Scott served with the U.S. Navy from August of 2001 until July of 2009 and still continues to support the troops by sending the proceeds of the event to the USO. Staff Writer

The Streets, Alleys and Sidewalks Committee will hear a request to formally name property on the south side of East State Street "McCulloch Park" when it meets at 7 p.m. today in city hall.

The property has long been known as the "McCulloch lot" since the former McCulloch's Department store was demolished in the mid-1980s.

The lot, now city-owned, has remained unoccupied and the department store had the address of 567 E. State St. when it closed in 1982 after nearly 75 years in downtown Salem.

Committee Chairman Rita Joseph O'Leary said Wednesday,

Leetonia Council dismisses member of fire and EMS departments

By KEVIN HOWELL
Staff Writer

LEETONIA — Village Council Wednesday night dismissed a member of the fire and EMS departments.

Council unanimously approved the dismissal of Thomas Roush Jr.

in disciplinary action for an unspecified incident that occurred in July.

Several members of the departments, including Fire Chief Larry Hephner Jr., had expressed support for Roush at the previous council meeting, but council chose to dismiss him after several weeks of discussion and evaluation by Mayor Artie Altomare and EMS Director Scott Garlough.

Prior to Roush's dismissal, members of the two departments distributed a list of concerns for council to review.

In other news, council acknowledged the resignation of Will Lutz from the EMS Department; granted permission to Police Chief John Soldano to attend the Attorney General's Law Enforcement

Ohio judge: No trial for 11-year-old boy in mother's death

MILLERSBURG, Ohio (AP) — An 11-year-old northeast Ohio boy isn't mentally fit to be tried for murder in the shooting death of his mother at their rural home, a judge ruled.

Holmes County Prosecutor Steve Knowling said the next step will be determining where the boy will be placed until he becomes competent, according to The (Canton) Repository. If he doesn't become competent within a year, the charges could be dismissed and refiled later.

The boy was 10 years old on Jan. 2 when he allegedly shot his 46-year-old mother in the head with a rifle at their home in Big Prairie. An uncle has said the boy had "anger issues" and had argued with his mother about carrying firewood before the shooting.

Defense attorney Andrew Hyde said he's disappointed by the ruling. Juvenile Court Judge Thomas Lee issued Tuesday, because the boy is too young to understand the legal case.

"When we talk to him about what's going on in court, his next question is about a video game," Hyde said Wednesday. "He's too young to appreciate the seriousness of what he's facing."

The Associated Press generally does not identify juveniles accused of crimes. The boy has entered the equivalent of a not guilty plea.

Two psychologists who met with the boy determined that he's not competent for trial but disagreed on whether he could attain competency within a year, Hyde said. The judge plans a hearing on where the boy should be placed,

ALMANAC

On Sept 8, 1941, the 900-day Siege of Leningrad by German forces began during World War II. In 1892, an early version of "The Pledge of Allegiance," written by Francis Bellamy, appeared in "The Youth's Companion." In 1900, Galveston, Texas, was struck by a hurricane that killed an estimated 8,000 people. In 1921, Margaret Gorman, 16, of Washington, D.C., was crowned the first "Miss America" in Atlantic City, N.J. In 1935, Sen. Huey P. Long, D-La., was shot and mortally wounded inside the Louisiana State Capitol; he died two days later. (The assailant was identified as Dr. Carl Weiss, who was gunned down by Long's bodyguards.)

Crash at covered Ohio sign kills two

CIRCLEVILLE, Ohio (AP) — A second woman who had been injured in a crash at an Ohio stop sign concealed with petroleum jelly and plastic wrap has died.

Lt. John Monce with the sheriff's office in central Ohio's Pickaway County says 81-year-old Jeanne Shea, of Circleville, died Tuesday. She had been hospitalized in Columbus since Aug. 17, when investigators say she drove through the stop sign and collided with another vehicle. An autopsy was planned for Wednesday.

Shea's passenger, her 85-year-old sister Mary Spangler, died in the crash. Authorities say two men covered the sign as a prank.

The two have pleaded not guilty to involuntary manslaughter in Spangler's death. Pickaway County Prosecutor Mary Wolford said Wednesday that she needs more information before she could say whether she'd pursue additional charges.

Ohio to start paying off jobless aid loan

COLUMBUS (AP) — Ohio is ready to start making payments on a $2.6 billion federal loan taken out during the recession to replenish a fund that pays unemployment benefits.

The Columbus Dispatch reports that the state this month plans to pay $370 million, representing $70 million in interest and $300 million to pay down the principle.

Ohio Department of Job and Family Services spokesman Ben Johnson says the $70 million was set aside by state lawmakers from money Ohio received in a settlement with tobacco companies. The $300 million will come from the state's unemployment trust fund, which Johnson says is recovering.

Ohio began borrowing from the federal government in early 2009 as the trust fund dwindled after years of paying out more in benefits than it took in from unemployment taxes.

Airport ups security for 9/11 anniversary

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland's main airport has increased security as a precaution ahead of Sunday's 10th anniversary of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

Cleveland Hopkins International Airport says there have been no specific threats.

But airport director Ricky Smith says in a statement that it's prudent to increase security, including more patrol officers, bomb-sniffing dogs and random vehicle checkpoints.

Airport spokesman Jackie Mayo tells The Plain Dealer airports across the country are taking similar steps.

Cleveland has about 250 nonstop flights daily to 74 destinations.

The Sept. 11, 2001 attacks killed 2,977 people using hijacked planes.

Ohio U. helping to pay for fire truck

ATHENS (AP) — Ohio University will chip in $250,000 for the new ladder fire truck in school's southeast Ohio hometown. The Athens fire department needs a ladder truck to send on fire calls to buildings four stories tall or higher. The Athens Messenger quotes Athens City Councilwoman Christine Fahl as saying 85 percent of buildings that size in the city are on the OU campus.

ACROSS OHIO & OUR NATION

Council President Bill Bias said during a meeting Tuesday that university President Roderick McDavis sent a letter saying the school would pay $50,000 in each of the next five years.

Athens bought the truck in May at a cost of just over $1 million and asked the university for help paying for it.

NY gas drilling study released

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The state Department of Environmental Conservation says natural gas production in New York's part of the Marcellus Shale could bring up to 24,795 full time drilling-related jobs and more than 29,000 jobs in other segments of the economy.

In its updated environmental impact study on natural gas production in the Marcellus, released for public comment on Wednesday, the agency says the job predictions assume drilling of 1,652 wells annually. Under a low-development scenario with 413 wells drilled annually, DEC says 6,198 industry jobs would be created.

The report outlines New York's rules for natural gas drilling using high-volume hydraulic fracturing, which injects chemical-laced water at high pressure into a well to crack surrounding shale and release gas.

Permitting has been on hold since the environmental study was launched in 2008.

Postal Service may get short-term help

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House may pull the Postal Service back from the brink of insolvency, at least for a few months.

Postmaster General Patrick Donahoe reports the agency will be unable to make a required $5.5 billion payment to the Treasury at the end of September. But the Office of Personnel Management says the White House may delay the payment for 90 days as part of a larger economic package in the works.

Postal spokeswoman Yvonne Yoerger said she had no details of the plan and that a long-term solution will still be needed.

Flight 93 memorial architect reflects

SHANKSVILLE, Pa. (AP) — The architect of the Flight 93 National Memorial says he's overwhelmed by seeing his design being constructed.

Paul Murdoch wants visitors to experience the site on a personal level, the Somerset Daily American reports Wednesday.

"One goal at the very beginning was to get the public down to the edge of the crash site — the temporary memorial was so far removed," he says.

The memorial has places for people to leave tributes and benches to sit on. Murdoch tried to design a variety of spaces to give people ways to access their thoughts and feelings.

The memorial honors those killed on Flight 93, which crashed in Shanksville, southeast of Pittsburgh, on Sept. 11, 2001. Forty passengers and crew members died after fighting with hijackers on the plane.

Fatal Pa. wrong-way crash was suicide

PORT MATILDA, Pa. (AP) — Police say a wrong-way motorcycle crash involving a tractor-trailer in central Pennsylvania has been ruled a suicide.

The Centre Daily Times reports authorities did not release the name of the 23-year-old rider killed in Monday's crash on Interstate 99 in Centre County.

The man was killed Monday afternoon when his motorcycle struck a tractor-trailer that tried to swerve to avoid him.

The Centre Daily Times report says the man was pronounced dead at the scene.

Giffords-Kelly memoir coming

NEW YORK (AP) — The joint memoir of Rep. Gabrielle Giffords and her husband, retired astronaut Mark Kelly, is coming out Nov. 15.

The book, titled "Gabby: A Story of Courage and Hope," was written with "The Last Lecture" co-author Jeffrey Zaslow.

Scribner spokesman Brian Belgio said Wednesday that Giffords "has been fully engaged with the collaborative writing process of the book at every step." An Arizona Democrat, she is still recovering from the Jan. 8 shooting when a gunman opened fire outside a Tucson-area grocery store as she met with constituents.

According to Scribner, the book will be a "deeply personal account" covering everything from Giffords' political career to Kelly's time on the Space Shuttle Endeavour to her recovery over the past several months.

Man arrested with lobsters in shorts

D'IBERVILLE, Miss. (AP) — A man in southern Mississippi is accused of trying to walk out of a D'Iberville grocery store without paying for food items he'd stuffed into his cargo shorts including live lobsters.

Police Chief Wayne Payne says 35-year-old Nathan Mark Hardy was arrested Saturday after allegedly being caught stuffing food into his cargo shorts — two bags of jumbo shrimp, a pork loin and two live lobsters.

Payne says Hardy, of Biloxi, tried to escape by throwing the pork loin at employees at the local Winn Dixie but fell while running away. He was arrested at the scene.

The shoplifting charge is a misdemeanor, but Hardy remained jailed Wednesday in the Harrison County jail with no bond pending a hearing on a probation violation.

Nine injured in bus-van collision in Va.

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — State Police say nine people have been injured in a collision between a Greyhound bus and a van on Interstate 85 in southern Virginia.

Sgt. Thomas Molnar says in a news release that the accident happened at 8:20 a.m. Wednesday in the northbound lanes in Dinwiddie County. Three people on the bus and six in the van suffered minor injuries.

The right northbound lane and shoulder are closed.

No other details were immediately available.

Trooper shovels fish heads off freeway

SEATTLE (AP) — A Washington State Patrol trooper dispatched to check out a report of a lost load slowing traffic on northbound Interstate 5 in north Seattle found a pile of bloody fish heads spilled across several lanes of traffic.

KOMO-TV reports that Trooper Jaime Arnold grabbed a shovel and set to work Tuesday evening.

A state Transportation Department camera shows him scooping the fish heads and moving them off the highway, even dodging cars entering from an on-ramp as he makes repeated trips to the side of the road.

About 10 minutes of shoveling cleared the road and Arnold headed back on patrol.

State Patrol spokeswoman Julie Startup says it's not clear where the fish heads came from.

Police divers find 200-year-old cannon

DETROIT (AP) — Police divers have discovered a cannon that could be more than two centuries old in the Detroit River.

The Detroit Police department says its dive team found the 6-foot-long cannon near the Cobo Center downtown during a training session in July. It's the fifth cannon found in the area in three decades.

The department and the U.S. Coast Guard planned to raise the cannon from the river on Wednesday. It's expected to be restored and preserved by the Detroit Historical Society.

Detroit Historical Society Curator Joel Stone tells the Detroit Free Press the cannon will be studied to try to determine its age and where it came from.

Three other cannons were recovered in the 1980s and a fourth was recovered by the department's dive team in 1994.

Gumby-robber has leaves clerk laughing

SAN DIEGO (AP) — San Diego police say surveillance tape shows a person dressed like Gumby telling a convenience store clerk he is being robbed, fumbling inside the costume as if to pull a gun, dropping 27 cents and leaving.

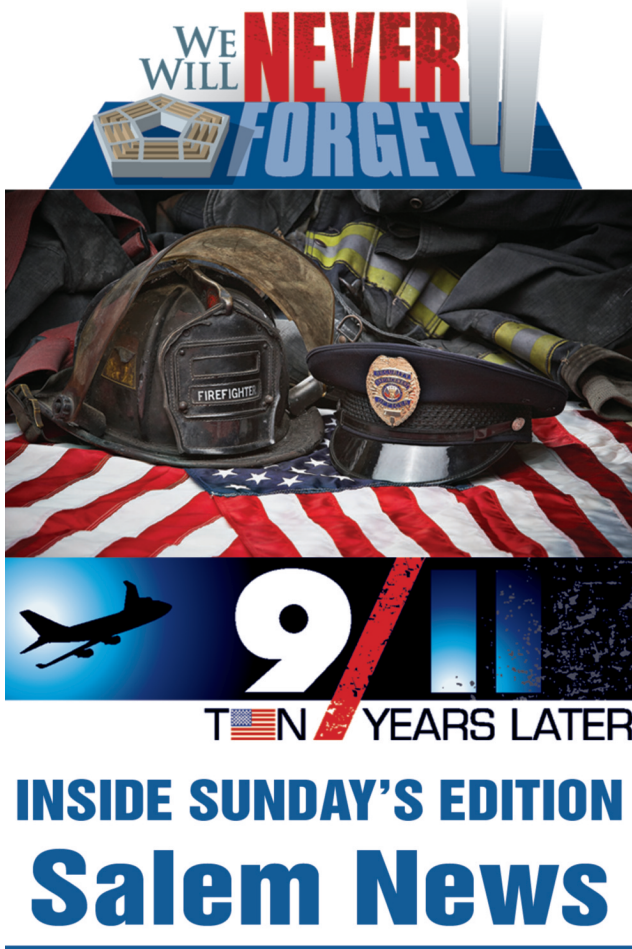

Police say the attempted robbery took place Monday at a 7-Eleven in Rancho Penasquitos, Calif.

Detective Gary Hassen tells San Diego's 10News the clerk never heard of Gumby. He described the character as a green SpongeBob SquarePants.

After being told it was a robbery, the clerk told the man in costume not to waste his time.

The clerk didn't report the encounter, but his boss called police after seeing the tape.

Hassen says police are taking it seriously and looking for the suspect. A $1,000 reward is being offered.

Dealers will earn up to $40,000 a year, and supervisors will make $40,000 or more. The application deadline is Sept. 30. More openings will be filled starting in December.
 Rock Gaming President Matthew Cullen told reporters Wednesday in Columbus he wants the facility to be a catalyst for growth in downtown Cleveland.
 The Cleveland casino will be the first of four to open in Ohio. The others will be in Cincinnati, Columbus and Toledo.

Wisconsin mother, son leave fallen relative to die

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — A Wisconsin woman and her son abandoned their 70-year-old relative after she fell to the floor, going out for pizza rather than administering aid, prosecutors alleged this week. The relative died two days later.
 Prosecutors filed charges Tuesday against the victim's 71-year-old sister, Veronica King, of Madison, and 45-year-old nephew, Steven King, of Evansville. The charges include first-degree reckless homicide, hiding a corpse and recklessly subjecting an individual at risk to abuse.
 Online court records didn't list defense attorneys for either defendant Wednesday. The public defender's office told The Associated Press its records Wednesday didn't show that either one had submitted a request for counsel.
 Mary Coleman fell while visiting Veronica King's home in May 2009, the criminal complaint said. She allegedly lay there, talking occasionally until she died, according to a Wisconsin State Journal report (<http://bit.ly/oyMoR3>).

"I told her quite frankly to shut up" because someone might call the police, Steven King told investigators.
 Veronica King said she gave her dying sister liquids but no food, the complaint said.
 Veronica King also told police that after Coleman died, neither she nor her son called to have the body removed "because we had other things to do that day," the complaint said.
 The pair allegedly kept the death a secret, stashing the body in the basement and later in the garage until police found her mummified remains wrapped in plastic bags.
 The Kings are also charged with bank fraud. The charge stems from allegations that they withdrew cash and wrote checks from Coleman's bank account where her pension and Social Security payments were automatically deposited.
 Bob Kaiser, assistant Dane County district attorney, said he would not comment on why it took two years to file charges because it was a pending case.

A search warrant filed in 2009 said that Steven King had a number of untreated mental illnesses, including schizophrenia, obsessive-compulsive disorder and Asperger's syndrome.
 Dane County social workers got involved with Coleman a month before she died after a bank worker expressed concern about her health and appearance. A social worker told police she last saw Coleman at Veronica King's house on April 30, 2009, but Coleman canceled a doctor's appointment scheduled for the next day.
 A few months later, a guardian for Veronica King called police because no one had seen Coleman recently. Officers who went to the Kings' home smelled what they believed were human remains, and found Coleman's mummified body in the garage.
 Steven King told investigators that on May 6, 2009 he and his mother knew Coleman was sick but they didn't take her to a doctor because it was his birthday.
 A nurse visited Veronica King the following day but the Kings allegedly hid Coleman from her. Coleman fell after the nurse left.
 Dr. Robert Olson, who was Coleman's doctor, told police she had suffered an earlier stroke. He speculated that she might have had another that kept her from getting off the floor, and he said she might have survived and recovered had she received medical care.

Ohioans need real work, not more make work

In some respects life has been more difficult for Ohioans who work, or want to, than for people in any other state, according to Policy Matters Ohio, a liberal think tank in Cleveland. To judge by the organization's statistics, that may well be so — but the recommendation Policy Matters offers would be counterproductive.

During the past decade, Ohio workers saw a higher average drop in wages than their counterparts in any other state, according to Policy Matters. During the same period one of every 10 Buckeye State workers lost a job.

But the unemployment rate in Ohio, 9 percent, is about the same as the national 9.1 percent figure. And during the past 10 years, the state's unemployment rate has more than doubled, but has mirrored the national rate.

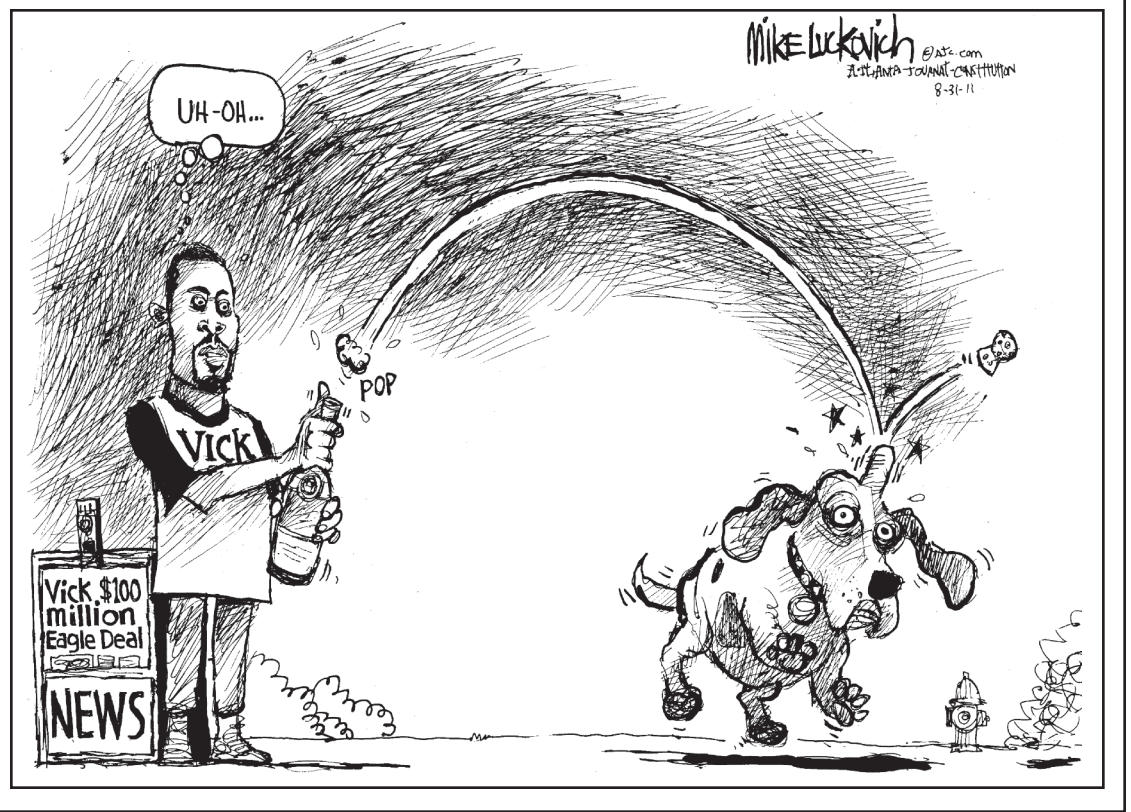

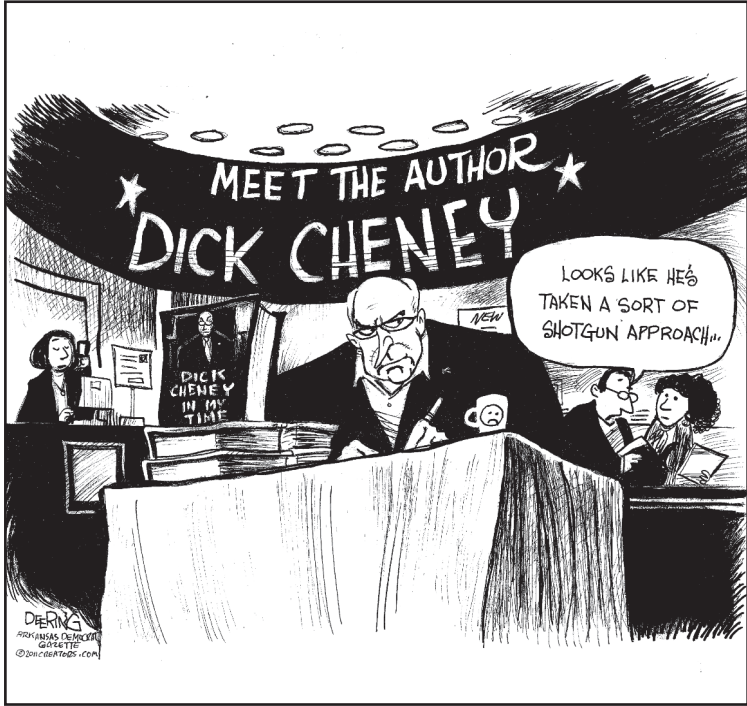

Regardless of just how bad the outlook for Ohio's workforce is, it is clear hundreds of thousands of state residents need jobs but can't find them.

Again, however, the Policy Matters approach to that reflects liberal philosophy throughout the United States. For example, Policy Matters suggests one way to create jobs is for the federal government to pay for a "weatherization" program for public buildings. Another idea is for Washington to fund other jobs in public health and demolishing dilapidated buildings.

Such jobs would be temporary, lasting mere months or even a couple of years. Ohioans need good, permanent jobs, not short-term ones.

The state's economy and its people will not be helped by what would amount only to reprieves from unemployment.

As in the nation as a whole, the answer to that in Ohio is for government to get out of the private sector's way, through tax relief and regulatory reform. Gov. John Kasich and the General Assembly have started down that path. They should stick to it.

Two different worlds

THOMAS SOWELL

A few weeks ago, I had what seemed to me a small medical problem, so I phoned my primary physician. However, after we discussed the problem, he directed me to a specialist.

After the specialist examined me, he directed me to a different specialist elsewhere. When I was examined and tested in the second specialist's office, he immediately phoned a hospital, asking to have an operating room available in an hour.

No more than 5 hours elapsed between my seeing the first specialist and the time when I was on an operating table.

This was quite a contrast with what happens in countries with government-run medical systems. In such countries, it is not uncommon to have to wait days to see a physician, weeks to see a specialist and months before you can have an operation. It is very doubtful whether I would have lasted that long.

In the intensive care unit, where I was sent after the first of two operations, I was hooked up to high-tech machines and had a small army of people looking after me around the clock. Would a government-run medical system have provided all this, especially for a man in his eighties?

In some countries with government-run medical systems, individuals are not even permitted to pay out of their own pockets for medications that the government has ruled are too expensive for people in their age bracket or medical condition.

That same mindset has already become evident in the United States, where a very expensive cancer drug has been refused federal approval to be sold, because it helps only a limited number of people and at very high costs.

But what if you are one of those limited numbers of people -- and you are willing to pay what it costs, with your own money?

You are free to take your life's savings and gamble it away in a casino, if you want to -- but you are not free to use your life's savings to save your life.

This is not an isolated paradox. This is the logical consequence of a vision of the world that prevails all too widely among the intelligentsia, and not just as regards medical care.

In that vision, people can draw on the available resources only to the extent that the government considers appropriate, in the light of other claims on those resources. This treats what the people have produced as if it automatically belongs to the government -- and as if politicians and bureaucrats have both the right and the wisdom to override the personal decisions that the people want to make for themselves.

This issue involves a difference between a world in which people can make their own decisions with their own money and a world in which decisions -- including life and death medical decisions -- are taken out of the hands of millions of people across the country and put into the hands of politicians and bureaucrats in Washington.

One of the big claims for government-run medical systems is that they can "bring down the cost of medical care." But anyone can bring down the cost of anything by simply buying a smaller quantity or a lower quality.

That is why countries with government-run medical systems have waiting lists to see doctors, and even longer waiting lists to see specialists or to get an operation. That is why those countries seldom have as many high-tech medical devices as in the United States or use the newest medications as often.

In those things that are crucially affected by medical care, such as cancer survival rates, the United States leads the way. In things that doctors can do little about -- such as obesity, homicide or drug addiction -- Americans shorten their own lives, more so than people in other comparable societies.

This enables advocates of government-run medical care to cite longevity statistics, in order to claim that our more expensive medical system is less effective, since Americans' longevity does not compare favorably with that in other comparable societies.

For those who think in terms of scoring talking points -- as distinguished from trying to get at the truth -- this kind of argument may sound good. But should something as serious as life and death medical issues be discussed in terms of misleading talking points?

A ruling's rehabilitation: Defending individual rights against 'reform'

GEORGE WILL

Liberal certitudes continue to dissolve, the most recent solvent being a robust new defense of a 1905 Supreme Court decision that liberals have long reviled -- and misrepresented. To understand why the court correctly decided Lochner v. New York and why this is relevant to current arguments, read David E. Bernstein's "Rehabilitating Lochner: Defending Individual Rights against Progressive Reform."

Since the New Deal, courts have stopped defending liberty of contract and other unenumerated rights grounded in America's natural rights tradition. These are referred to by the Ninth Amendment, which explicitly protects unenumerated rights "retained by the people," and "liberties or privileges or immunities" and "liberty" cited in the 14th Amendment. Progressivism, Bernstein argues, is hostile to America's premise that individuals possess rights that pre-exist government and are not fully enumerated in the Constitution. This doctrine stands athwart liberalism's aspiration to erase constitutional limits on government's regulatory powers.

An 1895 New York law limited bakery employees to working 10 hours a day and 60 hours a week. Ostensibly, this was health and safety legislation; actually, it was rent-seeking by large, unionized bakeries and the unions. Corporate bakeries supported the legislation, which burdened their small, family-owned competitors. The bakers union hoped to suppress the small, non-unionized bakeries that depended on flexible work schedules.

One such was owned by Joseph Lochner, who challenged the law, prevailing in the Supreme Court, 5-4. The majority said "clean and wholesome bread" does not depend on limiting workers' hours: Workers are "in no sense wards of the state" and there is no evidence that baking is an especially unhealthy profession, so the law was an unconstitutional "interference" with an unenumerated right of individuals, the liberty of contract.

The main dissent radiated progressivism's statism and paternalism: Government may limit working hours lest workers damage their "physical and mental capacity to serve the State, and to provide for those dependent upon them." In another dissent, ultimately famous and hugely influential, Oliver Wendell Holmes, whose judicial restraint often expressed his dogmatic majoritarianism, defended "the right of a majority to embody their opinions in law." He said liberty should not be construed "to prevent the natural outcome of a dominant opinion."

Princeton's president, Woodrow Wilson, agreed, dismissing "the inalienable rights of the individual" as "nonsense" inimical to government's ability to efficiently work its progressive will. So much for the idea that one of the Constitution's primary purposes is protection of individual rights against majority tyranny.

Progressives celebrated Holmes' gift to government of almost untrammelled police powers. He said courts should defer to economic regulations because the Constitution does not "embody a particular economic theory." Thus began liberals' distortion of Lochner as expressing the court's commitment to laissez-faire doctrine.

Actually, the decision flowed from bedrock American doctrine: The individual possesses inalienable rights -- here, liberty of contract -- that cannot be legislated away for casual or disreputable reasons. Hence progressives' frequent denunciations of "individualism" -- allowing individual rights, particularly those of property and contract, to impede the administrative state's regulation of society, immune from judicial review.

Bernstein recounts how liberty of contract was invoked -- sometimes successfully, usually not -- against legislatures that declared women unsuited to practice law, or limited women to working fewer hours than men. Labor unions representing male bartenders produced Michigan's law banning female bartenders.

Other laws favored by progressives defended family men from "destructive" competition with female workers who, by working outside the home, "weakened the race." A feminist correctly argued, on Lochner's natural rights grounds, that restricting women's liberty of contract regarding hours of work "amounts to confiscation of whatever amount would have been earned during the forbidden hours." In 1926, Georgia's Supreme Court cited Lochner's affirmation of liberty of contract to overturn a law prohibiting black barbers from cutting white children's hair.

Lochner was successfully invoked against laws enforcing residential segregation by race but unsuccessfully against laws banning miscegenation. Many progressives supported such laws as enabling government to regulate racial friction.

And after the triumph of progressive jurisprudence during the New Deal, courts capitulated to legislatures in the name of democratic deference to what Holmes called the "dominant opinion." It became mostly futile to invoke Lochner's logic -- that individual rights often trump government's powers to boss people around.

Long execrated by most law professors, Lochner is the liberals' least favorite decision because its premises pose a threat to their aspiration, which is to provide an emancipation proclamation for regulatory government. The rehabilitation of Lochner is another step in the disarmament of such thinking.

legion's hamburgers cooked and smothered in onions. "We've got 1,000 pounds of hamburgers and 800 pounds of onions and we're ready," he said. As always the legion will open the fair to special needs children in the area at 11 a.m. Friday, providing free food and rides and a chance to participate in the fair at their own pace. "It's something we take very seriously," Reash said. "A lot of them can't get out during regular hours and we don't want them missing out." Reash said he anticipates over 250 children this year. There is no admission fee. Parking will be at Firestone Park and shuttles will be offered by the East Fairfield United Methodist Church from 5 to 11 p.m. Friday and Saturday. A handicap drop off zone will be at the southeast corner of the circle. "I don't see a problem" with naming it McCulloch Park. "I don't think anybody has any problem," she said. Karen Carter, co-chairperson of the Salem Beautification Committee, asked city council to consider the request at Tuesday's meeting. During the downtown renovation project in 1994 park benches, a kiosk, a parking lot and trees were planted on the property, that is located between MacMillan's Office Supply and Troll's Jewelry store. Carter said city officials were aware of the Salem Area Chamber of Commerce's desire, through the beautification committee, "to officially give title to this area where McCulloch's, a very popular and prominent business was once located." The Salem Rotary Club agreed to donate a sign, Carter said, and she asked for a formal ribbon-cutting ceremony with McCulloch family members and Rotary representatives, if council approves the request. The committee is expected to approve it and O'Leary said she scheduled the meeting quickly because she will be out of town next week and wanted a resolution prepared for council's next meeting on Sept. 20. Larry Shields can be reached at lshields@salemnews.net pleasure of serving with many fine people, and I feel we have much to be proud of. I have no doubt this board will continue to do great things for the citizens of Columbiana County," he wrote. Albright's resignation is effective Sept. 30, which means he will be chairman for one final time at the port authority's next monthly board meeting on Sept. 19. Mike Halleck served on the port authority with Albright from 2007-2010 before being elected commissioner. "I want to thank him for his leadership and what he has done for our community and our county," Halleck said. He described Weigle as a capable replacement. "I've known Tim Weigle for 20-25 years. We started out as trustees together and I've got as much respect for him as anyone in public life," Halleck said. Weigle, 58, has been trustee for the past 22 years. His day job is as product support manager of the Youngstown office of Ohio Caterpillar. Halleck said Weigle's experience in government and business makes him an ideal choice. "I think he'll be a very good representative for the county," Halleck said of Weigle. The appointment process for commissioners went smoother and quicker than past efforts to fill seats on the port authority board. While there has always been a political undercurrent to the appointment process, it became more overt in recent years with the appointment of the county Democratic Party chairman's son in one instance and Democrats lobbying for the appointment of another person. Commissioner Penny Traina, a Democrat, found herself in the middle of those votes. "I watched how Commissioner Traina was maligned by what I consider a distasteful and unprofessional process," said Halleck, who is a Republican. Rather than solicit applications for the vacancy, as has been done in the past, commissioners moved quickly to replace Albright by coming up with a name on their own. While Republicans have a 2-1 edge on the board of commissioners, and Weigle is a Republican, Halleck said he was unaware of Weigle's politics when he recommended him for the position. Traina also voted for Weigle's appointment. The five-member port authority meets once a month and they are paid a base annual salary of $7,200. Members are also entitled to health insurance provided by the port authority.

Trucker admits smuggling drugs from U.S. into Canada

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A Canadian truck driver who pleaded guilty Wednesday to smuggling cocaine in the floorboards of his truck was part of an operation that sent more than 1 1/2 tons of drugs across the U.S. border into Canada since 2009, federal authorities said. Ravinder Arora, 30, of Brampton, Ontario, pleaded guilty in federal court Wednesday to conspiring to export cocaine. He faces at least 10 years in prison at his December sentencing. Arora was about to cross the Lewiston-Queenston Bridge from western New York into Ontario last September when his nervous demeanor led U.S. border agents to search his truck, authorities said. Agents found 213 pounds of cocaine worth more than $3.8 million in a compartment beneath the trailer's floor. It was believed to be the largest single narcotics seizure in the region's history. As part of his plea agreement, Arora admitted to making four other trips and agreed to cooperate in the continuing investigation into what authorities believe is a larger smuggling operation. Two other people, including the owner of the trucking company that employed Arora, are awaiting trial. Investigators said Arora would pick up the cocaine at a warehouse in Chino, Calif., and drive to a warehouse in the Buffalo suburb of Cheektowaga, where legitimate cargo was piled on top of a false floor concealing the drugs. He then drove into Canada to deliver the drugs to a warehouse in Mississauga for eventual street sale in the Toronto area. Arora was promised $8,000 per smuggling trip, according to court documents. Arora's attorney, Parmanand Prashad, did not immediately respond to telephone and email messages seeking comment Wednesday evening. Based on ledgers seized during the investigation, the operation is believed to have made nine successful trips before Arora's arrest in September 2010.

Shooting victims loved history, fitness, cupcakes

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — One was an Iraq War veteran who loved military history. Another was an Afghanistan war vet and fitness buff. Still another would bring in cupcakes for colleagues when they got promotions. All of them were National Guard members and they were sitting at a table at a Nevada IHOP when a gunman burst in and began shooting. All three died in the attack, a death toll that matched the total number of Nevada guardsmen killed in Iraq and Afghanistan over a decade. A patron was also killed. "This is unquestionably the most devastating attack in Carson City's history," Sheriff Kenny Furlong said on Wednesday. "Yesterday our town was shocked to the core." Exactly what set gunman Eduardo Sencion, 32, off — and whether the grocery store employee had some kind of grudge against the military — remained unclear. He killed himself after the shooting. Family members told police that Sencion was mentally troubled, but he did not have a criminal history. South Lake Tahoe police said the department took Sencion into protective custody during a mental health commitment in April 2000 and that he fought with officers. He was not charged. The Lake Tahoe News first reported the incident. No court order was involved, Lt. David Stevenson told The Associated Press. He said officers have the authority under state law to take individuals into protective custody if they determine the person poses a danger to themselves or others. No weapon was involved in the incident, said Stevenson, who declined to release any other details because the Carson City shooting investigation remains active. Art Panchal runs a South Lake Tahoe motel near the small Mexican market where Sencion worked, which is owned by Sencion's family. Panchal visits the market to buy jalapenos, tortillas and fish, and saw Sencion on those shopping trips. "He was a happy guy. He was always smiling," Panchal said. "He would help people out." When Panchal heard media reports about the shooting, "I was shocked." "I was totally surprised," said Panchal, who has operated the National 9 Inn for six years. "I don't know why he freaked out." Authorities on Wednesday released the 911 calls made from in and around the IHOP. They painted a picture of a frantic scene, as witnesses described the gunman firing his gun. "There's a shooting in the IHOP! Get there right now!" yelled caller Ralph Swagler, owner of Local's BBQ next door, as shots rang out in the background. "Now he's coming back out. He's shooting people in the parking lot! He's shooting at us now!"

HOROSCOPE

By HOLIDAY MATHIS 9/08/11

The opposition between Mercury and Neptune will be exact today, though the energy of the aspect has been felt for weeks now. This cosmic tug-of-war causes tension between the realm of communication and our belief systems. Discussing your beliefs will bring them to inquiry. Just because you take a fact for granted doesn't make it true.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). It will be easy for you to think of others. You'll be treated with the respect you deserve, largely because you are so respectful of everyone with whom you have dealings.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). When you look back on what you once thought was a huge problem, you can't believe how complicated it seemed. Once a problem is solved, the solution seems so obvious.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Don't be too timid to ask for help. The more you involve others in your process the more cooperation you will receive. By asking for help, you will give others the opportunity to do something they will later be proud of.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Keep your energy contained. Don't let friends lead you off your path. Stay focused. Instead of doing a million different tasks and being busy, do one task a million times and be successful.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You may find it challenging to stick to your schedule. Much of it just doesn't sound appealing to you anymore. You crave new and exciting twists. Your association with a Gemini could provide just what you need.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You are highly imaginative and will benefit from pursuing your artistic whims. Be careful not to seek a metaphysical explanation for a problem that could be solved easily through practical means.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You will find inspiration as you withdraw from the mainstream and investigate new venues. You may do this via the Internet, though it will be more motivating to talk to people face to face and see an environment first hand.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). There are some things in your life that you haven't thought to question until recently. Now you're filled with questions, and you will find answers as you bring your quiet and luminous gaze to the moon.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You will be analyzing someone's contributions and interactions with you. To you, it feels like the kindness this person shows is motivated by fundamentally selfish reasons, and you may very well be right.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Parenthood, friendship and romance are not normally classified as competitive events. However, today presents an interesting scenario. If it's not a competition, you don't know what is.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). What you consider to be trivial, someone else considers to be deeply profound and personal. You are aware of these differences in opinion and will tread carefully.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You are even more resilient than usual and will shake off the troubles of yesterday and come bounding into brand-new troubles that are far more interesting, exciting and glamorous.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Sept. 8). This year sees you becoming a master of your time. You'll make meaningful connections this fall, and many hours will be spent with a special loved one. October brings a happy development in the realm of health. A work cycle ends in December, and new exciting projects start in 2011. April and August are ideal for travel. Pisces and Aries people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 20, 14, 38, 11 and 27.

Fabric-softener spots

Heloise

Dear Heloise: My mother has a couple of nice blouses that have a few light, noticeable SPOTS on them. She said they just appeared after washing and drying them one day. She thinks they could be from the fabric-softener sheets. Have you ever heard of dryer sheets doing that to a piece of clothing? If so, is there any way to get the stain out? — Cheryl Curry, via email

Yes, there is, and it's pretty easy. Just rub the wet fabric with a bar of soap, or put a little liquid laundry detergent on the area, then rub it in and rewash the item as usual. As always, check your garment-care tag, because some tags will state "No fabric softener." If the fabric is polyester, it just may be the softener sheet. Too small a load of laundry can't "distribute" the fabric softener evenly, and so if you must do a small load, it is helpful to put a damp bath towel or two in. Too many clothes, and the fabric-softener sheet can't move around. — Heloise

ICE BAG

Dear Heloise: I read the hint from the mother who used peas (Heloise here: a bag of frozen peas) as an ice bag. I had eye surgery and was given an eye ice pack, but included in the instructions for extended care was a recipe I wish I'd had when raising my kids. Mix 1/4 cup of rubbing alcohol with 3/4 cup of water in a small, sealable plastic lunch bag. Put it in the freezer, and it will become a little more than slushy. It is a perfect ice bag. A larger bag can be used for larger "hurts" by using the 1-to-3 recipe. — Barbara Floyd, Thornville, Ohio/Bonita Springs, Fla.

Yes indeed, a homemade ice pack. Please double-bag it, and mark on the bag what it is. — Heloise

KNOW THE ADDRESS

Dear Heloise: Due to strict privacy laws, even apartments cannot give out residency information to visitors or callers. If you are coming to visit someone, even Aunt Frances or Dad, please find out the apartment number before you drive over. Bring the person's phone number so you can call if you can't find the address. Employees at the office cannot give you any information. — A Reader, via email

Issues of identity serious in adoptions

DEAR ABBY: May I weigh in on the letter from "Noah's Real Dad in New York" (June 27), whose adult adopted son wants to reclaim his original last name? I am an adult adoptee who searched for and found my birth family. I also joined a support group that was formed to support the adoption triad.

Research has shown that male adoptees struggle with their identity more than females do. After all, in our patriarchal society it is the male surname that most often does not get changed in marriage. Women are accustomed to the fact that they will most likely change their name.

This family needs to do some reading on the subject, There are many resources out there. A family counselor who isn't well-educated about adoption issues will not be helpful. Unless you walk in an adoptee's shoes you cannot judge their actions. After all, the adoption decision is made without the consent of the child. We also resent being treated like children after we are adults. Noah is a 34-year-old adult able to make his own choices and decisions. Noah is fortunate that he knows his birth father and didn't have to search a bureaucratic maze to obtain any information. Laws have been passed in several, not all, states allowing adoptees to get important information about their birth families that is necessary for taking care of ourselves and our own children. — DEBBIE IN FLORIDA

DEAR DEBBIE: Your letter reflects the strong sentiments of many adoptees and their families who wrote to me expressing their disappointment in my reply to Noah's adoptive father. Here are some of their responses:

DEAR ABBY: I am an adoptive parent in an open adoption with our children's birth families, and I vehemently disagree with what you wrote.

My children have two mothers and two fathers. My husband and I are the parents who are raising them, but that slip of paper signed by a judge does not erase their family of origin. It shouldn't. They have an adoptive family and a biological one and should be able to have a relationship with both.

My children also have two names. The names they were given at birth and the names my husband and I gave them when we adopted them as infants. They will always know about these two sets of names. When they are older, if they wish to be called by their birth name, we will have to respect that. It does not mean they love us less or that we are not their parents. What is DOES mean is that adoption is more complicated than most people realize, and as our children grow into adults, we need to give them the space and freedom to discover for themselves who they are. — AN ADOPTIVE MOTHER IN ILLINOIS

DEAR ABBY: I agree with you 100 percent! How horrible, disrespectful and mean-spirited of that 34-year-old son. I understand why he is interested in the family history of his biological father, but he could record that history for the future without changing his current surname. Doesn't Noah realize his biological father was an adult who made up his mind to give up his rights to his son, including the rights to his last name? If Noah doesn't respect his adoptive father for giving him his last name, and if Noah is set on changing his surname, it would be more respectful to take his mother's maiden name as his surname. I hope Noah reconsiders the issue he's creating, and at 34 he makes a wiser adult decision than his biological parent did. — PHYLLIS IN OHIO

Shaky hands not due to nervousness

Dr. Donohue

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Will you please provide information on essential tremor? Thanks. — D.C.

ANSWER: When people unfamiliar with essential tremor see a person with it, they immediately assume that the person is quite nervous. The shaky hands are a giveaway. It's not "nerves" that are causing the shakiness; it's essential tremor. A glitch in one of the brain's movement-control centers has occurred. Katherine Hepburn suffered from essential tremor. Not only did her hands shake, but so did her head and her voice.

www.essentialtremor.org. The foundation is a reliable source of information and can keep you up to date on new treatments.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Many years ago, we moved to a small community next to the ocean. We have eaten large quantities of fish ever since. I have developed a parasite called pinworms, which I believe came from partly uncooked fish. I used to see them when they exited from my colon (backside). They are fewer now that I take Oregano Leaf Oil. Can they cause other ailments or infiltrate other organs? How does one get rid of them once and for all? — J.D.

Essential tremor is a common condition. Its other name is familial tremor, indicating that it runs in families. Most affected people can find other relatives who have it. Trembling hands make it near impossible to bring a spoonful of soup to the mouth. Handwriting often degenerates into a scrawl. Buttoning a shirt or coat becomes a herculean task.

ANSWER: Pinworms are an extremely common infection, especially in children. During the night, the female pinworm crawls out of the rectum to lay eggs on the nearby skin. She is tiny, 0.4 inches (1 cm) long. You must have good eyes to see these worms. A magnifying glass is a big help. Pinworms rarely make their way to other organs. Some speculate that they might be a cause of appendicitis.

Alcohol abolishes the tremor for a short time. Alcohol can't be used as a treatment. Other medicines, like propranolol (Inderal) and primidone (Mysoline), offer effective control. For seriously disabling tremors, deep-brain stimulation can put an end to them. People can help control shaking hands by holding their elbows firmly against the body when using their hands for a fine task. Everyone with essential tremor needs to make the acquaintance of the International Essential Tremor Foundation at 888-387-3667 (toll-free) or online at Eggs on the skin cause intense itching. Your doctor is best equipped to make the diagnosis. Doctors have the instruments to clearly see the worm or its eggs. Mebendazole (Vermox), albendazole (Albenza) and pyrantel pamoate (Pin-X) have a good track record of getting rid of pinworms. They are not found in fish.

Undercooked freshwater fish can harbor the fish tapeworm, which grows to a length of 39 feet. It produces few, if any, symptoms. Prolonged infection with it can lead to vitamin B-12 deficiency. For diagnosis, a stool specimen should be sent to a lab experienced in identifying the eggs and the worm segments. Praziquantel (Biltricide) is the treatment.

Daughter blames her for visitation issues

Annie's Mailbox

Dear Annie: When I divorced three years ago, my ex-husband and I worked out a visitation schedule whereby he gets our children three weekends a month. Now that our older child is 13, she is involved with a great many extracurricular activities and has a busy social life. "Sydney" has canceled quite a few weekends with her father in order to do other things. Now he is accusing me of withholding visitation.

often gets his voicemail, and then he gets angry that he hasn't spoken to her. When I ask why he doesn't call her back, he claims he's too busy. In the past three years, he has never called once. When he needs to make pick-up arrangements, he has his girlfriend do it.

Last spring, Sydney signed up for a musical stage production that included twice-a-week practices and two weekend shows in a row. She told her father I was "forcing" her to do the show, even though she knew when she signed up that the production was dependent on her and she couldn't miss too much time. She wanted to do it. My ex believes I am to blame for all the canceled weekends.

In addition, Sydney always has to call her father on those weekends she stays home. She

It is frustrating being responsible for initiating contact between my daughter and her father, and I am sick and tired of hearing him complain. Sydney is a teenager, and I rarely get to see her myself. Isn't there some kind of loophole that says a teenager can refuse visitation? Can I tell him to shut up and get a lawyer so my daughter can tell a judge what she wants? — Not Withholding the Child

Dear Not: Well, we don't recommend the "shut up" part. Visitation schedules are often altered as children get older. When ex-spouses can set aside their differences for the child's sake, this can be worked out amicably. Unfortunately, it doesn't seem to be the case for you. Part of the problem is that Sydney doesn't want her father to think ill of her, so she gives the impression that you are to blame. She should learn to take responsibility for her decisions. And her parents should talk this over with a mediator.

Ohio Senate gave pay raises after state cuts

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — State records show staffers for both Republicans and Democrats in the Ohio Senate got pay raises this summer in the aftermath of state budget cuts and the passage of a law limiting public employee unions. Payroll data reviewed by The Associated Press show 19 Senate caucus employees got pay hikes since July. The raises were first reported Tuesday on the liberal political blog Plunderbund. Republican Senate President Tom Niehaus says he ordered a pay review in December after experienced staff members began leaving during the transition of administrations. He says he was looking to see if he could make pay for experienced employees more competitive so the Senate could retain their expertise. Niehaus says raises didn't require a budget increase in the Senate.

Detroit completes 3-game sweep of Indians with 8-6 win

CLEVELAND (AP) — Victor Martinez and the Detroit Tigers found a way to pick up Justin Verlander.

Verlander won his 10th straight start and earned his 22nd victory overall, helped when Martinez hit a late grand slam that sent the Tigers over the Cleveland Indians 8-6 Wednesday.

The AL Central-leading Tigers completed a three-game sweep and won their sixth in a row.

"What a great win," said Verlander, who leaped off the bench and cheered Martinez's shot that highlighted a five-run rally in the seventh inning. "When he hit it, I said, 'It's that kind of year.'"

Verlander (22-5) gave up a pair of two-run homers to Shelley Duncan and trailed 4-2 before Detroit rallied against Justin Masterson (11-9) and the Indians' bullpen.

Verlander leads the majors in wins and is 20-2 since May 1. He gave up four runs and

McCoy will be the 10th different quarterback to start for the Browns since 1999

BEREA — Colt McCoy wears No. 12. For the Cleveland Browns, he's also No. 10. It's a number they'd like to stay stuck on.

On Sunday against Cincinnati, McCoy will become the 10th different quarterback to start a season opener for the Browns since 1999, an astonishing statistic and perhaps the single biggest reason the franchise has failed miserably during an expansion era of losses. McCoy follows Ty Detmer, Tim Couch, Kelly Holcomb, Jeff Garcia, Trent Dilfer, Charlie Frye, Derek Anderson, Brady Quinn and Jake Delhomme as quarterbacks to begin the year as Cleveland's starter.

"I hope it stays like this for a while," McCoy said Wednesday.

In the NFL, quarterback consistency is vital to success.

With a revolving door at the game's most important position, it's no wonder the Browns have only made the playoffs once and lost at least 10 games nine times in 12 years. Cleveland has been searching for a leader to guide them from the dismal darkness and back to

OSU's replacements start season off with strong performance

COLUMBUS (AP) — Call them The Replacements.

In its season opener, No. 15 Ohio State found itself relying heavily on several players who few might have expected to be such integral parts of the team just a short time ago — before more prominent players were suspended or quit the team.

Joe Bauserman, Andrew Norwell, Carlos Hyde, Dominic Clarke and Verlon Reed all made their first career college starts. And almost all played extremely well in the Buckeyes' 42-0 thrashing of Akron.

Once afterthoughts who were counted on to add depth at quarterback, on the line, at tailback, in the secondary and out wide, they're now central figures for the Buckeyes as they prepare to take on Toledo on Saturday.

"All those guys showed up," interim coach Luke Fickell said. "They didn't dwell on it. They weren't worried about the guys we were missing, and they stepped forward."

Bauserman had a surprisingly good game as one of the two quarterbacks replacing three-year starter Terrelle Pryor, who left the program in

A 'dark day' for hockey

Jet with hockey team crashes in Russia, killing 43

TUNOSHNA, Russia (AP) — A private jet carrying a Russian professional hockey team to its first game of the season crashed shortly after takeoff Wednesday, killing 43 people — including European and former NHL players — in one of the worst aviation disasters in sports history. Two people survived the accident.

The crash also was the latest tragedy to befall the sport of hockey — following the sudden, offseason deaths of three of the NHL's tough-guy enforcers that has shocked fans.

The chartered Yak-42 jet was carrying the team — Lokomotiv Yaroslavl — to Minsk, the capital of Belarus, where it was to play Thursday in its opening game of the Kontinental Hockey League season. Of the 45 people on board, 36 were players, coaches and team officials; eight were crew.

The plane apparently struggled to gain altitude and then hit a signal tower before breaking apart along the Volga River near Yaroslavl, 150 miles (240 kilometers) northeast of Moscow. One of the blue-and-white plane's charred engines poked through the surface of the shallow water.

"This is the darkest day in the history of our sport," said Rene Fasel, president of the International Ice Hockey Federation. "This is not only a Russian tragedy — the Lokomotiv roster included players and coaches from 10 nations." One player — identified as Russian Alexander Galimov — and one unidentified crew member were hospitalized in "very grave" condition, said Alexander Degyatryov, chief doctor at Yaroslavl's Solovyov Hospital.

Among the dead were Lokomotiv coach and NHL veteran Brad McCrimmon, a Canadian; assistant coach Alexander Karpovtsev, one of the first Russians to have his name etched on the Stanley Cup as a member of the New York Rangers; and Pavol Demitra, who played for the St. Louis Blues and the Vancouver Canucks and was the Slovakian national team captain.

Other standouts killed were Czech players Josef Vasicek, Karel Rachunek and Jan Marek, Swedish goalie Stefan

Liv, Latvian defenseman Karlis Skrastins and defenseman Ruslan Salei of Belarus.

Russian NHL star Alex Ovechkin reflected the anguish that resonated through the sport of hockey when he tweeted: "I'm in shock!!!!R.I.P."

"Though it occurred thousands of miles away from our home arenas, this tragedy represents a catastrophic loss to the hockey world — including the NHL family, which lost so many fathers, sons, teammates and friends," NHL Commissioner Gary Bettman said in a statement.

The NHL already has been mourning three unexpected deaths of players in recent months, including a suicide and an accidental drug overdose.

The cause of the crash was not immediately apparent, but Russian news agencies cited local officials as saying it may have been due to technical problems. The plane was built in 1993 and belonged to a small Moscow-based company, Yak Service.

In recent years, Russia and the other former Soviet republics have had some of the world's worst air traffic safety records. Experts blame the age of the aircraft, weak government controls, poor pilot training and a cost-cutting mentality.

Divers worked feverishly to recover bodies in a search operation that lasted well into the night. They struggled to heft the bodies of large, strong athletes in stretchers up the muddy, steep riverbank.

Swarms of police and rescue crews rushed to Tunoshna, a ramshackle village with small wooden houses and a blue-domed church on the banks of the Volga 10 miles (16 kilometers) east of Yaroslavl.

Resident Irina Prakhova was walking to the village pump for a bucket of water when she saw the plane going down and then heard a loud bang.

"It was wobbling in flight, it was clear that something was wrong," said Prakhova. "I saw them pulling bodies to the shore, some still in their seats with seatbelts on."

More than 2,000 mourning fans wearing jerseys and scarves and waving team flags gathered in the evening outside Lokomotiv's arena in Yaroslavl to mourn. Most carried flowers. Riot police stood guard as fans sang to honor the dead athletes.

Yaroslavl Gov. Sergei Vakhrukov promised the crowd that the Lokomotiv team would be rebuilt, prompting anger from some fans at a perceived lack of respect for the dead.

The Kontinental Hockey League has 24 professional teams across Russia, Belarus, Latvia, Kazakhstan and Slovakia that draws players from the NHL and European leagues. Lokomotiv is a leading force in Russian hockey and came third in the KHL last year. It was also a three-time Russian League champion in 1997, 2002 and 2003.

"We will do our best to ensure that hockey in Yaroslavl does not die, and that it continues to live for the people that were on that plane," said Russian Ice Hockey Federation President Vladislav Tretiak.

McCrimmon, who took over as coach in May, was most recently an assistant coach with the Detroit Red Wings, and played for years in the NHL for Boston, Philadelphia, Detroit, Calgary, Hartford and Phoenix.

Detroit coach Mike Babcock said McCrimmon "wanted to be a head coach, so he went to Russia to do it."

A game Wednesday between Salavat Yulayev and Atlant in the central Russian city of Ufa was called off in mid-match after news of the crash was announced. Russian TV showed an empty arena in Ufa as grief-stricken fans abandoned the stadium.

Russia was hoping to showcase Yaroslavl as a modern and vibrant city this week at an international forum attended by heads of state, including Russian President Dmitry Medvedev, so the crash came as a particularly bitter blow. The forum is being held in the hockey stadium.

Many in the Czech Republic also took the news hard.

"Jan Marek, Karel Rachunek, and Josef Vasicek contributed greatly to the best successes of our ice hockey in the recent years, first of all to the golden medals at the world championships in 2005 and 2010," said Tomas Kral, the president of the Czech ice hockey association. "The were excellent players, but also great friends and personalities. That's how we will remember them."

In the western Slovak city of Trencin, where Demitra started his career and where he played during the 2004-05 NHL lockout, hundreds of fans gathered outside an arena Wednesday night to light candles in his memory.

Medvedev has announced plans to take aging Soviet-built planes out of service starting next year. The short- and medium-range Yak-42 has been in service since 1980 and about 100 are still being used by Russian carriers.

In past plane crashes involving sports teams, 75 Marshall University football players, coaches, fans and airplane crew died in West Virginia on Nov. 14, 1970, while returning from a game. Thirty-six of the dead were players.

Thirty members of a Uruguayan rugby club were killed in a crash in the Andes in 1972.

The entire 18-member U.S. figure skating team died in a crash on their way to the 1961 world championships in Brussels, and 18 members of the Torino soccer team died near Turin, Italy, in a 1949 crash.

In 1980, 14 members of the U.S. amateur boxing team were killed in a crash in Warsaw, Poland.

A plane crash in 1950 near the Russian city of Sverdlovsk, now called Yekaterinburg, killed 13 players and officials in the Soviet air force's ice hockey squad. A Munich air crash in 1958 cost eight Manchester United players their lives.

BUCKS

the heat of an NCAA scandal this summer to jump to the NFL. He passed for three touchdowns and ran for another, with true freshman Braxton Miller tossing another scoring pass.

After two years holding a clipboard on the sideline, Bauserman was asked if he ever thought he'd be the main attraction at Ohio Stadium.

"You just don't know," he said. "You take it one day at a time and take it as it comes."

Norwell took over at left tackle for Mike Adams, one of four top players suspended for the first five games for taking cash and tattoos from the target of a federal drug-trafficking probe. The Buckeyes didn't permit a sack of their neophyte quarterbacks and piled up 224 rushing yards.

Hyde got the call at tailback, where last year's leading rusher, Dan Herron, is also among those sitting out the first five more games. Hyde, with just 24 carries as a freshman last season, rushed for 93 yards on 19 carries. Freshman Rod Smith added 74 yards on 18 carries.

"Coach called on me to be the starter today so I felt like I had to step into it," Hyde said. "Next week, I'll be ready. It was good to really get my feet wet as a starter."

Clarke got the call on short notice to start at cornerback. Just 48 hours before the opener, Ohio State suspended starter Travis Howard (along with backup Corey "Pittsburgh" Brown and first-team tailback Jordan Hall) for accepting less than $300 in gifts from a charity. Clarke came through with four solo tackles, which was second-best on the team.

"When the news broke about the suspensions, I knew I was going to start because of the way the depth chart is set up," he said after Saturday's win. "I was sad for Travis, but I quickly realized it was a great opportunity for me to show what I can do."

Reed took over at wideout in place of DeVier Posey, who is also sitting out the first five games for taking improper benefits, and Reed had three catches for 66 yards.

The last game that the Buckeyes played at Ohio Stadium — a 37-7 win over Michigan last Nov. 27 — most of those backups weren't even listed on the two-deep roster.

"It was a lot of guys' first time out there and playing in front of our fans is always a tough thing to do," safety C.J. Barnett said. "They all came here because they can play and they proved it last week."

The contributed with their play and also with their enthusiasm.

"The most important thing is the attitude," Fickell said.

"The attitude that the guys had that obviously weren't with us, the attitude the guys had that did have to step up and take their spots that nobody batted an eye at it. Nobody worried, nobody whined. To me that's more of the things that I wanted to see."

Ohio State regains four suspended players this week (linebacker Jordan Whiting, Howard, Brown and Hall), but still will be without Adams, Herron, Posey and backup defensive lineman Solomon Thomas until the sixth game, at Nebraska on Oct. 8.

So The Replacements aren't going away any time soon — and maybe not even when those other players return.

CROSBY

he'll return to play this season.

Yet the 24-year-old former MVP remains adamant he won't don his familiar No. 87 jersey until he's back at full strength.

"Maybe I can get by with 90 percent, maybe I couldn't but I'm not going to roll the dice with that," he said.

Flanked by Pittsburgh general manager Ray Shero and the two doctors who have carefully monitored his progress after sustaining blows to the head in consecutive games nine months ago, Crosby shot down speculation he's considering retirement.

While acknowledging there's a "slight chance" he may never play again, Crosby quickly added "I wouldn't bet on that."

Guessing when arguably the game's greatest player will consider himself at full speed is an equally risky proposition.

Dr. Michael Collins likened Crosby to a Ferrari. Sure, Crosby can go out and skate. He just can't do the things he wants to do without experiencing a recurrence of the issues that have plagued him since January.

"Sid's 100 percent is different than anybody else's," Collins said.

Crosby's symptoms have included "fogginess" that at times made it difficult for him to drive or watch television. He's also endured painful migraines and likened the recovery process to a roller coaster. The good days far outnumber the bad ones, but the bad ones aren't gone completely.

"I'm lucky," Crosby said. "I feel like I'm in pretty good shape and on the right end of this right now."

Doctors don't anticipate the symptoms having any long-term effect on his day-to-day life, with Dr. Ted Carrick calling it "Christmas for Sid Crosby and the people that care for him."

The true test of his hockey future won't be determined until he gets hit for the first time in a real game. That will likely be months considering it's still uncertain when he can begin practicing with his teammates.

"We're going to introduce contact with Sid very carefully," Collins said, "and we're not even close to that."

Crosby has spent the summer working out in Canada and undergoing various tests to his vestibular system, which is directly tied to a human's movement and sense of balance. Crosby struggled with those tests shortly after his diagnosis and Carrick said only recently has Crosby shown progress when contact of any kind is involved.

Contact is going to be unavoidable whenever he comes back, though Crosby is hoping the NHL will take steps to crack down on head shots like the two that put his career in jeopardy.

The first came against the Washington Capitals in the Winter Classic on New Year's Day, the second five days later against Tampa Bay. Crosby stressed he didn't feel obligated to play against the Lightning, saying his symptoms didn't really manifest until after he took the second hit. Crosby has refused to say whether the hits were dirty. He's not sure it matters.

"A guy's got to be responsible with his stick, why shouldn't he be responsible with the rest of his body when he's going to hit someone?" Crosby said. "Whether it's accidental or not accidental, you've got to be responsible out there."

Crosby doesn't believe outlawing head shots would adversely affect the game, even if there's no guarantee he'll ever be the player he was before the injury. He's as stunned at anyone by his slow and sometimes unsteady recovery. He thought he was making progress last month before his workouts were scaled back when symptoms reappeared after working at what he estimated as "80-90 percent."

"When I really fatigue myself or really stress (my system)," Crosby said, "I didn't really respond the right way."

What "the right way" will be going forward is unclear. Crosby has basically had to reacclimatize his body to working in space, trusting his right arm is where his mind is telling him it is, things like that. It's a long road. The end is in sight, but it's blurry.

"It's not easy to go through that, there's no guideline," Crosby said. "You've got to listen to your body, listen to your doctors. At the same time, end of day I know how I feel."

losses than that as a manager," said Hurdle, who had 702 of those as well. "So if anything, I'm looking to close the separation between wins and losses."

Hurdle moved within 102 games of the .500 mark by virtue of a 5-4 victory against the Houston Astros at PNC Park.

In the eighth inning, pinch-hitter Jason Jaramillo singled to score pinch-runner Chase d'Arnaud from second base and break a 4-all deadlock.

Closer Joel Hanrahan (36th save) pitched a scoreless ninth inning to seal the deal.

"It just means that you've been fortunate enough to do it for a longer amount of time than a lot of other guys," Hurdle said of No. 600.

Andrew McCutchen snapped out of his recent funk with a pair of home runs, his 21st and 22nd of the season. The center fielder entered the game with two hits and seven strikeouts in his last previous 20 at-bats.

After McCutchen hit a solo home run in the first inning, he reached starter J.A. Happ for a three-run homer to tie the score four innings late. The blast inside the left field fair pole scored pinch-hitter Brandon Wood (walk) and left fielder Alex Presley (single) ahead of him.

The four-bagger also took starter Brian Burres off the hook. The left-hander lasted only 3 2/3 innings, in which he allowed four runs on seven hits.

As was the case at Triple A Indianapolis this season, the gopher ball bit Burres hard again.

In the first inning, first baseman Carlos Lee (No. 15) and second baseman Matt Downs (No. 8) went deep on consecutive pitches. Three innings later, shortstop Clint Barmes hit his 10th homer of the season.

Hurdle said his two most memorable victories took place as Colorado Rockies manager in the 2007 season.

The first was a one-game playoff against the San Diego Padres to decide the wild card spot. The other was Game 4 of the NLCS, which saw the Rockies sweep the Arizona Diamondbacks to advance to the World Series for the first time in franchise history.

"That would be right at the top of the list, yeah," he said. "I mean, for the time involved and the turmoil and the trials and tribulations, then the triumph at the end. . . . Because we had some real tough times in Colorado trying to put together a group of young men and learning how to play together and win together."

The Boston Red Sox swept the Rockies in the World Series.

"If had a dollar for every time that I wouldn't win in Colorado, I would never have had to work again anywhere," he said. "It was so gratifying for me to see so many people happy — employees and people in the street, people running businesses downtown, people selling season tickets — and to know the impact that it had on them."

respectability.

McCoy, who showed grit and toughness in eight starts in 2010, just might be the one.

And this season, anyway, he'll get the chance to succeed or fail.

McCoy's rise from third-round draft pick to starter happened quickly.

Rewind to last season's opener. The former Texas star was a raw, out-of-sight, out-of-mind rookie running Cleveland's scout team in practice. While Delhomme and backup Seneca Wallace took all the snaps, McCoy stood to the side waiting and wondering if his time would ever come.

Buried in the depth chart, McCoy was inactive when the Browns traveled to Tampa Bay in Week 1. But things changed in a hurry. Delhomme severely sprained his ankle against the Buccaneers, Wallace went down with same injury in Week 5, and suddenly McCoy was thrust into a starting role few believed he was ready to handle.

"He was kind of thrown into the fire," Browns first-year coach Pat Shurmur said.

His personal inferno began in Pittsburgh, where McCoy made his first career start against the Steelers and in front of their Terrible Towel-waving fans. The night before the game, McCoy stood up at a meeting and told his teammates not to worry, he was ready to handle the job.

Browns cornerback Sheldon Brown feared for McCoy.

"I thought, this poor kid," Brown said. "I hope he's praying."

But McCoy proved he belonged, completing 23 of 33 passes for 281 yards despite being sacked five times and pressured numerous others. It was there, at the confluence of Pittsburgh's three rivers that many of Cleveland's players became convinced they had found their leader — at last.

"He wasn't scared," Brown said. "That's one of the toughest defenses in the National Football League and he went in there and he held his own. Then we put him in there against New Orleans, New England. Go back to some of the games he played and you look at his aura on the field and his demeanor, you just know that if you surround him with the players that can make plays for him — he's not going to turn the ball over, he's going to make the correct reads and the better part is, if he makes those mistakes, he'll work his tail off to fix it.

"That's when you know you have a guy."

Shurmur thinks so, too.

Cleveland's fifth coach since '99, Shurmur has been impressed with everything about McCoy. During the labor lockout, it was McCoy who organized practices in Austin, Texas. At those workouts, dubbed "Camp Colts" by his teammates, McCoy and the Browns took their first initial steps in learning Shurmur's West Coast offense, a passer friendly system the team feels perfectly suits McCoy's accuracy — if not strong — right arm.

McCoy also took it upon himself to visit Brett Favre, hoping a few days in Mississippi picking the brain of the former league MVP would help him better understand the new offense. McCoy came to camp prepared and then played extremely well in Cleveland's three exhibition games.

"He basically did what we wanted and now the next step is to do it for 60 minutes in a regular-season game," Shurmur said. "He has been passing the tests as we've gone along, and Sunday will be the next test."

McCoy has done his homework.

"Now is where it counts," he said.

Composed whether he's calling a play in the huddle, facing a blitz or surrounded by cameras at his locker, McCoy insists he's not feeling any added pressure as he embarks on his second season as a pro. A coach's son, this is what he's been groomed to do since he was a kid.

Now is when the fun starts.

"I've come a long ways," McCoy said. "But I've still got plenty of work to do, no question. This team is ready to start, ready for the regular season. This is where it starts counting. For us, we've put in a lot of hours, a lot of time. We've worked hard together, now I think we kind of know some of the things we're good at, some of the things we're not as good at. Those things we'll keep working on. But I think we're ready to put a plan together and go see what happens."

INDIANS FROM 1B

three hits in six innings, striking out eight.

"My stuff was not as crisp as it has been," Verlander said. "The two pitches to Duncan were pretty good, where I wanted them. Guys in this league get paid to hit it, too."

"Once again, our team came through in a huge way. They got big hits and I'm always extremely confident in our bullpen," he said.

Verlander is the first Detroit pitcher to win 10 consecutive decisions since Jack Morris in 1983, and first to win 10 straight starts since Hall of Famer Hal Newhouser in 1946. His 22 wins are the most for a Detroit pitcher since Joe Coleman went 23-15 in 1973.

"They didn't get many hits off him, just a couple out of the ballpark," manager Jim Leyland said.

Jose Valverde pitched a perfect ninth for his 42nd save, tying Todd Jones' team record set in 2000. Valverde has not blown a save this year.

"That's his job and he's doing it pretty well," Leyland said. "Don't forget what (Joaquin) Benoit did in the eighth."

The Tigers' setup man struck out two in a perfect inning and has a 1.58 ERA over his last 43 outings.

Martinez went 5 for 13 with two homers and 10 RBIs in the sweep of his former team as Detroit dropped Cleveland 9½ games back. The Tigers are 16-4 since Aug. 19, going 6-0 against Cleveland and sweeping three in a row from the Chicago White Sox to take command of the division.

"They took care of business and, obviously, we didn't," Indians manager Manny Acta said. "They're doing a great job running away from us."

Leyland isn't ready to celebrate.

"Have we accomplished something? Absolutely," he said. "So far we've met a head-on challenge pretty good. I told them, 'Have a good day off (Thursday). You earned it. But get ready to play Friday because nobody is going to give us anything.'"

Masterson left after Detroit loaded the bases on two singles around Duncan's error at first base in the seventh. Joe Smith came on and yielded Miguel Cabrera's RBI single that got the Tigers within 4-3.

Lefty Tony Sipp replaced Smith and the switch-hitting Martinez turned around to the right side and hit the first pitch into the left-field seats for his second career slam, both against the Indians. The first was Oct. 3, 2009, for Boston, a couple of months after Cleveland traded him to the Red Sox.

"It's not just because it's against the Indians, I always want to do my best," Martinez said.

Martinez, Cabrera and Alex Avila each had two of Detroit's 13 hits. The Tigers have had 10 or more hits in 11 of their last 13 games and 31 of 51 games since the All-Star break.

"We were kind of up and down for a while and are starting to hit our stride," Verlander said.

Duncan had his second two-homer game this week and fourth of his career. He also did it Sunday in Kansas City.

He came in just 2 for 11 (.182) with four strikeouts in his career against Verlander before connecting in the second for a 2-0 lead. The two runs were more than the Indians scored in seven of Masterson's starts this year.

Detroit tied it at 2 in the fourth. Cabrera singled with one out for the Tigers' first hit and was doubled to third by Martinez. Cabrera scored on a sacrifice fly by Avila and Wilson Betemit doubled home Martinez.

Jim Thome lined a two-out double high off the wall in left-center in the Indians' fourth. Duncan followed with his eighth homer, a towering shot to left for a 4-2 lead.

Lonnie Chisenhall's two-run homer off Tigers reliever Phil Coke got Cleveland within 7-6 in the bottom of the seventh. Don Kelly's RBI triple made it 8-6 in the ninth.

NOTES: Verlander has thrown at least six innings and 100 pitches in all 31 starts this season. . . . Fans sitting in a dreary drizzle throughout the game got a few laughs in the middle innings as a squirrel darted around the outfield. . . . Indians DH Travis Hafner, out since Aug. 22 with a strained tendon in his right foot, ran in the outfield before the game. "Just straight ahead, nothing lateral, but I'm feeling better," he said. . . . Detroit is 21-10 on the road since July 6, best in the AL. . . . Cabrera has hit .391 with 26 RBIs while reaching base safely in a career-high 34 consecutive games, the longest streak by a Tigers player since Damion Easley's 34-game streak in 1998. . . . The Tigers are off Thursday before playing host to Minnesota for three games. . . . The Indians start a four-game set in Chicago on Thursday in a chase for second place. LHP David Huff (2-3) will oppose White Sox RHP Gavin Floyd (12-10).

NBA owners, union talk, to meet again today

NEW YORK (AP) — NBA owners and players met for about 5½ hours Wednesday, plan to resume negotiations today, and could even sit down again Friday.

While neither side would say if progress is being made, the frequency of the discussions seems a good sign. They met only twice in the first two months of the lockout that began July 1.

But they went for about six hours last Wednesday, and decided they would go multiple days this week. Both sides said they could even carry over the discussions into a third consecutive day if things go well during Thursday's session.

"We agreed that we're going to sit here for as many days as we can to see whether we can make progress, but we agreed not to characterize anything at all," Commissioner David Stern said.

Both sides were cautious not to portray any optimism — though one player briefly did on Twitter, before saying his account had been hacked — or any other feelings about what was happening in the room at a midtown hotel. They said last week they wanted details of the discussions to remain private and seem intent on keeping that vow.

Polamalu keeping contract talks quiet

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Steelers safety Troy Polamalu says he feels as good as ever, he's just not saying much about his future with the defending AFC champions.

Polamalu said Wednesday contract talks with the Steelers are between his agent, Marvin Demoff, and the team. The 2010 NFL Defensive Player of the Year is in the final season of a five-year deal that will pay him about $6.4 million this season.

The perennial Pro Bowler has said his preference is to remain with the Steelers, but limited salary cap space could be an obstacle to getting a deal done before the season.

The Steelers have already signed linebackers Lawrence Timmons and LaMarr Woodley to lengthy extensions while several veterans restructured their deals to get Pittsburgh under the estimated $120.4 million cap.

Judge: Clemens team juror contact violated orders

WASHINGTON (AP) — A judge said Wednesday that ex-baseball star Roger Clemens' defense team violated court orders by contacting jurors after his mistrial.

U.S. District Judge Reggie Walton is sending a letter to the jurors assuring them the court did not provide their contact information but asking if they now will speak with prosecutors.

Prosecutors asked permission to contact them after discovering they spoke to a defense investigator. The prosecutors also asked the judge to require the defense to turn over its interview notes, but Clemens attorneys argued against doing so. Walton ruled that prosecutors must file a motion by Sept. 30 citing legal authority for him to issue such an order.

The 12 jurors and four alternates only sat for two days in the perjury trial before prosecutors showed them inadmissible evidence, resulting in the mistrial. A new trial is scheduled for April.

Clemens is accused of lying under oath when he testified before Congress in February 2008 that he never used performance-enhancing drugs during his storied pitching career. Prosecutors said they will prove he used steroids and human growth hormone, but Clemens says the evidence was manufactured by his former trainer.

Court rules say parties in a criminal trial may only speak to jurors after they are discharged if they receive permission from the court. The rules say the judge must tell the jurors they are under no obligation to speak to anyone but may do so if they wish.

Walton made that clear in his letter to the jurors and ordered both parties not to contact jurors who have not agreed to speak.

"Although I am aware that you may have previously been contacted by an investigator working for defense counsel, I would like to reiterate that this contact violated the rules of this court and that no one here at the courthouse provided your contact information to either party in this case," Walton said. "Now, in connection with the fact that Mr. Clemens will be retried, government counsel has acted in compliance with the rules of this court and has requested my permission to speak with you."

Cowboys most valuable NFL franchise

NEW YORK (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys are the NFL's most valuable franchise at $1.85 billion, according to Forbes magazine's annual survey.

That also gives the Cowboys the highest worth of any U.S. team, and makes them second only to Manchester United of the English Premier League, valued at $1.9 billion, among franchises worldwide.

The New York Yankees are worth $1.7 billion, according to Forbes' most recent baseball calculations.

Following the Cowboys in value among NFL teams are the Washington Redskins ($1.55 billion), New England Patriots ($1.4 billion), New York Giants ($1.3 billion) and New York Jets ($1.223 billion).

Altogether, 15 teams are worth $1 billion; the others are Houston, Philadelphia, Chicago, Green Bay, Baltimore, Indianapolis, Denver, Pittsburgh, Miami and Carolina.

The survey is based on the 2010 season and does not include this year's lockout.

Dallas' value increased 2 percent from last year's rankings. The biggest jump was made by the Jets, up 10 percent, after they moved into their new stadium in 2010. The Jets, who share that stadium with the Giants, were up 7 percent, as were the Super Bowl champion Packers, who are community-owned, and the San Francisco 49ers.

Eighteen teams increased in value, five remained the same — including the Redskins — and nine decreased in worth. Coincidentally, the biggest drop was made by the Tampa Bay Buccaneers (5 percent), who are owned by the Glazer family that also owns Manchester United.

Least in value, Forbes reports, are the Jacksonville Jaguars ($725 million).

► BUCKEYES PERISCOPE

COLUMBUS(AP) — What's brewing with the 2011 Ohio State Buckeyes ...
BUCKEYES BUZZ: It's always difficult when the hometown team is on a Buckeye's schedule. That's what is facing OL Jack Mewhort this week.
Mewhort, a massive 6-foot-6, 303-pound redshirt sophomore who will start at LG, attended St. John's High School in Toledo. The University of Toledo Rockets come to Ohio Stadium on Saturday to meet Mewhort and the Buckeyes.
Mewhort was a fan as a youngster.
"When I was growing up, my dad used to take me to all the UT home games," he said.
Taking on the Rockets is a strange experience.
"It's a different type of a game for me. It's a weird feeling, having them come here," he said. "I know we played them in Browns Stadium in '09 and that was even kind of different, seeing all the Toledo people there. It's kind of cool."
He said he didn't have to listen to any trash talk this summer back home.
"Not really. There's not really that relationship with any of the Toledo people," he said. "It's not nasty or anything."
Ohio State hasn't lost to an in-state team since 1921. He doesn't want this to be the game that breaks that spell.
"I probably wouldn't hear the end of it just from my family members back in Toledo," he said.
'BURNER'S HOT: TE Jake Stoneburner was named the John Mackey national tight end of the week by the sponsoring Nassau County Sports Commission.
The junior had four receptions for 50 yards and three receiving touchdowns in the Buckeyes' 42-0 win over Akron Saturday.
Stoneburner is the first TE in modern Ohio State history to catch three touchdowns in a game. Bob Grimes is listed as an end in Ohio State's media guides for 1950-52. He caught four touchdowns vs. Washington State in a 1952 game.
EX-ASSISTANT: Toledo head coach Tim Beckman was an assistant at Ohio State in 2005-06. In charge of CBs, he worked closely with the LBs coach at the time, Luke Fickell.
He said it was great to coach with Fickell, now Ohio State's interim head coach.
"I've known Luke even prior to his days at Ohio State," Beckman said. "Being able to go down there for two years and coach with him, it was a great situation. Coming from being a coordinator (at Bowling Green) to going down there and coaching the corners, that (defensive coaching) room was so successful because of the minds in that room. Luke Fickell and Jim Heacock and Paul Haynes, we had a great working relationship and there was a lot of football to be learned."
The record books that assessment.
"We all threw in our two cents with what we thought would make us successful. We ended up winning 12 straight football games that last year and then getting beat in the (2006) national championship (by Florida)," he said. "But it was a very rewarding experience for Tim Beckman to be able to coach with Luke and the rest of the defensive staff."
MASCOT LOVE: Ohio State's Brutus Buckeye won his first matchup in the Capital One Mascot Challenge, beating out Testudo from the University of Maryland with a total of 24,474 votes. This week, the biggest nut is up against Wolfe Jr. from the University of Nevada.
If you want to vote for your favorite mascot, go to www.CapitalOneBowl.com.
NO BIG DEAL: C.J. Barnett won the starting SS job last year for the Buckeyes. Then came the Miami game in Week 2. He sustained a right knee injury that needed surgery and cost him the rest of the season.
Now he's back better than ever.
If you don't believe it, just ask him.
"My knee felt fine. Actually it felt better than it had. I was just out there just like I've always been," he said of playing in last week's opener for the first time since the injury.
Asked if it his knee actually felt stronger, he said, "Yeah, I may be able to run a little faster now because of that knee."
So how is it that what could have been a devastating injury actually ended up making a player better? He credited the doctors.
"They hooked me up, man," he said with a laugh.

► PIRATE NOTES

By Paul Ladewski
PITTSBURGH — The shortstop position has one of much debate inside and outside the Pittsburgh Pirates organization in recent years, and given the shortage of options elsewhere, it may remain that way for awhile.
Early indications are that the $3-million option on the contract of starter Ronny Cedeno will be exercised after the season. In all probability, the veteran will continue to split time with Chase d'Arnaud, while Pedro Ciriaco will serve as the emergency plan.
"There is no sure, set plan today about who our shortstop will be next year, but based on the volume of information that we'll get together, we'll have a game plan going into the winter," manager Clint Hurdle said. "Could we look outside (the organization) still? That's an option. A lot will depend on the formulation of the club around him and what kind of shortstop we can afford to carry."
Cedeno took a .262 batting average and 31 RBI into the series finale against the Houston Astros on Wednesday evening. His Ultimate Zone Rating is third among National Leaguers who played at least 900 innings at the position.
"With the challenges that we put in front of him this season, he did make some incremental progress across the board," Hurdle said. "His batting average has spiked. His on-base percentage we would like to see a little bit better, but there's no history of it being significantly better. Defensively, overall, it was a pretty solid campaign for him."
At 24, d'Arnaud ranks among the best athletes and base-stealers on the team. The main question is whether the rookie will hit enough to be a regular at this level. He had a .208 batting average and nine stolen bases.
"Offensively, it was been a little bit of a challenge for him," Hurdle said. "Defensively, there were some plays that you thought he just would be able to put away and didn't make. Is that part of the growth experience for a young player to get his feet on the ground at the major league level? It could be.
"What you've got there is a young man who doesn't think there is a play that he can't make. Unfortunately, maybe some of them get taken for granted. He has made some plays that have made you go 'Wow!'"
NOT DONE YET: After 34 at-bats, newcomer Derek Lee already ranked seventh on the team in home runs (four).
"I don't know," he said of the reason. "Sometimes they come in bunches. I've felt good since I got over here and I'll try to let it continue."
While PNC Park is death to right-handed pull hitters, Lee often sprays balls to right-center and right field, where they carry well on most days.
"Yeah, right field is short here, no doubt about it, but it's not something that you don't think about," he said. "As hitters, we worry about good at-bats and feel that, if we hit the ball good enough, it will go a long way."
Lee turned 36 years old on Tuesday, but Hurdle believed the soon-to-be free agent had a lot to offer at the plate and in the field.
"He has made his presence felt is the best way to put it," he said. "He has absolutely added a dimension to our offense that we don't have (otherwise). It has been good to see. Obviously, he has shown us that he can still barrel the ball up from left field to right field. He stretches the line-up out so much better and brings a real anchor to the clean-up spot."
At first base, his Ultimate Zone Rating is above the league average for the fourth consecutive season.
"He makes the infielders better," Hurdle said. "He's a huge target at first base. He's a big man with good feet and soft hands defensively. And he has got a lot of experience."
MORTON TAKES STEP BACK: Rookie Jeff Locke will make his major league debut against the Florida Marlins on Saturday night, as Charlie Morton will have his scheduled start pushed back four days to next week.
"That will give him a little more time, give him a breather," Hurdle said. "In his last (start), there were some inconsistencies whether it was fatigue or him trying to finish really well."
Jeff Karstens will rejoin the rotation on Sept. 19 against the Diamondbacks in Arizona. He hasn't pitched since Aug. 28 because of shoulder stiffness.
"He wants to get back on the mound," Hurdle said. "We'll give him that opportunity."
LUDWICK RETURNS: Ryan Ludwick (lower back spasms) returned from the disabled list and batted sixth in the order.
The veteran played right field in place of Jose Tabata (broken left wrist), who could be sidelined for the remainder of the season.
"He wants to show us that he's healthy, and we want to see him healthy," Hurdle said. "He actually started to scratch the surface offensively before he went (on the disabled list). He made a couple adjustment in his stance and his swing and was able to go down (to Triple A Indianapolis) and work on them."
DUE NEXT: After an open date today, the Marlins will come to town for a three-game series this weekend.

JARED C. TILTON FOR NASCAR

Sprint Cup driver Jimmie Johnson is first in the series points standings with 17 top-10 finishes.

Eyes on the title

Jimmie Johnson discusses how his team prepares for the Chase

BY JIM UTTER McClatchy Newspapers

He doesn't have the most wins so far this season. At times, in fact, he's not even been mentioned among the favorites for this year's championship. That's despite the fact he shared the Sprint Cup Series points lead as recently as last weekend.

Yet, wins aside, Jimmie Johnson is, for all intents and purposes, in a familiar position as the Chase for the Cup grows closer.

He and his No. 48 Hendrick Motorsports team are once again among the most consistent performers week-in and week-out, and there's every reason to believe he will be a factor in the title fight.

Johnson, who has won the past five Cup titles, recently talked about his approach to the Chase, how he feels his team stacks up this year and how he tries to stay off the "roller coaster" of NASCAR.

Q: What do the last five races before the start of the Chase mean to a driver in your position? What should people be looking at?

A: I don't fault anyone for looking at the last five and saying this driver has been hot. They've been qualifying well. They've been winning races. It's the obvious. Absolutely they are doing the right things there. That momentum is very, very, very helpful for the driver, for the team. It helps build confidence. Everything is going the right direction.

Still, and I guess this is where this phrase came from that I mentioned a few times, the final 10 is its own environment. It's its own world. What you did in the first 26, yes there are some small things mentally, emotionally and even with some setups, that you carry into the Chase. You start over and when you start over, it's a whole new world and everybody is a threat at that point. I think the teams that are strong mentally can overcome a slow five races leading to the Chase.

Q: How do you evaluate whether your team is in a good position to start the Chase?

A: We look at the last five, too. And then I think when the Chase starts, there is also an element that when racing starts, you're racing 12 guys instead of 43. And things start to move around a little bit then. And I think you look at five races again into the Chase and see where you're at. You just try to pick, or maybe break it up into some segments.

Q: How do you deal with the ups and downs that come week to week in NASCAR?

A: I guess experience, from my standpoint; I'm not going to ride the roller coaster. I'm not going to let the highs take me too high, and I'm not going to let the lows take me too low. I know what I need to do, and I know what my team needs to do to win a sixth championship.

Fortunately, we have a road map that's worked in years past. And we've had to fall on our experience, especially last year, to win the championship. Hopefully we'll be able to do that again this year.

Q: Once in the Chase, do you have to train yourself not to focus on what other teams are doing or trying?

A: I can't say that in the five championships we've won, that we were really searching throughout the Chase to find new speed or to find anything. We knew going into the Chase that what we had was what we had. I think in '05, chasing (Tony) Stewart, we were looking for speed; we experimented some during the regular season because we had a nice big margin and then we kind of got off track throughout the Chase. And you try not to complicate things once the Chase starts. So, staying the course (with) what got you there seems to be a successful roadmap to the championship.

Dale Earnhardt Jr. wants to justify Hendrick confidence

It's a great thing that Rick Hendrick just locked in a long-term contract with a guy who hasn't won a NASCAR Sprint Cup race in the last 117 tries.

No punch line forthcoming.

Dale Earnhardt Jr. most definitely comes with a lot of baggage, much of it from detractors who think he is simply piggy-backing on daddy's last name.

But Earnhardt Jr. also has this on his resume:

He is a marketing machine, finishing first in a fans poll as the sport's most popular driver eight consecutive years.

He is on the cusp of qualifying for the Chase for the Championship for the first time in three years.

And just as important, he seems truly committed to winning this thing, and not just showing up for the big dance.

It's not as if he is giving himself any slack for his failure to emerge as consistent contender on the circuit. Listen to his critics, and Earnhardt Jr. is first and foremost leading the echoes of discontent.

"I would barely give me ... a passing grade," Earnhardt Jr. said when asked to assess his performance with Hendrick so far. "I'm not content at all. I feel like I've been given some really good opportunities there and haven't been able to capitalize on it."

As he approaches 37, Junior is no longer one of the young guns representing a new NASCAR Nation. That honor belongs to Keselowski and Kyle Busch, among others.

But he is at a defining crossroads of sorts. He is young enough to challenge teammates like Jimmie Johnson and Jeff Gordon for the top roster spot on NASCAR's most dominant team.

It's considerable pressure of course, one which offers a different dynamic than the days he raced for his daddy's rising DEI empire before it all unraveled on the last lap of the 2001 Daytona 500. Dale Earnhardt died on the last lap, leaving his son to carry on the legacy of one of NASCAR's iconic families.

The psychological yada-yada of such things has been debated thoroughly over the years, but Earnhardt Jr. insists that there was never a greater sense of urgency to be at his best in the family business. Despite his daddy's reputation as a tough-love kind of man, Junior said he never felt that squeeze.

"Driving for my family was really easy," Earnhardt Jr. said. "If we had a bad race or something you really didn't care too much because your family wasn't going to talk crap about you behind your back. ... Now if I have a bad race I wonder if the right people are still behind me."

No question, Earnhardt Jr. has the right people behind him now. He has a five-year contract with Hendrick. It was a done deal, essentially. Earnhardt Jr. and Hendrick agreed to re-up about five months ago, and then he let his sister Kelley and others "do the heavy lifting."

Backed by job stability and the technology of the Hendrick team, Earnhardt Jr. is no longer excess baggage. He rolls worry-free, despite the high expectations.

"I'm fortunate man," he said. "This kind of puts it at ease a little bit."

THIS WEEK'S RACE

WONDERFUL PISTACHIOS 400
What: 400 laps or 300 miles.
Where: Richmond International Raceway, a 3/4-mile slightly banked, paved oval located in Richmond, Va.
When: Saturday at 7:30 p.m. (all times ET).
TV: ABC.
Radio: Motor Racing Network.
Last year's winner: Denny Hamlin.
Worth mentioning: Eight NASCAR teams will honor the victims of the 9/11 terrorist attacks by guarding a piece of World Trade Center debris this weekend. The teams of Danica Patrick, Trevor Bayne, Ricky Stenhouse Jr. and Carl Edwards will each guard this debris in their pit box during Friday's Nationwide race. The teams of David Gilliland, Greg Biffle, Tony Stewart and Jamie McMurray will each guard this debris in their pit box during Saturday's Cup race.

STOP 'N' GO

WHO'S HOT
■ Jeff Gordon: He went toe-to-toe with Jimmie Johnson at Atlanta and came out on top.
■ Penske Racing: Put both drivers — Kurt Busch and Brad Keselowski — in the Chase.
■ Tony Stewart: Did exactly what he needed to do at Atlanta. Do it one more week and he's back in the championship battle.

WHO'S NOT
■ Weather: The Sprint Cup Series' worst nightmare right now.
■ White House visit flap: Much to do about nothing.
■ Dale Earnhardt Jr.: He's tumbling into the Chase. Not a good sign of the road ahead.
— Jim Utter
