Salem board hires Buckeye principal

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

SALEM — John Lundin, the newly-named principal at Buckeye Elementary School effective Aug. 1, said he's heard nothing but great things about the Salem city school district.

The school board approved his hiring Monday night to replace longtime Buckeye Principal Dennis Niederhiser, who's retiring at the end of the school year after 36 years with the district.

"I'm really grateful and honored for the opportunity. I've got some big shoes to fill," Lundin told board members.

The 44-year-old from Canton currently serves as the principal at Sandy Valley Elementary in the Sandy Valley school district, a position he's held since 1999. Over his 21 years in education, he's racked up 15 years of administrative experience.

"You bring a lot to the table," Superintendent Tom Bratten said.

Lundin was one of 30 applicants for the position. Bratten said the list was narrowed to six who were interviewed and then down to two. Niederhiser and the other principals and administrators were involved in the process.

"It wasn't going to be good enough for us without his blessing," Bratten said of Niederhiser, who has already spent some time talking with Lundin and will be meeting with him again.

The board approved a three-year contract with a base salary of $81,000. Board President

Brad Myers welcomed him and said "we appreciate your willingness to serve here."

Lundin attended the meeting with his wife Cindy and their children, Taylor, 15, and Tom, 13.

"I am honored and privileged to serve the Salem community and Buckeye," he said.

According to a press release issued by Bratten, Lundin graduated from Glen Oak High School in Canton and received a bachelor's degree in elementary education from Kent State University in 1990 and received his graduate

Port finds buyer for old Y&S railroad

By TOM GIAMBRONI
Staff Writer

EAST LIVERPOOL — The Columbiana County Port Authority has found another potential buyer for its railroad for what they hope is the last time.

The port authority board approved a letter of intent at Monday's meeting to sell the former Youngstown & Southern Railroad to an environmental and energy services company by the name of Tervita for $2.9 million, with $1.7 million going to pay off loans related to the purchase and upgrade of the rail line.

"This represents, hopefully, the culmination of our efforts to get this railroad back into private hands," said port authority CEO Tracy Drake.

Tervita is the fourth company to agree to purchase and operate the rail line since it was acquired by the port authority in 2000. The first operator filed for bankruptcy in 2004, while the second company pulled out in 2006 before a deal was completed.

A lease/purchase agreement was then reached with Eastern States Railroad, a spinoff company created by Total Waste Logistics to transport demolition debris to its landfill in Negley. Eastern States failed to close on the deal by the 2009 deadline as the landfill business plummeted due to the recession, leaving the port authority to make the various loan payments.

As recently as November, the port authority had been working on a new deal that would have resulted in Total Waste Logistics purchasing the railroad, but the deal instead morphed into one with Tervita, a Canadian-based company that provides environmental and energy services to various industries, including the shale gas industry. The shale gas boom underway in the region is the reason for the company's interest in acquiring the railroad.

Pound dogs get place to play

Participating in the official ribbon cutting ceremony of the fenced-in grass playground at the Columbiana County Dog Pound were the dedicated volunteers and Chief Deputy Dog Warden Shannon Triplett, project planner and coordinator Theresa Bosel, Commissioner Mike Halleck, and David Rutecki, owner of the family business Estherlee Fence Co. Inc. Rutecki donated the fencing and labor for the project which would normally cost over $5,000. Merchant Metals Inc. also donated chain link fence materials and D.W. Dickey & Sons donated the concrete. The fence installers were Randy Obenauf, Kelly Obenauf, Dennis Walton and Steve Streb. Canine residents on hand included recently adopted Sergeant Kane with his owner Marsha McGinnis, Lionel, a 5-year-old lab mix that has been at the pound since January and 9-year-old Sarah whose owner passed away. Lionel, Sarah and others are up for adoption. Left, Freedom is the word for Lionel and Sergeant Kane as they run and jump in the new grass enclosure following the ribbon cutting ceremony Saturday. Washingtonville businessman: Pinpoint leak, 'I will fix it'

By LARRY SHIELDS
Staff Writer

WASHINGTONVILLE — Mayor Will Jones said he will follow up on a complaint by Washingtonville Plaza owner Fred Rasul regarding a water leak from Bill Willie's Cook Shack to the city line on Monday.

The village recently commissioned Underground Utility Services to survey the water system for leaks.

The company located a leak on the "customer side" that was leaking at five gallons per minute. The line was estimated at about 44 yards under the plaza's asphalt parking lot and Rasul said he didn't want to dig it all up. He asked the village to narrow down the range.

"I'm not going to dig 44 yards, you find the leak for me and I'll fix it," he said, noting he had consulted with two other people.

"You guys say I have a leak, you show me and I'll show my lawyer. They say I lost between 400,000 and 500,000 gallons of water, I should have a swimming pool," he said, adding that if the leak goes to state Route 14 the road should have caved in.

"The only thing I'm saying is please find the leak for me and I will fix it. If you find it tomorrow, I'll fix it," Rasul said.

"Give me a section. Find where the leak is and I'll fix that spot."

Councilwoman Laura Trummer said, "They should have been more specific and Jones said he agreed with Rasul.

"I promise you I will get back to you by Wednesday," he said.

Councilman Jim Smith said he wanted the village to be business friendly.

In other business, resident Barb Bell also advised council of a water pressure problem because of sand.

"We've got a Kinetico system and it's going to ruin it," she said, adding she received a note on her door advising they needed to check their meter and Jones said he would check into that.

Bell also aired a complaint about loose trash flying off a dumpster at Davidson and High streets.

Jones said she could call the police and Bell said she did and assistant Police Chief Mark Husk said they've had problems in the past.

"We spoke to them, at the Marathon (gas station) and it needs netting on there," Husk said.

"We'll have it addressed," Jones said regarding that and another issue Bell brought up.

Cruise planners ready to finalize more contracts

By LARRY SHIELDS
Staff Writer

SALEM — Service Safety Director Ken Kenst said he expects to finalize entertainment, concessions and advertising contracts at the Super Cruise meeting in city hall at 7 p.m. Wednesday. The meeting is open to the public. Kenst expects to have the committees break off into separate groups on Wednesday, as they did during the March meeting. The 7th Super Cruise is set for the June 21-24 weekend and will be the third cruise under city management. “It depends on the committee chairman whether that will happen,” Kenst said, noting the contracts for the stage, trash and port-a-jons are set. He expects the advertising to be completed and sent to the printer. That will leave the parade, cruise route, parking and other areas which Kenst said could be planned out by the committees themselves.

“I may let the committees meet on their own if they have the major things done,” he said, “they’ll tell me how many more they think they’ll need. At this point I feel real good about the progress.” He said the next regular organizational meeting date will be announced on Wednesday.

Last month, looking for ways to accommodate growth while loosening pressure from the main staging area at the Timberlanes lot, it was decided a second midway will be opened on East Second Street.

The municipal lots behind the Salem News will be prepared for entertainment with a DJ, vendor space and designated cruise car parking only.

Kenst said there will be room for three vendors in the lots and the eastbound lane of East Second Street will be closed at 5 p.m. Friday and at a yet-to-be-determined time on Saturday as it becomes part of the cruise route.

The westbound lane will remain open.

Mick Orosz, concession committee chairman, expected to have a total of 30 vendors who must be approved by the concession committee and the police chief.

Youngstown woman sentenced for car scam

By DEANNE JOHNSON

Staff Writer
LISBON — A Youngstown woman was sentenced in Columbiana County Common Pleas Court to 30 months in prison after pulling a scam last year at Performance GMC in New Waterford, which involved the purchase of three vehicles with dishonored checks.

Jessica L. Keene, 28, pleaded guilty in January to passing bad checks, theft and identity fraud. According to court documents, Keene in March and April of 2011 issued or transferred seven checks on a money network account, which she knew would be dishonored. The checks were for payment of $100,000 or more. The checks were written for the purchase of a 2002 Dodge Ram 1500 pickup truck, a 2000 Ford Mustang GT and a 2006 Dodge Ram 2500 pickup.

Finally, Keene also used the identity of Sara Farnham on the credit applications.

"The level of deception surpasses most I have had the opportunity to deal with," said Assistant County Prosecutor Tammie Riley Jones prior to sentencing.

Scott Caron, a manager from Performance GMC, testified when Keene came to the dealership she did not qualify for financing. However, Keene claimed her grandfather had died and she had received a large trust fund. She called the bank while at the dealership and confirmed the account was open, allowing Caron to speak with the bank. The person on the other end confirmed there was an open account, but could not confirm how much was in it.

Keene was allowed to write a check for the vehicle and returned a few days later to purchase two more. In all, she wrote checks for more than $50,000 worth of vehicles.

When the dealership learned the first check was not clearing, Keene claimed it was because she had not filled it out properly. She reissued checks for the vehicles again for more than $50,000.

Jones said it was later learned Keene had made three deposits into the account she was writing the checks on. However, the deposits were for $1, 50 cents and 71 cents.

"My belief is she hoped to get the titles and sell them," Caron said. "If it wasn't for a stringent policy at Performance GMC against titling the vehicle prior to final payment being verified, we may not have stopped her."

Caron asked Judge C. Ashley Pike to consider going above the request by Jones for an 18-month sentence.

Keene's defense attorney, Richard Hura, questioned the timeline as to when the first check was written, when the dealership learned it was not going to clear and if the dealership allowed her to purchase the other two vehicles before or after they learned about a problem with the first. He claimed it was the same day and yet they still allowed her to purchase the additional vehicles, proving "the dealership was very eager to sell three vehicles."

A second victim, Farnham, was also asked to speak prior to sentencing. She said besides using her identity in this case, Keene also used it to open credit in other places. Farnham is trying to pay off these debts, which she said she did not create, in order to keep her credit from being ruined. However, she said she cannot answer her phone because of creditors calling. She is a full-time student and works part-time.

"I'm just trying to make things right, but it is going to affect the rest of my life," Farnham said. "This is not the first, second or third time she has done this to someone."

Two short-term acquaintances spoke on Keene's behalf, both stating they have seen efforts Keene has made in the past few months to get her life together. Keene's ex-husband, Matthew Bezzarro, also testified, stating they have three children together and she has been making attempts to become more involved with their lives.

"These crimes involve deceit and deception," Pike questioned Bezzarro. "Have you ever known her to have trouble telling the truth?"

Bezzarro admitted he has and when pushed added "situations arose which led to our separation and our divorce."

Jones pointed out Keene had indicated she worked at Infocision for about a year, but investigation showed it was more like three weeks. She listed false dividend income on her credit applications and claimed to have seasonal employment at Toys R Us, when she had in fact been let go because of theft.

Before sentencing, Pike also mentioned lies in the pre-sentencing investigation. He said Keene had claimed to the probation department she had been a student at Youngstown State University for a year, but had not attended school there. She had also claimed to have been a model in New York, which Pike said was also found to be a lie.

"The truth, the truth, the truth, that is always the best course," Pike said. djohnson@mojonews.com

Low natural gas prices not good news for everyone

In July 2008, the wellhead price of natural gas in the United States was $10.79 per 1,000 cubic feet. By last week it had plummeted to $2.08.

For many Americans, that is wonderful news. It is not a good thing for everyone in this part of the country, however.

Gigantic reserves of gas in the Marcellus and Utica shale formations have been unlocked during the past few years. Both formations underlie much of this area. Thousands of area residents have been involved in the feverish rush by gas companies to obtain leases to drill for gas and oil. Tens of millions of dollars in "bonus payments" have been handed out to those signing mineral rights leases.

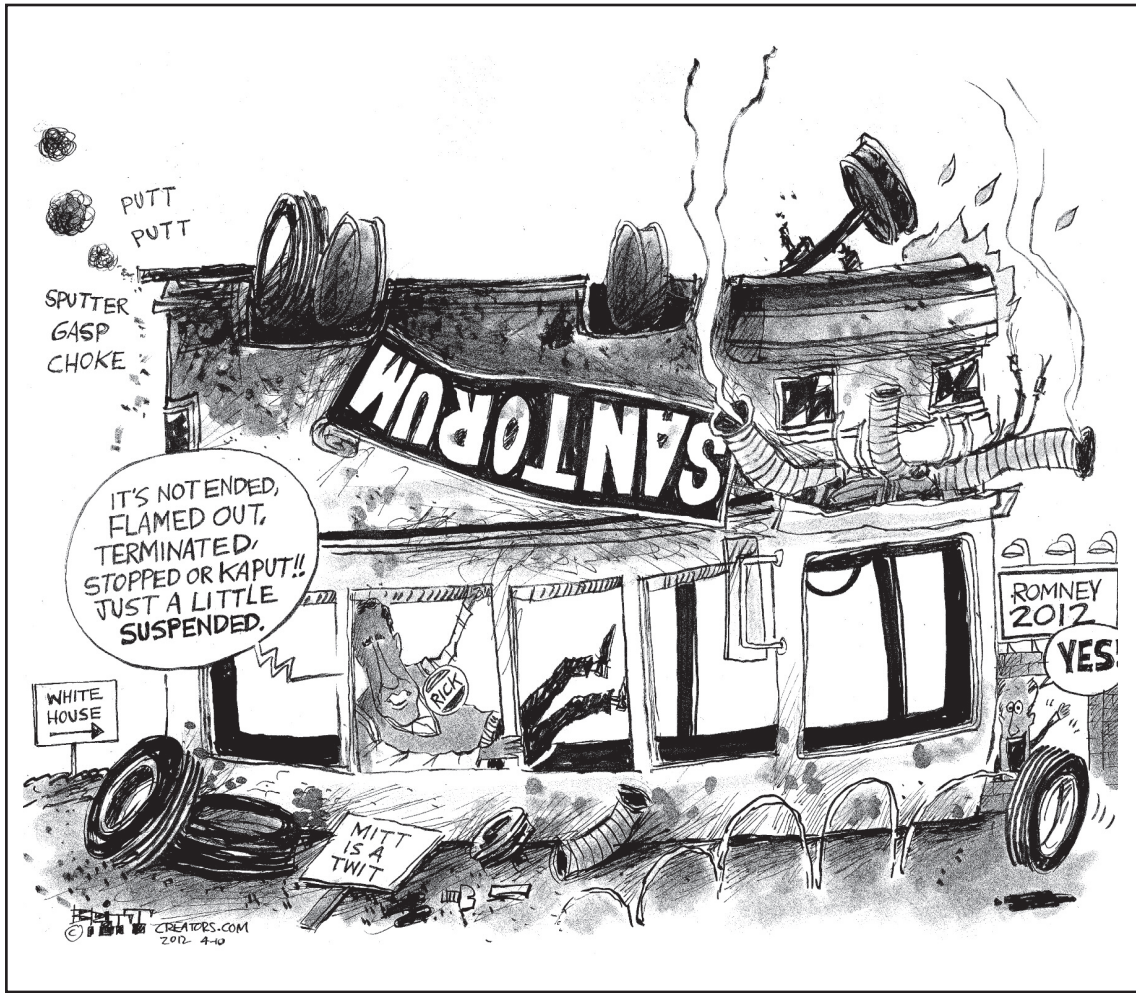

But the really big money, those signing leases have been assured, is in royalty payments once gas is produced from the wells.

But royalties are percentages of the prices charged for gas. When they drop, area residents lose money.

In addition, lower prices have meant many companies have stopped drilling for "dry" gas that does not contain valuable liquids.

This, too, shall pass. Our nation's appetite for energy, including that produced from gas, is enormous. As some electric companies build new gas-fired power plants, it will grow.

Times are not good in the gas fields — but only for now. At some point, probably within a few years, prices will go back up. They always do.

Obama, Romney at gate

SCOTT RASMUSSEN

Any doubt that Mitt Romney would win the Republican presidential nomination vanished when Rick Santorum left the race. It also marked the end of Romney's time as the defining figure in the overall contest for the White House.

The GOP nomination process was seen by many as a competition between Romney and an entertaining cast of I'm Not Mitt Romney challengers. Questions were raised about Romney's perceived weaknesses and whether he could win over the hearts and votes of conservatives. But now President Obama moves to center stage and becomes the defining figure of the general election campaign. Now it's about Obama, not Romney, as the election becomes primarily a referendum on his first term in office.

The most important indicator of the president's prospects will be his job-approval rating. That rating will be very close to his share of the vote on Election Day. In 2004, President George W. Bush had a 51 percent job approval rating and won 51 percent of the vote.

Obama's ratings suggest we are heading for a potentially very close race in November. For the past 32 months, the full month approval ratings for the president have been remarkably stable, holding to a very narrow range of 44 percent to 49 percent. People seem to have formed an opinion of the president, love him or hate him, and nothing can change their minds. Those who oppose the president tend to feel more strongly about it than those who support him.

For most of the past three years, the president's ratings have stayed in an even narrower band of 46 percent to 48 percent. Those numbers suggest Obama would earn just under 50 percent of the vote on Election Day. If the president can win over a few more voters and move those numbers up a bit in the coming months, he is very likely to keep his job. If the president's ratings falter, Romney is likely to be moving into the White House next January.

Economic concerns dominate the voters' agenda, and here the numbers for the president are more troubling. Forty-nine percent of the nation's voters trust Romney more than the president when it comes to the economy. Just 39 percent trust Obama more.

That double-digit advantage for Romney is consistent with other data showing a general lack of confidence in the president's economic policies. Only 37 percent give him positive reviews for his handling of the economy so far.

Middle-income voters are especially likely to have more confidence in Romney. Obama does best among those who earn less than $20,000 a year and those who earn more than $100,000 annually.

Especially troubling for the White House is the fact that 20 percent of Democrats trust Romney more than Obama on this core issue.

On other issues, however, Romney and Obama are essentially even. This includes health care, taxes, national security and energy.

Still, in a year when economic concerns trump all other issues, these numbers represent a good starting point for Romney. But what really matters is how voters feel in November. If the economy improves between now and then, confidence in the president's economic policies -- and his job approval ratings -- are sure to improve as well, and he'll be much tougher for Romney to beat.

Flying the turbulent skies of bankruptcy

GEORGE WILL

From his office window, Thomas W. Horton, in his fifth month as CEO of American Airlines, can see in the distance the Manhattan-size footprint of Dallas-Fort Worth airport, where American has 85 percent market share; it also has 68 percent in Miami, gateway to South America's booming market. In the foreground, however, he can see one reason why, nevertheless, his company recently entered bankruptcy -- the corporate headquarters of Southwest Airlines.

Southwest, the most successful of the "low cost" carriers that proliferated after the 1978 deregulation of the industry, has been profitable for 39 consecutive years, while the rest of the industry was losing $60 billion between deregulation and 2009. Southwest, JetBlue and the others have 30 percent of the domestic market, up from 10 percent in 1999. The "two tier" airline industry is, however, becoming a thing of the past. All carriers are going to have low costs because of what Horton calls "fear-based discipline," aka competition.

In the last three decades there have been 192 airline bankruptcies. Not coincidentally, fares, adjusted for inflation, are 18 percent lower than in 2000. Forty years ago, a majority of Americans had never taken an airplane trip. Now everyone is more free than ever to move about the country, air travel having been democratized by liberating it from government.

In 1938, the Civil Aeronautics Act codified a government-managed cartel. Reason magazine's Nick Gillespie and Matt Welch report that, 34 years later, United's percentage of market share had gone from 22.9 to 22, Eastern's from 14.9 to 11.6 and TWA's from 15.1 to 11.9. Why this bureaucrat's dream of near stasis? Because between 1950 and 1974, the Civil Aeronautics Board received 79 applications for startup airlines and rejected them all, believing that if even one passenger would be taken from an existing carrier, competition would be excessive.

Intellectuals are often the last to learn things, so John Kenneth Galbraith, Harvard's celebrity economist and one of liberalism's pinups in the 1950s and 1960s, argued in his 1958 book "The Affluent Society" that modern marketing -- advertising and other supposedly dark arts -- is so powerful that big corporations could manufacture demand for whatever they manufactured. In 1958, Ford put all its marketing muscle behind the Edsel.

Undiscouraged by evidence, in 1967 Galbraith, full of the progressive's enthusiasm for the administrative state, asserted in "The New Industrial State" that the U.S. economy would soon be dominated by large corporations essentially immune from competition and hence from market turbulence. Four years later, Southwest launched its first flight. The "legacy carriers" -- those that had operated under the CAB regime -- were in for heavy weather.

American bought TWA shortly before 9/11, adding capacity just when less capacity was suddenly required. American is the last of the six legacy carriers to enter bankruptcy. The other five are United and Continental, now merged, Delta and Northwest, also merged, and US Airways, which entered bankruptcy twice before merging with America West.

Airlines have resembled those local governments that have given unsustainable contracts to unionized public employees and now are contemplating bankruptcy. (Watch Stockton, Calif., which may soon be the biggest municipal bankruptcy since the Depression.) Bankruptcy has been a management tool for airlines that cannot stand strikes -- there has been no strike at a major airline since 2005 -- because they must amortize their aircraft even when not flying. Bankruptcy has enabled carriers to shred improvident contracts entered into to purchase labor peace.

If American's pilots had the work rules covering Continental pilots before the merger with United, American could have hundreds fewer pilots, and more earnings: A senior captain flying a wide-body plane makes more than $200,000 a year and has rich pension and medical plans.

Horton has done taxpayers a favor by deciding not to turn American's non-pilot pensions over to the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corp., the deeply underfunded federal agency that would pay only a portion of what employees were expecting. American will pay benefits already accrued but henceforth employees will have defined contribution rather than defined benefit plans.

Airline bankruptcies are peculiar: Just last July American bought $38 billion worth of new fuel-efficient aircraft. It takes money to save money and an airline.

Horton is imperturbably noncommittal about the possibility that the industry's next consolidation will meld American with perhaps US Airways or Delta: "Our plan is to create the best outcome for our stakeholders." Which is a nice way of saying, "Please leave your seatbelts fastened." Turbulence is normal, and normally good for travelers.

East Liverpool man sentenced for rape of teen

By DEANNE JOHNSON
Staff Writer

LISBON — An East Liverpool man was sentenced to six years in prison Monday in Columbiana County Common Pleas Court after he pleaded guilty in February to a first-degree felony rape.

Todd R. Birch, 42, Grimms Bridge Road, East Liverpool was charged following an accusation he had sex with a then 15-year-old girl on April 3, 2011 under the threat of force. As part of the plea agreement, a second felony charge of unlawful sexual conduct with a minor will be dismissed. The charge was from the same act.

Birch had faced up to 10 years in prison. He will be required to register as a Tier III sexual offender for life.

Prior to sentencing Richard Hura, Birch's defense attorney, said that from the beginning Birch has owned up to what happened, but claimed alcohol was a contributing factor.

"He believed it was consensual,"

Hura said. "It was not until he learned of the age requirement for consensual sex that he realized what he did was wrong."

Birch's mother-in-law and his stepson both made statements about him before sentencing. Patricia Johnson said she has known Birch for more than 14 years and he has been respectful and has a close relationship with his 10-year-old daughter. Johnson said she believes him when he said he did not know the girl was only 15.

"Are you telling me she is a bit of a temptress," asked Judge C. Ashley Pike in regards to Johnson's comments.

"Yes, if you go onto her Facebook page, yes," Johnson replied.

However, she also agreed Birch "should have been more of an adult."

His stepson described Birch as a kind-hearted person who helps other people. He said he believed Birch should be punished "a little bit" but also suggested "people get mad and cry wolf."

The teenage girl's second cousin, Tracy Goddard, who she is currently staying with, also made a statement. Goddard said after this happened the girl refused to go to school, started running away, became involved in drugs and alcohol and spent a few months in foster care.

Goddard said she only met Birch the night of the cookout party when the incident happened. She initially claimed she was the only one there "with it" because she was the only one sober. However, when questioned by Hura, Goddard later added the teenage girl was also sober that night, but had drank in the past.

Birch also apologized for his actions in court, stating he has two daughters of his own and he wants to serve his time and get back to being with his family.

"I'm truly sorry," he said.

Birch was granted credit for 223 days already served.

degree and principal's certification from Ashland University. He taught first grade and fifth grade at Plain Local school district in Stark County and became an administrator as assistant principal at Stanton Middle School for the Alliance City Schools. He also served as principal at Rockhill Elementary and Parkway Elementary schools in the Alliance City Schools.

In the press release, Bratten described Lundin's "exceptional experience and knowledge of curriculum as two of his strongest assets. It is great to have someone with John's experience and curricular knowledge join our team, especially during a time when so many standards and teaching approaches will be changing for our staff and students."

Lundin said he was looking forward to getting started.

In other business, the board approved continuing contracts for Michael Kopachy and Lisa Miller and limited contracts for 33 teachers, hired Lois Wagner as a 2.5-hour cafeteria worker, Kristina While as a 12-month audio/visual duty aide and Jennifer Flannery as a classified substitute for cafeteria, custodial or aid.

The board non-renewed three teachers and five substitute teachers effective at the end of the school year, but Bratten said they end up doing that every year for federally-funded positions, but they'll most likely be rehired. They also approved a reduction in staff of one kindergarten teacher for next school year until they see how many kindergarten students they're going to have for the fall.

The board approved Mills Insurance Agency to offer student accident coverage for the next school year.

In other business, Smith said the bridge to the treatment plant, installed some seven or eight years ago, was never painted and is scaling badly. He brought a rusty broken-off portion to the meeting and pointed out the EPA had requirements to protect the water under the bridge.

"If we don't do something it won't last another 10 years," he said, and Jones asked Smith to contact three people for estimates.

Council also approved the purchase of a one-year, $445 warranty for a new utilities department generator after Councilwoman Laura Trummer made the motion.

In other business, Husk also noted that the stop sign at Washingtonville Road and State Street had been knocked down and Road Supervisor Ed Garrett said he's had to replace it four or five times, noting that big trucks "clip it."

Garrett also said he could install a six-inch riser in front a residence on High Street.

Smith said they promised the resident they would fix it a month ago and agreed the riser would be a "big improvement."

Garrett said he could place some rebar beside the riser to keep it from moving around and top it off with cold patch.

Resident Gary Newton told council that it was good they were trying to clean the village up.

"I'll support you in any way I can," he said. "If you need help I'm available."

Tervita, as it's the first rail transportation in our U.S. operations and will give our customers the opportunity to get their jobs done more efficiently, safer and with less impact to the environment," said Phil Vogel, president of Tervita's U.S. operations, according to a company news release.

Under the terms of the letter of intent, the port authority is to be paid by July 16, with $150,000 to be received immediately upon execution of the letter of intent. Of the $2.9 million, Drake said $1.2 million will go to the Ohio Rail Development Commission to pay off a loan obtained from the agency and $500,000 to pay off a bank loan.

As part of the deal the Ohio Rail Development Commission will forgive $1 million in penalties owed by the port authority for falling behind on payments to the agency after Eastern States failed to follow through with its planned purchase.

Drake indicated the port authority will have lost $1 million-plus from the deal when you include legal fees. "Overall, we're taking a bit of haircut on the deal, but we were able to preserve a railroad," he said.

Drake expects Tervita will also acquire the Negley landfill or a major interest in the facility.

The 36-mile rail line extends from Boardman to Darlington, Pa., with the the majority of it in Columbiana County. Drake believes within two years the railroad will be experiencing 1970s level of 7,000-plus rail cars of traffic annually.

3 protesters arrested at BP lease-signing site

By KEVIN HOWELL
Staff Writer

GREENFORD — Goshen police arrested three protesters at the Greenford Bobcats Space Center following two separate incidents Sunday afternoon.

Anne Lukins, 21, Bainbridge Island, Washington, was charged with criminal trespassing and obstructing official business after failing to leave a lease signing event conducted by BP/ALOV. According to police, officers responded to the facility at 4:15 p.m. where a group of 10 people opposed to the lease signings had entered the main entry doors to the event and were yelling and attempting to push past officers and event staff. The people were advised to leave several times as they were not welcome inside the private building. Everyone began to leave except for Lukins, who allegedly failed to follow directives.

Jeremy T. Bingham, 20, Arlington, Mass.; and Johnathan Sidney, 21, Cleveland, were charged with inducing panic and criminal trespassing after officers returned to the facility at 5:40 p.m. for a fire alarm. Witnesses stated that the two men were being escorted from the building by a business owner when they manually activated a fire alarm before fleeing westbound onto private property. They were apprehended approximately five minutes later in the 7800 block of South Range Road after surrendering and admitting to setting off the alarm.

All three are scheduled to appear Thursday morning in Mahoning County Court No. 3 in Sebring.

According to police, the three individuals were part of a larger group protesting the signing of leases for gas and oil drilling. BP had been set up at the site, a privately owned establishment, since April 9 signing leases with landowners.

SR board reinstates benefits

By KEVIN HOWELL
Staff Writer

BEAVER TOWNSHIP — The South Range Local school board Monday reinstated severance benefits for three classified administrative positions.

The board approved the benefits for the food service director, a position being eliminated after this year, as well as the director of facilities and technology and an administrative position in the board office.

According to schools Superintendent Dennis Dunham, the severance benefits were originally included in the wages and benefits of the positions before they were changed to administrative contracts, at which point they were inadvertently omitted. "This just offers them the same benefits afforded to the other classified positions," he explained.

In other business, the board accepted the retirement effective July 1 of custodian Everett Lehman, who has been with the district for 33 years.

The board also accepted $85,000 in donations from April 2011 through March 2012, including those from local businesses and individuals, community organizations and school-related boosters.

"There have been a lot of generous and caring people," Dunham said of the donations. "Without [the donors]...we wouldn't be where we are."

The next regular board meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. May 21 at the K-12 campus.

MUNICIPAL

LISBON — In Columbiana County Municipal Court Monday an April 24 preliminary hearing was set for Ralph J. Libert, 41, Grant Street, Lisbon, charged with domestic violence for allegedly slapping Laurie Henderson across the face while she was holding their son. Libert was previously convicted of domestic violence in June 2009.

Kenneth R. Combs Jr., 44, Randall Road, Hanoverton, was fined $1,275, had his license suspended for two years, was sentenced to 60 days in jail and required 40 hours of community service for assault, criminal damaging, OVI third offense, marked lanes and lighted lights required. A seat belt charge was dismissed. Combs was charged with assaulting a woman by pushing her into a flower bed on one occasion and onto a blacktopped driveway another time.

Zachery K. Humphreys, 18, East Perry Street, Salem, was fined $450, required 30 hours of community service, had his license suspended for six months and sentenced to three days in jail for OVI first offense and failure to control. The jail sentence is consecutive with that issued in case 2012-TR-D-81.

Bryan L. Jarrard, 41, Spartan Road, Salineville, was fined $100 for assured clear distance.

Melissa Warell, 37, Depot Road, Lisbon, was fined $50 for no license.

Michelle Ann Fisher, 46, North Beaver Street, Lisbon, was fined $30 for a stop sign violation.

David A. Young, 33, Sprucevale Road, East Liverpool, was fined $30 for speeding.

Edward Bailey, Glasgow Road, Lisbon, was fined $25 for failure to register his pit bull.

An April 26 pretrial was set for Cody L. Jones, 22, Mill Street, Salineville, charged with domestic violence for allegedly dragging his girlfriend across the floor by her hair, kicking her and hitting her repeatedly on Saturday.

An April 26 pretrial was set for Quinton M. Letcher, Center Street, Wellsville, charged with domestic violence for allegedly grabbing Shirley Munos, pushing her, holding a knife to her and threatening to cut her throat. Letcher's stepfather pulled him off Munos and struggled with him for the knife, reports said.

A May 14 pretrial was set for Samuel L. Frank, 23, Hanna Drive, Hanoverton, cited with driving an all-purpose vehicle on the roadway without proper lights.

A May 17 pretrial was set for Jerad James Chestnut, 22, McCallister Road, Lisbon, cited with driving an all-purpose vehicle on the roadway without proper lights.

A May 17 pretrial was set for Corey C. Stahl, 23, Westwood Court, Alliance, charged with failure to reinstate his license and drug paraphernalia (a marijuana grinder).

Cobbler's Corner launching store on wheels

By LARRY SHIELDS
Staff Writer

COLUMBIANA — Cobbler's Corner is launching a new shoe store on wheels, according to owner Terry Thompson.

The store will be available 24/7 and expand service to its industrial client base and, as the Red Wing Shoes exclusive brand distributor, increase brand awareness.

"It will sell and service accounts," Thompson said of the box truck he custom designed and fabricated to hold over 400 pairs of custom-made shoes. The mobile shoe store is aimed, partly, at the shale boom.

"Since their timetable is 12 hours (shifts) we'll try to be on site and be available 24/7 for whatever's needed on site for shoe store services."

The new company, Mobile Shoe Store LLC, will be run by the industrial store Manager Ron Huston and Thompson said one more staff member was hired to support the truck to manage inventory.

The Cobbler's Corner in the Village Plaza in Columbiana since 2006 stocks more than 12,000 pairs of shoes in its 14,000 square foot building.

Mike Mettler, the territory sales manager for Red Wing Shoes brands, said the Cobbler's Corner showroom is the largest in north-east Ohio.

Thompson, who can make or fabricate just about anything, said inventory control without the truck is a full-time job for the store

Cobbler's Corner in the village plaza has started a 24/7 mobile store company that will service industrial clients and individual customers in more than a 50-mile radius. Pictured, from left, are Mike Mettler, the territory sales manager for Red Wing brands, Terry Thompson, owner of Cobbler's Corner, and industrial store Manager Ron Huston. that employs 12 people full time and services a 50-mile radius customer base.

"Our store is unique ... we make custom-made shoes," Thompson said. "The truck will be job specific," he said, stocking safety glasses, steel-toed shoes, along with insulated and wool sox.

"We've signed up a lot of industry around here who are going to buy local. The Red Wing goal is brand recognition in our area," said Thompson who has been in business for 38 years. He said Cobbler's Corner has over 150 industrial accounts.

"The truck is basically a shoe store on wheels. It's mainly designed for new shoe sales," Thompson explained. "We have UPS shipping in our store to everywhere in the country."

The truck will be doing cold calls, repair pickups and rotating work shoes for customers.

Mettler said Red Wing would not be doing this if the store and corporate image didn't coincide or meet corporate standards. Thompson is a big believer in buying local.

"I really believe in that," he said. "Every penny stays local ... all of our employees are local. That's important to a lot of businesses. If you want the opinion of shoemaker, we're gearing our business to the valley. Not any (one) business like drilling ... we'll make our product fit all ... one pair at a time. We take care of customers one at a time."

SHERIFF

— A Waterford Road, New Waterford, woman reported Monday that at about 12:30 a.m. April 6 a four-wheeler stopped at the end of her driveway. The dogs were barking and her daughter saw someone in the driveway near the house. After yelling out the door at the person, a woman's voice apologized twice and ran in the direction of Petersburg. A person on the four-wheeler took off in the other direction. She decided to report the incident after hearing about other people having vehicles broken into in the area.

— A state Route 164, Columbiana, man reported two suspicious vehicles stopped in the roadway at 11:51 p.m. Sunday. The vehicles left before deputies arrived.

— A Kibler Road, New Waterford, man reported at 6:32 a.m. Monday four of his vehicles were ransacked with change and a knife taken. The theft may have happened on Saturday evening.

— A state Route 45, Salem, man reported at 3:42 p.m. Sunday someone took two guitars valued at $600 total from his unlocked house sometime during the day.

— Freddie L. Levenhagen, 44, Rose Drive, Lisbon, was charged with assault at 3:59 a.m. Sunday after Marie A. Furr-Heniger, same address, reportedly tried to kick him out of the apartment for damaging things and not returning for days on end. Levenhagen reportedly grabbed her by the arms during the dispute and tried to push her out of the apartment door to lock her outside. Deputies explained she cannot evict him if his name is on the lease. It is up to the owner of the property.

— Brian K. Miller, 32, Grant Street, Lisbon, was charged with disorderly conduct at 11:19 p.m. Saturday after deputies were called to his trailer where he was intoxicated and yelling at neighbors. Miller rambled to deputies something about a neighbor pulling a gun on his daughter and nothing being done. He continued to yell profanities and refused to quiet down. He claimed he was being arrested for trying to protect his family, but Tawney Dobritz told deputies Miller initially called 911 because she refused to give him back his bottle of Crown Royal.

— A Salineville woman reported at 4:46 a.m. Saturday her boyfriend assaulted her by dragging her by the hair, kicking her in numerous places and hitting her with his hands. She said she escaped and ran upstairs, locking herself into a bedroom and calling deputies. Deputies located the boyfriend, Cody Jones, 22, Mill Street, Salineville, and charged him with domestic violence. However, Jones continuously contended his girlfriend was actually raped by another man. Jones had even called his girlfriend's father prior to deputies locating him to report she had been raped. The father brought her to the county jail so she could file a statement and her clothes could be examined for a possible rape.

SALEM FIRE

— Firefighters responded to Downtown Metals & Recycling, 423 W. Pershing St., after receiving a call at 11:55 a.m. Monday from a neighbor complaining about burning at the location. An unintentional fire was found burning and was extinguished by firefighters.

MARRIAGE LICENSES

Brandon Lee Kastor, 18, East Liverpool, unemployed, and Jessica Ann Albanese, 19, East Liverpool, cashier.

Robert L. Matthews Jr, 40, Leetonia, lawn care, and Deborah L. Reno, 33, Leetonia, habilitation specialist.

Leetonia man faces 2 charges of OVI

LISBON — John M. Simonds, 49, Main Street, Leetonia, was served a secret indictment on two counts of OVI for allegedly driving while under the influence on Aug. 15. According to court documents, Simonds has three previous OVI convictions in the past six years and refused to comply with law enforcement asking him to take a test despite his previous OVI convictions.

HOROSCOPE

By HOLIDAY MATHIS
4/17/12

If you can turn this day into an extremely productive one, consider yourself a master of focus and a wizard of productivity. The void-of-course Pisces moon will fight you every step of the way, insisting that imagination is more important than action and that dreams are crucial to progress. She's right, but only to a point.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Someone is defending passionately an argument they know can be defeated. Don't take the bait. This is a tricky game, and it's not worth your time to participate in it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Do you constantly edit yourself? It gets exhausting after a while, doesn't it? That's why it's such a tremendous relief to be around people who completely accept you for who you are.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). The day features some silliness and strange entertainment. Just because someone is weird doesn't mean they won't make a stellar friend.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Even games that are usually fun can turn quite dull if you know you're going to win. Today, love will be a game, too. It will be important to get plenty of challenge into your personal life.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You stay on track by thinking in rather black-and-white terms. Each decision you make brings you either closer or farther away from your goals. With every move, you'll ask yourself, "Which is it?"

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You'll do as you intend to do. The success or failure of your actions is irrelevant. What's important is that you follow through, honoring your strong convictions. Action increases your confidence.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You'll use language in a way that expands, guides and directs people's actions and feelings. You'll say "I love you" and send a person's mood to the highest stars.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). As you go about your day comparing A to B, note that not everything should be compared. Because two things are next to each other doesn't mean there's a logical intrinsic relationship between those two things.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Someone is trying to sell you, and you'll feel the squeeze. The thing about marketers is that if they can't identify a need, they manufacture a demand.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Strive for wide-eyed awareness. If your eyes are closed, you can fall upon the very thing you've been searching for and not see it. You'll pinch yourself metaphorically to make sure that all of your senses are awake and ready.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). There are smart, generous, insightful people at the core of your circle. If you're wondering who, it's because you haven't yet met some of these people. New friends are attracted to your high integrity level.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). A situation is not what you thought it would be. You may let go of all of your hard preparation in favor of being present with what the moment needs. You can do this because you are truly confident in your abilities.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (April 17). This year you'll be energized by the same challenges that used to stop you in your tracks. You'll employ new skills, and your game just keeps improving. You'll focus on your loved ones' needs through the next six weeks, connecting with them on deep levels. Enjoyable work and romantic moments fill your summer. Leo and Sagittarius people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 20, 10, 40, 39 and 18.

A battery of tests

Heloise

Dear Heloise: Many people check their SMOKE-DETECTOR BATTERIES when switching to and from daylight saving time. It's also a good time to check the back-up battery in your bedroom alarm clock or clock radio.

Simply unplug the device for a few seconds and then reconnect. If the time shown is correct, the battery is good and will keep the device working in the event of a nighttime power failure. -- Bill in Harrisonburg, Va.

TIPPING TIPS

Dear Heloise: I've been waiting tables for 11 years, and I feel that if people understood a couple of things, they would tip better. The tip you give your server usually is shared with a busboy, a hostess and a bartender. I have to tip these employees based on my SALES, not my tips. (Heloise here: Many restaurants "pool" tips, and the total is divided among certain employees on a percentage basis.)

If the guests' check is $100 and they leave a 10 percent tip of $10, I have to give $1 to the bar and hostess and $3 to the busboy. This leaves me with $5. If the table doesn't tip at all, I still have to tip based on those sales, so I'm actually paying $5 to have served that table.

Servers get taxed on our sales and tips. We live off our tips. I know times are tough, but if people cannot afford to tip the proper amount, then they should eat at a place that doesn't require a service charge! -- Ashley in Camarillo, Calif.

Ashley, many people don't know what you have shared. But also remember that a tip is for good service and is usually not required, unless it's a party over a certain number of people. Most servers work very hard and do deserve a good tip. -- Heloise

TWO SHOES

Hi, Heloise: I cleaned out my attic and had many pairs of baby and children's shoes that I wanted to donate. I was afraid they would become separated after I dropped them off at the donation site. I bought a package of 50 zip ties and zip-tied each pair together! Now they can't come apart, no matter what, until someone cuts them apart! -- Maria G., via email

ADDRESS ON ENVELOPE

Dear Heloise: Will you please tell companies to stamp their addresses on the envelope that customers send back. I hate the ones with the clear window. You'd better get the paper in correctly or else! -- A Reader, Youngstown, Ohio

Extra coupons left in store a problem

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 43-year-old veteran of the grocery industry. I am also an associate of one of the premier supermarkets in the country, and I disagree with your response to "Chicago Clipper" (Feb. 18)!

Coupons are a necessary evil and are graciously accepted, but they create an abundance of work for retailers. It takes countless hours of sorting, logging, filling out forms, mailing and receiving to be reimbursed for the face value of the coupon. This is hardly a benefit to the grocer.

The abuse and fraud associated with coupons adds up into millions of dollars. When a customer leaves one on a shelf for the next shopper, it usually ends up on the floor. So we now have a slick surface that someone can slip on and fall. When they are placed on an item in the dairy or meat case, they inevitably fall to the bottom and clog the drains, which causes water backups -- another safety hazard -- not to mention it's trash we must fish out. All of this takes time and money away from the associates performing our duties in a very low-profit industry.

By leaving an unwanted coupon on a store shelf for the next customer, Chicago Clipper is NOT "paying it forward." She's adding to the problem. So, please, folks, keep your coupons in your purse, wallet, pocket or coupon book until you get to the checkout line. -- FLORIDA BUTCHER

DEAR FLORIDA BUTCHER: Thank you for pointing out to my readers and me some of the problems coupons may create. Your sentiments were repeated by many retailers. However, other shoppers and retailers offered suggestions that may help to eliminate the problem, including: coupon exchanges, donating them to the military, posting them on Freecycle, Craigslist or Facebook, etc. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I am a coupon user. I am also a grocery store employee. I constantly have to pick up coupons left by customers who are "paying it forward" or "being generous." Not only are they a safety hazard, but they make our store look unkempt. We pride ourselves in maintaining a high standard of appearance. We actually clean up more coupons than those we redeem. Why not hand the extra coupons to your checker and ask that they be offered to the next customer? As for litterbugs who leave expired coupons laying around, every check stand is equipped with a garbage can, and an employee will be more than happy to throw out your trash if you ask. -- STORE MANAGER IN MONTANA

DEAR ABBY: I'm a widow with a 20-year-old car and I accidentally smashed in its front end.

When I got home and my neighbor saw what had happened, he spent his next weekend at a wreckage yard buying all the necessary replacements. The following weekend he reassembled my car to perfection.

Would he take any money for his efforts? No!

Abby, there are wonderful people in this world and he is certainly one of them. And incidentally, he is a Navy captain on active duty. -- LEE IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR LEE: So your guardian angel wears a Navy uniform! He's not only an officer and a gentleman, but also a master mechanic. You are one lucky lady, and he is a sweetheart.

Medicines unproven for joint health

Dr. Donohue

DEAR DR.

DONOHUE: A co-worker told me everyone over 50 should be taking a glucosamine-chondroitin supplement for joint health.

What is your perspective on this? -- R.M.

ANSWER: Does you co-worker mean that glucosamine-chondroitin prevents arthritis, specifically osteoarthritis? If so, I don't agree.

Glucosamine has a large fan base for the treatment of osteoarthritis. That's the most prevalent kind of arthritis, the kind that comes from the wearing away of joint cartilage. A joint is the place where two bones meet. The ends of those bones are covered with cartilage to permit the joint to bend smoothly and comfortably. With age, joint cartilage fragments and thins. That exposes the bone ends to rub against each other, a painful situation. Osteoarthritis is the result.

Glucosamine is derived from the shells of crabs, lobsters or shrimp. It is also synthetically made. It's said to restore integrity to joint cartilage.

Chondroitin comes from bovine or shark cartilage. It, too, is said to rejuvenate joint cartilage.

Neither substance, alone or together, has proven to achieve the goals claimed for them.

I do know many people who are ardent fans of these products. To them I say this: If you are convinced that they help your osteoarthritis, continue to use them. I happen to be a disbeliever. And I definitely cannot recommend them as preventatives for osteoarthritis.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Please write about heart seizures and epileptic seizures. What is the difference between the two? -- B.

ANSWER: An epilepsy seizure comes about from the sudden discharge of brain-cell-generated electric current. The discharge takes place in a small area of the brain or it travels through the entire brain. A localized seizure (small area of brain activated) is one where a person stares into space briefly, and is hardly noticed by others. Or it can be one where only an arm or leg jerks. A generalized seizure (entire brain activated) is one that spreads throughout the brain and gives rise to a more dramatic manifestation. The person drops to the ground, and the arms and legs jerk -- a grand mal seizure.

Heart seizure isn't a term much used by medical people. It again denotes a sudden and serious heart disorder such as a heart attack or a heart rhythm abnormality that prevents the heart from pumping blood.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My brother and I suffer from post-traumatic stress disorder. On a visit to my brother, my mother developed a high fever and was rushed to the emergency room. Her heart was beating rapidly. A doctor gave her a shot, and she died immediately. My brother and I have avoided doctors ever since. If I do see one, I become anxious and my blood pressure goes through the roof. My brother reacts the same. We get good blood pressure readings at home. What are we to do? Our doctor insists on taking blood pressure in the office. -- Anon.

ANSWER: You have a couple of choices. One is to find a doctor who will accept your home blood pressure readings. Or have your current doctor arrange for you to wear a monitor that records your pressure for a full 24 hours or longer. The doctor should accept those readings.

Can't care for kids, paralyzed mom too

Annie's Mailbox

Dear Annie: I am 24 and have four small children under age 10. My mother was in a car accident last fall that left her paralyzed from the chest down, and she now lives with us. With hardly any help from my older sister, I struggle every day trying to take care of everyone's needs.

Mom screams at me and makes the smallest of things seem like the end of the world. I don't want to see her in a nursing home, but I cannot do this 24/7. I'm losing my mind and my life. My kids don't want to be around me, and my oldest son's grades are declining.

Do I keep going, hoping things will get better? Or do I break the news to my mom that I love her dearly but can't take care of her? -- A.

Dear A.: You sound like a wonderful, caring daughter, but Mom is probably depressed and angry, and is taking it out on you. There are limits to what you can reasonably do for her without sacrificing the well-being of your children. Please don't feel guilty. Your mother needs more help than you can give her. She not only requires round-the-clock physical care, but also would benefit from counseling to deal with her other issues and come to terms with her current situation.

Please look into home-health care options, including a full-time caregiver (perhaps your sister would contribute to the cost), as well as nearby nursing homes. Most do an excellent job, and you can visit Mom every day, not only to cheer her up, but also to check on her care. Then please get some counseling for yourself in order to get through this, because we doubt Mom is going to make it easy.

Flyers aiming for sweep of Penguins

By DAN GELSTON
Associated Press

VOORHEES, N.J. — The Penguins are trying their best to beat up the Philadelphia Flyers.

Heck, even captain Sidney Crosby tossed aside concerns about blows to his head and mixed it up in a couple of melees.

The Penguins have come for a fight in their opening-round series. The Flyers have refused to back down from a rumble — note the 158 penalty minutes in Game 3 — but the orange and black have saved their biggest beatdowns for the scoreboard.

Led by Claude Giroux and Danny Briere, the Flyers have a whopping 20 goals over the first three games, including six goals on the power play and three coming short-handed. The Flyers forced Marc-Andre Fleury to the bench in their 8-4 win in Game 3 and are one Game 4 victory away from an unlikely sweep of Crosby, Evgeni Malkin and the 108-point Penguins.

The Penguins will be forced to rally short handed on Wednesday, as Craig

Shurmur starts 1st offseason program

CLEVELAND (AP) — Four hundred fifty nine days after being hired as head coach of the Browns, Pat Shurmur is finally getting the chance to run an off-season program.

Teams with new head coaches in the NFL started their structured conditioning programs on April 2. The remaining teams began their programs Monday.

The first day having the team together after more than three months away might not seem like big deal to those on the outside, but it is a very big deal to Shurmur.

There were no offseason programs in the NFL last year because of the lockout. That meant no supervised conditioning or instruction until the start of training camp.

"It's obviously exciting for me to have the players back in the building," Shurmur said on a conference call. "From what I can tell talking to the players, they're excited to be back. For a lot of the veteran guys, their body clock said the offseason program began a month ago.

"This is my first offseason program. It gives you clarity knowing how much work needs to be done on the field in the latter part of May and June. I realize how important these can be so you can get your systems in place and refined. The players have a chance to work together and develop a winning chemistry."

The new CBA resulting from the negotiations during the lockout last year pushed the start of offseason programs back from mid-March

Nicklaus remembers his most magical shots

By RUSTY MILLER
Associated Press

COLUMBUS — Now 72 years old, Jack Nicklaus jokes that he can't remember what happened yesterday.

Yet he's never forgotten what it was like to hit the most famous shots of his illustrious career.

"I can still feel it, it feels the same," he said Monday at a charity luncheon affiliated with the Memorial Tournament, which he founded and hosts. "You can still feel the shot, the way it came off your hands, 30 or 40 years later. I still have that same feeling. I haven't matched it lately. I do know that feeling, though. And it's kind of fun to know what it feels like in golf."

The years have not dimmed the sweet spot he hit on the 1 iron that he drilled through the wind and off the pin at 17 to take the 1972 U.S. Open at Pebble Beach, or the 5 iron with a slight draw at 16 that helped him win the 1986 Masters at age 46.

Nicklaus, who helped raise $275,000 at the luncheon for Nationwide Children's Hospital in Columbus, appeared with the defending Memorial Tournament winner, Steve Stricker, and two-time U.S. Open champion and golf analyst, Andy North.

Even though he no longer plays much golf — he said his five kids and 22 grandchildren all lead busy lives and don't usually have time — Nicklaus said he hasn't forgotten his signature shots.

Funny, he said, how many of them were 1 irons. There was the shot at Pebble Beach that helped him hold off Bruce Crampton. There was also another 1 iron at Augusta National, with Tom Weiskopf and Johnny Miller pressuring him, that led to his Masters victory in 1975.

Stricker remains impressed by the 5 iron that Nicklaus carved into the back-left pin placement on Sunday at the '86 Masters.

"I still can't get over that shot," Stricker said. "I know you've hit a ton of great shots over the years, but that's not an easy pin, first of all. One little flick over there and you're in the water."

With some embarrassment, Nicklaus said that shot was memorable because of his reaction to it.

"On that particular shot, I made probably the cockiest remark I've ever made in my to mid-April. Strict rules apply.

Players cannot be in the facility under the supervision of coaches more than four hours a day.

After working out with the strength coach they can meet with their position coaches and coordinators, but on-field instruction doesn't begin until April 30.

The head coach can't even be in the weight room during the first two weeks. The entire offseason program is to last 10 weeks with nine weeks of coaching. Some teams might give players a week off in the middle of the program. Shurmur decided to give his team the week off at the end of the nine weeks.

"Workouts this morning had me napping like a toddler... Lol," wide receiver/special teams star Joshua Cribbs tweeted.

The start of the offseason program, coincidentally, coincided with draft prospect Ryan Tannehill's visit to Berea. The Texas A&M quarterback, whom the Browns are considering taking with the fourth pick, headed to Buffalo after visiting the Browns.

Shurmur said he met with McCoy and welcomed him to the start of the offseason but felt no need to reassure him despite all the offseason talk of Robert Griffin III, Tannehill, Brandon Weeden and even Matt Flynn.

"He's doing fine," Shurmur said. "I didn't think (talking about Griffin and the others) was necessary. We greeted each other and started talking about what we want to get accomplished in the offseason more than any other business."

McCoy does not seem flustered, judging by his recent tweets.

"Flight to Cleveland tomorrow settle in before the off season program excited to get to work with the team," McCoy tweeted Saturday. On Sunday he added, "Driving to Cleveland. I'm pumped."

Shurmur, emphasizing the offseason program is voluntary, said it was "an outstanding turnout for the first day." He said some ab-

Adams was suspended for one game Monday for instigating a fight at 15:18 of the third period. He was assessed a minor penalty for instigating, a major penalty for fighting and a game misconduct.

Penguins coach Dan Bylsma was also fined $10,000 for Adams' actions.

Meanwhile, Arron Asham and James Neal both face suspensions for their roles in various fights.

Asham crosschecked Flyers forward Brayden Schenn in the upper body. Asham then jumped a defenseless Schenn and connected with a vicious right and was ejected. Adams pulled Scott Hartnell's Sideshow Bob-length locks and clocked the Flyers forward from behind. Neal flattened Game 2 star Sean Couturier in the waning minutes and sent the Flyers rookie center to the locker room. Neal also targeted Giroux with an elbow to the head.

The Penguins tried to send a message they wouldn't be pushed around in a series where they have little to hang their helmets on.

"They weren't trying to hit to be effective," Hartnell said Monday, "They were hitting to hurt."

Giroux called Neal's failed attempt to take him out "dirty."

The gloves have been dropped, the trash talking has been spewed, and the bad blood has come to a boil.

So far, none of those intangibles have done much to help the Penguins.

The problems start with Fleury in net and his 17 goals allowed this series. He's saved only 80 percent of his shots and was pulled for Brent Johnson before the third period on Sunday. Bylsma backed his goalie and said Fleury would start, "the next four games."

The list of problems stretches as long as the list of players in the Game 3 penalty box.

Crosby has two goals and Malkin (four assists) has been kept off the scoreboard. The Penguins can't hold early leads. The special teams unit has been abysmal and suddenly a team that was the odds-on favorite to win the Stanley Cup could find a sweep leads to sweeping changes on the roster.

"I think there's a little bit of shock, disbelief and disappointment," Bylsma said Monday. "I think you'll find to a man we don't think in this series we've played our hockey, played good hockey. I think you see that frustration in the game build up and overflow. I think any team in that situation in playoff hockey, down 0-3, I think if the shoe was on the other foot, you'd see that type of reaction."

With a two-day break, Bylsma gave the Penguins a day off. The Flyers skipped the ice and held a team meeting at their practice facility in New Jersey.

The Flyers know what the Penguins are going through. Each of the last two seasons, they've trailed 3-0 in a post-season series and responded with strikingly different results: The Flyers won four straight to stun Boston in 2010 and were meekly swept by the Bruins last season.

Giroux said the Flyers aren't worried about past history, nor do they care about Pittsburgh's rough-and-tumble style affecting their momentum.

"I think they're trying to get some hits, get in our heads," he said. "I think guys did a pretty good job of stay-

Potential Clemens jurors question cost of hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Roger Clemens stood and uttered "Morning" to the 90 potential jurors who had gathered in the ornate, sixth-floor ceremonial courtroom, the one deemed big enough to hold them all. After he sat down, he swiveled his chair, as if trying to make eye contact with as many as possible.

Some of those looking back had no idea who he was. Others, including two who survived the first cut, wondered if it was a waste of taxpayer time and money that got him to this point.

The seven-time Cy Young Award winner was back in court Monday in the government's second attempt to prove that he misled a House committee at a landmark drugs-and-sports hearing in 2008. The first trial last July ended in a mistrial when prosecutors introduced inadmissible evidence after only two witnesses had been called.

One potential juror said he felt "it was a little bit ridiculous" when Congress held hearings on drug use in sports because he felt the government should have been focusing on bigger problems. Nevertheless, the native of Chile — an investment officer for an international bank — was asked to return, the only male to remain in the jury pool among those who were individually screened on the first day.

Another potential juror recalled the 2008 hearing by saying: "At the time, I remember thinking it didn't seem to be a great use of taxpayer money," but she was kept in the pool after she said she could be impartial.

"Even if I don't agree with the reason that you're brought before Congress, you still have to tell the truth If you perjure yourself before Congress, it's still illegal," said the woman, who is an executive for an environmental nonprofit organization.

But another potential juror was excused after she volunteered: "I don't know if that's the best use of government tax dollars at this time." She said her feelings could influence her ability to serve.

Clemens lawyer Rusty Hardin even hinted that perhaps the defense might challenge Congress' authority to call the hearing in the first place, but U.S. District Judge Reggie Walton was skeptical of that line of questioning.

By the end of the day — after the proceedings had moved to a smaller courtroom — only 13 potential jurors had been screened and just seven had been asked to return Wednesday for more screening.

sent players called him to explain why they are not in Berea.

Linebacker Scott Fujita was among the no-shows. He was in New York meeting with commissioner Roger Goodell about his involvement in the Saints bounty program conducted from 2009-2011. Fujita was on the 2009 team and admits contributing cash to a performance fund but he says he never paid teammates to injure an opponent.

The NFL is not commenting on how the meeting went.

starting scrums. The Penguins can't match the Flyers once the first period closing horn sounds.

Crosby's attempt at playing enforcer got a laugh out of the Flyers.

"I guess we've got to be doing something right if he hates us, right?" a smiling Giroux said.

The Flyers are doing plenty right offensively against a hapless defense. The Flyers are the first team to score eight-plus goals in two straight playoff games since Wayne Gretzky and the Los Angeles Kings did it against the Calgary Flames April 27 & 29, 1993, according to STATS LLC.

Oh, Hartnell, their top goal scorer, has yet to put the puck in the net.

The 158 penalty minutes, superstar-on-superstar dustup, 12 goals and a Hulk Hogan cameo made Game 3 one to remember.

Flyers coach Peter Laviolette wasn't sure it could be topped as an entertainment spectacle — not that it matters to him, as long as the Flyers win.

"I had a lot of texts, people just texting me saying it was one of the best games, if not the best game, they've ever seen," he said.

ing focused and not worrying about that kind of stuff, especially after the whistle, of just skating away."

Crosby couldn't help himself from post-whistle shenanigans in the first period when he twice jabbed goalie Ilya Bryzgalov's glove against the ice. Giroux, third in the NHL in points this season, shoved Crosby from behind. Crosby, clearly not caring about his history of concussions, retaliated by going after Giroux. Crosby then pushed aside Jakob Voracek's glove as the Flyers forward went to pick it up, setting off another skirmish.

Crosby was blunt when asked why he didn't just skate away from Voracek's glove.

"I don't like him. I don't like any guy on their team," he said after Game 3. "Guys are emotional and there's a lot of stuff going on out there. There's no reason to explain or sit here and say why I pushed a glove away. They're doing a lot of things out there, too. And you know what? We don't like each other. Was I going to sit there and pick up (Voracek's) glove for him? What was I supposed to do?"

Crosby could ignite the Penguins offense instead of

‘Believe it!’

25 years ago, SI made an unforgettably bad Indians prediction

CLEVELAND (AP) — Some years are unforgettable. Others are forgetful. Put them together, it’s unforgettably forgetful. Such was the story of the 1987 Cleveland Indians. Oh, but what a beginning. In April of 1987, the world turned upside down for Indians fans. It’s the only way to describe the hysteria created by two words and one iconic cover of Sports Illustrated.

The headline read, “Indian uprising.”

When the April 6, 1987 editions of Sports Illustrated hit newsstands and mailboxes across the country, Joe Carter and Cory Snyder graced the cover in front a Chief Wahoo logo with the words, “Believe it! Cleveland is the best team in the American League.”

For those not old enough to remember that famous SI cover, and arguably the most off-base prediction in sports history, such a claim by the No. 1 sports publication in America 25 years ago was equally shocking and surprising to an Indians fan base starved for a winner.

If ever the so-called SI cover jinx had merit, this was Exhibit A, or least close to it. The 1987 Indians were the magazine’s pick to win the AL pennant, and by the end of the season, the Tribe was a major-league worst 61-101.

General-admission tickets at Cleveland Municipal Stadium were $2 that season, and by the end of it, those tickets couldn’t be given away. Early on, though, there was so much promise, so much hope, so much buzz.

It didn’t matter. No one, not Carter, Snyder, not Hall of Fame pitchers on their last legs Steve Carlton and Phil Niekro, could help meet SI’s prediction.

Still, spring is the time for baseball fans to dream, and SI did plenty to fuel that fire. For one interested observer — one who’s been with the Indians every year but one since 1979 — that week in early April of ‘87 was as surreal as it gets.

A year prior, Bob DiBasio was let go as the Indians’ media relations director as ownership of the team shifted from the late Francis J. “Steve” O’Neil to the late Dick Jacobs, and DiBasio spent ‘87 with the Atlanta Braves as their public relations director.

“I remember getting that issue in the mail in my office at Fulton County Stadium, and I couldn’t believe it,” he said. “I thought, ‘Son of gun, that’s my team.’”

A year later, DiBasio was back with the Indians, and even though he watched from afar in ‘87, something as simple as a magazine cover resonated with him, and countless others. Why the Indians were SI’s surprise pick in ‘87 is still a mystery. DiBasio, who knew many of the magazine’s baseball writers at the time, said it was probably nothing more than a hunch by SI.

“I really think it was an emotional pick by them,” said DiBasio, the Indians’ vice president of public affairs. “At that time, Sports Illustrated was a bit quirky with how they did those things. I just think they thought it was (the Indians’) time.”

The author of SI’s cover story, Ron Fimrite, explained the magazine’s pre-season choice for the AL pennant. A sampling of his writing in the April 6, 1987 issue:

What? Baseball in Cleveland? You gotta be kidding. Let me tell you something about baseball in Cleveland. ... Last season, the Indians won more games (84) than they had in any year since 1968, and they passed 1985’s attendance in their 38th date. The fans are excited. It’s like 1948 all over again. There’s a feeling that this is the year. People, baseball people, are starting to talk.

Those baseball people stopped talking about the Tribe quickly. SI’s pick as the best in the AL went from totally chic to totally bleak. The Indians started a dismal 1-10 and by the end of May were 16-34. Manager Pat Corrales was fired after 87 games, but the futility continued under his replacement, Doc Edwards.

When the carnage of ‘87 was over, 37 games separated Cleveland and AL East champion Detroit. Cover boys Carter (32 home runs) and Snyder (33 homers) put up excellent power numbers, but everything else that could go wrong, went wrong. For those who believe in such things, the SI jinx had struck again. Snyder, who was his second season in the majors in ‘87, didn’t buy into it.

“It was an exciting time for us,” Snyder, the hitting coach for the Double-A Jackson (Tenn.) Generals, said in a phone interview. “We felt we had a good team, and it was neat to see the Indians finally getting the media attention we had not had in so long. That was the fun part about it. It put the Indians on the map in the ‘80s. Granted, we had some great players, but we were probably short in various areas to really compete for a pennant ... As for the SI jinx, I don’t believe in those things.”

That iconic SI cover continues to live on in DiBasio’s office at Progressive Field. He received a call last month from longtime SI writer and now retired Steve Wulf about a prop left over from the original SI Snyder-Carter photo shoot. A 5-foot tall Chief Wahoo logo painted on barn wood was initially used before the magazine decided on a traditional studio portrait for its cover.

“(Wulf) called one day and said, ‘Do you want it?’ I said, ‘Sure,’” DiBasio said. “When it arrived, I couldn’t believe how big it was.”

Much like those hopes and the subsequent flame-out in ‘87, which continue to live on in Indians lore.

culty of the wedge shot.

“I’d never been where he was,” he cracked.

But it was the creativity that Watson showed that made it so memorable.

“When you’re playing a hook it usually takes off,” Nicklaus said. “But that ball danced like it had a lot of backspin on it. I saw that ball hit the green and I said, ‘Wow.’ That was something. Not only did he play the shot, but he played the shot and ended up with control at the end of the shot — which I thought was the amazing part. That will go down as one of the great shots ever played in the game.”

North added, “People will remember that shot that Bubba hit forever.” Making such shots under duress is what separates great players from the rest, Nicklaus said.

“That’s what you play for,” he said. “The good players are always able to produce those shots when they have to produce them. Watson produced that shot when he had to produce it, I did.

“Those are the ones you remember.”

life on a golf course,” he said. “It was 175 yards and a 5 iron that I had to take a little off of, but I hit it exactly the way I wanted to hit it. I hit it just to the right of the flag, with a slight draw. I hit the shot and I knew where it was. I reached down to pick up my tee and (son) Jackie, who was caddyng for me, said, ‘Be right!’ I said, ‘It is.’”

To loud laughter, he added, “That remark can get you in a lot of trouble when the ball’s still in the air.”

North said all of those shots are memorable but it was much shorter ones that made them so.

“When I think of Jack Nicklaus, I think of (those), and 100,000 8-footers he made when he needed to make them,” he said.

Bubba Watson’s hooked wedge shot from the trees right of the 17th fairway in a playoff at this year’s Masters ranks with the greatest shots of all time, Nicklaus said. In trouble off the tee, Watson had to hit an incredible shot to just stay alive in his two-man showdown with Louis Oosthuizen.

Watson’s dramatic shot landed on the green and spun within range of an easy two-putt par that gave him his first major-championship victory.

Nicklaus said it was hard to even imagine the diffi-

Steelers re-sign backup quarterback Charlie Batch

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Steelers re-signed backup quarterback Charlie Batch to a one-year contract on Monday. Financial terms were not disclosed.

Batch, a Pittsburgh native who was drafted by Detroit in 1998 out of Eastern Michigan, will enter his 15th NFL season and 11th with the Steelers. He threw for just 208 yards last season, but is 5-2 as a Pittsburgh starter.

He has 10,610 career passing yards and 60 touchdowns with 48 interceptions.

Kenya’s Wesley Korir, Cherop win Boston Marathon

BOSTON (AP) — Trailing the leaders by 200 yards when the Boston Marathon slogged through Heartbreak Hill, Wesley Korir passed them one by one until he took the lead on his way out of Kenmore Square.

That’s when leg cramps forced him to slow down and relinquish the lead.

“It’s hot out there, in case you didn’t know,” he told reporters after enduring temperatures in the mid-80s to win the 116th Boston Marathon on Monday. “I knew it was going to be hot, and one important thing that I had to take care of today ... was really hydrate as much as possible. I guess my biology degree kicked in a little bit.”

Singing religious songs as he trudged along the scorching pavement, the native Kenyan — a permanent resident of the United States — retook the lead from Levy Matebo in the final mile to cross the finish line in 84.8-degree temperatures with a time of 2 hours, 12 minutes, 40 seconds.

It was almost 10 minutes behind the world best established here a year ago by Geoffrey Mutai and the second-slowest Boston victory since 1985. Mutai, who was hoping a repeat victory would earn him a spot on the Kenyan Olympic team, dropped out after 18 miles with stomach cramps.

Instead, it was Korir who may have won a ticket to the London Games.

“To me, I think running the Boston Marathon is an Olympic event,” he said. “I don’t care what comes up after this, but I’m really, really happy to win Boston.”

Sharon Cherop won the women’s race to complete the Kenyan sweep, outkicking Jemima Jelagat Sumgong to win by 2 seconds in 2:31:50. The women’s winner was decided by a sprint down Boylston Street for the fifth consecutive race — all of them decided by 3 seconds or less.

Cherop, who was also hoping to be selected for the Kenyan Olympic team, was third at the world championships and third in Boston last year.

“This time around, I was really prepared,” she said. “Last time the race went so fast and I didn’t know I was about to finish. I didn’t know the course well and I didn’t know the finish line was coming.”

Matebo finished 26 seconds behind Korir, and Bernard Kipyego was third as Kenyans swept the podium in both genders. Jason Hartmann, of Boulder, Colo., was in fourth place and the top American.

Ex-Pa. swim coach pleads in teen sex case

GREENSBURG, Pa. (AP) — A former high school assistant swim coach has admitted having a sexual relationship with a 15-year-old student on the team.

Thirty-three-year-old Raymond Novak pleaded guilty Monday, the sixth day of his trial in Westmoreland County Court. He faces five to 10 years in prison under the terms of a plea agreement.

Novak told the court he was pleading guilty on the advice of his attorney.

Novak’s accuser testified last week that she had sexual contact with the coach at her home and at the Burrell High School pool during the 2008-2009 school year.

Novak’s attorney said in his opening statement the teen had made up the accusation because she was infatuated with the coach.

Prosecutors say the pair exchanged thousands of messages over a four-month period.

BCS buster: Alabama's crystal ball shattered

TUSCALOOSA, Al. (AP) The crystal football Alabama won for beating LSU in the BCS championship game in January was shattered on A-Day when it was accidentally knocked off a display by the father of a current player.

Athletic department spokesman Jeff Purinton said the Waterford Crystal trophy, valued at $30,000, was on display in the Mal Moore Athletic Facility as part of the festivities for the Crimson Tide’s spring football game Saturday in Tuscaloosa, Ala. He says the man stumbled on a rug that was under the trophy display.

Purinton said the school is working with the American Football Coaches Association, which owns the trophy, on getting a replacement.

Florida’s 2006 trophy was destroyed when it was accidentally knocked off a pedestal by a recruit in 2008. In 2004, Florida State had two trophies stolen.

“In 2009 and again this season, Alabama did a great job showing the trophy off to fans even after we turned it over to them,” said Charley Green, manager of the coaches’ trophy. “Unfortunately it is fragile, and accidents can happen.”

Green said the trophy makes appearances for several weeks before it is turned over to the school in mid-January.

Manning goes to work with his new team

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. (AP) — Peyton Manning is back in his element, barking out calls, throwing passes and working out with his new teammates. It sure beats watching, wondering and worrying.

He's still finding his comfort zone in Denver after spending 14 seasons in Indianapolis, but Manning is back serving as both quarterback and coach on the football field instead of pacing the sideline and wondering when his neck is going to allow him to return to the huddle.

Manning and his new teammates reported to the Broncos' headquarters Monday morning for the start of the team's offseason conditioning program. After some work in the classroom and weight room, Manning threw passes to his new receivers during some on-field work without the coaches, who aren't allowed to join them outdoors until OTAs start up in May.

"Everybody's been looking forward to this day for some time now," Manning said. "I thought it was a productive first day, but we've got a lot of work to do."

He didn't want to make any rash judgments about his receiving corps and although he said he was pleased with his first official workout since signing a five-year, $96 million deal with Denver on March 20, Manning declined to talk about his health or the progress he's made as he regains his arm strength following a series of neck operations that sidelined him for all of last season and led to his departure from Indy.

"I'm not going to get into these weekly reports. I've kind of been there and done that all fall of last year," said Manning, who is rehabbing under the direction of head athletic trainer Steve "Greek" Antonopolous and new strength and conditioning coach Luke Richesson. "I'm enjoying being under one roof, being supervised by those two guys," Manning said.

Wide receiver Eric Decker, who has caught more passes from Manning than anyone else over the last month thanks to a series of workouts at local high schools, said the four-time MVP's passes were precise and powerful.

"I'm not his doctor, I don't know how to speak on his health, but catching balls from him, it looks like there's nothing wrong to me," Decker said. "He's throwing great balls, he's getting the work in just like we're getting the work in, knocking the rust off. I see no issues at this point."

Although he's been putting in a lot of miles finding remote high school fields to practice on, Manning said he hasn't really gotten to know his new city yet.

"It's been all business," he said. "Everybody's asking where I'm living. I've been living over here in the facility."

Rehabbing, lifting weights and studying his new playbook.

Manning said he was glad to throw the ball around at team headquarters rather than sneaking around to the local high school fields to play catch with Decker and good friend Brandon Stokley, who signed a one-year deal to return to the Broncos on Monday.

Manning, 36, has always embraced the offseason regimen, and he said he's sure he wasn't the only one who was relieved Monday when NFL teams opened their doors for the voluntary offseason conditioning programs that were scuttled last year by the league's lockout.

"I am (excited), there's no question. I think a lot of players around the NFL will tell you the lockout threw a lot of players off their routine and what they're used to," Manning said. "So, I (like) the fact that everybody's allowed to be in the facility now working out under one roof, we can throw on the field now, right next to the weight room now as opposed to going to a high school. That was what you had to do, but it's nice to be able to do

AP source: Brees, Fujita, Smith meet with NFL

NEW YORK (AP) — Saints quarterback Drew Brees, former New Orleans linebacker Scott Fujita and players union head DeMaurice Smith were at the NFL offices Monday discussing the team's bounty program.

Other issues also were being discussed with league executives, according to a person with knowledge of the meetings. The person spoke on condition of anonymity because the talks are not being made public.

The league would not comment on the meetings, which also included discussions of HGH testing.

Also on hand was NFL Players Association President Domonique Foxworth, who was elected to that position last month.

Brees and Fujita, now with the Browns, are members of the NFLPA's executive committee. Fujita was with the Saints in 2009 when the pay-for-pain bounty pool grew as large as $50,000 and the team won the Super Bowl.

Browns coach Pat Shurmur said on a conference call with Cleveland media Monday that Fujita missed the team's first offseason training session because he was in New York.

NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell is expected to soon punish players for their roles in the program that got Saints coach Sean Payton suspended for 2012. Between 22 and 27 current and former Saints defenders were involved, according to the league investigation.

The NFL investigation found that Payton initially lied about the existence of a bounty program and instructed his defensive assistants to do the same.

The Saints have been fined $500,000 and stripped of two second-round draft picks. General manager Mickey Loomis is suspended for the first eight games of the upcoming season, while interim head coach Joe Vitt — who took over that role Monday as Payton began his suspension through the Super Bowl — will be barred for the first six regular-season games.

Former Saints defensive coordinator Gregg Williams, who oversaw the bounty system in which opponents were targeted for hits that could sideline or injure them, is suspended indefinitely. He left New Orleans in January to become defensive coordinator in St. Louis.

Williams has apologized for his role in the bounty program.

The league's investigation found that Williams' bounty system offered off-the-books cash payments of $1,500 for "knock-outs," in which an opposing player was knocked out of a game, or $1,000 for "cart-offs," in which an opponent needed help off the field.

Last summer, the NFL announced it would begin testing for human growth hormone, but the union had to approve the process. The players have yet to do so, citing uncertainty about the detection methods and appeals process.

The sides have been stalemated on HGH testing ever since.

everything here and have some time with the coaches, as well."

Because the coaches can't join them on the practice fields until next month, the players run the on-field portion of the program themselves, and this arrangement is perfectly suited for Manning, who will direct the installation of the Broncos' new no-huddle offense.

Manning, though, said he felt like the new kid in school.

"I think a number of us did. I was with Jacob Tamme and Joel Dreesen, Caleb (Hanie), the same way. We have some new guys. So, I'm learning as we go, as well," Manning said. "Certainly when you get out there on the field and you're throwing passes to receivers, you feel a little more comfortable there, as far as knowing what you're doing a little bit."

Decker said Manning is making everyone around him better because of his famous work ethic, and cornerback Champ Bailey said that goes for Denver's defense, too.

Bailey sent Manning numerous texts during the quarterback's whirlwind free agency tour pleading with him to come to Denver.

"Why? Because he's an amazing player and his leadership alone is bar none the best in the league," Bailey said. "You need a guy like that on your team, and where I want to go, what I want to do toward the end of my career is win a championship and I feel like he gives us the best chance."

Bailey said he puts Manning at the top of the QB list because of the "way he breaks down a defense and pretty much tell you what you're in and half the guys on defense don't even know what we're doing. It's sad but true. You try to trick him as much as possible, but for some reason, somebody always tips him and he knows, he just knows."

Bailey said the Broncos have to be careful they don't take Manning's presence for granted.

"I tell everybody in our defensive room, 'Just because we have a guy like that, it's not going to get easier for us.' We've got to work harder because the expectations are here," Bailey said, holding his right hand high. "He's going to kick our butts in practice, so we've got to be ready to go."
