Company makes use of vacant school building

By KEVIN HOWELL
Staff Writer

A local company is creating a model for communities with vacant school buildings to follow.

Greenford Bobcats LLC, owned by Green Township residents John Monroe and former trustee Ed Schaefer, hosted an open house for community members and local dignitaries at its Greenford complex, the Greenford Bobcats Space Center, formerly the South Range Middle School. The company also owns and operates the North Lima Business Complex at the former South Range High School and Elementary.

According to Monroe, the partners purchased the district's old buildings in an attempt to encourage business growth, battling

Children Services workers agree to three-year contracts

By TOM GIAMBRONI
Staff Writer

LISBON — The 21 workers in the county Children Services agency have agreed to a new three-year contract that includes a small raise the first year and requires they pay a slightly higher portion of their health insurance premiums.

The contact was approved this week by Columbiana County commissioners based on the recommendation of Eileen Dray-Bardon, director of the county Job and Family Services. Children Services is an agency of the JFS.

She said the contract, which the workers approved earlier in the week, calls for the 17 case workers to receive a 10-cent per hour increase, while the four-member clerical staff will receive a 15-cent raise.

The staff also agreed to pay 5 percent of their monthly health insurance premiums (they are currently paying 2 percent), which will still be less than the 10 percent non-union county employees are scheduled to begin paying in January.

There are no pay raises beyond the first year of the contract, which includes a re-opener clause in October 2012 for wages and health insurance.

"I think the reopener next year is what is important. We just have to remain flexible" because of the county's changing financial situation, said Commissioner Mike Halleck. "We appreciate the spirit

Auditor makes recommendation

By TOM GIAMBRONI
Staff Writer

LISBON — The state auditor's office recommended the county prosecutor and sheriff have an internal control policy for spending money from a special law enforcement account.

These were just some of the recommendations included in the recently completed 2010 state audit of Columbiana County government, the results of which were released last month.

The audit was free of any findings for recovery of misspent funds and only included one citation: Against the county auditor's office for again failing to implement Generally Accepted Accounting Principle (GAAP) system.

The county is cited every year for failing to switch to a GAPP system, which county Auditor Nancy Milliken is reluctant to implement because of the $30,000 price tag. She said before it is cheaper to pay the $750 fine than convert to GAAP.

The audit report also included a non-compliance finding because commissioners failed to obtain a bond for the dog warden in 2010.

The audit also include six recommendations, including the prosecutor and sheriff adopt internal control policies for expenditures from their Furtherance of Justice (FOJ) funds.

Multiple vehicle accident on SR 7

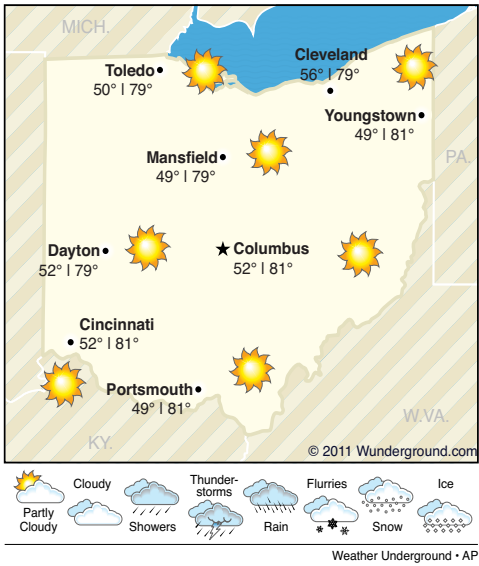

Four vehicles were involved in an accident on state Route 7 just south of the state Route 14 intersection in Columbiana Friday afternoon. Traffic was back up at the 7/14 intersection, as it often does on a Rogers Sale-fueled Friday afternoon. Apparently, one northbound vehicle failed to slow for the stopped traffic. It hit one vehicle, pushing it into a third vehicle, which was pushed into a fourth. Eight people, three of them children, were taken by ambulance to local hospitals with what the highway patrol listed as non-life-threatening injuries. Trooper Brent Hartley of the Canfield patrol post is handling the investigation. (Salem News photo by Patti Schaeffer) highest unemployment of any president running for re-election since World War II.

Economy adds 103,000 jobs, but it's not enough

Gene Sperling, a White House economic adviser, said the administration was "slightly comforted" that the jobs figure came in better than expected. But he said it was not good enough. Obama, adopting a combative tone as he waits for the Republicans to settle on a nominee to oppose him, has challenged Congress to get behind his $447-billion jobs bill or risk being run out of Washington.

The Obama plan aims to jolt the economy but cutting taxes and increasing spending on schools, roads and other public projects. He has proposed paying for it in part by raising taxes on the wealthy and corporations. Obama's Republican rivals are trying to persuade voters that he is to blame for high unemployment and the sluggish economy. Former Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney told Fox News Channel on Friday that Obama is criticizing Congress simply because he is "looking for someone to blame."

The report initially sent the stock market higher. The Dow Jones industrial average rose about 100 points, then turned lower after a credit rating agency downgraded Italy and Spain, adding to concern about the debt crisis in Europe.

Ethanol remaining in tanker cars burns off at the scene of a train derailment in Tiskilwa, Ill., Friday morning. Twenty-six cars on the 131-car train derailed early Friday morning, including seven to nine loaded with ethanol, sending up bright orange flames and plumes of smoke that could be seen miles away and forcing the evacuation of the small town of Tiskilwa. (AP Photo)

Explosions shake village after derailment

TISKILWA, Ill. (AP) — Explosions shook a northern Illinois village awake early Friday when a freight train loaded with ethanol crashed and ignited, sending bright orange flames shooting into the sky and forcing the evacuation of hundreds of residents.

Capt. Steve Haywood of the Ottawa Fire Department said the train's tanker cars were shipping ethanol and other materials for Decatur-based corn processor Archer Daniels Midland when it derailed around 2 a.m. At least six tanker cars burned, he said. No injuries were reported.

"It was the tallest thing in town," 19-year-old Dylan Carlson said of the flames, which he recorded from his home about four blocks away. He described a sweet smell, "almost like if you roasted maple syrup."

The evacuation of Tiskilwa, a village of about 800 people about 100 miles west of Chicago, was strictly precautionary and there was no immediate danger, said Les Grant, a spokesman for Bureau County Emergency Management. Evacuees were taken to a nearby high school.

The glow from the initial fire could be seen from miles away, but Grant said the blaze was contained by midmorning.

"Pretty much things are under control right now. ... The initial threat has been addressed," Grant said.

Tiskilwa resident Laura Henry said she heard a strange clacking noise followed by an unnerving boom that shook her and her husband from bed at their home about a mile from the derailment. They'd been sleeping with the window open and Henry was lying awake sometime after 2 a.m. when she heard the train coming.

"It was like something very heavy dropped," Henry said. "You definitely felt the ground shake when you heard the boom," she said.

Fearing a derailment, the couple decided to see if they could help and called 911 as they ran to the tracks, Henry said. At the edge of town, they saw tanker cars ablaze.

"It was just amazing. I've never seen a fire like that before," Henry said. "When it would ignite or the pressure would relieve from one of the cars it would shoot, probably 100 or 200 feet in the air, these huge flames."

Twenty-six cars on the 131-car train derailed, including seven to nine loaded with ethanol, according to Mick Burkart, chief operating officer of Iowa Interstate Railroad. The fire prevented officials from immediately getting close enough to the train to determine what caused the accident, Burkart said.

Archer Daniels Midland spokeswoman Jessie McKinney said the train included ADM railcars carrying ethanol and a type of dry animal feed.

"We are cooperating with authorities investigating the incident," McKinney said in an email.

The Illinois Environmental Protection Agency sent a representative to the scene to make sure waterways and the environment are protected, said spokeswoman Maggie Carson.

Carson said ethanol fumes should burn off without any long-term effects for area residents. The EPA will reevaluate the situation if other chemicals are found to be involved, she said.

Jobs aren't true focus of Obama

President Barack Obama claims he wants Congress to create new jobs. But he already has said he will reject bills some lawmakers hope will protect existing ones. Clearly, Obama is more interested in politics than helping the economy.

Again on Monday, the president insisted Congress approve his $447 billion package of tax cuts and make-work government projects. As we have pointed out, the tax cuts are structured in such a way as to make them virtually useless in creating new jobs. And the package would be funded by tax increases.

Even as Obama was demanding action on his plan, leaders in the House of Representatives were sending him a letter asking him to support theirs.

Bills to rein in the Environmental Protection Agency to keep it from destroying jobs are pending in the House. But Obama already has said that if such legislation lands on his desk, he will veto it.

It is apparent, then, that jobs are not the president's true focus. Instead, spending hundreds of billions of dollars on new "stimulus" programs — pleasing big labor unions and other supporters — is what he has in mind.

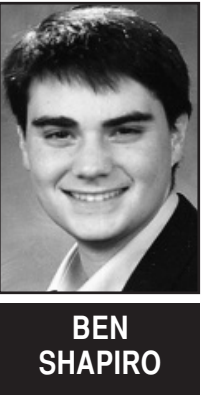

We hope Obama changes his mind on the EPA-related bills. Conservatives in Congress should not change theirs about rejecting his plan, however.

The Tea Party vs. The Establishment

BEN SHAPIRO

Gov. Rick Perry of Texas. He continues to ride high in the national polling, holding steady at near one quarter of the likely Republican primary voters. The Republican Party bigwigs, including key funders on Wall Street, are throwing their support to him.

There's only one problem: He'll lose the general election.

He'll lose the general election for a very simple reason: Nobody in the conservative base is excited about him. While the so-called GOP opinion leaders wax on about how super-electable he is, they fail to recognize that it is precisely that logic that gave us the unelectable John McCain. Turnout wins elections these days, not appeals to the independent voter.

Mitt Romney suffers from an enthusiasm gap. He seems to be everybody's second choice. He is few people's first choice. And that is a major problem for him. People pound the pavement for their favorite candidates. They work phone banks for their favorite candidates. They vote for their second favorite candidates — but they don't work for them.

Republican Romney supporters seem to be counting on sheer dislike for President Obama to carry Romney to victory. That logic is not compelling. Democrats thought the same thing when they nominated John Kerry against the unpopular incumbent George W. Bush. But an empty suit will not beat an unpopular incumbent.

In short, Romney suffers from an enthusiasm gap. Higher-ups in the Republican Party may like the cut of Romney's jib, but the grassroots think he's a flip-flopping stiff allied with corporate cronies, not a principled leader in a crucial time. No candidate for the presidency has suffered from the enthusiasm gap and won the Oval Office since Richard Nixon in 1972. Romney will not break that pattern.

The question is whether the Republican establishment truly cares. In some ways, the Republican establishment's treatment of the Tea Party is very much like the old media's treatment of the new media in 2008. During that election cycle, the new media — Internet and talk radio — loudly proclaimed the irrelevance of the old media. They shouted from the rooftops that the old media no longer controlled the narrative.

And the old media had its revenge. They not only nominated their candidate of choice, Barack Obama, without vetting him in any way, they then proceeded to nominate their Republican candidate of choice, John McCain, by magnifying the flaws of all the other candidates and touting his "momentum" in the primaries. Then they proceeded to elect Obama by tearing down McCain piece by piece.

In this election cycle, the battle isn't between the old media and the new media anymore. It is between the Tea Party and the GOP establishment. Since 2010, the Tea Party has declared victory; they've decided that they now handle the rudder of the conservative movement, thanks to the election of candidates like Allan West, Marco Rubio and Scott Walker.

But the establishment GOP sees the Tea Party as a threat, for two reasons. First, they think that the Tea Party is more interested in principle than victory. They look at Sharron Angle and Christine O'Donnell and they see a descent back to the losing days of Barry Goldwater. In this, they may be right. Many of those in the Tea Party would rather run principled candidates who lose than elect Democrat-lites who proceed to corrupt both the government and conservatism itself from within. In this view, at least there will be clear lines of blame when liberals drive the ship of state into the jagged rocks of reality.

Second, the establishment GOP is not aligned with the philosophy of the Tea Party. They like the philosophy of a Democrat-lite: more efficient, effective government, but not necessarily a smaller one. This is the philosophy of Mitt Romney, who rips Rick Perry for stating that Social Security is a Ponzi scheme (which it is), who established a health care mandate in the state of Massachusetts, who supports Obama's continued nationalization of education, whose tax cutting talk is weak tea at best.

Even more than the Democrat-lite philosophy, establishment Republicans like winning. Was Ronald Reagan running in these primaries, the establishment GOP would attempt to dump him for Romney, the same way they tried to dump Reagan for George H.W. Bush in 1980.

The problem, of course, is that the establishment GOP philosophy results not in victory but in tremendous losses. When conservatism is politically inconvenient, it sometimes wins (see Reagan) and it sometimes loses (see Goldwater). But when conservatism embraces the politics of convenience, it always loses. If the establishment GOP succeeds in nominating Mitt Romney, it will be able to add another black mark to its long record of failure — and, even worse, it will have co-opted the greatest Constitutionalist movement in a century for its own pathetic purposes.

What's wrong with Romney?

MONA CHAREN

Two new sets of Republicans are feeling deflated today — the Chris Christie hopefuls and the Sarah Palin stalwarts. The Christie decision didn't surprise me, perhaps because I grew up in Jersey. In fact, Christie and I attended the same high school! Anyway, Jerseyans are many things (not all of them nice), but slick dissemblers we are not. When Christie said, repeatedly, and in ever more colorful terms, that he wasn't running, I believed him. And, while I understand the boomlet for him, I'm also a little relieved to see that he is indeed a truthful guy.

Sarah Palin, by contrast, has finally dropped the longest tease in the history of presidential politics. Her bus tours, her visits to Iowa and New Hampshire, her coy references to the importance of finding just the right candidate to challenge Obama (prompting predictable chants of "Run Sarah Run" from her audience), and her refusal to say whether she was in or out of the race. She could use some Jersey straight talk.

Still, there are a few diehards out there who cannot quite relinquish the pursuit of a knight errant. No sooner did Gov. Christie reconfirm that he will not be running for president than some of the great mentioners began to whisper that the "big donors" are encouraging Majority Leader Eric Cantor, R-Va., to make the race.

Sheesh. It is no reflection on Cantor to say that this is beginning to look desperate and even a little pathetic. I confess to having participated, to a point, by urging first Gov. Mitch Daniels (choir sounds please) and then Rep. Paul Ryan to run. But those pleas were in December 2010 and August 2011. It's too late now. The first primaries are only a few weeks away. (Bad move Florida, but oh, well.) Preparing to run a presidential race is just too complex. It takes months (and sometimes years) to assemble the local activists (also called the ground game), the money, the advisors, the advertising team, the speechwriters, the advance men and the other necessities of modern campaigning.

Additionally, the candidate him or herself has to bone up on dozens of issues so as not to be caught flat-footed in debates (some of the current crop neglected that part). No one can do all of that at this late date.

So realistically, we have our field of candidates, and we're going to have to settle for one of them.

Yes, settle. I'm disappointed too that my favorites decided to sit this out. And I wish the Palestinians really wanted peace, that Vladimir Putin were a democrat and that the San Andreas Fault would go quiet. But part of being a conservative, I believe, is taking the world as you find it and dealing with it.

So, how do we feel about Romney? A year ago, I made the bold prediction that he was going nowhere. Romneycare, I believed, would prove a millstone around his neck, and he would be unable to recover from it.

I was wrong about how much of a role health care would play in the race. Obamacare remains important, but as a part of the larger issue of the failing economy. And Romney is widely perceived to be strong on economic issues.

Romney has also proved very fortunate in his adversaries. First Tim Pawlenty swung and missed (or, actually, failed to swing). Then Perry stumbled in attempting to recite Romney's past flip-flops. It's as if some Harry Potter figure has placed a charm on Romney, causing toads to fall from his opponents' mouths when they open them — or making them produce gibberish.

To be fair, Romney, who was a good candidate in 2008, has become an excellent one in 2012. He's knowledgeable, unflappable and dignified. He doesn't frighten Independents, and he may be the Republican Party's strongest nominee — and we simply must win in 2012.

But for Romney to overcome the hesitation among conservatives, he needs to shed his excessive caution and boldly embrace a platform of profound reform. This is an epochal political year, pitting competing governing philosophies against one another in the starkest match-up since 1980. On entitlements, the great anchor dragging down the ship of state, Romney has been vague and timid.

Romney's literature promises to repeal Obamacare, yet his proposed reforms are not so much a bold departure from the top-down Obama approach, as a promise to be a better manager. His website promises "Mitt will use limited federal regulation to correct common failures in insurance markets, while eliminating counterproductive federal rules." It's proposals like that that make our hearts sink.

through over a year of zoning issues to get the complexes off the ground. “It’s helping get brand new businesses started, creating new jobs in the area,” he said. Schaefer, who owns the farm adjacent to the Greenford facility, said he had first planned to purchase the property for farming purposes – his family having owned it until selling it in 1957 – but did not know what to do with building. With Monroe’s help, he said has been able to bring far more to the community. “I was in the first kindergarten class and the last graduating class [at Greenford],” he said, “so it’s nice to be able to make it look like something, draw people in and be an addition to the community.” And if the two complexes prove successful, it could mean more communities across the state will be looking at the Greenford Bobcats LLC as trailblazers. “It’s very creative and inventive,” said state Sen. Joe Schiavoni. “A lot of old school buildings are still sitting vacant, and they present an eyesore and safety hazard in their communities. I think this is a very good idea that will work and ultimately serve as a model for other areas if it succeeds.” Currently the Greenford Bobcats Space Center, with 36 rooms in the 67,000-square foot facility, houses a convenience store, a restaurant, a day care center, a media group, general offices and an insurance company. The North Lima Business Complex, with 46 rooms in approximately 100,000 square feet, houses crafting and antique stores, an Ebay consignment shop, a media group, a flea market on weekends and catering out of the commercially licensed kitchen. It will also serve as permanent offices for the Tadmor Circus, which will hold its events in the gymnasium. Both facilities offer hourly rentals and open gyms, as well as provide practice space for area sports teams. For information about leasing space at either complex call Monroe at 330-716-3064. Man accused in heroin case pleads guilty

By DEANNE JOHNSON Staff Writer LISBON – A man accused of shooting heroin with a 17-year-old East Liverpool student in Riverview Cemetery in April pleaded guilty in Columbiana County Common Pleas Court Thursday and was sentenced to three years in prison. Michael J. Stacey, 27, East Sixth Street, East Liverpool, and the girl were found by an assistant principal. Stacey pleaded guilty to corrupting another person with drugs. Assistant Prosecutor Ryan Weikart recommended the three-year sentence and that Stacey be allowed to serve it at the same time as the prison sentence he currently is serving. Stacey is already about halfway through a 14-month sentence for possession of drugs, also heroin, at the East Liverpool Motor Lodge in Oct. 2010. Although Stacey's attorney Fred Naragon asked Judge Scott Washam to consider a two-year jail sentence for his most recent charge, Washam opted for the three-year recommendation. Stacey was credited with time served since May 8, when he last was taken into custody.

Stacey's father, Roger Stacey appeared on his behalf and spoke before sentencing. "It was a shock to me," the elder Stacey said. "Obviously he did it. He admitted to it. I would like to get him back home, because he helps me. I don't think there would be any further problems." In other matters before Judge Washam Thursday morning: -- Joseph Eltringham, the man accused of severely beating a 86-year-old Robert Kastelic in an attempt to rob him, made his initial appearance in Common Pleas Court. He told Judge Washam he has hired Attorney Jeffrey Jakamides, who represented Eltringham at his preliminary hearing in Columbiana County Municipal Court on Aug. 30. An arraignment was set for Oct. 13. When asked about Eltringham's bond, Assistant Prosecutor John Gamble called Eltringham's offenses "particularly egregious" and the case file "very strong." He asked for bond to be continued at $500,000, which was granted. Eltringham, 44, Canal Street, East Rochester, is charged with assault, aggravated robbery and intimidation.

Dray-Bardon said the Children Services employees agreed to a reduction — $225 to $175 — in their stipend awarded during the weeks when they are assigned to be on-call for emergencies. She said this concession lowered the net cost of the new contract for the county to $500 over the next 12 months.

The employees agreed to lower the number of personal hours they are entitled to per year from 28 to 24, which brings them in line with provisions in Senate Bill 5, the bill passed by the legislature that reduces the negotiating power of public employee unions. The bill is on hold pending the outcome of a voter referendum in the Nov. 8 election.

The employees are represented by the Glass, Molders, Plastics and Pottery Workers union.

Auditor

The FOJ account, created by law, requires county commissioners fund it with appropriations equal to half the salaries of prosecutor and sheriff. Prosecutor Robert Herron is paid $115,703, while Sheriff Ray Stone is paid $84,522.

Milliken said the sheriff had implemented an internal control policy by the post-audit meeting held Sept. 14 but she is unsure if the prosecutor has done likewise. She said the recommendations are just that and not mandatory.

The audit noted the development department posted only six of the 28 transactions involving federal Community Development Block Grants awarded the county within the 15-day requirement.

Milliken said it is her understanding whenever CDBG funds are drawn by the county, the required paperwork has to be in the state's hands within 15 days of the transaction.

"Other county auditors have told me that about every economic development department has a problem meeting the rule because it's such a small window," she said.

The state advised Milliken to update procedures to safeguard the auditor's database by changing computer passwords for employees every three months.

Milliken said they already change the passwords on the secured sites every three months, but the state wants this same procedure followed for the employees general password used to sign onto their work computers at the start of the work day.

"Even if someone gets into an employee's computer they wouldn't be able to get in my any other programs because they don't know the password," she said.

Another complaint was the auditor's office failed to remove former employees from the list of those who have access to the database. The state said the county should develop comprehensive computer security policies.

"They were the names of people who had left but no longer had access anyway," she said, adding they now have a policy to automatically remove anyone's name once they quit.

HOROSCOPE

By HOLIDAY MATHIS 10/08/11

Venus is a moonless, ringless planet. So though she represents the highly desirable qualities of beauty, romance, poetry and delight, she also represents a quality perhaps even more alluring than those: She is unobtainable. She'll allow no one to "put a ring on it" or interfere with her solitude. Venus enters Scorpio, highlighting her single status.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You do like to get right to the heart of things. Some will appreciate your directness, though most will need to warm into ideas -- to mosey around for a while before homing in on the bottom-line truth of the matter.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). It takes a lot for you to lose your temper. Your patience is legendary. However, when the raging bull is finally prodded past the point of no return, the others should really get out of your way or prepare to be trampled.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Suddenly and inexplicably, the element of risk is not one with which you feel entirely comfortable. Heed the inclination to play it safe, and you'll later be very glad you did.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You have a strong sense of what is appropriate, and yet you also feel compelled to go against it entirely. This rebellion, however small it may be, will make some kind of personal and perhaps artistic statement.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You will be feeling quite sociable, provided those nearby meet your standards, which is to say they are cheerful, interesting and seem very likely to be full of good and useful information.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Do not allow yourself to get overwhelmed. Be courageous. Remember that there's always a way to break down big events into small, doable -- perhaps even enjoyable -- tasks.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Even when change seems wise, there is something in your nature today that doesn't want it. So, you're not ready. Resist and stall. When the moment is really right, you'll feel it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You crave privacy, especially where loved ones and the neighbors are concerned. If you can't have the whole house or apartment to yourself, then at least a private room will serve the need.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). It's no secret that you love the activity and mental stimulation involved in travel. Whether or not the trip goes as expected, it always broadens your horizons. So when is your next getaway?

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). The truth is not always welcome and may cause rumpled feelings. Perhaps it would be better not to speak it, unless, by your withholding the information, someone will actually be harmed.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). There's someone who fascinates you, and today your mind reels with imaginings of what this person's life is really like. The only way to know is to make an entrance into this person's life and find out.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You are in a sensitive mood. You're also a terrific actor. Despite outward appearances of being calm, you can often be deeply wounded in your inner being. Stick around the sweeter, nicer people you know today.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Oct. 8). Fortune favors you. An impulsive decision turns out to be brilliant. Your optimism attracts love this month. November brings a new teacher. The lessons will not be academic. Your vision and drive will be supported in January. You'll provide work that others do gratefully. March features entertainment and games. Taurus and Capricorn people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 3, 14, 39, 1 and 22.

Muscle tears are strains, not sprains

Dr. Donohue

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Over the weekend, I played basketball with some neighbors, all of whom are younger than me and all of whom made a big deal about that. I wanted to show them I could keep up with them. I started showing off with some hotshot moves, and I felt a tremendous pain in my left buttock and fell. I think I sprained a buttock muscle.

Time heals this, right? What can I do to help it along? -- J.A.

ANSWER: I don't mean to be picky about this, but ligament tears are sprains. Muscle tears are strains. Strains, like sprains, come in degrees. A first-degree muscle strain means that muscle fibers are stretched beyond their elastic limits, and a few fibers have torn. These are the most common kind of strains. They're painful but not incapacitating. A second-degree strain is one in which 10 percent of the muscle fibers have torn. You can feel a gap in the muscle. A third-degree strain is the tearing of 50 percent to 100 percent of the muscle fibers. It's a catastrophe that has to be handled by a doctor as soon as possible.

The buttock muscles are the three glutei. The gluteus maximus is the largest. It straightens the femur (the thigh bone) and turns the leg to the side. The other two glutei produce different movements of the thigh bone. The right glutei muscles keep the trunk erect when the leg is raised, and vice versa for the left glutei.

Treatment of a muscle strain involves the familiar RICE treatment: Rest, Ice, Compression and Elevation. It's all but impossible to compress and elevate the gluteal muscles. Icing should be done for the first two days. Then switch to heat. If walking is painful, use crutches.

Healing of a strain takes four to six weeks. When you're free of pain, you can resume most activities, but do so gradually.

If this is a self-diagnosed injury and if you don't see marked improvement in a week's time (lessening of pain), get to a doctor for an official appraisal of what happened.

He's had enough of her late-night chat sessions

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating "Mindy" for a little more than a year, and mostly we get along. The one thing that is not working is Mindy likes to have long talks on the phone, usually very late into the night. When I get sleepy and tell her I'm going to bed, she either gets upset, ignores me and continues talking, or tries to guilt me into staying up later to talk. I resent it. I have tried discussing it with her, but she doesn't seem to get it. How can I get across to Mindy that I'd like to go to bed without a fight? -- NODDING OFF IN BELMONT, CALIF.

DEAR NODDING OFF: Do it by telling your chatterbox girlfriend in the bright light of day what time your bedtime is. Tell her that if she wants to have long conversations in the evening, that's fine with you -- but she needs to respect what your bedtime is. As that time approaches, remind Mindy by saying, "I'm giving you five more minutes, then I'm hanging up the phone." Then do it.

DEAR ABBY: My fiancée's ex-girlfriend "Amanda" has been living with his parents for more than three years. I feel cheated out of the opportunity to have a daughter-like relationship with my fiancée's parents. I want her to move out.

I have discussed this with my fiancée, and he talked to his mother and told her that we're getting married and it's time for Amanda to leave. Amanda also agrees it's time for her to move, but my future mother-in-law doesn't. I don't think she wants to let go of Amanda and her grandson. It's like Amanda is her daughter. I don't like the situation. It's not normal, and I don't know what to do. Should I confront his mother or just stay quiet? I want to feel like I'm the daughter-in-law, not Amanda! Please help. -- CHEATED IN HOLLAND, MICH.

DEAR CHEATED: I see nothing positive to be gained from a confrontation. Once you and your fiancée are married, you WILL be the only daughter-in-law. However, you will have to accept that Amanda's child will always be your in-laws' first grandchild. Regardless of how far or how fast Amanda moves out, her child will have a place in their hearts and their lives. Having had their grandchild living in their home for this period of time has intensified the bond. Please consider carefully how this will affect you before you marry this man, because feeling as you do, it may be a difficult adjustment.

Still hurting from bullying in school 40 years ago

Annie's Mailbox

Dear Annie: More than 40 years ago, I was the target of cruel bullying. A girl who hated me started a vicious rumor that ruined my reputation. She said I slept with the entire football team. If that wasn't enough, she and a carful of girls drove by my house one night while I was sitting with my parents and blurted out this terrible lie. My father went to her house and told her to stop, but it didn't help. My own mother questioned me about the truth of it.

This lie has trailed me my whole life. It has haunted me for years, and I have had moments of self-loathing to the point of wanting to die.

At the time, I even went to the police station, but they thought it was funny. This "girl" now is the pillar of the community and a do-gooder, but I've been told she is hateful. My question is: How do I get over this? I went to therapy once and asked about confronting this person. I was told it was pointless, that she doesn't even remember. This person destroyed my life. What should I do? -- Strong but Broken

Dear Broken: If confronting this woman would make you feel better, go right ahead. However, she seems the type who would derive great satisfaction from knowing how much power she has had over your life for the past 40 years. And you have given her that power by clinging to your hurt. The best revenge is to live a terrific, rewarding life in which this woman is insignificant. You need to heal from this grievous wound, and it requires forgiveness and acceptance so you can move forward without anger and regret. Please return for counseling. One session is not enough.

Dear Annie: This is in response to "Spell Check," whose college friend cannot spell and is a special-ed teacher. I, too, am a special education teacher and can't spell to save my life. But it has never impeded the ability of my students to learn. I even use my weakness to my benefit. I announce at the beginning of the school year that I am dyslexic. I explain that if I misspell something, they may politely raise their hand and correct me and receive an extra-credit point toward their next quiz. You should see the additional participation and improved grades! Being a bad speller does not mean I'm unintelligent, nor does it mean I cannot teach. I have earned my degree and my job. -- Dyslexic and Proud in Utah

Shown are scenes from the 14th annual Raider Regatta of South Range High School held Wednesday. As a learning and fun project students constructed boats using only duct tape and cardboard. Each team picked a theme for its vessel and will compose a manual on how it was put together. The regatta was held at the pond in Beaver Township Park. Laura Elder’s sophomore English class hosted the event that covered a cross curriculum including math, science and English combined with teamwork. (Salem News photos by Patti Schaeffer)

Ohio’s congressional map turns Democrats into foes

TOLEDO (AP) — Ohio’s new congressional district map has thrust Reps. Marcy Kaptur and Dennis Kucinich, two veteran Democratic politicians who call themselves friends, into an awkward primary faceoff that both sides expect to be hard-fought. Already, the veneer of collegiality is beginning to fade.

Kaptur is casting herself as a workhorse who has risen to be an influential insider on Capitol Hill. And while not well-known nationally, she notes she has gone to bat for Ohio. Kucinich is a quirky two-time presidential candidate with a national following among progressives.

Stuck in the middle are the union leaders and blue collar workers who’ve backed them both for years. The new map eliminates two of Ohio’s U.S. House seats because of the state’s slow population growth. Republicans who redrew the state’s congressional boundaries decided to solidify their hold on vulnerable districts and lump Democrats into four of the state’s new 16 districts, down from 18.

Whichever party controls a state legislature typically structures redistricting so that incumbents in the majority party are protected and the minority party seats are put at risk.

Redistricting is making rivals of same-party incumbents in other states as well. In Illinois, the Democratic-controlled legislature put Rep. Joe Walsh, a tea party follower, into the same district as fellow Republican and tea party supporter Rep. Randy Hultgren. In North Carolina, Democratic Rep. Brad Miller either will have to run against fellow incumbent Rep. David Price in a primary or run in a district that leans Republican.

In Ohio, Republicans who redrew the congressional boundaries put Kucinich and Kaptur together in a district that hugs the Lake Erie shoreline from Cleveland to Toledo. It’s heavily tilted toward Democrats, so whoever emerges from the primary, now scheduled for March, will be a big favorite to win the seat.

The move angered Kaptur, who lost much of the Toledo area she had represented since 1983, but it delighted Kucinich, who was so convinced that he would be drawn out of his Cleveland district that he began shopping for a new one out of state earlier this year. He visited Washington state several times for political events over the summer, making it no secret he was eyeing two open seats out West.

His flirtation with running for Congress from Washington state is already giving Kaptur talking points. “He was campaigning out there,” Kaptur told The Associated Press. “I didn’t seek to be a representative from the West Coast or the East Coast. I want to represent Ohio’s north coast. And I have been.” Kucinich has been gracious in his comments about Kaptur, but a fundraising email hints at his line of attack. Referring to Kaptur’s work on behalf of Ohio’s defense firms and military bases, Kucinich’s pitch said, “We aren’t going to have Wall Street pay for our campaign. We aren’t going to ask the defense industry for a donation.”

Kucinich, 64, praised Kaptur in an interview. “I can only say good things about her,” the eight-term congressman said. “She has always been kind to me. Obviously it’s going to be a vigorous competition and I don’t take anything for granted.”

Western Reserve rips Southern 48-3

By PAUL EDGAR
Staff Writer

SALINEVILLE — In a game that was billed as a matchup of ITCL Lower Tier powers, the Blue Devils proved they are the team to beat.

Western Reserve capitalized on five Southern turnovers on Friday en route to a 48-3 pounding of the Indians at Wigwam Stadium.

"We were ready for this one," Western Reserve coach Andy Hake said. "We've been ready for a couple weeks. Our guys came out determined and hell-bent on winning."

Southern coach Mike Skrinjar said the blame belonged on his shoulders.

"I'll take this one on my chin," he said. "My kids played their hearts out and left it all on the field. There were times I could have stepped up and put the kids in a better position."

With the win, Western Reserve remains perfect on the season at 7-0, while Southern suffers its first loss and falls to 6-1.

The Blue Devils' standout running back Donnie Bolton came into the game averaging an outstanding 12.1 yards per carry.

He increased his average on Friday by tallying 156 yards and two touchdowns on just 12 carries.

"Our line is awesome," Hake said. "They did such a great job of beating guys up."

"Our kids executed. It was a big game. Southern isn't used to this. You get experience from these games. They're a great team. They can win some playoff games."

Western Reserve scored four touchdowns off five Southern turnovers.

Quarterback Jeff Clegg was nearly perfect, finishing 6-of-8 for 130 yards with three touchdowns to go along with 35 yards and a score on the ground.

"They are well coached," Skrinjar said of the Blue Devils. "Their kids are physical, which is outstanding for a spread offense. That's one of the best lines I've seen. They're big and smart."

Southern opened the game with a 10-play, 35-yard drive that took 4:30 off the clock, but it came up empty.

After forcing a three-and-out, the Indians committed their first turnover when Luke ALLIANCE — You could call it a game gone bad or the one that got away. Salem coach Mike Kopachy prefers to call it what it was — a game his Quakers could of won but didn't.

Salem trailed NBC opponent Alliance just 14-12 with four minutes to go in the third quarter before giving up 21 unanswered points in the last 13 minutes and ultimately dropping a 35-12 decision at Mount Union Stadium on Friday.

"I'm sick," Kopachy said. "I'm sick about this game and sick for our kids. (Taurice Scott) is good player but we can't let one guy beat 11 and that's what we did. He's not the only good player they have, but when you have him in COLUMBIANA — Crestview senior defensive end C.J. Collins had a satisfied look on his face after his team's 30-20 victory over Columbiana on Friday at Firestone Park.

Bloodied, bruised and with steam rolling off his head, there was no mistaking that he was involved in perhaps the most important Inter-Tri County League upper tier game of the season.

"It's a physical rivalry, but it's not like we don't like each other," Collins said. "A lot of us our friends off the field, but today it's all business."

SAN MARTIN, Calif. (AP) — The fog finally lifted at CordeValle and revealed a Tiger Woods that looked vaguely familiar.

Woods ran off three straight birdies early in his round, survived a rough patch around the turn and kept the stress to a minimum Friday in his round of 3-under 68 in the Frys.com Open that assured he would be around for the weekend.

Mineral Ridge 42, Lisbon 20
LISBON — Mineral Ridge took advantage of poor tackling by Lisbon and strong running by Devine Redding and Casey Porter to secure a 42-20 victory Friday. "Tonight we just didn't tackle well and that's something we have to work on," said Lisbon coach Jim Tsilimos. Porter and Redding shook off numerous tackles to lead the Rams, combining for three of the team's six touchdowns. Redding opened the scoring with a 56-yard touchdown just two minutes into the game. Shortly after Porter carried the ball 24 yards to make the score 14-0. "We lean on those two," said Mineral Ridge coach Joe Stevens. "They feed off each other and push each other." Porter also scored with 52 seconds remaining in the first half to make the score 28-6. Lisbon (1-6, 0-4 ITCL Tier 1) will the backfield, you have to wrap him up, swarm him, make the tackle. We didn't do that and allowed him to come up with big plays." Scott came up especially big late to break open the game. Scott picked off Jake Carner and returned it to the Quaker 5. That set up a 2-yard TD run from Marcus Williams and put the Aviators up, 21-12, with 13 seconds remaining in the third. Two minutes later, Scott connected with Jalen Mays on an 80-yard scoring strike. Scott later exploded on a 90-yard touchdown run with 7:39 left to be played. Scott finished with 278 yards and three touchdowns on the ground — he scored both of Alliance's first-half touchdowns on runs of 71 and 5. The senior standout was 10-of-16 passing for 175 yards, a score and an interception. "We had way too many defensive breakdowns late in the game, and just too many mental breakdowns," Kopachy said. "We made too many mental mistakes. I don't think they were physically better than us, but mentally they beat us." The Quakers started out strong, coming up with a turnover on the Aviators first drive. Austin Noel picked off Scott but Salem couldn't capitalize on the turnover. Scott would come up with his 71-yard run on the first play of the Aviators' second possession, but the Quakers would answer. Noel, who finished with 138 yards on 32 carries, would carry the ball eight times on Salem's nine-play scoring drive, capping it off with an 18-yard run at 3:57 of the first. The PAT attempt was wide and Salem trailed, 7-6. Alliance would make it a 14-6 ball game when Scott ran in from 5 yards out early in the second quarter. That run finished off a 75-yard, 16-play march. The Quakers would threaten, driving inside the Alliance 10, but a holding penalty backed them up to the 23. Salem would have to settle for a field goal attempt and the 36-yard attempt fell short. "It's the same old story," Kopachy said. "We can't finish drives. It's always a penalty, a dropped pass, or a poor decision. We have to get better at finishing drives and taking advantage of breaks." The Quakers did capitalize on one early in the third. Salem held Alliance deep in it's own territory, when Noel dropped Nathan Rice for a 5-yard loss on 4th-and-2 at the Aviator 33. Carner kept the football and ran in for a short score, eight plays and three minutes later. The 1-yard run was the last time Salem pierced the end zone. After that, it was all Alliance. "I've been a coach for 14 years and the one thing I have learned is that good teams create their own breaks," Kopachy said. "We had some breaks, but hats off to Alliance. They not only created breaks. They took advantage of them and that's something we didn't do. At least not as often as we should have." The Aviators improved to 5-2 with the win, while the Quakers dropped to 4-3. Salem next plays undefeated Minerva, the NBC frontrunner, next week at home. "Minerva is good football team and we're going to have our hands full," Kopachy said. "We're looking for a win next week. It's our homecoming and you always want to give your community a win on that night. But before we can even think about winning next

This time it took only one play for the Blue Devils to capitalize as Bolton ran 83 yards for a score. Southern's only score came early in the fourth quarter when kicker Steve Treadway split the uprights from 38-yards out. The game's final score came on a Clegg to Benyo touchdown pass of 80 yards with 8:17 left to play. Puckett led the Indians on the ground with 76 yards on 25 carries. Griffith finished 15-of-25 for 184 yards with three interceptions. Despite the lopsided score, week, we have to focus on and do the little things. Little things win games. If we do the little things, winning will follow."

Hake had plenty of praise for the Indians. "That's a good football team," he said. "We took advantage of some turnovers. But they're a good team. Their coach gets them excited and does a nice job with them." The Blue Devils will host Wellsville next week, while Skrinjar and the Indians will look to rebound at home against Leetonia. "Sometimes misfortunes happen," Skrinjar said. "It was like a chess game and they had the advantage, check mate. It was a battle of momentum and they put us with our backs against the wall."

RESERVE FROM 1B

Griffith fumbled deep in their own territory. The Blue Devils seized the opportunity and scored three plays later when Clegg found Tim Cooper from eight yards out with 2:16 left in the first quarter. Early in the second quarter, Western Reserve would strike again, this time it was Bolton who ran through a huge hole 40 yards to paydirt. Four plays later, Griffith was intercepted by Thomas Benyo giving the Blue Devils another short field. Clegg would reach the end zone on the ground this time, running up the middle 21 yards and putting his team comfortably ahead, 21-0, with 7:27 left in the first half. Two plays later, another turnover. A fumble by Zack Puckett that was recovered by John Timko set up Western Reserve's fourth score. Clegg connected with Benyo from 17 yards out and the Blue Devils led, 28-0, which would be the score at the break. The Indians were able to force the Blue Devils into a three-and-out on their first possession of the second half. It appeared as though Southern might get back into the game with a 10-play drive that took them into Western Reserve territory, but the drive stalled as the Indians failed to convert on a 4th-and-short. The Blue Devils took over and turned to Tommy Marlowe. The fullback ran three straight times with gains of 40, 13 and five yards the last reaching paydirt and Western Reserve led, 35-0, with 4:44 left in the third quarter. The fourth Southern turnover came on another Griffith interception.

Morgan lifts Brewers past Diamondbacks 3-2 in 10

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Nyjer Morgan did it again for Milwaukee, delivering an RBI single in the 10th inning to beat the Arizona Diamondbacks 3-2 Friday in Game 5 and send the Brewers to the NL championship series.

Morgan hit a one-out grounder up the middle and Diamondbacks closer J.J. Putz tried in vain to stop it with his leg. Carlos Gomez sailed across home plate as a wild throw home went high, and Morgan was mobbed by teammates near the mound after Milwaukee's first victory in a postseason series since the Brewers won the AL pennant in 1982.

Arizona did all it could to extend its surprising season. Center fielder Chris Young made an astounding catch in the sixth and the Diamondbacks had one last comeback left in the ninth.

Willie Bloomquist drove in the tying run with a safety squeeze, but the Diamondbacks were unable to forge ahead against closer John Axford. Morgan was a critical addition for the Brewers this year and had several clutch hits, winning fans along the way with his oversized personality that includes a wildman alter-ego he calls "Tony Plush." But he wasn't having a particularly productive series until his big moment in Game 5.

Carpenter outduels Halladay, Cardinals edge Phillies 1-0

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Chris Carpenter tossed a three-hitter to outpitch old pal Roy Halladay in a duel for the ages and the St. Louis Cardinals edged the Philadelphia Phillies 1-0 Friday night in the deciding Game 5 of their NL playoff series.

The wild-card Cardinals scored in the first inning when Rafael Furcal led off with a triple and Skip Schumaker followed with a double.

And that was it. Heavily favored Philadelphia never broke through against Carpenter. Ryan Howard grounded out to end the game and hurt his leg coming out of the batter's box — he limped a couple of steps and crumpled to the ground as

St. Louis started to celebrate. "It was some kind of fun, getting out there and was able to get that one run early off Doc, he was dominant the rest of the game," Carpenter said. "He's a great friend of mine, and like I said, he did a great job tonight also," he said.

The Cardinals needed a monumental collapse by Atlanta in the final month and major help from the 102-win Phillies just to reach the playoffs. Now they're heading to Milwaukee for the NL championship series starting Sunday following a stunning upset in which they beat three of Philadelphia's four aces: Halladay, Cliff Lee and Roy Oswalt.

REBELS FROM 1B

4-0) lead the ITCL upper tier by a game with three to play. Columbiana (6-1, 3-1) made sure they earned it.

"It's always a war with Columbiana's linemen," Collins said. "(Columbiana coach) Bob Spaite does a good job coaching them and those guys do anything they can to block you."

It was a game where the Clippers had the advantage in total yardage (394-346) and even had a slight edge in the turnover department (2-1). But, it was the way the Rebels managed the game that made the difference.

After an unremarkable first half in which they had a 9-7 lead at the break, the Rebels rolled the dice on the opening kick of the second half with an onside try. But that didn't go their way.

"We saw something on tape and decided to try," Crestview coach Paul Cusick said. "It was a gamble and they had good field position after it. I'm just glad the defense held."

When the Rebels got the ball back on their first offensive possession of the second half, they went 47 yards in six plays to tally an Adam Coppock 2-yard touchdown to make it 15-7 with 7:37 left in the frame.

"That was a big drive," Coppock said.

Columbiana didn't give up and bounced back into the game on a 14-yard touchdown run from Britton Steinginga with 3:27 left in the third quarter to make it 16-14. Steinginga had set up that scoring drive with an interception. He also had a fumble recovery off an impressive strip of Crestview's Collin Gilbert deep inside Columbiana's territory in the first half.

The Clippers seemed to have momentum going into the final quarter, but one play turned the tide. On the second play from scrimmage in the fourth quarter, Coppock got a big hole from his line and raced 59 yards to give the Rebels a more comfortable 23-14 lead.

"I give all of the credit to the line on that one," Coppock said. "I don't think I was touched."

Spaite said the play reminded him of a college football game he was watching the night before on TV.

"It was just like the Oregon-California game last night," Spaite said. "They say that California always plays Ore-gon's spread offense well. And a lot of what we were doing was the same thing California was doing and you know all it takes is that one miss in a spread offense. That's what happened to California and that's what happened to us."

Oregon won that game 43-15.

Columbiana did attempt to make it a little tougher for the Rebels at the end of the game when Brandon Hacker plunged in from 2 out to make it 23-20 with eight minutes left in the game.

The Rebels, however, used a 13-play, 63-yard drive ending in a Nick Blower 19-yard touchdown run with 1:57 left to put it out of reach.

Spaite blamed a lot of the Clippers' woes on penalties (eight for 80 yards), but the Rebels (nine for 95) actually had more.

ing a revival of his own.

Casey, at No. 135 on the money list and in danger of losing his PGA Tour card, has been fighting a foot injury since the middle of May. He showed signs of getting better by winning in South Korea last week, and then he got over jet lag in time to post a 7-under 64.

That put him at 8-under 134. Bud Cauley, who turned pro this summer and is trying to avoid having to go to Q-school, had a 66 and was one shot behind. Fog delayed the start of the second round by 2 hours, 20 minutes, meaning it would not finish until Saturday.

Ernie Els, a surprise entry to this Fall Series event, made a steady move up the leaderboard and had an 8-foot birdie putt to tie for the lead on the 16th hole. He missed it and was at 7 under, and will have two holes to play Saturday.

Woods was so disgusted this his putting after his opening 73 that he went to the practice green in the chill of late afternoon after the first round and rapped 5-foot putts, sometimes using only one hand.

He also put two strips of lead tape on the bottom of his putter, and it seemed to pay off. He holed a 25-foot birdie putt on No. 14 to begin his run of three straight birdies, and all but one of his birdie putts looked to have a chance. He was missing, but not by much.

"I hit one bad putt today, and that was it," Woods said. "Every other putt was on line."

It was the first time since the Masters that Woods made a 36-hole cut, and the first time in two months that he broke par. That speaks only to the kind of stop-and-start year he has had, missing three months this summer to let injuries to his left leg fully heal, and missing the last seven weeks when he failed to qualify for the FedEx Cup playoffs.

And while the 68 was what he needed to make it to the weekend, the pleasant sunshine over CordeValle allowed for good scoring. He wasn't the only one who took advantage, and several others did far better, starting with Casey.

Casey came up just short of the green on the par-5 15th, and then rolled in birdie putts of 40 feet and 25 feet on the next two holes, before finishing the back nine with a shot into 12 feet on the 18th. He added a pair of birdies on the front nine to put himself atop the leaderboard and raise his hopes going into the weekend.

"To be honest, it's probably the best I've hit the golf ball all year," Casey said.

It's a good time for that to happen. Casey is playing the next two tournaments to meet the minimum requirement of 15 starts. If he doesn't finish among the top 125, he likely would get enough exemptions as a past champion and for being among the top 50 in the world that he wouldn't need to go to Q-school.

His only concern is playing better. The first sign should have been Thursday, when he was still dragging from the flight from South Korea, got to the top of the leaderboard only to lose a few shots at the end of his round for a 70.

Cauley left school early from Alabama this summer because he thought he was ready for the PGA Tour, and he has done little to show otherwise. Through six starts, he has earned $331,150. If he finishes the equivalent of No. 125 on the money list — he is likely about $300,000 away — he could join an exclusive list of players who avoided Q-school, which includes Woods, Phil Mickelson, Justin Leonard and most recently Ryan Moore.

"I want to miss Q-school as much as the rest of the guys,"

Cauley said.

Woods had a 64 in mind when he arrived at CordeValle to a thick fog, twice warming up on the range as the delays dragged out. His three straight birdies included an 8-foot putt on the 15th after driving into a bunker, and a 7-iron to 3 feet on the 16th.

"I had it going early there, three in a row to get to 3-under par for the day, and if we could just keep it going, I could shoot my number," Woods said. "I made a couple mistakes there at 18 and 1. But overall, I'm still within seven shots of it right now."

His 3-wood on the 18th went just enough left to find a hazard, and he had to get up-and-down just to save bogey. It really looked ugly on No. 1, when he snap-hooked his tee shot and threw his driver to the ground. With the ball on the side of a hill and his feet on the cart path, Woods slipped badly on the swing and tumbled over, coming up well short of the green. He pitched only to 25 feet.

That was his seventh consecutive tee shot without hitting the fairway. On the next hole, however, he drilled one down the middle on a far more difficult driving hole, and missed only one fairway after that.

Linebacker Andrew Sweat said the season is testing the Buckeyes' wherewithal.

"Even if it isn't today or tomorrow, I think it makes us stronger as men, as individuals," Sweat said. "Even if it's not just football, I think the adversity we're facing makes us stronger people. Our strength coaches in the offseason preach mental toughness and try to do things to make you mentally tough. I just think you have to move forward and let the adversity make you stronger."

Freshman quarterback Braxton Miller will make his third start and first on the road. The Buckeyes' offense generated just 178 yards and allowed nine sacks against Michigan State. Had they not scored with 10 seconds left, they would have been shut out at home for the first time since 1982.

"Braxton is just going to keep getting better every week," center Mike Brewster said.

"He's in a tough spot. It's hard for a young guy, but you'd like to see him just keep growing and getting better. Hopefully this is the week for us to take that step."

NCAA suspends WR Posey for 5 games

COLUMBUS (AP) — The NCAA suspended Ohio State wide receiver DeVier Posey for five games Friday — leaving him with only two regular-season games in his senior season — and three other Buckeyes for one game for taking too much money for a summer job.

Offensive lineman Marcus Hall, defensive lineman Melvin Fellows and last year's leading rusher, Daniel Herron, will miss this week's game at No. 14 Nebraska on Saturday. They also must repay benefits after receiving pay for work not performed from booster Bobby DiGeronimo, who has been banned from any further contact with Ohio State athletes.

Posey, already forced to sit out the first five games, will not return until Ohio State's home game against Penn State on Nov. 19. He will be able to play against the Nittany Lions and also the following week, the annual matchup with archrival Michigan that concludes the regular season.

"I am extremely disappointed with the NCAA's decision regarding Devier Posey," Ohio State athletic director Gene Smith said in a statement. "This penalty is harsh considering the nature of the violation and the five-game suspension already served by this student-athlete."

Steelers' injuries keep piling up

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Counting the preseason, the Pittsburgh Steelers will have used nine different combinations of starting offensive linemen in nine games this season.

They're also facing the possibility of being without their two most prominent running backs for their next game on Sunday.

Pittsburgh's All Pro outside linebacker and five-time Pro Bowl nose tackle certainly won't play.

The Steelers' former Pro Bowl defensive end, starting left guard and up-and-coming second-year linebacker? Out, out and out.

Oh, and then there's star quarterback Ben Roethlisberger. At least he will play — albeit while hobbled on a sprained left foot that had him walking in a boot earlier in the week.

Things have become so bad that a player who was signed Tuesday, Max Starks, will apparently start at left tackle against the Tennessee Titans (3-1) on Sunday.

Other than that, all is well on the injury front for a team that went to the Super Bowl last season but is reeling at 2-2.

"This is professional football; you know injuries will happen," said Lawrence Timmons, who was moved from inside linebacker to the outside because of the broken orbital bone of All Pro James Harrison. "Coach Tomlin always tells us, 'The standard is the standard,' and if you look at our team the past few years, even when we went to the Super Bowl, that's been the case. No reason it can't be the case this year, too."

Taiwan's Tseng leads home Hana Bank

INCHEON, South Korea (AP) — Yani Tseng lived up to her top-ranked billing with a 7-under 65 on Friday to take the lead after the first round of the LPGA Hana Bank Championship.

The world No. 1 had ten birdies and three bogeys to take a one-stroke lead over Chella Choi, who capitalized on early mild conditions at Sky 72 Golf Club to set the early pace at 6 under.

Two-time defending champion Na Yeon Choi was in a tie for third with Sandra Gal of Germany at 5 under.

Paula Creamer and Sweden's Sophie Gustafson were part of a group of six players in a tie for fifth at 4 under, joining Koreans Meena Lee, Hee Young Park, Jimin Kang, and Mi Hyun Kim.

US Open champ McIlroy shares lead at Korea Open

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — U.S. Open champion Rory McIlroy shot a 2-under 69 Friday to take a share of the lead after the second round at the Korea Open.

McIlroy, who finished third in the event two years ago, is tied with four others at 137 overall. Defending champion YE Yang (70), Rickie Fowler (70), Bronson La'Cassie (67) and Mo Joong-kyung (66) are also at 137 at the Woo Jeong Hills Country Club.

McIlroy had two birdies on the front nine, and then added two more on the 12th and 14th holes. But bogeys on Nos. 13, 15 and 16 took him back to 1 under for the day until a birdie on 18.

Michael Allen leads Insuperity Championship

THE WOODLANDS, Texas (AP) — Michael Allen shot a 9-under 63 on Friday to take a three-stroke lead over John Cook after the first round of the Champions Tour's Insuperity Championship.

Allen, the 2009 Senior PGA Championship winner, had nine birdies in his bogey-free round at The Woodlands Country Club. Cook, the 2008 champion and a three-time winner this year, also had a bogey-free round.

"I don't think you ever think you'll go out and shoot 63, 9 under," Allen said. "I was in a good frame of mind, just playing the shots."

"Overall, it's been a fairly consistent year," Allen said. "It's been a little frustrating that I haven't won. My main goal I wanted to come out here and play two weeks in Texas and see if I can get this first win under my belt. I'd like to get out with another one of these and bury these guys. We'll see what happens."

Schwab Cup points leader Tom Lehman and Mark Calcavecchia opened with 67s, and defending champion Fred Couples was another stroke back along with Tommy Armour III and Eduardo Romero.

Slattery's 6-under 66 leads at Madrid Masters

MADRID (AP) — England's Lee Slattery shot a 6-under 66 Friday to lead the Madrid Masters by one shot after the second round.

Slattery had seven birdies and one bogey at El Encin Golf Hotel to finish at 11 under. He leads Spain's Eduardo de la Riva and Italy's Francesco Molinari, who each shot 67. First-round leader and 2009 champion Ross McGowan of England followed his opening 64 with a 72 to trail by three strokes.

Defending champion and top-ranked Luke Donald of England pulled within three shots of the lead at one point. But he fell back with two bogeys in the final three holes for a 70 and is five shots back.

Drivers say other sports can learn from NASCAR

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — Five-time champion Jimmie Johnson says other sports should consider some of the safety advances that NASCAR has implemented in recent years.

In the decade since Dale Earnhardt's death at Daytona, many tracks have installed impact-absorbing SAFER barriers along their concrete walls. New helmets and restraint systems have been introduced, and the car itself has been redesigned to better handle high-speed crashes.

Johnson says the NFL might consider some of the helmet technology used by NASCAR, and the SAFER barriers could be adapted for use in NHL arenas instead of wood or fiberglass boards.

Both of those leagues have been dealing with a concussion epidemic.

"This week," Nebraska receiver Kenny Bell said, "we're going to find out a lot about our football team."

Same goes for Ohio State (3-2, 0-1), which is coming off a 10-7 loss at home to Michigan State. The Buckeyes thought they would get back four top players who were suspended for their involvement in the cash-and-tattoo scandal. But two of those players have to sit out at least the Nebraska game for accepting summer job money.

"When things happen, when we lose a game, when other adversities happen, the circle becomes tighter and tighter, and you have to pull closer and closer," Buckeyes coach Luke Fickell said.

Nebraska's defensive shortcomings have been a concern for weeks, but they were exposed like never before by Russell Wilson and the Badgers. Coach Bo Pelini, who will be facing his alma mater in Ohio State, figured to spend the week looking for a fix.

But a distraction cropped up Monday when Martinez lashed out at fans and media who panned him for throwing three interceptions against Wisconsin. Martinez complained he gets "ripped" no matter what he does.

Pelini laid into reporters after practice Thursday, saying they had created a firestorm around his sophomore quarterback.

"You guys trying to get a reaction from him?" Pelini said. "Is this a deliberate thing?"

Teammates spoke in support of Martinez and said it was unfair for people to pile on the quarterback.

"Next person to say anything about my QB to me, I'm slapping in the face. No warning," Bell tweeted.

The Huskers can't afford a loss to the Buckeyes if they hope to control their fate and get to the Big Ten championship game. They were the preseason favorites to win the Legends Division and are a game behind Michigan and Michigan State.

"Just like last year, we lost to Texas and still got to the Big 12 championship game, so we know that it is still out there," receiver Brandon Kinnie said. "That's why I believe guys are not giving up at all, pointing fingers or doing anything like that. Staying together is another key thing this week as well. All we have to do is win out and we'll be fine."

The Buckeyes had been pointing to the Nebraska game since December, when five-game suspensions were announced for players who accepted cash and free tattoos from a Columbus, Ohio, tattoo parlor owner.

The suspensions were supposed to end Saturday. But only two of the four players they expected to get back, offensive lineman Mike Adams and defensive lineman Solomon Thomas, have been reinstated. Receiver DeVier Posey and running back Daniel Herron will have to sit out at least one more game, along with offensive lineman Marcus Hall.

Injuries also have left the Buckeyes short-handed. Defensive tackle Nathan Williams remains out after arthroscopic knee surgery four weeks ago. Receiver Verlon Reed is done for the year after tearing a knee ligament in last week's loss.

The Buckeyes hope receiver Corey "Philly" Brown can play after missing four games with an ankle sprain.

No. 5 Boise State dominates Fresno State 57-7
FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Geraldo Boldewijn caught two touchdown passes in his first game back from suspension and No. 5 Boise State extended its dominance over former WAC rival Fresno State in a 57-7 victory Friday night.
Kellen Moore went 23 of 31 for 254 yards and three scores in his 43rd career win for the Broncos (5-0), who have turned this once intense rivalry into a lopsided affair.
Boise State led 30-0 before Fresno State (2-4) even crossed midfield, and it took a 43-0 lead early in the third quarter on Doug Martin's 1-yard run to extend a run of 104 straight points against the Bulldogs.
D.J. Harper added a 3-yard TD run later in the quarter after an interception by Derek Carr and the streak finally ended at 111 straight points when Devon Wylie returned a punt 79 yards for a score on the first play of the fourth quarter for the Bulldogs.

For Obama, 10-year Afghan war mark to pass quietly

WASHINGTON (AP) — A decade of war will pass quietly at the White House this week. President Barack Obama plans no public events Friday to mark a moment the nation never really expected: 10 years of war in Afghanistan. Out of sight and off the minds of millions of Americans, the war is the most prolonged conflict this country has been engaged in since Vietnam. Obama has gone so far as to declare it "the longest war in American history."

The lack of attention to the 10-year milestone is driven in part by White House thinking that Obama has already helped lead a national reflection on a decade of costly sacrifice and battle. He did that on the recent anniversary of Sept. 11, 2001, the day when many people feel the war unforgettably began.

Yet Obama's handling of the new war milestone also underscores his interest in sticking to an economic message without distraction. Jobs, not war, matter most right now.

What's more, in military terms, analysts say a 10-year anniversary holds little significance compared with other markers. The main one is the end-of-2014 deadline Obama has set for withdrawal of most U.S. forces, along with the question of whether the United States will be able to leave Afghanistan stable enough politically to prevent a perilous collapse.

It was on Oct. 7, 2001, that the United States and its allies invaded Afghanistan, seeking to end the rule of the radical Islamic Taliban and its ability to provide haven to the al-Qaida terrorists who launched the unprecedented terrorist assault on Sept. 11.

At the time, President George W. Bush said to the country, "In the months ahead, our patience will be one of our strengths."

The nation, under Bush and Obama, saw its patience tested much longer than that.

The American role in the war is now on pace to last at least 13 years.

Put together, more than 2 million troops have been sent to Afghanistan and the war in Iraq, which began in 2003, including hundreds of thousands of troops who have served more than one tour.

Nearly 4,500 U.S. troops have died in Iraq and about 1,700 in Afghanistan. Tens of thousands more have been wounded.

Obama moved to end the war in Iraq but initially expanded the one in Afghanistan, trying to regain control of the conflict he saw as central to American security.

His focus was clear in June when he announced that, as promised, troops would begin withdrawing in July and that 33,000 troops will be home by next summer. It was time to focus on home, he said.

Still, almost 70,000 troops will remain in a volatile country after that as the United States continues its withdrawal and its shift of security control to Afghan forces through 2014.

"The tone of the whole speech was, 'This war is effectively over and we're gradually shutting it down,'" said Nora Bensahel, a senior fellow at the Center for a New American Security. "Since that is what the White House wants to signal to the country, it doesn't surprise me that the White House isn't spending a lot of attention on the 10th anniversary."

In Afghanistan, the anniversary spurred peaceful demonstrations, with hundreds of people marching through the streets of Kabul Thursday demanding the withdrawal of international military forces.

Obama is in an accelerating re-election fight in which Republicans have taken aim at his Afghanistan policy, but foreign policy is vastly overshadowed by economic concerns.

A recent CBS News poll found that nearly 6 in 10 Americans say the United States should not be involved in Afghanistan, a sharp turnaround from as recently as two years ago, when a majority supported the U.S. mission there. Almost 7 in 10 people say the war has gone on longer than they expected.

In terms of the military, 1 in 3 U.S. veterans of the post-9/11 military believes the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan were not worth fighting, according to a Pew Research Center poll released Wednesday.

Obama has spoken on a series of occasions lately about the sacrifice and success of the military in the 9/11 generation, the families who support them and the goals ahead.

"As our mission transitions from combat to support, Afghans will take responsibility for their own security, and the longest war in American history will come to a responsible end," Obama said at an American Legion conference in August. "For our troops and military families who've sacrificed so much, this means relief from an unrelenting decade of operations."

Obama may seek another occasion to thank troops in the coming days, and the White House would not rule out a written statement from him Friday about the war anniversary. The president spoke about American resilience on Sept. 11 after he visited memorials at all three sites where hijacked airliners crashed, in New York City, at the Pentagon and near Shanksville, Pa.

"We, in many respects, mark the beginning of war coming to our shores as 9/11, and everything has flowed from that," Obama's deputy national security adviser, Ben Rhodes, said.

Political and governance instability continue to cast doubt over Afghanistan's progress even as military gains have taken hold. Afghan intelligence officials said Wednesday that they had broken up a plot to assassinate President Hamid Karzai. The 10-year mark of the war raises questions about what it will take for the United States to leave on successful terms.

"If we want to leave behind, when we withdraw, something that doesn't collapse shortly after we go, then Afghanistan is going to have to be different politically than it is now," said Stephen Biddle, a senior fellow for defense policy at the Council on Foreign Relations.

"We've done very well on the military side in the last couple years," he said. "We have not nearly so well on the political side. And we're running out of time."

Poll: 1 in 3 vets sees Iraq, Afghan wars as wastes

WASHINGTON (AP) — One in three U.S. veterans of the post-9/11 military believes the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan were not worth fighting, and a majority think that after 10 years of combat America should be focusing less on foreign affairs and more on its own problems, according to an opinion survey released Wednesday.

The findings highlight a dilemma for the Obama administration and Congress as they struggle to shrink the government's huge budget deficits and reconsider defense priorities while trying to keep public support for remaining involved in Iraq and Afghanistan for the longer term.

Nearly 4,500 U.S. troops have died in Iraq and about 1,700 in Afghanistan. Combined war costs since the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks have topped $1 trillion.

The poll results presented by the Pew Research Center portray post-9/11 veterans as proud of their work, scarred by warfare and convinced that the American public has little understanding of the problems that wartime service has created for military members and their families.

The survey also showed that post-9/11 veterans are more likely than Americans as a whole to call themselves Republicans and to disapprove of President Barack Obama's performance as commander in chief. They also are more likely than earlier generations of veterans to have no religious affiliation.

The Pew Research Center, a nonpartisan organization that studies attitudes and trends, called the study the first of its kind. The results were based on two surveys conducted between late July and mid-September. One polled 1,853 veterans, including 712 who had served in the military after 9/11 but are no longer on active duty. Of the 712 post-9/11 veterans, 336 served in Iraq or Afghanistan. The other polled 2,003 adults who had not served in the military. Nearly half of post-9/11 veterans said deployments strained their relationship with their spouses, and a similar share reported problems with their children. On the other hand, 60 per-
