One injured in car/train crash
Salem fire and police personnel study the scene of a car/train accident at 6:48 a.m. Thursday on Allen Road near Pennsylvania Avenue where this Chevy Cavalier driven by Craig Heilman, 32, of Alliance traveled around another vehicle and around the railroad crossing gates and was struck by a train on the left rear corner, spinning the car off of the tracks and into a utility pole. Heilman suffered minor injuries and was treated and released at Salem Community Hospital. A police spokesman said Heilman was on his way to work and for some reason decided to go around the gate, which was in the down position. A charge is pending for a crossing gate violation. ## Lisbon grad sweats for child safety on YouTube

By BRITTNEY SADLER
Staff Writer
GERMANTOWN, Md. — One child's death from being left alone in a vehicle is one too many, said Jacob Wycoff, 27, a meteorologist and Lisbon native.
Wycoff made a video on YouTube called "How Hot Does It Get in a Parked Car" that had clips of it featured on CNN, Good Morning America, and ABC World News with Diane Sawyer over the last few days.
"Every year there are around 40 kids who die from being left unattended in a car," Wycoff said. "It's a preventable death and I wanted to put awareness out there of what can happen in a parked car."
The video shows Wycoff in his car monitoring his body changes and temperature inside the car for 30 minutes.
The temperature outside was 88, and by the end of the video, his heart rate increased to 140, the temperature inside the car was almost 125 degrees, sweat was pouring off of him, and he was having difficulty breathing. He said he was having all the signs of the

Jacob Wycoff sits in his car to show the effects of heat on the human body in his YouTube video "How Hot Does It Get in a Parked Car." Sweating profusely and having difficulty breathing, he monitors the effects for a half-hour where the temperature rapidly rises from 92 to near 125 degrees beginnings of heat stroke.

In just 10 minutes the car temperature rose from 92 to 105 degrees.
"Because of the rapid increase in temperature, it causes [children] to have heat strokes," Wycoff said in the video.
He said we are so "plugged in" to social media and our cell phones that it makes us unaware of many things, but he can't imagine forgetting a kid in a car.
Wycoff has worked for the company Weatherbug for four and a half years and the video was posted on the company's blog, which is where the national news outlets most likely saw it and asked permission to use it, he said.
The more people who want to see it and use it, the more awareness it will bring, which is what he wanted, he said.
Wycoff said there was a child death from being left in a car in Alabama Wednesday.
"Maybe if we put out the video one day sooner, we could have prevented it," he said. "These are all preventable deaths."
He said it's summer and hot, so keep that in mind when driving with pets or children he said.
"Keep the phrase 'beat the heat, check the back seat' in mind," he said.

Jacob Wycoff, Weatherbug meteorologist

If the video can bring awareness and save even one child, it was worth all his sweat, he said.
Wycoff graduated from Lisbon David Anderson in 2004 and went to Western Connecticut University for meteorology.
He said the movie "Twister" got him into meteorology and the local weather stations also peaked his interest so he dug into it at a young age.
Wycoff also makes other videos about weather phenomena such as lightning to bring safety awareness.

Waterford can't get AT&T to fix phones

By LARRY SHIELDS
Staff Writer
NEW WATERFORD — Two phones for official village business were shut off a week ago and Fiscal Officer Dave Slagle is upset by the lack of response from the service provider, AT&T.
"It started last Friday," Slagle said Wednesday, "by mistake."
He explained the phone lines for the water and sewer department and street department have been down and it has been disruptive.
AT&T was contacted through its website for comment on this story on Wednesday but has not responded.
Slagle said he was given the run-around between the repair and customer service departments and had spent a total of 2.5 hours on the phone since Friday with no results.
"No one wants to handle it," he said, explaining the utilities department needs lines open to receive shipments.
"We can't get the phones turned on because they shut it off ... the guys in the field

ALMANAC

Today is Friday, July 19, the 200th day of 2013. There are 165 days left in the year. Ten years ago: A chartered aircraft carrying three families to a game reserve plowed into Mount Kenya, killing all 12 American tourists and the two South African pilots on board. Five years ago: Democrat Barack Obama visited U.S. troops and met with officials in Afghanistan as part of a congressional fact-finding tour. One year ago: A calm-looking Syrian President Bashar Assad made his first appearance on state TV a day after a bomb killed some of his top lieutenants.

Quilts of all types will be on display at the United Quilt Guild’s 7th Biennial Quilt Show beginning today, including the Best of Show entry, front left, by Linda Henderson and the Best Use of Color entry, front right, by Robyn Winn. The show at the Salem Community Center will feature Underground Railroad theme quilts, historical displays, lectures, demonstrations, a Little Quilt Auction, quilt appraisals and vendors. safety. The theme includes contemporary quilts, but each quilt must tell a story.

A collection of quilts, clothing and other Civil War historical items will be displayed by the Loghurst Museum of Canfield, including some artifacts from Hale Farm & Village. The Algoquin Mills Guild will display a collection of Civil War-era quilts and demonstrate weaving, spinning and loom setup. The Osnaburg Quilt and Fiber Art Guild will have a display, also.

Besides those displays, the challenge quilts, a Little Quilt auction, quilt appraisals, demonstrations, classes and 21 vendors available for shopping, the quilt show will include the main attraction: 114 judged quilts of various categories, styles and methods.

Williams said these aren’t just church lady quilts or your grandmother’s quilts. Quilting and everything that goes with it has become a billion-dollar industry with shows paying out millions of dollars in awards. There are now art quilts and a new form which has just popped up in the last couple of years known as modern quilts, which are minimalistic in design and use simplistic lines.

“They’re our artistic outlet,” she said regarding quilts.

New to this year’s event will be quilt appraisals, which will be available on Friday only. Two certified quilt appraisers from Columbus will look at quilts and figure a value.

More than $800 worth of prizes will be awarded, courtesy of sponsors Plummer & Jackson Attorneys at Law, A Touch of Thread Quilting Gallery, Western Reserve Landscaping. Thousands of Bolts, Timmy Wertz Towing, Bobbette’s Quilting Services, Bob and Linda Sebo, Material Girl, Charter One Bank, Gene and Beth Gallo and Loghurst.

Winners in the major categories include: Best of Show and Best Machine Quilting, Linda Henderson; Best Handquilting, Patricia Patterson; Best Use of Color, Robyn Winn; Best Art Quilt, Best Use of Embellishments and Judge’s Choice (Anita Shakelford), Pat Williams; and Judge’s Choice (Linda Miller), Sue Burgess.

This year the Salem Historical Society will be operating the trolley to the show, with stops at the museums, the Kiwanis Antique Show at Centennial Park on Saturday and other historical spots.

The United Quilt Guild, formed in 1990, includes 100 members from all over the area and meets the first Tuesday of each month at the Salem Presbyterian Church on Second Street, which is where the judging took place over a two-day period earlier this week.

The guild makes quilts for donation to hospital oncology departments, veterans and charities. Since moving to SCC, the profits from the show have grown for the guild from $1,500 to $9,000 for the last show. About 20 percent of the show profits are donated to a particular charity, with the rest used for guild projects, such as the charity quilts, veterans’ quilts and quilts for oncology departments.

Police photog angry at Rolling Stone cover of bombing suspect releases police photos

BOSTON (AP) — A police photographer, furious with a Rolling Stone cover photo he believes glamorizes the surviving Boston Marathon suspect, released gritty images Thursday from the day he was captured.

Photos released to Boston Magazine by Massachusetts State Police tactical photographer Sgt. Sean Murphy show a downcast, disheveled Dzhokhar Tsarnaev with the red dot of a sniper’s rifle laser sight boring into his forehead.

The pictures were taken when Tsarnaev was captured April 19, bleeding and hiding in a dry-docked boat in a Watertown backyard.

Murphy said in a statement to Boston Magazine that Tsarnaev is evil and that his photos show the “real Boston bomber, not someone fluffed and buffed for the cover of Rolling Stone magazine.”

The April 15 bombing killed three people and injured more than 260. Massachusetts Institute of Technology officer Sean Collier was allegedly killed April 18 by Tsarnaev and his brother, Tamerlan, who died following a shootout with police later that evening.

Obama touts rebates under health care law, while GOP vows to keep trying for repeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Facing public doubts and embarrassing setbacks to his signature health care law, President Barack Obama stepped forward Thursday to extol the program’s benefits, emphasizing that some Americans already are receiving insurance rebates and lower premiums.

Obama said the program is working the way it was supposed to with “better benefits, stronger protections, more bang for your buck.” The assertion was ridiculed by Republicans, with House Speaker John Boehner calling the Affordable Care Act “a train wreck” that he will keep working to repeal.

Obama dismissed the GOP’s so-far-futile votes — the House logged its 38th attempt to repeal or scale back the law on Wednesday — with an exasperated sigh and shake of his head during a White House speech.

“What I’ve heard is just the same old song and dance,” Obama said of his critics. “We’re just going to blow through that stuff and just keep on doing the right thing for the American people.”

While the fate of the health care law will play a major role in defining his legacy, Obama has not devoted much time or energy to selling it to the country, speaking on the subject only occasionally as Republicans have pressed a determined campaign to undermine the program. Obama is returning to the subject now because enrollment begins Oct. 1 for subsidized private coverage through new online markets.

South Africans celebrate reports about Nelson Mandela’s health on 95th birthday

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — Hospital visitors say Nelson Mandela smiled and nodded Thursday — his 95th birthday — and South Africans celebrated upbeat reports about the former president’s health after weeks of worrying that he was on the verge of death.

Children sang “Happy Birthday” at school assemblies nationwide, and many honored the man known as “the father of the nation” by performing acts of charity for 67 minutes, symbolizing Mandela’s 67 years of public service. World leaders praised the anti-apartheid leader’s life of sacrifice and vision.

Outside the Pretoria hospital where Mandela was admitted for a recurring lung infection, well-wishers paid tribute to him and some received slices of a large birthday cake doled out from inside the compound.

“We don’t only recognize him on this day. We put smiles on other people’s faces, we donate to other people less fortunate,” said Thato Williams, a 13-year-old student at Melpark Primary School in Johannesburg, where 700 students gathered in a hall filled with posters created to honor Mandela’s contributions to peace and education.

Mandela remains very fragile, and many details of his medical condition have not been divulged or are tightly controlled by his family and President Jacob Zuma. The news that his health had improved was another dramatic turn in the life of a man who became a global figure of sacrifice and reconciliation during the fight against white minority rule in South Africa.

Panama holds ex-CIA Milan officer in case of kidnapping, torture of Muslim cleric

PANAMA CITY (AP) — A former CIA base chief convicted in the 2003 abduction of a terror suspect from an Italian street has been detained in Panama after Italy requested his arrest in one of the most notorious episodes of the U.S. program known as extraordinary rendition, Italian and Panamanian officials said Thursday.

Robert Seldon Lady, the former CIA chief in Milan, entered Panama, crossed the border into Costa Rica and was sent back to Panama where he was detained, according to an Italian official familiar with Italy’s investigation of the rendition of Cleric Osama Moustafa Hassan Nasr. The official spoke on condition of anonymity because the official was not authorized to discuss the case.

A Panamanian National Police official said Lady, 59, had been detained Wednesday on the Costa Rica-Panama border. The official also spoke on condition of anonymity due to lack of authorization to discuss the matter.

The government of Panama, which maintains one of the region’s closest relationships with the U.S., was officially silent on the case. Security Minister Jose Raul Mulino told The Associated Press that he was unaware of Lady’s detention and the press office of the National Police — which works with Interpol, the international police agency — said it had no information. The CIA also declined to comment.

Syrian children will grow up illiterate, full of hate because of civil war, UN envoy warns

BEIRUT (AP) — Abdullah, a 9-year-old orphaned by Syria’s civil war, was piled in to van by his uncle as gunfire rattled around them. One of the last things the boy says he saw in his hometown was the uncle falling, shot, as the van full of strangers took him away on a treacherous, 3-day journey to neighboring Lebanon.

Once in Beirut, the boy fell into the hands of a criminal gang specialized in exploiting the most vulnerable victims of the conflict next door. They put him to work selling flowers and gum on the street, beating him if he didn’t bring them enough money.

The conflict that has ravaged Syria for more than 2 ½ years has hit the country’s children hard. Out of an estimated 93,000 killed, around 7,000 are children below the age of 15. Tens of thousands are believed to have been wounded. Hundreds of thousands of children have had their lives upended, fleeing their homes with their families either to different parts of Syria or abroad. Unknown numbers have been detained.

And untold numbers have witnessed violence, anything from bombardment of their neighborhoods to the sight of dead bodies fished from rivers or pulled from streets.

Dirty looks: Reputed Boston crime boss comes face to face with once-loyal comrade

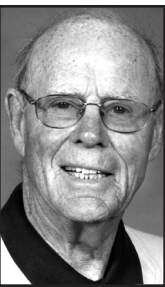

BOSTON (AP) — His hands on his hips in a you-want-a-piece-of-me stance, Stephen “The Rifleman” Flemmi glared at James “Whitey” Bulger in the courtroom, and the two men snarled what sounded like obscenities at each other.

Bulger and his once-loyal comrade came face to face Thursday for the first time in nearly two decades as Flemmi testified against the reputed Boston crime boss at Bulger’s racketeering trial.

In his brief 15 minutes or so on the stand before court recessed for the day, Flemmi, a ruthless underworld executioner, told how he and Bulger were secret FBI informants for 15 years while they ran the Winter Hill Gang, the city’s murderous Irish mob.

Nothing miraculous about this tax plan

SENATOR JOE SCHIAVONI

Following the passage of the state biennial budget last month, we heard phrases like “an Ohio miracle” and “beneficial to hard-working Ohioans” uttered from those in the majority about their plan to fund the state the next two years.

Unfortunately, there is nothing miraculous about this budget’s tax plan.

Proponents of the bill are quick to mention that this is the first time in over a decade that Ohio’s “rainy day fund” has been at capacity, and how they were able to make a tax cut through the new budget process. What they fail to tell you however, is how they got there.

In 2011, Governor Kasich’s first budget made drastic cuts to our schools, resulting in many local levies proposed across the state to help shore up funds for education. Unfortunately, while some of those levies passed, many did not. When the state legislature had the opportunity this year to restore funding for education, they instead opted to top off the rainy day fund and give an income tax cut that disproportionately benefits the wealthiest Ohioans.

In fact, the majority party in this General Assembly has made an already bad situation worse for our schools, by eliminating the property tax rollback on new levies. Just look at Columbiana Schools, where a new levy has been proposed to fund a new roof and some refurbishments to South Side Middle School. The school district, doing its homework, has calculated that an owner of a $100,000 home would pay an additional $37.67 a year. Without the rollback, that additional tax will increase by over 14 percent.

Furthermore, Republicans have decided to eliminate the homestead exemption for many seniors who would have been eligible, raise the state sales tax and increase numerous other taxes to help pay for the aforementioned income tax cuts. That means for Columbiana residents, if this fall levy is implemented, only taxpayers making over $143,000 would be out of the red when factoring in all of the new tax changes.

Disguising this plan as a comeback for Ohio by lowering taxes for the wealthy is disingenuous, especially when it is at the expense of our schools and local communities, with middle class Ohioans picking up the tab. Going forward, we need to find ways to provide more equitable tax relief for all hard-working Ohioans, while simultaneously allowing for investment in the futures of our children. It is through education that Ohio can first start to move towards a lasting recovery.

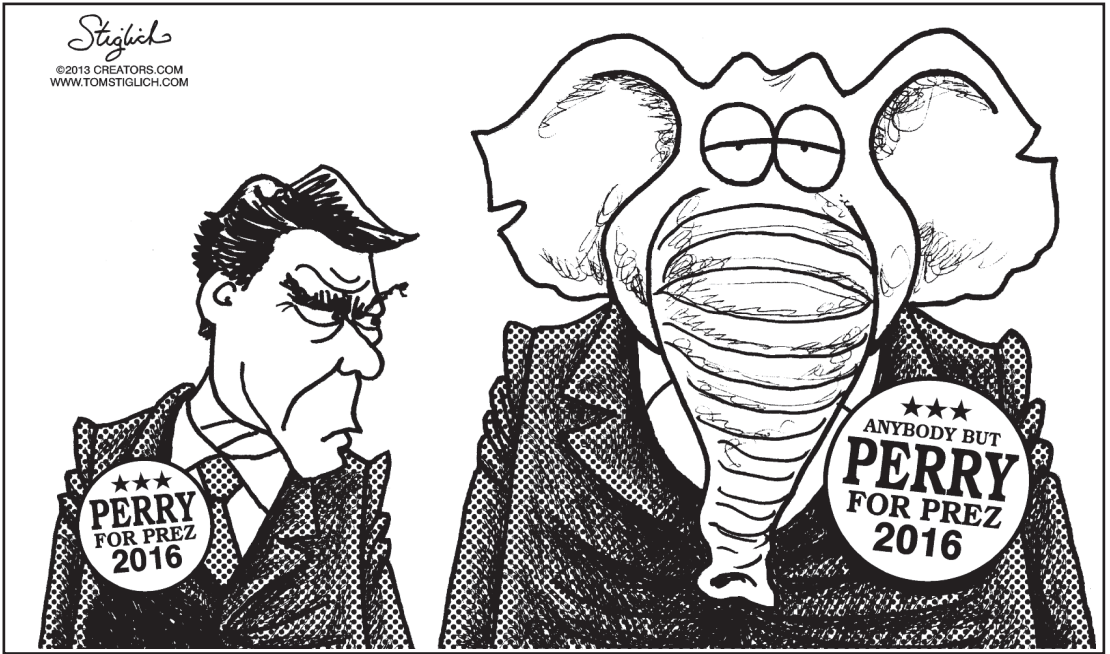

While there is a need for the levy in Columbiana as well as many more across the state, we must get serious about supporting education and take the burden off local taxpayers. Representative Nick Barborak and I have proposed, at the very least, delaying the elimination of the rollback to not include levies already proposed for this year’s ballots. It is my hope that this change will help to convince Columbiana residents and other residents across Ohio with levies on their ballots this year, to help support public education.

We do not need a “miracle” to fix Ohio, but rather reasonable and rational solutions through budget proposals that will help our economy grow. The time to do so is now, and I look forward in working together to make the investments that will benefit our children, communities and the future of all Ohioans.

Senator Joe Schiavoni represents Ohio’s 33rd Senate District, which consists of Mahoning and Columbiana counties.

Zimmerman verdict and double standards

taking part in an illegal interstate dog-fighting ring, and wonder why Zimmerman gets away with killing a young black man.

If you are white, or Hispanic, you could possibly see the trial as something whipped up by the always racially conscious media and rhetorical bomb-throwers like Rev. Al Sharpton. You might conclude that if the victim had been white and the perpetrator black the media would have shown little or no interest. Or you could point to O.J. Simpson, who was acquitted of killing two white people by a majority African-American jury.

Your view would be reinforced by a case in Georgia in which four African-American teenagers beat a 36-year-old white man as he emerged from a gas station convenience store. While trying to escape, the man stumbled into the middle lane of a highway where he was struck by a car and killed.

The Marietta Daily Journal reported that the four are charged with felony murder, aggravated assault and violation of the Georgia Street Gang Act. The incident occurred two weeks ago, but I have seen no national media coverage.

As defense lawyers noted after the Zimmerman verdict, the loss of any life, especially a young one like Trayvon Martin, is a tragedy, but tragedy and race were not on trial in Sanford, Fla. Putting all extraneous considerations aside, the jury of six women was asked if there was sufficient evidence presented by the prosecution to convict George Zimmerman of murder or manslaughter. The jury found there was not.

The Justice Department says it will look into the shooting death of Martin to determine if evidence in the case “reveals a prosecutable violation.” That may turn out to be more of a political decision than one based on facts. It would likely perpetuate the media narrative of blacks as victims and whites (one CNN reporter ludicrously called Zimmerman a “white Hispanic”) as descendants of slave masters.

What helps keep us divided is our propensity for labeling and categorizing people. Certain behaviors and language are tolerated, while others are not. Some people can get away with language that others cannot. Some faiths can be disparaged while others are insulated from criticism. We hyphenate some Americans, making them appear as though they are less than fully American.

What is needed is one standard. One national identity. One America. We’re not there yet.

Benjamin Crump, an attorney for Trayvon Martin’s family, compared Trayvon’s death to those of Emmett Till and Medgar Evers. Any attempt to turn Trayvon into a civil rights martyr similar to Till and Evers goes well beyond the apples and oranges analogy. More to the point was a comment by Zimmerman’s attorney Don West: “The prosecution of George Zimmerman was disgraceful.” The defense believes he should never have been brought to trial. Co-defense counsel Mark O’Mara speculated about “how many lawsuits will be spawned by this fiasco.”

Probably quite a few, given our never-ending racial double standard. As both sides noted during and after the trial, there are no winners in this case.

OTHER VOICES

July 13

The New York Daily News on Florida law, George Zimmerman and the verdict in the Trayvon Martin case.

The acquittal of George Zimmerman in the death of Trayvon Martin was the product of a vigorously contested trial that tested the limits of proving what happened in an unseen encounter between two men, only one of whom survived. It demands respect as a fair but terribly unsatisfying verdict.

Based on evidence presented openly to the jury and via television to all of America, the six-member jury could just as reasonably have convicted Zimmerman of manslaughter under the extremely convoluted Florida law that defines when a killing is justifiable or excusable. The panelists made the close and defensible call that Zimmerman’s actions were both justifiable and excusable.

While he bears terrible responsibility for irresponsibly precipitating the fatal incident with Martin, the jury’s focus was necessarily limited to what he did and why in their last moments together — not on what led to the fatal shot, not on the initial failure of Sanford authorities to prosecute Zimmerman, and not on the racial passions stirred by the shooting death of an unarmed black teenager who had been falsely profiled as a criminal.

Zimmerman, the only living witness, said that he had fired a single shot into Martin in self-defense. Since there was no question that the two were struggling, his account all but ruled out convicting Zimmerman of second-degree murder, the extremely aggressive charge lodged by Florida prosecutors. The proof fell clearly short of documenting beyond a reasonable doubt that Zimmerman had intentionally slay Martin with “ill will, hatred, spite or an evil intent,” as required by the state’s penal code.

Still, the jury could easily have interpreted the testimony and forensic evidence to conclude that, although Martin had gotten physical with Zimmerman, he had not done so with the vehemence necessary for Zimmerman to reasonably believe that he had to defend himself with lethal force. After that, Florida specifically outlaws a killing “by accident and misfortune resulting from sudden combat” if the killer uses a gun.

This is not to argue that the jury wrongly stretched to find reasonable doubt in Zimmerman’s favor. It is only to say that when the facts were matched against the law in a trial before a judge whose rulings were favorable to prosecutors, this emotionally and racially charged case was decided by the slimmest of edges.

Eric Holder's stand your ground squirrel

MICHELLE MALKIN

Welcome to the Obama administration’s cringe-inducing non sequitur of the week. On Tuesday, Attorney General Eric Holder continued stoking the fires of racial resentment over a Florida jury’s acquittal of George Zimmerman. In an address to NAACP leaders, who are demanding federal intervention, Holder attacked Stand Your Ground self-defense laws.

All together now: Squirrel!

“Separate and apart from the (Trayvon Martin) case that has drawn the nation’s attention, it’s time to question laws that senselessly expand the concept of self-defense and sow dangerous conflict in our neighborhoods,” Holder opined. He then baselessly claimed that such laws are creating “more violence than they prevent” and used his platform to promote citizens’ “duty to retreat.”

So, what exactly do Stand Your Ground laws have to do with Zimmerman and Martin? Absolutely nothing, of course. Outside your own home, common principles of self-defense dictate that unless you have reasonable fear of deadly force or harm, you must flee if possible rather than use deadly force. But a “duty to retreat” rests on the ability to retreat. And “duty to retreat” was irrelevant in Zimmerman’s case because — pinned to the ground with Martin on top of him, bashing his head on the concrete — he was unable to retreat.

This didn’t stop the NAACP crowd from cheering their heads off when Holder tossed out his red meat. Holder’s racial-grievance-mongering agenda has also been bolstered by media propaganda outlets, who’ve been dutifully bashing Stand Your Ground regardless of the facts.

The New York Times, for example, falsely claimed in an editorial preceding Holder’s speech that the jury “reached its verdict after having been asked to consider Mr. Zimmerman’s actions in light of the now-notorious Stand Your Ground provision in Florida’s self-defense law.” Rolling Stone made a similarly inflammatory claim, calling Martin a “victim of Florida’s Stand Your Ground law.”

All nonsense. The jury received standard instructions. Zimmerman did not invoke the Stand Your Ground provision. Zimmerman later waived his right to a pretrial immunity hearing under the Stand Your Ground procedures.

And as National Review’s Sterling Beard points out, “The only time Stand Your Ground came up during the trial proper was when a prosecution witness stated that he’d taught a class Zimmerman had attended that covered Stand Your Ground.”

Even the prosecution rejects the cynical attempt to tie Martin’s death to Stand Your Ground. Prosecutor John Guy couldn’t have made it clearer during the trial: “This case is not about standing your ground.” During their post-trial press conference, as conservative talk show host Victoria Taft first noted, a Miami Herald reporter asked the prosecution team specifically whether Stand Your Ground “affected the facts in this case and whether this case could have been won, perhaps, pre the changes in the law.”

Prosecutor Bernie De La Rionda replied: “You know, self-defense has existed for a long time. And we’ve dealt with it in Jackson for a long time. We’ve tried a lot of self-defense cases; I’ve personally tried 10-15 self-defense cases. They’re tough cases, but we accept it so ... the law really hasn’t changed all that much. Stand Your Ground was a big thing, but really the law hasn’t changed. We have a right to bear arms and a right to self defense.”

In short, Stand Your Ground did not kill Trayvon Martin. Stand Your Ground did not sway the jury. Stand Your Ground saboteurs don’t have a leg to stand on. Columnist Jacob Sullum observed drily: “You might think that, given all we now know about Zimmerman’s actual defense, critics of ‘stand your ground’ laws would have to find a different, more apposite case to illustrate their concerns.

Instead they just barrel along, citing the same phony example again and again, without regard to the facts. It does not inspire confidence in their argument.”

Nope, it inspires exasperation and contempt. Once again, Eric Holder’s Department of Selective and Social Justice is grasping for straws. Holder now vows to “continue to fight for removal of Stand Your Ground laws” that had nothing to do with the Zimmerman trial. He promises to ban “racial profiling” in the aftermath of a local crime incident that — according to Holder’s own FBI employees — had nothing to do with race.

This is all a transparent pretext, of course, for undermining a plethora of state laws enacted by pro-Second Amendment legislatures. (Never mind that eight of 15 states that adopted Stand Your Ground legislation were helmed by Democratic governors at the time of passage.)

Even more insidiously, left-wing groups have exploited the Martin case to launch broader attacks on the political speech and activities of limited-government groups like the American Legislative Exchange Council, which supported Stand Your Ground.

The Obama administration’s cynical campaign against Stand Your Ground laws is a racially charged weapon of mass distraction. The goal isn’t public safety or community harmony.

The goal is for conservative political opponents to Surrender Your Ground. Silence, as always, is complicity. Political self-defense, as with physical self-defense, begins with self-assertion.

New contract reached for West Twp. fire protection

By TOM GIAMBRONI
Staff Writer
LISBON — Three Columbiana County fire departments will continue to provide coverage for West Township after a new contract was reached with the Sandy Creek Fire District.

According to officials, the SCFD board agreed Wednesday to continue contracting with the Hanover, Homeworth and North Georgetown fire departments for the same amount of money as before.

“We do now have a contract and we got what we were looking for,” said Homeworth Fire Chief Brian Baker.

Before the creation of the SCFD, the Hanover, Homeworth and North Georgetown departments contracted with West Township trustees for $12,000 each to provide coverage for about 30 percent of the township. The Minerva Fire Department covered the western end of the township.

In 2011, the SCFD was created as the result of a merger between the Minerva and Robertsville fire departments. As a result, Hanover, Homeworth and North Georgetown contracted with the SCFD in 2012 to continue providing coverage for the same $12,000.

When it came time to renew the contract for 2013, the fire departments balked because the SCFD wanted to slash what it paid them from $12,000 each per year to $6,000, and then $2,000 after the fire departments refused to accept the initial offer.

The contract extension was set to expire June 28, but at the last minute the SCFD told the fire departments it would make another offer and gave the parties until July 17 to respond. Baker said the offer they received was the same as the previous one — $2,000 a year and $500 per run — which his department rejected.

In the end the SCFD agreed to a new three-year contract, with the departments continuing to be paid $12,000 in 2013, followed by 5 percent increases each of the next two years, which is what they wanted all along.

“It’s actually what we were looking for on Dec. 31, when the other contract expired,” said Dennis Smith, president of the Hanover Township Fire Association.

Baker did not attend the SCFD board meeting but heard public pressure may have played a part in the SCFD’s change in position.

Larry Chilson, a captain with the North Georgetown Fire Department, did attend Wednesday’s meeting, which he said was also attended by West Township trustees Dale Lowmiller and Glenn Whiteleather, who expressed their concerns about contract negotiations.

West Township residents are paying a combined 4 mills in property taxes to help fund the SCFD, and Chilson said several of them showed up and addressed the board.

“They wanted to make sure their tax dollars were being used to provide the best fire protection possible,” he said.

Baker, Smith and the other local fire officials said they could not afford to operate on less money than they were receiving before, pointing out they have the same fixed costs, regardless of how many calls are received,

“Our trucks cost us the same whether it’s sitting at the station or running 10 times per week,” said Baker, who compared the contract to having an insurance policy should something happen.

Fairfield trustees approve $110K to chip and seal 9.4 miles of road

By LARRY SHIELDS
Staff Writer
FAIRFIELD TOWNSHIP — The township unanimously approved a payment of $110,313 to Russell Standard Corp for emulsion for the chip and seal program on Thursday.

The amount covers 9.4 miles of township roads and is less a $19,626 grant from the county engineers office. Road Supervisor Mel Miller said he was satisfied with the results along with the reclaiming program.

Miller said township residents will see a lot of road improvements from the past few weeks.

Miller also advised trustees that three pieces of used township equipment sold for a total of $9,407 during the Rogers municipal equipment sale on Wednesday.

The backhoe sold for $4,900, the 1990 GMC truck sold for $4,750 and the pickup sold for $850 and after the commission was deducted the township made $9,407.

“I thought everything went real well,” Miller said, adding he was happy with the price they received for the 1990 GMC, noting they sold a similar vehicle a couple of years ago and didn’t get near as much.

Miller also said there was a lot of activity regarding pipeline being laid, including tree trimming and grading work.

In other business, trustees heard a short presentation by Kevin Graham of Valley Office regarding a Sharp MX 2615 copier. Graham attended the previous meeting and made a detailed presentation.

Trustee Chairman Bob Hum said no decision would be made at Thursday’s meeting and Graham provided information for an outright purchase with a 90-day parts and labor warranty and a maintenance agreement to be considered later.

He said he could cut $524 from the price by eliminating the stapler, but Hum said, “I’m not interested in saving nickels ... I want to do this right ... and removing the stapler doesn’t make any sense to me.”

Fiscal Officer Pat Hoffmaster said the Leetonia Fire Department sent its quarterly report and Hum said he spoke with New Waterford Mayor Shane Patrone regarding the township’s fire protection contract. He said Patrone was going to speak with his people and get back.

Zoning Officer Kymberly Seabolt advised trustees of one nuisance property with waist-high grass that has been notified by regular mail and registered mail.

The regular mail was not returned, but the registered letter was returned after three attempts at delivery.

She said she would send another registered letter.

In other business, Trustee Barry Miner agreed that the chip and seal program “went real well” but was looking at Crestview Road in 2014.

“We need to find money for Crestview Road ...” he said and estimated it would take about $200,000. Miller said it would probably be more based upon past experience.

Miner also asked Miller to contact the pipeline contractor regarding the “Road-work, one lane” signs and the “Flagman Ahead” signs that were being left up seven days a week and after the day’s work was completed.

He wanted to have them taken down at the end of the day.

He said leaving them up “takes away from the importance of the signs.”

Crestview board seeks to fill 2 jobs

By DEANNE JOHNSON
Staff Writer
NEW WATERFORD — With some contracts awarded this week, the Crestview School District is currently looking for only two positions for the upcoming school year.

However, needing only a part-time art teacher and a part-time gifted coordinator is making the positions hard to fill. Superintendent John Dilling said he would be thrilled to find someone with both sets of credentials, but has concerns it could be difficult.

In the event only an art teacher can be found, Dilling said the school could contract through the Education Service Center in order to find someone for the gifted position.

This week, the board approved hiring Stephanie Chizmar, an elementary music teacher, and placing Dominic Dangelo at the masters level on the pay scale. Additionally, they named some coaches — Matthew Evans, assistant high school football coach; McKenzie Cross, junior varsity volleyball coach; and volunteer coaches Dawn Moore, assistant high school girls soccer and Corey Coblenz, assistant high school golf.

In other matters:

— Enrollment figures were discussed with Dilling telling the board the overall enrollment is close to where they were last year, despite a new board policy where some students were rejected to return and others placed on a contract involving their conduct.

“We have a large migration of students who are interested in Crestview,” Dilling said. “We appreciate that. It helps to keep us healthy and sound.”

— The board approved dues for the upcoming year to the Ohio Coalition for Equity and Adequacy of School Funding. Membership costs nearly $629. The organization provides a voice to school districts concerned about school funding issues.

— The board also approved participation in the Family and Children First Council of Columbiana County for the upcoming school year.

— The board accepted donations of $1,288 from the Crestview After Prom Committee to the Class of 2014.

— The board approved expenses for Dr. Edward Miller and James Weikart to attend the Ohio School Boards Association Capital Conference in Columbus in November.

ODOT: ‘Hump’ on Route 165 in Green Twp. will be checked out

By LARRY SHIELDS
Staff Writer
GREENFORD — The hump in state Route 165 that Green Township officials expressed concern about during Tuesday’s meeting will be addressed, according to Brent Kovacs, public information officer for the Ohio Department of Transportation District 4.

“The project is still ongoing,” Kovacs said Thursday, “in the final stages.”

He said the project engineer will be looking at the section of road.

Township Trustee George Toy raised the issue during Tuesday’s regular meeting and Fire Chief Todd Baird added, “I think eventually it’s going to cause a crash.”

Toy said he called the Ohio Department of Transportation (District 4) Wednesday morning.

The hump is on the outer edge of the east-bound lane of the newly-repaved state Route 165 right at the 9000 block marker, approximately seventh-tenths of a mile east of U.S. 62 and approximately six-tenths of a mile west of Coy Park on Graham Hill.

Karvo Paving in Stow is the contractor and Kovacs said, “It’s routine, no paver is perfect. Whatever happens in the paving, we do go back and check ... grind down or put more gravel in.

He added, “it’s still incomplete,” and expected the site to be inspected by the project engineer in a week or two.

He was unsure what may have caused it.

Baird said, “It’ll throw you to the left” explaining that it happened to him with an EMS ambulance crew returning from a run.

“That’s when we noticed it,” Baird said, “it almost threw us into the ditch.”

Baird said it affects bigger vehicles and added, “It wasn’t there prior to the repaving.”

It affects eastbound traffic and is in a west-bound passing zone and could surprise a westbound motorist attempting to pass another vehicle.

It can’t be seen but felt, said Trustee Dave Slagle who like Toy and Baird said he was concerned about wet or slippery conditions that “will exaggerate it.”

Toy added, “I don’t ever remember it being that significant.”

Zehentbauer to seek trustee seat, leave United board

By KEVIN HOWELL
Staff Writer
HANOVERTON— United Local school board President John Zehentbauer will not be running for re-election in November.

Zehentbauer made the announcement following the regular board meeting Wednesday night. Zehentbauer, who has served on the board for 12 years, said he will be running for the Hanover Township Board of Trustees.

Mike Phillis confirmed he will be running while Sue Drotloff did not reveal her intentions.

Also at the meeting, the school board approved the purchase of a new bus from Myers Equipment in Canfield for $89,240. The handicap accessible bus will be used in the regular fleet. Board member Mike Ellyson cast the only dissenting vote.

The board also approved supplemental coaching contracts for the 2013-2014 school year to Jeffrey Weber, eighth-grade volleyball, and Megan Frederick, seventh-grade volleyball; and hired Mike Ward, retired certificated staff member, on a part-time one-year limited contract for the 2013-2014 school year as a business and health instructor.

Additionally the board approved as credential United evaluators, as per the Ohio Teacher Evaluation System (OTES), administrators Steve Viscounte, William Young, Frank Baker, Tina Hughes and Marlene Ravelli. In the event that an United credentialed evaluator cannot conduct a teacher evaluation, the district will use an Ohio Department of Education approved evaluator.

The board also approved an agreement with EMT Inc. to provide ambulance service for 28 athletic events for approximately $4,328.

Law firm admits leaking Rowling’s mystery alter ego

LONDON (AP) — The mystery has been solved.

A British law firm admitted Thursday that one of its partners inadvertently revealed that J.K. Rowling had authored a mystery novel, “The Cuckoo’s Calling.”

The Sunday Times newspaper revealed over the weekend that the “Harry Potter” author had penned the book under the pseudonym Robert Galbraith.

The newspaper said it had received a tip-off on Twitter, and there was speculation that Rowling or her publisher were behind the revelation — which has sent sales of the thriller skyrocketing.

But law firm Russells said Thursday that one of its partners, Chris Gossage, had let the information slip to his wife’s best friend, Judith Callegari — the woman behind the tweet. Her Twitter account has now been deleted.

SHERIFF

— A Roberts Road, Leetonia, man reported at 9:25 a.m. Thursday his mailbox was knocked off the post last Sunday night. It was the third time in recent weeks his mailbox, which cannot be seen from the house, has been damaged.

— Deputies were called by New Waterford EMS personnel who were responding to a home on Peace Valley Road for a possible overdose at 12:44 a.m. Thursday. Deputies did not locate any signs of narcotics or drug paraphernalia. The unresponsive man was transported to a hospital for treatment.

— A domestic argument was reported at a Hill Street, Lisbon, home at 8:33 p.m. Wednesday. Deputies found the woman walking along the roadway. She left for a while after arguing with her boyfriend. The boyfriend told deputies he wanted Fisher and the children to move out of the house. Deputies explained he would have to evict them unless they went willingly.

BUSINESS HIGHLIGHTS

Dell delays buyout vote, signaling lack of support
ROUND ROCK, Texas (AP) — Michael Dell believes he can revive the company bearing his name, if his group of investors can buy it for $24.4 billion. But that deal is in danger of falling apart, increasing the chances that the personal computer giant's founder might not be CEO much longer.

The formidable challenges already facing Dell Inc. and its CEO became more daunting Thursday with the slumping company's decision to delay a vote on Michael Dell's proposed buyout.

The postponement until next Wednesday signals that a five-month campaign by Michael Dell and the company's board hasn't overcome the staunch resistance of billionaire Carl Icahn and other shareholders, who argue that the buyout price is too low and discounts the company's long-term prospects.

Google stumbles in 2Q as slump in ad rates deepens

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Google views the computing shift to smartphones and tablets as a golden opportunity, but the Internet search leader's second-quarter performance served as an unsettling reminder that it poses a nagging financial challenge, too.

A report released Thursday showed Google's average ad rate fell from the previous year for the seventh consecutive quarter. In an unexpected turn, the decline deepened for the first time in a year.

The average ad rate, or "cost per click," fell by 6 percent during the three months ending in June. The magnitude of the declines had eased in each of the previous three quarters, raising hopes that the worse was over. Instead, things deteriorated from the 4 percent decline in ad rates during the first three months of the year.

Microsoft 4Q profit misses; books Surface charge

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Microsoft Corp.'s foray into the tablet computer market proved costly in the fourth quarter. The world's largest software company booked a $900 million write-down to account for the deep price cut it applied to its Surface RT tablet this week, a move to spur sales amid sluggish demand.

The Redmond, Wash.-based software giant cut the Surface RT's price to $349. The $150-per-device cut contributed to fourth quarter earnings that fell short of Wall Street forecasts, but even without the charge, earnings would have missed expectations.

Microsoft also saw revenue from its flagship Windows operating system decline 6 percent after excluding the late recognition of revenue from last year when it offered discounted upgrades to users of older systems.

UK investigators: Disable locator beacon on 787s

LONDON (AP) — U.K. air accident investigators recommended Thursday that aviation authorities temporarily disable a Honeywell emergency transmitter on all Boeing 787 aircraft following a fire on one of the planes last week at London's Heathrow Airport.

The Air Accidents Investigation Branch also recommended that the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration and other regulators carry out a safety review of lithium-battery powered emergency locator transmitter systems in other types of aircraft.

In a report issued Thursday, the investigators said that the greatest damage to the parked Ethiopian Airlines 787 occurred around the aircraft's Rescu406AFN emergency locator transmitter near the plane's tail.

Parent of American Airlines posts $220 million profit

The parent of American Airlines posted a $220 million second-quarter profit as cost-cutting from its bankruptcy reorganization kicked in.

It's the first time in six years that American has reported a profit during the April-June quarter. During the same period last year, it lost $241 million, mostly because of bankruptcy related expenses.

Revenue was steady at about $6.45 billion. AMR Corp. has been operating under bankruptcy protection since late 2011. It has cut worker pay and other expenses. Spending for wages was 18 percent lower than a year ago. Fuel expenses fell 3 percent as the price of fuel dropped.

Morgan Stanley, feeling confident, buys back stock

NEW YORK (AP) — Morgan Stanley is feeling good about its future.

The New York bank said Thursday that it will buy back up to $500 million of its own shares, news that surprised investors and helped boost the share price by more than 4 percent. It also reported higher earnings and revenue for the second quarter, helped by gains in both its investment bank and wealth management. And it's fresh off closing its purchase of brokerage firm Smith Barney from Citigroup, a yearslong process that has been central to CEO James Gorman's plan to reshape Morgan Stanley. In a call with analysts, Gorman called the purchase "a game changer" and promised it would benefit the bank "now and for decades to come."

Once-mighty Motor City files for bankruptcy

DETROIT (AP) — Once the very symbol of American industrial might, Detroit became the biggest U.S. city to file for bankruptcy Thursday, its finances ravaged and its neighborhoods hollowed out by a long, slow decline in population and auto manufacturing.

The filing, which had been feared for months, put the city on an uncertain course that could mean laying off municipal employees, selling off assets, raising fees and scaling back basic services such as trash collection and snow plowing, which have already been slashed.

"Only one feasible path offers a way out," Gov. Rick Snyder said in a letter approving the move.

Keveny Orr, a bankruptcy expert hired by the state in March to stop Detroit's fiscal free-fall, made the Chapter 9 filing in federal bankruptcy court.

Michael Sweet, a bankruptcy attorney in Fox-Rothschild's San Francisco office, said the city should pay current employees. But "beyond that, all bets are off."

"They don't have to pay anyone they don't want to," Sweet said. "And no one can sue them."

Detroit lost a quarter-million residents between 2000 and 2010. A population that in the 1950s reached 1.8 million now struggles to stay above 700,000. Much of the middle-class and scores of businesses also have fled Detroit, taking their tax dollars with them.

Beginning in the late 1960s, auto companies began opening plants in other cities. Property values and tax revenue fell, and police couldn't control crime. Then the rise of autos imported from Japan started to cut the size of the U.S. auto industry.

In recent months, the city has relied on state-backed bond money to meet payroll for its 10,000 employees.

Orr was unable to persuade a host of creditors, unions and pension boards to take pennies on the dollar to help facilitate the city's massive financial restructuring. If the bankruptcy filing is approved, city assets could be liquidated to satisfy demands for payment.

Snyder determined earlier this year that Detroit was in a financial emergency and without a plan for improvement. He made it the largest U.S. city to fall under state oversight when a state loan board hired Orr. His letter was attached to Orr's bankruptcy filing.

"The citizens of Detroit need and deserve a clear road out of the cycle of ever-decreasing services," Snyder wrote. "The city's creditors, as well as its many dedicated public servants, deserve to know what promises the city can and will keep. The only way to do those things is to radically restructure the city and allow it to reinvent itself without the burden of impossible obligations."

A turnaround specialist, Orr represented automaker Chrysler LLC during its successful restructuring. He issued a warning early on in his 18-month tenure in Detroit that bankruptcy was a road he preferred to avoid.

He laid out his plans in June meetings with debt holders, in which his team warned there was a 50-50 chance of a bankruptcy filing. Some creditors were asked to take about 10 cents on the dollar of what the city owed them. Underfunded pension claims would have received less than the 10 cents on the dollar under that plan.

Orr's team of financial experts said that proposal was Detroit's one shot to permanently fix its fiscal problems. The team said Detroit was defaulting on about $2.5 billion in unsecured debt to "conserve cash" for police, fire and other services.

"Despite Mr. Orr's best efforts, he has been unable to reach a restructuring plan with the city's creditors," the governor wrote. "I therefore agree that the only feasible path to a stable and solid Detroit is to file for bankruptcy protection."

Detroit's budget deficit is believed to be more than $380 million. Orr has said long-term debt was more than $14 billion and could be between $17 billion and $20 billion.

Orr's decision to file now may have been influenced by lawsuits filed by some city workers and retirement systems to prevent Snyder from approving a bankruptcy request from the emergency manager, said Detroit-area turnaround specialist James McTevia.

They have argued that bankruptcy could change pension and retiree benefits, which are guaranteed under state law.

Orr has said federal bankruptcy laws trump state law in this matter.

A bankruptcy judge will stay all the litigation, McTevia said.

"One court will adjudicate all these," McTevia said.

Some are concerned that a bankrupt Detroit will cause businesses large and small to reconsider their operations in the city. But General Motors, which filed and emerged from a Chapter 11 bankruptcy, does not anticipate any impact to its daily operations, the automaker said Thursday in a statement.

"GM is proud to call Detroit home and today's bankruptcy declaration is a day that we and others hoped would not come," the statement said. "We believe, however, that today also can mark a clean start for the city."

142ND BRITISH OPEN CHAMPIONSHIP — MUIRFIELD

Zach Johnson handles brown links of Muirfield

GULLANE, Scotland (AP) — A blue sky and a gentle breeze usually means ripe scoring conditions at the British Open. Just not on the brown links of Muirfield.

Zach Johnson handled it better than anyone Thursday. Helped along by a 45-foot eagle putt and only one bogey despite trouble lurking around every pot bunker, Johnson had a 5-under 66 for a one-shot lead, the first time he's been atop the leaderboard at any major since he rallied to win the Masters six years ago.

Tiger Woods more than survived the late end of the draw, after the sun had thoroughly baked out the crispy greens and allowed only eight of the 20 rounds under par. He knocked one putt clear off the green, but 10 one-putts — most of them for pars — carried him to a 69, a good start in his bid to end his five-year drought in the majors.

"The golf course progressively got more dried out and more difficult as we played," Woods said. "And I'm very pleased to shoot anything even par or better."

And for all the talk about Muirfield's men-only membership, at least the club doesn't discriminate against age.

Mark O'Meara, the 56-year-old who won his claret jug in 1998 at Royal Birkdale, shot a 67 and nearly tied Johnson for the lead until his 25-foot birdie putt on the 18th took a hard spin out of the cup. Another former champion, 54-year-old Tom Lehman, opened with a 68.

It was an eclectic group who broke par, from major champions to players making their British Open debut. What they all had in common was finding a way to get through a firm, fast and frightening test at Muirfield that figures to get even harder if the Royal & Ancient doesn't put some water on the links course.

"The golf course progressively got more dried out and more difficult as we played. And I'm very pleased to shoot anything even par or better."

— TIGER WOODS —

Phil Mickelson opened with a 69 and felt like he got off easy by playing in the morning. Mickelson was concerned about some hole locations being too close to the edge of slopes, and he pleaded with the R&A to let go of its ego and "just set the course up the way the best players can win."

Some of the best did just fine. "Anytime you shoot under par in an Open — or a major, for that matter — you have to be putting at least somewhat decent," Johnson said. "And I putted great. I made some nice birdie putts and obviously that one for eagle. But I struck some really nice, solid par putts. That's what you've got to do to stay in it."

Rafael Cabrera-Bello of Spain joined O'Meara at 67, while the group at 68 included Dustin Johnson and Brandt Snedeker, who each have contended on Sunday over the last two years in the Open. Two-time major champion Angel Cabrera, who lost in a playoff at the Masters in April, and 19-year-old Jordan Spieth were in the group at 69.

It was a beautiful day along the Firth of Forth. And it was hard work. No one felt safe until the ball stopped bouncing along the crusty fairways, and no one was sure when that would happen.

"I haven't seen anything like this," said Snedeker, who tied the 36-hole Open record a year ago at Lytham. "I've played in, I think, five Opens. This is completely new to me — foreign to see a 2-iron going 300 yards. You have got to be wary of how you're shaping your golf ball, and what shot selections you're using on the greens."

O'Meara thought he hit a reasonable bunker shot on the 15th until it kept rolling — and rolling — off the green and into another bunker.

"They get so glassy and crispy around the holes," Graeme McDowell, who played with Woods, said after a 75. "You literally can see 300 footprints around the hole from all the players and caddies that have been out there today. They just get really shiny, and really glassy. I couldn't single out a pin that I thought was unfair. But if you got on the wrong side of them, they could make you look very, very silly."

Yes, there was plenty of that. Rory McIlroy never looked comfortable, and it caught up with him. After missing left of the 12th green, he chipped it up the slope and watched it roll back down to his feet. His next chip was long and he wound up with double bogey. On the 15th hole, his putt to the back pin rolled well past the hole and into a bunker for another double bogey. A bogey-bogey finish gave him a 79, his highest score at the Open since that 80 in the vicious wind of St. Andrews in 2010.

At least he had some company. Luke Donald, another former No. 1 player in the world, had a double bogey and a triple bogey two holes apart on the back nine. He shot 80.

McIlroy searching for help after a fat 79

GULLANE, Scotland (AP) — Rory McIlroy was ready to get some help after a fat 42 on the back nine almost surely put him out of contention in the British Open barely after it began.

Not with his swing. With his mind. "Sometimes I feel like I'm walking out there and I'm unconscious," McIlroy said.

McIlroy imploded with a startling series of missed shots on the back nine Thursday on his way to a 8-over 79 that demonstrated just how much the former No. 1 player in the world is struggling with his game. He was a staggering 13 shots off the lead even though he felt he hit the ball decently all day.

It left him talking about seeing a sports psychologist to figure out why he can't score like he used to even after doing everything he could to make his game work.

"It's a very alien feeling," McIlroy said. "It's something I've never had to deal with before."

McIlroy seemed bewildered after a round of missed opportunities, missed putts and even a putt that went into a bunker. By the time he tapped in for a final bogey on the 18th hole and shook hands with playing partners Phil Mickelson and Hideki Matsuyama it was all he could do to add up the damage and sign his card.

A few days earlier, McIlroy was talking about how hopeful he was

Bucs bask in spotlight, but ready to finish job

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates are used to this part, the one where they spend the first half of the season stunning the baseball world with their play. Call it a byproduct of two decades of mediocrity.

Yet promising starts in 2011 and 2012 ended up in an all too familiar place, with the team under .500 after cratering under the pressure of a pennant race.

The freefalls were painful, yet closer Jason Grilli insists they were an important part of the growth process for a franchise learning how to win. Still, even the perpetually optimistic Grilli knows a third disappearing act is unacceptable.

"The time's now," Grilli said. "There's no more development. It's time to win."

It's a message echoed from all corners of the clubhouse, from veterans like the 36-year-old Grilli to 25-year-old revelation Jeff Locke to star centerfielder Andrew McCutchen to perpetually optimistic manager Clint Hurdle. All understand the club's best record at the All-Star break (56-37) in 37 years will be rendered a tantalizing footnote if Lucy pulls the football away from Charlie Brown one more time.

"Nobody out there is satisfied," Hurdle said last week. "I know I'm not satisfied."

Hurdle may have as much — if not more — to prove than his players. Though he led the Colorado Rockies to the World Series in 2007, his post All-Star break as a manager is just 292-362.

Yet Hurdle, who sends out daily missives on the power of positivity, insists his team is wary but confident.

They begin the second half of the season in Cincinnati on Friday night eager to show they're not ready to become the 2013 version of Icarus, the character from Greek mythology who tried to escape the island of Crete by constructing wings made of feather and wax. Icarus nearly made it, but disregarded his father's order to not fly too close to the sun. The wax melted under the heat, and Icarus came plummeting back to earth.

Pittsburgh has no such plans to do the same, and there's a different vibe pul-

"The time's now. There's no more development. It's time to win."

— JASON GRILLI —

sating through the dugout this summer. The only place Pittsburgh's play isn't a surprise is in the Pirates' dugout. It's why Grilli didn't get too worked up when "Sports Illustrated" put the fiery, emotional leader on the cover this week, the first time a Pirate has made the front page of the magazine since Barry Bonds did it 21 years ago.

"These are things that you can really get caught up in and I'm not that guy," Grilli said. "I'm here and I'm doing well because my teammates are succeeding too and they're helping me be successful."

And doing it in a grown-up way.

The youthful "Zoltan" signs the team used as a touchstone last year — a tongue-in-cheek nod to the slacker comedy "Dude Where's My Car?" — now only pop up occasionally. And while Grilli has nicknamed the bullpen "The Shark Tank" because of its tenacity (a moniker that has caught on so well a fan donated an actual shark tank that now sits a few steps from Grilli's locker) the Pirates are playing with a maturity it lacked even a year ago.

They showcased it early after stumbling to a 1-5 start the first week of the season. All they've done since is put together the best record in baseball to remain a nagging presence behind the St. Louis Cardinals in the NL Central. And when the cracks in the foundation appeared to start showing just before the break during a four-game losing streak, the Pirates responded with a three straight wins to put talk of "the Collapse III" to rest. At least for now.

"We're going to lose some games," ace A.J. Burnett said. "We're going to lose a couple. We've got to keep the losing streaks lower and the winning streaks higher. That's the good thing about this rotation. You've got five guys that can turn around at any time and stop the bleeding."

He's not kidding. Locke propelled himself from

JOHNSON FROM 1B

Nick Faldo celebrated his 56th birthday with a return to the links where he won two of his three claret jugs. He shot a 79, but still enjoyed the nerves and the emotions of seeing the gallery lining both sides of the fairway in his first Open in three years.
Lloyd Saltman got the 142nd Open off to a dubious start when it took him three tee shots to get his ball in play. He made a quadruple-bogey eight. Some eight hours later, Woods hooked his opening tee shot so far left, and into grass so deep, that he took a penalty shot for an unplayable lie. Woods hit into a bunker, but blasted out to 4 feet to escape with bogey. He made four birdies in his round, including a 25-foot bender behind the 13th hole. But it was the clutch putting that kept him going.
Dustin Johnson played the three par 5s in 4-under, yet what made him smile was a par. From left of the par-3 seventh green, he chipped between two bunkers and watched the ball ride the rounded face of one, roll precariously near the top of another and settled 4 feet away.
“That,” he said, “was sweet.”
Mickelson, coming off a win at the Scottish Open on a links-styled course at Castle Stuart, rolled in three big putts early in his round and kept it together with great lag putts for par when he ran into what he called “technical difficulties.”
He rallied with a pair of late birdies, only for his last attempt from 15 feet above the hole on the 18th to slide some 6 feet by for a three-putt bogey. Even so, Lefty was pleased to be done as the greens turned brown.
“I got very lucky to play early today because as the day wore on and we got to the back nine, about a third of every green started to die and become brown,” he said. “And the pins were very edgy, on the slopes. The guys that played early had a huge, huge break. Because even without any wind, it’s beyond difficult.”
It was tough all day.
Ninety-eight players in the 156-man field had at least a double bogey on their scorecards. Former U.S. Open champion Lucas Glover might have summed it up best when he took to Twitter after opening with an 80.
“Muirfield 1, Me o.”

that he was finally ready to come out of a season-long slump. On this unusually warm day on the Scottish coast he sounded like he was searching desperately for something, anything really, that could save his game.
“I just need to try to think more,” he said. “I’m trying to focus and trying to concentrate. But, yeah, I can’t really fathom it at the minute and it’s hard to stand up here and tell you guys what’s really wrong.”
It was just 11 months ago that the 24-year-old won the PGA Championship for his second major championship win. Since then, McIlroy ditched the clubs that had served him well to sign a rich endorsement deal with Nike.
He put a new driver in the bag for the Open, hoping to straighten out a flaw that had him leaving his tee shots to the right. But that’s just where he was on the 10th hole, deep in knee-high rough on his way to his first bogey on a back nine littered with big scores.
The swing, he insisted, was fine. But the mental errors added up quickly, with McIlroy making a double bogey on the 12th hole after short siding himself with a short iron and putting from just off the front of the green into a back bunker on No. 15 for another double bogey there.
“It’s just so brain dead,” he said. “Seriously, I feel like I’ve been walking around out there like that for the last couple of months. I’m trying to get out of it. I just don’t quite know why.”
McIlroy, who has yet to win this year and finished tied for 41st last month in the U.S. Open, was candid as he answered questions after his round in a steamy interview area off the 18th green. He stood with his hands in his pockets and talked about how things weren’t all that bad before he began making mental errors on the back nine.
It’s the first time in his career that he has struggled for so long, and McIlroy acknowledged it was difficult to deal with. But he rejected the notion that having big success at such an early age may have set him up for some failures now.
“I don’t think so,” he said. “All you’re trying to do is get the ball in the hole in the least amount of shots as possible. That’s all you’re thinking about out there or trying to think about. And that’s what I’ve been so good in the past, and obviously that’s the point I’m trying to get back to.”
If McIlroy needed any reminder of how far he has fallen it came when he was playing the back nine and his name appeared on a leaderboard just off the 15th hole.
It was a mistake, and quickly taken down.

PEDs, Pirates, Puig headline second half

By HOWIE RUMBERG
AP Sports Writer

Much of the focus as baseball heads into the second half is on the possible suspensions of Alex Rodriguez, Ryan Braun and a handful of All-Stars implicated in the Biogenesis performance enhancing drug scandal.
Puigmania, a Pirates revival and one impressive power show in Baltimore may shift the gaze back onto the field, where there will be a lot to watch headed down the stretch of the regular season.
Fans who have been celebrating Mariano Rivera at every stop of his farewell tour should get a chance to watch returning stars Derek Jeter, Chris Carpenter, A-Rod and even Manny Ramirez after a first half dominated by 20-somethings.
The American League won the All-Star game on Tuesday night, giving home-field advantage in the World Series back to the junior circuit after three years of NL dominance. Now the race is on to get to the Fall Classic, and some underachieving preseason favorites are looking to make their moves.
Every playoff spot is legitimately up for grabs, with no team leading a division by more than a half-dozen games. And the NL East, where Atlanta is up six on Washington, is the only place where the division leader is ahead by three games or more.
What to look for in the second half, that begins Friday:
CLOCK IS TICKING
— The Washington Nationals need a healthy Bryce Harper to get into a groove and help them chase down Atlanta.
— The big-spending Dodgers are suddenly surging, 17-5 since June 22, thanks to the youthful exuberance of Yasiel Puig, with a smile to match that of owner Magic Johnson.
— North of the border, the Blue Jays made the biggest offseason moves but NL Cy Young Award winner R.A. Dickey's knuckleball has been mostly off-target and Toronto finds itself in last place in the powerful AL East. But don't count anyone out in what's widely considered the toughest division in the majors.
— Pedro Alvarez and the Pittsburgh Pirates appear poised to put 20 years of misery behind them, after two years of teasing their fans by being in the hunt heading into the break only to fade down the stretch. With the Houston Astros now in the AL, the NL Central is one of the most competitive divisions.

Reds manager Dusty Baker knew it would be a stiffer challenge this year.
“I figured it'd be close, closer, because none of us have the Astros in our division that we were counting on — not to malign them — but they were in our division last year and every team kind of counted on beating them,” he said. “Now you've got to beat each other.”
— So far it's only been California dreamin' for Josh Hamilton in his first year in Los Angeles, even with Houston in the division. He'll have to improve on his .224 average, .413 slugging percentage for the Angels to have a shot to overtake Home Run Derby champ Yoenis Cespedes and the pesky A's. Albert Pujols' ballclub is 11 games back in the AL West and nine games behind for the wild card.
HOMER CRUSH
Baltimore's big bopper Chris Davis is off on a race of his own. With 37 homers before the break — tying Reggie Jackson (1969) for best ever in the AL — talk of the single-season home run record is bubbling again.
Crush Davis, however, doesn't have his sights set on Barry Bonds' 73 homers, he wants to top Roger Maris' 61, the number he thinks is the legitimate, untainted mark.
“After everything came out, I assumed 61 was the record,” Davis said. “I think it's what a lot of fans would agree on.”
Davis, whose previous career high for homers was last year's 33, needs 25 long balls in 66 games to reach 62. Of course, most of the rest of baseball goes with Bonds' number, including Davis' teammate Adam Jones.
“He still hit them over the fence,” Jones said.
A HALF FOR THE AGED
Move over whipper-snappers, the old guard is back — maybe.
Mike Trout, Bryce Harper, Matt Harvey, Patrick Corbin and a record 39 first-time All-Stars grabbed the spotlight in the first half but expect to see some seasoned stars in the next few weeks that could impact the pennant races.
The injury-ravaged Yankees have hung around in the potent AL East with a “Who's on First?” lineup. Now they should get Derek Jeter back after a one-game false start and Alex Rodriguez's return from off-season hip surgery is imminent.

BUCS FROM 1B

fringe starter to All-Star in three months after going 8-2 with a 2.15 ERA in the first half. Francisco Liriano revived his sagging career by regaining the form that made him one of the best young arms in the game before having Tommy John surgery in 2007. Charlie Morton has bounced back from the same procedure and been effective if not dominant. And former No. 1 pick Gerrit Cole gave Pittsburgh a needed jolt when he arrived with his triple-digit fastball in tow last month.
The Pirates lead the majors with a 3.09 ERA and 13 shutouts, remarkable numbers that have allowed them to stalk the Cardinals for the last six weeks even as the offense struggled to find a rhythm. The combination of setup man Mark Melancon and Grilli (whose 29 saves lead the NL) have turned most games into seven-inning affairs. The Pirates are 46-1 when leading going into the eighth. Their mere presence on the mound has a ripple effect on the rest of the team.
“It makes it easy knowing that they're doing what they're doing,” McCutchen said. “We know more times than not they're going to save it for us, keep us in the game. It makes it easier when you go out there in seven, eight, nine innings knowing that we have a good chance of keeping the lead.”
McCutchen, however, is also acutely aware of the offense needs to take some of the pressure off. The Pirates rank 26th in batting average and runs and are hitting an abysmal .229 with runners in scoring position. Where critics see a weakness, they see potential. The way they look at it, they're a game back of the Cardinals and they aren't even scoring.
“It shows we've got things we've got to work on,” McCutchen said. “And that's all we're worried about. “We see room for improvement, and that's what drives us.”

FRANCE WINS STAGE! — France finally got a winner. It took 18 stages and came against the backdrop of rising rumblings that no French rider might land a stage win in the Tour's 100th edition. Then Christophe Riblon came through, speeding past American rider Tejay van Garderen in the last mile to win Stage 18 up to L'Alpe d'Huez ski station. The French have been facing a series of setbacks this year. Promising young climbing specialist Thibaut Pinot dropped out; Jean-Christophe Peraud crashed out while ninth overall. Chris Froome and his Sky team, including key climbing cohort Richie Porte of Australia, repelled a string of attacks to keep the Briton in the yellow jersey. His biggest rivals are running out of options to wrest it ahead of the finish to the three-week race on Sunday in Paris.— — —2. MOUNTAIN MAYHEM — Campers by the hundreds. Beer flowing like it came out of an Alpine stream. Flags seemingly from every nation of the United Nations. The ride Wednesday to the famed L'Alpe d'Huez — arguably cycling's greatest mountain mecca — was absolutely teeming with fans, by the hundreds of thousands. This is about as close as it gets to a European version of "tailgating" in American football — where fans fire up grills for barbecues from the backs of their vehicles before a game. Some camped out for days. Many dressed for the craziness. Fans included Papa Smurf, a person in a lion suit strumming on an inflatable guitar, pastel-colored body suits and others sporting rather lewd garb. Many of the 21 switchbacks up to L'Alpe d'Huez seemed reserved for fans by nation: Norwegian, Irish, British, and especially the renowned "Dutch corner" — a sea of orange-colored fans dancing as music blared. The riders mostly say they enjoy such support — loud cheers were heard almost all the way up the 8-mile climb — but several riders had to swap back fans who got too close and ran beside them as they agogized.— — —3. BREAKING THE CADEL'S BACK — Cadel Evans hasn't been up to par at this Tour. The 36-year-old Australian who won the Tour two years ago admits that he and his BMC team overestimated his ability to recover from the Giro d'Italia in May, where he finished third. "The Giro took a lot more out of me than I first thought," Evans said after finishing 167th in Wednesday's time trial in Stage 17. He was 8 minutes, 4 seconds behind stage winner and overall leader Chris Froome. Riding both "was something that we tried, knowing there was a certain element of risk to ride in the Giro and the Tour... in the Tour it didn't work." Evans lost over 20 minutes to the top race leaders in Thursday's 18th stage, featuring a double-dose of the widely-dreaded L'Alpe d'Huez — and fell to 29th place, 46:16 back. As the Tour began, Evans and BMC hoped that he might reach the podium — an aim out of reach now. "A reasonable Giro and a very good Tour was the goal," he said. "Nothing I can do about that now!"— — —4. RIIS' NEGATIVE — Bjarne Riis says cycling has to live with the skepticism of many fans about rider performances in the wake of an array of doping scandals to rock the sport. Riis is manager of the Saxo Bank team of Alberto Contador, a two-time Tour winner returning to the race this year after serving a ban linked to a positive doping test. Today, other team managers, such as Team Sky's Dave Brailsford, are trying to show their racers aren't doped, to help overcome fans' doubts. Brailsford has proposed providing all his riders' blood, power and performance data to the World Anti-Doping Agency. Riis' response to that idea? "Dunno ... It's not in our rights to do that," he said, "it is personal data." Riis also said real scientific experts — not armchair specialists who may chime in from the Internet — need to vet such data. Asked what his proposals might be to help end fan skepticism built up over many years of doping scandals, he said: "We have to live with that," before telling reporters: "You find a solution and then we'll look at it."— — —5. ADDITIONAL ALPINE AGONY — The pack may think a double-billing of L'Alpe d'Huez ride Thursday was tough, but more aching in the Alps awaits. The trek Friday from the mountain-biking hub of Bourg d'Oisans to Le Grand-Bornand is home to more than 400 chalets, including one dating to the 17th century, over a whopping 127 miles. The 19th stage features five ascents — two of them among the hardest in cycling. The Col de Glandon and the Col de Madeleine — and a total of 41 miles of climbing. "Tomorrow's possibly the toughest day of the Tour de France. It's really going to be a hard day," Froome said.	BASEBALLAmerican LeagueBALTIMORE ORIOLES — Announced RHP Jair Jurrjens declined outright assignment and chose free agency.BOSTON RED SOX — Sent SS Stephen Drew to Portland (EL) for a rehab assignment.CLEVELAND INDIANS — Sent RHP Zach McAllister to Columbus (IL) for a rehab assignment.KANSAS CITY ROYALS — Optioned INF Johnny Givofotella and LHP Everett Teaford to Omaha (PCL). Bengals still hear about 1st Hard KnocksCINCINNATI (AP) — Four years after the Cincinnati Bengals were featured on HBO's "Hard Knocks" show, coach Marvin Lewis still hears about his profane tirade to his team after a poor preseason game.The Bengals are ready to get the NFL talking about them again.NFL Films crews started shooting video on Thursday for the first episode of the show, which follows a team through training camp. The Bengals had a few such moments during the 2009 show.One of the lasting lines was delivered by Lewis in the locker room after a preseason loss. Unhappy with a ragged performance, Lewis berated his team as the cameras rolled and screamed at the players to "reach down inside and be a (profanely) pro."Lewis regretted that the moment was shown on television. He said on Thursday that he still gets comments about it."I got one yesterday," he said. HOROSCOPE

By HOLIDAY MATHIS

Is it possible that you'll actually miss this Mercury retrograde period? Maybe that's a stretch, but there are things you'll look back on fondly. And some of the fiascos will make funny stories after enough time has passed. The adventurous Sagittarius moon makes sure that this Mercury transit will go out with an interesting twist.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You don't have too many policies as an individual and can afford to adopt a few more to guide the action over the next few days. For instance, "I do not help anyone over the age of 30 move." Or, "Five trips to the airport max per friend."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). As the sign of the bull, you know that taking the bull by the horns is sometimes necessary, but isn't always wise. Today you will outsmart the "bull" without risking your personal safety.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). People can be poor predictors of what will make them happy, and you'll experience this first-hand. The good news is that you won't have to give up what you want, probably because you find that you don't really want it, after all.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Today's fresh experience will be as crisp and as sweet as fresh fruit. You only wish your memory were worse so you could enjoy this for the first time all over again.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Getting older has been very much on your mind in recent days. Be like a sunflower. Don't fear the encroaching shadow; shine and grow right now while the sun graces your face with beautiful energy.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You like reality and can take more of it than most people. But even you will reach a saturation point today and long for a good escape into the land of fiction and fantasy.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You're still getting a lot of noise from your people because of a recent decision. Don't increase the racket by defending yourself or explaining. Put in your ear buds and listen to your own music instead.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). One-stop shopping is mighty appealing to people like you who don't believe in wasting time. However, what you need today is so special that you'll only find it in a smaller place where the care is personal and specific.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Your talents can't fully come to light if you avoid the light. Unfortunately, the spotlight operator may not know to follow you right now, so you'll have to chase down the spotlight and stand in it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Big day. You won't do everything on your list, and this is a very positive sign. "If you have accomplished all that you planned for yourself, you have not planned enough." -- Edward Everett Hale

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You want to impart some valuable skills to others, but it's not quite time. You have to live it more before you can properly teach it. You're well on your way to the higher levels of this learning.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). There's an old joke that goes, "It's destiny when things work out the way you want and blind chance when they don't." These days, you're not leaving anything to chance, so it doesn't matter either way. Your fate is self-created.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (July 19). You get the feeling that someone is watching out for you, and you're right. Kismet joins you with a loving person in the next five weeks. Get advice before making a financial choice in August. Your fitness level rises in October. You'll tend toward bold action in your personal life because you crave experience, and you'll get it! Aries and Pisces people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 40, 5, 17, 9 and 12.

WEEKEND LOVE FORECAST: ARIES: There are more days to celebrate love than Valentine's Day and anniversaries. Make up a new reason. TAURUS: The power of touch makes a lasting impression when words aren't enough. GEMINI: When stress affects your mood, tell your loved ones so they don't take it personally. CANCER: Think about the pivotal moments that brought you closer to someone. They're excellent fodder for romantic conversation. LEO: You have a flair for coming up with romantic ideas and sweet gestures when you make it a priority. VIRGO: Your silliness tells the world (and a certain special person) that you're comfortable with who you are. LIBRA: The person who gets flustered around you has a crush. SCORPIO: The compliments you field will tell you what you're doing right, but you're ambitious, too, so you'll work toward the compliments you'd like to hear. SAGITTARIUS: Some games of love are never finished. You'll learn more and formulate your next move. CAPRICORN: People say that romantic gifts don't have to be expensive, but not everyone lives next to a patch of wildflowers. You'll pay, and you won't mind, either. AQUARIUS: The best dates will happen at home. PISCES: Your thoughts drift to a certain someone more often lately. Is it love or just a habit of mind?

Carsickness tips

Heloise

Dear Heloise: Do you have any hints for REDUCING MOTION SICKNESS while in the car? We are planning a road trip, and my daughter has an issue with carsickness. I don't want the trip to be miserable for her. -- Anne in Vermont

Oh, motion sickness is dreadful. Here are a few hints to help make the trip a little more enjoyable:

— Make sure she eats before the trip. A lot of people think not eating will help, but it can make things worse. Just don't overeat, and avoid fatty, spicy and greasy meals.

— Take crackers or other small snacks, and eat frequently to alleviate nausea.

— Position your daughter for a smoother ride. Have children sit in the middle of the back seat to reduce movement.

— Keep her focused on the horizon. Don't let her read.

— Let cool air blow on her face. Turn the air-conditioner vent toward her, or crack a window.

— Distract her. Try singing songs, playing games or talking to focus her mind on something else.

Watch for the signs of motion sickness, such as loss of appetite, cold sweats or queasiness. If you notice these, pull over for a break. Have her stretch her legs, use the restroom or stop for a quick bite to eat. Take enough time for the symptoms to pass, and then begin the trip again. -- Heloise

ATTRACTING BIRDS

Dear Heloise: I know you're an animal lover, and your guidance to the reader who asked about how to attract more birds to her yard was great. I'd like to add a key point: I read a statistic that the majority of American songbirds need insects to feed their young. I learned that the most important thing you can do to support and attract birds is to stop using pesticides. -- Julie in New Jersey

BRICK PATIO

Dear Heloise: We have a brick patio. The bricks are not glazed or finished in any way. We cooked hamburgers and got grease spots on the bricks. Is there any way to get the grease out? I have read and enjoyed your column in the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal for years and years. -- Sara M., Lubbock, Texas

Try using liquid laundry detergent. Mix 1 cup of detergent with a gallon of water. Use a soft-bristled brush and scrub thoroughly. Do a small section at a time, then rinse. If that does not remove the stain, you might need to try a commercial brick cleaner, which is available at most hardware or home-improvement stores. Be sure to follow safety guidelines. -- Heloise

NO MORE TOILET TROUBLE

Dear Heloise: To keep things from accidentally falling into the toilet, close the lid when you are done. No more arguments about guys forgetting to put the seat down. It doesn't matter if you sit or stand. Everybody lifts the lid, and everybody puts it back down before washing his or her hands. -- Angie in Central Texas

Love for kids keeps him from leaving

DEAR ABBY: I have been living with my girlfriend, "Robin," for four years. She has children from a previous marriage, and their father is fairly active in their lives. I jumped in and have taken the kids to activities, helped with homework and I pay the majority of the bills. I dearly love the children.

My problem is I no longer love their mother. Robin and I are like roommates who share a bed. There is no passion, no joy together and no partnership. I spend my time with the kids or alone. She's with them at different activities or busy on her computer. When I suggest ways we could bond together, she says, "I'm too tired," or "I don't want to do that," or "This is the way it is!" I have stayed this long only for the kids, but I'm unhappy to the point of aching. I feel guilty about leaving and the strain it will put on the kids. Is there a way to leave a situation like this? Am I a bad man for wanting out and possibly leaving the children to a tougher life? -- UNHAPPY IN SOUTH CAROLINA

DEAR UNHAPPY: Because the woman you're living with shows no interest in improving the quality of the relationship, wanting to leave does not make you a bad person. You will have to accept that because the children depend upon you for certain things they will be affected by your departure. It's too bad you didn't consider that before moving in with someone who had a family.

Try to make the breakup as civil as possible. Before you go, talk to each of the children individually. Make it clear that they are not the reason the relationship is ending and that you will always care about them. That way, they won't think they did something bad and blame themselves.

DEAR ABBY: My only daughter, "Claire," who is 25, has always had a strong work ethic. Her boyfriend "Charles" has never held a job, either during college or in the year and a half he has been out of school. They were living with his parents until Claire accepted a one-year job overseas. Charles followed.

Claire's salary isn't great, so I know she has little money saved, but she wants to start planning her wedding when they return. Should I stick with tradition and pay for it or listen to my head, which is telling me I don't want to see her marry Charles until he has held a full-time job for at least a year? I think she can do better, but I suppose she could also do worse. They do seem to love each other. -- HESITANT MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Listen to your head. When Claire returns, let her know that she and her fiancé will be paying for the wedding. It will be an introduction to the financial realities she and her husband will encounter after their marriage. Later on, when they're considering buying a home, you can give them the money that might have been spent on the wedding as part of their down payment -- if they are still together.

DEAR ABBY: How do I break up with friends who I love but have nothing in common with anymore? I'm married with a child, but as a new business owner, I don't have time to meet their needs. How do you tell people in a loving way that you have appreciated their friendship in the past, but it's over? We have grown apart. -- DON'T HAVE THE TIME

DEAR DON'T: Is it possible that your feelings are temporary, and that you are simply overwhelmed by the demands of your new business? If so, I'd hate to see you end friendships with people you love. Relationships don't always remain at the same level or have the same intensity. Rather than cut the people off entirely, explain that you can't be as available because you have a new business and don't have the time. It would be kinder.
