wasn't the cause of the quakes. Documents obtained by The Associated Press show D&L Energy in Youngstown sought state permission in February to re-open the shuttered well — after plugging it to a shall-lower depth — and then to measure the vibrations for its analysis. The Ohio Department of Natural Resources has yet to respond, in what could signal a permanent delay. D&L closed the Youngstown well after a New Year's Eve quake reached 4.0 magnitude. The state then imposed a moratorium on deep-injection drilling near the site, halting regional disposal of millions of gallons of wastewater from hydraulic fracturing for natural gas or oil and other forms of drilling.

Romney urges young voters to take risks

WESTERVILLE, Ohio (AP) — Mitt Romney on Friday encouraged young Americans facing bleak job prospects to "take risks" — and even borrow money from their parents — to help improve their economic fortunes.

The presumptive Republican presidential nominee noted that the nation's economy is recovering but blamed President Barack Obama for presiding over the "most anemic and tepid" comeback since the Great Depression. Continuing his recent focus on younger voters, Romney said Obama's policies are making it harder for college graduates to be successful.

"This kind of decisiveness, this attack of success is very different than what we've seen in our country's history," Romney told students and supporters gathered at Otterbein University in central Ohio. "We've always encouraged young people — take a shot, go for it, take a risk and get the education, borrow money if you have to from your parents, start a business."

Romney then shared the story of sandwich magnate Jimmy John, who Romney said borrowed $20,000 from his parents to launch his first sandwich shop.

Salem Wesleyan Academy utilizes recycling as a fundraiser

Helping the environment while raising money for school social functions

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

SALEM — Salem Wesleyan Academy is promoting recycling and trying to help the environment while earning some money at the same time, inviting residents to use their new paper recycling dumpster.

"We're just trying to keep stuff out of the landfills," Parent Teacher Fellowship President Barb Sannes said.

The PTF arranged for the program at the K-12 school located on Newgarden Avenue as a fundraiser to help raise money for the group's general fund, which shoulders the cost of all the social functions at the school, including awards banquets.

The program is offered through Paper Retriever, an arm of Abitibi Bowater, a paper manufacturer. Sannes said the company needs the paper to make recycled paper and pays up to $20 per ton of paper collected.

The green and yellow container located at the back of the school holds up to 2 tons. "They have data on how many trees are saved by doing this. It does help the environment," school Principal Dan Forrider said.

According to the Paper Retriever website at www.paperretriever.com, there are programs throughout the country. The Leetonia Community Public Library just started the program, offering the paper recycling for the Leetonia area on the library grounds.

ALMANAC

On April 28, 1789, there was a mutiny on the Bounty as rebelling crew members of the British ship led by Fletcher Christian set Capt. William Bligh and 18 sailors adrift in a launch in the South Pacific. (Bligh and most of the men with him managed to reach Timor in 47 days.) In 1918, Gavril Princip, the assassin of Archduke Franz Ferdinand of Austria and the archduke's wife, Sophie, died in prison of tuberculosis. In 1942, polster George Gallup said most Americans preferred to call the current global conflict "World War II" or "The Second World War." In 1945, Italian dictator Benito Mussolini and his mistress, Clara Petacci, were executed by Italian partisans as they attempted to flee the country.

Secret Service investigating another overseas trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — Expanding the prostitution investigation, the Secret Service acknowledged Thursday it is checking whether its employees hired strippers and prostitutes in advance of President Barack Obama's visit last year to El Salvador.

The disclosure came not long after the Homeland Security secretary assured skeptical senators that the recent prostitution scandal in Colombia appeared to be an isolated incident.

A spokesman for the Secret Service, Edwin Donovan, said the agency was investigating allegations raised in news reports about unprofessional behavior that have emerged in the aftermath of the Colombia incident. The latest, by Seattle television station KIRO-TV, quoted anonymous sources as saying that Secret Service employees received sexual favors from strippers at a club in San Salvador and took prostitutes to their hotel rooms ahead of Obama's visit to the city in March 2011.

Prostitution is legal in both Colombia and El Salvador.

Separately, The Washington Post this week cited unnamed "confidants" of the Secret Service officers implicated in Colombia saying senior managers had tolerated similar behavior during previous official trips. The Post

Checking whether its employees hired strippers and prostitutes in advance of President Barack Obama's visit last year to El Salvador described a visit to Buenos Aires in 2009 by former President Bill Clinton, whose protective detail it said included agents and uniformed officers. During that trip, the Post said, members of the detail went out for a late night of partying at strip clubs.

Donovan said Thursday, "Any information brought to our attention that can be assessed as credible will be followed up on in an appropriate manner."

In a confidential message to senators, also Thursday, the Secret Service said its Office of Professional Responsibility had not received complaints about officer behavior in El Salvador but would investigate. In the message, the agency sought to cast doubt on the KIRO report, noting that it does not routinely send K-9 or explosive-detection units as part of its advance teams; KIRO said the advance team included those elements.

White House spokesman Jay Carney said he doubted that Obama was aware of the allegations about El Salvador when he was briefed by Secret Service Director Mark Sullivan last week in the Oval Office.

The expansion of any investigation into behavior by the Secret Service could represent another mark against an agency that has been tarnished by the prostitution scandal. At a hearing Wednesday on Capitol Hill, senators struggled to reconcile the image of courageous agents assigned to protect the lives of the president and his family with the less savory image that has emerged from its investigation in Colombia so far.

Senators on Thursday questioned Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano's statement during the hearing that she believed the incident in Colombia was an isolated case. Napolitano had said there was no evidence of similar behavior, based on a review of complaints during the past 2.5 years to the agency's Office of Professional Responsibility. She said that if there was a pattern of such behavior, "that would be a surprise to me."

"It sort of defies logic," said Sen. Lindsey Graham, R-S.C., who serves on the Judiciary and Armed Services committees, both of which were investigating the case. "The idea that this is the first and only time, it doesn't make sense. For something to get this out of control it has to be a ... cultural blueprint."

The chairman of the Senate Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs, Joseph Lieberman, I-Conn., said he has heard additional examples of misconduct, so Napolitano's assurances surprised him. His committee is expected to hold hearings in May.

"I keep running into people who tell me that they've talked to agents who tell them about misconduct of this kind over the years," Lieberman said. "Whether anybody knew about it or whether there were files on people I don't know."

The Colombia scandal arose the morning of April 12, when a dispute over payment between a prostitute and a Secret Service officer spilled into the hallway of the Hotel Caribe.

Eight Secret Service officers have been forced out, and the agency is trying to permanently revoke the security clearance of another. Three others have been cleared of serious wrongdoing but face administrative discipline.

One of the Secret Service officers was staying at the Hilton hotel in Cartagena, Colombia, the same hotel where Obama later stayed for the Summit of the Americas.

Another dozen military personnel also have been implicated. Defense Secretary Leon Panetta said this week that all have had their security clearances suspended.

The Defense Department briefed senators on Wednesday about its investigation, but Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., said Thursday he was unsatisfied with what the Pentagon told lawmakers. Unlike for civilian U.S. government employees, soliciting prostitutes is a criminal offense for U.S. military personnel even in countries where prostitution is otherwise legal.

"Secretary Napolitano and especially the director of the Secret Service has been pretty forthcoming in many aspects of this, unlike the Pentagon, which has completely stonewalled, using the excuse that a Uniform Code of Military Justice — as you know, that's the military law — somehow is a barrier to us receiving information," McCain said the CBS program "This Morning."

Graham proposed Thursday that military commanders and Secret Service supervisors should conduct surprise visits for personnel working overseas.

"People get away from home, get deployed and believe they're on vacation," he said.

"They work hard, but they believe their off-duty time is something that doesn't matter. It does matter."

Supreme Court suddenly moves to center of presidential race

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, suddenly at the heart of presidential politics, is preparing what could be blockbuster rulings on health care and immigration shortly before the fall election.

The court, sometimes an afterthought in presidential elections, is throwing a new element of uncertainty into the campaign taking shape between President Barack Obama and presumptive Republican nominee Mitt Romney.

Sharply divided between four conservatives, four liberals and one conservative-leaning swing justice, the court already is viewed as being nearly as partisan as Congress. Within weeks it will rule on the contentious 2010 Democratic-crafted health care overhaul and a Republican-backed Arizona law that's seen as a model for cracking down on illegal immigrants. Obama sometimes seems to be running against the court, or at least its conservative members. Whether that will sway voters in November is unclear. The public receives far less information and visual imagery of the Supreme Court than it does of the White House and Congress.

An anti-court strategy by Obama "will fire up his base, but I doubt it will make any bigger impact on swing voters," said Republican consultant John Feehery.

Meanwhile, strategists in both parties are hoping they can turn the upcoming decisions to their advantage — for instance, possibly boosting Democratic turnout among Hispanic voters unhappy with GOP immigration policies or emboldening the Republican base if Obama's landmark health care law is ruled unconstitutional.

The Supreme Court already has played a huge and direct role in U.S. presidential politics. Its 5-4 ruling in Bush v. Gore settled the bitter 2000 contest by barring a Florida ballot recount, which Democrats hoped would prevent George W. Bush's election.

And the 2010 Citizens United case, also decided 5-4, greatly eased political spending restrictions on corporations and unions. It gave birth to the "super PACs" that are reshaping campaigns by raising millions of anonymously donated dollars for TV ads attacking Obama, Romney and targeted congressional candidates.

By holding well-publicized hearings on the health care and immigration cases — and now writing keenly awaited decisions — the court is stirring passions on key issues in this year's elections. Less clear, however, is how the politics might play out. Many court-watchers expect the justices to throw out most or all of the health law, which Republicans derisively call "Obamacare." During public oral arguments, the most conservative justices questioned Congress' authority to require all Americans to obtain health insurance.

Romney may be poorly positioned to exploit such a ruling, however. The similar "individual mandate" that he successfully pushed as Massachusetts governor was a model for Obama's federal plan. "I don't think the Romney campaign will want to make health care a major issue," said Democratic strategist Doug Hattaway. "Every time Romney criticizes the president's health care reform, he opens himself up to the Etch A Sketch attack."

Hattaway was referring to claims that Romney switches back and forth on important policies, erasing and redrawing pages when convenient.

Republican strategist Terry Holt said a court decision overturning the health care law would be an unmistakable setback for Obama.

"It repudiates the singular achievement of this administration," Holt said.

Feehery agreed, saying such a ruling would make Obama "look like a weak president."

But it might help other Democrats, Feehery said. "It takes away a law that is unpopular," he said, "but puts health care back on the agenda for the Democrats, which has been a winning issue in the past."

In the immigration case, the Obama administration opposes Arizona's requirement that police check the legal status of people they stop for other reasons.

The law, pushed by a Republican governor and Legislature, has angered some voters, including Hispanics, in battleground states such as Florida, New Mexico and Colorado.

A number of court analysts predict the justices will uphold parts of the Arizona law but may overturn others. That could energize Americans who want tougher sanctions, including deportation, against millions of illegal immigrants in the country.

"This could prove problematic for Romney," Feehery said, because it would pit his conservative base against much-needed Hispanic voters in targeted states.

"If Romney handles it right, by largely ignoring it, it could take out a major source of irritation for Hispanics and maybe help a portion of them see the good side of Romney," Feehery said.

SALEM REPORTS

—Connie Burkey, Meadow Lane, reported at 10:52 a.m. Friday that she found money missing from her deceased mother's checking account. It appeared the money was fraudulently used by an unknown person to transfer the funds to purchase items on Amazon. An attempt will be made to identify the person.
—Nancy Delong, of the 200 block of West 10th St., reported at 11:41 a.m. Friday that she had $139.99 worth of charges applied to her bank account on Monday that she did not authorize. Her bank was investigating.
—Joshua Ritchey, of the 1700 block of East State Street, reported at 8:52 a.m. Friday that his landlord told him the door upstairs should not be locked and he found it locked with words written on the wall inside. He said the neighbor lady was found sleeping outside his door the other day and now this door has been found locked. The female upstairs was seen in a window, but took off out of sight. He was told to contact the landlord to unlock the door.
—Marra McFarland, 24, of 649 Prospect St., was charged with operating a vehicle under the influence and taken to Salem Community Hospital by ambulance for non-incapacitating injuries after a one-vehicle accident at 3:01 a.m. Friday. The report said she turned her vehicle left onto South Ellsworth Avenue from an alley, was texting on her phone and not paying attention to the roadway and struck a utility pole. She was stuck inside and the window had to be broken to get her out. Fire department first responders and EMT Ambulance both responded.
—Miguel Velasco, 33, of 281 Vine St., was cited for speeding and no operator's license after a traffic stop at 2:09 a.m. Friday on West State Street at Georgetown Road. The report said he didn't have a license, but provided a Guatemala identification. Immigration Control and Enforcement was contacted to determine his status and had no information on him. They did not want him detained. He was released on his own recognizance and given a court date.
—An officer on patrol at 12:56 a.m. Friday found several suspicious people in Waterworth Memorial Park off of East School Street after park hours. They were checked for warrants and told to leave.
—An officer on patrol at 11:18 p.m. Thursday in the 600 block of East State Street saw a person stretched out on a park bench covered with a comforter. The officer approached the person on foot and nudged him with a flashlight. The male had been sleeping and said he had a recent argument with his sister and decided to leave the house. He was told he couldn't sleep on the bench, and he apologized and headed home.
—Jonathan Abbott, of the 100 block of Jennings Avenue, called at 10:14 p.m. Thursday to report loud persons. Officers did not hear any violations, but told occupants of an apartment about the complaint.
—Nichole Phillips, of the 600 block of East Seventh Street, reported at 9:58 p.m. Thursday that $600 was removed from her purse sometime overnight after she fell asleep at the home of an acquaintance in the 500 block of Walnut Street. Several persons were present and it was unknown how many had come and gone while she was asleep.
—Janet Cobb, of the 100 block of Washington Avenue, reported at 9:31 p.m. Thursday that someone unknown to her broke the door frame on the rear door of her home. Nothing appeared to be missing.
—A man in the 400 block of Continental Drive called at 9:19 p.m. Thursday to report ongoing harassment from his fiancée's ex. He wanted it documented and wanted information regarding restraining orders.
—A woman on Continental Drive reported at 8:51 p.m. Thursday that her juvenile son was assaulted after school. The boy told police he was assaulted by three people he did not know in the 900 block of East State Street.
—Police were called at 8:50 p.m. Thursday to the 100 block of West Third Street where a resident reported a vehicle parked at the rear had either been moved or pulled into the front of the garage. The responding officer had been to the residence the day before and the pickup was in the same spot, but was not touching the garage then. It was not known if someone had driven the vehicle and pulled too close or if the vehicle came out of gear.
—A man in the 900 block of West Wilson Street contacted police at 7:40 p.m. Thursday wanting to talk to an officer about concerns for his adult brother. He was told his options.
—A man came to the police station at 5:37 p.m. Thursday requesting information on phone harassment and to document a pending civil issue with his ex-girlfriend, reporting he requested her to change her mailing address since she no longer lives there. He said he's been marking the mail return to sender and wants no contact with her and does not want her on the property. He reported there's been several text messages exchanged, which the officer reviewed.
—A woman at 4:24 p.m. Thursday reported a reckless vehicle at Franklin and South Lincoln Avenue. The vehicle was not found.
—Police responded to Cedar Street and Olive for a report of lines down at 3:45 p.m. Thursday. No lines were found in the street, but an officer did find what appeared to be a cable line in front of a residence on Cedar.
—Police were called to a domestic dispute in the 400 block of South Lincoln Avenue at 1:26 p.m. Thursday involving a couple arguing over a child, property and living arrangements. Officers spoke to both sides and the male left on foot for a relative's house.

PERRY TOWNSHIP REPORT

—A resident in the 1800 block of Garfield Road called at 10 a.m. Thursday to complain about a situation with his lawn mower. He said he took the mower to a repair shop for service and believed the mower was under warranty. The owner of the repair shop found parts needed to repair the mower, but they were not under the warranty. He charged a fee for the services rendered and would not release the mower until the fee was paid. The resident wanted his mower back, but did not want to pay the fees owed. An officer spoke to an assistant prosecutor who said it's a civil case and that money was owed for the services rendered. The resident was told the findings and was not pleased with the answer, the report said.

LISBON REPORT

—A mail carrier reported Friday a resident of Maple Street had not retrieved his mail for several days. Police located a relative, who came to the house. They found the man dead in his living room from apparent natural causes.

COLUMBIANA REPORT

A May 7 pretrial was set for Mykel L. Crooms, 25, Lincoln Street, Salineville, charged with obstructing official business.
A May 31 pretrial was set for David M. Lang, 29, state Route 514, Big Prairie, charged with driving under suspension and stop sign.

Romney FROM 1A

"This is kind of an American experience," he said of John's story.
Romney's call for "economic freedom" was a familiar theme for the former Massachusetts governor, who faced the public for the first time since declaring himself the Republican presidential nominee-in-waiting earlier in the week. But some Democrats said his suggestion that young people borrow thousands of dollars from their parents shows that he's out of touch with ordinary Americans.
"Only someone who paid for college by selling stock given to him by his CEO father would just casually assume students could go borrow $20,000 from their parents to deal with the economic challenges they face," said Joshua Dorner, a spokesman for the Center for American Progress Action Fund.

In an interview with the Boston Globe in 1994, Ann Romney said her husband sold off stock that his father had bought for him so that they had money to live on as married college students.

Romney's comments came the same day the Commerce Department reported that the nation's recovery may be slowing, although he ignored the news while speaking at Otterbein University.
"The president is going to want to take credit for the economy getting better, and I am convinced it will get better. Every recession ends. Every recession ultimately becomes a recovery," he said.

Romney added: "This just happens to be the most anemic and tepid recovery we've seen since Hoover."
President Herbert Hoover was in office when the stock market crashed in October 1929 and, as the nation struggled amid an economic depression, lost re-election to Democrat Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932.

The Commerce Department estimated that the economy grew at 2.2 percent over the first three months of the year. That's compared to 3 percent growth in the previous three months.

Romney offered a more measured tone than he had in the final weeks of the competitive phase of the GOP primary season. He did not mention Obama by name in a speech that spanned more than 40 minutes, although he condemned the president's policies that target the wealthy.
"I will try and unite the American people, not divide us," he said.

Woman wins $5.8M in 'Girls Gone Wild' case

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The company that makes "Girls Gone Wild" DVDs is seeking to overturn a verdict awarding nearly $6 million to a St. Louis-area woman who claims her bare breasts were recorded without permission.

St. Louis Circuit Judge John Garvey last month sided with Tamara Favazza in her suit against Mantra Films Inc. and MRA Holdings LLC, awarding her $5.77 million. She was a 20-year-old college student in 2005 when someone lifted her tank top during a party at a St. Louis bar, exposing her breasts. Another person filmed it. She later discovered the recording was part of the "Girls Gone Wild Sorority Orgy" DVD series. Favazza claimed in the suit originally filed in 2008 that she did not give consent and the resulting DVD damaged her reputation. A St. Louis jury sided with the DVD makers in 2010, but a retrial was granted. Garvey issued his ruling on March 5. On Wednesday, the defendants filed motions asking that the judgment be set aside and a new trial granted. Jeffrey Medler, an attorney for Favazza, said he will "vigorously oppose" any effort to overturn the ruling.

OUR SIDE

Obama should try another approach to solving loan dilemma

Student loan debt in the United States will top $1 trillion this year, with most college graduates leaving campus owing more than the price of a good new car.

Yet President Barack Obama wants young people to believe he is making college more affordable by encouraging them, in effect, to take on bigger loans.

In Ohio, about 68 percent of students need loans. Their repayment burden averages $27,713. It's not just the Buckeye State either. For instance, about 73 percent of graduates of four-year colleges and universities in West Virginia have to take out loans to attend school. When they leave, their average debt is $23,678.

Obama was making the rounds of college campuses this week in a pseudo-campaign trip, attempting to whip up enthusiasm for his re-election among young people. His message was that a scheduled increase in student loan interest rates, from 3.4 percent to 6.8 percent, should be prevented.

The president is assuming his listeners flunked basic math. Based on the White House's own figures, the average cost of the interest rate increase would be only about $8 a month for student borrowers.

Instead of playing the old smoke-and-mirrors game, Obama should be encouraging institutions of higher learning to hold down tuitions and fees.

VP isn't a ticket to nowhere

JULES WITCOVER

WASHINGTON — Once again, the standing political joke about the irrelevance and incompetence of the American vice president is enjoying a rerun, this time on cable television. In the new HBO comedy series, Julia Louis-Dreyfus (Elaine of "Seinfeld" fame) plays Selina Meyer, the well-meaning airhead of a fictional administration.

The show is being widely hailed as a solid take on Washington as it really is, with know-it-all White House aides, press secretaries and other types feeding off the reflected power and glory of the POTUS, as insiders refer to the supreme boss.

It's great for laughs, especially played by the comedic talents of the star with a preference for the ultimate profanity. And it confirms the view of the vice presidency as the first veep, John Adams, described it to his wife, Abigail: "In this I am nothing. But I could be everything."

Beyond that, the show's basic premise plays off all the old clichés. Like the one about the twin brothers, one of whom was lost at sea and the other who became vice president; neither of them were ever heard from again. Or the assessment of Thomas Marshall, Woodrow Wilson's veep, that in the office he was "like a man in a cataleptic state: he cannot speak; he cannot move; he suffers no pain; and yet he is perfectly conscious of everything that is going on about him."

Wilson himself summed up the popular conception thus: "The chief embarrassment in discussing his office is, that in explaining how little there is to say about it, one has evidently said all there is to say." Or, in the pithy, sanitized version of FDR's standby, "Cactus Jack" Garner, the office was "not worth a bucket of warm spit."

It's true that the roster of early vice presidents was rife with forgettable names like Daniel D. Tompkins, William R. King, William A. Wheeler and Levi P. Morton. And that a favorite Broadway stage character called Alexander Throttlebottom, played by the bumbling Victor Moore, couldn't get a library card for lack of a required reference.

More recently, the first President George Bush's veep, Dan Quayle, endured endless ridicule for a rash of gaffes, including the time he counseled a boy in a school spelling bee to spell Ireland's favorite vegetable "potatoe." Even the current occupant, Joe Biden, has been subject to repeated jibes for off-the-cuff remarks, and for talking nonstop.

Nevertheless, the fact is that in the last 35 years or so, most American vice presidents have been men of wide political experience and esteem, starting with the often-demeaned President Jimmy Carter's selection of Walter Mondale as his running mate in 1976. Carter used Mondale as a true partner in governance, giving him an office in the White House and full access to all his meetings, including with foreign leaders, a practice followed by most succeeding presidents.

Over the last nearly 20 years, particularly, the vice presidents of both parties — Democrats Al Gore and Biden and Republican Dick Cheney — were conspicuously involved in key policy-making roles in their administrations, with public acknowledgment by their presidents of their roles.

Gore was given the leading voice in the environmental and technological aspects of the Bill Clinton terms. Cheney especially was regarded as a power in the George W. Bush years, with his own staff paralleling that of the president's in many respects. His dominant influence in matters of prisoner interrogations after the 9/11 terrorist attacks, and in the expansion of presidential powers, were hallmarks of that administration.

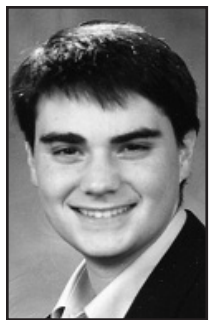

In the current Obama tenure, Biden was influential in encouraging a refocus on counterterrorism as opposed to counterinsurgency in Iraq and Afghanistan, and in supporting Obama's setting of deadlines for eventual withdrawal of American forces in both battle-weary countries. Despite recurring, ill-informed talk that he will be replaced by Hillary Clinton as Obama's running mate this year, Biden has remained entrenched and openly supported by Obama.

All the experience of the last 20 years flies in the face of the premise of the fictional "Veep." The notion of Louis-Dreyfus as a doofus is certainly good for laughs, but it should not be taken as affirmation of the vice presidency as still a ticket to nowhere.

Why I'm adopting Sandra Fluke as a tax write-off

BEN SHAPIRO

"Government," says Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., "is simply the name we give to the things we choose to do together."

This, of course, is eminently untrue — we do plenty of things together that don't involve the government, thank God.

One can only imagine how dull and dreary our sex lives would be if they had to run through a DMV-style bureaucracy.

But this foolish liberal meme has value. It does carry a grain of truth: government represents us.

Without us, there is no government. More to the point, without our money, there are no government programs.

That's why, this week, I decided to adopt Sandra Fluke.

Now, you may remember Fluke from her dismal performance before the House Democratic Steering and Policy Committee.

Fluke, you'll recall, was a Georgetown law student who just happened to be a professional activist.

And she stated that she wanted Georgetown, a Catholic school, to pay for her contraceptives, since "contraception can cost a woman over $3,000 during law school."

In the end, third parties would end up paying for part of Fluke's YAZ prescription, since Obamacare's strictures are subsidized by individual mandates.

Fluke was back this week. This time, she wanted taxpayers to cover more of her student loans. She tweeted, "#DontDoubleMyRate. Many students will see the interest rate on Fed #StudentLoans increase if Congress doesn't act by 7/1."

She not only wants me to pay for her pills, she wants me to pay for her student loans.

So here's my logic: If I'm going to pay for Sandra Fluke's birth control and student loans, I may as well adopt her for the tax write-off.

Now, if I do adopt Fluke — and she'll presumably have a say in the matter — there will be some strings attached.

See, when you're asking for cash from the "government," there are no obligations connected with those benefits.

But if you're asking me for an allowance, you will be asked to do chores. My wife is busy in medical school, and I'm working. So if Fluke wants an allowance for her birth control, she can start by doing the laundry.

At least then, my wife and I will get something out of the deal.

This is not a sexist quest — believe it or not, plenty of men do the laundry. I'm one of them. But if Fluke feels it's too degrading to do our laundry in exchange for her pills and loan subsidies, she can pick another household chore she likes better; both men and women do household chores, at least where I come from.

If government is just a name for the things we choose to do together, Sandra Fluke can choose whether to wash my dishes or balance my checkbook.

No doubt there are some who find this arrangement insulting. But it is significantly less insulting than an arrangement whereby Fluke gets something for nothing. She is not a member of my family; it is not my obligation to give her money out of some sort of kinship. She's not performing any services for me; it's not my obligation to give her money out of any sort of fairness consideration. If Fluke wants to be left to her own devices, she can damn well take her hand out of my wallet.

The truth is that capitalism, not government, is the name of the things we choose to do together. I choose to pay somebody to wash my car; that person chooses to wash my car in exchange for the cash. Government has become a name for the things we choose to leverage from one another without their consent.

So here's the deal, Sandra. I'll consent to paying for some of your expenses if I get to claim you as a dependent on my tax return.

Until then, stay out of my life, and stop pretending that you have the moral authority to deplete my bank account.

OTHER VOICES

Akron Beacon Journal, April 22

The regulators at the Federal Environmental Protection Agency listened to the concerns of the oil and gas industry.

Then, they made adjustments in proposed air quality standards for the drilling process known as hydraulic fracturing.

The result is the balanced approach unveiled last week, the industry gaining flexibility in the implementation, the agency fulfilling the mandate of the Clean Air Act, protecting public health and making an advance in mitigating climate change.

The process of fracturing involves injecting a combination of water, sand and chemicals into underground shale rock.

This is followed by a "flowback," the natural gas and other chemicals coming to the surface, resulting in emissions of methane, plus toxic, cancer-causing pollutants such as benzene and hexane.

Nearby residents, along with environmental groups, have complained about health problems and other harmful effects.

Agency officials, thus, had an obligation to act, and to consult with the industry in devising the best way forward. ...

This is a national challenge, the 13,000 wells drilled each year requiring a uniform set of rules. ...

What the EPA has achieved isn't simply a deft balancing act. It has orchestrated something consequential, no less than one of the country's most productive efforts to combat climate change.

Drug-overdose antidote is put in addicts' hands

WEST BRIDGEWATER, Mass. (AP) — Steve Wohlen lay on his front lawn, blue, unconscious and barely breathing, overdosing on heroin.

His mother ran outside, frantically assembling a pen-like canister. Her heart pounding, she dropped to her knees and used the device to deliver two squirts up her son's nostrils.

Within minutes, his eyes opened, color returned to his face, and he sat up — brought back from a potentially lethal overdose by a drug commonly known by its old brand name, Narcan.

The drug, widely sold under its generic name, naloxone, counteracts the effects of heroin, OxyContin and other powerful painkillers and has been routinely used by ambulance crews and emergency rooms in the U.S. for decades. But in the past few years, public health officials across the nation have been distributing it free to addicts and their loved ones, as well as to some police and firefighters.

Such giveaways may have saved more than 10,000 lives since the first program was started in 1996 in Chicago, according to a survey by the Harm Reduction Coalition, a national group that works to reduce the consequences of drug use.

Opponents say that making the antidote so easily available is an accommodation to drug use that could make addicts less likely to seek treatment. The objections are not unlike those raised decades ago when addicts were first issued clean needles to curb the spread of

Heroin overdose deaths in the U.S. have nearly doubled over the last decade, from 1,725 in 1999 to 3,278 in 2009

AIDS. But Wohlen and his mother see things differently.

"I just didn't want to be that mother standing next to that casket," Linda Wohlen said.

Supporters of the distribution programs say getting naloxone into drug users' homes saves lives that might otherwise be lost waiting for an ambulance.

"The question has always been: How can we get people treated before they die? If an overdose of the drug is taken at home, you won't have enough time to get that patient to the emergency room before respiratory depression leads to death," said Dr. Russell Portenoy, chairman of pain medicine at Beth Israel Medical Center in New York.

The problem has become more urgent: Heroin overdose deaths in the U.S. nearly doubled over the last decade, from 1,725 in 1999 to 3,278 in 2009, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. During the same period, deadly overdoses from opiate-like drugs, including painkillers, have nearly quadrupled, from 4,030 to 15,597.

Naloxone works by blocking certain drug receptors in the brain. It has no effect on alcohol or cocaine overdoses but can be used against such painkillers as OxyContin, Percocet and Vicodin.

Normally available only by prescription, it is issued to people like Linda Wohlen through 50 programs in more than 188 locations around the country, including Baltimore, New York and San Francisco, according to the survey, published in February by the CDC. Thousands of people have been trained to use injectable and nasal spray forms of the drug.

Other countries are also distributing the drug to the public, including Britain, Ukraine, Russia and Kazakhstan.

Most of the U.S. programs are run by state or local health departments and addiction support groups. "If you've ever talked to a parent who watched their kid overdose, you wouldn't wonder why we are doing this," said Hilary Jacobs, deputy director of the Bureau of Substance Abuse Services in Massachusetts, where state officials began a distribution program in 2007 that they say has saved about 1,300 lives. The state has spent about $841,000 issuing free naloxone, each dose costing the Public Health Department $16.

In New Mexico, which has one of the highest drug overdose death rates in the country, health officials estimate the statewide naloxone distribution program that began in 2001 has counteracted 3,000 overdoses.

In Wilkes County, N.C., an Appalachian area with an alarmingly high rate of prescription drug deaths, a nonprofit organization called Project Lazarus has taken a slightly different approach: It persuaded doctors to prescribe naloxone in tandem with painkillers to certain patients. The practice, along with an all-out education campaign, has been credited by the organization with reducing overdose deaths 69 percent between 2009 and 2011.

Fred Wells Brason II, chief executive of Project Lazarus, said he had never heard of naloxone when the group began to develop its overdose prevention plan.

"Then I found out it was used in emergency rooms to reverse opiate overdoses," he recalled. "My first question was, 'Well, that's great, but not one person from Wilkes County who overdoses made it that far. They were all found at home dead.'"

William Breault, a neighborhood activist in Worcester, Mass., opposed the distribution site set up in his city. "I just feel that the focus and our dollars should be getting people off drugs, into recovery and treatment," he said. "This policy is one of accommodation to anti-social behavior. Absolutely, it sends a false message that this is the silver bullet, this will take care of you if you overdose."

Police in Quincy, Mass., began carrying naloxone in late 2010, courtesy of the state, after grappling with one of the highest non-fatal overdose rates in Massachusetts. Since then, officers have used it to reverse 69 overdoses.

Patrolman Michael Brandolini said he once saved two people in a single day: a man whose mother found him unconscious in his bedroom, and a man lying in a snowbank.

"I think it's fine in the hands of first responders — police, fire and paramedics," Brandolini said. "Personally, I have reservations about giving it to the addicts themselves. I think it may give them a false sense of security."

He said he worries addicts will think they can administer naloxone to themselves, when it is almost always given by someone else — a friend or loved one — because the drug user loses consciousness.

Wohlen said he was angry rather than grateful when he woke up that night two years ago, his high suddenly gone, replaced by withdrawal symptoms that he described as feeling like a terrible case of the flu.

Wohlen was out on bail for robbing a fast-food restaurant when he overdosed, and was sent back to prison because of his drug use. Now serving five to seven years behind bars in Massachusetts, the 28-year-old said in a recent prison interview that he is clean and has signed up for a prison training program to learn the heating and ventilation trade.

He said the naloxone that his mother used made it possible: "I might be dead if she hadn't done it."

Slower growth in country raising concerns about jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy grew more slowly in the first three months of this year. Governments spent less, and businesses cut back on investment. But consumers spent at the fastest pace in more than a year.

The result suggests that the economy will continue to expand, slowly but steadily.

The Commerce Department estimated Friday that the economy grew at an annual rate of 2.2 percent in the January-March quarter, compared with a 3 percent gain in the final quarter of 2011. But growth is expected to rebound to around 3 percent for all of 2012 as stronger job growth spurs more consumer spending.

Consumer spending accelerated to an annual rate of 2.9 percent in the first quarter. The strength came from a second robust quarter of growth in auto purchases.

Here's what The Associated Press' reporters are finding:

NOT FAST ENOUGH

Since the Great Recession officially ended in June 2009, the fastest rate of economic growth — 3.9 percent — occurred from January through March 2010. Normally, a much bigger bounce would follow a deep recession like the one the United States sank into in December 2007.

When the economy emerged from the recession of 1981-1982, for instance, growth hit an 8 percent annual pace for four straight quarters in 1983 and 1984.

THE WEIGHT

Government spending cuts are weighing on the U.S. economy in a way that hasn't been seen in generations. Those cuts have reduced growth for six straight quarters — the longest stretch since 1955.

Reduced government spending subtracted 0.6 percentage point from the first quarter's growth.

Fortunately, the drag may decline the rest of this year. Defense spending fell sharply in the past two quarters, which isn't likely to continue. And state tax revenue is recovering, closing budget gaps.

"It's hard for the economy to accelerate when the government has its foot on the brake," said Joel Naroff, president of Naroff Economic Advisors.

SPENDING WARMS UP

A warm winter probably pulled some consumer spending into the January-March quarter that would normally have occurred this quarter. Auto sales, for example, accounted for nearly 30 percent of growth last quarter. Many car buyers probably came out earlier than usual.

"The second quarter won't have the advantage of unseasonably warm weather that likely goosed auto sales," says Beata Caranci, deputy chief economist at TD Economics.

CONCERNS

ABOUT HIRING

The disappointing GDP figure adds to doubts about the pace of job creation.

The 2.2 percent growth rate is consistent with a gain of only 100,000 jobs a month, according to Brad DeLong, an economist at the University of California, Berkeley. Yet employers added jobs at more than twice that rate from January through March. The pace might not be sustainable.

What's more, the number of people applying for unemployment benefits has risen to a three-month high. And job growth fell sharply in March after surging in January and February.

WILL FED INTERVENE?

The Federal Reserve might have to rethink its forecasts and its policies, economists say. One economist thinks the Fed is now more likely to pursue a third round of bond purchases to try to push down long-term interest rates to stimulate the economy.

It's "back on the table," says Bernard Baumohl of the Economic Outlook Group.

Assistant AG: Landowners must take care on fracking

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina landowners should be extremely careful when considering ceding drilling rights and legislators should require more information and protections for residents as the General Assembly evaluates whether to allow fracking, a state attorney said Thursday.

Lynne Weaver, assistant attorney general with the state Department of Justice's consumer protection office, presented to a legislative panel the draft of a report mandated last year by the Legislature to study consumer and legal issues associated with oil and gas exploration.

The report, combined with another study by the state Department of Environment and Natural Resources, is considered another step in the Legislature's decision-making on whether to eliminate a ban on hydraulic fracturing — another name for fracking — as soon as mid-2014. House and Senate leaders are preparing competing bills to be considered when they reconvene in three weeks.

The issues in the Department of Justice's draft report will be addressed in the House legislation, said Rep. Mitch Gillespie, R-McDowell, which is shepherding a bill that he said would require state environmental regulators to come up by December with proposed rules to authorize fracking that can be debated in 2013.

The fracking process takes chemically treated water mixed with sand deep into the ground to crack shale rock and free trapped gas. Environmental activists and many Piedmont residents are persuaded the potential damage to groundwater and air isn't worth the activity.

A draft of the state environment department report found that fracking could be done safely with the proper regulatory framework in place.

"I'm in full support of natural gas extraction and moving ahead at a reasonable way and a diligent way that tries to address every single concern we can" before it's made legal, Gillespie said.

The draft report from Weaver's office recommends requiring more upfront information during land transactions about whether mineral rights are included in any sale and giving landowners a window of time to cancel oil and gas leases to which they have agreed. National homebuilder D.R. Horton announced this week it was suspending a roughly 5-year-old practice of severing mineral rights from tracts being sold to homeowners in Piedmont counties and forwarding them to a company affiliate.

Judge may adjust Zimmerman's bond

SANFORD, Fla. (AP) — A judge is considering whether to raise or revoke the bond for George Zimmerman after his lawyer told the judge a website raised $200,000 for the defense.

Mark O'Mara told the judge Friday that Zimmerman's family hadn't told him about the money before his client was given $150,000 bond.

Florida Circuit Judge Kenneth Lester says he wants to know more about the money before he decides whether to adjust the bond. The judge will make a decision on the bond at a later date.

Zimmerman is accused of second-degree murder for the shooting death of 17-year-old Trayvon Martin, who was unarmed.

Zimmerman claims self-defense. The neighborhood watch volunteer wasn't charged for more than six weeks, leading to nationwide protests.

Conservative-leaning group launches ad

NEW YORK (AP) — A conservative-leaning independent political group is set to spend $6.1 million on a new television ad targeting President Barack Obama in eight states.

Americans for Prosperity announced Thursday that it would run the commercial in the battleground states of Colorado, Florida, Iowa, Michigan, Nevada, New Mexico, Ohio and Virginia. The ad suggests money from Obama's $814 billion economic stimulus package went to overseas green-energy companies.

Americans for Prosperity was founded by the billionaire oil industry brothers Charles and David Koch. The group spent $6.5 million earlier this year on ads criticizing Obama over Solyndra, a California-based solar energy company that went bankrupt despite a $535 million federal loan guarantee.

Western Pa. dad jailed over duct-taped toddler

CHICORA, Pa. (AP) — A western Pennsylvania man is jailed on charges including child endangerment after state police say he bound his 17-month-old son with duct tape then took a picture of the boy using his wife's cell phone.

Online court records don't list an attorney for 24-year-old Joshua Maxwell Miller, of Sugarcreek Township, who was charged Tuesday after a relative of his wife forwarded the picture to state troopers based in Kittanning.

Police say Miller told them he was only joking when he bound the boy's hands behind his back and covered his eyes with tape on Saturday. But Miller's wife told police she was "sickened" by the photo and forwarded it to a relative's cell phone because she feared her husband would delete it.

Police say Miller did just that when she confronted him Monday, prompting a relative to contact police.

East Palestine appoints schools superintendent

By KATIE SCHWENDEMAN
Staff Writer

EAST PALESTINE — The village school district has hired a new superintendent.

During a special meeting Thursday the board of education unanimously approved hiring Bellville resident George E. Fisk.

The former elementary and behavioral intervention teacher is currently employed as primary principal of Ontario Local Schools in Mansfield.

Fisk attended Ohio University and Ashland University and has coached varsity girls golf and eighth-grade girls basketball. He will replace Tom Inchak, who announced his resignation in December.

Prior to being hired with the district five years ago Inchak was superintendent of the Leetonia district. He was earning a state retirement pension while working as superintendent here, board President Ron Novak said.

Treasurer Rick Ellis estimated Inchak's annual salary at $87,500.

The board awarded a five-year contract to Fisk, effective Aug. 1. He will receive an annual salary of $92,000 the first year, $93,000 the second and $94,000 the final three years. The contract includes 30 vacation days, half pickup on state benefits, fully board paid Medicare and a 403(b) retirement.

Inchak does not receive Medicare or 403(b) benefits through the district, Ellis said.

Novak said Fisk's salary is based on what is "normal" for the area.

"We feel we need to be competitive. He is moving from two hours away," he said.

The board also approved hiring Fisk as interim superintendent on an as-needed basis from May 1 through July 31 on a daily rate of $360. Some of those days will cover time when Inchak uses his remaining vacation days.

Parents, students and staff had the opportunity to meet with Fisk and some of his relatives following the short meeting.

"As a family we are excited to relocate to East Palestine and can't wait to get started," he said.

Fisk beat out Damascus Elementary principal Matthew Bowen for the position.

House OKs student loan bill; ignores threat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans defied a veto threat and the House voted Friday to prevent federal loan costs from doubling for millions of college students.

The vote gave the GOP a momentary election-year triumph on a bill that has become enmeshed in partisan battles over the economy, women's issues and President Barack Obama's health care overhaul.

The measure's 215-195 passage was largely symbolic because the package is going nowhere in the Democratic-dominated Senate.

Both parties agree students' interest costs should not rise, but they are clashing along a familiar fault line over how to cover the $5.9 billion tab: Republicans want spending cuts and Democrats want higher revenues.

Friday's vote underscored how with Election Day just over six months away, much of Congress' work and passion can be aimed as much at political positioning as it is at writing law.

Both parties want to show they are trying to help college students and their families cope in today's unforgiving economy and, when possible, force their opponents to cast votes that might create fodder for TV attack ads.

The GOP bill would keep interest rates for subsidized Stafford loans at 3.4 percent for another year, rather than automatically growing to 6.8 percent on July 1 as they would under a law enacted five years ago by a Democratic Congress.

The increase would affect 7.4 million students and, the Obama administration says, cost each an average $1,000 over the life of their loans.

Democrats trained their fire on the Republican plan to pay for the bill by abolishing a preventive health fund created by Obama's 2010 revamping of the health care system.

Democrats said that program especially helped women by allocating money for cancer screening and other initiatives and that eliminating it was only the latest GOP blow against women — a charge Republicans hotly contested.

"Give me a break," roared House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, to rousing cheers from Republican lawmakers. "This is the latest plank in the so-called war on women, entirely created by my colleagues across the aisle for political gain."

Democrats voted solidly earlier this year to take money from the preventive health fund to help keep doctors' Medicare reimbursements from dropping. Obama's own budget in February proposed cutting $4 billion from the same fund to pay for some of his priorities.

Since the early days of this year's GOP presidential contest, Democrats have been accusing Republicans of targeting women by advocating curbs on contraceptives and other policies. Polls show women leaning heavily toward Obama and Democrats would like to stoke that margin.

In its veto message, the White House argued that "women in particular" would be helped by the prevention fund and added, "This is a politically motivated proposal and not the serious response that the problem facing America's college students deserves."

House GOP leaders abruptly scheduled Friday's vote after Obama barnstormed around the country in recent days to accuse them of ignoring students' needs.

Presumptive GOP presidential candidate Mitt Romney began the week by saying he, too, wanted current interest rates extended temporarily, heaping further pressure on congressional Republicans to act.

Democrats said Republicans only staged Friday's vote to remove it as an issue on which they would be vulnerable.

They noted this month's lock-step GOP vote for a 2013 federal budget that would have let Stafford interest rates double in July, and said Republicans had done little in Congress on the issue until this week.

"They're just looking for a way to cover their rear ends," said Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif.

Republicans said they were working methodically on the problem and accused Democrats of inventing a controversy to stir up their voters.

"People want to politicize this because it is an election year. But my God, do we have to fight about everything?" said Boehner.

Democrats broke 165-13 against the bill, with some of their members reluctant to vote against keeping students' costs down, despite the accompanying health care cuts.

Democrats wrote a version of the bill, paid for by ending subsidies for oil and gas companies.

It never had a chance of moving through the GOP-led House.

Senate Democrats plan a vote next month on their own legislation extending today's interest rates for a year and paid for by making it harder for high-earning owners of many privately owned corporations to shield some of their income from Social Security and Medicare payroll taxes.

That vote will also be little more than political posturing because Senate Republicans are certain to derail the measure.

House Republicans prevailed Friday only after staunching a brewing rebellion among their own conservatives, many of whom are skeptical about whether the government should subsidize student loans at all.

A lobbying campaign by outside conservative groups like Club for Growth and Heritage Action for America pressured GOP lawmakers to vote "no."

But an 11th-hour effort by GOP leaders to keep their rank-and-file onboard prevailed and Republicans ended up backing the legislation 202-30 — with half the opposition coming from the feisty, largely conservative GOP class of freshmen.

"The government doesn't belong in that business," said Rep. Paul Gosar, R-Ariz.

Two armed suspects surrender in Ohio bank standoff

SPRINGBORO, Ohio (AP) — Two armed bank robbery suspects surrendered peacefully Friday after nearly five hours in a standoff with police in southwest Ohio, authorities said.

The two men, who had barricaded themselves in a Fifth Third Bank branch in the Dayton suburb of Springboro after attempting to rob the bank Friday morning, walked out of the bank about 1:30 p.m. and were taken into custody, police said.

No hostages were taken, and no injuries were reported, according to police. No information was immediately available Friday on any charges in the case or on the identities of the suspects.

The suspects entered the bank about 8:30 a.m. after trying to overpower a manager who was letting himself into the bank for work, John DiPietro, deputy chief of police for Miami Township in Montgomery County, told The Cincinnati Enquirer. DiPietro served as public information officer for Springboro police during the standoff.

The manager was able to escape, but the suspects barricaded themselves in the building, DiPietro said.

Nearby businesses, including a preschool, were locked down during the standoff and a shopping center next to the bank closed, the Dayton Daily News reported. Springboro is about 20 miles south of Dayton. The FBI and officers from other area law enforcement agencies were at the scene along with a SWAT team as authorities negotiated with the suspects.

Lawyer: Cages OK at site of Ohio exotics release

COLUMBUS, (AP) — An attorney for a suicidal animal owner's widow who is seeking the return of exotic animals that survived an October release said she has adequate cages for them at her eastern Ohio farm, according to a letter obtained by The Associated Press.

Three leopards, two primates and a bear survived the release of dozens of wild creatures in Zanesville. They have been under a state-issued quarantine at the Columbus zoo. One leopard was euthanized after it was struck by a door at the zoo.

Attorney Robert McClelland wrote to Ohio officials last week on behalf of his client, Marian Thompson.

The state's agriculture director told him earlier this month that the Ohio Department of Agriculture required proof of the arrangements Thompson has made for the animals' confinement and care. The department has scheduled an administrative hearing for Monday on Thompson's request.

Thompson's husband, Terry Thompson, freed bears, lions, endangered Bengal tigers and other animals on Oct. 18 before killing himself. Authorities were forced to shoot 48 of the creatures as they moved into the community.

McClelland told an attorney for the agriculture department in a letter dated April 18 that the animals now held by the zoo were not harmed in the October release because they were in proper cages.

"A limited number of cages were harmed during the incident and there are plenty of alternative cages to safely secure the few remaining animals," McClelland wrote. The AP obtained McClelland's letter and the April 4 letter from the state's agriculture director on Friday.

Senior Citizens Prom to be held May 19

The Interact Club at Salem High School is hosting the annual Senior Citizens Prom this year on Saturday, May 19 from 5-9:30 p.m. at the Salem High School cafeteria. The theme of the prom is "Welcome to the Wild West." Get ready to have some boot scootin', two-stepping fun, and be sure to put on your country western wear! Jack Halkides' band from the Canton Federation of Musicians Local 111 will be providing the entertainment again this year. Food, dessert, and beverages will also be served. Admission is free to all senior citizens. Tickets will be available in the cafeteria at Salem High School on Thursday, May 10 and Tuesday, May 15 from 3-4:30 p.m. Any senior citizen who is not able to pick up tickets during those times can call Interact advisor, Robert Viencsek, at 330-332-4723 to make other arrangements.

As a special addition to this year's prom, local line dancer and teacher, Susan Ebright, along with some of her senior students will be attending to both teach and perform line dances. For anyone wishing to join in the fun, a free line dancing class taught by Susan Ebright will be offered at the Salem Community Center on May 1 from 3-5 p.m. She will also be teaching a short class on the day of the prom at the Salem High School cafeteria beginning at 4 p.m. The Salem High School Interact Club is sponsored by the Rotary Club of Salem. Interact is an international organization of service and social club for young people of secondary school age that fosters leadership and responsible citizenship as well as promotes international understanding and peace.

Dinner planned to support Adopt-A-School Water project

The Water and Sanitation Rotarian Action Group's goal is to address the urgent need for safe water, sanitation and hygiene education in schools in developing countries and to bring 19 million liters of clean water and sanitation service to 30 schools in Malawi and Tanzania. The Rotary Club of Salem has partnered with East Liverpool and Calcutta Rotary clubs to adopt-a-school in Tanzania. The Ibhwa Primary School serves 531 students and has only a shallow well for water and three pit holes for sanitation. The school needs to improve the water and to provide the students and teachers with 20 pit latrines and two hand wash facilities.

The Salem Rotary is committed to raise $1,000 as its share of this project through a chicken and biscuit dinner, which will be held on Tuesday, May 22 from 5-7 p.m. at the First Presbyterian Church on Second Street. Tickets are $8.50 each and will be available from Rotary members or by calling 330-337-3473. If you wish to make a monetary contribution to this project, please send your donation to the Rotary Club of Salem, P.O. Box 1025, Salem, Ohio 44460.

Salem Rotary Club hosts annual Career Day

The Salem Rotary Club held its annual Career Day event on April 20 at Kent State City Center with more than 150 juniors from Salem High School participating in this day-long educational program.

In the morning, students listened to presentations on scholarships available through the Salem High School Alumni Association and Salem Community Foundation, career opportunities and job prospects, what employers want and how to get a job, and how to get the skills and training needed to succeed.

After lunch, the students attended career sessions where professionals from selected fields discussed their careers and what it is like to work in their field, the educational requirements, and the future of the field.

The presenters also provided recommendations for students interested in pursuing a job in the given field. The impact of the event is well summed up by a few of the post program evaluations including "Epic": "I learned there are many different paths to take to a career." Also, "your education never stops going."

The club thanks the more than 50 professionals from the community who took their time to help our young people by being part of this event.

Dropped in Atlanta

Pirates fall 6-1 to Braves in road tilt

ATLANTA (AP) — Tommy Hanson allowed one run in six innings, Dan Uggla and Chipper Jones came through in a four-run seventh, and the streaking Atlanta Braves defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-1 Friday night.

The Braves won for the 13th time in 16 games after an 0-4 start — their worst since 1988.

Hanson (3-2) worked around six hits and three walks, his only blemish an RBI single by Garrett Jones in the fourth. Kris Medlen worked the final three innings, earning his first career save. Uggla and Jones drove in two runs apiece in the seventh to break open a 2-1 game.

A.J. Burnett (1-1) went six innings for the Pirates, pitching well but not enough to prevent his eighth loss in nine career decisions at Turner Field.

The Braves were clinging to a 2-1 lead when they broke it open against the Pittsburgh bullpen in the seventh. After Tony Watson gave up a single and walked consecutive batters to load the bases, the Pirates brought in right-hander Evan Meek to face Uggla.

Bad move. Uggla lined a double to right-center, two runs coming home to make it 4-1. Jones followed with a hit past the drawn-in third baseman, driving in two more runs.

Burnett matched Hanson's line as far as hits (six) and walks (three). But the Braves manufactured a couple of runs against the right-hander, who hasn't won at Turner Field since Oct. 7, 2001, with the Marlins. He has lost six straight decisions in Atlanta.

The Braves pounced when Tyler Pastornicky walked in the third. Hanson put down a sacrifice bunt, the runner moved to third on Michael Bourn's groundout, and Martin Prado came through with the two-out single to right.

Atlanta was even more resourceful in the fourth. Jason Heyward walked with two outs, stole second and raced home when Pastornicky lined a hit into right-center, the ball just clearing the glove of leaping second baseman Neil Walker.

The Pirates scored their lone run in the top half of the fourth. Andrew McCutchen singled, stole second and scored on Jones' run-scoring single. The Pirates were poised for a really big inning when Hanson walked Pedro Alvarez and Casey McGehee to load the

Cabrera's hit in ninth gives Indians 3-2 win

CLEVELAND (AP) — Asdrubal Cabrera singled home the winning run with one out in the ninth inning and the Cleveland Indians beat the struggling Los Angeles Angels 3-2 Friday night.

Albert Pujols went 1 for 4 as Los Angeles lost its fifth straight. He is homerless in 20 games since signing a $240 million, 10-year contract to join the Angels — his longest drought to start a season.

Aaron Cunningham

opened the ninth against David Carpenter (0-1) by doubling over leaping left fielder Vernon Wells at the wall. Michael Brantley lined out to center before Jason Kipnis singled. Angels shortstop Erick Aybar got a glove on the line drive, slowing the ball down and preventing Cunningham from scoring.

Cabrera hit a 2-0 pitch to right, making the Indians 6-0 in one-run games and the Angels 0-6.

Vinnie Pestano (1-0) struck out the only two batters he faced for the win.

Wolfe to Denver

Beaver Local grad drafted by Broncos

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. (AP) — The Denver Broncos' surprise second-round pick even caught the player off guard.

Versatile defensive lineman Derek Wolfe didn't have many conversations with his new employer leading up to being selected at No. 36 overall on Friday night. Maybe one, but not nearly as many as he had with other teams.

So when his name was called, well, he was a little bit shocked.

Pleasantly, of course.

"I know I can make a difference," said Wolfe, who was a standout at Cincinnati. "I'm ready for the opportunity."

In Wolfe, the Broncos receive a speedy 6-foot-5, 300-pound lineman who can play both tackle and end. But the Broncos stunned many draft experts by taking Wolfe so early in the second round when he might have been available at No. 57 when the team picks again.

And there were far more highly touted defensive tackles still on the board — Jerel Worthy of Michigan State and Kendall Reyes of Con-board after 36 holes. It's the weekends that have given him fits.

AVONDALE, La. (AP) — Jason Dufner is in familiar territory atop the leader-

Dufner moved into position for another bid to win his first PGA Tour title, shooting a 7-under 65 on Friday to take the second-round lead in the Zurich Classic.

The former Auburn player has had at least a share of the 36-hole lead in two of his last four tournaments, including the Masters, where he closed with consecutive 75s. He's second on the tour in pre-cut scoring, but 98th in third rounds and 108th in final rounds.

"It's been a difficult weekend for me the last month and a half or so," Dufner said. "I haven't quite played as well as I would have liked, but I know that my game is still pretty good."

"I've been trying to think about what I can do better mentally, what I can do better emotionally out there and learn from some things that I maybe struggled with. Obviously, there's a lot of different things that go into matter where he lines up. He just wants playing time.

Not only that, but he comes with a chip on his shoulder, since he believed he was a first-round talent who slipped into the second day of the draft.

"I was a little upset," said Wolfe, who was the Big East's co-defensive player of the year after a final season in which he had 9½ sacks and 21½ tackles for loss for the Bearcats. "I'm not the type of guy to sit around and wait. I want to get in the mix.

"I'm going to try to learn from everybody. Just try to do everything I can to help us win a championship."

Building and bolstering the defense could be the next step to making that happen.

See, the Broncos already have a potent offense with Peyton Manning leading the way.

Now, they're trying to strengthen the other side of the ball so Manning doesn't have to score each time he gets the ball.

Wolfe will be part of a defensive tackle rotation that will include Justin Bannan, Ty Warren and Kevin Vickerson.

The 22-year-old Wolfe had a solid performance at the combine, possibly jumping him up the draft board. He ran the 40-yard dash in 5.01 seconds and bench pressed 225 pounds 33 times.

"I think what the combine did was just make (teams) go back and really look at my film, see the things I actually did," Wolfe said.

"See how much I loved the game. I don't take plays off. I play like every play is going to be my last snap. That's the way I play. I think they really realized it once they saw how I moved, the way I performed and reacted to things."

Browns select Cal OT Schwartz

Team also takes Cincinnati DT John Hughes

BEREA (AP) — Mitchell Schwartz has much more experience playing left offensive tackle. Sorry, Cleveland Browns are all set there.

One day after selecting running back Trent Richardson and quarterback Brandon Weeden, the Browns picked someone to block for their precious first-round picks, selecting Schwartz, a massive tackle from California, in the second round of the NFL draft on Friday. Schwartz made 51 starts — 35 at left tackle and 16 at right — in four years for the Golden Bears. The Browns have five-time Pro Bowler Joe Thomas on the left side, so Schwartz will slide to the right.

"I'm comfortable doing either," Schwartz said on a conference call. "But Cleveland obviously has probably the best left tackle in the game so I can understand my role."

The 6-foot-5, 318-pound Schwartz will help open holes for Richardson and keep defenders off Weeden, who were introduced to the Cleveland media earlier in the day.

Although they need a wide receiver and may address that with their picks today, the Browns decided to fill their opening on the line. Schwartz will fill the starting spot vacated by Tony Pashos, who was let go last month after playing all season with a torn foot tendon. Schwartz has strong bloodlines. His brother, Geoff, plays for the Minnesota Vikings.

Schwartz said following his brother into the league has its benefits.

"I got really lucky having an older brother who has been through the whole process already," he said, speaking over the phone from his home in Los Angeles. "Coming out of high school I knew what to expect with recruiting and now going into the NFL, I have a pretty good understanding of what to expect."

"He's kind of been there and done that and I can learn a little bit from mistakes. It definitely gives me a little bit of a leg up."

Schwartz played two seasons at Cal with Browns center Alex Mack.

Meanwhile, Richardson and Weeden arrived in Cleveland as new teammates. The college stars had been together at the Browns' facility for their pre-draft visit, not knowing they would be reunited after the team made bold moves to select them in the first round to usher in a new era of football along Lake Erie.

After posing for photos with Browns coach Pat Shurmur, Richardson discussed his plans to become the next great running back in Cleveland's rich history.

Although Hall of Fame running back Jim Brown described him as "ordinary" before the draft, Richardson, who went to the same Florida high school as another Hall of Famer, Emmitt Smith, said he aspires for greatness.

"I can be one of those guys who you can mention my name with Emmitt Smith, or Marshall Faulk or all of those great guys," Richardson said. "Even the great Jim Brown, when it comes down to it. There is only one thing you can take to the grave with you, and that's your last name. How your name is remembered, that's on you."

Richardson recalled his struggles on the way to starring at Alabama. He overcame two severe ankle injuries early in high school that jeopardized his career, and avoided other temptations. The stout, 5-foot-9 Richardson talked about how his young daughters, 5-year-old Taliyah and 3-year-old Elevera, have motivated him to be a better man and player.

"I had two screws in both my ankles and I didn't know where my life was going to be," he said. "I had my first child when I was a sophomore in high school, so it was going to be either I hung around a wrong crowd, which I wasn't raised that way, and try to get fast money. Or, I could go make something out of myself and go be a grown man and handle my responsibilities. I stood up to the plate and my little girls are happy now."

The 28-year-old Weeden called it "an honor" to be selected by the Browns, who nabbed the Oklahoma State QB at No. 22 and intend to make him their starter.

Weeden was as poised answering questions as he appears to be in the pocket. It all comes naturally to the former baseball pitcher, who was drafted by the New York Yankees in 2002 but never made it out of the low minor leagues.

It was while playing for High Desert (A) in 2006, when Weeden realized baseball was not going to pay the bills.

"The worst experience of my life," he said. "The wind blew out about 55 miles per hour every night and I gave up three broken-bat home runs. My ERA was like something astronomical, something like a 5.60. I said, 'You know what? It's not going to happen. I am not going to make it.' So I came home."

He told his wife, Melanie, he wanted to go back to college — and play football. Now that Weeden's in Cleveland, it may not be long before incumbent starter Colt McCoy is not.

The Browns have had internal discussions about trading McCoy. However, Shurmur insisted the team has not called any prospective teams about a deal for McCoy, who went 6-15 in two inconsistent seasons.

"We haven't made any plans to do anything about anything yet," he said. "We haven't made any phone calls, we haven't done anything in regards to Colt."

Shurmur said he spoke to McCoy, who was making a planned trip this weekend to Dallas, where he has family. "He's fine," Shurmur said.

Browns take Hughes

BEREA, Ohio (AP) — The Cleveland Browns have selected Cincinnati defensive tackle John Hughes in the third round of the NFL draft.

Instead of adding depth at wide receiver and passing on some possible targets for new quarterback Brandon Weeden earlier in the round, the Browns traded the No. 67 pick to Denver to drop 20 spots and get Hughes, a 6-foot-2, 309-pound run stopper. Cleveland also acquired pick No. 120 (fourth round) in the deal.

General manager Tom Heckert called Hughes "a big, tough, powerful guy."

Hisanori Takahashi and scored on a double by Brantley.

Kevin Jepsen then yielded an RBI single to Kipnis that tied it at 2.

Weaver went six scoreless innings, allowing seven hits, walking four and striking out eight.

drought in 21 years. They also went without a homer for nine games in June 1991.

Cleveland got three hits and a walk in the second inning off Angels starter Jered Weaver and failed to score. Brantley singled and was thrown out trying to steal second as Kipnis struck out. Cabrera then singled and Travis Hafner walked. Carlos Santana singled to right, but Cabrera was easily thrown out at the plate by Hunter to end the inning.

In the first, the Indians got two hits and two walks off Weaver and didn't score. Kipnis grounded into a double play and Jack Hannahan struck out with the bases loaded.

TRIBE FROM 1B

He replaced Justin Masterson after the Indians starter walked Kendrys Morales and Peter Bourjos in the ninth. Pestano fanned Vernon Wells and Aybar to keep it tied at 2.

Right fielder Torii Hunter drove in two runs and threw out a runner trying to score for the Angels.

Pujols lined a two-out single in the first and scored on a single to right by Hunter, who was out trying for second.

Despite the hit, it extended Pujols' homerless drought to a career-worst 109 at-bats. He has not connected since Sept. 22 last year with St. Louis.

Pujols, who on Thursday snapped his career-worst hitless streak at 21 at-bats with a ground single against Tampa Bay, has not homered in 20 games and 80 at-bats in an Angels uniform. He had a 105-at-bat drought April 23 to May 23 last year — then rebounded to help the Cardinals win the World Series.

The big first baseman made a good play in the field to keep the game tied in the eighth.

With runners on first and third, he ranged far to his right to field a bouncer off the bat of Casey Kotchman and threw to second for the inning-ending force play.

winning besides hitting the golf ball."

Dufner lost a playoffs last year to Mark Wilson in the Phoenix Open and Keegan Bradley in the PGA Championship for two of his three runner-up finishes in 163 starts on the PGA Tour.

On Friday, he capped his bogey-free round with a 30-foot eagle putt on the par-5 18th to reach 12 under.

"I had a couple of easy birdies," Dufner said. "I don't think I missed a fairway or a green. Just had some tough reads. The greens are kind of tough to read. Sometimes you get competing grains, competing slopes, so you get a putt that might break to the right, but the grain is going left. That can be kind of difficult to judge. Then 18, I had just a really good number for my 5-wood to get somewhere on that green and had a putt that was down grain and breaking to the left with the grain, so that was a nice way to finish the day."

PGA Tour rookie Russell Knox, John Rollins and first-round co-leader Ken Duke were tied for second. Knox shot a career-best 64, Rollins 66 and Duke 68.

Greg Chalmers holed out for an eagle on the par-4 first and also finished with a 64 to join Steve Stricker and Ernie Els at 10 under. Stricker and Els shot 68.

Knox and Chalmers matched the course record. Defending champion

Bubba Watson had his second consecutive 71 to make the cut on the number at 2 under in his first tournament since his playoff victory in the Masters.

Second-ranked Luke Donald rebounded from an opening 73 with a 65 to reach 6 under. Donald, tied for 22nd, needs to finish sixth or better to regain the top spot in the world from Rory McIlroy.

Knox, a Nationwide Tour graduate playing in his ninth tournament, had seven birdies and an eagle — on No. 18 — along with one bogey.

"You never plan on shooting a 64, it kind of happens and I'm happy it did," Knox said. "I haven't played well this year so far, but it's been the best year of my life."

Stricker had four consecutive birdies beginning on the seventh to move into a tie with Dufner, then missed a 2-foot birdie putt on the 11th that would have given him sole possession of the lead. Stricker stumbled home with bogeys on the 12th and 15th.

"I played really solid all the way through 11 and then missed that putt and kind of lost my thought process there for a little bit," Stricker said. "Felt like I let a really good one slip away today."

Donald also holed out from the fairway on the first hole, marking the first two eagles on the hole since the tournament was first played at the course in 2005.

Watson, away from his wife and recently adopted son after taking a two-week break following the Masters, eagled the seventh and birdied the eight, but bogeyed the 10th when he missed the green from 47 yards on his approach. He also three-putted the 12th for another bogey, moving him to 1 under, one above the cut line.

"Mentally, I've lost focus just about every shot, so I'm trying to figure it out," Watson said. "I want to be home with my son and wife. I know it sounds like a cop-out but I'm not playing very good because I'm just really not into it."

Watson also struck a fan in the head with a hooked drive.

Watson's tee shot on the second hole at the TPC Louisiana drew blood from the back of Radd Leonard's head. Leonard, who was reached quickly by medics, said he was fine and found it incredible that he was hit in the head by the very player he came to see. The 52-year-old motorcycle shop owner from Baton Rouge also was glad he was able to help Watson back into the fairway, where the ball landed after striking him.

"I saw it coming and it looked like it was hooking right at me. I wanted to see that big hook, you know, and I got to see it. I turned and ducked and it still hit me," Leonard said. "It gave him a good bounce, anyway."

Watson walked over toward Leonard, put on a new golf glove, signed it, then took it off and gave it to Leonard and shook his hand. Watson's caddie, Ted Scott, drew laughter when he instructively pointed farther down the fairway and said, "We're glad you're all right, but if you could just angle your head a little differently ..."

John Daly, playing on a sponsor's exemption, missed the cut. He followed his opening 73 with an 80.

Pirates OF prospect Bell undergoes knee surgery

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Pirates outfield prospect Josh Bell underwent surgery on to repair a torn meniscus in his left knee and will be out for several weeks.

The 19-year-old Bell was injured while running the bases in a game on Tuesday while playing for Single-A West Virginia. Bell was hitting .274 with one homer and 11 RBI in 15 games at the time of the injury.

The Pirates selected Bell with the 61st overall pick of the 2011 in the MLB draft and inked him to a $5 million signing bonus, enough to convince Bell to take a stab at baseball instead of playing college football at Texas.

Bell will undergo rehab in Bradenton, but is expected to return to West Virginia later this season.

Steelers draft OSU tackle Mike Adams

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers had no interest in drafting Ohio State's Mike Adams after the talented but troubled offensive tackle tested positive for marijuana at the NFL Combine in February.

When Adams reached out to the Steelers for a second interview, the Steelers agreed though general manager Kevin Colbert told Adams "you're off our draft board."

During the meeting Colbert, coach Mike Tomlin and owner Art Rooney II outlined a set of criteria Adams needed to meet if he wanted to get back on the board. Consider it done.

Convinced Adams wants to turn his life around, the Steelers selected him in the second round on Friday with the 56th overall pick in the draft. While acknowledging Adams' checkered past — he missed five games last season while serving an NCAA suspension for receiving improper benefits — the Steelers also believe he's serious about turning his life around.

Though allowing the team's relationship with Adams is a "day-to-day process," Colbert thinks the gamble will pay off.

"It's more a risk than we're usually comfortable in taking but again because he was forthcoming, because he took matters and met our criteria, we're comfortable in taking the risk," Colbert said.

The 6-foot-7, 323-pound Adams is the fourth high draft pick the Steelers have used on an offensive lineman in the last three years. Pittsburgh drafted Stanford guard David DeCastro in the first round on Thursday, joining 2010 first-round pick Maurkice Pouncey and 2011 second-round pick Marcus Gilbert.

Adams was an All-Big Ten selection in 2010 and made the second team last year despite being limited to eight games following the suspension.

Offensive line coach Sean Kugler said Adams received a "first-round grade" during his evaluation because of his size and agility even as his character issues dropped him to the latter stages of the second round.

"He's a physical player and that's a size combination that's tough to beat at the tackle position," Kugler said.

The Steelers are looking for some stability along the line after a bumpy 2011 in which the line struggled to stay healthy and had issues protecting quarterback Ben Roethlisberger.

Pittsburgh gave up 42 sacks and struggled running the ball effectively in the red zone. Injuries to Pouncey, right tackle Willie Colon, guard Doug Legursky and guard Chris Kemoatu forced the Steelers to constantly shift roles along the line to plug a hole during a given week.

The addition of Adams and DeCastro gives Pittsburgh depth and flexibility.

"We're adding two guys who are going to help us along the offensive line," Kugler said. "I promise we'll get the right guys in the right position ... I know there's been a lot of shuffling but that's been out of necessity, not out of plan."

Steelers draft LB Sean Spence

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers have taken Miami (Fla.) linebacker Sean Spence in the third round of the NFL Draft.

The Steelers chose Spence with the 86th overall pick.

Spence will give Pittsburgh some depth at inside linebacker following the release of veteran James Farrior. Spence will compete with Stevenson Sylvester for a backup spot behind Lawrence Timmons and Larry Foote.

The 5-foot-11, 231-pound Spence started 40 games during his career with the Hurricanes and ranks 11th in school history with 318 tackles, including a team-high 106 tackles as a senior last fall.

Linebackers coach Keith Butler says he sees Spence eventually working behind Timmons and is impressed with Spence's speed, which should be a plus on special teams.

Cavaliers sticking to plan after tough season

INDEPENDENCE, Ohio (AP) — They suffered through costly injuries, a relentlessly brutal schedule and lopsided losses.

The Cleveland Cavaliers didn't finish the season as much as they survived it. "A grind," said coach Byron Scott.

It ended with a 32-point loss in Chicago and a roster that included eight players who spent part of the season in the NBA's Developmental League. But the Cavs, who went 8-28 after Feb. 21, found some optimism despite a 21-45 record that will place them in the NBA's draft lottery for the second straight season.

Kyrie Irving brought the Cavs hope.

The No. 1 overall pick in last year's draft, Irving was the league's top first-year player — by a longshot. Fearless with the ball in his hands, the 20-year-old, who played in just 11 games as a freshman at Duke before going pro, averaged 18.5 points, 5.4 assists, 3.7 rebounds and shot 87 percent from the free-throw line.

Beyond his statistics, Irving convinced the Cavaliers that the worst is behind them and they'll return to the playoffs one day.

Not now. But soon.

"We're headed in the right direction," Scott said Friday, speaking to reporters after meeting individually with his players. "It's still going to be a long process, guys. We're probably not going to be there this coming year, but if we hit home runs in the draft it puts us in a position to get much better quicker."

The Cavs will have two first-round picks and general manager Chris Grant estimated the team will be around $20 million under the salary cap. It can't hurt to have a little luck along the way, which is what happened a year ago when the Ping-Pong balls bounced Cleveland's way in the lottery and they drafted Irving.

Only a few hours into the offseason the Cavs have already had some good fortune.

On Friday, they won two tiebreaker drawings at the league offices in New York that will improve their position in the June 28 draft. The Cavs won a drawing against New Orleans and are slotted to choose third overall if no team jumps them in the May 30 lottery.

Also, the pick Cleveland got from the Los Angeles Lakers in the trade for guard Ramon Sessions will be No. 24 overall after the Lakers won a tiebreaker over Memphis.

Cleveland was represented at the drawings by owner Dan Gilbert's son, Nick, who was the lucky charm last year when the Cavs won the lottery. The lowest the Cavs will select is No. 6, a pick that should give them another player to pair with Irving.

"We're looking forward to the draft," said Grant, who will have three picks in the top 34. "We're excited about where we are and we understand we have a lot of heavy lifting to do, but we feel good about the direction."

bases with one out, but Rod Barajas grounded into a double play.
The Braves ended the seventh and eighth with stellar defensive plays.
Ugla went flying out into short center to make a diving grab on Nate McLouth popup, managing to hang on even after Pastornicky tumbled over him. Then it was Jones, three days removed from his 40th birthday, making a diving catch on a liner by McCutchen.
NOTES: McGehee was dropped to seventh in the order, the lowest the first baseman has batted this season. McGehee usually hits fourth or fifth, but manager Clint Hurdle decided to shake things up against the right-handed Hanson. Jones batted fourth, followed by Walker and Alvarez, giving the Pirates three straight left-handed hitters before McGehee. ... Pirates minor league OF Josh Bell underwent surgery Friday to repair the meniscus in his left knee. He will be return to the Pirates' spring training base in Bradenton, Fla., to begin his rehab and is expected to return this season. ... In the second of four games at Turner Field, Pittsburgh will send Erik Bedard (0-4) to the mound against Atlanta's Randall Delgado (2-1) on Saturday.

"How could we possibly be out of marshmallows?"

HOROSCOPE

By HOLIDAY MATHIS 4/28/12

The void-of-course Cancer moon makes for a hazy, emotionally unfocused morning...

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You're a sponge for knowledge now, and you'll learn from those who have what you want.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). When you have a plan and follow it, you'll feel productive.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You won't do things in the expected order, but you'll get them done nonetheless.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Most people think it's important to be right, but they're wrong about that.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Your standards of style come into play. You may like someone very much, but you won't take the relationship to the next level until you're satisfied that your styles will mesh well.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Your skills get rusty if you don't use them. You're in just the mood to freshen up your bag of tricks.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Writing-to-do items down on paper seems so "old school" in today's high-tech world.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You'll spend a fair amount of time looking at the big picture.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You are still being too hard on yourself, expecting maximum productivity without allowing time to laugh, kick back and recuperate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You have that special charisma that makes people give you their full attention.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Once you fully bond with someone, it's next to impossible to separate you permanently from that person.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You feel a strong empathy with someone who is going through an intense experience.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (April 28). Operating in groups will be a specialty, and you'll be an integral part of a winning team this year.

STRESS AND YOUR SIGN: Each sign is different when it comes to stress. What one sign considers taxing another finds exciting, and tension remedies vary from sign to sign.

PISCES: GOOD STRESS: Limbo Land is the place between places that many people can't bear to think about, let alone experience.

BAD STRESS: Being separated from loved ones is what causes Pisces the most stress.

STRESS REMEDY: Pisces relieves stress through artistic expression. Doing this with regularity ensures that Pisces becomes not only calmer and more centered, but quite masterful at whatever craft he or she chooses.

Yes, game of golf is true exercise

Dr. Donohue

DEAR DR. DONOHUE:

What's your opinion on golf being real exercise? I believe it has next to nothing to offer when it comes to conditioning or to health in general.

planet. Just how many calories do players burn in 18 holes? I respect your judgment.

ANSWER: I got it. You don't like golf. I consider golf true exercise.

President George H.W. Bush is said to have played golf at unbelievable speed. He was once clocked at finishing 18 holes in less than an hour and a half.

The calorie cost of walking 18 holes is estimated at 300 calories an hour. The first time I read that, I was incredulous.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am retired. I decided to take up golf at this late stage in my life.

ANSWER: I can't be definite about the diagnosis for your wrist pain. I can tell you what I think it might be.

The cause is a stress fracture of one of the wrist bones. Stress fractures are tiny breaks in the bone.

You have to get a doctor's examination to substantiate my guess. You ought to have such an exam soon.

Irrational animosity dividing this family

DEAR ABBY: My mother has never liked her sister-in-law. Mom thinks "Auntie Beth" is "completely out to get her," even though no one has seen any evidence to support my mother's claims.

DEAR SICK OF THE DRAMA: Your mother's behavior appears to have escalated from disliking Aunt Beth to obsessive and paranoid.

DEAR ABBY: I have started a relationship and am falling in love. I have known "Willa" for a few years, but we never really hung out before this.

DEAR WANTS ANSWERS: Unless Willa intended to make a full disclosure, she shouldn't have teased you by making you curious.

DEAR WANTS ANSWERS: I asked whether I could have two days a month with him. He replied that we only could be friends.

She's trying much too hard to have a man in her life

Annie's Mailbox

Dear Annie: I am 57 and single. I truly regret leaving my husband of only three years, but he never wanted to spend time with me, did not communicate, drank beer all the time and spent every day in the garage working on ship models.

My life was easy with him. I didn't have to do anything but show him affection. I loved him and still do, but I thought I would be happier finding someone I could talk to.

whether I could have two days a month with him. He replied that we only could be friends. I have begun dating again and met a guy I liked initially, but everyone tells me I'd be jumping from the frying pan into the fire.

I have sought counseling, and was told not to move in with my new boyfriend. But it hurts to let him go. I am so overwhelmed and don't know what to do.

him, either. Please use this time to figure out what you want from a relationship. You are trying too hard to have a man in your life and are making poor choices. Dear Annie: My wife and I will be celebrating our 10th anniversary this summer.

Classified Advertising Inside Sales Representative

The Salem News is seeking an energetic Classified Sales Representative to assist our team with meeting the advertising needs of classified customers over the phone, in person and online. Work as a member of a team in a fast-paced, multi-media environment. This position requires computer keyboarding speed and accuracy, attention to detail and strong customer service and sales skills. The right candidate will input classified online and online display ads via the newspapers classified system and effectively and efficiently meet ad copy deadlines. You will be expected to be a good communicator and represent the Salem News family of print and online publications professionally. Strong customer service skills, excellent spelling skills, ability to follow directions and experience working with the public a must. Experience in outbound calling and business development is helpful. If you are looking for a career opportunity, we want to hear from you.
