Salem still looking at cost to fix sewage pump

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

SALEM — The East State Street Sewage Lift Station which failed Friday is working again with one pump, but city Utilities Superintendent Don Weingart said the second pump needs repaired.

City utility workers discovered the problem during routine maintenance when they opened the hatch to the lift station and smoke came billowing out. The pump which sends waste to the city's sewage treatment plant from the east end of the city was not working and the lift station was filling with water, shorting out the electrical controls.

The city fire department was called to the scene due to the smoke and sent one firefighter into the hole using their confined space equipment and training to ensure it was safe for the city's electrician and utility workers to go into the hole to make repairs.

The lift station is located just off of the Pershing Street extension behind Marc's and Giant Eagle. Water had to be pumped out of the space before anyone could go down to check anything, with firefighters monitoring the level of methane, hydrogen sulfide (commonly known as sewer gas), carbon monoxide and oxygen in the air and ventilating the confined space before sending a firefighter down.

Weingart said the seal had broken on the now damaged pump, allowing the pump chamber to fill up with fluids.

"We were fortunate to get the pumps started," he said.

He explained that the pump with the broken seal has a serious vibration in the motor and will have to be pulled out and overhauled. He said they weren't sure what caused the problem.

While crews worked on the repairs, other workers hauled waste from the out-of-commission lift station and dumped it inside a manhole near Reilly Stadium so the flow could continue traveling out to the wastewater treatment plant. The waste was hauled for about five hours before the lift station was operational late Friday night.

Workers were called out over the weekend to check on the lift station and make sure it was still operating properly. Weingart said they're still calculating the cost of the overtime from Friday and the weekend, along with the cost of repairs.

Well pad going in

A new well pad is being built on Teegarden Road about a quarter-mile east of Depot Road for the Mrugala well (6-14-3 10H) which was permitted by the Ohio Department of Natural Resources on Sept. 4. There are six permitted wells in Elk Run Township and four each in Franklin, Middleton, Salem and West townships. (Salem News photo by Larry Shields)

Landowner fields offers to buy shale royalties

By LARRY SHIELDS
Staff writer

SALEM — A local landowner received a call a couple of weeks ago about selling the oil and gas royalties to his Salem Township property.

He had already leased the rights so he was a little surprised by the call.

But the caller, who identified himself as "land man" representing a Forth Worth, Texas-based company, realized he had not been heard correctly.

The caller said he was interested in the royalties and not the gas and oil rights.

The caller, who was doing most of the talking, made an offer for the royalties that the landowner called "tempting" but declined.

The landowner, who wished to be unnamed, said the caller knew about his property, but with public records in the Internet age, that's not unusual.

And the company has been persistent with subsequent calls offering to sweeten the deal.

"They've been around for awhile, I've heard that quite awhile ago," said Salem Township Trustee Chairman John Wilms.

"I've heard some stories," he said. Trustee Bill Heston has heard about them too, noting they're similar to companies that buy up structured settlements.

He noted some companies are also trying to purchase mineral rights which he said, "could mean everything."

When oil and gas exploration companies lease the rights the deals almost always contain a royalty clause, usually a 15 to 20 percent cut on the product extracted from the well that is paid to the property owner.

The royalty is paid during the production life of the well.

Going after the royalties isn't a new game but it comes at a point when many observers agree that more drilling is needed to appreciate the enormity of the play while establishing the sweet spots regarding the quality and quantity of the products extracted.

It's clear there's a ton of oil and gas in the Marcellus and Utica shale plays and new wells show signs of high quality products, but for some it might too

Teachers show off lessons on iPads

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

Salem school board members learned firsthand how Southeast teachers use iPads in the classroom, answering questions on the electronic notebook devices passed out during Monday's meeting.

"This is an example of engaging your students," teacher Jennifer Milliken-Dees said during the mini quiz.

Milliken-Dees was one of four teachers from the school's technology team who came to the meeting to demonstrate some of what they learned during training in Boston this summer. For her presentation, six members of the school's student council, who led the Pledge of Allegiance to kick off the meeting, distributed iPads to board members and audience members to demonstrate the use of Socrative.

The program allows a teacher to pose questions through an iPad to students who also have iPads, allowing the students to key in their answers and the teacher to know immediately if they got the point of a lesson by the answers posted. The teachers can tell how many students answered correctly, who answered correctly and who may need some help. Answers can be presented as multiple choice or a short written answer.

"The kids get immediate feedback," Milliken-Dees said, adding it also drives her instruction.

Teacher Wendy Higgins explained how students can

County ESC, Lisbon schools to share bus director

By DEANNE JOHNSON
Staff Writer

LISBON — With continued efforts to find ways to share services, members of the county Educational Service Center board voted Monday to hire a joint director of transportation with the Lisbon school district.

Following an executive session, the board voted to hire Jennifer L. Durno for the remainder of the school year, paying her $40,000 for a 230-day contract.

Durno will be an employee of the ESC, which will then contract her services to the Lisbon schools.

Lou Rammuno pointed out it was an opportunity with both Lisbon and the ESC losing their transportation coordinators at the same time. He would like to see it become a model at the county level for other schools. He sees opportunities to share in route scheduling, mechanical work and drivers, especially substitutes.

The ESC already shares special education director Cheryl McGrath with the county Board of Developmental Disabilities, where she serves at Robert Bycroft School. Additionally, ESC director Anna Marie Vaughn said for years, the ESC has shared someone with Kent State. The board also heard presentations by McGrath and Judy Herron about upcoming changes in requirements for schools.

Herron said teacher evaluations will begin to look at not only at how well the teacher leads the classroom, but how much students have learned based on their assessment. Additionally, principal evaluations will be not just about the work they do at the school, but also how well students perform.

Additionally, one of the concerns is how well gifted students are progressing. In many cases, Herron said, gifted students progress only a half a year instead of a whole year of improvement. She stressed the necessity of giving them additional projects or additional contact in the curriculum.

In addition to attendance and how well schools graduate their students, report cards will begin looking at physical education.

Special education students are also part of new content standards where they will be required to show they are progressing. Schools will be soon required to test them with the teacher one on one. Each content area takes an hour to test. Vaughn said there are concerns about first getting teachers trained to provide the test, which must be done this February and March.

Obama touts the economic record some see as biggest weakness in new campaign ad

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — With the economy showing some signs of improvement three weeks before Election Day, President Barack Obama on Monday laid down a full embrace of the economic record many Republicans say is his biggest weakness.

The president's first act in this critical campaign week was to announce a new battleground state advertisement featuring voters discussing the ways their economic conditions have improved during his term. The ad was hitting the airwaves as Obama and Republican challenger Mitt Romney huddled in intense preparation for their second debate as polls show a closely fought campaign.

"This race is tied," Obama said in an appeal to supporters asking them to donate at least $5 to his re-election effort. He promised to be "fighting" for the election on the debate stage Tuesday night — something many of his supporters thought he did too little of in his first face-off with Romney.

Early voting is under way in dozens of states, giving the candidates little chance to recover from any slip-ups that come in these final days. Obama has been trying to get his supporters to lock in their choice now, and his campaign announced Monday that he and his wife, Michelle, would become the first president and first lady to cast their ballots early.

Gitmo detainees on better behavior at 9/11 hearing; KSM says 'no justice' at court

GUANTANAMO BAY NAVAL BASE, Cuba (AP) — There were no rants this time, no ignoring the judge or getting out of their seats to pray — just one scornful remark from the professed mastermind of the Sept. 11 attacks as a weeklong pretrial hearing began for five Guantanamo Bay detainees.

It was a sharply different atmosphere as Khalid Sheikh Mohammed and his four co-defendants returned to court at the U.S. base in Cuba for the first time since their arraignment in May, when their concerted effort to disrupt the proceedings turned what was supposed to be a brief hearing into an unruly, 13-hour spectacle.

This time, the defendants sat quietly, cooperated with their attorneys and responded to the judge when asked. And they were awarded a small victory: The judge granted a defense request to allow the five men to skip the rest of this week's hearing if they choose, rather than risk being forced out of their cells and into the court by military guards.

Asked if he understood the implications of not attending court while hearings go on without him, Mohammed made his only statement of the day: "Yes, but I don't think there is any justice in this court."

The issue was only one of a handful to be resolved Monday in a weeklong hearing on about two dozen motions before the formal trial, which is at least a year away. Most of the day was taken up by the debate over whether defendants must attend all proceedings under the rules of the special tribunals for wartime offenses known as military commissions.

White House wrestles with how, where to strike back if Libya consulate found

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House has put special operations strike forces on standby and moved drones into the skies above Africa, ready to strike militant targets from Libya to Mali — if investigators can find the al-Qaida-linked group responsible for the death of the U.S. ambassador and three other Americans in Libya.

But officials say the administration, with weeks until the presidential election, is weighing whether the short-term payoff of exacting retribution on al-Qaida is worth the risk that such strikes could elevate the group's profile in the region, alienate governments the U.S. needs to fight it in the future and do little to slow the growing terror threat in North Africa.

Details on the administration's position and on its search for a possible target were provided by three current and one former administration official, as well as an analyst who was approached by the White House for help. All four spoke on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to discuss the high-level debates publicly.

The dilemma shows the tension of the White House's need to demonstrate it is responding forcefully to al-Qaida, balanced against its long-term plans to develop relationships and trust with local governments and build a permanent U.S. counterterrorist network in the region.

Police release names of 21 john suspects in Maine seaside town Zumba studio prostitution case

KENNEBUNK, Maine (AP) — Police on Monday released the first round of names of more than 100 men accused of paying for sex with a Zumba instructor who's charged with turning her dance studio into a brothel in this seaside community.

The release of 21 names followed 11th-hour legal wrangling, and some residents watched the news flash on their local evening TV news.

Kim Ackley, a local real estate agent, said that disclosure of the names will cause temporary pain for families but it's only fair because others who are accused of embarrassing crimes don't get breaks.

"What's fair for one has to be fair for the other," said Ackley, who believes she knows several people on the list. "The door can't swing just one way."

Study: Privatized Medicare would raise premiums

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly six in 10 Medicare recipients would pay higher premiums under a hypothetical privatized system along the lines of what Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney has proposed, according to a study released Monday.

The report by the nonpartisan Kaiser Family Foundation also found striking regional differences that could lead to big premium hikes in some states and counties. That finding instantly made it ammunition in the presidential campaign.

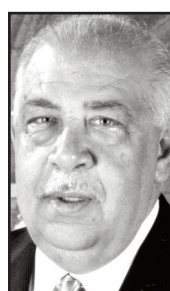

In the senior-rich political swing state of Florida, the hypo President Barack Obama says replacing the current open-ended Medicare benefit would shift costs to seniors.

Romney's approach would mirror the difference between traditional workplace pensions and modern-day 401(k) plans, in which the employer contribution is limited. While Medicare financing wouldn't be as heavy a lift for taxpayers, the risk is that retirees could end up paying more if medical costs rise.

The study carried a prominent disclaimer: It should not be taken as a specific analysis of the Romney-Ryan proposal, partly because their plan lacks details. However, Kaiser says it

Ohio officials spread word on new Medicaid benefit

COLUMBUS (AP) — State officials are spreading the word about a plan to better coordinate care for Medicaid beneficiaries with severe mental illness who also face chronic medical issues, such as heart disease or diabetes.

Under the new service, providers would partner with doctors, pharmacists, social workers and others to better address the patient's mental and physical health needs.

The benefit is now available to Medicaid recipients in Butler, Adams, Scioto, Lawrence and Lucas counties. All of Ohio's 88 counties are expected to provide the service by next year.

Roughly 177,000 state residents could be eligible, but not all are expected to need or choose to get the service.

The state's Medicaid director and others discussed the new benefit at an event Monday in Toledo.

Tracy Plouck, director of the state's Department of Mental Health, has said the idea of the new benefit is to lower future Medicaid spending on those with serious and persistent mental illness without cutting back their services.

People with mental illness represent about 10 percent of Ohio's Medicaid population but 26 percent of all Medicaid spending, according to state figures.

"This is an attempt to break down the barriers that currently exist between physical health care and mental health services," Plouck said in a statement. "By linking comprehensive, long-term medical and behavioral health to social services, we are hoping to assist more Ohioans in living healthier lives."

The so-called health home service is covered under an individual's current Medicaid plan, so there is no charge to the patient. Participation in the program is voluntary.

The benefit aims to get doctors and other health professionals to communicate with behavioral health centers about the patients' conditions and ways to improve their health. The idea allows for more sharing of electronic medical records and coordinating among medical professionals, social workers and others.

For instance, a care manager at a mental health center could help a Medicaid beneficiary who has abscesses in his or her mouth get the much needed dental care. That coordination then leads to better health and likely helps the person avoid possible health complications down the road.

Care managers would also assist beneficiaries in finding a family doctor, nutritionist or other specialist. Under the service, patients will get reminders about regular medical check-ups and connections to transportation and child care.

OUR SIDE

Governor's proposal merits consideration

Most government subsidized job training programs focus on men and women who have yet to enter the workforce or those who have been laid off from jobs. In Ohio, Gov. John Kasich wants to add a $30 million-a-year program focused on helping workers improve their skills and gain new ones.

Details are yet to be ironed out, but one report is that the state would pay 50 percent of the cost of such vocational training, with workers and/or employers covering the rest.

A training program such as that envisioned by the governor is necessary both to help Buckeye State residents qualify for better jobs in their companies and to keep their firms competitive. A study last year reported 58 percent of Ohio companies say their workers' skills do not meet the firms' needs.

Kasich's idea is an excellent one. It should be implemented as soon as possible.

Sometimes it seems partisanship has become the foundation of government policy in Washington. Democrats and Republicans seem to agree on very little, it often appears.

Such is not the case, of course, though during an election campaign that can be difficult to discern.

This week U.S. Sen. Joe Manchin, D-W.Va. — who has made it a priority to work against partisanship for its own sake — became a target in the Republican vs. Democrat nastiness. A fellow senator, Republican Rand Paul of Kentucky, targeted Manchin in advertising through Paul's political action committee.

The PAC advertising is critical of Manchin for voting against a measure sponsored by Paul, to cut off U.S. foreign aid to Egypt, Libya and Pakistan.

Manchin is locked in a re-election battle against Republican Senate candidate John Raese, of course. That may be part of Paul's reasoning.

But on Tuesday, Manchin received support from what at first glance might seem an unlikely quarter — another Republican senator. Sen. Lindsey Graham, R-S.C., told reporters Manchin was right to vote against the Paul bill.

In fact, the bill was defeated by a vote of 81-10, with many Republicans joining to declare Paul's idea a bad one.

Graham's willingness to defend Manchin, however, is a bright spot in what sometimes seems a dark cloud of partisanship. In a way, it validates Manchin's bipartisan philosophy, and this is a good thing.

They should let Gary Johnson in on the debates

ANDREW NAPOLITANO

President Obama has been a failure. On his watch, the American economy has significantly deteriorated largely because he has stifled free market forces by over-regulating them and because he has laden taxpayers with debt. Those two factors alone — the federal government increasing the cost of doing business by telling businesses from physicians to major industries how to do their work, and the federal government spending trillions it doesn't have and pushing the debts onto future generations — are enough to sink any economy.

In this arena, Mitt Romney is half-right. He does understand that only free market forces can produce prosperity, but he fails to see that when the government spends what it doesn't have, the result is inflation and higher taxes for future generations. Why does the federal government now spend half a trillion a year in debt service? Because every president, Democrats as well as Democrats, from FDR to Obama has borrowed money in order to spend more than he collected and has let future generations deal with repaying the debt. Because the feds do not repay (they merely roll over) their debt, the cost of interest payments has skyrocketed. Romney's ability to articulate the virtues of the free market and to dance around the issue of debt, while the president nearly fell asleep, are the reasons he did so well in the presidential debate last week.

In the realm of foreign affairs, the president has unleashed a torrent of violence in the Middle East by supporting some of the people his predecessor was fighting a few years ago. Those folks now run the government in Libya and Egypt, and those places are now unsafe for Americans. What would Romney do? He'd insert the U.S. military to extend American dominance and build a new world order. What has Obama done? He's bombed and killed innocents with drones. Neither has learned the lessons of 9/11: You cannot kill people or occupy foreign lands without moral and legal justification, lest you suffer deadly consequences.

Because Romney and Obama are different only in degree, I wish the cabal of former leaders of the two major political parties that runs the debates would permit former New Mexico Gov. Gary Johnson to participate. He is the Libertarian Party candidate who is on the ballot in all 50 states and the only current national candidate who if elected would shrink the government and keep it within the confines of the Constitution.

Don't hold your breath. The debates are crafted by the folks who run the Romney and Obama campaigns. Romney is afraid of Johnson because he might take the votes of those who are tired of unconstitutional government and deficits and war. Obama is afraid of Johnson because he might take the votes of those who are appalled at the government's murderous drug wars and its assaults on personal freedom and who also are tired of war. Both sides fear Johnson because he is essentially fearless when it comes to his belief that the Constitution means what it says — meaning if it does not authorize the feds to regulate health care, fight undeclared wars or mortgage the future, then they simply cannot do it.

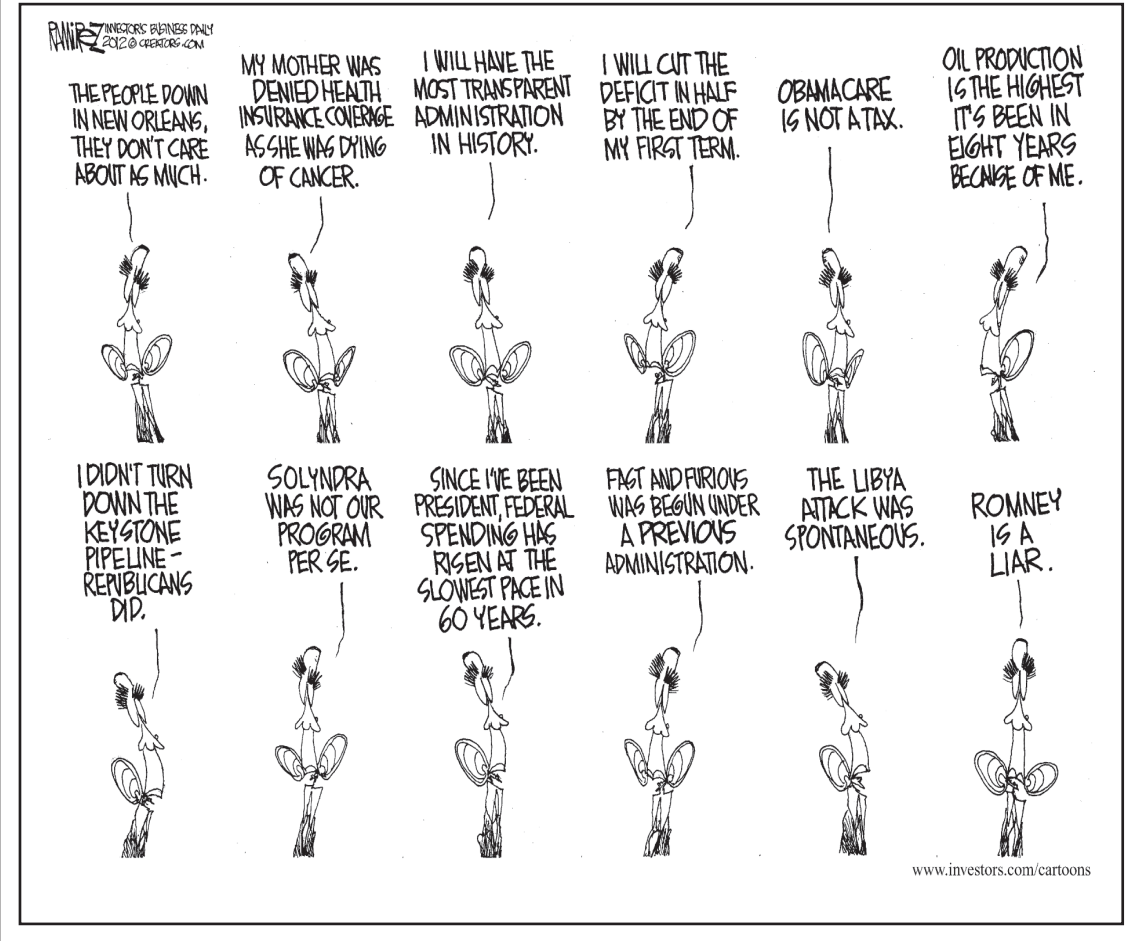

But the powers that run the means by which we elect presidents have decided that they can ill-afford a frontal assault on the big government they have created, on national television much less, and four weeks before a presidential election. You see, without Johnson in these debates, the argument will remain how much the feds should regulate, rather than whether they should do so.

I was disappointed but not surprised when Romney defended the concept of the feds regulating ordinary commercial transactions and borrowing money to spend it on things like federal aid to education, rather than defending the free market and the constitutional restraints on the feds. Obama is either a Marxist who doesn't believe in personal freedom or private property, or a nihilist who doesn't believe in anything except his own ability to exercise governmental power. Romney sounds like another big-government Republican who wants to regulate part of the economy, fight wars on a credit card and let your grandchildren pay for it.

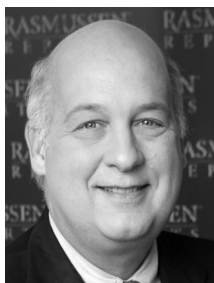

If you want a real debate — one that will explore the proper constitutional role of the federal government in our lives before it gets so big that we cannot safely challenge it — you will be disappointed, unless Gary Johnson is let in.

Race remains too close to call

SCOTT RASMUSSEN

The Political Class is distracted by superficial imagery, an obsession with the game of politics and the sound of their own voices.

While it might be boring to those in the Political Class, Election 2012 has been stable all year. Oh, sure, there have been occasional mini-surges where one candidate gained a little ground temporarily. But it's been close all along.

That's because elections are primarily about fundamentals. In January, the most important fundamental was that the president's job approval rating had been stuck around 47 percent or 48 percent for two full years.

That's good enough to be competitive but not good enough to ensure victory. An Electoral College analysis in January showed that four states were likely to be decisive — Ohio, Virginia, Florida, and North Carolina.

Fast forward to the final month of the campaign, and nothing has really changed. The president's job approval has barely moved because nothing in the real world has caused people to think differently of his performance. Voters are not better off than they were four years ago — but they're not worse off, either.

As a result, the Rasmussen Reports daily Presidential Tracking Poll shows that the two candidates have been within 3 points of each other in 89 of the past 100 days. Considering the 3-point margin of error, that's a toss-up almost every day. All four of the key states are just as close as the national numbers, and they're still just as important as we expected they'd be back in January.

In other words, nothing has really changed for 10 months, but that isn't unusual.

In 2004, on the night after John Kerry wrapped up the Democratic nomination, he trailed George W. Bush by 3 points. Ten months later, he lost to President Bush by 2.5 points.

In 2008, after wrapping up the Democratic nomination, Barack Obama led John McCain by 5 points. On Election Day, Obama won by 7. Fundamentals matter more than campaign consultants.

This background helps put the recent debate performance in context. Before the debate, the president was narrowly ahead.

After his poor showing, he was narrowly behind. But, for all the noise, only about 2 percent of voters changed their opinion from grudging support of Obama to grudging support of Romney. For the other 98 percent, nothing changed beyond the fact that they might feel a bit better or worse about their candidate.

While impossible to measure precisely, it is likely that the shift took place among voters who were disenchanted with the president but unsure whether Romney would be any better. After the debate, some may have concluded that Romney looked like a plausible president and was worth a shot.

Where will it go from here? If nothing changes in the real world, the race will remain close until Election Day. If perceptions of the economy or events in the Middle East shift, the election could shift, as well.

But the bottom line is that whatever changes take place will be driven by voter perceptions of reality, not the petty preoccupations of the Political Class.

OTHER VOICES

Oct. 8 — The Dallas Morning News on Venezuelan President Hugo Chávez' re-election:

Score another lamentable election victory for Venezuelan President Hugo Chávez. The fiery, anti-U.S. revolutionary now has another six-year term to continue with the plans he launched after his first election in 1998 to dismantle Venezuela's free-market economy and pursue his anachronistic socialist agenda.

Not long ago, American leaders would've had good reason to be concerned about the national security implications of another Chávez term. Venezuela sits atop the world's largest proven reserves of oil and is a major petroleum exporter to the United States. Chávez has repeatedly rankled U.S. leaders by providing support for leftist Colombian guerrillas and sponsoring socialist political campaigns in Ecuador, Bolivia and Nicaragua.

Yet his so-called Bolivarian revolution has proved hollow. Chávez's Latin American political allies have found that, without the same kind of oil income Venezuela enjoys, revolutionary socialism is almost impossible to sustain. ...

Chávez's opposition has tried repeatedly to stop the president through elections and referendums, but it's never been able to muster the necessary voting muscle. His continuation in power for another six-year term will no doubt rob Venezuela of the economic growth opportunities that are spurring job creation and investment elsewhere in the region. Venezuela's professional class of lawyers, doctors, engineers and entrepreneurs have fled the country in droves.

The more U.S. and other regional leaders ignore him, the less his bluster seems to resonate. For all his antics and rhetoric, Chávez should increasingly be dismissed for what he is — a toothless tiger.

But maybe not for others. With the kind of money being spent, royalty deals aren't tied to reckless hopes but based on current production data and the most recent forward-looking commodity prices. Like most, oil people are risk adverse and the deduction is they feel money can be made on the royalties, even before the first well-hole in Salem Township was drilled. The Marcellus geology, as Consol Energy's General Manager Harry Schurr said a few weeks ago at the Utica Expo in Youngstown, will point the way. "It's still a little ahead in development and optimization," he said.

create stories on a program known as Storybird and learn how to draw conclusions from stories. Teacher Brianne Go-clano showed a video the students created and posted on YouTube on how to make a pink ribbon for breast cancer awareness out of hot pink duct tape as part of a community project. They've been selling the ribbons to fellow students this month and have raised over $100 for the Susan G. Komen Foundation. The video can be found on YouTube under Southeast School in Salem.

Teacher Russ Hopple explained they started the year with community building activities to get to know the students a little better and a focus on global learning, noting that as technology changes, they have to prepare the students for using that technology. To be literate in the 21st century, they have to be able to use technology, Higgins said.

A couple of concerns they noted were the lack of keyboarding skills of the students, which they want to work on improving, and the fact that it's hard to publish and print and save what's created on the iPads. The district secured funding to purchase 800 iPads for use in all classrooms, from elementary through high school, in the past two years.

During the recognition portion of the meeting, Superintendent Tom Bratten offered thanks to Rick Suggett from the Salem Utilities Department for helping the school district's maintenance staff on a recent drainage and sewer issue at Buckeye School and thanks to Dr. Dean Economus for stepping out of the stands during a recent soccer game to help a player from the opposing team who was injured.

In personnel matters, the board approved continuing contracts for teachers Kari Newburn and Alexandra Winner and approved the following substitutes: teaching staff, Susan Dean, Kathleen McCartney and Robert Viencek; classified staff, Renee Ebert, Wendy Hochadel, Sheila Lobdell, Gerald Skiba and Allen Williams.

The board approved the following athletic supplementals for winter and spring sports: boys basketball, varsity head coach Rich Hart, assistant varsity George Spack and Andy Smyczynski, junior varsity Jake Zatchok, ninth grade Jeff Andres, eighth grade Greg Woolman, seventh grade Logan Wartman; girls basketball, varsity head coach Renee Farina, varsity assistant George Spack, junior varsity Sarah Hamilton, ninth grade Marissa Mattozzi, eighth grade, Matthew Zeigler; head junior high wrestling Shaun Winkler; junior high assistant wrestling William Borrelli; girls softball, varsity head coach Jodie Hippely, assistant varsity Buddy Wood, junior varsity Katie Malloy; boys tennis coach George Barth; boys track, varsity head coach Todd Huda, assistant varsity Shane Harding, head junior high Robert Motz, assistant junior high Ted Yuhaniak; girls track, varsity head coach Amie Cochran, assistant varsity Jen Neopolitan, volunteers William Angus and William Neopolitan.

The board approved a grant application for the Salem High School Advanced Placement Program for financial assistance from the Salem Community Foundation for $7,256 to pay for advanced placement national tests for about 85 students.

The board also approved the Hannah E. Mullins School of Practical Nursing handbook for the Class of 2013, approved fundraising activities for student groups, accepted a donation of $100 from Robert Sebo for the high school's swim club, the Piranha Aquatics program and accepted the donated purchase of 80 football jerseys for the seventh and eighth grade football teams, valued at $3,600 from Frank and Lisa Bezon and Ted and Julie Schuster.

PATROL

— Thomas M. Lynch, 30, Ohio Avenue, East Liverpool, was eastbound on Pancake-Clarkson Road in Middleton Township at 2:30 a.m. Thursday and went off the right side of the road and into a ditch. He was cited for failure to control and no driver's license.

Washingtonville looking at junk vehicle rule

By LARRY SHIELDS
Staff writer

WASHINGTONVILLE — Once the village adopts legislation incorporating parts of the Ohio Basic Code dealing with junk and abandoned vehicles, it will have the specific authority to begin removing them.

Assistant Police Chief Mark Husk described a portion of code during Monday's meeting, noting vehicles with no registration and sitting for more than 72 hours, and not covered or under a carport, will have to be moved.

"They can't be in a yard and covered with a tarp," Husk said.

The village legislation has not been passed and Mayor Will Jones they will try to "add it into the ordinance we're trying to pass."

Husk said it has a certified letter notification provision that gives the resident 10 days to cover the vehicle.

He said they were going to get letters "and we're going to take care of it ... it's going to clean up the village."

Solicitor Michele McBride Simonelli said it was also a public health issue.

Council approved the purchase of a 2013 Dodge Charger police cruiser from Columbiana Dodge which Husk said would not need a radar detector since the state provided the village with one through a past enforcement program.

Husk said the difference in price between a 2010 and 2013 cruiser was an increase of about $3,500.

Former Councilwoman Renee Jackson, a meeting guest, asked, "Where's the money coming from?"

The two current department cruisers are 2008 and 2010 models and Jackson said "those are two pretty new cars ..."

She also noted she has seen them outside the village "in Franklin Square" and Husk said that sometimes investigations take them outside the village.

Jackson said she would "take pictures" showing them sitting in a driveway and Jones noted the complaint saying, "How can I fix something if I don't know about it? This is the first I've heard of it."

She said it was the same unit outside the village.

"If we're getting new cars why are they outside?" she asked and McBride Simonelli described a "frolic," doing something they were not supposed to, as opposed to official business.

Jones said, "Thank you for bringing that to my attention and I will follow-up."

McBride Simonelli said, "If you see something, say something."

In legislative matters, council unanimously approved a resolution asking the county commissioners to distribute casino money in the same fashion that Local Government Fund money was distributed; and heard a second reading on control of noxious weeds and litter ordinance.

Councilwoman Laura Trummer said they could add the abandoned cars into it and Jones said that could be done before the third reading.

Council also finalized legislation giving Utilities Superintendent Brian Gudat a 67 cents an hour raise retroactive to Oct. 5.

In other business, a resident disputed the police department's handling of a complaint over a family and personal property issue.

Police said it was a civil issue but during the discussion, in which the resident grew increasingly heated over what he said was a theft, Jones and Husk each said they would address the issue "after the meeting."

Husk said the Mahoning County prosecutor ruled it was a civil issue and McBride Simonelli attempted to cool things off by laying out the police department's function and that it didn't have an obligation to intervene in a "contract (verbal) dispute between you and your brother."

She explained the safety forces "don't have time to be your personal bounty hunter or to do your personal bidding ... it's not their duty."

In other business, Jackson said she wanted it known the village has not signed an oil and gas contract with an oil company.

Pointing to a Sunday story in the Salem News she said it gave the impression the village had signed on with Leetonia Shale LLC.

McBride Simonelli said, "We're not under any contract."

The Leetonia Shale LLC meetings are aimed at pooling smaller tracts of land that have not been placed under lease by oil and gas companies since they are reluctant to lease smaller parcels.

Interested landowners have provided contact information to Leetonia Shale LLC and Washingtonville was said to have signed up, which it hasn't.

BEAVER TOWNSHIP — The South Range Local School District is facing an operating deficit by July 2014.

The school board Monday night accepted Treasurer Jim Phillips' five-year forecast which predicts the district to be operating in a deficit of $884,600 by the end of the next fiscal year and $2.7 million the following one. The district will have a $799,945 carryover at the end of this year, according to the forecast.

According to Phillips, the projections include the renewal levy on the November ballot. If it fails, the district could be facing a $1 million deficit by the end of next year, ballooning to over $3 million the following year, he said.

Phillips reminded the board and the public that the forecast only shows what the budget will look like if the district continues to operate in the same manner in the coming years, acting as a warning of impending problems.

"The point is to show that we need to do something about it," he said. "This shows what will happen if we continue on the same path, which we are not permitted to do (operate in a deficit)."

Phillips also noted that the deficit had been projected two years ago, but that financial maneuvers including staff cuts and the shale gas bonus had delayed it. He said that although expenditures continue to increase, revenue from the state and property taxes does not, causing the deficit.

In other business, the board approved the consideration of a comprehensive update to the board policy manual.

According to schools Superintendent Dennis Dunham, the school board and administration have been working with the Ohio School Board Association (OSBA) and the Northeast Ohio Learning Associates (NEOLA) the past year to update the bylaws, which will be available on the school's website if accepted at the November board meeting.

The board also approved an addendum to its contract with Nutrition Group for management of the cafeteria, agreeing to pay an upfront cost for personnel and curriculum that will be reconciled at the end of the school year. According to Phillips the term of agreement is usually included in the company's contracts, but had been missed in South Range's.

Also at the meeting, Dunham reminded residents that the district has a 2.4-mill, 10-year renewal levy on the November ballot. Generating approximately $430,555 annually, the levy enables the district to maintain its level of operation, he said. He reminded residents that it is a renewal levy and will not raise tax rates.

The next regular board meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Nov. 19 at the K-12 campus.

Port shares details on failed deal

By DEANNE JOHNSON
Staff Writer

LISBON — The deal with the Tervita Corp. to purchase the former Youngstown-Southern Railroad fell through because of two environmental concerns, which should not have been enough to cancel the deal, Tracy Drake, CEO of the Columbiana County Port Authority, said Monday.

Drake and Larry Drane of Tetra Tech, which did the environmental study, presented the results to the port board. One item of concern was oil in the area of the car barn in Negley.

Drane reported the oil was dealt with originally in the 1990s when it was discovered and was believed to have come from another site across the road. The other site was at one point a tank farm. After the owner of the tank farm had monitoring wells built the state fire marshal in 1995 issued a No Further Action letter to the railroad company.

After the meeting, Drake said if there are any health concerns now due to the oil at the 13-acre car barn site, they could be dealt with now.

The other concern was oil near a train refueling site in North Lima. Drake said there appeared to be oil staining the ground in the area surrounding the place where the diesel engines are filled. Similar places usually have a mat to soak up the oil, according to Drake, but it is not known yet how long ago the mat at this particular location was put into the ground.

Both the port authority and Tervita had studies conducted about the possible environmental concerns. The Tervita study also noted two locations along the tracks in Signal and Negley where derailments of trains caused spills in the past. However, the study noted vegetation now covers the sites and past documentation reveals there appears to be no environmental threats.

Drake said Tervita still plans to purchase the demolition debris landfill north of Negley, but not the railroad, which has been used in the past to transport materials to the site for disposal. He said the port authority will continue to support Tervita's efforts to bring jobs to the area.

Pizza Hut rethinks contest on presidential debate

NEW YORK (AP) — Pizza Hut is rethinking its contest during people to ask "Sausage or Pepperoni?" at the presidential debate Tuesday. After the stunt triggered backlash last week, the company says it's moving the promotion online, where a contestant will be randomly selected to win free pizza for life.

The pizza delivery chain had offered the prize — a pie a week for 30 years or a check for $15,600 — to anyone who posed the question to either President Barack Obama or Republican candidate Mitt Romney during the live Town Hall-style debate.

But blogs and media outlets immediately took the pizza delivery chain to task for trying to capitalize on the election buzz by injecting itself into the process.

Pizza Hut spokesman Doug Terfehr said the majority of the feedback the company has seen has been very positive. He said that moving the contest online was a "natural progression of the campaign" after people got excited about the idea and "wished they could get in on it."

Pizza Hut, a unit of Yum Brands Inc., says it will still honor the prize if someone poses the question live at the debate. But it's encouraging everyone to participate in the new online version, where contestants must enter their email addresses and zip codes to be eligible. The company will award two prizes if someone does ask the question.

Mandel says he wouldn't have backed auto bailout

CLEVELAND (AP) — Republican Josh Mandel finally made it clear Monday that he wouldn't have supported the auto industry bailout, an issue backed and touted at nearly every turn by his Democratic opponent in the race for Ohio's U.S. Senate seat.

Mandel and incumbent Sherrod Brown faced off for their first debate, exchanging insults in front of a lively crowd over issues that have played out on a barrage of TV commercials in what is one of the most costly and closely watched U.S. Senate races in the country.

Brown has made his support of the auto bailout a central part of his campaign, saying it helped out 800,000 people in the state who work in auto-related jobs. Up until now, Mandel had refused to say whether he would have gone against keeping General Motors Co. and Chrysler LLC afloat.

Mandel, elected Ohio's state treasurer two years ago, said Monday that while he supports policies that help the auto industry, he could not have supported the bailout because it also meant the loss of pensions for nonunion employees at Delphi Corp., a former General Motors subsidiary, and the loss of jobs for mechanics and salespeople at car dealerships that were forced to close. "I'm not a bailout senator," Mandel said.

"He's the bailout senator."

Brown said that opposing the auto rescue "just boggles my mind," noting how so many auto assembly and parts plants were located in Ohio. "These are real jobs and real people," he said.

The government sent $62 billion in tax dollars to the two automakers in 2008 and 2009 amid concerns that they were about to shut down and sink the economy.

Republicans seeking to gain Senate seats are targeting Brown, who won a surprise victory six years ago. Both campaigns and outside groups have spent millions flooding the airwaves with ads that have taken on a nasty tone leading up to the Nov. 6 election.

Polls have shown that Brown has an edge, but the race remains tight.

Brown accused Mandel of being more concerned about running for a higher office than doing his job as state treasurer. Mandel countered that Brown is a career politician whose liberal policies have hurt Ohio.

Both stuck to those themes throughout the debate.

"You've had 20 years to solve these problems and it's only gotten worse," Mandel said to Brown when both were asked about whether stimulus programs under the Obama administration had benefited Ohio. "I'm not for bailouts."

Brown said the stimulus programs have helped unemployment come down and kept teachers and firefighters on the job.

Mandel said gas prices have gone up and income has dropped since Brown first went to Washington. Brown, 59, was elected to the U.S. House in 1992 and is serving his first term in the Senate.

Brown took Mandel to task for signing an anti-tax pledge that could prevent him from striking deals in Washington necessary to close tax loopholes. He also said he thought Congress was moving toward living within its means, a remark that drew laughter.

Scaring Away Childhood Cancer

Hosted by the brothers of Mount Union's Alpha Tau Omega and the sisters of Delta Sigma Tau, the "Scaring Away Childhood Cancer" for St. Jude event will be held from 6 to 10 p.m. Oct. 27 and 28. All proceeds go to St. Jude Children's Research Hospital. The Alpha Tau Omega fraternity house at 205 W. College St., Alliance, will be transformed into the "Haunted House on the Hill" to help the fight on "Scaring Away Childhood Cancer." Admission is $4 at the door, $3 for university students presale, and $2 for under 18. Refreshments will be available. This event is good for the entire family, with not-so-scary events, such as pumpkin decoration and face painting. "Our event gives us the opportunity to benefit the kids at St. Jude's suffering from cancer and other illnesses. We hand-delivered our donation check to St. Jude's in Memphis last December and plan on making the trip again this year as well. It is an amazing experience to volunteer and meet the patients who are the reason we work hard on this project," said Austen Hutton, a 2008 Salem High School graduate and president of the Alpha Tau Omega, Alpha Nu chapter. Since opening in 1962, St. Jude has treated children from all 50 states and around the world. No child is ever denied treatment because of a family's inability to pay. With a daily operating cost of $1.7 million, St. Jude depends mostly on public contributions and fundraising events. ## Browns grow up in Cincinnati win

Cleveland gets big boost from ending 11-game losing streak

BEREA (AP) — Brandon Weeden passed up dessert on his birthday. A sweet win over Cincinnati was plenty satisfying.

The Browns rookie quarterback had never experienced life in Cleveland after a victory, and he wasn't the only one.

As luck would have it, the first time Weeden went out in public after a victory came on his 29th birthday. After the Browns snapped their 11-game losing streak Sunday with a win over the Bengals, Weeden celebrated the 34-24 triumph and his birthday with family members at a local restaurant.

Needless to say, the crowd was friendly.

"There were some excited people," Weeden said Monday. "People were great, really friendly and congratulating. It just showed the passion this town has. I'd love to win a lot more because it's a lot more fun going out to eat and being around people when you win games."

And now that Weeden and the Browns have tasted success, they're hungry for more wins.

One of the NFL's youngest teams did some growing up Sunday. Close and competitive but without a win through five games, the Browns (1-5) outplayed the Bengals (3-3) in the second half and came away with their first win since Nov. 20 while also ending a 12-game losing streak inside the AFC North.

For the first time this season, it all came together for the Browns and maligned coach Pat Shurmur, who needed a win to take some pressure off with presumptive owner Jimmy Haslam III about to officially take over the franchise.

"We needed it," Shurmur said, shifting the focus toward his youthful team, which has 16 rookies and 28 players with two years of experience or less. "This isn't about me. This is about my players. This is about our

Steelers not ready to panic

Banged up club remains calm despite 2-3 start

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Larry Foote will save the politically correct talk for his teammates. The veteran Pittsburgh Steelers linebacker has never been much for spinning things anyway.

Asked Monday he's more than a just little concerned about Pittsburgh's uncharacteristically slow 2-3 start, Foote just nods his head. "The panic button, we tapping on it," he said. "We ain't got two hands on it, but we're kind of nibbling on it a little bit."

Foote laughed as he spoke, but the reality is the Steelers are quickly running out of wiggle room. Pittsburgh is mired in third place in the competitive AFC North heading into Sunday's game at Cincinnati (3-3) and hardly looked like a team capable of making a postsea-

EAST PALESTINE — Lisbon beat United in semi-final action on Monday evening 25-18, 27-17. For Lisbon, Sam Tinsley had 14 points to lead the Blue Devils. Kim Wiggers and Alyssa Chestnut each added ten points and Sammi Sacconi had eight points for Lisbon. Hannah Mix led United with 12 points.

United will play South Range on Wednesday at 5 p.m. in a consolation game. Lisbon will take on East Palestine in the finals at 6:30. Both matches will take place at East Palestine High School.

Meyer: "Defense must get better"

Surrendering big plays, points, alarms coach

COLUMBUS (AP) — Urban Meyer met with his defensive coaches and players on Sunday.

He wasn't handing out compliments.

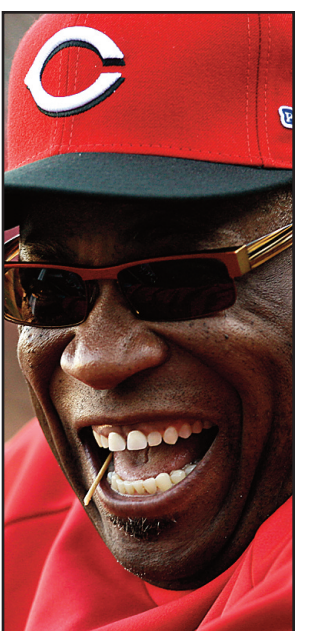

"I'm not happy at all with what's going on on defense," the Ohio State coach said a day later. "That includes players, coaches. We can all get better. It's a team effort."

The Buckeyes (7-0, 3-0 Big Ten) kept their record clean even though the defense was gashed for 49 points, 481 yards and a staggering 18 plays that picked up at least 10 yards in a narrow 52-49 win at Indiana on Saturday.

Reds extend Baker's contract

Deal keeps skipper in Cincinnati for two more years

CINCINNATI (AP) — Reds owner Bob Castellini couldn't imagine Dusty Baker leaving.

The 63-year-old manager got a two-year contract extension Monday, giving him another chance to take Cincinnati deep into the playoffs. They've been there twice in the last three years, failing both times to get past the division series.

Baker missed the Reds' NL Central title celebration this year because he was hospitalized with an irregular heartbeat and a mini-stroke. He returned and lost ace Johnny Cueto at the start of their series against San Francisco, which ended with the Giants rallying to win Game 5.

The team's first big question of the offseason was whether it would bring Baker back for another try.

"This is Dusty's team," Castellini said. "These fellas are poised to go deeper and deeper in the season. To not bring Dusty back or not ask Dusty to come back was out of the question."

Manning's three second half TD's spur Broncos win

SAN DIEGO (AP) — It took a quarterback the caliber of Peyton Manning to pull off this kind of comeback.

Manning threw three touchdown passes in the second half and Tony Carter and Chris Harris scored off turnovers by Philip Rivers as the Denver Broncos overcame a 24-0 halftime deficit to stun the San Diego Chargers 35-24 on Monday night.

Manning was 13 of 14 for 167 yards in the second half for the Broncos (3-3) who tied the Chargers (3-3) atop the AFC West.

It tied for the fourth-greatest regular-season comeback in NFL history.

"It sure was special considering what was on the line," said Manning, a four-time NFL MVP and one-time Super Bowl winner who's in his first season with the Broncos.

Manning had been 1-5 in his last six games against San Diego, all with Indianapolis.

Rivers was intercepted four times — three in the fourth quarter — and lost two fumbles. A week earlier, the Chargers blew a 10-point lead in the third quarter in a 31-24 loss at New Orleans.

"When you lose it's rough, especially in a game where you had a big lead and so much at stake," Rivers said.

The Broncos seemed finished after a nightmarish first half in which Manning served up an 80-yard interception return for a touchdown by Quentin Jammer and two special teams fumbles led to 10 points for the Chargers.

"I thought we had a good plan. It was so disappointing to have these special team mistakes," Manning said.

Manning began the comeback when he hit Demaryius Thomas on a 29-yard touchdown pass on the opening drive of the second half.

On the ensuing San Diego possession, Elvis Dumervil stripped the ball from Rivers and Carter ran 65 yards for a touchdown, holding up the ball in celebration as he approached the end zone.

Denver then sacked Rivers to force a punt and Manning capped the next drive with a 7-yard touchdown pass to Eric Decker to pull to 24-21.

Manning's 21-yard touchdown pass to Brandon Stokley gave Denver its first lead of the game, 28-24 with 9:03 left. Stokley outleaped defensive back Marcus Gilchrist to catch the ball, and then got both feet down before tumbling out of the end zone.

That score was set up by Carter's interception.

Harris sealed the victory with a 46-yard interception return for a touchdown with 2:05 left. It was his second pick of the game.

Manning finished 24 of 30 for 309 yards with one interception.

Quentin Jammer intercepted Manning and returned it 80 yards for his first career touchdown, and Antonio Gates caught his second TD pass of the game in the second quarter, extending the Chargers' lead to 24-0.

Before Jammer's TD, the Broncos appeared on their way to their first score of the game with Manning's 55-yard pass to a wide-open Decker. But Decker tripped himself at the Chargers' 40, got up and was tackled at the 30-yard line.

Manning clapped both hands to his helmet in disbelief, one of several times the star quarterback expressed frustration.

"Those kind of plays happen," Manning said. "You do kind of wonder, is this not meant to happen? Obviously Decker was sick about it.

"It's about playing 60 minutes. There's no quit in this team."

Three plays later, Manning threw a pass straight to Jammer.

Rivers was 25 of 41 for 242 yards.

BROWNS FROM 1B

city. This is about trying to build a consistent winner. It's our first win in a long time. We've been building up to it. I've sat here and said I think we're getting better. It's easy for folks to roll their eyes until you win a game.

"Now that we've won one, I want our players to get greedy with that feeling and go out and try to win against the Colts."

The Browns will visit Indianapolis (2-3) next Sunday with Weeden matching up against fellow rookie QB Andrew Luck. The two faced each other in last year's Fiesta Bowl, with Weeden leading Oklahoma State to a win over Luck's Stanford squad.

Weeden, who has been steadily improving this season, said Sunday's win should provide a big boost for the Browns, who had been hanging with teams but had faltered down the stretch each time. Slowly but surely, Weeden believes the Browns are beginning to fit the puzzle pieces together.

"We're scoring a lot of points, our defense is playing well, offensively we're starting to click and mesh," he said. "The entire team, against New York we had a bad play and it kind of snowballed. That didn't happen yesterday. That kind of shows the progress we're making from what we've been through.

"It's a good thing. We've got a long ways to go, but we're on the right track."

The Browns got a huge lift from cornerback Joe Haden, who contributed an interception and made several other big plays in his return after missing four games while being suspended for violating the league's drug policy. Cleveland also got unexpected production from backup running back Montario Hardesty. He came in when rookie Trent Richardson went down with a rib injury and rushed for 56 yards and scored the go-ahead TD in the fourth quarter.

There were positive plays on offense, defense and special teams. Shurmur had preached to his players that if they did the little things, good things would happen and they did.

"He never doubted our effort, but in order to get over that hump we have to make plays, we have to do things a little bit better in the crunch time of games when we needed to," linebacker D'Qwell Jackson said. "That was pretty much the message after the game. Great to get that first win for everyone. Coming from camps, it'd been a long spring, long fall, so it was finally good to get the first one. Now we got to keep it going and see where it takes us."

The next test for the Browns will be doing it again.

There were plenty of problems on Sunday, like seven straight offensive possessions without a first down, some shoddy downfield tackling and blown coversages by Cleveland's patched-up secondary.

Shurmur and his staff have plenty of coaching points to emphasize this week, but Jackson, who is in his seventh season, said the biggest challenge for the Browns will be how they handle success, and that won't be known until they play again.

"We knew at some point we'd get our first win," he said. "It's how well will we respond next week. That's going to be the true test of how well these young guys can understand the situation and actually get better week to week. Next week, we'll be able to tell what type of character team we do have. Right now, we're fighting every game. Just knowing yesterday was a chance for us to actually make some plays in the fourth quarter when we needed to and we were able to do it."

Weeden, who threw two TD passes and his league-leading 10th interception, hopes the Browns' first win will trigger many more.

"The taste of winning, the feeling of walking in that locker room after you win a game, that never gets old," he said. "There's nothing that can replace that feeling.

After winning games like that, you want that feeling more than once. It's got to give us confidence. It's good for us."

NOTES: Tests revealed Richardson has a right rib cartilage injury. Shurmur said Richardson "is fine" and is listed as day-to-day. Richardson was injured early in Sunday's game and was replaced in the third quarter after rushing for 37 yards on 14 carries. Richardson was not available for comment, but said Sunday he expected to play this week. ... Browns DT Phil Taylor is eligible to practice this week for the first time this season. He underwent surgery in May on a chest muscle he tore while lifting weights. Shurmur was non-committal on Taylor's return. Once Taylor begins practicing, the Browns have 21 days before they have to activate him. ... Shurmur said he received a congratulatory text message from owner Randy Lerner, whose sale to Haslam will be approved at league meetings Tuesday in Chicago.

STEELERS FROM 1B

son run while blowing fourth-quarter leads to the likes of also-rans Oakland and Tennessee.

The Steelers allowed the Titans to score 10 points in the final 4:19, including Rob Bironas' game-winning field goal at the gun. Another stumble on the road would put the Steelers in a precarious position, and they know it.

"We can't lose no more, that's the approach," Foote said. "Five, six losses you ain't going to be in the playoffs."

It's a destination the Steelers have missed just four times this millennium and just once since Tomlin took over in 2007. Pittsburgh began each of Tomlin's previous five seasons 6-2, a remarkable run of prosperity in a league where parity is the norm.

The Steelers insist there's plenty of time to turn things around.

"We don't have to have this great fire-and-ice speech," left tackle Max Starks said. "It's just we're behind the eight ball. We've dug a ditch for ourselves. We can still dig out of it though."

They'll have to do with a patched together offensive line. Center Maurkice Pouncey and right tackle Marcus Gilbert both left the Tennessee game with leg injuries and backup Doug Legursky spoke Monday as if he'll be in Pouncey's spot against the Bengals and rookie Mike Adams is expected to replace Gilbert.

Cobbling together enough healthy — or healthy enough — bodies along the line is nothing new for the Steelers. They did it during their Super Bowl run two years ago, but that team could rely heavily on its defense to bail them out of tight situations.

At the moment, it's the defense that needs all the help it can get, at least on the road. Pittsburgh is giving up 29.3 points per game away from Heinz Field. Cornerback Ike Taylor was victimized repeatedly by Tennessee quarterback Matt Hasselbeck, and now the Steelers face one of the best quarterback-receiving duos in the NFL in Cincinnati's Andy Dalton and A.J. Green.

And Pittsburgh will almost certainly do it without All-Pro safety Troy Polamalu, who is nursing a strained right calf.

For a locker room featuring more than a dozen players with two Super Bowl rings, there is a sense of urgency but not desperation. Safety Ryan Clark refuses to place blame in any one direction and has no plans to have a sit-down with Taylor to give him a pep talk.

"When we start saying what can we do to help him, we make him a charity case," Clark said. "Ike's not a charity case. Ike's a very good football player who had a rough night."

The game, however, was hardly the end of Pittsburgh's troubles over the weekend. Rookie nose tackle Alameda Ta'amu was arrested early Sunday morning following a chaotic run-in with police that ended with Ta'amu facing more than a dozen charges, including three felony counts.

The fourth-round pick out of Washington apologized to his teammates on Monday but was not available to the media. Ta'amu was tabbed as the eventual successor to Casey Hampton whenever Hampton retires but has yet to dress this season. Hampton, who has taken on a mentor role with Ta'amu, doesn't think the arrest will be a distraction and is more concerned about Ta'amu's future.

"We still love him, but the guy made a mistake," Hampton said. "Not taking away from what he did, because it was a terrible thing. So, you definitely can't do that, but any time you make a mistake, you've got to ride this out and see what happens."

General manager Kevin Colbert said Sunday the team would gather facts before making any sort of decision, though the team has a pressing need for depth along the offensive line and the only way to make room on the roster would be to cut at least one player.

The Steelers have shown little patience lately with players who have run into trouble, cutting second-year tight end Weslye Saunders last Friday just four days after he finished serving a four-game suspension for violating the NFL's substance abuse policy.

Either way, Ta'amu is unlikely to make any impact on the team this year, leaving it to the other 52 guys on the roster to get it together. As difficult as the season's first six weeks have been, the Steelers are one of eight teams with three losses — including New England, the New York Jets and the Denver Broncos — in the jumbled AFC.

"You've got the Ravens and Texans who are 'running away with it' right now," Clark said. "I think we're right in the thick of it. We haven't played up to our standards. But we're not out of it."

Giants beat Cardinals 7-1 in Game 2 to even NLCS

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Marco Scutaro answered Matt Holliday's hard takeout with a big hit of his own to help the San Francisco Giants end their home slide.

Scutaro hit a two-run single in San Francisco's fourth-inning to help the Giants get their first home win this postseason, 7-1 over the St. Louis Cardinals on Monday night that tied the NL championship series at one game apiece.

The game got off to a testy start when Holliday barreled into Scutaro at second base to break up a potential double play in the first inning. The play riled up a crowd that had seen three straight losses by the Giants so far this postseason.

There was plenty to cheer all night for the Giants. Ryan Vogelsong pitched seven strong innings, Angel Pagan hit a leadoff homer to give San Francisco its first home lead this postseason, and Scutaro broke the game open with his single off Chris Carpenter.

Making Scutaro's hit even sweeter for the Giants was the fact that Holliday mis-played the ball in left field, allowing a third run to score on the error.

Scutaro left after five innings because of an injured left hip, and was going for X-rays.

The series now shifts to St. Louis for three games, starting with Game 3 on Wednesday when San Francisco ace Matt Cain takes on Kyle Lohse of the Cardinals.

The Giants also benefited from a missed call by an umpire in the eighth inning after St. Louis center fielder Jon Jay made a spectacular, diving catch to rob Brandon Crawford of a hit.

Jay threw toward first and the Cardinals should have gotten a double play, but first base umpire Bill Miller did not see Allen Craig tag Gregor Blanco's jersey as he raced back to first on the play.

St. Louis manager Mike Matheny argued the call and the umpires huddled to discuss it, but they kept the safe call even though replays showed Craig made the tag.

The Giants capitalized when Ryan Theriot hit a two-run single to make it 7-1.

Back at Busch Stadium, Holliday will be cheered after being the target of boos all night following his aggressive play on the basepaths.

With runners on first and second and one out, Craig hit a bouncer to Crawford, and the shortstop quickly flipped to Scutaro for the forceout.

Holliday, a former high school football star in Oklahoma, came tumbling in and slid late into Scutaro, crushing his left leg to prevent up the double play. Scutaro lay on the ground twisting in pain while trainer Dave Groeschner and manager Bruce Bochy ran out of the dugout to attend to the second baseman.

Vogelsong got out of the jam by retiring Yadier Molina on a groundout and Scutaro stayed in the game with a limp until being replaced in the sixth by Theriot.

By then, he had done his damage with the bat in the big fourth inning.

The rally started innocently enough with a bloop, opposite field double by Brandon Belt and a chopper over third baseman David Freese by Blanco. Crawford then hit a bouncer between the mound and first base that Carpenter fielded and threw away toward first base. It appeared Crawford may have impeded Carpenter by running inside the baseline but the Cardinals did not argue the play.

With the bases loaded and two outs, Scutaro lined his single to left-center that Holliday misplayed to the delight of Giants fans, putting Carpenter and the Cardinals into a 5-1 hole.

Vogelsong made the lead hold up by becoming the first Giants starter to make it through six innings this postseason. He allowed four hits and one run for his first career postseason win.

These teams have a history of contentious meetings in the NLCS from Jeffrey Leonard's one-flap down home run trot in 1987 that riled up the Cardinals to a benches-clearing dustup 10 years ago when St. Louis reliever Mike Crudale buzzed Kenny Lofton after he showboated on a home run.

BAKER

FROM 1B

Baker is feeling much better, and the Reds have the nucleus of their 97-win team returning next year, including one of the deepest pitching staffs in the major leagues. When the club offered another two-year deal — same as the last one — Baker quickly agreed.

"It's very much the same contract and very much the same thing for all of us up here: There's work left to be done," Baker said. "I didn't want to leave on a note that we still have work to do."

"I don't want to leave in a situation where for the rest of my life I would have regretted not coming back with unfinished business. It would have left a real pain in my heart to feel the way I did at the end of the season." Baker did one of his best managing jobs this season, guiding the Reds through one major setback after another.

They lost closer Ryan Madson and their two setup relievers to injury during spring training. Baker eased left-hander Aroldis Chapman into the closer's role, a move that worked beautifully. Joey Votto tore cartilage in his left knee at mid-season, costing the Reds their top hitter — he was never the same, even after returning.

Baker juggled his lineup and led the club on a 36-12 tear while Votto was recuperating. With the team on the verge of clinching, Baker ended up in a hospital during a road trip in Chicago. He missed 11 games and returned for the final regular-season series.

The Reds made it through the season with all five starters healthy, a trend that ended in the first inning of the playoffs. Ace Johnny Cueto pulled muscles in his right side on his eighth pitch in San Francisco, sidelining the 19-game winner and putting Cincinnati's pitching plans in disarray.

Baker got creative with his pitching staff and the Reds won the first two games. With a chance to wrap it up back in Cincinnati, they had a passed ball and an error that let the Giants rally for a 10-inning win in Game 3. The Giants completed their comeback on Buster Posey's grand slam to take Game 5.

The Reds have won two division titles in the last three years — their best showing since Sparky Anerson ran the Big Red Machine in the 1970s — and have won 169 games over the last three years, their best such stretch in 30 years.

"We're moving in the right direction," general manager Walt Jocketty said. "We're trying to build a team that will be in contention for a long time and win multiple world championships. One of the things we feel is very important is continuity."

"Every place I've been, we've always had continuity, whether it's the scouts, the front office, the minor league people. But most importantly, the guys that are leading the team on the field. If you look, the more successful operations and teams are the organizations that keep continuity in their leadership."

Baker has presided over a revival in Cincinnati, which was rebuilding when he took over in 2008. The Reds were moving from a team reliant on homers — an offense built around Ken Griffey Jr. and Adam Dunn — to one that wins with pitching and defense.

A young team reached the playoffs unexpectedly in 2010, then got swept by Philadelphia. Baker became one of only six managers to win division titles with three teams, along with Billy Martin, Joe Torre, Tony La Russa, Lou Piniella and Davey Johnson.

Cincinnati took a step back last year, when three starters got hurt or sick during spring training and several players had subpar seasons. They won 90 games again this year, the seventh time one of Baker's teams has reached the mark.

The overriding question was whether he'd be physically able to continue managing. He's had an irregular heartbeat since he was a teenager and high blood pressure for years. He's managing the problems with a change in diet.

"Really his health was never an issue with us and him," Jocketty said. "The doctors in Chicago and Cincinnati gave him a clean bill of health and said he'd have a total recovery. We've seen a quick recovery. Look at him now — he looks happier and stronger than he was even months ago."

Baker has lost weight, much of it from fluid buildup.

"I can't wait for spring training," Baker said. "I feel excellent. I feel I have most of my strength back."

OSU

FROM 1B

"To go out and give up 49 points against Indiana was just embarrassing to us," cornerback Travis Howard said. "We all feel depressed about it."

Meyer called it "absurd" how many big gainers his defense surrendered and vowed to get more involved on that side of the ball. It sounded for all the world like an "or else" to both the current defensive starters — who may find themselves not playing unless the new head man sees change soon — or his assistants on that side of the ball.

"We're going to demand 4 to 6 seconds of relentless pursuit and effort," Meyer said. Then, he added, "If you don't, I'll be involved in that."

Meyer declined to offer excuses, even though several players are out with injuries. The Buckeyes don't have linebacker Etienne Sabino, sidelined for several weeks with a broken leg, and didn't have defensive lineman/outside linebacker Nathan Williams at Indiana. He didn't make the trip but is expected to return this week for the game against Purdue at Ohio Stadium.

Ohio State's defense looked lost at times on defense, repeatedly giving up yardage in clumps. Where missed tackles in the open field was a huge problem in past games, at times against the Hoosiers it was as if the Buckeyes didn't have a clue how to stop the Hoosiers' spread attack — which threw more down the field than flipping short screen passes.

Defensive coordinator Luke Fickell, the beleaguered interim head coach a year ago during a woeful 6-7 season, hinted at two problems.

First, the Buckeyes lack a distinct leader of the defense along the lines of former players such as James Laurinaitis, A.J. Hawk and Matt Wilhelm. They were middle linebackers who called signals, made plays and were savvy enough to cover up mistakes by others. If a quarterback slipped containment, they could close the deal by bringing him down. If a back found a hole and appeared to have daylight, they might rush to the spot and slow him down until help arrived.

"Are we lacking a little bit of that? Yeah. Sabino went down and maybe that's something that we don't have right now," Fickell said. "That's one of the big things we're trying to find: Who's that leader, who's that guy that doesn't just worry about themselves but can make the others around him better?"

Meyer has said that of the last 10 linebackers Ohio State has recruited, only two or three are still playing due to injuries, transfers or other problems.

Ohio State has tried to hurry freshmen into the picture at linebacker, but for the most part they have been ineffective. First-year players Connor Crowell, Camren Williams and David Perkins are listed as backups, with Josh Perry starting alongside Ryan Shazier and either Storm Klein or Zach Boren.

Last Wednesday Boren was moved from fullback, where he had played for 3½ seasons, to linebacker. Such a stopgap move — particularly on an unbeaten team in the Top 10 — is almost unheard of.

It all relates to the fact that the young players have not contributed.

"We're counting on some really, truly young guys to have to step up and maybe they're not quite ready yet," Fickell conceded.

Meyer, who preaches the gospel of the spread offense, is clearly pleased that his offense has put up 115 points in its last two games. But he also knows that successful programs don't survive for long by playing great on only one side of the ball.

"The (teams) that get to where the air is rarified, the real elite teams, (know) that at some point you have to play some really good defense. And they all do," Meyer said. "The top two right now are Alabama and Florida, the two best defenses in America — and it's not by accident they're 1-2" in the Bowl Championship Series rankings.

Meyer, who won two national championships at Florida with high-scoring spread offenses, added, "The great teams we've had over the years, yeah, we scored some points. But at the end of the day, defense wins games."

The Buckeyes recognize their inability to stop an Indiana team that is winless in a weakened Big Ten.

"We just had a horrible game. I'm not saying anything bad about Indiana, but I just feel that we should not have gone out like that," Shazier said. "We gave up too many yards, too many points. We have way better players than we showed. Nobody played to their standards."

Meyer sounds like a man willing to try anything to alleviate more nightmares like Saturday night, when the Buckeyes had a 52-34 lead and the ball with 4 minutes left — and still needed to recover an onside kick just to hang on for the win.

"Instead of just complaining and whining and making noise, we have to put a plan together to eliminate big plays," Meyer said. "I'm not a big believer in screaming and yelling and throwing Gatorade bottles against the wall."

"Sometimes you have to do that, however, to fix the problem."

Mickelson goes long in stadium shot, raises $50K

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Stadium golf took on a new meaning for Phil Mickelson, who overshot the big money targets on his 100-yard shot at halftime of Monday night's Broncos-Chargers game. He still raised $50,000 for First Book, a nonprofit organization that provides new books for needy children.

Had he hit one of the concentric rings in the middle of the green in the "KPMG Chip4Charity" promotion, Mickelson could have raised anywhere from $100,000 to $1 million for the charity.

As it is, the $50,000 will buy 20,000 books.

Mickelson took his wedge shot from one end zone at Qualcomm Stadium. The target green was in the other end zone.

The crowd responded with a mixture of boos and cheers when Lefty's shot missed the circles.

"I must have had a little bit more adrenaline because the ball was a little bit long. I thought I hit a pretty good shot but it flew long," Mickelson said.

Still, he had a good time.

"I haven't had this experience. This is an amazing experience. In golf, we don't get this," he said. "The 16th hole at TPC Scottsdale has nothing on this. This was awesome, seeing the Jumbotron with my picture, as I'm looking up taking the shot, that was unique. That was something that was pretty cool."

Meanwhile, it sounds like Mickelson is getting close to becoming an investor with the group that bought the San Diego Padres in August.

"It looks pretty promising and hopefully here in the next few days we'll have something to announce," said Mickelson, who is from San Diego. "I think we're getting it worked out."

Modano tops list of new US Hockey Hall of Famers

DALLAS (AP) — Mike Modano made his mark long before he and the Minnesota North Stars relocated to Dallas and brought hockey to the Sun Belt.

Once he got there in 1993, he didn't miss a beat.

Modano, the highest-scoring U.S.-born player in NHL history, joined longtime New Jersey Devils president and general manager Lou Lamoriello, and player-turned-broadcaster Ed Olczyk, as the newest inductees to the U.S. Hockey Hall of Fame on Monday night.

Modano lived up to his billing after being chosen with the first pick of the 1988 NHL draft.

By the time he retired in 2011, the Livonia, Mich., native was the Stars' leader in games played (1,459), goals (557), assists (802) and points (1,359). He also holds franchise records with 145 playoff points in a club-high 174 games.

Modano, who played his final NHL season with the Detroit Red Wings, leads U.S.-born players in goals (561) and points (1,374).

Olczyk was taken with the No. 3 pick in the 1984 draft by his hometown Chicago Blackhawks and went on to play 16 years in the NHL after starting his career as an 18-year old rookie.

Olczyk finished with 342 goals and 794 points in 1,031 games with Chicago, the Toronto Maple Leafs, the Winnipeg Jets, the New York Rangers, the Los Angeles Kings and the Pittsburgh Penguins.

He returned to the Blackhawks for his last two years in the NHL and retired in 2000. Olczyk is now NBC's lead hockey game analyst.

Lamoriello is entering the U.S. Hall of Fame as a builder, three years after his induction to the Hockey Hall of Fame in Toronto.

"The Americans are here, if that's the way to say it, and here to stay in every way," Lamoriello said.

Lamoriello's distinguished career started long before he joined the Devils and built them into perennial winners. With New Jersey, Lamoriello has earned three Stanley Cup championships in 24 seasons, and two other Eastern Conference titles — including last season.

Along with Modano, Lamoriello was also part of the U.S. team that won the gold medal in the 1996 World Cup of Hockey. Lamoriello served as the general manager of the American squad that beat Canada for the title.

"We wanted to change what they thought of us as players, that we didn't belong at their level," Modano said. "It took a long time, but we always felt in the back of our minds that we could prove a lot of countries wrong, that we could play with them."

Since then, the United States has remained among the hockey elite. The Americans earned the silver medal at the 2002 Salt Lake City Olympics and the 2010 Games in Vancouver.

"After the '96 World Cup, the American player is here," Lamoriello said. "That's when they got recognized, and the way you get recognized is when individuals have success. That was a long time ago. Now there's nothing to distinguish."

Before that, Lamoriello had a 22-year career as a player, coach and athletic director at Providence College. He was inducted into the Providence College Hall of Fame in 1982 and joined the Devils five years later.

A big reason for the United States' development as a hockey powerhouse is how the game has spread at the youth level to many non-traditional areas, including Dallas, where Stefan Noesen was a first-round draft pick in 2011 by the Ottawa Senators, and Seth Jones is predicted to be one of the top five selections next year.

Modano played a big role in that growth down south.

"In hindsight now, it's been a real remarkable transition the way the game has increased down here," Modano said. "I'm real proud of being part of that when it first started and watching it evolve, see the popularity increase. It was great to see and it was fun to be a part of."

Olczyk, a member of the 1984 U.S. Olympic team, is also helping to grow the game now in his high-profile position on television.

"I've just been really lucky throughout my entire career, and I've worn a lot of hats," Olczyk said. "I was a fan, I was a player, I was a coach, broadcaster and a dad, so on any given night, I can have one of those hats on. I love the game, and hockey has been my and my family's life."

That dedication and commitment isn't lost on Modano, a teammate of Olczyk's in international competition.

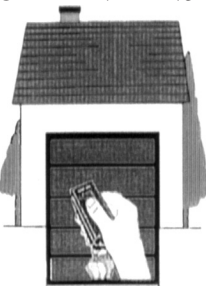

"Just a class guy, his approach to the game and professionalism," Modano said of Olczyk, his teammate in the 1991 Canada Cup. "He was a lot of fun to be around, so we've always had that connection since 1991. He's been remarkable for the game and on TV, and what he's done with NBC. He's our face and voice of USA Hockey, I feel."

Also on Monday, Bob Chase-Wallenstein and Dick Patrick were presented with the Lester Patrick Trophy.

Ravens LB Lewis, CB Webb lost for year

OWINGS MILLS, Md. (AP) — Ravens linebacker Ray Lewis will miss the remainder of the season with an arm injury, an enormous blow to an already depleted defense that has uncharacteristically struggled this year.

Lewis tore his right triceps during Sunday's 31-29 victory over Dallas. The 37-year-old Lewis leads Baltimore in tackles and is the voice of experience in the huddle.

"Ray in the locker room afterward, we didn't know (the extent of the injury) but he was worried about it," Ravens coach John Harbaugh said Monday. "He said some things about his faith. He said some things that I'll never forget."

Over a spectacular 17-year career, Lewis has been invited to 13 Pro Bowls, was named Super Bowl MVP and is a two-time NFL defensive player of the year. He turns 38 in May, so it's possible that Sunday's game was his last.

"That's for Ray to speak on," Harbaugh said.

Baltimore also lost cornerback Lardarius Webb for the year after he tore the ACL in his left knee Sunday. The injury occurred when Webb collided with Dallas wide receiver Dez Bryant in the first quarter.

Neither Lewis nor Webb spoke after Sunday's game and both were unavailable for comment on Monday.

For Harbaugh, it was more about the players than the impact losing them would have on the team.

"I'm disappointed for those guys," Harbaugh said. "It doesn't matter how I or someone else feels about it. It's their thing. These are guys that put so much effort, heart and soul into what they do."

Webb missed the latter part of his rookie season in 2009 with a torn right ACL, and now he's facing surgery again.

"Lardarius was distraught. I could see it when I walked onto the field, on his face," Harbaugh said. "He kind of knew because he's been through it before. I just felt like he knew. He was just beside himself."

The loss of Webb took some of the edge off Baltimore's third straight win.

"I'm hurting for that guy right now," safety Ed Reed said. "I know how hard he works to be out here and what he brings to the game. We have to play for him and pick him up because he's young."

Webb, who turned 27 last week, probably has many years left to play. Lewis' status is not as certain.

Lewis missed four games last year with a toe injury.

During the week and on game day he cheered for his teammates and offered encouragement. That, evidently, will be his job over the next few months.

"When you look at his situation and what he's accomplished, and what he was hoping to accomplish this year, he's going to have to accomplish those things in different ways because that's the way it's gone," Harbaugh said. "He puts his faith in providence. That's where he's going to go with that."

Jameel McClain and Dannell Ellerbe will fill the void left by Lewis' absence. It's the same role they filled last year.

"Those guys have played a lot of football and we've got a lot of confidence in those guys, Jameel and Dannell," Harbaugh said. "We feel good about that."

Jimmy Smith will probably step in for Webb.

The manner in which the Ravens rebound from the loss of Lewis and Webb will determine if they make the playoffs for a fifth straight season.

"I feel great about our guy's chances to fill in," Harbaugh said. "That's something we've been able to do in the past. Obviously, that's going to define what we're going to be able to accomplish this year. That's something we're going to need to do, from a leadership standpoint and from a playing standpoint. Our chances of doing it? I won't put odds on it. That's just something that we're going to have to get done."

The Ravens (5-1) have struggled to make up for the loss of linebacker Terrell Suggs, who is recovering from a torn right Achilles tendon. Baltimore yielded 489 yards, a franchise-record 227 on the ground, against Dallas on Sunday.

Now that the defense is without its leader and best cornerback, the Ravens may have to abandon its usual method of success.

"There have been many, many times where we've won because of our defense has carried a heavy, heavy burden over the years," Harbaugh said. "For our offense to carry some of that burden, and for our special teams to carry some of that burden, is a great thing. I'm quite sure our defense is going to do the same during the course of the season. I've got a lot of confidence in those guys. We're going to play really good defense as the year goes on."

Next on the schedule for Baltimore is a trip to Houston (5-1) in a rematch of last year's playoff game.

HOROSCOPE

By HOLIDAY MATHIS
10/16/12

In the world of the Internet, a "troll" is someone who posts negative, inflammatory and provocative messages to disrupt the online dynamic. In fairy tales, a troll lives under a bridge and snacks on passersby. In life, a troll is any toxic person or situation you suspect should be avoided, especially given the current square of Venus and Jupiter.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You'll be reminded that many do not possess the depth of character you seek in a partner. In a sense, you'll qualify people before you invite friendship or allow yourself to get close in any way.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Even though real stability can't come from money, you look forward to a time when you can say that you're financially established and really feel in every cell of your body that it is true.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Knowing that people get desensitized to that which they observe several times a day, you're careful to make the experience of being with you something unique and impactful.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Thoroughly though you might search, you'll be hard-pressed to find a reason to agonize. Whatever doesn't work out can be attempted again later. In order to do your best, you must first relax.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You never know how people are going to react when you present yourself and your ideas. But if you take enough risks, you'll lose your fear of their reaction. The response of others will either educate or motivate you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You've reached a point where thinking more won't help matters. There's information and energy locked inside you that will only come out through the movement of your body.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Your spending tells a story. Your bank statements paint a picture of you. You may not agree with the image it paints, though, and if you want to make changes to your budget, now is an excellent time to do so.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Whether you are meeting with colleagues, fixing a meal or driving in traffic, there is a correct way to execute the action. You will refine your character by being thorough in every activity.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You don't have to look for followers. Those who want your leadership will come to you because they see what you do and recognize that it's exactly what they need.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). There are times to challenge authority and times to submit. Being strictly one way or the other won't help matters. Respond fluidly, taking each scene as it comes and playing it by ear.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You have mental clarity and can lead others out of murky thought patterns. Work toward your own goals first, though, and you'll have more to contribute to the group.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Your financial luck is strong today, although it shows up in the form of a steady stream, or even a trickle, of good fortune. Cash flow is sometimes more like "change" flow, but the pennies and dimes add up!

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Oct. 16). You'll break old habits and broaden your horizons this year. In November, you'll swing between solitude and popularity, enjoying each state equally. December brings the start of a business or a restructuring of your work. In January, you begin a good karma cycle by volunteering and doing charity work. Cancer and Virgo people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 3, 24, 39, 19 and 20.

ASTROLOGICAL QUESTIONS: "I lost my wife in January and have had a terrible time of it this year. It may seem too soon to be curious about the future, but I am terribly lonely and wondering whether there is someone else coming into my life anytime soon? I'm a Capricorn born in 1949."

I'm so sorry for your loss and understand why you would want to know about your future romantic prospects. The idea that you could love again will help you get through this hard time. The void in your heart will probably always be there, but it doesn't mean you won't love again. In fact, 2013 is quite promising in matters of romance. I believe your wife will help you from the beyond if you call on her to do so. True love wants for the other person's happiness, however it might be gained. In the weeks to come, your grieving process can be helped along by exploring your interests in three categories: professional, recreational and intellectual. Set goals in those three areas. Capricorns are always at their most attractive while in pursuit of a challenge.

Virgo and Pisces people are the most attuned to your relationship needs.

Helpful stamp for kids

Heloise

Dear Heloise: I read, a few years ago, about an organization that involved young children who could use CANCELED POSTAGE STAMPS in their activities. The stamps were used to teach children about collecting or something. If you have any information about this, I would be grateful. Also the address would be helpful, if you know of such an organization. — W.V., Pine Bluff, Ark.

You are referring to Stamp Camp USA in Pennsylvania. You are correct that the camp introduces children to stamp collecting. The camp's website, www.stamp-campusa.org, shares lists of other items that can be donated, as well as other information.

Send canceled stamps and other donations (like copy paper, envelopes, ribbon, buttons or even pipe cleaners) to: Stamp Camp USA, 117 Court St., Ste. A., Elkland, PA 16920. You also can call the camp at 814-258-5601. Stamp Camp USA is not funded or supported by any government agency, so it relies on donations. By sending this organization your canceled stamps, you not only are helping it, but you are recycling stamps. A winning combination! — Heloise

SPECIAL DIETS AND THE HOLIDAYS

Dear Heloise: With the holidays coming up, many hostesses will face guests who are on special diets — especially vegan diets. Here are suggestions from an old vegan:

— If the guests are local, do a potluck. Your vegetarian guests can bring food that they can eat and share. If they can't cook, pasta with marinara sauce (meat-free tomato sauce) is filling and delicious for everyone.

— For houseguests, do a buffet. They always can eat salad, bread, vegetables and often dessert. One or two meat-free meals won't kill anyone, and if you like, you can put a few veggie burgers in the freezer to substitute for a meat entree. — Pam J., Prescott, Ariz.

MICROWAVE PLATE

Dear Heloise: I always enjoy reading your column, and have picked up so many invaluable hints. Similar to one of your readers, we had a broken microwave but didn't want to throw away the glass plate, so we put it underneath our coffee maker. It catches not only water spills, but any coffee spills as well.

My husband was so pleased that the next time another microwave broke, he took the glass plate from it and put it underneath the single-cup coffee maker at his airplane hangar. That came in real handy the day he was using that coffee maker to brew a cup of coffee and forgot to put the cup underneath it. — Linda E., Southlake, Texas

WIPING DOG'S PAWS

Dear Heloise: I read the suggestion about using diaper wipes to clean your dog's feet when coming inside. These certainly work, but they are not very good for the environment. I know someone who uses old, worn-out bath towels. A couple of these towels folded by the door can be used, washed and reused. We should all be thinking eco-friendly these days. — Dulcie, via email

Hopes wife outgrows drunken nights out

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have been married for eight months. She has an occasional habit that makes me wonder whether we got married too young. (She's 23, I'm 27 and we're both in graduate school.)

She likes to go out with a group of her friends from high school or with her sister and her sister's friends, get drunk and stay the night. It doesn't happen all the time — several times a year — and I'm not worried about her cheating on me. I try not to be the controlling husband and say she "can't" go out. But it bothers me that she wants to spend the night with her single friends and get drunk. If I try to talk to her about it, she gets angry and says she doesn't get to see her friends very often.

I don't understand why her socializing always has to involve drinking and staying out all night. Her sister is my age and has a career in education, but still likes hosting these parties. I wonder how long it will take my wife to outgrow this phase. Am I being controlling? What should I do? — GETTING FRUSTRATED IN PONTIAC, MICH.

DEAR GETTING FRUSTRATED: Your wife appears to be trying to hold onto her carefree single days, and it's a shame she can't do that without getting herself soused and staying out all night. On the other hand, if she's in no condition to get behind the wheel, then it's better that she not drive until she sobers up.

I don't think saying what's on your mind is "controlling." I suspect your wife becomes angry because she is defensive. Her behavior is immature, and how long it will take her to outgrow this "phase" is anybody's guess. I recommend that you both widen your circle of friends so you spend more time with other married couples who are more mature than your wife's sister and high school friends appear to be.

DEAR ABBY: I have reached a crossroad in my life. Just when I thought I had everything, from the house with the white picket fence to the family dog and children, I have learned something about my husband. He had never opened up about himself other than to say he was raised by his father and stepmom who abused him as a child.

As I was cleaning out a closet and getting rid of some things, I came across his old briefcase, which I opened to see if anything of importance was inside before tossing it. To my shock, there were photos and a DVD of what seemed like pornography of himself and other women.

I can respect past relationships, but having done something like this and kept the evidence is very troubling to me. I find myself needing closure, but when I try to talk to him, he brushes me off. I feel betrayed, unsure who I married and lost about what else to do. What do you advise? — CONFUSED IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR CONFUSED: How old does your husband appear to be in those photos? If they are recent, then it is important that you get to the bottom of this — and counseling may help you find the answers you're looking for.

However, if they are NOT recent, let the past stay buried. Some women keep old love letters long after the romance is over. And some men keep old pictures like the ones you found.

Antibiotics before dental visit dilemma

Dr. Donohue

DEAR DRS. DONOHUE AND ROACH: I had two total hip replacements about 10 years ago. I was told that I should take antibiotics one hour before undergoing dental procedures. I take 600 milligrams of clindamycin.

Recently, I read that a considerable percentage of the orthopedic medical community is of the opinion that antibiotics are NOT required after a two-year post-op period. My dentist feels otherwise, but I feel he may be reacting with an overabundance of precaution because of the possibility of litigation in the event an infection were to develop after dental work. Your thoughts? — C.H.

ANSWER: People with total hip replacements have hardware in their joints that is at higher risk for infection than normal, healthy joints, so it makes sense to consider using antibiotics before procedures that might cause a temporary inflow of bacteria.

The American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons doesn't give a specific recommendation, just that clinicians consider prescribing antibiotics. Early studies show that infection of the artificial joint can happen even many years after surgery, so I'm not sure the two-year rule makes complete sense. Ultimately, your doctor has to weigh the risks of the antibiotic (low, but not zero) against the risk of infection (low, but disastrous if it occurs). Doctors and dentists do think about litigation risk, but let's give your dentist the benefit of the doubt and assume he reasoned that the possible side effects of an antibiotic you have taken before are less dangerous than the small possibility of an infected hip joint.

DEAR DRS. DONOHUE AND ROACH:

Man, 64, has no luck with the ladies

Annie's Mailbox

Dear Annie: I am a 64-year-old man in excellent health. The problem is, I never have had much luck with the ladies. I adore all kinds of women: tall ones, short ones, average ones and even plump ones. The only ladies I do not find attractive are the grossly fat ones and those who smoke, drink too much or use drugs.

But, Annie, women don't seem to like me at all, and I don't know why. I am well read and easy to get along with and try to help people when I can. I don't drink or smoke. I exercise a lot and eat healthy food. I am mostly bald, and so I shave off the few hairs that still grow on top of my fully functional solar cell. I am not a sports nut. I don't go to bars because the music is too loud, and most of the women I meet there like their booze too much.

My brother has always been popular with the ladies. I don't know what he has that I don't. I've tried online dating sites, but they haven't worked for me. I would like to meet some decent women. What am I doing wrong? — Lonely in Nova Scotia

Dear Lonely: We don't know. A well-read, helpful, decent guy who is in excellent health and interested in nearly all kinds of women
