I'm thinking about is letting the press box know," he said. "I don't think there was anything to try to keep it from somebody."

With talks between his agent, Kennard McGuire, and the Browns stalled on a contract extension, Hillis, who rushed for 14 yards on six carries Sunday, said last week he was worried about his future with Cleveland and beginning to wonder if he'll get a long-term deal.

There's no telling what may happen next, but Shurmur insisted the Browns are not shopping Hillis before Tuesday's 4 p.m. trading deadline.

"He's not on the trading block," Shurmur said.

Maybe so, but his reduced role in Cleveland's offense — at least through five games — has fueled theories the Browns no longer value Hillis, who rushed for 1,177 yards and 11 touchdowns last season. However, Shurmur said last week that Hillis would get the "bulk" of the carries against Oakland and that appeared to be the gameplan until he got hurt.

With Hillis out, and McCoy unable to throw deep, the Raiders stacked their defensive front to shut down Cleveland's running game and blitzed constantly.

"We really wanted to feed Peyton early and often," lamented Pro Bowl tackle Joe Thomas. "When he came down with that injury early, you've kind of got to scramble a little bit, decide what you want to do going forward. Also a little bit of that was the way Oakland was playing us, they broke tendency."

"They were trying to pressure us with six-, seven- and eight-man blitzes to stop the run, but also to bring one more blitz than we had a blocker. So it was a little bit tough when Peyton went down, so I'm hoping that he can get healthy and we can feed him a bunch next week."

Hillis was not available to the media on Monday as Shurmur changed the schedule for team meetings after the late-night flight back from the West coast.

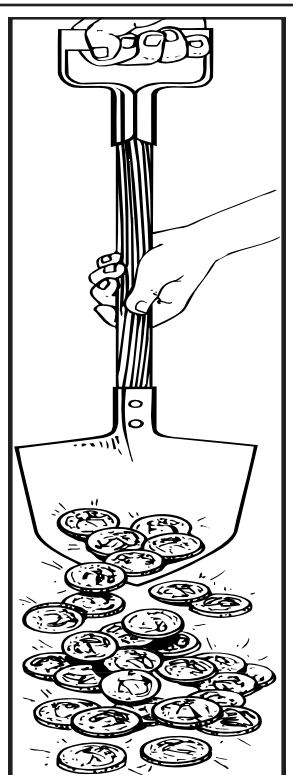

Shurmur has already had to deal with a season's worth of issues in his first five games as Cleveland's coach.

Besides the latest Hillis matter, wide receiver Josh Cribbs complained after Sunday's game about his role in the offense, labeling it "very insignificant." Also, McCoy had another subpar performance, completing just 21 of 35 passes — most of them short attempts. And, Shurmur took the blame for the Browns "selling out" and trying to block a field goal in the third quarter only to be burned by a fake as the Raiders threw a 35-yard score.

Browns fans have focused some of their angst on Shurmur, who is taking it all in stride.

"I've lived this before," he said. "First for 10 years in Philadelphia and two years in St. Louis, and we were building. I get it. I understand it. It's about winning football games. So our focus is getting this team ready to play Seattle and getting a win."

"That's the focus."

Revis' INTs help lead Jets past Dolphins 24-6

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — For a team in turmoil, this was one therapeutic win.

It certainly wasn't pretty or convincing. But it did the job for Rex Ryan and his feuding New York Jets.

Darrelle Revis ran back the first of his two interceptions 100 yards for a touchdown and the Jets did just enough to beat the winless Miami Dolphins 24-6 on Monday night and end a three-game losing streak.

Mark Sanchez threw a 38-yard touchdown pass to Santonio Holmes and ran for another score as the Jets — who called this a "must-win" game — capped a tough week by pulling out a victory and sending the Dolphins to their fifth straight loss.

With the losses mounting and the season already on the brink of spinning out of control for the Jets (3-3), they traded wide receiver Derrick Mason to Houston and then had to deal with some infighting as Holmes called out the offensive line for not giving Sanchez enough time to throw deep. Right guard Brandon Moore fired back, saying those comments could have a "fragmenting effect" and were not what a captain, which Holmes is, should do.

Ryan, who insisted his team's Super Bowl hopes would not be undone by locker room disharmony, even sent Holmes and Moore out as the captains for the pregame coin toss.

Turns out, this game against the Dolphins (0-5) came at just the right time as the Jets got their season back on track. Next up for New York: the San Diego Chargers (4-1) on Sunday, with a chance to head into the bye on a high note.

Sanchez, who has also taken lots of criticism, finished 14 of 25 for 201 yards and the touchdown pass to Holmes, and Shonn Greene ran for 74 yards on 21 carries.

Reborn Jets beat Penguins 2-1 for 1st win

WINNIPEG, Manitoba (AP) — Kyle Wellwood scored 8 seconds into the game, and the reborn Winnipeg Jets earned their first win by beating the Pittsburgh Penguins 2-1 on Monday night.

Tanner Glass netted Winnipeg's other goal, Alex Burmistrov had two assists, and Ondrej Pavelec stopped 28 shots to earn the win for the Jets — formerly the Atlanta Thrashers.

Zbynek Michalek had the only goal for Pittsburgh, which got 33 saves from Marc-Andre Fleury.

Heading into the game, the Jets (1-3) were one of three winless NHL teams. The other two, the New York Rangers and Columbus Blue Jackets, were idle Monday.

Pittsburgh (3-2-2), which played without top forwards Sidney Crosby and Evgeni Malkin, has lost two in a row.

After the opening faceoff at raucous MTS Centre, passes between Nik Antropov and Burmistrov ended with Wellwood beating Fleury. Wellwood tied former Thrashers player Ron Petrovicky for the franchise's fastest goal.

Winnipeg went up 2-0 with just over a minute left in the first period when Burmistrov stole the puck from defenseman Kris Letang along the boards. Burmistrov sent the puck over to Glass in the high slot and he fired a shot through the legs of a screened Fleury.

Pittsburgh got within 2-1 with 1:38 left in the second period when Michalek scored from just inside the blue line.

Letang assisted on the goal, giving him seven points this season, including one goal. Letang had been tied with Ottawa's Erik Karlsson for most points by a defenseman.

NBA heads to mediation, Stern seeks quick results

NEW YORK (AP) — The NBA and players' association are ready to try mediation, and Commissioner David Stern wants results quickly.

Stern said last week during an interview with WFAN radio in New York that without a deal Tuesday, when the sides meet with federal mediator George Cohen, his "gut" was that there wouldn't be NBA basketball on Christmas.

Owners are opening two days of board meetings Wednesday, and Stern wants to be able to bring a deal to them.

But can a mediator swoop in and smooth out two years of bickering in one day?

Attorney Jay Krupin, chair of EpsteinBeckerGreen's national labor practice in Washington, doesn't think so — unless the players are prepared to concede on some issues.

"If the players want to get back on the court, then this is a great time for them to try to show that they're willing to make some type of compromise, and I think that's what it is," he said. "This is an opportunity to really determine whether or not the players are willing to make concessions. I think the owners are willing to walk away without concessions, so if the players really want to make concessions when they meet, that has to be expressed to the mediator."

"If that happens, then the burden turns to the NBA to say, 'All right, you'll be willing to make some concessions; now we're willing to talk.' If they're not willing to make concessions, then the mediation would just go on for the day and it'll let the NBA know that they probably have to cancel, go through Christmas and maybe even the rest of the season."

Players already feel they've conceded plenty financially, and they dismissed Stern's attempt to attach added importance to Tuesday's talks, with union president Derek Fisher of the Lakers saying it was just an "arbitrary deadline" for potential Christmas cancellations.

Stern was clear in the radio interview and others he gave late last week that he was just stating his opinion about further losses of games — but not about his desire for significant movement Tuesday.

"If there's a breakthrough, it's going to come on Tuesday," he told NBA TV. "And if not, I think that the season is really going to potentially escape from us because we aren't making any progress."

second-year IndyCar chairman Randy Bernard announced a $5 million payday to any moonlighting driver who could win the race.

Bernard had hoped to land a superstar or two from the fender-rubbing NASCAR circuit. Maybe even former Indianapolis 500 winner Juan Pablo Montoya.

But nobody bit, despite interest from NASCAR driver Kasey Kahne, X-Games star Travis Pastrana and former CART champion Alex Zanardi.

“Hopefully they’ll pick someone competent enough to drive those things because it is an IndyCar,” Penske driver Will Power said shortly after the prize was announced. “You can’t rub panels. You rub wheels, and someone’s going flying.”

Kahne said Monday that team owner Rick Hendrick was against his participation, and Hendrick confirmed it. Kahne’s lack of experience in an IndyCar made it virtually impossible for him to win.

“The upside is winning that big purse, but it’s not realistic to think you can go out there and beat the drivers who run the series full time,” Hendrick said. “They’re incredibly talented, and it would be a significant investment of time and resources to be competitive. You’d have to test and practice, and it would inevitably take focus away from what you’re trying to do (in NASCAR).”

“Not having the experience in those type of cars — not having a feel for them — increases the odds of something happening (on the track). We have a lot of commitments, and I didn’t think it made sense to create a distraction or take a chance.”

That left only Wheldon, winner of 14 races on ovals in IndyCar, including the Indy 500 in May, to be eligible for the $5 million prize. Bernard made that ruling because the 33-year-old Englishman lost his job at the end of last season, put together a one-race deal for the Indy 500 and had turned down offers from less-competitive teams.

Wheldon put together a deal with Sam Schmidt Motorsports to race two weeks ago at Kentucky and for the prize on Sunday.

“He wanted to do it in the worst way,” an emotional Bernard said Monday.

A lot of other drivers wanted to be in the race, too.

Interest in the final race, which Bernard had worked tirelessly to create, had risen enough that sponsors wanted to get involved. Because IndyCar is in the final year of racing its current car design, teams had expendable inventory.

It led to 34 entries in the field. That’s one car more than the Indy 500, five more than the race two weeks ago at Kentucky, and eight more than IndyCar had in Japan last month.

Who were these new drivers? Men and women without much experience at IndyCar’s top level.

It was the fourth start for Wade Cunningham, who was in the thick of the action where the accident started.

It was the third career start for Pippa Mann and the 20th for JR Hildebrand, who both spent Sunday night in a Las Vegas hospital recovering from injuries suffered in the accident.

At least six drivers didn’t have enough starts to complete a full season, and some of the veterans had raced only a handful of times this season.

They all turn out for the Indy 500, too, and the speeds on that oval are faster than they were at Las Vegas. But Indianapolis is a relatively flat track, is a mile longer than Las Vegas, and drivers have three weeks of track time to prepare for the race.

The drivers had three hours, 15 minutes of practice time over three days to get ready for Las Vegas. They were not on the track at all Saturday.

Davey Hamilton alluded to a lack of experience contributing to Sunday’s accident.

“You can’t come in here and race with these guys and think you’re going to beat them — ever,” Hamilton said.

“I’m a part-time guy now. When I go to Indianapolis, I get weeks of practice,” he said. “But the days of me coming here, the experience I have in these cars, to try to compete against these guys is very, very difficult. These guys are tough, the best in the world. To compete and win, you need to do it all the time.

“And you can’t bring guys that have never raced, especially in IndyCars, to a deal like that,” he added.

Not every driver practices the patience and give-and-take approach required to make it unscathed to the finish line. Veterans in every circuit complain about young, aggressive drivers making moves far too early in the race and not understanding the etiquette required on a dangerous track.

Dario Franchitti, who won his third consecutive IndyCar title by default Sunday, recognized early that the racing ahead of him was far too intense. He hooked up with Chip Ganassi Racing teammate Scott Dixon, falling to the back of the field and away from danger.

That’s a common practice in NASCAR at Daytona and Talladega, where drivers have often laid back — away from the action for 450 miles — before mounting a frantic late charge through the field.

“I could see within five laps people were starting to do crazy stuff,” Franchitti said. “I love hard racing, but that to me is not really what it’s about.”

Danica Patrick, who is headed full time to NASCAR next year, knew it was going to be one long game of chicken before the race even began.

“I was really nervous coming into (the race) and why is because I knew as a driver we were going to be put in positions to decide to be flat-out and possibly be part of something like that, or look like a wimp and lift,” Patrick said. “But you know what? I lifted a little. There’s just a lot going on out there and it was way, way, way too early.”

The accident that led to Wheldon’s fatal crash began far ahead of him, when one car veered into another. Suddenly, everybody was running into everybody.

Wheldon had to start at the back of the field as part of the eligibility rules. By the time he reached the scene, the wreckage was everywhere.

He ran into another car at an angle on the track’s banking that sent his car airborne, rolling cockpit-first into the catch fence. Clark County Coroner Michael Murphy said Wheldon died of blunt head trauma.

Sitting at home, five-time defending NASCAR champion Jimmie Johnson watched the accident in horror. On Monday, he urged IndyCar to stop racing on ovals.

“I wouldn’t run them on ovals. There’s just no need to. Those cars are fantastic for street circuits, for road courses,” Johnson said.

“I hate, hate, hate that this tragedy took place. But hopefully they can learn from it and make those cars safer on ovals somehow,” he said.

“I have a lot of friends that race in that series, and I’d just rather see them on street circuits and road courses. No more ovals.”

Bernard, who just two weeks ago stressed the importance of having ovals on his circuit’s schedule to help develop American stars, must decide if there’s any place at all for them in IndyCar. He declined Monday to speculate on the future of ovals, saying it’s too soon for such decisions.

“Anytime you get into an IndyCar, you get into any race car, especially on an oval, this can happen,” Montoya said. “But in NASCAR, we have fenders, we have roofs. It’s not the same thing.”

Ganassi, the championship team owner who once employed Wheldon, also knows the risks.

“Sure, it’s always in the back of your mind, we all know the dangers and we all know what can happen,” Ganassi said. “But when it slaps you in the face, it hurts. Everybody hurts.”

HOROSCOPE

By HOLIDAY MATHIS
10/18/11

The effects of an upcoming square of Venus and Mars can already be detected. The tension between men and women will grow as the week progresses. When you encounter the small seeds of discord, make sure they don't take root. Prevent problems in the future by keeping everything out in the open. Do not bury resentment, or it will grow.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Frustration is an energy zapper. But you can avoid the feeling by simply refusing to believe that life should be happening at a different pace. Affirm to yourself: I have all the time in the world.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). It's time you had an imaginary conversation with that wise version of yourself who sits inside the tiny cave of your heart. It will feel good to be completely candid about your feelings.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You'll enjoy what you do, mostly because you resolve to enjoy it. Your attitude is stellar. You'll receive invitations and other nifty perks as people respond to your smile.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). A terrific daydream helps you glimpse your future. You envision yourself having a great time achieving one of your life's ambitions. See it over and over. You were meant for this.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You have developed solid relationships, and you continue to put in the work to maintain the connection. An out-of-town friend may want to come for a visit. Plans will come together over the next three weeks.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You feel lucky. Having that feeling and holding on to it automatically makes you luckier. The best part is that you attract good fortune that is extremely useful to others, as well as yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You're about to grow your intellect and skill set. There is a strong social aspect to your learning style. You'll find out more about your area of interest when you join clubs, groups, meet-ups and social networks.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You prefer to think the best of people. Sometimes they misbehave, and you give them a "free pass" anyway, assuming they didn't mean it or didn't know any better. You'd rather move on.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You speak words of kindness. You don't want anything, it's just that you genuinely notice what's nice and see what's remarkable about the people you meet.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You may realize that you've been psychologically leaning on someone because you didn't feel complete in some regard. Now you notice the void and start to fill it with enjoyable activities and entertainments.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). The answers you think you need may be lost in the mail, dropped in the middle of the call or floating in cyber space. However, you will eventually get to the bottom of it. You and your can-do attitude will prevail.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). If you're wondering why you keep making people laugh, it's because you say things that are true, and others feel compelled to agree in ways that go beyond mere words.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Oct. 18). You know at a deep level that you can handle whatever comes your way, and this knowledge inspires you to take more exciting risks this year. A new income source shows up in November. December brings social fun. Family makes you proud in February. New work comes in March. A long-term goal will be met in July. Scorpio and Leo people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 30, 1, 22, 48 and 50.

Some stores don't match

Heloise

Dear Readers: Have you noticed that some supermarket chains issue COUPONS that are good only at their specific stores? Meanwhile, other stores match the prices of their competitors. Heloise Central started talking:

Would the price-matching store take the other's store-specific coupon? A couple of quick phone calls solved the quandary.

The price-matching store said it would honor the discount amount of the coupon. A win-win situation!

However, another mega-retailer would match prices from a print advertisement, but would not give the discount from the store-specific coupon.

So, as with most things consumer-related, your best bet is to shop around, ask a lot of questions and do your homework before standing in line at the checkout. — Heloise

DIATOMACEOUS EARTH

Dear Heloise: A recent column addressed an ant problem, and you recommended a "poison" to get rid of them. (Heloise here: We said to use boric acid, which can be harmful to children and pets.)

There is a great crawling-insect killer that is not poisonous and does not harm kids or pets. It is diatomaceous earth. It is a powder that can be spread just as you recommended spreading the poison, and it is very effective.

I think it would be a great service to recommend nonpoisonous solutions to your readers. — Paul Hassing, via email

Paul, you're right! Diatomaceous earth is made of compressed fossils, has the texture of baby powder and kills insects by dehydrating them.

Available online and at garden and home-improvement centers, diatomaceous earth is safe for pets and people. — Heloise

FLAT SHEETS

Dear Heloise: There are lots of uses for flat sheets:

- ❑ As a tablecloth.
- ❑ To cover the couch to protect from pets.
- ❑ Hang as a curtain.
- ❑ As a kid's bedspread.

Too bad it is difficult to purchase the flat sheet without the whole set. — Peggy in Connecticut

She threatens suicide at every bump in road

DEAR ABBY: I have a dear friend, "Angie," who lost her father to suicide several years ago. Whenever life throws her a curveball, she talks about "ending it all." This bothers me tremendously because I went through the heartache and distress with her when her father took his life.

Angie has a loving family — mother, sister, beautiful children and a boyfriend. I, on the other hand, am completely alone, yet I muddle along without threatening suicide at every bump in life.

How can I get my friend to stop and realize how lucky she is to have such a wonderful support system when there are those of us who have no one — yet we find the strength to carry on? — NOT GIVING UP IN LAS VEGAS

DEAR NOT GIVING UP: You can't, although I'm sure you have tried. You have inner resources that it appears Angie does not. However, if a friend of mine whose relative had committed suicide told me repeatedly that she was considering doing the same, I would report it to her family and urge them to see that she got professional help. That's what you should do, in case depression and suicidal impulses run in her family, as is sometimes the case.

DEAR ABBY: I appreciate frugality, especially now that we all have to watch our spending. However, my neighbor is incredibly frugal. She often asks if she can "borrow" something instead of buying whatever it is she needs. Her latest request was for socks — yes, socks! — for her daughter's dance recital. I put socks in the same category as underwear, something a little too personal to be lending out. Before that, it was leggings, a CD — the list goes on and on. She always returns the items, but enough is enough! I work, she doesn't. I feel as though I'm expected to provide for them because I have a job. I don't know if I should say anything to her about her constant borrowing or simply say "no" to all future requests, which, of course, there will be. Please share your thoughts. — WHAT NEXT?

DEAR WHAT NEXT?: If your neighbor isn't working because she chooses not to, then say no. If she's not working because she hasn't been able to find a job — a circumstance in which millions of people in this country find themselves — then treat her as you would want to be treated if you were in her shoes.

DEAR ABBY: My father, who is happily married to his third wife, recently came across some photos of his first wedding to my mother in 1961. Apparently, the walk down memory lane didn't stop there for him. He asked his wife, who evidently agreed, if he could have a party to celebrate the 50th anniversary of this event. I am appalled and kind of nauseated by the thought. Do you think I'm overreacting? I have considered refusing the invitation. Should I just suck it up, or tell my father I think the idea is narcissistic, insensitive and foolish? — SICK TO MY STOMACH

DEAR SICK TO MY STOMACH: Your question is a first. Why your father would consider throwing a golden anniversary party to celebrate a marriage that turned to lead and "sank" is mystifying. Equally so is his current wife's willingness to go along with it. While you and I might consider his idea to be ill-conceived, resist the urge to indulge in name-calling. Let him hear from others that the idea is narcissistic, insensitive and foolish. And, by the way, you are not obligated to accept every invitation you receive.

Mother finds it's a lousy world

Dr. Donohue

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My entire family — two boys, one girl, one dad and one mom — have lice. I am starting a support group for families who have had to experience this awful invasion of their scalps. I have reached the breaking point. Give me a plan for treatment and a timetable for their eradication from our home. — Name Withheld

Lest Neighbors Find Out

ANSWER: One of nature's smallest creatures, the head louse upsets domestic tranquility with more revulsion than most health-endangering illnesses. Head lice bring no disease with them. They are tiny, only 3 millimeters (1/10 inch) in length. They feed on blood and die within a day or two off the scalp. After feeding, lice have a reddish-brown hue. The mother louse glues louse eggs to hair, and those structures are called nits. They are only 1 millimeter long (4/100 inch) long. The eggs hatch in six to 10 days. If nits are more than a quarter of an inch from the scalp, the baby louse has already hatched, and the nit is no longer a problem. In an average life span of three months, the mother louse can lay up to 300 eggs.

Lice are not an indication of poor hygiene. Most of the time, they're introduced into a family by a child who caught them at school. They can infest other family members quickly. Transmission comes from direct contact with an infested individual and, less often, from contact with inanimate objects used by that individual, like hats, combs, brushes and bedding. You're not alone. Six to 12 million Americans (100 million worldwide) come down with head lice yearly.

Almost all people with head lice have intense scalp itching. A few have no symptoms. A number of methods effectively rid you of the problem. The first medicines used are permethrin (Nix) or pyrethrins (Rid), which are cheap and usually effective, although lice are becoming resistant to them in some locations. A second treatment is given seven to 10 days after the first. Ovide (malathion) is used if lice linger after Nix or Rid. And should Ovide not work, the oral medicine Stromectol (ivermectin) is available. A new medicine is Natroba (spinosad) suspension. It is held in reserve as a last resort.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My mother has Alzheimer's disease. She appears depressed. She has lost interest in most activities, sleeps too much, has no energy and has thoughts of death. She has been on a statin for several years for high cholesterol. My brother insists that she take Coenzyme Q10 because he believes many of her symptoms are due to the statin she takes. My mother has a limited income, and I'd hate her to spend money on something that is not going to help. Your thoughts are appreciated. — P.C.

ANSWER: Statins, the most powerful cholesterol-lowering drugs, work by decreasing the liver production of cholesterol. They block the synthesis of a substance that is a precursor to cholesterol. That same substance is a precursor to the production of CoQ10, something found in all body cells. So the level of CoQ10 could fall somewhat. It neutralizes the wastes produced by cell chemistry, it stabilizes cell membranes and it contributes to energy production. Because of this, some advocate supplying CoQ10 to those on statins. Many more do not agree.

CoQ10 might alleviate the muscle pain that sometimes arises with statins.

Your mother's symptoms sound like depression to me. For that, there is treatment. If your brother wants to foot the bill for CoQ10, let him. It won't hurt your mom.

Can't keep matching gifts with 'Violet'

Annie's Mailbox

Dear Annie: About 17 years ago, a neighbor of mine employed "Violet," a teenage au pair from France. We became friends, but when Violet returned home, we lost touch.

Earlier this year, Violet found me on Facebook, and we corresponded several times, catching up on each other's lives. Violet told me she was sending me a small gift, and I received quite a large box that included chocolates and other candies, a bracelet, a fan, etc.

In June, Violet got married. Normally, I would have sent a nice card, but to reciprocate for her gift, I put together a box with expensive hand towels, assorted soaps and a small statuette. I tried to keep the weight down, but it still cost me $50 to mail. Then, for my birthday last month, Violet sent me a package of assorted gifts.

Violet's birthday is coming up, and I don't know what to do. Had her birthday come first, I could have nipped this in the bud by sending only a card. Now, I feel I must reciprocate.

Annie, I can't afford to be buying gifts and shipping them overseas. Even sending something small will perpetuate the cycle. Soon it will be Christmas, which means more gifts.

In my thank-you note for her birthday gifts, I tried to gently tell her that she shouldn't be spending her money on me, but her English isn't that good, and I am worried about offending her. Any suggestions? — No More Gifts, Please

Dear No More: Send Violet something simple that will fit in a birthday card — perhaps a handkerchief, a photograph of the house where she once lived or a hand-drawn memento — along with your best wishes for her birthday. A gift doesn't have to be expensive to be meaningful. Regardless of how Violet reciprocates down the road, you are not obligated to respond in kind.
