Drug sweep comes up clean

Surprise search done at Salem Jr./Sr. High

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

A surprise search by drug-sniffing dogs yielded a clean sweep at Salem Senior and Junior High School Thursday morning, with the exception of a very small amount of marijuana found in a student's vehicle.

"We didn't find anything in the school," Salem Police Patrolman Brad Davis said.

He referred to the marijuana found in the vehicle in the parking lot as shake, the loose leaves left over sometimes. No charges were filed, but he talked to the student about drug use and the student's parents were also notified.

While inside the school, the two dogs hit on a handful of lockers for the odor of marijuana, resulting in searches of four or five lockers, but with nothing found.

"The kids need to know that we're aware and we're out there looking," Superintendent Tom Bratten said.

This was the third year in a row for a surprise inspection and all three years the school passed. Searches have been done in the past, also. Bratten was the only school official who knew when the search would be done, none of the principals, teachers or students knew that Thursday was the day.

Bratten said he showed up about fifteen minutes before the appointed time and informed the principals the school was being placed on lockdown, then the law enforcement personnel showed up and led the dogs by all the lockers on both floors. The students were sent back to class when the search continued in the parking lot of both student and teacher vehicles.

"I was very pleased with the results. Everything went very smooth," he said.

Adkins sentenced to 10 years

By DEANNE JOHNSON
Staff Writer

LISBON — Columbiana County Common Pleas Court Judge Scott Washam sentenced Jamie Adkins to 10 years in prison Thursday.

Adkins, 30, Dresden Avenue, East Liverpool, is the brother of Holly Cariosello, who was shot and killed as she and a group including Adkins attempted to break into her estranged husband's house.

More details about what may have happened that night became evident as Adkins, defense attorney Kelly Linger and Adkins' parents all made statements prior to sentencing.

Assistant County Prosecutor John Gamble blamed Adkins as being the one who organized two groups of people planning to break into Nicholas Cariosello's home to steal both drugs and drug money on Aug. 12,

Domestic violence victim delivers message at KSU

BERRY

By MARY ANN GREIER

SALEM

Salem resident Donna Beery said her story of abuse began at age 4, the first time her father raped her.

Her childhood was one of beatings and sexual abuse. She watched her mother's head go through a wall once. She and her brother took beatings in an effort to protect their younger siblings. Her brother became an abuser, too.

When she grew up, the abuse continued with her first two husbands. She even felt abused by an employer who took advantage of her lack of confidence by demanding that she work even when injured.

Three years ago, she started therapy and learned that she's not stupid and worthless as she was told over and over. She matters — and that was the message she delivered to all victims of domestic violence during a program at Kent State University Salem campus on Thursday.

"I believe I am now on the right path. I am someone with something to contribute," she said to a small audience.

The event was hosted by KSU Salem Student Government and included a talk by Columbiana County Sheriff Ray Stone. Representatives of the Christina House domestic violence shelter and counselors were also on hand.

"We're just trying to get out and do something for the community," Student Government President Mike Bentfeld said.

October is Domestic Violence Awareness Month.

Vehicular homicide charge rescheduled for jury trial

By DEANNE JOHNSON
Staff Writer

LISBON —The vehicular homicide charge against Michael Bair, a 31-year-old truck driver from Poland, has been again rescheduled for a jury trial in Columbiana County Municipal Court.

Bair is charged in the March death of David Mayfield, 35, Annesley Road, East Liverpool. Mayfield was killed on March 13 when a dump truck overturned onto his Dodge Durango off the side of state Route 7 in Elkrun Township. Bair, the driver of the dump truck, was hauling gravel for Sebastian Trucking.

While both sides had started Thursday hoping to finalize a plea agreement, the deal apparently fell through.

The plea hearing scheduled for 11:30 a.m. did not go forward until after 1 p.m., as two defense attorneys David A. D'Apolito and Mark A. Carfolo, Assistant Prosecutor Don Humphrey and even an attorney for the family Nicholas Amato spoke together several times, including at times with Judge Mark Frost.

"We've had some lengthy discussions," D'Apolito said. "Some additional elements have been added. I think (Bair) is feeling pressure and he would like some additional time to think about it."

One of the items discussed in open court was that Bair was being asked to plead to a first-degree misdemeanor, not a third degree misdemeanor as originally thought.

Frost also apologized, noting that while he was not involved in creating the deal there were parameters he had told them he would not accept in a plea agreement.

Frost said he understood Bair needing additional time and set the case for a jury trial on Dec. 6.

He asked the attorneys to let the court know if Bair decided to take the plea deal instead and another hearing could be set for him to plead.

Ohio meningitis cases up to nine

COLUMBUS (AP) — The Ohio Department of Health says the number of meningitis cases linked to recalled steroid injections has risen to nine in the state.

The health department says five cases have been reported in Marion County, and one case each in Crawford, Hamilton, Morrow and Warren counties. None have died.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said Wednesday that 19 people have died among the 247 sickened in 15 states in the outbreak of rare fungal meningitis. They all received shots of an apparently contaminated steroid medication made by a Massachusetts specialty pharmacy.

Officials say 64 facilities in Ohio received the potentially contaminated steroids. The state said it is in the process of revising the number of Ohioans who received the injections. Most have been warned to watch for symptoms.

VP candidate Ryan to visit to eastern Ohio

BELMONT (AP) — Republican vice presidential candidate Paul Ryan's latest Ohio campaign stop will take him to eastern Ohio. The Mitt Romney campaign says the Wisconsin congressman will lead a rally Saturday at Valley View Campgrounds in Belmont. That's near West Virginia, in a region of Ohio where the Romney campaign thinks it can swing voters its way because of concerns about the economy and the future of the coal industry under President Barack Obama.

Former president Bill Clintoncampaigned Thursday afternoon for Obama in eastern Ohio, in Wintersville.

Saturday will be the fifth day in a little more than a week in which Ryan has campaigned in Ohio. Democratic Vice President Joe Biden will return to the swing state early next week, at places yet to be announced.

Teen's father sues board over assault

HUBER HEIGHTS, Ohio (AP) — The father of a 14-year-old Ohio boy who said he was assaulted by upperclassmen at his high school is suing the school board and two of the alleged attackers.

The Montgomery County man filed a lawsuit against the board of Huber Heights City Schools and the two young men on Oct. 12. The lawsuit says that in 2010, four upperclassmen cornered the teen, and two of them assaulted him in a sexual way. The suit says the attackers — who were on the baseball team — described it as a hazing ritual.

The suit accuses Wayne High School of knowing about the ritual and showing deliberate indifference by failing to act.

Huber Heights Superintendent Susan Gunnell didn't immediately return a call for comment Thursday.

Suicide attempts worry Chardon officials

CHARDON, Ohio (AP) — Seven suicide attempts by students at the same Ohio high school where a mass shooting occurred in February have officials concerned.

The (Willoughby) News-Herald reports there were seven suicide attempts by six Chardon High School students from May through September. Administrators are now taking action to try to prevent others. School district superintendent Joseph Bergant told the newspaper he thinks the February shooting at the school that left three students dead has taken its toll on survivors. The district is now increasing efforts to spread awareness regarding the signs and symptoms of those who may be considering doing harm to themselves or others and need help. Eighteen-year-old T.J. Lane is charged in the shooting, which also left three students wounded. His trial is pending.

Ohio student loan debt rising

COLUMBUS (AP) — Average student-loan debt for graduating college students in Ohio is on the rise.

A report by the Project on Student Debt said Ohio students who borrowed for college and earned a bachelor's degree in 2011 graduated with an average of $28,683.

That's the seventh highest in the nation and a 3.5-percent increase over 2010. The Columbus Dispatch reports that the Ohio average is nearly 8 percent higher than the national average. Like the previous year, 68 percent of the state's 2011 graduates left school with at least some student-loan debt.

Ohio Board of Regents Chancellor Jim Petro said he will continue to push Ohio's public colleges to keep their costs down and find ways to move students through school more quickly to reduce their debt.

Man gets 4 years for church arson

EMARYSVILLE, Ohio (AP) — A judge has sentenced a 31-year-old man to more than four years in prison for burning down a central Ohio church in January.

The Columbus Dispatch reports that Stephen Beightler was sentenced Wednesday after pleading guilty to charges of arson, vandalism and breaking-and-entering related to his burning of the New Horizons Baptist Church in Marysville.

Authorities say Breightler, who grew up in the area, stole a car from his roommate in Philadelphia on Jan. 10, drove to Marysville and drove through the doors of the church. Then he poured gasoline around the building, set it ablaze and watched from a nearby playground swing. The church was destroyed. No one has publicly offered a motive for the fire.

Man dead after hitting deer hit by another

WORTHINGTON, Pa. (AP) — State police say a western Pennsylvania man has been killed after his car hit the carcass of a deer that was knocked into his lane by another car, causing the victim's car to crash into a tri-axle truck.

Troopers in Kittanning have yet to release the name of the 34-year-old Homer City man killed Thursday about 5:20 a.m. on U.S. Route 422 in West Franklin Township. That's about 35 miles northeast of Pittsburgh.

Police say the deer was first hit by an eastbound car, sending the carcass into the westbound lanes where the victim's car also hit the animal, went out of control, then smashed into the eastbound truck. The passenger in the dead man's car has been taken to a Pittsburgh hospital with serious injuries. Police say the truck driver was treated nearby.

NOAA: Warm winter in West, but East?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal meteorologists are forecasting a milder and drier winter for much of the western United States, but say they are stumped about what will happen in the East. The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration Thursday predicted a warm winter for west of the Mississippi River with a cooler patch for Hawaii and the Florida peninsula. Officials forecast a drier than normal winter for a region from the Pacific Northwest to Nevada, as well as Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin and northern Missouri. Much of the southeast should be wetter than normal.

The climate prediction center's Mike Halpert says this forecast has meteorologists somewhat stumped, especially the East, because an El Nino weather oscillation didn't form as predicted. It began brewing months ago and suddenly stopped. Meteorologists hadn't seen that happen before.

Newsweek to cease print edition

NEW YORK (AP) — Newsweek will end its print publication after 80 years and shift to an all-digital format in early 2013. Its last U.S. print edition will be its Dec. 31 issue. The paper version of Newsweek is the latest casualty of a changing world where readers get more of their information from websites, tablets and smartphones. It's also an environment in which advertisers are looking for less expensive alternatives online. Newsweeklies have been in an especially tough spot at a time when people don't want to wait a week to read commentary and news digests of big stories, given a flood of instant content available online. Newsweek's decision does not come as a surprise. Barry Diller, the head of the company that owns Newsweek, announced in July that the publication was examining its future as a weekly print magazine. Diller said then that producing a weekly news magazine in print form wasn't easy.

Newsweek isn't the first to drop its print product. US News & World Report dropped its weekly print edition years ago and now focuses on the Web and special print editions, such as a guide to best graduate schools.

He was cited for OVI, transported to his residence and his property was returned. At 2 p.m. Cope called police requesting that he be allowed to go to his truck and get his prescriptions. Police had not located any pills during the inventory other than one for his wife in the glove box which was removed as evidence. Cope advised it was his Xanax pills and police advised they were returned and they were on his person and not in his truck at the time of his arrest. Cope said he would check his stuff and called back advising two other prescription bottles may have fallen behind the seat. The vehicle was checked and nothing was located. On Oct. 10 Cope called again stating the two prescription were in his vehicle and he was advised nothing was located, but police checked once more and nothing was located.

On Oct. 11, his vehicle was immobilized at his residence and on Oct. 15 police learned that Cope had filed a report with the Columbiana police stating his truck was entered at the AAA yard and 110 of his 120 Xanax pills were taken. An officer spoke to Cope at his residence while serving a minor misdemeanor citation for an unrelated marijuana possession case. The officer asked about the bottle of Xanax pills that the officer had returned to him and he initially advised he threw it away as they "got him into trouble." The officer asked where the garbage was and Cope said he would be right back and returned with the empty Xanax pill bottle, stating he had lied. He advised the pills were gone as he threw them away and said he had two bottles, and the prescriptions were broken up. His initial prescription was for 120 and got it filled in quantities of 60 each. The pill bottle produced was filled on Oct. 6 for 60 pills and he said both were filled in Columbiana, but the investigation learned it was first filled in Salem, and the second on Oct. 6 in East Palestine. He advised the only reason he filed a police report was to get the pills back so he could "throw them away." He said they were not in the glove box but on the console and must have fallen down. Police learned he went to a doctor on Friday and attempted to get a prescription for stolen medication but was advised that he needed a police report, which most likely prompted the report with Columbiana police. After further questioning Cope was charged with attempted deception to obtain a dangerous drug and was transported to the county jail.

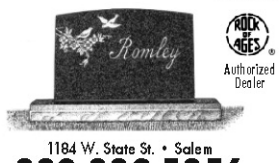

— Police responded to the 3400 block of Pinewood Dr. at 9:55 a.m. Friday for a domestic dispute. Upon arrival, police could hear loud arguing by a man and woman from the bottom of the stairway. After questioning, both said nothing physical occurred and they were advised to keep their arguments at low level and not let their disagreements escalate into anything physical.

— Police responded to the 47000 block of state Route 46 regarding a dog complaint at 11:42 a.m. Saturday. Police observed the dog near the Methodist Church but were unable to capture it.

— Police responded to the McClure Ave. in East Palestine at 6:11 p.m. Sunday to assist police there regarding a domestic between a man and woman.

— Police cited Sherman Greathouse of New Waterford at 7:26 p.m. Saturday for driving under suspension after observing him on Pinewood Drive and conducting a registration check.

The vehicle inventory report conducted by New Waterford police prior to the vehicle being impounded showed no pill bottle found.

An Oct. 25 pretrial was set for Beau M. McGuire, Gavers Road, Hanoverton, charged with assault for allegedly on Wednesday grabbing Candee Campbell by the arms, throwing her onto the bed inside his home and also causing injuries while she was a passenger in his truck between Salem and McGuire's home. She alleged he bit her face and lip and grabbed her by the neck choking her.

A Dec. 4 pretrial was set for Michael E. Oates Jr., charged with obstruction of official business on Oct. 2 for allegedly striking himself causing a cut above his right eyebrow and then attempting to convince police his mother had hit him.

A speeding citation against Lawrence McLaughlin, 67, West Salem Street, Columbiana, was dismissed due to a technical filing error.

Vote for Mandel for U.S. Senate

The role of U.S. senators is to represent their constituents' best interests in Washington. Josh Mandel, who has served Ohioans in the Marine Corps, the General Assembly and now as state treasurer, will do that when Buckeye State voters elect him to the Senate.

Sen. Sherrod Brown, D-Ohio, who is running for re-election against Mandel, views service to his party and its leaders as his top priority. That has meant Brown often votes against the best interests of Ohioans.

Brown has been steadfast in his support of President Barack Obama and Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev. He has been a staunch supporter of the national health care takeover — "Obamacare" - despite the cost to Ohio.

If Obamacare proceeds, thousands of Ohioans pleased with the health insurance they have will lose it. Thousands of others will pay more for health insurance. Still others will be fined thousands of dollars for refusing to buy government-approved health insurance policies.

Brown has supported the Obama administration's attempt to force electricity prices up by hundreds of dollars a year in most Ohio households, by wrecking the coal industry.

About 82 percent of Ohio's electricity is generated at coal-fired power plants - several of which already are scheduled to be shut down because of the Obama administration's new rules. They will be replaced with higher-priced generating capacity.

To understand what higher power prices mean to jobs in Ohio, consider the Ormet aluminum plant in Monroe County. There, more than 1,000 jobs may be lost because of electric rate increases.

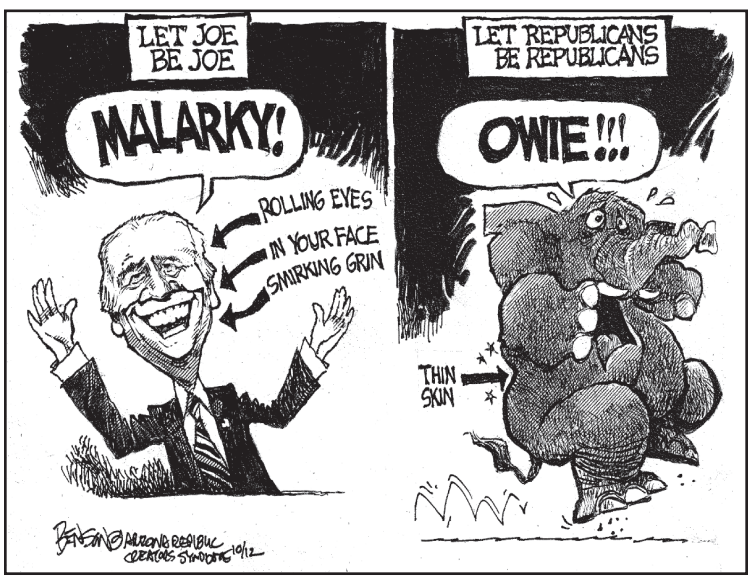

Mandel will use his Senate seat to defend Ohio. His philosophy calls for a repeal of Obamacare, substituting real health care reform.

Mandel will reject the Environmental Protection Agency's war on coal, holding prices for electricity down.

He will insist on fiscal responsibility in the Senate — which has not managed to pass a budget in 42 months.

A fairer, more jobs-friendly tax code, a realistic energy policy including maximum use of American natural gas and oil, and support for basic rights such as that to keep and bear arms also are on Mandel's agenda. They have no place in Brown's thinking, as he has demonstrated during his time in the Senate.

Ohioans need a senator to represent them — not liberals such as Obama and Reid. Vote Mandel in the Nov. 6 election.

Hillary Clinton's mea culpa

KATHLEEN PARKER

WASHINGTON — Once again, Hillary Clinton has demonstrated herself to be the classiest person in the room. No wonder she's one of the most revered public figures in America.

But she is a politician, the context by which all things must be judged — at least on second pass. The first pass goes as follows: She manned up. She took responsibility for the attacks at the Benghazi compound. Good for the secretary of state.

Speaking from Peru on Monday, Clinton told CNN, "I take responsibility" for protecting diplomats. "What I want to avoid is some kind of political gotcha."

Which brings us to the second pass.

There's nothing like a pre-emptive act of courage, otherwise known as falling on one's sword, to prevent a gotcha, particularly during a presidential campaign in which the challenger is trying to focus on security and/or intelligence failures that resulted in the deaths of Ambassador Chris Stevens and three other Americans.

This rendition seems to be the most popular among Republicans — so far. Alternatives include that Clinton is making herself a target so that Republicans will attack her and attract sympathetic women back to the Obama fold. Riiiiight.

In the month since the attacks, a timeline of which shows a variety of explanations and backfilling, the word Benghazi has become Barack Obama's WMD. What did he know and when did he know it?

Mitt Romney came out swinging on 9/11, the day of the attacks, literally before the dust had settled. Now, Sens. John McCain, Lindsey Graham and Kelly Ayotte have issued a press release lauding Clinton's gesture while pointing a finger at the White House.

The senators noted several red flags that should have signaled the rising threat level in Benghazi. Among them: a bomb attack on the U.S. mission in April, another detonation outside the mission in June, and an assassination attempt on the British ambassador.

"If the president was truly not aware of this rising threat level in Benghazi, then we have lost confidence in his national security team, whose responsibility it is to keep the president informed," the senators said.

They also questioned the White House's initial characterization of the attacks as a spontaneous protest around the now-famous (and ridiculous) anti-Islam video that set off demonstrations elsewhere, including at U.S. embassies in Egypt and Yemen.

In fact, there were no apparent demonstrations in Benghazi on the day of the attack. In her remarks from Peru, Clinton blamed the fog of war for the confusion and the difficulty of getting reliable information, a theme that has become the crux of the Obama administration's explanation. U.N. Ambassador Susan Rice has blamed poor intelligence for her own lack of awareness that greater security was needed in Benghazi.

That is one hot potato.

Clinton sensibly has recommended stepping back from politics and allowing the FBI investigation to proceed. But this sentiment, appealing as it is, requires a third pass. Who benefits from stepping back? And when, exactly, did faulty intelligence on the ground excuse the commander in chief from responsibility? Not recently that I can recall.

It is a fact that the White House doesn't have daily responsibility for embassy security. Neither the president nor the vice president was aware that there had been requests for additional security at the Benghazi consulate.

So, who knew what and when? Who dropped the ball? Who said there was yellowcake when there was none? Is this a political moment that shouldn't be?

Former New York Mayor Rudy Giuliani, calling Obama's handling of the situation "a policy of provocative weakness," says Romney should exploit Benghazi for political gain. But this kind of bluster can backfire, as was the case when Romney criticized Obama before the facts were known.

Leadership requires temperance. The purpose of the investigation shouldn't be to affix blame but to strengthen weaknesses. Only our enemies benefit from our circular sniping.

Which brings us to pass No. 4: Stevens went to Benghazi knowing the risks and died in the service of his country, the people of Libya and the greater good. It is tragic, but it is war.

Our only conclusion at this point is that we don't know what happened. But it is also clear that no one in the Obama administration knew what was going on either. We will see. Until then, it is fair and reasonable to entertain the notion that Hillary Clinton simply did the right thing. The nation benefits from her example.

OTHER VOICES

Oct. 10 — Waco (Texas) Tribune-Herald on election season conspiracies:

For all our enlightenment in this information age, conspiracy theories permeate American life, especially politics. Some of us will embrace such theories because they very conveniently rubber-stamp suspicions or biases we have, even when evidence is clearly lacking.

Latest example of this: the wild-eyed claim that the Bureau of Labor Statistics data reflecting a drop in the national unemployment rate was "cooked" to help President Barack Obama win re-election. No less than retired General Electric CEO Jack Welch, once a sage in matters of business, accused "these Chicago guys" of altering numbers in the monthly jobs report to show the lowest unemployment rate since Obama took office.

Welch subsequently admitted he has no evidence the labor numbers are being doctored, yet refuses to withdraw his widely twittered comment. Others have jumped on the bandwagon, again without a shred of proof of some massive conspiracy in the U.S. Department of Labor to fix numbers.

Sadly, this election has seen more absurd conspiracy theories and unverified claims than we ought to see — no doubt a testament to the high feelings in both political camps in a nation almost evenly divided in presidential preferences.

We only hope undecided voters are discriminating enough to size up such claims for what they truly are: balderdash served up by desperate political hacks, public tricksters and publicity-seekers. ...

Is Congress a spectator at the game of governance?

GEORGE WILL

DALLAS — In the 1920s, in the wee small hours of the mornings, employees at the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas sang while they worked. One, Jack Culpepper, went into vaudeville, where he teamed up with a dance partner named Ginger. They married and performed as "Ginger and Pepper." But show business marriages are perishable, so Ginger Rogers found another dance partner, Fred Astaire.

Richard Fisher, president of the Dallas Fed, who calls the legendary dance team "Fed and Ginger," defends the Fed as an institution as vigorously as he questions its current policy. He prefers policies more suited to the Fed as it was before it acquired the burden — and temptation — of the dual mandate. Hence his praise for legislation by another Texan, Republican Rep. Kevin Brady.

Before the Fed was created 99 years ago, the U.S. economy was in recession 48 percent of the time; since 1913, it has been in recession only about 20 percent of the time. The Fed has done much good. It cannot, however, do every good thing, although Congress now seems to think it should.

In July, Fed Chairman Ben Bernanke testified to the Senate, where one of Fisher's Harvard classmates, the ineffable Chuck Schumer, D-N.Y., clearly hoping the Fed would give the economy a pre-election boost, exhorted Bernanke: "The Fed is the only game in town." Good grief.

Is Congress a spectator at the game of governance? Does it have anything to do with tax rates, spending levels and health care and other policies that have American businesses, in Fisher's words, "inundated with regulatory overload"? Expecting — no, mandating — the Fed to perform the irreducibly political task of managing economic policy means offloading legislative responsibilities. And this inevitably involves what James Bullard, Fisher's counterpart at the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis, calls the "creeping politicization" of the Fed, a worry Fisher shares.

For the first 64 years of its existence, the Fed's mandate was price stability — preserving the currency as a store of value by tightly controlling inflation. But in 1977, Congress stipulated maximizing employment as the Fed's second mandate. Fisher thinks "a single mandate would serve our country best." Brady's Sound Dollar Act, which has 48 House sponsors, would restore the single mandate, and make other changes Fisher favors. For example:

Fisher began his career with Brown Brothers Harriman, the private bank, and later was notably successful as founder and manager of several fund-management firms. He knows whereof he speaks when he speaks of capitalism. And of New York, which he enjoys calling "flyover country" with The New York Times as its "local newspaper." He says the Fed, through its regional banks, was "designed for us to be Main Street's voice." Brady agrees that today's membership on the policymaking Federal Open Market Committee — seven members of the Reserve Board, the president of the New York Fed, and rotating four of the presidents of the regional banks — gives excessive weight to New York and Washington. The Sound Dollar Act would give permanent FOMC voting rights to all 12 of the Fed bank presidents.

Two months after Schumer's exhortation, the Fed announced a "highly accommodative stance of monetary policy," meaning expanding the money supply by buying $40 billion of bonds every month for an undetermined number of years, lasting "for a considerable time after the economic recovery strengthens." Bernanke was appointed by President George W. Bush; his second term expires Jan. 31, 2014, in what could be the second year of a third presidency. And the policy he has announced may continue when he departs.

"This is a 'Main Street' policy," Bernanke says, about "trying to get jobs going." The theory is that expanding the money supply will further drive down interest rates and this somehow will prompt hiring and investing. Fisher is skeptical, and fears that such government fidgets might exacerbate today's paralyzing uncertainties. America, he says, has the world's "most muscular business community" but capital is "on the sidelines" — $1.4 trillion in excess bank reserves, $2 trillion on the books of S&P 500 companies — because businesses "do not know what their cost structure is going to be."

Thanks to prior "highly accommodative" policies, the economy's "gas tank is full, if not more" but it is unclear "who is going to step on the accelerator." Perhaps no one will, as long as the Fed is regarded as "the only game in town."

Trustees approve fifth RUMA in Fairfield Twp.

By LARRY SHIELDS
Staff Writer

FAIRFIELD TOWNSHIP — Trustees approved the township fifth road use management agreement during Thursday's meeting.

The agreement is for six-tenths of a mile on Kelly Park Road from state Route 164 for the Margo well.

Two representatives of the Civil Engineers of Southwest Ohio who were representing Chesapeake Exploration asked for approval and Trustee Barry Miner added two amendments to the RUMA that he had discussed with Chesapeake's Brett Bankert earlier.

That regarded the "scoping process" and some piping along the RUMA stretch.

Miner also wanted to make sure Chesapeake advised trustees when of an drilling moves and when the fracking begins "so when we get calls from residents."

The RUMA calls form milling four inches off and laying a 1.5-inch top for the road. Miner also pointed out a portion of the road where they wanted small aggregate instead of top soil.

The RUMA also includes a copy of the Ohio attorney general's opinion regarding payment of the prevailing wage for people working on RUMAs.

Last month, after Richland County sought an opinion, the attorney generals said the prevailing wage should apply to road maintenance agreements with oil and gas drillers or wind farm operators.

In doing so, it would make sure skilled professionals are employed for the projects. Neither representative from CESO had a timetable regarding operations on the Margo drilling site.

The township had previously signed RUMAs for Low, Beeson Mill, Crestview and Miller roads.

Miner said the RUMA process for Kelly Park Road went much smother with township and company officials getting together ahead of time, walking the road and working out the issues during the scoping process.

In other business, Fiscal Officer Pat Hoffmaster said Chesapeake paid the township $12,220 for culvert work the township did for it on a previous RUMA; also Zoning Officer Kymberly Seabolt said there will be a Zoning Commission meeting at 7 p.m., Oct. 23 and a Board of Zoning Appeals Board meeting at 7 p.m., Nov. 6.

Judge rules for cheerleaders in Bible banner suit in Texas

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A judge stopped an East Texas school district on Thursday from barring cheerleaders from quoting Bible verses on banners at high school football games, saying the policy appears to violate their free speech rights.

District Judge Steve Thomas granted an injunction requested by the Kountze High School cheerleaders allowing them to continue displaying religious-themed banners pending the outcome of a lawsuit, which is set to go to trial next June 24, Texas Attorney General Greg Abbott said. Thomas previously granted a temporary restraining order allowing the practice to continue.

School officials barred the cheerleaders from displaying banners with religious messages such as, "If God is for us, who can be against us," after the Freedom From Religion Foundation complained. The advocacy group says the messages violate the First Amendment clause barring the government — or a publicly funded school district, in this case — from establishing or endorsing a religion.

Republican Gov. Rick Perry and Abbott spoke out in support of the cheerleaders on Wednesday. Perry appointed Thomas to fill a vacancy on the 356th District Court, and he is running for election to continue in the post as a Republican.

"The Constitution has never demanded that students check their religious beliefs at the schoolhouse door," Abbott said in a statement issued after the ruling. "Students' ability to express their religious views adds to the diversity of thought that has made this country so strong."

Abbott filed court papers to intervene in the lawsuit and sent state attorneys to support the cheerleaders' position that the district's ban violated their free speech rights.

The Texas Education Code also states that schools must respect the rights of students to express their religious beliefs.

"It is the individual speech of the cheerleaders and not in fact the government speaking," David Starnes, the cheerleaders' attorney said, according to KDFM television.

"It is not just one girl or one person in the group that comes up with the quote, but it's on a rotating basis that each girl gets to pick the quote. That is their individual voices that are being portrayed on the banner."

Thomas Brandt, the attorney representing the school district, said the superintendent had acted to comply within existing legal rulings. The Anti-Defamation League issued a statement in which it called the judge's decision misguided.

"Public schools are for children of all faiths or no faith, and these banners were clearly being displayed in the context of school-sponsored activities," the group said.

"Faith is a profoundly personal decision, so students should not be subjected to an exclusionary school-sponsored religious message on campus or be forced to choose between attending quintessential school events — football games — or being subjected to an unwanted religious message."

The Freedom From Religion Foundation, which is dedicated to the separation of church and state, argued in the context of a football game it was unclear who was responsible for the messages, the school or the cheerleaders.

"The speech in question is government speech or, at a minimum, school-sponsored speech," the group said in court papers. "If the majority of the cheerleaders were atheists, would a court support their 'right' to hold up a banner insulting Christianity or all believers? The district has every right to simply prohibit all run-through and on-field banners."

Perry said Texans should encourage the cheerleaders.

"Anyone who is expressing their faith should be celebrated, from my perspective, in this day and age of instant gratification, this me-first culture that we see all too often," Perry said Wednesday.

"We're a nation built on the concept of free expression of ideas. We're also a culture built on the concept that the original law is God's law, outlined in the Ten Commandments."

Adkins

Two others involved that night, Josh Rudder and Dustin Green, have already pleaded to charges. Rudder was sentenced to five years in prison for being the driver that night. Green is scheduled to be sentenced on Nov. 15.

Linger said her client and the others believed no one to be at home when they arrived with the intention of breaking into the house. During his statement, Adkins said telephone calls were made to make certain no one was there. Adkins' father, Ricky Moore, said the group was set up to walk into a trap.

"He never would have put his sister in danger," Linger said. "He lifted his sister up to the window and she was shot in the forehead by her estranged husband."

At this time, the estranged husband, Nicholas Cariosello, has not been charged with any involvement in the crime.

Sonia Reed, the mother of both Holly Cariosello and Jamie Adkins, read an emotional statement telling Adkins she does not blame him for his sister's death and knows he would never intentionally put her in danger. She thanked him for cooperating with investigators to help bring his sister's killer to justice and give her peace.

"Don't walk around with a heavy heart blaming yourself," Reed said. "Your sister still loves you."

Moore also said what has happened has turned the family upside down. He added Adkins will have to live with what happened every day.

"My whole life I struggled with drugs," Adkins said before his sentencing. "If there was any way I could have protected her, I would have."

Despite Adkins' lengthy criminal history, Linger asked Washam to consider running the sentences concurrently. She noted he has been cooperative with investigators and testified at the grand jury.

"He's paid a price far greater than anything the court can impose on him," Linger said. "He's lost his sister and nothing he can do can bring her back."

Washam accepted the prosecution's recommendations, sentencing Adkins to five years for involuntary manslaughter, four years for burglary and 12 months for conspiracy to commit burglary. The sentences are to run consecutively with credit for 185 days already served. He had faced a maximum of 24 years.

Violence
FROM 1A

Beery, 54, is married again and said her husband is very supportive. She has three daughters. She's majoring in criminal justice at KSU and said "my plan in life is to help others."

Diagnosed with Post Traumatic Stress Disorder, she said she has the strength now to continue forward.

"Slowly, but surely, I'm getting okay. I am a survivor," she said.

She read a message for victims, telling them "you are important. You are beautiful and you deserve the best. This is your life — take it back."

She started her talk about leading a double life by saying "I don't want you to feel sorry for me."

Back then, she said she thought their family life was normal. When she met a guy who wanted to marry her, she thought that was her chance to escape, but he was an abuser, too. After she left him, he made accusations against her involving their children and she had to endure being investigated by child authorities. Her second husband drank, abused her and had her trapped. He listened to her phone calls, read all her mail and controlled her life. During a birthday party for her at someone else's home, a friend finally stepped in, kicked him out and helped her get away.

When her father died, she didn't know what she was supposed to do and went into a great depression. With counseling, she's put her life back together and knows who she is and has the confidence she was never allowed to feel before.

Stone talked about the domestic violence laws and said in his experience, 90 percent of the time the male is the aggressor in cases of domestic violence. He said there are all types of situations and he's seen his share of domestics as a police officer.

The Sheriff's Office handled 333 domestic disputes in 2010, with 52 domestic violence charges filed, which equates to about one a week. In 2011, the numbers decreased a little to 305 domestic disputes and 48 domestic violence charges. So far in 2012, the office has handled 272 domestic disputes and filed 32 domestic violence charges.

"They're the worst calls to go to...they're dangerous," he said, adding "you never know what you're going to find."

At age 22, he was a young police officer working in Washingtonville and handled his first bad domestic, an image he'll never forget, with blood on the walls.

"It looked like something out of a horror scene," he said.

He told other stories of abuse cases, about wives beaten to a pulp and begging officers not to arrest their husbands, of children seeing things that children should not see. He also spoke about the economic impact on the community and his observation that alcohol seems to be a factor in many domestics.

When asked if anything has helped, he said it's no longer the secret it used to be and there is help out there from places like the Christina Center and Christina House.

The Christina House can be reached at 330-420-0036.

Columbiana County Drug Task Force, a canine unit and handler from East Palestine Police and a canine unit and handler from the Drug Enforcement Administration in Youngstown. Davis said the dogs are trained to sniff out street drugs, such as marijuana, cocaine, heroin and methamphetamine, but they cannot smell for prescription drugs.

"We know that there are some youth who do abuse drugs. We want to keep the drugs out of our schools and keep the focus on education. We want a nice safe environment for all the students," he said.

The search is offered to the school administration every year and they accept the offer every year.

"I think it was successful. The students and the staff, the administration, they all cooperated and there were no problems," Davis said.

Bratten said it's important to the district that if there is anything found, they take care of it right away.

"That's something that's not tolerated in our buildings," he said.

Last week, a 17-year-old Salem High School school student was suspended from school by administrators and charged with delinquency by police after someone could smell the odor of marijuana on him and he voluntarily produced a small baggie of suspected marijuana. An expulsion hearing is pending.

Bratten noted that any drug offense at the school results in an automatic 10-day out-of-school suspension with a recommendation for expulsion. A hearing is then set to review the expulsion recommendation.

"We do what we can as legally as possible to try to control it," he said.

During the last school year, the board approved a new drug-testing policy for students in extracurricular activities. Bratten said the policy does not include random drug testing, but gives school officials the option to require a drug test if they have a reasonable suspicion of drug use by an athlete or student in extracurriculars.

"So far, so good," he said, saying they haven't had any cases since the new policy was enacted.

HOROSCOPE

By HOLIDAY MATHIS
10/19/12

The Sagittarius moon reminds us that we are all travelers in some way. This is true even if we've never left our country or home state; journeys don't have to take place in physical space. Sometimes a great distance is traveled in emotional depth, spiritual understanding or capacity to love. And with the right intention, anything can be a journey.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You may find yourself in a constant state of management, with an endless to-do list that absorbs your time. Could you reassign some of your tasks to someone else? Delegation equals freedom.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Cool down and relax. There is nothing to be gained from rushing around. Besides, you look more confident and in control when you move slowly. The world will wait for you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You'll be inexplicably drawn to an odd adventure. This road may seem potentially unpleasant and downright difficult, but no matter. It's the kind of thing you do just so you never have to do it again.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You're an excellent driver, so try to steer the action where you want it to go. The same goes for conversation. Otherwise, you'll tune out and get lost in your own thoughts, alienating the speaker.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Status matters. The perceived authority of the people involved in a deal will affect how it goes down today. Whether in business or your personal life, do all you can to build your good name.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Trying to do a task perfectly robs you of the wonderful floating feeling of engagement in the same way that watching the clock prevents you from enjoying the moments.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You're an expert politician, partly because you realize that politics doesn't only pertain to large organizations. Politics is alive in every transaction between human beings. You'll play the game well today.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). It takes maturity to understand that much that happens in a day depends on what a person did the night before. Every action sets up the next action. Tonight's agenda changes as you use this principle as your guide.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). There's much to be gained in the process of leaving. When you say goodbye to a situation, you are also saying goodbye to the person you were inside that situation.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You'll have an opportunity to publicize your cause, make your request widely known or send a message to more people than you've ever been able to reach before.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Sometimes all it takes is a little push to send you flying. This is usually true when you've already tested your wings and have them fully extended, just waiting for someone to dare you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You are not a contrarian. For you to play devil's advocate, or to adopt any conflicting point of view, you have to have an excellent reason -- for instance, it's really what you believe.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Oct. 19). The year brings a rebirth of your intellectual life, and you'll be drawn to new interests, teachers and art forms. You'll reap personal benefits from institutions and political and economic trends. A controlling force of the past will be eliminated in December. Loved ones celebrate a May accomplishment. Leo and Gemini people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 45, 43, 1, 23 and 15.

WEEKEND LOVE FORECAST: ARIES: You'll reach out, and someone will take hold of your hand. TAURUS: You have to know what good chemistry is to recognize when it is or isn't taking place. GEMINI: Do not let preconceptions color the way you respond to what happens in your personal life. CANCER: You'll expertly factor in the feelings behind every exchange between you and your love and get to the heart of the matter. LEO: Save the serious moods for another time. All you want now is to be a fabulous friend and attract the same. VIRGO: You accept your love, not because he or she always acts acceptably, but because of the simple fact that he or she is a human being who has the right to self-expression. LIBRA: You prefer to deal in details rather than generalities, so you'll tell your love exactly what you want. SCORPIO: Amateur psychologists are a dime a dozen. Don't try to fix your love or offer unsolicited advice. SAGITTARIUS: Your relationships will benefit from clear and honest feedback. CAPRICORN: Beware of a meddling female. Guard your privacy. AQUARIUS: Someone allowing you to speak in their presence is not the same as listening. PISCES: You capture someone's attention with your flirty, glamorous discussion.

New pet guidelines

Heloise

Dear Readers: October is ADOPT-A-SHELTER-DOG MONTH. Here are some helpful hints from the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals for bringing home a new pet:

— Buy supplies: Make sure you have the essentials -- food and water bowls, toys, collar and leash.

— Decide house rules and responsibilities: Who is going to walk and feed the new family member? Decide general house rules. Will the dog be allowed on furniture, to have people food, etc.?

— Doggie-proof: Do a sweep and check for anything the new addition might chew or ingest!

— Make an appointment with your veterinarian for the pet to have a thorough exam. Find out about the licensing policy where you live.

— Make a plan: Come up with a training plan, and inform the entire household so it is consistent. Are you going to crate-train? What will the reward be for good behavior, etc.?

These helpful hints will make you and your new pet get along much better. -- Heloise, and "Woof, woof" from Cabbie

TOSSING TROPHIES

Dear Heloise: I would like to get rid of the kids' old trophies. Do you know where I can take them? Thanks. Love your column. -- Susan in Texas

Thanks for reading, Susan. The column has printed this many times. Here are some suggestions: Try a charity thrift store like the Salvation Army that accepts old trophies. See if there is a teacher who can use them as awards. Or talk to coaches to see if they would like to reuse them. Take the nameplates off first -- you can make a wall hanging or place them in a scrapbook, which takes up much less space.

Readers, do you know of places that accept old trophies? Or do you have any creative uses for them? -- Heloise

TRAVEL HINT

Dear Heloise: I've read several hints for using a hanging shoe bag to create more storage space in the home. That gave me the idea for taking one with me on a vacation where four adults shared a cabin with one small bathroom. The shoe bag I bought had 20 pockets, so each adult had plenty of room for his or her toiletries, and we managed to keep the small vanity clutter-free! -- Pam in San Antonio

CAREFREE CREDIT

Dear Heloise: There are times when I want to buy something online, but I am nervous, with all the identify theft, about entering my information. You can buy prepaid credit cards at most grocery stores now. So when I want to buy something online, I use one of those. Then I don't have to worry about anyone getting my account information. -- A Concerned Reader in Utah

Her healthy eating habit may go too far

DEAR ABBY: I have recently developed what I consider to be a very healthy lifestyle. I exercise, eat lots of fruits and vegetables and mostly whole foods.

My problem is I think I may be becoming obsessed. It has become harder and harder to eat away from home. I constantly plan what I'm going to eat next. I'm still happy, but too much of my time is being spent on this.

Apparently, there's a disorder similar to anorexia known as orthorexia. It's the psychological obsession with eating healthy. I don't think I could be classified as an extreme case, but what should I do before I become one? — OBSESSED IN BOSTON

DEAR OBSESSED: As with any obsessive disorder, the first step is realizing and admitting you may have one. Then discuss it with your physician and ask for a referral to a psychologist who specializes in eating disorders.

This is not to say that you have a disorder — but because more and more of your time is being devoted to thoughts of food, it would be a good idea to check. Too much of a good thing can be harmful if it is taken too far.

DEAR ABBY: I am 23 and have one child. I have been married for three years, and my husband has recently become physically abusive. He was prosecuted for his actions and pleaded guilty, but he still blames me entirely for the scenario and refuses to accept any responsibility.

I fear for the safety of myself and my daughter every day, and I want to leave him for good. Many of the shelters I have called require that I quit my job, which is something I feel is counterintuitive to establishing a life on my own, so I refuse. That said, I don't make much money, and the money I do make goes toward paying the fine my husband incurred for harming me.

Am I aiming too high? I feel the only way to break free from him entirely is to quit my job, but I don't want to have to resort to this. What would you advise? — CONFLICTED OUT WEST

DEAR CONFLICTED: I would advise you to take your child and get out of there before the next episode of domestic violence. And, if you truly want to break free entirely from your abuser, that you follow TO THE LETTER the instructions you receive from the people at the domestic violence shelter. And one more thing: Let the person who incurred the fine pay it himself!

DEAR ABBY: I have a question about office microwave etiquette. I work in a building with one kitchen for 40 people. Often there is a wait to use the microwave around lunchtime. Recently I needed to use it and found a warm packaged meal in there, and no owner around. I waited five minutes and came back. It was still there as if it had been forgotten.

I decided to place it on the counter with a napkin covering it so I could use the microwave. When I was finished, no one appeared to claim it, so I put it back in and went on my way.

Did I do the right thing? There was no way to know whose meal it was. What's proper in this situation? Should I have just waited? — HUNGRY IN ITHACA, N.Y.

DEAR HUNGRY: You handled the situation appropriately. However, had it been me, I would have left the item on the counter so it wouldn't be touched by the other 38 hungry people in your office who also needed to use the microwave.

Pancreatitis: Gland digests itself

Dr. Donohue

DEAR DRS. DONOHUE AND ROACH: I'm recovering from pancreatitis. No one can give me an explanation of how I got it. Let me answer one question right now: No, I don't drink alcohol. Everyone else has asked me, so I figured I'd give you the answer right off. What might have been the cause? — R.I.

ANSWER: The pancreas has two functions. One, it makes insulin to control blood sugar. Two, it produces enzymes that digest food. The enzymes reduce food to a state where it can be absorbed.

As with all "itis" words, pancreatitis is an inflammation of the gland. The two most common causes of this inflammation are excessive alcohol and gallstones. I get the message — we can eliminate alcohol. Gallstones are still a candidate cause. The pancreas and gallbladder share a drainage duct into the small intestine. A gallstone can migrate from the gallbladder down to the common duct and block it. The pancreas's digestive juices cannot leave the gland. They begin to digest it — pancreatitis.

Other causes are possible. One is an extremely high level of blood triglycerides, a form of fat. Viruses are another cause. Mumps, chickenpox, coxsackie (a widely distributed virus responsible for intestinal problems) and the hepatitis B virus target the pancreas. And finally, there's idiopathic pancreatitis — inflammation for which no cause is found.

Acute pancreatitis gives rise to severe, upper-abdominal pain that often bores into the back. Nausea and vomiting are common. The pain doesn't come and go. It's steady and can last for days to a week.

Treatment is resting the gland by not stimulating it with eating. Nourishment is provided through intravenous feeding. Pain medication is essential. One of the complications of pancreatitis is infection of the gland. That's the reason why some doctors prescribe antibiotic therapy from the start.

About 10 percent of acute pancreatitis patients go on to have a chronic inflammation of the gland. Looked at with more upbeat statistics, 90 percent of patients are completely well after the acute condition has been controlled.

DEAR DRS. DONOHUE AND ROACH: I think all the hot weather we have had this summer turned me into an ice-cream addict. The addiction didn't last long. I believe it caused me to have diarrhea. Have I developed an allergy to ice cream? — P.P.

ANSWER: It's more likely that you have a lactase deficiency. Lactase is a digestive-tract enzyme that processes lactose, milk sugar. As infants, we have an abundant supply of it. We need it then to thrive on a milk-based diet. With age, the supply of lactase dwindles. That makes digestion of milk products difficult for older people. Without enough lactase, milk sugar causes diarrhea. If you're up to it, you can make your own lactose-free ice cream by treating milk with the lactase enzyme.

DEAR DRS. DONOHUE AND ROACH: My left testicle is much larger than the right one. It doesn't hurt. It looks funny. Could this be cancer? I'm 79. — B.M.

ANSWER: Testicular cancer happens to men at much younger ages. You most likely have what's called a hydrocele, a collection of fluid between two layers of the testicle's lining.

If you go into a dark room with a flashlight, and place the light on the back of the testicle, you'll see the light shine through the front. That indicates that the swelling is clear fluid.

A distant diagnosis is, at best, a guess. Confirm this with your family doctor. You don't have to do this on an urgent basis. You can make it at a time that is convenient for you and the doctor.

Boyfriend hurt by daughter's calls

Annie's Mailbox

Dear Annie: Your column is the first page I turn to in the newspaper. I now have a problem and hope you can help.

My boyfriend, "John," and I have been together for five years. We have a wonderful relationship. He loves my three young children, and they adore him. John also has a grown daughter, "Sarah," whom he raised as a single father. Sarah is now 27 and has two young children from two different fathers. Her kids are slightly younger than mine.

Sarah is resentful and jealous of the relationship John has with my children. The only time John hears from her is when she needs help, and we have given it, emotionally and financially. We even took her in for a few months and cared for the children. Her relationships are always in turmoil. Every time Sarah contacts John, she upsets him. I listen to him vent and try to stay out of their relationship. But it hurts me to see him in pain over and over. Sarah recently mentioned that she was diagnosed with bipolar disease, but we have no idea what type of treatment (if any) she is receiving.

What is the best way to handle Sarah? How do I keep my boyfriend from being hurt every time she calls? — Concerned Girlfriend

Dear Concerned: You cannot prevent John from being hurt by his daughter's words or actions. Allowing him to vent gives him a release valve for his pain, which is probably the most helpful thing you can do right now. Sarah needs to grow up, and that takes longer for some people than for others. You also can reassure John that he's a great guy, and that Sarah is simply having a hard time adjusting to his current situation. Her behavior is a way of seeking his undivided attention. You could suggest he encourage Sarah to talk to her doctor about medication and therapy. Beyond that, try to make your presence in his life an oasis of peace.

Dear Annie: My boyfriend of two years assured me that my new smart-phone plan would allow me to use all of the same services I get at home while I am traveling. So on a recent trip, I used it as I normally would. Upon returning home, I was faced with a bill for more than $200. He admits he misread the phone's website information, but feels no obligation to pay even half of my bill. I think it would be the honorable thing to do, especially since he makes three times what I do. — Disappointed

Dear Disappointed: Yes, it would be honorable for him to offer to pay a portion of your bill since you used it on his advice, and you can ask him. It doesn't speak well for his character that he would hang you out to dry. But it's your phone. You are ultimately responsible for understanding the costs involved.

EP police step up drug enforcement

By KATIE SCHWENDEMAN
Staff Writer

EAST PALESTINE Over three days last week village police officers arrested seven people on drug-related charges and narcotics and drug paraphernalia were taken from two homes. Chief Kevin Dickey said the individuals were taken in custody without incident and that the department had planned the drug interdiction details over several weeks.

He did not wish to release any names until the investigation is completed. He anticipates more drug charges or indictments to be forthcoming.

In a press release issued this week he said one person was arrested on an outstanding warrant through the county municipal court, while two others were charged with possession of marijuana. One person was charged with possession of K-2, or "Spice," which is a synthetic marijuana that mimics the effects of cocaine and LSD and was only recently made illegal. It could formerly be found in convenience stores and smoke shops and was typically marketed as herbal incense or bath salts. It is not uncommon for users to become sick from taking the drug, as thousands of cases have been reported across the nation. Some people have even died from using the drug.

Dickey said it is the third instance in which the drug has been found in the village. The first case was made known to the department as a result of the user having a bad reaction to the drug and the EMS was called.

The previous two cases were before the drug was illegal, he added. Other arrests by officers during the drug interdiction were for drug paraphernalia and one charge is pending for illegal possession of prescription pills, according to the release.

Dickey also said in the release that Toney, the department's newly acquired K-9, was utilized nine times over a 48-hour period. "Combating drug activity in the community is a priority for the police department. This is the first of what will be many pro-active, drug specific, initiatives in the future," he said. He also said the department will work with other law enforcement agencies to address the problem and that anyone wishing to report drug activity should call the police department at 330-426-4341.

Victory eluding Salem

Team showing signs of growth but still looking for breakthrough in NBC

By JON RUDDER
Staff Writer

SALEM — For 13 members of the Salem Quaker football team, tonight will be the final time they step out under the lights for a high school football game at Reilly Stadium.

It's senior night for the Class of 2013 and that means one last chance to put on a show in front of the home crowd. A win would give them the most wins for any single class in Salem football history.

"We've been trying diligently to make that happen," Johnson said. "They were a part of a couple good teams when they were younger. They've worked so hard to carry it on. We have good kids that have contributed for four years, and it's important that they get an opportunity to get a win in their last game at Reilly Stadium."

Despite a 12-point loss at Minerva last week, Salem managed to rack up nearly 400 yards of offense.

Trace Jenkins completed 10-of-17 passes for 222 yards and two scores. A large chunk of that total came on one play, an 80-yard catch

Crestview is so close to its first undefeated football season in school history, it can smell it.

The Rebels (8-0, 5-0 in the Inter-Tri County League upper tier) are averaging a mind-blowing 55 points per game heading into Friday's game at East Palestine. That's 443 points through eight games.

East Palestine (1-7, 1-5) has shown glimpes of being capable to run with the bigger boys, but depth prevents any sustained quality effort.

"They say there's lessons to be learned in losing," East Palestine coach Gare Mattes said. "If that's the case, we're the most educated team in the league."

Mattes and the Bulldogs won't be taking this one easily. It's the seniors last home game and it's a bit of a rivalry, so there's that slight chance something unexpected could happen.

"(Collin) Gilbert and (Nick) Blower can hurt you at any time," Mattes said. "They have good team speed and decent size. The offensive line sustains their blocks. Their defense is very aggressive, but it does have weak spots. At the same time, they compensate well for those weaknesses. Every team has them and if you can compensate for those weaknesses, you're doing well. They also have a lot of coaches and can spend a lot of time with each kid. It's difficult competing against that."

Crestview coach Paul Cusick is aware that a potential regular season finale league championship game with South Range is on the horizon. He said the challenge will be keeping players focused the rest of the way.

"It's all about worrying about the details at this point," Cusick said. "You try to keep the kids focused on what they can control and not let them get sidetracked with all of the other stuff

Cleveland hopes WR develops into consistent deep threat

BEREA (AP) — Slightly sunburned and plenty relaxed from a summer excursion through the Caribbean with his wife, offensive coordinator Brad Childress returned home to learn the Browns had a new player.

While Childress was chilling, Cleveland selected wide receiver Josh Gordon in the NFL's supplemental draft.

The name didn't ring a bell.

"I got off a cruise boat and somebody said, 'We signed Josh Gordon,'" Childress said. "I said, 'Who's Josh Gordon?' Honestly."

Childress now knows Gordon well.

The rest of the league is quickly finding out about him, too.

With three touchdowns — two on passes over 60 yards — in the past two games, Gordon is becoming the big, play-making wide receiver the Browns have craved for several seasons. At 6-foot-3, 225 pounds, the faster-than-he-looks Gordon has the physical makeup to be a star. It's up to the 21-year-old rookie, who was asked to leave Baylor after twice testing positive for marijuana, to

Boren changes job to help OSU

Fullback makes switch to defense

COLUMBUS (AP) — Coach Urban Meyer put out an APB for tough guys.

The search ended when Zach Boren turned himself in.

Injuries, departures and disappointing play led Ohio State's coaches to look for somebody — anybody — to help out at linebacker.

They got a volunteer — their starting fullback.

"It was kind of a test for the first four periods of practice that I watched," Meyer said of the trial period a week ago when he first tossed Boren into the mix on defense to see what would happen. "He changed the entire dynamic of practice, because so much of playing football is the leadership value. Who is the tough guy on the defense?

"Who is the guy that's going to stand up and take charge?"

Boren was the answer. Now the former star linebacker in high school has going on."

As far as the playoffs are concerned, the Rebels are sitting in the fourth spot in Div. V, Region 17. Drew Pasteur's Fantastic50, a web site which handles in-depth predictions of computer rating scenarios, predicts that the Rebels will hang onto that fourth spot if they win out. The web site points to matchups with St. Thomas Aquinas (37 percent chance) or Youngstown Ursuline (35 percent chance) in the first round.

Co-ITCL upper tier South Range (6-2, 5-0) has won six straight and is at Lisbon (2-5, 1-5) on Friday. If the result goes the Raiders way, the regular season finale will not only be for the league title, but a playoff berth for South Range will likely be on the line.

Fantastic50 has the Raiders with a 81 percent chance of making the playoffs if they win out. Seven wins gives the Raiders a two percent chance of extending the season.

ITCL lower tier

Columbiana has been trying to hold things together for a while now after key injuries started popping up at an alarming rate.

That all fell a part for the Clippers on Friday when Lowellville snuck a 20-8 victory past them.

Columbiana fell to 6-2 and 4-1 in the ITCL lower tier with the loss. Western Reserve, who the Clippers host in the regular season finale, took sole possession of first place in the league with its win over Southern Local.

Now Columbiana is scrambling to salvage at one point seemed like a promising season.

"We're backed into a corner and have to fight our way out," Columbiana coach Bob Spaite said.

The Clippers will have to do it without junior R.J. Rankin who broke his leg in the Lowellville game. Rankin, who had a total of 167 yards rushing the past two games, had seen more time at that position in the wake of Britton Steiginga's absence.

Spaite said he's unsure of when Steiginga or quarterback Nate Huk will return from injury. If they do, it's likely both will be limited in what they can do.

"That's no excuse though," Spaite said. "We have to play with the guys we have. In that regard, I have to thank our offensive and defensive lines for being warriors and keeping us in games. Those guys have done a tremendous job."

This week the Clippers are at McDonald (4-4, 2-3). From a league standpoint, it's a must-win for Columbiana. It might be that way as far as the playoffs are concerned too.

Columbiana has to win one more game to be in a good position to extend the season. McDonald will certainly be the better chance to do so. Even though the Devils have won their last two games against Lowellville and Wellsville, it has been an erratic season. They also lost to Western Reserve by two points, while taking it on the chin to Southern and Leetonia.

Speaking of Leetonia, the Bears (5-3, 3-2) are in position to still make the playoffs in Div. VI, Region 21. They host Southern (5-3, 3-2) this week.

"Anytime you can get to week nine and are playing for something, that's a good thing," Leetonia coach Matt Altomare said.

"Early in the season we really didn't know how things would go, but the kids have continued playing hard. In that sense, it has been a lot of fun as a coach."

The Bears have an 11 percent chance of making the playoffs if they win out according to Fantastic50. Southern's ability in the passing game will certainly make the Bears earn every inch of ground they get.

"They have done a good job of creating a lot of different looks on offense," Altomare said.

"That might give us some matchup problems, so we're going to have to work hard in practice this week."

SALEM

and run by Haedan Panezott that displayed the junior receiver's speed and elusiveness.

Salem also showed a change-up to its style of play and successfully moved the ball on the ground. Against a Leopard defense that surrenders over 200 yards of offense on the ground alone, a continuation of an attack that saw the Quakers run the ball 43 times last Friday can be expected.

"Louisville isn't overwhelming size-wise like some of the teams we have played this year," Johnson said. "So it's a pretty good match up. We're going to take what they give us, and if we can rush the football on them than that's where we're going to start."

With all of the big numbers the Salem offense put up, perhaps the most important was just a single digit — zero - the number of sacks the Quakers' offensive line allowed.

"I took the offensive line out for a steak dinner," Johnson said. "They don't give up a sack and they get their reward. We have a kickoff return or punt return, they get one. It's a good reward. They took pride in it. But they know that it goes hand in hand — when you don't give up sacks and minus yardage plays you play a lot better and put yourself in a better position to win."

Aside from gaining a dinner, Johnson said the confidence boost for a young group is more important.

"They get more and more confident every week since they've seen things over and over again," he said. "They really are playing well and it gives the quarterback confidence and the receivers confidence."

Last week Minerva took advantage of turnovers on back-to-back kickoffs to put distance between themselves and Salem just before halftime. The special teams blunders were out of the ordinary for the most consistent aspect of the Quaker attack.

"We have locked in this week in cutting out the penalties and being a more disciplined football team," Johnson said. "It's been a big point of emphasis and we'll see how our kids will respond under fire."

The Leopards make the final appearance for a visiting team in Reilly Stadium this year with a 4-4 (2-3 NBC) record, and a glimmer of hope of making the Ohio High School Division II playoffs.

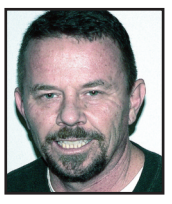

They will be doing so without starting quarterback Joey Duckworth. Last week against West Branch, a team the Quakers will take on in the season finale, backup Jeremy McQuilkin threw for 117 yards in a 21-17 loss to the Warriors. In his time filling in under center, McQuiklin has completed 29 of 53 passes for 254 yards and three scores.

Johnson expects to see multiple looks from the Leopards, including multiple players at quarterback and a defensive scheme that will attempt to switch things up during sustained drives.

"They run routes and have guys that can deliver the football," Johnson said.

Salem and Louisville kick off at 7 p.m. at Reilly Stadium.

A week ago, he relied on his instincts because he didn't really know what he was doing.

"Defending the run game is all instincts, it's just lining up," he said. "But pass game, you really have to know your coverages and who you're matching to. That's the part you really have to know the defense inside and out. That was the hardest thing. I messed up a bunch of stuff, too." Meyer and defensive coordinator Luke Fickell were looking for an attitude more than perfection to prop up a defense that has given up yardage and points in clusters. So they tapped Boren to jump-start the defense.

Now, it's not a good sign when an undefeated team is moving its starting fullback midway through the season to a position he hasn't played in years. It's also not a good sign when that same fullback ends up leading the team in tackles without really having any idea what he's doing.

Finally, Boren's presence didn't stop the leaks that have resulted in Ohio State plummeting to 69th in the country and 10th in the Big Ten in total defense (giving up 400 yards a game). The Buckeyes surrendered 437 yards and 38 points to Nebraska before Boren shifted, and 481 yards and 49 points to Indiana with Boren on defense. But many believe the stopgap measure may just strengthen the unit in time. And when a captain and two-year starter is willing to give up the equity he's built in his position to try something entirely different, it's a lesson for the entire squad.

"It's about unselfishness," Fickell said of Boren's switch. "That's the thing that we're really, really trying to focus on, guys doing whatever's best for the team. If they really, really, truly believe they're here for something bigger than themselves, then a guy like that who can take himself out of a spot over on offense that he might be catching some balls and scoring some touchdowns into a position where, 'Hey, this is where this team really, really needs me' to provide depth and to provide a spark.

"This is a great example of what unselfish leadership can do." Boren, who was pressed into duty on defense when Etienne Sabino was sidelined with a broken leg, will be joined by Ryan Shazier and freshman Josh Perry at linebacker — one of the most disappointing positions for the Buckeyes despite their 7-0 start. Several top recruits have left the program due to injury or dissatisfaction, others (such as acclaimed signee Curtis Grant) haven't panned out and most of the freshmen are not ready to take on the workload. So Boren changed sides of the ball.

"Lacking any coaching, obviously," Fickell said. "Coaching can be overrated at times. The first thing I said was he naturally gave us a spark."

Now Meyer says the move is "temporarily permanent," whatever that means. There's still a chance that Boren might get to carry the ball again. But, for now, he's a linebacker. Luckily, his No. 44 is interchangeable at either position.

"I wouldn't really say 'home,'" Boren said. "I've been playing linebacker for so long — I haven't played it for 3 years but I've been playing it my whole life playing football — your instincts take over after a while."

Meyer is amazed — in both a good way and a bad way — that the move was made.

"I'm glad he's over there. He brings confidence, he brings toughness, our players love him. He's as unselfish a player as we have," he said. "It is a little bit of shock. If you'd said that back in April — he's your starting middle linebacker — I would have said no." Boren's switch has inspired his teammates.

"That's the ultimate sacrifice," offensive lineman Jack Mewhort said. "He's the best fullback in the country and he's going to go over to linebacker and give up three years of playing football and maybe being All-Big Ten to do all he can for the team playing defense? We love him for that."

BROWNS

to make it happen.

"He can be tremendous," Browns tight end Benjamin Watson said. "He can make all the catches. He's fast. He's strong. The biggest thing with him or any young player is being consistent and learning how to practice. He can be as good as he wants to be. He just needs to improve on his weaknesses and he doesn't have many."

After catching seven passes in his first four games, Gordon has busted out the past two weeks.

He ran past New York's secondary and hauled in a 62-yard pass against the Giants for his first career touchdown on Oct. 7. He added a 20-yard TD in the fourth quarter. Last week against Cincinnati, Gordon hooked up for a 71-yard score, snagging rookie quarterback Brandon Weeden's windblown throw with one hand before racing to the end zone.

Those big plays have boosted Gordon's confidence. He was way behind when he joined the Browns because he sat out a full season after transferring from Baylor to Utah.

He's literally catching on.

"It's done a great deal just helping me gain confidence," he said after practice Thursday. "More trust in the offense, the team, the coaches, the quarterback, myself, just being real confident in knowing I can go out there and make plays."

Gordon nodded and smiled when told Childress didn't know who he was when the Browns took him in the second round of July's supplemental draft, forfeiting a second-round pick in next year's draft to get him.

"I believe it," Gordon said. "A lot of people really didn't. But now that I'm here, I definitely want to make a name for myself."

Gordon's evolution as a downfield target has given Cleveland's offense a much-needed shot in the arm.

The Browns' lack of a deep threat has allowed defenses to cram the line of scrimmage and shut down the run. It's tough to break off a long gain with 22 players crammed inside a 10-yard box. Gordon, though, brings a speed element and quick-strike potential that teams have to honor, opening the field for the Browns — and expanding Childress' playbook.

Gordon's long TDs the past two weeks will make defenses wary.

"The fact that he's gotten behind some people and done it twice now," Childress said. "That won't happen all the time. Defenses are set up not to let you do that. They will be much more mindful of where he's at. It helps you take the top of things and move people away from the line of scrimmage and make them play you with a deep threat."

Gordon has seen mostly one-on-one coverage. But if he continues to make big plays, he could force teams to double-team him, which could open things up for his teammates. It hasn't gotten to that point yet, but Gordon believes it it's just a matter of time before Cleveland's No. 13 is getting extra attention.

And if he doesn't?

"Hey, it's better for us," he said.

Because of his off-the-field troubles in college, Gordon came to the Browns as a player who had a lot to learn, and a lot to prove. He came with the label of a problem child, but Gordon has been a model citizen and is beginning to understand what it takes to be a pro.

It's taken a little longer than some expected, but Gordon is beginning to shine. "I think the light is going on," Browns coach Pat Shurmur said. "He's making improvements. I made that comment based on what I see all week long, based on how I see him function in the building, based on the way I see him function in meetings and then how he's practicing more up to mine and our standards.

"I think those are all the things you need to see, in my opinion, before a guy can go out on the field and have success. His success the last two weeks has kind of validated that process and so the key now is to just continue with that." The Browns' coaching staff spent more time with Gordon earlier this season. It wasn't because they were being particularly hard on him, it's that he was behind the other receivers after not taking part in Cleveland's offseason program.

Gordon welcomed the extra help. But he knows it's up to him to learn from those lessons as well as his past mistakes.

"You definitely gotta be accountable for yourself, for the sake of the organization and then yourself," he said. "You really have to know what you're doing. If you're going to be careless at this point, it's totally your fault. I'm really not trying to head down in that direction."

Gordon's going the right way, fast. He knows his past hurt his stock, and he understand why he would have been unknown to Childress.

"I was sitting out a whole year of college, I fell off the radar and I'm a long ways from where I was so I'm not surprised," he said. "But now that I've gotten my opportunity, I definitely want to come out and make a name for myself.

"Hopefully we can go back and laugh at it later."

NOTES: WR Greg Little was sent home with flu-like symptoms and missed practice. ... Shurmur expects RB Trent Richardson to play Sunday against the Colts. Richardson will wear a flak jacket to protecting a rib injury. "He's wearing something that's bulletproof," Shurmur said.

49ers make just enough plays, hold off Seahawks

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Alex Smith threw a 12-yard touchdown pass to Delanie Walker late in the third quarter and San Francisco held off the Seattle Seahawks 13-6 on Thursday night as the 49ers won their long-awaited division opener.

Frank Gore ran for 116 yards and the 49ers (5-2) took over sole possession of first place in the NFC West by making just enough plays to win this defense-first game, featuring two teams allowing fewer than 16 points per game.

Walker's score was San Francisco's first touchdown in seven quarters after an embarrassing 26-3 loss to the New York Giants on Sunday in a lopsided rematch of the NFC championship game.

Smith went 14 of 23 for 140 yards in another subpar performance.

NFC rushing leader Marshawn Lynch finished with 103 yards for Seattle (4-3).

Cardinals beat Giants 8-3 to take 3-1 lead in NLCS

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Adam Wainwright threw seven innings of four-hit ball and the St. Louis Cardinals roughed up Tim Lincecum and the San Francisco Giants in an 8-3 rout Thursday night that gave them a 3-1 lead in the NL championship series.

Matt Holliday, Jon Jay and Yadier Molina had two RBIs apiece to lead a 12-hit outburst by a team that batted just .198 through the first three games of the series.

The defending champion Cardinals can wrap up their second straight trip to the World Series as a wild card with a victory at home Friday night in Game 5. Lance Lynn faces Giants lefty Barry Zito.

Lincecum was a bust in his first postseason start since the World Series clincher over Texas in 2010, giving up four runs in 4 2-3 innings.

Browns' Richardson to wear padding over rib injury

BEREA, Ohio (AP) — Browns rookie running back Trent Richardson will wear a protective flak jacket in this week's game to guard a rib injury against Indianapolis.

Richardson sustained a rib cartilage injury in Sunday's win over Cincinnati. Richardson said his side was sore and he had trouble breathing after he absorbed a helmet hit in the first quarter. Richardson expects to play against the Colts and Browns coach Pat Shurmur said his starting running back will be outfitted in extra "space-age designed" protective equipment.

Shurmur quipped the jacket is "bullet proof and he (Richardson) told me he already was."

Shurmur is confident backups Montario Hardesty and Chris Ogbonnaya will produce if Richardson is limited. Hardesty replaced Richardson last week and ran for 56 yards and scored his first career TD as the Browns got their first win and snapped an 11-game losing streak.

Browns wide receiver Greg Little was not on the indoor practice field Wednesday during the short period it was open to media members.

Little has 14 catches for 169 yards and one TD this season. Little has been plagued by dropped passes during his two seasons.

Roethlisberger leaves practice after turning ankle

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback Ben Roethlisberger left Thursday's practice after turning his right ankle but expects to play on Sunday against Cincinnati.

Roethlisberger says he stepped on a teammate's foot while dropping back to pass but insisted he is fine. He spent the latter portions of practice in the training room but was with the rest of the team when the locker room was open to the media afterward.

Dealing with ankle injuries is nothing new to Roethlisberger, who played the final month of the 2011 season with a badly sprained left ankle. He is off to the best start of his career and currently ranks fourth in the NFL with a 99.9 quarterback rating for the Steelers (2-3).

Sandusky asks judge to overturn abuse convictions

BELLEFONTE, Pa. (AP) — Former Penn State assistant football coach Jerry Sandusky asked a judge on Thursday to overturn his child sexual abuse convictions and grant him a new trial, claiming his lawyers lacked sufficient time to prepare and the statute of limitations for some charges had expired.

Sandusky's lawyers made the filing at the courthouse in Bellefonte where he was sentenced two weeks ago to 30 to 60 years in prison after being convicted of abusing 10 boys, some on Penn State's campus in State College.

"The defendant submits the court's sentence was excessive and tantamount ... to a life sentence, which the defendant submits is in violation of his rights," they wrote.

Cauley, Dawson tied for lead at Sea Island

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, Ga. (AP) — Bud Cauley has the same good vibes at Sea Island, even if the stakes are different this time.

The McGladrey Classic is where Cauley did well enough to secure his PGA Tour card, joining an elite list of players who went from college to a full tour card without going to Q-school. Now he's after his first win, and Cauley took a big step Thursday by overpowering the course for an 8-under 62.

It was his best score on the tour, and it gave him a share of the lead with Marco Dawson.

Winning is about all that's left for Cauley, the 22-year-old who left Alabama after his junior season. He already has made over $1.7 million this year, and has moved up to No. 55 in the world.

"Obviously, I've thought about winning every tournament I've teed up in this year," Cauley said. "It's been a long year, and although I've played a lot this year, I haven't won. It's still a goal of mine, but I'm not thinking about that while I'm out there, or putting any more pressure on myself this week. The season is kind of wining down. It would be great to win here."

OSU/PURDUE

Purdue-Ohio State Preview Capsule
The Associated Press
Purdue (3-3, 0-2) vs. No. 7 Ohio State (7-0, 3-0), noon (ABC/ESPN2)
Line: Ohio State by 19.
Series Record: Ohio State leads, 37-14-2.

WHAT'S AT STAKE
Ohio State's defensive pride is on the line. The Buckeyes gave up 38 points two weeks ago to Nebraska and a startling 49 on Saturday at Indiana.
Purdue's defense also has a lot riding on the outcome after giving up 82 points the past two weeks in losses to Michigan and Wisconsin. They may have to put a third digit on the scoreboard for each team.

KEY MATCHUP
Purdue QBs Caleb TerBush and Robert Marve against Ohio State's defense. Assailed by Buckeyes fans, the defense also got an extra coach this week — head man Urban Meyer made a rare appearance in the unit's meeting room on Sunday to make it clear that things would have to change, and soon. TerBush started a year ago in the Boilermakers' stunning 26-23 win over the Buckeyes, hitting 15 of 24 passes for 140 yards before giving way to Marve, who threw an interception in the final minute but ended up scoring on a decisive 1-yard keeper in overtime on the game's final play.

PLAYERS TO WATCH
Purdue: DT Kawann Short will try to stymie Ohio State's robust rushing game, led by RB Carlos Hyde who has run for 296 yards the last two games. CBs Ricardo Allen and Josh Johnson figure to be busy trying to prevent big plays — and the Buckeyes have gained at least 20 yards on an offensive play an amazing 31 times.
Ohio State: QB Braxton Miller hopes to burnish his Heisman Trophy credentials with another solid game. He's averaging 130 yards on the ground (seventh best in the nation) and 182 passing. His top target is WR Corey Brown, who has 41 catches, while WR Devin Smith is next with six TDs on just 21 receptions.

FACTS & FIGURES
The Boilermakers have not won at Ohio State since 1988. ... Don't be surprised if RB Rod Smith, one of only two native Indianans for the Buckeyes, has a big game. His role has grown recently. ... Purdue WR Antavian Edison has caught passes in his last 27 games. ... Tickets were still available midweek, a rarity for an Ohio State home game. ... The teams have split the last six meetings.

Tigers rout Yankees 8-1 for 4-game ALCS sweep

DETROIT (AP) — Prince Fielder waved his arms frantically, gleefully calling off his teammates while the crowd at Comerica Park roared. From the moment the big first baseman signed his massive contract in January, an entire city had been waiting for a chance to celebrate like this. After another dazzling effort by Detroit's starting pitchers and another soaring home run by Miguel Cabrera, Fielder caught the final out to send the Tigers to the World Series — with a sweep of the New York Yankees, no less.

"There's still along way to go but this is an awesome feeling," Fielder said.

Max Scherzer capped a stupendous stretch for Detroit's rotation, and the Tigers won their second pennant in seven years by beating the Yankees 8-1 Thursday for a four-game sweep of the AL championship series.

Cabrera and Jhonny Peralta hit two-run homers in a four-run fourth inning against CC Sabathia, who was unable to prevent the Yankees from getting swept in a postseason series for the first time in 32 years.

"Yeah, we did it," Cabrera said. "It's an unbelievable feeling. ... Four more wins, guys. Four more wins."

Scherzer took a no-hit bid into the sixth against a starting lineup that was again without Alex Rodriguez, who flied out with two on in the sixth as a pinch hitter.

Austin Jackson added a solo shot in the seventh for Detroit, and Peralta hit another homer an inning later.

The game ended with Fielder, Detroit's $214 million acquisition, catching Jayson Nix's popup. The Tigers spilled onto the field for a celebration that began near second base and eventually moved closer to the third-base line.

General manager Dave Dombrowski hugged Jim Leyland — who is in the final year of his contract — while owner Mike Ilitch rubbed the 67-year-old manager's right shoulder.

"I've got a great bunch. We don't have one hot dog in the bunch," the pizza magnate said. "They're all great guys. ... The Tigers are something special."

... The Tigers are something special."

Detroit won its 11th American League pennant and first since 2006. The Tigers have five days off before the World Series starts Wednesday at defending champion St. Louis or 2010 winner San Francisco. After scoring in just three of 39 innings during the series, New York headed home to face unpleasant questions about its future following a postseason of awful hitting, benched stars and veterans showing the wear and tear of age. Rodriguez, the $275 million third baseman, was out of the starting lineup for the third time in the playoffs.

Derek Jeter and Mariano Rivera could only watch following season-ending injuries.

The Yankees, with a big league-high $222 million payroll, hit .188 in the postseason — a record low for a team that played at least seven games — and .157 in the LCS. New York went quietly in the ninth inning, with the Comerica crowd chanting "Sweep!" while the last three batters were retired in order.

OSU NOTES

Curtis Grant still not a factor in plans at LB
COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — What's brewing with the 2012 Ohio State Buckeyes ...
BUCKEYES BUZZ: With all the problems that Ohio State has had at the linebacker position, it's difficult for many to imagine that Curtis Grant isn't seeing more time. Grant, one of the nation's top LB recruits 18 months ago, seldom sees the field.
Head coach Urban Meyer was asked about Grant, who is now behind a converted FB (Zach Boren) with a week working on defense.
"An honest evaluation is that (Curtis) still has a ways to go," Meyer said. "That's one thing that I push our coaches real hard to be as honest as they can with them. Don't leave anything behind Door No. 2. I see him out there grinding and working. He knows his weaknesses and he's trying to get better. I like his attitude."
Defensive coordinator Luke Fickell hasn't eliminated Grant from the picture at LB.
"Curtis is still trying to pick it up. There's a great example of a guy who's in his second year. He's been here a year and a half and he's still trying to figure it out," Fickell said. "Sometimes it takes time."
Fickell used as an example injured LB Etienne Sabino (broken leg) who seldom saw the field through two seasons and a redshirt year but had been playing well for the Buckeyes before he was hurt.
QUOTABLE: Remember the blow-up a short time ago where there were reports that Fickell's wife complained when a pizza clerk made a smart-aleck comment about the poor play of the Buckeyes' defense? He was later fired, with the Fickells issuing a statement through Ohio State saying they did not complain to the kid's manager and did not ask to have him dismissed?
Fickell was asked about the incident this week.
"Nothing needs to be said. Remember this, our whole philosophy is don't whine, don't complain, don't make excuses," Fickell said. "I think I said it a million times last year. My 5-year-olds know that, my wife knows that, we're all in the same boat, we would never whine and we would never complain."
Then, as he walked away, Fickell added, "I actually agree with him."
COMMODORES SAIL AWAY: Vanderbilt is going Big Ten-free, apparently.
On the same day that the Southeastern Conference school dumped a series with Northwestern in 2013 and '14, it was revealed that Vanderbilt notified Ohio State that it was also canceling their scheduled game on Aug. 31, 2013, at Ohio Stadium.
Ohio State athletic director Gene Smith said in a statement he is working to get a replacement opponent.
The new SEC schedule announced Thursday listed Mississippi at Vanderbilt on Aug. 31. Ohio State received notice of Vanderbilt's cancellation in a letter received on Tuesday.
COACHING TREE: Dan Mullen, Meyer's offensive coordinator when they were at Florida, is now the head coach at Mississippi State, which is now 6-0. Louisville head coach Charlie Strong, whose team also is 6-0, was a defensive coordinator for Meyer in Gainesville, Fla. So was Steve Addazio, another ex-OC at Florida under Meyer who has led Temple to a 3-2 mark during a rebuilding year.
Meyer is proud of all of his former assistants.
"They're very intelligent, tough guys," Meyer said. "I love Dan, but you look at Charlie Strong, Steve Addazio — a bunch of good football coaches that were on my staff. Awfully proud of them."
