Commissioners chip in after court fees fall short

Board kicks in $36K more to help cover loan for Courthouse work

By TOM GIAMBRONI
Staff Writer

LISBON — When Columbiana County commissioners agreed in 2004 to undertake a $2.7 million renovation project conceived by the common pleas court judges, it was with the understanding no general fund money would be involved.

Instead, court fees, fines and money received by the court for handling child support cases were expected to be enough to meet the annual loan payment.

But by 2010, commissioners were contributing $25,000 annually from the county general fund, and last week they agreed to pay an additional $36,000 to cover another shortfall.

According to a July 15 letter from court operations officer Amy Ondrejko, the fees generated $101,000 this year, and the annual $25,000 contribution being made by commissioners still left them $36,000 short, which is why the judges were asking for additional money needed to meet the $162,000 loan payment due Aug. 1.

“We agreed to help them if they became a little short,” said Commissioner Jim Hoppel. “This is not a little short. It’s beginning to be a serious problem.”

The original project was to renovate the second floor of the courthouse where the two common pleas courtrooms are located, as well as related offices and the domestic relations magistrate courts. The project also included replacing the courthouse roof, installing a new heating/air conditioning system for the first through third floors, and repair as many windows as possible.

The project was later expanded to include replacing all courthouse windows, resulting in another $844,000 being borrowed, with commissioners agreeing to pay for that loan themselves — $49,000 annually— from the county’s debt service account, which is funded with property taxes.

When the renovation project was first pitched to commissioners — minus replacing windows — it was with the understanding the aforementioned fees would be sufficient to cover the loan payments. Records provided by Ondrejko state the court became aware before finalizing construction plans the fees and child support money would likely fall short of making the loan payments, and

Nestic: Salem, Perry Twp. must work together

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

PERRY TWP. — Salem City Councilman Dave Nestic announced Tuesday he’s running for a seat on the Perry Township Board of Trustees this fall.

The 54-year-old city resident still has two years left on his term in the First Ward after being re-elected to a second four-year term in 2011, but said the city’s in good shape now and he would like to strengthen the relationship between the township and the city for the benefit of all.

In a press release, he said there needs to be a strong working relationship between the two entities, noting that many in the city don’t realize they are also township citizens and the two often operate as if they are totally separate.

“In fact there is a symbiotic relationship between the two and the more, and the better they work together, the better it is for everyone in Perry Township,” he wrote.

He said he’s committed to his work on city council to better the community and when he first decided to run for council, his “objective was to establish a means by which the city could efficiently accomplish active economic development efforts.”

He said the city supported efforts to expose the city to developers and become part of regional development efforts by re-establishing the Salem Area Industrial Development Corp and creating the Sustainable Opportunity Development Center.

“We are now poised to reap the benefits of these marketing efforts as developers are taking notice of Salem once again. These efforts will be enhanced with better cooperation between the township and the city for the benefit of all Perry Township citizens — inside and outside the city limits,” he wrote in the press release.

When asked about the possibility of his First Ward constituents feeling abandoned since he’s running for Perry Township Trustee in the middle of his term, he said they’re all township residents and he would still be representing them, just from a different seat.

On city council, Nestic chairs the Economic Development Committee and the Committee of the Whole and is a member of the Finance Committee and the Utilities Committee.

Nease cleanup expected to begin late this year

By LARRY SHIELDS
Staff Writer

SALEM — When the legal requirements are completed, cleanup is expected to begin late this year for the Nease Chemical Superfund site, according to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency in Chicago.

The cleanup will take several years to complete.

Two legal agreements have been in place since 2006 covering the cleanup’s “design” and the EPA said one more agreement, called a consent decree, is necessary.

That requirement is currently being negotiated and the site owner Rutgers Organics Corp. will be responsible for building and maintaining the actual cleanup area.

The site consists of 44 acres on state Route 14 on the Columbiana-Mahoning county line, two and a half miles northwest of Salem.

Nease Chemical produced various household cleaning compounds, fire retardants and pesticides between 1961 and 1973 — some of which included an “uncommon” chemical called mirex.

Unlined ponds were used to treat waste from the manufacturing process and hazardous substances seeped into the soil and ground water from the ponds and buried drums that

The old Nease Chemical plant on state Route 14 remains padlocked as a U.S. Environmental Protection Agency Superfund Site and is expected to receive some cleanup activity by the end of the year. SALEM Council opposes state tax legislation

Staff Writer

City council voted Tuesday to oppose pending state legislation for municipal income tax uniformity, stressing the city favors business and simplifying the tax process, but not at the expense of city revenue.

“We’re looking out for what’s best for the city,” Councilman Rick Drummond said.

The resolution in opposition to H.B. 5 had been recommended by the Finance Committee of city council, with city council approving the resolution in a 6-0 vote. Councilman Clyde Brown was absent.

After the vote, Council President Mickey Cope Weaver acknowledged how hard the vote was for some council members who own their own businesses or have involvement in businesses who have to deal with the various municipal taxing districts in the state.

City Treasurer Bob Tullis and city Income Tax Administrator Fred Pamer have been warning council about the possible repercussions from the pending legislation, estimating a possible loss of $300,000 in revenue per year due to a section dealing with net operating loss carry forward, which would allow a business to carry a loss over more than one year, which the city does not currently allow.

ALMANAC

Today is Wednesday, Aug. 7, the 219th day of 2013. There are 146 days left in the year. Ten years ago: A bombing outside the Jordanian Embassy in Baghdad killed 19 people. Five years ago: President George W. Bush, speaking in Bangkok, Thailand, praised the spread of freedom in Asia while sharply criticizing oppression and human rights abuses in China, Myanmar and North Korea; the president then traveled to Beijing to attend the opening of the Olympic games. One year ago: Jared Lee Loughner agreed to spend the rest of his life in prison, accepting that he went on a deadly shooting rampage at an Arizona political gathering in 2011 and sparing the victims a lengthy, possibly traumatic death-penalty trial.

The provision is calling for a net operating loss carry forward of five years.

Tullis said he spoke with state Rep. Nick Barborak and state Sen. Joe Schiavoni and they both recommended the best way for council to let them know how they feel would be to pass a resolution.

Tullis said nobody is opposed to business and everybody wants uniformity, but the rub comes in when that causes cities to lose income. The bill as written is not revenue-neutral, he said, and most of the major cities oppose it.

Councilman Dave Nestic questioned Tullis regarding some of his comments, with Tullis explaining that the overall tax system does not favor business and the city wants to help businesses, but at the same time, the city does not want to reduce its income by a significant amount. If they could come up with a way to have the municipality without taking away income for the city, then it would be different.

Councilwoman Cyndi Baronzzi Dickey said she knows how cumbersome the tax system is and “would fully support a bill that would help take care of that mess if it didn’t penalize the cities.”

The resolution talked about the legislation being the means to push for a centralization of municipal income tax collection and Nestic said he doesn’t think any more of that is needed in Columbus.

In other action, council held first reading on an ordinance to amend sections of the fringe benefits rules for non-represented employees and city officials, specifically dealing with part-timers. Council also approved two ordinances related to the summer street paving program, which will be advertising for bids shortly.

Council heard from four visitors, including Highland Avenue resident John Reid who complained about the speeding on Highland from Third Street to 10th Street. In what he called a tongue-in-cheek request, he said he was petitioning to have the speed limit changed from 25 mph to 35 to 45 mph so the speeders won’t have to feel guilty about breaking the law. He said everyone ignores the speed limit and “they go up and down the street like a bat out of you-know-what.”

He watches his two young grandchildren three days a week and they play in the yard and he’s concerned about their safety. He said he’s asking for someone to come up and take care of the problem, saying he asked the police to set up a speed trap and was told they can’t do that and that they don’t have the people to sit up there. He referred to the police reports he reads in the newspaper about how they’re spending their time and questioned why they can’t put a car up there.

“You don’t see speeding in Washingtonville, you don’t see speeding in Canfield for a reason,” he said.

Councilman Brian Whitehill, who heads the Traffic & Safety Committee, said he would speak to the police chief on Reid’s behalf.

Former councilwoman Mary Lou Popa also addressed council, this time asking for the city to purchase a leaf pickup machine, saying the city previously had a leaf pickup machine. She said the bags residents have to purchase are costly and fall is coming.

City worker Doug Moffett of the traffic & safety department told council about some help he recently received with some city signs in front of St. Paul Church where some sidewalk work was recently done. He wanted to publicly thank Bob Hickey and his employees for the work they did to re-mount the signs.

Dr. Michael Traina, of the city Income Tax Review Board, requested council confirm the appointment of Bruce Haddad as the third member of the board. Traina and fellow member Bruce Williams had selected Haddad as their appointment to replace Joe Skiba, who resigned. Their appointment required council confirmation, which council approved.

Contract for Columbiana bridge awarded

By DEANNE JOHNSON
Staff Writer

COLUMBIANA — A small bridge on South Main Street will be replaced this fall after City Council voted Tuesday to award a contract to Shook Brothers Inc. of Berlin Center.

Shook Brothers was one of two companies to bid on the project. The company, which architect Jon Vollnogle of Howells and Baird said does only bridge projects, bid $235,052. Mike Pusateri, a local contractor, bid $263,729. Council unanimously decided to give the project to the lowest bidder, which came in about $10,450 below the project estimate.

Only two contractors bid on the project, while Vollnogle said eight requested drawings and specifications for the project. One potential bidder brought back his bid 15 minutes too late and another told Vollnogle he already had enough projects to keep him busy throughout the fall.

Councilman James King asked for the time frame, questioning whether the project could affect the American Legion Street Fair, which is scheduled for Sept. 5-7.

Vollnogle said the project will take about 90 days to complete, but the street will only be closed at the bridge for 45 days. First, the precast bridge will be ordered and Shook Brothers will start preparing the site mid-August. However, the current bridge will probably not be torn out until mid-September. Foundations will be poured and the precast bridge will be delivered about two months from the time it is ordered. It then will be installed.

The small bridge goes over a culvert south of the railroad tracks, but reportedly is in poor condition.

About 60 percent of the bridge replacement is being paid for with a grant from the Ohio Public Works Commission. Fiscal Officer Michael Harold said the city already has the remaining portion for the project in the budget for this year. He had actually budgeted an additional $35,000 more than what will be needed.

In another matter, council voted to add a discussion of fire truck financing to the special meeting agenda. Councilman Lowell Schloneger noted the city charter allows council to add items to the agenda if five members vote to do so. An executive session was held to discuss financing options for the new ladder truck, which is going to be delivered sooner than expected.

Following the executive session, Councilman Bryan Blakeman announced council had been asked to sign a contract, but Municipal Attorney Daniel Blasdel had found the contract had some bad language in it. Blasdel had provided a memo to council.

Blakeman then went on to say one of the options council considered was using the electric fund to help pay for the fire truck, but had decided not to do so. Following the meeting, other council members led by Schloneger, objected to Blakeman announcing what was discussed in executive session during the public meeting.

Finally, City Manager Lance Willard announced the city cleanup is going well and will run through Friday. The dumpsters, located in the park, will be available late in the evening on Thursday. Blakeman noted a whole bin was filled up with televisions on Tuesday.

Prosecutors: Fort Hood gunman spared civilians, planned for attack on troops

FORT HOOD, Texas (AP) — Maj. Nidal Malik Hasan fired the last of 146 bullets in his assault on Fort Hood, then walked outside where he met two civilians who asked about the commotion and the laser-sighted pistol in his hand.

Hasan told one person not to worry. He assured the other it was just a training exercise and the gun shot only paint. He let both live.

But moments earlier, dozens of uniformed soldiers received no quarter from Hasan, prosecutors said Tuesday as the Army psychiatrist’s long-delayed trial began in a Texas military courtroom.

With his life hanging in the balance, Hasan made little effort to defend himself. Acting as his own attorney, he calmly told the jury that he killed 13 people and wounded 32 others in the 2009 attack.

“The evidence will clearly show that I am the shooter,” he said in an opening statement that lasted little more than a minute. The evidence, he added, would “only show one side.”

Justice Department files first charges in Benghazi attack that killed 4 Americans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department has filed the first criminal charges in the deadly attack on the U.S. diplomatic mission in Benghazi, Libya, two U.S. officials said Tuesday.

The officials confirmed that a sealed indictment was filed in U.S. District Court in Washington against an unspecified number of individuals in the September 2012 attack that killed Ambassador Chris Stevens and three other Americans. One official said those charged included Ahmed Abu Khatalla, the head of a Libyan militia. The officials spoke on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to discuss a sealed indictment.

Earlier, CNN, NBC News and The Wall Street Journal reported that unspecified counts had been filed and sealed in the Benghazi attack.

“The department’s investigation is ongoing. It has been, and remains, a top priority,” said Justice Department spokesman Andrew C. Ames, who declined to comment further.

Yemen again at forefront of fight against terror as Western embassies evacuated

SANAA, Yemen (AP) — Yemen was thrust back into the forefront of the international fight against terrorism Tuesday when the U.S. and Britain evacuated embassy staff due to a threatened attack, a suspected U.S. drone killed four alleged members of al-Qaida, and militants shot down a Yemeni army helicopter.

As Westerners flew out of the country, Yemeni authorities launched a wide investigation into the al-Qaida threat to multiple potential targets in the impoverished Arab nation. Security officials said they believed the terror network was seeking retaliation for a U.S.-backed military offensive that has dealt serious setbacks to the terror network’s most active branch, including the death earlier this year of its No. 2 leader.

The Yemeni army, meanwhile, surrounded foreign installations, government offices and the airport with tanks and troops in the nation’s capital, Sanaa, as well as the strategic Bab al-Mandeb straits at the entrance to the Red Sea in the southern Arabian Peninsula, drawing parallels with security measures following the 2000 bombing of the USS Cole in Aden harbor that killed 17 American sailors.

Authorities also set up checkpoints across Sanaa, searching cars and individuals, especially after night fell. Top government officials, along with military and security commanders, were told to stay vigilant and limit their movements.

Although the immediate threat seemed to be focused on Yemen, the U.S. has temporarily shut down 19 diplomatic posts in the Middle East and Africa. A U.S. intelligence official and a Mideast diplomat told The Associated Press that the closures were triggered by the interception of a secret message between al-Qaida chief Ayman al-Zawahiri and Nasser al-Wahishi, the leader of the Yemen-based al-Qaida in the Arabian Peninsula, about plans for a major terror attack. The officials spoke on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to discuss the matter publicly.

50s murder spree figure critically hurt in Mich. crash

TEKONSHA TOWNSHIP, Mich. (AP) — A woman who was one of two teenage participants in a killing spree that left 11 people dead 55 years ago and became the basis of the movie "Badlands" starring Sissy Spacek and Martin Sheen has been critically injured in a crash, western Michi- gan authorities said Tuesday.

Caril Ann Clair, 70, of Stryker, Ohio, was critically hurt and her 81-year-old husband killed late Monday in a single-vehicle crash on northbound Interstate 69 in Calhoun County, the sheriff's department said. It said Frederick. A. Clair was at the wheel of the SUV when it went off the road and overturned.

Caril Clair was taken to Bronson Methodist Hospital in Kalamazoo. The hospital said it could not provide informa- tion on her Tuesday night.

As a 14-year-old, then-Caril Fugate and her 19-year-old boyfriend, Charlie Starkweather, went on a killing spree in Nebraska and Wyoming in 1957-58 that claimed the lives of Fugate's mother, stepfather, 2-year-old sister and eight others. Starkweather was executed, while Fugate left prison in 1976.

The killings began in late 1957 with the death of 21-year- old gas station attendant Robert Colvert, who was robbed, abducted and shot to death. His body was left on a Ne- braska country road. Two months later, Lincoln, Neb.-area authorities found the bodies of Marion Bartlett, 57; and his 35-year-old wife, Velda, in an outbuilding. Their 2-year-old daughter, Betty Jean, had been clubbed to death with the butt of a gun and her body stuffed in a cardboard box. Missing were Velda Bartlett's 14-year-old daughter by a previous marriage, Caril Fugate, and her boyfriend, Stark- weather.

Prosecutor seeks more time to find victim in domestic assault case

By DEANNE JOHNSON
Staff Writer

LISBON — Dustin Chase, the Minerva police officer ac- cused of assaulting his girlfriend on June 27, appeared Tues- day in Columbiana County Municipal Court.

Assistant County Prosecutor Don Humphrey Jr. requested additional time from Judge Mark Frost, noting attempts to serve a subpoena on the alleged victim, Heather Anderson, remained unsuccessful as of Tuesday morning. Humphrey said he needs to speak with her and other witnesses before going forward with the case.

Both Humphrey and defense attorney Jeff Jakmides noted they had received a duplicate letter from Anderson, although they did not reveal the contents of the letter in court. Jak- mides said it was hand-delivered by a young woman to his of- fice and when he realized which case it pertained to, he placed it in the file.

Further, Humphrey and Jakmides assured Frost they are providing each other with all the information available.

A Columbiana County sheriff's report from the night of the arrest states deputies were called to a home on U.S. Route 30 in East Rochester due to a domestic dispute. Anderson told deputies she had argued with her boyfriend, Chase, and he pushed her down. She struck her head and was knocked out.

Witnesses, including Anderson's 11-year-old daughter, re- portedly confirmed the story for deputies, noting Chase pushed Anderson, she fell down a small flight of stairs and struck her head.

Chase was taken into custody at the Minerva Police Depart- ment and charged with assault. Despite the charge, Chase re- portedly continues to work as a patrolman for the police department, where he has been employed for the past year.

An additional pretrial hearing was set for 11 a.m. Sept. 3. Jakmides said he has filed a request for a jury trial for the case.

OUR SIDE

Korean War was very real war to veterans

Events more than half a century ago on the Korean Peninsula are merely the stuff of history books for most Americans. But for a few, including many residents of our area, they were a matter of life and death.

Sixty years ago this month, the Korean War ended in what many historians refer to as a stalemate. That, and the relative lack of thought many of their fellow Americans seemed to give to their sacrifices, grated on many U.S. veterans for decades.

Officially, it was not even a war. Washington referred to it as a "police action" or a "conflict," despite the fact the war took about 36,574 American lives, wounded another 103,284 and left 2,830 missing in action.

During recent years, more Americans have come to understand what our men and women in uniform accomplished during the Korean War — along with the debt we owe them. In many ways, they won a major victory in a very real war. For that, they deserve the fervent, continuing thanks of a grateful nation.

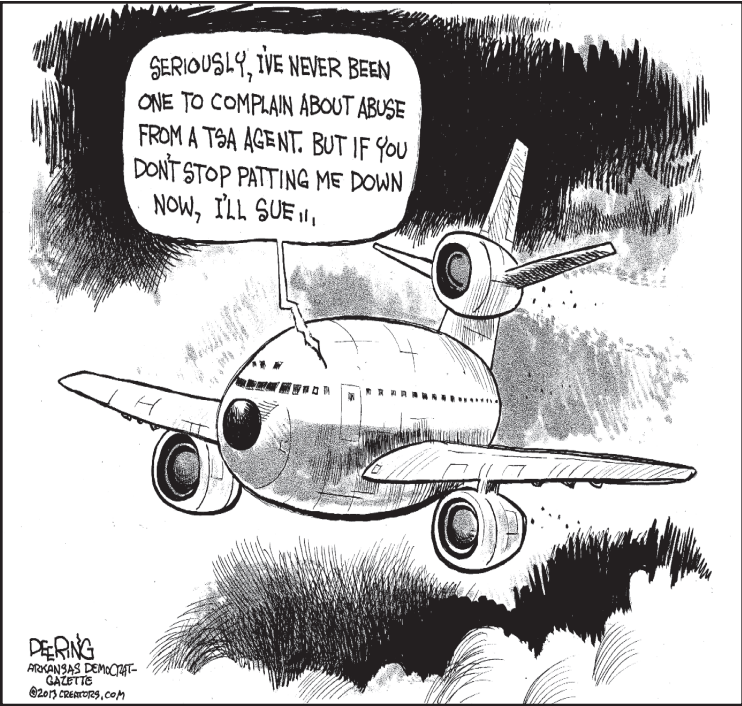

Child prostitution is a tragedy right in our backyards, to judge by results of a nationwide FBI sweep a few days ago. In 76 cities, agents rescued 105 children and arrested 150 pimps.

Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Cincinnati were among cities involved. Two pimps were arrested in Pittsburgh. Two were apprehended in Cincinnati and one in Cleveland. In addition, FBI agents rescued a child who was being used for prostitution in Cleveland.

Since 2003, FBI operations have rescued about 2,700 children forced by adults into lives of prostitution. That probably is just the tip of the iceberg.

During the same period, about 1,350 adults involved in child prostitution have been convicted of various crimes. A few have been sentenced to life in prison.

Yet relatively little is heard about arrests of men — and the offenders are almost exclusively male — who pay for sex with children. Both local and federal law enforcement agencies should target them, too. Well-publicized arrests of a few perverts who pay for sex with juveniles would do a world of good to safeguard children.

GEORGE WILL

housing in this vibrant enclave is 97 percent leased. The enclave is, however, only eight square miles of this city's 139 square miles.

Here in Greece on the Great Lakes, Orr, a Washington bankruptcy lawyer, is Detroit's real government. He recently spoke in the governor's office in Cadillac Place, an enormous 90-year-old building with brass door frames and a lobby as cavernous as a cathedral. The building, an architectural echo of vanished grandeur, was General Motors' headquarters until the company moved into the magnificently misnamed Renaissance Center, a gleaming anomaly that towers over Detroit's decrepitude. It opened in 1977, when Henry Ford II proclaimed: "Detroit has reached the bottom and is on its way back up."

Orr became "emergency manager" in March after the City Council, having accepted a 21-item consent decree stipulating reforms, ignored it. How many items did the council fulfill? "Not one," Orr says.

He is black, so some race-mongers of the sort who helped reduce Detroit to prostration, now, with tedious predictability, call him an Uncle Tom. Orr calls himself a "yellow dog Democrat," a Southern expression (although he has undergraduate and law degrees from the University of Michigan, he is a native Floridian) for someone who would vote for a yellow dog if it were a Democratic candidate.

He is empowered to alter budgets and labor contracts, and to sell city assets. The City Council retains the power to complain.

In his five-month immersion in Detroit's dysfunction, Orr has been startled by "the fact that people had gotten used to the city like this — people were tolerating the abnormal." But Detroit's decline began in the 1960s, well before the auto industry's downward spiral (the United Auto Workers' membership peaked in 1979). A half-century of the abnormal made it the norm.

Orr has found "bureaucracy on steroids" — for example, "more than two dozen layers of approval for planning and zoning." Each layer was an opportunity for cronyism and corruption. And there was what he delicately calls "dissonance" in the political class's thinking, which he compares to the Tulip Mania that gripped Holland in 1637. His explanation for the heedless, unsustainable pension and other promises made to unionized city employees is: "IBG, YBG" — I'll be gone and you'll be gone when the reckoning arrives.

Orr's negotiations with unions and others having been unfruitful, a bankruptcy judge will allocate pain. Especially deserving of it are Detroit's enablers — the creditors who bought the city's bonds, assuming they would be paid first. But paid with what? Because the city is broke, they will be paid pennies on their dollars. Other cities will probably suffer the malfeasance Wall Street encouraged in Detroit: The cost of municipal borrowing should increase when lenders add a new risk premium to the cost of credit.

Also facing a rendezvous with reality are former city employees, some of whom retired at 50 on pensions exempt from some taxes. Government retirees have assumed that their benefits would be protected by Michigan's Constitution, which says pensions "shall not be diminished or impaired" by any Michigan government's actions. But Chapter 9 of federal bankruptcy law says insolvent cities may restructure their obligations, and the U.S. Constitution makes any U.S. statute "the supreme law of the land."

Until now, the long shriveling of private-sector unions has been somewhat offset by the unionization of government employees. But when these workers realize that their union dues (which help to elect compliant officials who dispense the wealth of third parties — taxpayers) do not buy inviolable protection from arithmetic, will they still pay them?

Orr is determined to find $1.25 billion to spend over a decade on restoring some semblance of public services. But $125 million a year will not go far in a city in which 40 percent of street lights are out and the police department is so strapped its officers have no business cards to give citizens who might call for help — if the average time it takes the police to respond to 911 calls ever declines from the current 58 minutes.

Someday Orr will return to Washington, and Detroit's political class will return to power. Then that class may discover that democracy is not as fun as it was before money, like the largess of lenders, disappeared.

To see where country is heading, ignore Washington politicians

SCOTT RASMUSSEN

It's no secret that both political parties are struggling to connect with voters. Strategists dream up marketing plans to increase their party's appeal to this constituency or that group. Sometimes they work, and sometimes they don't. But they never establish a deep and lasting connection with voters.

That's because most of what the parties talk about is yesterday's news and is largely irrelevant to the realities of the 21st century.

Consider the top issue before the nation — the economy. President Obama wants to raise taxes and increase government spending to boost the economy and create jobs. Republicans disagree. Voters root for their political team but see little connection between rhetoric and reality.

A better understanding of where the economy is headed comes from far outside of official Washington. One way to get a sense of what is taking place is to pick up a copy of "Makers: The New Industrial Revolution" by Wired magazine editor Chris Anderson.

If you've never heard of or seen 3-D printing, the book will change everything you think you know about economics and day-to-day life. Anderson argues that "the collective potential of a million garage tinkerers and enthusiasts is about to be unleashed, driving a resurgence of American manufacturing."

If you are familiar with the potential of 3-D printing, you will have to consider Anderson's claim that "a generation of 'Makers' using the Web's innovation model will help drive the next big wave in the global economy."

It's unlikely that everything Anderson describes will play out as he envisions, but at least he's discussing the 21st century economy. He is addressing both the hopes and fears of millions who recognize that the new technology has already changed the economy in a fundamental way.

Jaron Lanier, the father of virtual reality, also addressed those issues in his book, "Who Owns the Future?" Lanier initially thought that the digital networking world would improve life for everyone. Now, he fears that those networks will eliminate middle class jobs. In Lanier's view, the problem is that everybody is giving away so much personal and professional content for free. He sees the ultimate winner in such a world as the person with the biggest computer to mine that data.

As with Anderson, you don't have to agree with everything Lanier says to recognize that he's addressing reality far more than either political party in Washington.

Even more, whether Anderson and Lanier have it right, the forces they describe are going to do more to shape the global economic future than all the rhetoric about fiscal policy, stimulus, minimum wage, union rules and regulation.

For those activists who cling to the view that politics drives the future, consider the 1970s, when politicians grappled with an energy crisis, Watergate, high inflation, high unemployment and more. The policy debates led to the tax revolt and the election of Ronald Reagan as president.

During that time, unknown to the world at large, Bill Gates dropped out of Harvard to found Microsoft. Steve Jobs left school to work for Atari and attended the Homebrew Computer Club with Steve Wozniak. Those two men started Apple Computer.

Without taking anything away from Reagan's accomplishments in the 1980s, it was Gates and Jobs who shaped the future.

Today, the future is being shaped in America, not Washington.

July 29
The Tampa (Fla.) Tribune on truth riles up Venezuela

Facing the Senate Foreign Relations Committee a few days ago, Samantha Power, President Barack Obama's nominee for ambassador to the United Nations, surely didn't expect to stir up the proverbial hornet's nest.

Power told the committee that as America's U.N. envoy, she believed in "contesting" what she described as a "crackdown on civil society being carried out in countries like Cuba, Iran, Russia, and Venezuela."

That was truthful, if not exactly an exercise in delicate diplomacy, and it enraged Venezuela President Nicolas Maduro, the hand-picked successor of the late Hugo Chavez, the flamboyantly anti-American socialist. ...

He demanded an apology.

Maduro, a former bus driver who was elected in April after Chavez succumbed to cancer, had called for improved relations with Washington. In June his foreign minister, Elias Jaua, met Secretary of State John Kerry, who described their meeting as the "beginning of a good, respectful relationship."

Jaua announced that his government had sent a letter of protest to the American embassy in Caracas. ...

The United States needn't overreact to Maduro's bravado, but it needn't apologize for Power's accurate characterization of Venezuela.

We suspect all this will fade away. Despite the ill will generated by Chavez, the United States remains a critical trading partner for Venezuela. And the United States is a major importer of Venezuela's major export, oil.

Maduro's tough talk probably is no more than that. In any event, such threats shouldn't keep American diplomats from calling out oppressive regimes, however thin-skinned they may be.

eventually leaked.

The cleanup site is divided into two portions — the Middle Fork of Little Beaver Creek and the Nease property.

Ground water, on-site source areas and the creek all need to be addressed to achieve a total cleanup, the EPA said, noting that the consent decree requires the U.S. Department of Justice to act on EPA's behalf.

A spokesperson for the EPA said, "We expect this one to be 'lodged' in federal court this year." The DOJ will then set a public comment period in the Federal Register because all comments must be sent to the DOJ.

Department officials will review and respond to the comments before "entering" the consent decree in federal court where it will be deemed "final," the EPA said.

The final consent decree will be available at the public libraries in Salem and Lisbon and at www.epa.gov/region5/cleanup/nease.

The EPA said the cleanup for soil and sediment (mud) in the creek expected to begin this year will include: Ground water treatment; removal of the most contaminated sediment in the Middle Fork of Little Beaver Creek; removal of feeder creek sediment; removal of the most contaminated floodplain surface soil; and disposal of contaminated soil and sediment at the old Nease plant site.

The EPA explained that when the sediment is taken from the creek to the Nease site, it will be dried out and placed with contaminated soil from the former facility.

It will be covered with clean soil and monitored to ensure that it doesn't move or leak.

Contaminated soil currently on the Nease property will be handled in a similar way.

The EPA said that dealing with environmental matters (such as contaminated soil and sediment) locally is more responsible than sending it someplace else where it becomes another community's problem.

Rutgers is completing the design of a $22 million cleanup for the Nease property using an innovative technology called "nanoscale zero-valent iron," or NZVI.

Microscopic particles of specially treated iron are injected into the ground water. These tiny particles chemically clean deep ground water.

It allows the particles to flow with the ground water while cleaning the underground aquifer as they reach into the smallest cracks in the bedrock under the site.

The company also provided vapor treatment systems to some nearby homes to prevent potentially harmful vapors from entering the basements.

The rest of the site will be cleaned up using a combination of methods.

Areas known as Ponds 1 and 2 will be cleaned up by mixing a cement-like substance into the ground to solidify any remaining contamination and then covered with a thick plastic sheet and a layer of clean soil.

This cover will prevent rain from soaking through and further spreading the contamination. Other areas will be covered with only clean soil as detailed in the 2008 Record of Decision.

A trench will be installed on the eastern and southern sides of the site to collect shallow ground water, pump it above ground, and treat it to remove contamination.

All of the work being done and paid for by Rutgers is overseen by U.S. EPA and Ohio EPA.

Castro's house to be demolished today

CLEVELAND (AP) — The nonprofit responsible for the scheduled Wednesday demolition of the Cleveland house where three women were imprisoned and raped for a decade plans to take additional precautions to ensure that passersby do not collect rubble that could later be sold online.

The (Cleveland) Plain Dealer on Tuesday reported that the Cuyahoga Land Bank expects to complete the demolition of Ariel Castro's house in one day and shred all the building materials. The land bank acquired Castro's home on Seymour Avenue last week, and the house's electricity was turned off on Monday after his family and friends removed personal items from it, including photographs and musical instruments. A contractor is scheduled to tear down the home Wednesday morning. Plans for what will replace the house on the site haven't been made public.

Stigma affects recovery for an addict

By CATHY BROWNFIELD
Family Recovery Center publicist

Stigma: A mark of disgrace associated with a particular circumstance, quality or person; when someone judges you based on a personal trait, like mental health.

Disgrace: Shame, dishonor; cause of shame; condition of being out of favor; loss of respect.

Respect: Regard; high or special regard; esteem; to consider deserving of high regard.

Grace: Unmerited help given to people by God (as in overcoming temptation); a virtue coming from God; approval, acceptance; honor.

Bullying: domineer, browbeat, intimidate.

No, the above is not part of a spelling or definitions list for a test at school, but these are a few terms intended to encourage everyone to think about what value each of them has in his or her life.

For instance, there was a time when red-haired people were feared as witches. Snakes still are hated as evil. And people who have made big mistakes are punished for their mistakes over and over again until they finally get things right...or perhaps never, because of stigma. They did this thing and can never live it down, are never going to be worthy of forgiveness and another chance.

In spiritual matters, one falls from grace when they fail to keep their faith alive and well. In everyday life people are disgraced when they succumb to substance abuse. And they are judged by society for failing to keep the acceptable social behaviors everyone lives by.

Addicts will tell you what happened to them. They will tell you they didn't intend to become addicted. When they are in recovery for the long haul, they will commit to earning trust and grace from the people around them. They are ashamed because they violated a sacred trust with their families and friends. But trust, once it is violated, is not easy to get back. It takes time for people to see that the person in recovery is taking the process seriously, is doing what is necessary to be healthy and well. It can be done, but there is a lot of work to do to prove themselves.

Stigma has harmful effects. Family, friends and others who don't understand addiction may believe the worst. There may be discrimination at work, at school, because the addict abused substances.

The addict may have trouble finding a place to live because nobody wants an addict living and dealing in their neighborhood among their children. The addict may be bullied, suffer harassment or physical violence. Addicts feel like they are in a black hole. There is no way out, no hope for them. And when they attempt to find help, sometimes their insurance coverage is not adequate for their needs.

Just taking the first step to getting help is a major accomplishment. When they really want to heal, to recover their health and their life, they don't let stigma create self-doubt and shame, they don't isolate themselves, and they don't label who they are by the disease. They join support groups; get help at school or from their employer. And they speak out against stigma.

Trust is a strong bond, but it becomes fragile when it is betrayed. Spirituality is an important part of the recovery of an addict, each person finding their own understanding of a power greater than they who loves them and forgives them, lifts them up.

Over the next three weeks, FRC will present a series of articles covering the community's concern regarding the use of opiates in the area and the fact that many of those individuals are addicted today because of painkillers prescribed to solve a medical issue that led to abuse and addiction. Clients, family members and FRC staff discuss addiction and recovery from their experiences.

Family Recovery Center promotes the well being of individuals, families and communities with education, prevention and treatment programs for substance abuse and related mental health issues. NESTIC

In the press release, he said as a member of the Finance Committee "we have managed through some difficult times and maintained services while keeping the taxes in the city low. We are now seeing a strong recovery and have a good team in place to manage going forward. As we enter into a new planning phase for the city, I believe the township should be included in city planning and execution."

"The best way for that to happen is to have a strong relationship between city and township government," he wrote. "I have a very good working relationship with the administration and the city council and I would like to bring that relationship to the township trustee position so the two bodies of government can work together to enrich all the citizens to which they are responsible."

Nestic said everything is possible.

"You just need people who believe everything is possible," he said.

Nestic is the founder and president of NezTech Corporation, a Columbus firm started in 1994 which provides technology business development, marketing and commercialization services.

He won't be alone in seeking the township position. Council President Mickey Cope Weaver, who chose not to seek reelection to council, also filed, along with the two incumbent Perry Township Trustees Don Rudibaugh and Don Kendrick and former Salem mayor and former Perry Township trustee Jerry Wolford.

The deadline to file for non-partisan positions is 4 p.m. today.

PROJECT

commissioners agreed to make up the difference.

In 2010, the court approached the commissioners seeking a formal commitment to begin contributing $25,000 per year from the county general fund. According to a memorandum from Ondrejko, commissioners Hoppel and Dan Bing agreed to do so. There is no record in the official commissioner meeting minutes around that time indicating they ever voted to contribute $25,000.

Hoppel is the only commissioner left from that board and he recalled making the commitment but he is concerned the board is being asked to assume even more of the payments. "I think we need to sit down with them and see where this ends," he said.

Commission Chairman Mike Halleck agreed. "As I've discussed with (Ondrejko), we need to sit down before the first of the year to decide how to proceed" when drafting the 2014 county budget, he said.

Hoppel is unhappy it has come to this because the judges promised in 2004 the fees and child support money would be enough to make the loan payment. "I realize the fees are a moving target ... but they indicated to us it would be sufficient," he said.

Halleck said the episode speaks to the need to be careful when undertaking projects that there is a reliable long-term funding source. "The question in the future is when we go out for loans we need to have fees that can be substantiated over the life of the debt," he said.

Looking good
The Salem Beautification Committee recently recognized the “Business of the Month” and the “Blue Ribbon Digs” winners. Recipients of these awards have excellent curb appeal and in the case of the residence award, aesthetically pleasing yards. The “Business of the Month” was presented to the Dress Code at 131 S. Lincoln Ave. Seen in the photo below are, left, Adalinne Hurst, store owner Rose Hurst, Heather Henderson and JeanAlice Fehr. The business recently painted its facade and added new signage while maintaining beautiful floral hanging baskets. The Rev. William Medford of 595 N. Union Ave. is seen in the above photo for the July “Blue Ribbon Digs” award with Beautification Committee members Jennifer Brown and Fehr. He credits his late wife, Sharon, who was often seen tending to the gardens of beautiful flowers. Rev. Medford also acknowledges his children, Margot Wuebbens, Anne Pipho, and Michael and Matthew Medford for carrying on the tradition of planting and weeding the gardens. (Submitted photos)

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 7, 2013 ★ SALEM NEWS

More bad news for the Indians

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Indians have two more chances to slow down the Tigers, two more tries in this series to figure out how to beat a team that has their number.

A season of promise may have reached its turning point.

“We need to win tomorrow,” Cleveland manager Terry Francona said.

For the second straight day, Detroit showed why it’s the team to beat the AL Central and why any challengers had better be ready to rumble for nine innings.

Justin Verlander overpowered Cleveland’s lineup for eight innings and Justin Masterson gave up a three-run homer to personal nemesis Don Kelly as the Tigers won their 10th straight, 5-1 over the Indians, who can’t handle the one team they’re chasing.

Verlander (12-8) allowed one run and four hits as the Tigers beat the Indians for 10th time in 11 games to open a five-game lead over Cleveland.

Kelly connected in the fifth inning off Masterson (13-8) and Miguel Cabrera picked up his 100th RBI as the Tigers improved to 11-3 against their nearest division rival.

Masterson had one bad inning, and it cost him.

Kelly’s three-run shot highlighted Detroit’s five-run fifth off the right-hander, who hurt himself by hitting two batters during the inning.

“It was all done in 16 pitches,” Francona said. “Other than that, Mastey was real good, but you give them an opening and that’s what they can do.”

First, Masterson plunked No. 9 hitter Ramon Santiago, who had squared to bunt before getting drilled. Austin Jackson followed with a single and Torii Hunter’s RBI groundout brought in Santiago to tie it 1-all. Miguel Cabrera, who missed three games with a hip injury, then sent a drive off the center field wall for a go-ahead RBI double, arriving at second with a slow-motion slide.

One out later, Masterson hit Victor Martinez on the right foot and Detroit’s DH hopped around in pain before limping to first but staying in the game. Kelly followed by drilling a 1-1 pitch into the Tigers’ bullpen for his fifth homer to make it 5-1.

Kelly owns Masterson. He’s now 11 of 24 (.458) with two homers and eight RBIs. On June 9, he hit a three-run homer off Masterson in Detroit’s 4-1 win.

“If I was Superman, he’d be my Kryptonite,” Masterson said. “There’s always a guy. He salivates when I’m up there.”

Kelly was in the lineup because of his outrageous numbers against Masterson. “He’s definitely been a thorn in our side,” Francona said. “There was a reason he was playing tonight and that was why.”

The Indians, who are 24-10 against the Central’s three other teams, have to win the next two over Detroit just to gain a split.

To do that, they’ll have to beat Doug Fister and Max Scherzer.

“Detroit has four aces, which is why they are so good,” Indians manager Terry Francona said before the game.

Although Scherzer leads the AL with 16 wins and is the front-runner to win the Cy Young this season, Verlander remains the Tigers’ top gun and the one they turn to when things get tough.

He has struggled at times this season, but after watching video of his 2011 MVP season made a change in his delivery.

“The adjustment that I made obviously made not just a little impact but a pretty big impact,” said Verlander, who explained he altered his motion toward the plate. “Everything I’ve been searching for I was able to find it today. That’s a huge stride in the right direction.”

Verlander gave up an RBI groundout in the second, but otherwise handled the Indians with ease. When Cleveland threatened in the sixth with two on and none out, Verlander turned up the heat.

He retired Nick Swisher on a deep fly to right before blowing a 100 mph fastball past All-Star Jason Kipnis for strike two and then locked him up with an 84 mph changeup.

Verlander then got Asdrubal Cabrera to ground out on another fastball then hit the century mark on the radar gun. As he headed toward the dugout, the right-hander pumped his fist knowing he had probably put the Indians away for good.

“We had a couple chances and he seemed to find another gear tonight, that we’ve unfortunately seen in the past,” Francona said. “When he starts hitting 100 at the knees, that’s tough.”

The Indians got some bad news even before losing their second straight game as starter Corey Kluber was put on the 15-day disabled list with a sprained right middle finger. Kluber injured his finger throwing a breaking ball in Monday night’s game when he pitched 7 1-3 shutout innings.

There is no timetable on Kluber’s injury, but Indians starter Zach McAllister recently missed seven weeks with a similar ailment.

“I’m disappointed for him,” Francona said. “It makes it harder for us. It’s not that we can’t do it, it just makes it harder. He has worked so hard and he will be fine but you have to be patient with these kinds of things or you can get yourself in trouble so we won’t.”

NOTES: Cleveland’s five-game deficit is its largest since June 17 ... Francona said the Indians would have further information on Kluber before Wednesday’s game. ... The Tigers have won 14 of 18 against the Indians dating to Sept. 5 last season.

The Clippers recorded a cumulative score of 322, finishing behind Berlin Highland (319) and Louisville St. Thomas Aquinas (314).

DeCastro ready to have a big season

LATROBE, Pa. (AP) — David DeCastro can finally relax.

DeCastro, the Pittsburgh Steelers’ first-round pick in 2012, stayed mostly quiet and kept to himself in training camp as a rookie offensive lineman last year, but he is beginning to come out of his shell during his second go-round at training camp.

“I definitely don’t feel like a rookie anymore,” DeCastro said. “I don’t have to get up and sing in the dining hall and do stupid stuff like that, which is good. There are no more surprises. It’s nice.”

DeCastro is certainly more comfortable this summer, not just when it comes to football, but also living in the dorms and navigating his way around campus at Saint Vincent College. The change is evident in media sessions too, where the typically no-nonsense DeCastro is livelier than ever, expanding on his often succinct, to-the-point responses.

“I think I’m just a little quiet at first once I get to know people,” DeCastro said. “It’s just kind of how I am. I’m not going to open up at first. I kind of want to survey and get a feel for things. I’m still not the most talkative, but I’m more talkative than I was.”

Even his teammates noticed a difference from a year ago when DeCastro first carried his straightforward, workman-like demeanor through training camp last summer.

“David was a quiet guy,” offensive lineman Ramon Foster said. “He didn’t say much and the fact that he’s acting up with us shows he’s getting comfortable and that helps him do what he does best, which is play football.”

That’s all the Steelers are concerned about.

DeCastro, the No. 24 overall pick from Stanford in 2012, cruised through a promising breakout training camp as a rookie and was projected to start at right guard until disaster struck during the first quarter of the team’s third preseason game at Buffalo.

DeCastro suffered a torn medial collateral ligament, dislocated kneecap, and partially torn patellar tendon in his right knee, casting a black shadow on what appeared to be a bright rookie season.

“It’s tough mentally,” DeCastro said. “It’s a lot of adversity to go through, but you learn a lot about yourself. You’re still able to make improvements and learn techniques. It’s a different game in the NFL and I learned a lot.”

Modified injured reserve rules implemented last season allowed the Steelers to place DeCastro on an IR list that permitted him to return after eight weeks, salvaging part of his rookie season.

DeCastro gradually worked his way back on special teams in his NFL debut against San Diego in December. He made his first career start at right guard the next week against Dallas, helping the Steelers amass nearly 400 yards of offense. DeCastro followed it up with starts in the final two games of the season against Cincinnati and Cleveland.

“He would’ve been awesome last year if he wouldn’t have gotten hurt,” Steelers’ center Maurkice Pouncey said. “He fought back through the injury, came back, and had a productive end to last year.”

1999 — Wade Boggs becomes the first player to homer for his 3,000th hit, connecting in rare style with a two-run shot in Tampa Bay's 15-10 loss to Cleveland. Boggs already with a pair of RBI singles, homers off Chris Haney in the sixth inning for the milestone.

Mount Union tops OAC preseason polls

CANTON — Mount Union's football team topped both Ohio Athletic Conference media and coaches preseason polls on Tuesday at OAC Football Media Day at the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

Mount Union garnered eight of 10 first place votes in the coaches poll and 31 of 36 first place votes in the media poll. The other first place votes in both polls belong to second-ranked Heidelberg while Baldwin Wallace, Otterbein and John Carroll are third through fifth in both polls.

The Purple Raiders, the preseason No. 1 pick in the nation, went 15-0 last season, won the OAC championship for a 21st straight season and won its record 11th NCAA Division III Championship. Mount Union has won the last 21 straight and 24 OAC football titles overall.

"We appreciate the respect that coaches and the media in the OAC have for our program," first-year head coach Vince Kehres said. "We also know that playing in this conference is a tremendous challenge week in and week out."

Vince Kehres enters his first year as a head coach after serving 13 years as an assistant coach — the last eight as defensive coordinator. The 2013 season begins at 1:30 p.m. on Sept. 7 against Franklin (Ind.) College at Mount Union Stadium.

The football team starts practice today. Photo day/media day on campus will be held at 10:30 a.m. on Aug. 22 in Mount Union Stadium. A scrimmage against Washington & Jefferson (Pa.) College will be held at 3:30 p.m. on Aug. 29 at Mount Union Stadium.

Meyer promises camp will be a difficult experience

COLUMBUS (AP) — Urban Meyer doesn't know what to make of his current crop of Buckeyes yet.

He believes he'll have a better handle on them when practices get harder. A lot harder.

"It's the first day in pads. So right now this is all candy," he said, flashing a wicked grin. "Come back in about a week and there's going to be people asleep on the mattresses (by noon). It's hard. Camp is terrible. But we're not in camp yet. This is just practice."

That phrase — "just" practice — must sound ominous to the players already sweating through early workouts at Ohio State.

Asked if he preferred the weather be a little hotter instead of so temperate, Meyer added, "Just see what goes on next week at Ackerman Field. It's awful."

The Buckeyes went through only their third practice on Tuesday. There's a lot that's unknown about the 2013 team. But Meyer said he already has a pretty good feel when it comes to several major items.

— Concerning star players Bradley Roby and running back Carlos Hyde, both in the doghouse after recent legal problems, both are practicing with the team. Roby is awaiting the next step in the process after being charged with misdemeanor battery after an incident at a Bloomington, Ind., bar this summer.

"We're just still waiting to find out all the information," Meyer said.

Police called Hyde a person of interest in an alleged assault against a woman. The alleged victim declined to pursue charges, with police ending the investigation. But Hyde was suspended for the first three games by Meyer.

— Meyer said he likes the players he has. He just wishes he had more of them in spots.

Of major concern is a lack of depth at both the linebacker and offensive line positions.

"They just don't look Ohio Stateish," he said of the backups. "Other positions, you can see three guys that are all good-looking players. The O-line and linebackers are not where we need to be."

Moreover, Meyer said the problem probably cannot be fixed with the people on hand.

"(Maybe) with another recruiting class," he said. "Yeah, we're going to have to hang in there for this fall and not get guys hurt. Because we have depth issues there."

— He is not concerned about the quarterback spot, where Braxton Miller is coming back for his third year as the starter.

Miller has grown into the position. He was thrown into a bad spot, learning on the job as a freshman during the tumultuous 2011 season when NCAA investigators were on campus, Luke Fickell was filling in for the deposed Jim Tressel as head coach and there was confusion everywhere. The Buckeyes went 6-7.

As a sophomore, Miller carried the team with his running ability for much of the first half of the season, then reverted more to passing in the second half as the Buckeyes pulled a 12-0 record out of the hat. Still, he had his highs and his lows. There was and is room for improvement, even for a quarterback who ran for 1,271 yards and 13 scores and passed for 2,039 yards and 15 touchdowns with only six interceptions.

Ed Warinner, Ohio State's co-offensive coordinator and offensive line coach, said there are several things that jump out when you look at Miller now.

"In terms of his technique, it's his footwork and all his techniques, his mannerisms, running the offense but setting his feet, throwing, making his reads, keeping the ball in the right position, his footwork on runs and meshing with the running backs," Warinner said. "Technically, he's a better player and he's much more confident and he's much more of a leader and really has a much better understanding the big picture of what's going on."

— Meyer expressed satisfaction with the early returns on Australian punter Cameron Johnston, a freshman running back and a huge fill-in on the offensive front wall.

Johnston is a former Australian Rules Football player who is being asked to step in for the graduated Ben Buchanan.

"He's got a live leg," the second-year coach said. "He's a tremendous kid, 21 years old, so he's not that 17-year-old, wide-eyed guy that looks at you like, 'What planet am I on?' He's a fast athlete, so we might be able to do some things with him, moving the pocket and so forth."

Meyer called Johnston his "No. 1 guy" at punter.

Dontre Wilson, recruited as a generic athlete in February, has made an impression so far at a running back.

"He's got something that we didn't have last year and that's just 'jets,'" Meyer said, referring to the DeSoto, Texas, native's speed.

Up front, Taylor Decker has looked solid in his attempt to fill the spot at right tackle. At 6-foot-7 and more than 300 pounds, he made some headway as a backup last year during his first year on campus and has continued to improve.

"I feel like I'm getting there now," Decker said. "I feel really comfortable with the playbook, like I'm definitely able to play full speed all the time."

The Buckeyes opened camp Sunday and will slowly change the focus from drills and learning the playbook to concentrating on the opener Aug. 31 against Buffalo.

Panthers enter ACC era with renewed optimism

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Devin Street is an old guy, at least by college football standards.

The fifth-year Pitt senior has seen it all — six head coaches for starters — and watched the Panthers nearly do it all. Still, even he's pumped up about the school's move from what's left of the Big East to the ACC.

"It's a whole new lineup," Street said. "It's something you're going to walk into and you don't know what's coming.

You're going to go into new venues and stuff like that, so I'm excited. It's kind of like a different journey."

The journey began when training camp opened on Tuesday, with the buildup for the nationally televised season opener against Florida State on Labor Day night already underway.

All the new trappings, however, doesn't change the focus for second-year head coach Paul Chryst.

"I think last year focused on the team's we're playing," Chryst said. "This year we're focused on the teams we're playing. For myself, it's not much different than last year."

But before the Panthers play a game for the first time with "ACC" emblazoned on the crowns of their helmets instead of "Big East," there are some questions Chryst must answer, starting at quarterback.

Gone is three-year starter Tino Sunseri who threw for 3,288 yards and 21 scores last season.

As of now, it's still a mystery as to who will fill his shoes as Chryst watches over his signal-callers to find out who has the most command of Chryst's system.

One of the men involved in the so-called battle, Tom Savage, enters as the likely favorite as a redshirt senior and having spent last season running Pitt's scout team after transferring from Arizona. His main competition is Chad Voytik, recruited by Todd Graham and the No. 1 recruit out of Tennessee in 2012.

"We're just going out there competing, and (do) whatever coach says," Savage said. "We're all different quarterbacks and we just have to be the best quarterback we can be. Whoever that is, they'll be the starter."

Beyond Street, who enters 2013 just 28 receptions away from becoming Pitt's all-time leader in receptions, the receivers are a mystery. Senior Ed Tinker saw time with the first-team offense, while quarterbacks completed passes underneath to tight ends for most of the drills.

Freshman Tyler Boyd has impressed as well, but it's very early.

"Just smooth," Street said about Boyd's play. "Seeing him out there, everything's natural for him. He's definitely going to be able to contribute for us."

Despite what may be perceived as one of the more wide-open positions on the team after Street, the senior insists there is enough talent around him to make an impact in a tough league.

"I want us to be the core of that offense," Street said. "I want us to be the main focus, and getting guys going. Guys can watch us going 100 percent, and that motivates them."

NDSU linebacker set to change plea to misdemeanor

FARGO, N.D. (AP) — North Dakota State star linebacker Travis Beck, charged with assault following a street brawl in June, is scheduled to change his not guilty plea to a charge of resisting arrest.

The 21-year-old Beck earlier pleaded not guilty to the misdemeanor charge. A change-of-plea hearing was scheduled for Aug. 19 in East Central District Court after prosecutors dismissed a more serious felony assault charge.

The 6-foot, 212-pound Beck is a two-year starter for the two-time Football Championship Subdivision champions. He was the most valuable player in the 2012 FCS championship game.

Harrison comes through for Pirates

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The last time Josh Harrison hit a walk-off homer, he was a high school senior in Cincinnati. The game was played in front of a few dozen people on a spring afternoon. Still the only homer of his prep career remains ingrained in Harrison's memory.

Now it's got company.

The Pittsburgh Pirates utility infielder sent a fast-ball from Miami reliever Mike Dunn into the first row of seats in right-center leading off the ninth, the improbable homer lifting the Pirates to a 4-3 victory on Tuesday night.

"I knew it had a chance," Harrison said after his second home run of the season. "I knew it wasn't caught off the bat. I was running watching (Giancarlo) Stanton's reaction. I knew he wasn't going to catch it. I saw him pull up and it didn't kick back, I knew it was gone."

Pittsburgh manager Clint Hurdle sent Harrison out to leadoff the inning modestly hoping Harrison could find a way to get on base. Instead, Harrison provided another signature moment in a season that is starting to stockpile them for the first-place Pirates.

A marvelous diving grab by centerfielder Andrew McCutchen with two on in the seventh saved two runs and reliever Vin Mazzaro narrowly escaped a bases-loaded jam moments when a liner from Jeff Mathis landed inches foul. Mathis eventually flied to left on a night Miami left 11 runners on base.

Minutes later Harrison was getting the creampie to the face treatment.

"Those are little things that happen that make you go 'Yeah, something's going on,'" Hurdle said. "There's no doubt the more feel good you get, the more you feel good."

The NL Central-leading Pirates have won three straight to move a season-high 24 games over .500 (68-44).

Dunn (2-3) bailed Chad Qualls after Qualls loaded the bases with no outs in the eighth. He struck out Pedro Alvarez and got Russell Martin to hit into a double play but couldn't get the best of Harrison, a bench player who has spent most of the season shuttling between Pittsburgh and Triple-A Indianapolis.

"Initially, I didn't think it was high enough to go out but it carried and it was a home run," Dunn said. "It was a good job on his part."

Bryan Morris (5-4) pitched a perfect top of the ninth for the victory. Neil Walker had three hits for the Pirates. McCutchen had two hits, including a two-run double, for Pittsburgh.

Donovan Solano went 3 for 5 for the Marlins but baseball's lowest scoring team left runners on base in six of the first seven innings.

"We couldn't get that hit to give us a little breathing room," Miami manager Mike Redmond said.

Pittsburgh's Jeff Locke has been one of baseball's biggest surprises, the 25-year-old soaring from fringe starter to All-Star. He's had trouble working deep into games since returning from his trip to New York for the midsummer classic, and for a while it appeared he was headed for another early exit after lasting just four innings against St. Louis in his last start.

Miami turned three singles — none of them sharply hit — into a run in the second then added two more in the third behind four straight singles to start the inning. The Marlins, however, couldn't pile on and Locke eventually settled down. The left-hander allowed three runs on nine hits in 5 2-3 innings, walking three and striking out four as his ERA ticked up to 2.47.

"There are lessons to be learned for him," Hurdle said of Locke. "He's always got to be the predator and the aggressor. We're into August. We're into September. Everybody that gets that ball, you've got to be throwing aggressive punches off the mound with intent and conviction."

Locke left two runners on in the sixth. He also left with a no decision as Mazzaro retired Ed Lucas with two runners on to end the inning.

Henderson Alvarez handcuffed the Pirates in their previous meeting, limiting Pittsburgh to just two hits in six innings of a victory two weeks ago. The Pirates, however, briefly figured him out in the third. McCutchen doubled off the wall to drive in two runs and Pedro Alvarez followed with his first triple of the year to tie it.

The Pirates never threatened against the Miami starter again, and Alvarez left after seven innings, giving up three runs on six hits, striking out six while not issuing a walk.

That left it up to the bullpen and Pittsburgh's "Shark Tank" continued its dominance. Mazzaro survived the seventh and the Marlins went meekly in the eighth or ninth before Harrison stepped to the plate.

"I've never been around a group of guys that fights this hard the entire game," Locke said. "We load the bases in the eighth and Pedro comes up and we don't score and you see who comes up with nobody on and walks off. It's funny how the game works like that."

NOTES: Hurdle said LHP Francisco Liriano deserves to be in the NL Cy Young conversation. Liriano is 12-4 with a 2.02 ERA in 16 starts and was named the NL Player of the Week after picking up two victories between July 29-Aug. 4 ... The series continues on Wednesday when Pittsburgh's Charlie Morton (3-3, 4.07 ERA) faces Tom Koehler (3-6, 4.34). Morton gave up five runs in six innings of a loss to St. Louis in his previous start. Koehler pitched six shutout innings against the Mets in a win last Thursday.

John Carroll grad Fletcher keeps on going in NFL

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Look at London Fletcher's career stats, particularly the column of numbers under the letter "G."

Nothing but 16s for "Games" played. On and on and on. Through four years with the St. Louis Rams. Five with the Buffalo Bills. Six with the Washington Redskins.

It's become routine to say that Fletcher, a 1998 John Carroll University graduate, has never missed a game in his NFL career. It's routine to hear him say that he's been "blessed" with "good genes." It's routine to hear him insist that he only thinks about his playing streak when reporters bring it up.

And, every year that passes, the routine becomes more remarkable.

Robert Griffin III has missed a game, and he's only played one season. Keenan Robinson, the 2012 draft pick groomed as a possible successor to Fletcher, has already missed five games and had two serious shoulder injuries. He might not play at all this season.

Fletcher's streak is now at 240, the longest among active players in the NFL. He's been credited with 1,321 tackles and 608 assists, which translates into nearly 2,000 confrontations with running backs, tight ends and quarterbacks — and not a single impact that caused him to miss the next game.

"London," Griffin said, "has been amazing."

Fletcher is now 38, back for another year captaining the Redskins defense as an inside linebacker. It wasn't a sure thing that he would make it back this time.

There were times last year when he couldn't practice because of injuries. Then he kept silent for a while after the end of the season and waited until he had ankle and elbow surgeries to proclaim that, no, he never seriously considered retirement.

"It's just something where you get up every day and go to work and don't think about it," Fletcher said. "It's pretty much how I go about my business. I get up every day, come to work and don't think about the durability part until somebody brings it up."

Short-track accident will sideline Stewart

KANNAPOLIS, N.C. (AP) — Tony Stewart told anyone who would listen why he continued racing anywhere, anytime, regardless of purse or crowd or car.

Even after he flipped five times last week, Stewart was quick to offer a stout defense for his short-track weeknight racing while some questioned if his extracurricular racing was putting his championship chances in NASCAR at risk.

Well, his championship chances are officially over for this season.

The three-time NASCAR champion broke his right leg Monday night at Southern Iowa Speedway in Oskaaloosa, where he flipped his 360 winged sprint car while leading with five laps remaining in the 30-lap feature. He had surgery Tuesday on the upper and lower parts of his leg, and Stewart-Haas Racing said he'll need a second surgery.

He remained hospitalized and there was no timetable for his return to racing. Max Papis was tabbed to replace Stewart this weekend in the No. 14 Chevrolet at Watkins Glen, where Stewart is a five-time winner and his streak of 521 consecutive starts will end.

"I told someone to go get my phone or else I was going to get up and get it myself," Stewart said Tuesday in a Facebook post. "Finally got reconnected to the world and just want to say thank you for all the prayers and well wishes. My team will remain strong and I will be back."

The 42-year-old Stewart has wrecked three times in the last month in extracurricular racing, and the latest came a day after he finished ninth at Pocono in a NASCAR event to position himself 11th in the Sprint Cup standings with five races remaining to set the Chase for the championship field.

But Stewart had long refused to slow down his sprint car racing schedule, and passionately defended it following the June death of friend Jason Leffler in an accident at Bridgeport Speedway in Swedesboro, N.J.

He was just as impassioned last Friday at Pocono when asked about his accident last week in Canada in which Stewart flipped a sprint car five times.

His childhood hero, four-time Indianapolis 500 winner A.J. Foyt, defended Stewart on Tuesday for sticking to his passion and being a true "racer."

"He ain't no prima donna and life is short, and we don't know how we are going to die or what's going to happen," Foyt said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press. "I just hate to see anybody bad-mouth Tony for anything he's doing, and if they are, they are just jealous. People saying he's putting his businesses at risk? I had three dealerships, people respected me."

"If they are worrying about their jobs and him getting hurt, what's to say he won't have a heart attack tomorrow and die?" Foyt said. "He might die and it might not be from racing. I had business and I still raced. I always said I am going to continue racing until I don't want to race anymore and he's the same way."

Stewart took responsibility for triggering a roughly 10-car accident at Canandaigua (N.Y.) Motorsports Park on July 16 in which 19-year-old Alysha Ruggles injured her back.

Last week, in a sprint car race at Ohsweken Speedway in Ontario, Stewart rolled his car five times but walked away. He stayed at the track to compete in the World of Outlaws race the next night and bristled at the NASCAR event at Pocono Raceway when asked about his harrowing incident in Canada.

"You mortals have got to learn, you guys need to watch more sprint car videos and stuff," he said Friday. "It was not a big deal. It's starting to get annoying this week about that. That was just an average sprint car wreck. When they wreck, they get upside down like that."

Following Leffler's death, Stewart defended track and sprint car safety.

"I'd be grateful if you guys would understand that what happened this week wasn't because somebody didn't do something right with the race track. It was an accident. Just like if you go out and there's a car crash. It's an accident," Stewart said days after Leffler's death.

Indians notes

Indians closer Perez not speaking to local media
CLEVELAND (AP) — Indians reliever Chris Perez has closed out the local media.

Cleveland's colorful closer, who has not spoken on the record to reporters for several weeks, left Progressive Field on Monday night after blowing a save in a 4-2 loss to the Detroit Tigers before the clubhouse was open. With Perez long gone, his teammates were left to answer questions about the demoralizing loss, which dropped the Indians four games out of first place in the AL Central.

Cosmic Defenses

People who are feeling defensive will say things they don't mean. Or rather, they'll say things they do mean, but perhaps they will not feel the intensity of the meaning when they are in a less defensive mood. The moral of the story is: Don't put people on the defense if you can help it. Uranus, Mars and Jupiter are in agreement on the matter.

ARIES (March 21-April 19).

This is not a time for submission. Stand up, or people will think you don't care about your own needs and liberties. Of course you know you can make a difference. You do know that. ... Right?

TAURUS (April 20-May 20).

People imposing their values on other people makes you cringe, perhaps because you've seen enough of this in your lifetime. Luckily, strong feelings don't always have concrete effects.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21).

It's been said that good friends are the best collectibles, though the person who said it didn't realize how little care and feeding vintage Marvel comics actually need.

CANCER (June 22-July 22).

Your sign mate Henry David Thoreau said, "There is no remedy for love but to love more." This is hard to apply when you're trying to get over someone. But maybe the one you should "love more" is you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22).

If you have to scream and shout to be heard, you're saying something no one wants to hear in the first place — but that doesn't make it wrong. Sometimes what people need is an alarm clock. You'll definitely wake them up today.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22).

Conflict is not always negative, and sometimes it's totally necessary. A hierarchy or style of working will be established today, so don't agree to anything you wouldn't want to be repeated tomorrow.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23).

Strength can look like muscles. But not everyone with muscles is strong in the ways that count most. Strength can look like sweat and tears, too. And sometimes it looks like a hug.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21).

Stick with those who have consistently pulled off the same thing you're trying to pull off. You'll learn something. You appreciate how beautiful it is when a plan comes together, even if said plan wasn't yours.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21).

Self-sufficient people are a joy to have around. You don't have to tell them what to do to help. They take charge of themselves, and whatever else needs doing, they do. You're such a person today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19).

Mysteries abound. You don't always get the evidence you need, and that's fine. How boring life would be without days like today, when all you have to go on is your best guess.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18).

A person who is going through the stage you crossed several years ago will bring you back. There's a chord that rings out from this person's heart, and the same chord resonates in you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20).

Again, the herculean task goes to you — but you won't be handling it alone. When you're really trying to help people, assistance (celestial and otherwise) will be forthcoming whether or not you remember to ask for it.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Aug. 7).

It's your year of total focus. You'll have to say "no" in order to make time for the "yes" you're totally committed to achieving. A certain someone is happy to have made the cut on your list of important people and will lavish you with love. You'll be traveling in the next six weeks. October is your chance at a high honor. Cancer and Libra people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 20, 1, 22, 24 and 39.

ASTROLOGICAL QUESTIONS:

"Someone I love just stole money from me. I want to trust people, but they disappoint me constantly. I'm a Libra, so it's not like I can just look the other way without judging. Fair is fair."

Did you know that cynicism isn't just a snarky attitude? It was also the point of view of one old Greek, Diogenes of Sinope, who cultivated a body of work expressing his utter distrust of and lack of faith in humanity. Two and a half millennia later, many still follow his line of thought, and who could blame them? It has been proved right time and time again. It also has been proved wrong time and time again. Which side should you fall on?

Since there is no way of measuring how often cynicism proves true as compared to a belief that people are basically good (albeit flawed) and trying their best, much depends on how you want to live your life. Your Libran nature has you seeing both sides and trying to weigh what cannot always be quantified. Let your beliefs factor into the decision, too. Whether you look for evidence of the goodness or the evil of humanity, you will find it.

Why is the salt pink?

Heloise

Dear Heloise: I saw PINK SALT in the store the other day. What is it, and how is it used? — Lydia N., via email

The pink salt you are seeing in stores is Himalayan salt, which is found deep within the Himalayas. The beautiful pink color comes from the mineral content.

You can buy the salt in plates, slabs, cubes and fine or coarse grain. Use the fine- or coarse-grained salt like regular table salt for foods. The slabs and plates are available to serve sushi or other appetizers on. — Heloise

P.S.: If you just like the color (pink salt can be very pricey), you can make pink salt by adding a few drops of red food coloring to regular table salt. Put the salt in a bowl and keep stirring until it's the color you want.

POTATO POSSIBILITIES

Dear Heloise: Most people are used to a baked potato served with sour cream and butter. However, I really enjoy baked potatoes and all the different ingredients you can stuff in them to make a meal, especially if you have leftovers. Try adding the following to a baked potato the next time you want a quick but filling meal:

- Leftover chicken or beef in a barbecue sauce, topped with some cheese and scallions.
- Leftover taco meat, sour cream, salsa, olives, lettuce and cheese.
- Leftover chili, sour cream and cheese.

— M.M., New York

STEAMING VEGETABLES

Dear Readers: To keep as many vitamins in vegetables when cooking, try steaming or microwaving them rather than boiling them in water. Vegetables cooked on the stove at high temperatures can lose up to 30 percent of their vitamins! Whenever possible, eat your vegetables raw or lightly steamed. — Heloise

COUPLE OF HINTS

Dear Heloise: I have a couple of food-preparation hints to share:

I save the juice or syrup from canned fruit and use it in place of sugar or simple syrup in cocktails. My favorite is to add mandarin orange juice to margaritas in place of sugar. It sweetens the drink, adds a little flavor and blends in instantly. Cherry juice adds sweetness, flavor and a pretty color to lemonade.

I keep a mixture of cinnamon and sugar in a clear glass saltshaker. The clear glass lets me determine what the content is, and the shaker is handy for sprinkling on toast or in hot drinks like cocoa and coffees.

— Lisa Z. in Oregon

COLORED EGGS

Dear Readers: If you enjoy eating a lot of hard-cooked (hard boiled) eggs, sometimes it's hard to tell which eggs are which. Try this hint: Add some food coloring and vinegar to the water when boiling the eggs. Now you'll know the colored eggs in the refrigerator are hard-boiled, even when it's not Easter! — Heloise

Harried phone survey takes seeks respect

DEAR ABBY: I'm hoping you will pass this on to your readers. Many of us these days have to work two jobs to make ends meet. In addition to a full-time job, I work a second one in a call center. Yes, I'm one of those dreaded people who call and ask you to do a phone survey.

What I would like to remind everyone is that we are just people on the other end of the line. I have been cursed at and called names you can't print in your column. I have had the phone slammed in my ear. A little courtesy would go a long way.

If you don't want to participate in the survey, that's fine. We understand that. But have the guts to say, "Not interested" or "No, thank you," and show a little respect. We're simply trying to do a job, earn a living and pay our bills like everybody else. — HAPPY TO BE EMPLOYED

DEAR HAPPY TO BE EMPLOYED: I am not excusing poor manners, and I do sympathize with your position. But when companies make these incessant calls, they are entering people's homes without being invited, and it can make some of them very angry, particularly if they have been interrupted while were eating, working, napping or caregiving.

The people you call might be less hostile if they hadn't been called repeatedly and asked to participate in these surveys after they had refused four, five or six times and had asked not to be called again. They might be more polite if they hadn't registered on a "Do Not Call" list that was ignored.

DEAR ABBY: I am recently retired. I enjoy it, and my daily routine is filled with activities that keep me busy. My problem is relatives who retired a few years ago who are bored out of their minds. They show up at my home unannounced at all hours of the day and disrupt my routine. They assume I have nothing to do like them. I am not interested in baby-sitting these people so their wives won't have to put up with them. What should I do? — RETIRED IN BOSTON

DEAR RETIRED: Tell your relatives — nicely — that you have a definite routine and things scheduled that you must attend to. If you feel they would be receptive, suggest that they drop by a senior center and ask about what activities it offers or look for volunteer opportunities in the community. Then suggest that instead of dropping by, they CALL FIRST to see if you are available.

DEAR ABBY: My best friend's mother has dementia. It is usually worse in the evenings, but she can function during the day — somewhat. My friend and her husband both work, leaving the mother alone at home during the day with the door locked from the outside so she can't wander off. I have told my friend many times how dangerous this is, but she continues to do it. It makes me sick worrying about her mother, but I don't know what to do about it. — FRIEND IN FLORIDA

DEAR FRIEND: Your friend and her husband may have the best of intentions, but locking a demented person inside the house is not the answer to their problem. If a fire were to start, she might not be "with it" enough to know how to put it out or summon help. She could also fall and injure herself.

A better solution would be to find a day-care program where the mother would have company, be entertained and safely looked after. Please suggest it to them. However, if they are not receptive, Adult Protective Services should be notified because the woman's life could depend on it.

TO MY MUSLIM READERS: It's time for the breaking of the Ramadan fast. Happy Eid al-Fitr, everyone. May God make yours a blessed feast.

Granuloma annulare are unsightly

Dr. Keith Roach

DEAR DR.

ROACH: I am 58 and have been diagnosed with granuloma annulare, which I've had for more than a year and a half. I have both rings (that start small, like a cigarette burn, and then get larger) and spots, which look like birthmarks. I tried changing my diet, but it didn't have any effect. I can't wear shorts, because they are unsightly. I am told that there is no remedy for this. I have been using a topical cream, clobetasol, which doesn't seem to help. My research tells me that it usually goes away after two years, but I also have seen several cases where it never goes away. Please give me some good news! — D.R.

ANSWER: The good news is that they usually do go away (50 percent within two years). They don't turn into skin cancer and, generally, don't cause a lot of problems other than being unsightly. Some studies have associated granuloma annulare (GA) with medical conditions such as diabetes and cancer, but it's not clear if this is actually true.

The skin cream you are using works for many people, but an injection of a steroid is more effective — it's successful in about 80 percent of people. These can be repeated in six to eight weeks if needed.

The spots also can be frozen with liquid nitrogen, but this can leave scarring. Ultraviolet light has been shown to be helpful.

DEAR DR. ROACH: I am an 84-year-old woman in good health. I had been diagnosed with possible lupus since 1996, because of the high sedimentation rate in my blood. Since I had none of the symptoms of this autoimmune disease, my blood samples were sent to a lab. It came up with the diagnosis of Sjogren's syndrome. I have only minimal dry eyes and dry mouth. Is there any chance that the abnormal lab results could be an aberration? — E.R.

ANSWER: Blood tests are very useful in helping to make diagnoses, but in the case of both lupus (I mean systemic lupus erythematosus) and Sjogren's syndrome, diagnosis can't be made by lab tests alone. The sedimentation rate, or ESR, usually is high in these rheumatologic diseases, but it can be high for many reasons, such as infection, autoimmune disease or malignancy. Older women tend to have higher levels normally. A high ESR alone is not diagnostic of any specific condition.

SLE is a disease of the body's immune system, where multiple systems are attacked. The diagnosis of lupus is made by a combination of symptoms — such as rash, arthritis, neurologic problems or kidney disease. Blood-test abnormalities alone rarely make the diagnosis. Occasionally, a blood test will turn positive before other symptoms develop.

Similarly, Sjogren's syndrome is diagnosed if there are both symptoms of abnormal tear and saliva production, and biopsy and lab tests of Sjogren's antibodies. If you have the Sjogren's antibodies and have symptoms of eye and mouth dryness, a definitive diagnosis of Sjogren's would still require an abnormal eye exam, salivary-gland biopsy or abnormal saliva tests.

Most conditions and diseases range in severity from unnoticeable to life-threatening. It's possible you have a relatively mild form of Sjogren's that isn't going to get any worse. It's also possible that you have a false-positive
