COLUMBIANA COUNTY

Feisel bound over on murder charge

By DEANNE JOHNSON
Staff Writer

LISBON — Following more than 30 minutes of testimony by a Salem police detective concerning the death of Samantha Shasteen, her boyfriend, Mason Feisel, was bound over to the grand jury by county Municipal Court Judge Mark Frost on a murder charge.

Detective David Talbert testified that early on the morning of June 6, Shasteen's father, Gary Shasteen, had entered the garage of the home he owns on Oak Street and found Feisel sleeping with the garage doors down, a vehicle running and an orange hose and sock near the exhaust pipe.

Gary Shasteen had been asked by his wife to check on his daughter after she had not returned calls or text messages since the evening before. He found her in the bathroom on the first floor of the home and called police.

When Talbert arrived at 7:38 a.m. June 6 he found Samantha Shasteen lying in the bathtub, nude and cold to the touch, he testified Thursday. Rigor had begun setting in and there was a small amount of blood coming from the base of her skull and going toward the drain.

Feisel had run from the garage after Gary Shasteen discovered him, but he was found quickly by Salem Lt. Charles Shafer in the backyard of a neighbor's home. Police reportedly found him with what Talbert described as superficial cuts to his arms and attempting to cut his own throat with a shard of glass. He was ordered by police with Tasers drawn to come out of the wooded area and cooperated while taken into custody.

Talbert said he spoke to Feisel at Salem Community Hospital, where Feisel was being treated for the wounds on his arms. Feisel had reportedly described his relationship with Samantha Shasteen as "tumultuous" and he admitted to having a problem with anger, Talbert said.

"I tried to keep it together and anger just consumes me," Talbert read from his notes about the statement he said Feisel gave him. "You might as well paint me green, because I'm like the (expletive) Hulk."

Police hoping auto thieves take the bait

By LARRY SHIELDS
Staff writer

With a rash of auto thefts in the area, Salem Township Constable Dan Valentine obtained access to a bait car that has been placed around the township for the past few weeks.

Valentine told trustees during Wednesday's regular meeting the bait car program is available through the Ohio Attorney General's office and the Bureau of Criminal Investigation (BCI) and is equipped with "cameras and recording devices that can be monitored at all times and through apps on my cell phone."

The car has been placed in the township in several places with "no luck," he explained, noting the car has also been used by the Leetonia Police Department.

"Nothing yet," he said. "But we will continue to use it and return it to BCI and get it back throughout the summer. We're trying to do our part."

Valentine also addressed another ongoing problem about reports of people cutting screens on abandoned homes, getting inside and stealing copper. He has had

Perry Twp. trustees appropriate funds for cruiser

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

Trustees agreed this week to appropriate $30,000 for a new police cruiser and the equipment to outfit it, such as a light bar and cage, but the vehicle may not arrive until early next year.

Fiscal Officer Susan Johnston explained that the window for the state purchasing program is closed at the moment, but should be ready again sometime in July after a bidding process.

She said the township may not make the cruiser purchase until August or early September and then there's a 90-day turnaround, putting the time for the vehicle's arrival sometime in early 2014.

This year the trustees purchased a new pumper truck for the fire department.

The old pumper truck is part of a list of obsolete equipment the township plans to put up for auction on July 18 at the Roger's Sale. Johnston said the township is taking part in the auction which was opened up to all townships and municipalities to get rid of old equipment and items that can't be used anymore.

The trustees first heard about the auction from another township which was spreading the word about the event and letting township

ALMANAC

Today is Friday, June 14, the 165th day of 2013. There are 200 days left in the year. This is Flag Day. Today's Highlight in History: Ten years ago: A wave estimated at about 20 feet tall capsized the charter fishing boat Taki-Tooo off the northern Oregon coast; nine people were killed, two others are missing and presumed dead; eight survived by swimming to shore. Five years ago: Iran rejected a six-nation offer of incentives to stop enriching uranium, prompting President George W. Bush and French President Nicolas Sarkozy to jointly warn Tehran anew during a news conference in Paris against proceeding toward a nuclear bomb. One year ago: In dueling speeches in the battleground state of Ohio, Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney, speaking in Cincinnati, described the Obama administration as the very "enemy" of people who create jobs.

governments know about the opportunity. The list of equipment includes what Johnston described as an estimated value for each item. The largest item on the list is the 1977 Sutphen pumper fire truck valued at $2,000. Fire Chief Bruce Whitcher previously said the fire truck can't be used for fire fighting anymore, but could be used in parades or for washing heavy equipment. Other items on the list and their estimated values include: a motrim ditcher, $1,000; drop spreader, $100; 5-gallon Lincoln air greaser, $50; concrete tile handler, $50; ready heater, $50; grace line stripper, $1,000; and a cub cadet 14-hp riding mower, $200. In other business, the trustees accepted the resignation of police officer Tom Gamble, who had been with the department more than six years and was reportedly pursuing other interests. Johnston read a letter from Jenny Pike, the president of the Humane Society of Columbiana County, regarding the settlement of a case which started with a barking dog complaint by neighboring property owner Louis Grande. Grande had been to the trustees' meeting last month complaining about barking dogs and said he didn't see the agreement made when the case was settled. Pike said the trustees could come over and peruse the agreement at the Humane Society facility. The trustees announced they'll only meet once in July, cancelling the meeting on July 8 and meeting at 6:30 p.m. July 22. The next meeting is 6:30 p.m. June 24, preceded by a public hearing at 6 p.m. regarding two zoning amendments related to fences and political signs. mgreier@salemnews.net no results with attempts to contact the companies managing the the houses. "They don't care about them. If they don't care about it I can't do anything," he said, explaining he has contacted the phone numbers on the stickers attached to the homes. "No luck," he said while asking, "who is the victim?" Valentine also updated trustees on the victim of a fox bite, noting the person doesn't want to get anti-rabies shots. He explained he loaned the person a cage and while he was putting it in the cage it bit him on the wrist. The Ohio Dept. of Natural Resources said once a person is bitten it becomes an issue for the local health department. Two people, one in Leetonia and one in Washingtonville have permits for "silver Arctic foxes," he said. He spent about six hours on Sunday trying to locate the owner of the fox that he described as "beautiful." In other business, Valentine said he replaced the front brakes on the police cruiser himself to save a little money. "We'll need to replace the back pretty soon," he said. In other business, the Ohio Department of Natural Resources sent the township a drilling permit for the Mangus (1H) well and the township met with Chesapeake and representatives of Rettew regarding the size of stones left on the roads in the road use management agreement. Also, road supervisor Jason Entriokin was authorized to spend the remaining $179 the township received to spend on safety equipment and will use it for strobe lights. The next meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. June 26 and will include a 2014 budget hearing. Larry Shields can be reached at lshields@salemnews.net

SALEM REPORTS

— An anonymous caller at 10:07 a.m. Thursday reported a fireworks complaint in the 800 block of East Fifth Street. An officer didn't find anything on Fifth Street, but then turned onto Rose Avenue and saw a man sitting in a chair and fireworks going off in the driveway. The man said a family member had died that morning and he was just blowing off steam. He was told if any more fireworks are set off, he'll be cited and he said he understood.

— A female from a multiple-dwelling in the city spoke with an officer at 9:28 a.m. Thursday about issues at home involving another resident. The complaint was reported as a domestic dispute.

— A possible intoxicated driver in a white sedan was reported at 5:46 a.m. Thursday on East State Street near Walmart, but the vehicle was not found.

— A caller in the 200 block of West Eighth Street reported at 4:20 a.m. Thursday that he saw a person in dark clothing walking down the alleys twice that evening. Nobody was found.

— Police and fire crews were called at 3:47 a.m. Thursday to the 300 block of South Union Avenue for electrical wires down. A large tree had fallen and took down some power lines and damaged a residence in the 300 block of South Union Avenue. At 3:22 a.m., they had been called to the same general area in the 200 block for trees and power lines down. A tree had fallen on a Chevy Silverado parked in a driveway and owned by Donnie Greathouse, with the driver side rear quarter panel busted out from the tree. Ohio Edison was notified regarding the power lines and the fire department stood by until they arrived.

— An alarm was reported at 3:19 a.m. Thursday in the 2500 block of East State Street, with the building exterior found secure. The interior was also checked after a key holder arrived.

— Police responded to the 400 block of Woodland Avenue after a woman called at 1:26 a.m. Thursday to report she believed her 17-year-old daughter was at the residence consuming alcohol. She was found there, but was not consuming alcohol. She was taken to the police station and picked up by her mother.

— An alarm was reported at 12:46 a.m. Thursday in the 400 block of East Second Street. The exterior was found secure.

— A resident called at 12:38 a.m. Thursday to report a suspicious vehicle in the 600 block of South Lincoln Avenue, noting the vehicle had been stationary for over 45 minutes with the lights on. The vehicle was found unoccupied and it appeared the lights had been left on by mistake. The lights were shut off.

— An officer on patrol near Centennial Park saw two vehicles in the park after closing hours at 12:16 a.m. Thursday. The occupants were told the park was closed and they left without incident.

— A 48-hour notice was issued at 7:51 p.m. Wednesday for a vehicle abandoned in the city municipal parking lot in the 500 block of East Pershing Street. The vehicle had no visible registration and the hood was ajar.

— Police checked on an animal in a vehicle in the 300 block of South Broadway Avenue at 7:22 p.m. Wednesday and found the animal in good health. The owner was contacted to ensure the animal would not be in the vehicle for a prolonged period of time.

— A natural gas leak was reported at 7:05 p.m. Wednesday in the area of the natural gas transfer station near South Broadway Avenue and Franklin Street by a concerned citizen who smelled an odor of natural gas. Police detected the odor and called the fire department, which checked for leaks and contacted Columbia Gas to respond.

— A dirt bike was reported in the road in the 300 block of West Wilson Street at 6:54 p.m. Wednesday. A dirt bike and rider were found on Newgarden Avenue and told about the complaint and the consequences if officers had to return.

— Officers at 6:49 p.m. Wednesday took a report of threats against a juvenile at the station. Officers spoke to all involved in the incident and told them all to have no more contact.

— Stephen Vishak, 19, whose last known address was listed at 42842 state Route 518, Lisbon, was charged with obstruction of official business and a protection order violation after an officer on patrol at 5:10 p.m. Wednesday made contact with two people walking on the railroad tracks near West State Street. One of the persons, Vishak, gave a false name and was placed under arrest and found in violation of a protection order. He was taken to the Columbiana County jail.

— A woman in the 700 block of East Fifth Street reported at 4:51 p.m. Wednesday that a man with a medium build, strawberry blonde hair, a gray shirt and thin beard took a gas can full of gas from her garage and placed it in the bed of his truck. He left after being confronted by her and she called police. His vehicle was described as a light blue truck with gray primer spots.

— A woman in the 1200 block of South Lincoln Avenue reported at 4:37 p.m. Wednesday that someone removed her checkbook and U.S. currency from her purse while it was in her residence on Tuesday. She closed the bank account.

Columbiana test drive results in vehicle theft

Staff Reports

COLUMBIANA — What started as a routine test drive Wednesday in Columbiana turned into a criminal offense, with charges to be filed against the two people involved.

Dalton Lappert of New Waterford had met the people at the state 7&14 Truck Stop around 11 a.m.

Wednesday, according to the police report, he was reportedly trying to sell his 1996 Pontiac Firebird and had allowed the two to take it for a test drive, but when they still hadn't returned 20 minutes later Lappert reported it stolen.

The vehicle was last seen headed west toward Salem, according to the report.

According to police Thursday, the Pennsylvania Highway Patrol found the car unoccupied on a road in Darlington Township.

Police were not sure at this point how the car ended up in Pennsylvania or if that is where the two suspects are from.

Their names are not being released since charges have not been filed. They will be charged with stealing a motor vehicle.

OUR SIDE

Flag Day should be embraced today

Today is Flag Day. Our fine nation should be awash in red, white and blue. That is because Flag Day deserves the respect of each and every one of us. Flag Day doesn't carry the same holiday weekend/day off/let's golf, barbecue and party reputation that its summertime counterparts like Memorial Day, July 4th and Labor Day do. But as free American citizens we should all pause today and acknowledge the significance that our flag represents.

Ten of thousands of American have fought for and sacrificed — some with their very lives — to preserve the American way of freedom and democracy. Our flag represents fairness to all of its citizens. It represents opportunities for all of its citizens. Ask someone in a communist, socialist or third world country if they would embrace a flag day that represented the kind of personal liberties and choices that we have. And, sadly, take for granted so often it seems by so many Americans. If you are in a need of a strong dose of humility, just go visit a local cemetery where hundreds of flags have been placed since Memorial Day on the graves of veterans.

Flag Day commemorates the adoption of the flag of the United States. That happened on June 14 by resolution of the Second Continental Congress in 1777.

President Woodrow Wilson issued a proclamation officially establishing June 14 as Flag Day. That was in 1916. Flag Day is not an official federal holiday but should be treated like one. Pennsylvania became the first and only state to celebrate Flag Day as a state holiday. Ohioans and the good citizens in our own area will certainly have their flags out today on what promises to be a fine weather day to serve as a backdrop.

We should all have at least the basics regarding flag etiquette. Part of the includes a respectful disposal of worn flags. Those needing to properly dispose flags can do at two area locations. The Sebring American Legion is collecting worn flags with a deadline of 5 p.m. today. At 6 p.m. a flag burning ceremony is scheduled. On Saturday, the Damascus Ruritan Club is holding a flag retirement ceremony at 1 p.m. at the Damascus Community Center. Old and tattered flags are being accepted at the Damascus post office and Damascus Hardware.

Our flag represents so much that makes up the very fabric of our American way. Foremost is our democratic nation with the individual freedoms it represents. Never forget that. Especially on this special day. Let's all give a heartfelt salute to Old Glory.

Lois Lerner represents the scowling face

GEORGE WILL

WASHINGTON — As soon as the Constitution permitted him to run for Congress, Al Salvi did. In 1986, just 26 and fresh from the University of Illinois law school, he sank $1,000 of his own money, which was most of his money, into his campaign to unseat an incumbent Democratic congressman. Salvi studied for the bar exam during meals at campaign dinners.

He lost his campaign. Today, however, he should be invited to Congress to testify about what happened 10 years later when he was a prosperous lawyer and won the Republican Senate nomination to run against a Democratic congressman named Dick Durbin. In the fall of 1996, at the campaign's climax, Democrats filed with the Federal Elections Commission charges against Salvi's campaign, alleging campaign finance violations.

These charges dominated the campaign's closing days. Salvi spoke by telephone with the head of the FEC's Enforcement Division, who he remembers saying: "Promise me you will never run for office again, and we'll drop this case." He was speaking to Lois Lerner.

After losing to Durbin, Salvi spent four years and $100,000 fighting the FEC, on whose behalf FBI agents visited his elderly mother demanding to know, concerning her $2,000 contribution to her son's campaign, where she got "that kind of money." When the second of two federal courts held that the charges against Salvi were spurious, the lawyer arguing for the FEC was Lois Lerner.

More recently, she has been head of the IRS Exempt Organizations Division, which has used its powers of delay, harassment and extortion to suppress political participation. For example, it has told an Iowa right-to-life group that it would get tax exempt status if it would promise not to picket Planned Parenthood clinics.

Last week, in a televised House Ways and Means Committee hearing, Rep. Peter Roskam, R-Ill., Salvi's former law partner, told the riveting story of the partisan enforcement of campaign laws to suppress political competition by distracting Salvi and entangling him in bureaucratic snares. The next day, the number of inches of newsprint in The Washington Post and New York Times devoted to Roskam's revelation was the number of minutes that had been devoted to it on the three broadcast networks' evening news programs the night before: Zero.

House Republicans should use their committee chairmanships to let Lerner exercise her right to confront Salvi and her many other accusers. If she were invited back to Congress to respond concerning Salvi, would she again refuse to testify by invoking her Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination? There is one way to find out.

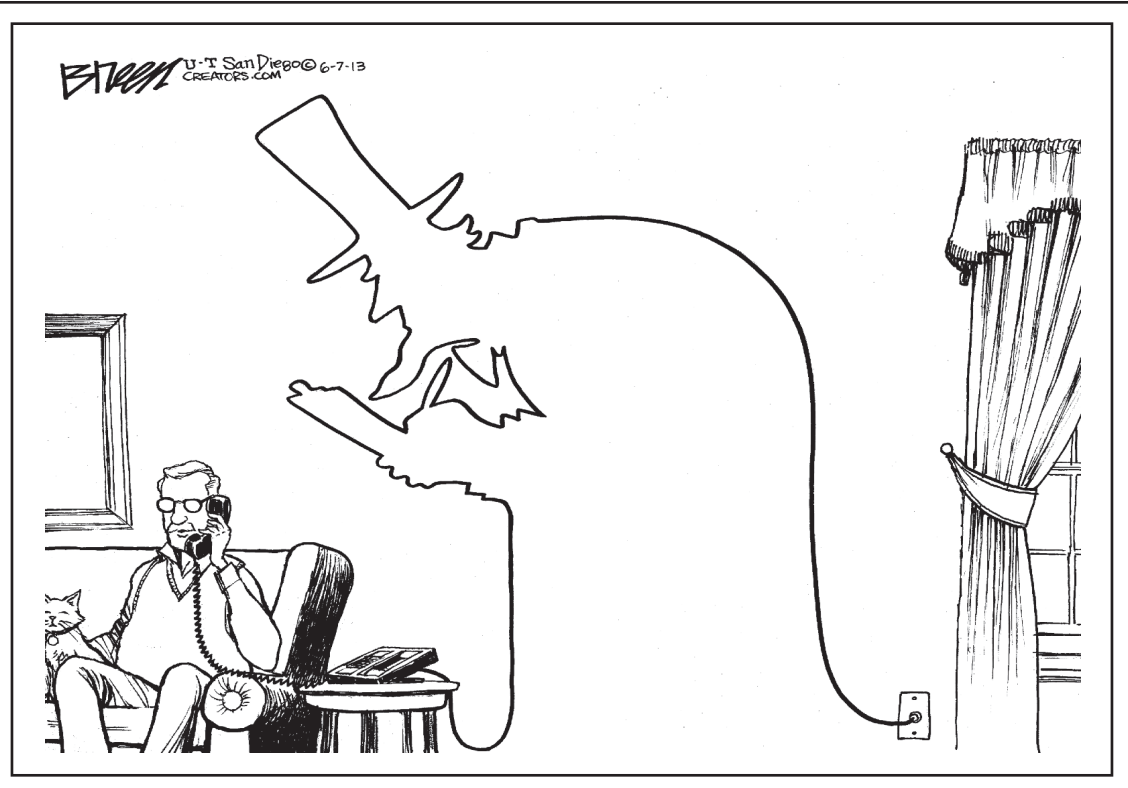

Durbin, the second-ranking Senate Democrat who will seek a fourth term next year, defeated Salvi by 15 points. He probably would have won without the assistance of Lerner and of the campaign "reforms" that have produced the FEC's mare's nest of regulations and speech police that lend themselves to abuses like those Salvi experienced. In 2010, Durbin wrote a letter urging Lerner's IRS division to pay special attention to a political advocacy group supporting conservatives.

Lerner, it is prudent to assume, is one among thousands like her who infest the regulatory state. She is not just a bureaucratic bully and a slithering partisan. Now she also is a national security problem because she is contributing to a comprehensive distrust of government.

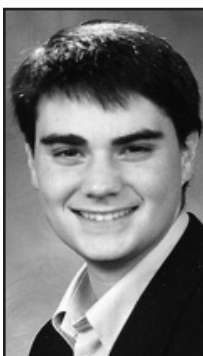

The case for the National Security Agency's gathering of metadata is: America is threatened not by a nation but by a network, dispersed and largely invisible until made visible by connecting dots. The network cannot help but leave, as we all do daily, a digital trail of cellphone, credit card and Internet uses. The dots are in such data; algorithms connect them. The technological gathering of 300 billion bits of data is less menacing than the gathering of 300 by bureaucrats. Mass gatherings by the executive branch twice receive judicial scrutiny, once concerning phone and Internet usages, another concerning the content of messages.

The case against the NSA is: Lois Lerner and others of her ilk.

Government requires trust. Government by progressives, however, demands such inordinate amounts of trust that the demand itself should provoke distrust. Progressivism can be distilled into two words: "Trust us." The antecedent of the pronoun is: The wise, disinterested experts through whom the vast powers of the regulatory state's executive branch will deliver progress for our own good, as the executive branch understands this, whether or not we understand it. Lois Lerner is the scowling face of this state, which has earned Americans' distrust.

Reasons to worry about federal surveillance

BEN SHAPIRO

With leaker Edward Snowden revealing to the world that the National Security Agency has been both monitoring phone records for all Americans and obtaining emails, videos, voice chats and other private communications between American citizens and those outside the United States under the so-called PRISM program, controversy has broken out over the scope of government surveillance.

Many on the right and the left have argued that these programs are necessary to curb terrorism. Both Democratic Senator Dianne Feinstein of California and Republican Speaker of the House John Boehner of Ohio have proclaimed that Snowden is a traitor for revealing the existence of the programs. Both Republican House Intelligence Committee Chair Mike Rogers of Illinois and President Barack Obama say that the programs have stopped terrorist attacks.

Meanwhile, others argue that these programs do not threaten basic civil liberties at all, and that Americans have nothing to fear. David Brooks of the New York Times says that the real threat to Americans isn't surveillance, but cynicism: "Big Brother is not the only danger facing the country. Another is the rising tide of distrust, the corrosive spread of cynicism, the fraying of the social fabric ..."

The truth is far less black and white than all of this. These programs may stop terror attacks; it is likely they have done so. But are they necessary to stop terror attacks, or are they merely the most convenient means for the government to do so? We all want Americans to be safe. But we also would like our emails to be private. Are those two goals mutually exclusive?

Here are the top seven reasons to worry about these federal surveillance programs.

1. It's the federal government, and the federal government cannot be trusted with unlimited personal information. As we've seen from the IRS scandal, actors at any level of government can use information to target political opposition. Distrust of government isn't baseless cynicism. It's realism. The government is filled with human beings -- 1.4 million, at last count, who have top secret security clearances. Some are bound to be nasty. After all, if Boehner and Feinstein are right, and Snowden is a traitor, he had access to all that information, too.

2. Blanket surveillance does not mesh with the Constitution. The Fourth Amendment is quite clear on the notion that search and seizure must not be unreasonable. It is difficult to think of something more unreasonable than searching the private phone records and digital information of citizens who are suspected of nothing.

3. Where does government power stop? What information does the government not have a right to see at this point? Obamacare has made the government part of our health care decisions. The IRS controls all of our financial information. The NSA apparently sees everything else.

4. The anti-terror rationale for violation of rights is identical to the rationale for gun control. Many of the same folks on the right now defending NSA surveillance object to blanket gun laws that affect the rights of hundreds of millions. The argument on the left is simple: To save one life, we'll take as many guns as we have to. Flip this argument to terror, and suddenly many on the right make that exact argument. It's bad policy on both fronts.

5. It's an excuse to treat terror in politically correct fashion. There are many who say that we have accepted blanket screening at airports and should therefore accept blanket screening of personal information. That presumes that blanket screening at airports isn't asinine. It is. Profiling behavior and associations should be the basis for law enforcement. The government argues that a panopticon national security apparatus keeps Americans safest. But that ignores the fact that panopticon capabilities do not necessarily translate into panopticon effectiveness.

6. Centralization of information is a magnet for foreign hacking. Reportedly, much of this NSA information will be kept at a centralized location in Utah. Recently, the Chinese government has been hacking into American governmental installations including the Federal Reserve and the Pentagon. Keeping our information available for download by a creative foreign government is a recipe for disaster.

7. The nature of Americanism is changing in very nasty ways thanks to growth of government. The debate about rights versus safety is a valuable one. But too many Americans are now thinking in terms of "needs" vs. rights. We have heard politicians ask whether we truly need to be free from government surveillance; these same politicians often ask whether we need a certain level of income, or need AR-15s. We may not need those things, but we have a right to them. The moment America becomes a "needs" country in which the government unilaterally decides what we need and regulates everything else we cease to be America.

OTHER VOICES

The Columbus Dispatch, June 10

Someone whose best-known recent accomplishment is helping to spread false accounts about a terrorist attack on Americans might not seem like a natural choice for the post of national security adviser. But for President Barack Obama, for whom politics and agenda trump everything else, Susan Rice proved her readiness for the position by faithfully sticking to the administration's talking points on the attack in Benghazi, Libya, last September, even as those concocting the story about it arising from protests over a YouTube video knew it to be false. Rice's new job is widely seen as a reward for a key political adviser and ally, and a consolation prize for her having to withdraw from consideration for the post of secretary of state as Hillary Clinton stepped down. Unlike that post, the job of national security adviser does not require Senate confirmation — something that would have proved an uphill battle for Rice in the wake of the Benghazi affair.

The Rice appointment was simply the latest poke-in-the-eye personnel move by Obama, who shows little interest in trying to court consensus through more moderate, uncontroversial picks. ... America's security clearly remains threatened both abroad and at home despite the fact that Osama bin Laden has been killed. The nation needs a national security adviser who understands that and speaks the truth, even if it means having to go against the political will of her boss.

Boardman High School band director goes national

By AMY LEIGH WILSON
Special to the Salem News

“What a band!”
Those three words let musicians in Boardman know that their band director is proud of their performance.

“What a teacher” might be the words used by the three people who nominated Boardman High School Director of Bands Tom Ruggieri for the first-ever Grammy Foundation Music Educator Award. The foundation will honor one music teacher in the country and offer him a trip to Los Angeles to accept the award, attend the Grammy Awards ceremony, and receive a $10,000 honorarium. The nine finalists will receive a $1,000 honorarium, and the schools of all 10 finalists will receive matching grants. Ruggieri is currently a quarterfinalist for the award and semifinalists will be announced in August.

The idea behind the award was for professional musicians to thank the teachers who inspired them, said Ruggieri.

His son, Nico, was watching the Grammys on TV this year when they announced the new award.

“I was in my office working and overheard the announcement, when Nico said, ‘Dad, did you hear that?’”

One of his nominators, former student Rebecca Crowley, “must have been watching and heard about it because I got an email within five to 10 minutes after they opened nominations” saying she nominated me, Ruggieri said.

Once a teacher is nominated, the Grammy Foundation sends him an email encouraging him to apply for the award. In addition to Crowley, Ruggieri was nominated by current band parent Lori Ann Filicky and former student Katie DiCola. That’s high praise for a band director.

“Teachers don’t do this for the rewards,” Ruggieri said. “I feel like I’ve already won when people say, ‘You were the first person I thought of when I heard about the award.’”

Explaining why Crowley, a 2001 BHS graduate and band member who now holds a doctoral degree in music performance (flute) and teaches flute and piano in northern Virginia, nominated Ruggieri, she said, “I have had a large number of fantastic teachers and professors in music over the years. But Mr. Ruggieri really stood out to me as an educator who cares so much about music and his students,” she said.

Likewise, Filicky said, “I cannot even imagine anyone more deserving of this award. I believe many of his students who are pursuing music careers are doing so because of his positive influence. For students who are not following a career path to music, Mr. Ruggieri also serves as an excellent role model and his life lessons provide young people with much wisdom for the future.”

When he’s not in the classroom, Ruggieri continues to make music. He plays drums with Backbeat, a local band that plays parties and weddings, and has stepped into the recording studio and on stage to play percussion with local musicians like Bambo Kino and Joe Augustine, while also performing with national acts like The Letterman, The Marvellettes and The Drifters. The jazz lover still makes the rounds to local clubs with the John Reese Project. He said that being a professional musician helps make him a better teacher.

“I hope I never stop playing because it gives me credibility,” Ruggieri said.

With his own musical career, time spent teaching band and jazz classes at BHS, hours devoted to arranging music and band formations for marching season, and drafting emails and tweets to keep band families informed, it’s a wonder Ruggieri has any down time. “Fishing is my other passion,” he said. “My wife even knows now when to pull me aside and say, ‘Hey, when are you planning some time to go fishing?’”

Of course, family is a priority. He and his wife, Patty, have a daughter, Rachel, who just finished her freshman year at Kent State University, and their son, Nico just finished his first year at Boardman High.

Ruggieri lights up when he talks about his family. Ruggieri’s father also was a drummer and now his son is following in their footsteps.

“He’s going to play drums way better than I am. He’s amazing,” he said in an Internet interview with Tommy Chris.

Born in Italy, Ruggieri came to Youngstown when he was six months old. He graduated from Boardman High School and Youngstown State University with a degree in music education. He also has a master’s degree.

Just as he was finishing YSU, longtime Boardman Band Director Thomas Groth called his former student to say he was taking a sabbatical, and Ruggieri interviewed for the temporary position.

“I took a big chance taking a six-month job, but I thought it was worth it,” Ruggieri said.

“I absolutely loved it,” he said. After spending two years at Liberty High School, his alma mater called again as Groth announced he’d be retiring in 1999. Without hesitation, Ruggieri applied and got the job.

“I am lucky to get paid for doing what I adore,” he said. And with three nominations, he’s certainly adored by his students and their families.

“As a teacher, he has such a profound influence on his students, whether they realize it or not,” Filicky said. “He has such a passion and love for both music and teaching. His passion is what drives his students to succeed as musicians.”

Boardman High School Director of Bands Tom Ruggieri has been directing with pride and passion during his 14 years at the school. He has recently been named a quarterfinalist for the Grammy Foundation’s first-ever Music Educator Award. (Salem News photo by Jim McCreary, Town Crier correspondent)

Across the nation, 30,000 teachers were nominated for the award, according to the Grammy Foundation, and 217 have been named quarterfinalists, including six other teachers from Ohio.

“I have fond memories of him saying ‘What a band!’ after many of our performances. I am thrilled that he is a quarterfinalist,” said Crowley.

Local pianists to perform at West Branch

BELOIT — Local pianists Carson Weingart and Jarred Walker will take the stage next week at West Branch to present a pops concert on two pianos. “An Evening with Carson and Jarred: Act 2,” will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday and Friday in the West Branch Community Auditorium. Admission to the concert is $5, with proceeds from the tickets benefiting the West Branch Alumni Association. Tickets will only be sold at the door.

Last summer, over 700 local community members enjoyed the pops concert, which featured music made popular by the renowned piano duo Ferrante and Teicher. This year promises even more fun and entertainment, with all-new music from “The Lion King,” “Fiddler on the Roof,” the Carpenters, John Williams, Vince Guaraldi and Billy Joel, as well as Ferrante and Teicher favorites like “Theme from the Apartment” and “Theme from the Godfather.”

“We were so thrilled with the great turnout at our concert last year, that we decided to do the concert two nights this year,” said Jarred Walker, who has studied music education at Bowling Green State University.

“We’ve also got some very special surprises in store this year,” said Carson Weingart, who is majoring in piano performance at Ball State University. “If you liked Act I last year, you’ll love Act II this year.”

Both Weingart and Walker are 2010 graduates of West Branch High School. CDs will also be on sale at the concert. A reception sponsored by the West Branch Alumni Association will follow.

The West Branch Community Auditorium is handicap accessible.

HSCC will open Animal Resource Complex in July

SALEM — The Humane Society of Columbiana County (HSCC) will open its Animal Resource Complex inside the former Habitat for Humanity Re-Store building next month. The building is located on the south end of the bypass at 721 E. Pidgeon Road.

In the coming months, HSCC plans to introduce weekday indoor walking schedules, pup play time, educational programs to people and groups along with obedience classes by The Learning Dog Training and Enrichment Center, in the 6,000-square-foot building.

Also on the drawing board is a pet food pantry to help pet owners who find themselves on hard times.

HSCC board president and volunteer Jenny Pike said plans for this facility have been in the works for a couple years.

"We just couldn't afford to build nor could we be able to find a suitable building to lease, until now," Pike wrote in a news release. "When the Re-Store announced that they were relocating, we acted immediately.

"Education and outreach are important components to our mission and this affords us the opportunity to do more of both."

Director and humane agent Heather Jurina added that, "When we are responding to humane calls, we find in many cases that pet owners really want to do the right thing for their pets, but many times are financially unable to provide for their pet or simply need educated on proper care. The ARC will give us an opportunity to help them in a variety of ways in addition to providing area pet owners training and socialization opportunities.

"We also have a climate controlled exercise area and private pet party location. We are very excited to also be able to reach out to school aged children in order to teach them proper pet care and interaction behavior at an early age. Since the building was originally designed as a grocery warehouse, our parking lot is quite large."

The complex is scheduled to open in July after undergoing minor improvements that will include movable interior barriers to allow for different usages and pet safety zones for entering and exciting the building.

According to Jurina, one staff member has been hired and volunteers will be needed not only during the renovation but for a variety of roles after the facility opens. Advertising and sponsorship opportunities exist for inside the complex as does a memorial wall for pets who have been loved and lost.

HSCC, a 501(c)3 non-profit corporation, will continue to operate its ROCC, Rescue and Adoption Center around the corner at 1825 S. Lincoln Ave. For more information, call 330-332-2600 or go to www.columbianahumane.org.

Bipartisan bill tackles Ohio Medicaid program

COLUMBUS (AP) — Ohio lawmakers introduced a bipartisan proposal Thursday aimed at curbing Medicaid costs and making the health program more efficient, as they try to find common ground on the issue.

Republican Gov. John Kasich's budget proposal initially called for expanding the Medicaid program to provide health coverage to more low-income Ohioans. But GOP leaders stripped the expansion measure from the House version of the state spending plan in April, and it's since remained out of the $61.7 billion, two-year budget.

The federal-state Medicaid program for poor and disabled people provides coverage for one of every five residents in Ohio. The measure introduced in the House and Senate on Thursday would neither expand the program nor cut beneficiaries. The bill sponsors described the legislation as a starting point for discussions.

"While I am encouraged by the progress we have made, there is still much work to be done," state Sen. Capri Cafaro, a Hubbard Democrat, said in a written statement.

The House Finance Committee plans to hold hearings on the bill next week.

"We have two objectives: to bend the cost curve down without reducing the services people currently receive, and to help move more citizens up and out of poverty through workforce readiness and the removal of barriers," House Finance Chairman Ron Amstutz, a Wooster Republican, said in a written statement.

The bill instructs the state's Medicaid director to limit the growth of the program's costs in a way that would improve the physical and mental health of recipients. It also would create a Medicaid oversight committee.

Lawmakers want to cut down on the number of times Medicaid patients are re-admitted to hospitals or use the emergency room when it's avoidable. Other changes would be aimed at removing barriers that impede a beneficiary's ability to transfer to lower cost Medicaid services.

A working group of lawmakers has been separately reviewing what changes could be made to the Medicaid program.

Medicaid expansion is one of the key components of Democratic President Barack Obama's health care law.

Roughly 366,000 Ohioans would be newly eligible for coverage beginning in 2014 by expanding Medicaid. The federal government would pay the entire cost of the expansion for the first three years, gradually phasing down to 90 percent — still well above Ohio's current level of 64 percent.

Panel OKs rules for exotic animals

COLUMBUS (AP) — Owners of exotic animals in Ohio will be required to meet new caging, safety and caretaking standards under regulations approved Wednesday by state officials.

The regulations come as the state prepares to begin issuing new permits this fall to wildlife owners, who must obtain the authorization document by 2014 in order to keep their animals.

Owners will have to pass background checks, pay permit fees, obtain liability insurance or surety bonds and show inspectors they can properly contain their animals. Ohio officials could seize the animals if owners are found housing them without a permit.

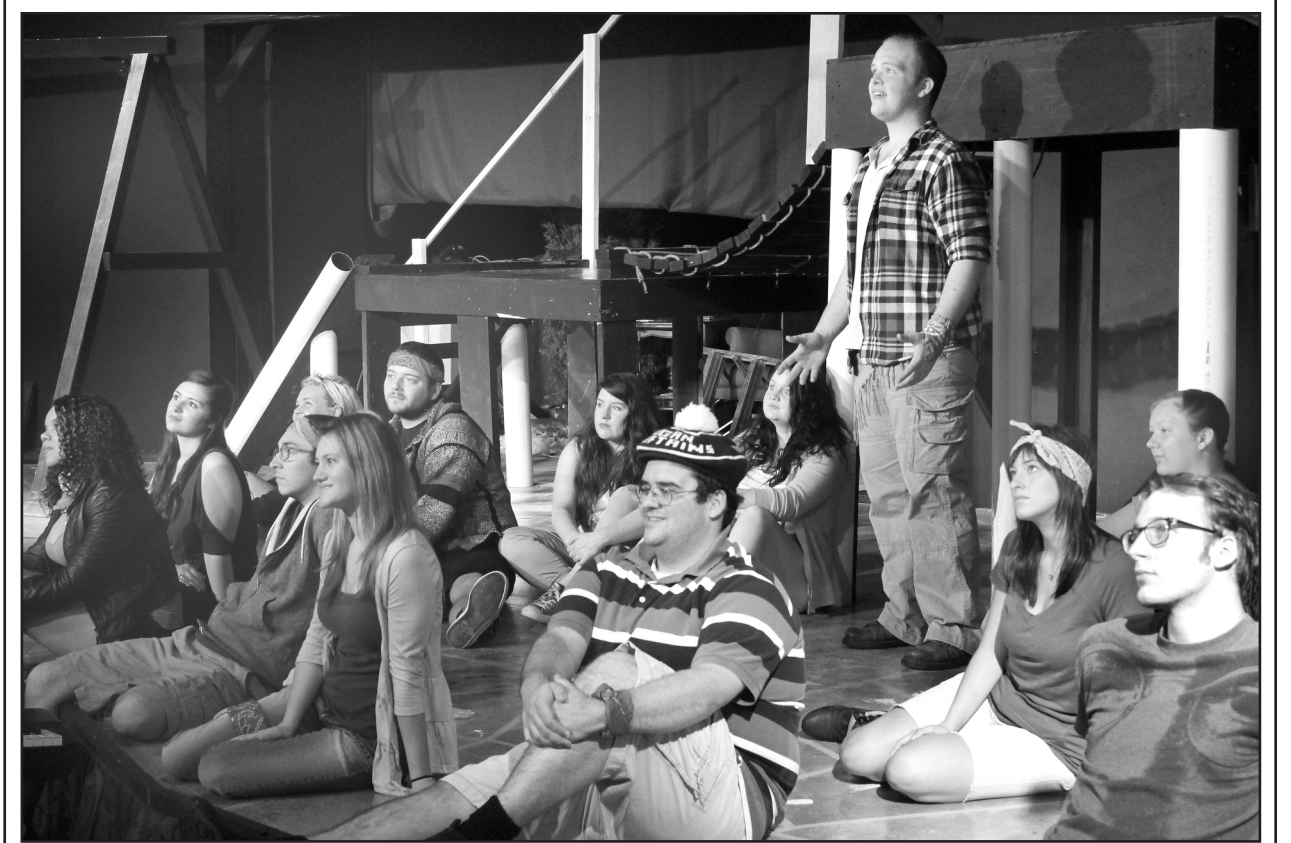

Ohio strengthened its regulation of exotic animal ownership after a Zanesville man released dozens of his animals in 2011 from his eastern Ohio farm before committing suicide. Authorities killed most of the animals, including black bears, Bengal tigers and African lions, fearing for the public's safety.

The new law took effect in September 2012, although some provisions have yet to kick in. Those include the permit process that goes into place in October.

Under that process, owners who want to keep their animals must obtain new state-issued permits by Jan. 1, 2014. The law exempts sanctuaries, research institutions and facilities accredited by the two national zoo groups.

The Ohio Association of Animal Owners participated in a task force that helped develop the guidelines. But Polly Britton, the organization's lobbyist, objected to the regulations during the hearing of the legislative Joint Committee on Agency Rule Review.

The permit for owners who intend to breed and sell their animals will be different from the one for those who plan to keep their wildlife as pets. Yet, Britton said, one of the purposes of issuing different permits is defeated by a rule asking the owners of to-be-bred wildlife to certify that the animals have been sterilized. Pets must also be neutered under the regulations.

Keep on truckin'

Top photo, this truck was on its way to the Mangus well site in the 37000 block of Butcher Road and had to negotiate this tight left hand turn from Egypt Road onto Butcher Road Thursday afternoon. Salem Township trustees were concerned about the sharp radius and the elevation change which did not turn out to be a problem as seen here. A flag-car driver said there was more of a problem with the crew living quarter trailers making the turn. (Salem News photo by Larry Shields)

New Waterford Council approves RUMA for stretch of Crestview Road

By LARRY SHIELDS
Staff writer

NEW WATERFORD - Council approved a road use maintenance agreement with Pennant Midstream, LLC for .43 miles of Crestview Road inside the village limits during Tuesday's meeting.

Mayor Shane Patrone said the Pennant Midstream will use a portion of the road as a secondary route when it lays pipe lines as part of 50 miles of 20-inch gathering pipeline facilities is installing in northeast Ohio and western Pennsylvania.

It is also constructing a cryogenic NGL processing plant in Ohio with initial capacity of 200 million cubic feet (mcf) per day operated by NiSource Midstream Services, LLC.

Pennant is also reviewing multiple downstream NGL options with several parties, including the development of its own fractionation facilities, according to a press release.

"They were under the assumption that Crestview Road was entirely in the county," Patrone said and council passed the RUMA with a unanimous 6-0 vote and without a third-party bonding agreement.

Council also approved the single bid received of $5,580 from Myers Equipment in Canfield for a 1995 Ford Bronco ambulance with 58,000 miles on it that was recently replaced by a new vehicle.

Council also tabled two ordinances regarding the alternative method of apportioning the Local Government Fund until the June 25 meeting.

Patrone said he didn't have enough information but expected to have it for a finance committee meeting and council would "probably" meet in special session on the issue.

In other business, Administrator Fred Fink said the water and wastewater plant was "running well" while they are still dealing with large amounts of sludge.

But, Fink added, "it is showing signs of improvement."

The dechlorination system, filter material and lighting at both plants are set to come on line and the electrical work for the pavilion at the church is completed.

Fink said the survey for installation of electric and water lines is complete and a report will be forwarded to the Ohio EPA for a permit.

When that is received, Fink said the job will be bid out.

Also, all the streets and parking lots scheduled for the chip and seal program are ready to go, Fink said, adding, "we used two loads of cold patch on potholes,

(and) will stay with patching."

The road department is still working on sealing cracks on state Route 46 and Fink said with the condition it is in, "we can probably schedule (work) every other year."

He also said the repairs recommended by the park committee were completed except for the ditch work which was being worked at the time of the report.

In other business, council voted unanimously to donate $300 to supply the pond with fish for the fishing tournament on July 6.

Penguins sign Evgeni Malkin to 8-year extension

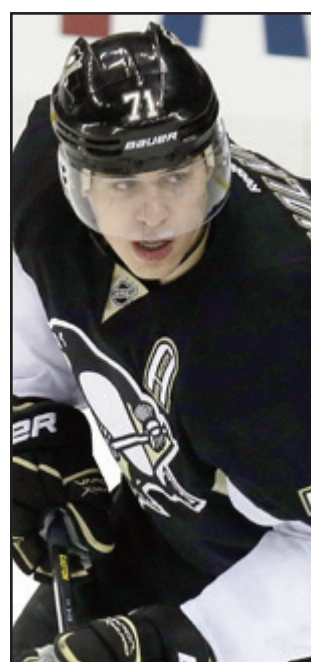

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Penguins are keeping hockey's best one-two punch together through their primes and beyond. A day after signing coach Dan Bylsma to a two-year contract extension, the Penguins and star forward Evgeni Malkin agreed to an eight-year deal that will keep the 2012 NHL MVP and franchise cornerstone Sidney Crosby in the fold well into the next decade. The $76-million deal begins with the 2014-15 season and will carry an average salary cap hit of $9.5 million, a little bit less than the $10.6 million Crosby will average over the first nine years of the 12-

The $76-million deal begins with the 2014-15 season and will carry an average salary cap hit of $9.5 million year extension he signed last summer. It's a matter of semantics, really, for two of the game's biggest stars. "I think it's good," Malkin said. "I like to play with him. I think he is best player in the world." A title the 26-year-old Malkin has toyed with at times during his seven seasons in Pittsburgh. The second overall pick behind Alex Ovechkin in the 2004 NHL Draft won the Rookie of the Year in 2007 and has twice captured the Art Ross Trophy given to the NHL's leading scorer. He was named league MVP in 2012 when he collected 109 points and helped carry the Penguins as Crosby continued to recover from concussion-like symptoms. Malkin's numbers dipped this spring during the lockout-shortened, 48-game season. A concussion and a lingering shoulder injury limited the Russian star to just 33 points in 31 games. He bounced back during the playoffs, collecting four goals and 12 assists during Pittsburgh's romp through the New York Islanders and Ottawa Senators but was held scoreless — as was Crosby — during a four-game sweep by the Boston Bruins in the Eastern Conference finals. The stunning collapse led to a few days of anxiety for the team that cruised to the second-best record in the league. Rather than panic after falling to a lower-seeded team for the fourth straight year, Pittsburgh decided to keep Bylsma, who has developed a close relationship with Malkin since taking over in February, 2009. The fact the announcement of Malkin's extension came less than 24 hours after Bylsma was given a very public vote of confidence is hardly a coincidence. "I like Dan," said Malkin, who shouldered much of the blame for

U.S. OPEN — MERION GOLF CLUB, ARDMORE, Pa.

Long day and the lead for Lefty Mickelson matched his best opening round in U.S. Open

ARDMORE, Pa. (AP) — Even for Phil Mickelson, his path to the top of the leaderboard Thursday in the U.S. Open was unconventional. He traveled about 2,400 miles in the air and 7,000 yards on the ground. He took a short nap on his private jet from San Diego and another one during a rain delay when he found a secluded corner of the library room in the Merion clubhouse. He carried five wedges but no driver. Some 17 hours later, Mickelson had a 3-under 67 to match his best opening round in the U.S. Open. Mickelson returned from his daughter's eighth-grade graduation about 3 1/2 hours before his tee time. He three-putted his first hole for a bogey and didn't give back a shot the rest of the day at Merion, which proved plenty tough by yielding only one other round under par to the 78 players who completed the first round.

Because of two rain delays, the first round won't be completed until Friday morning. Mickelson won't have to tee it up again for another 24 hours.

Enough time to fly back to San Diego? "I don't want to push it, no," Mickelson said with a tired smile. Tiger Woods faced a tougher road. He appeared to hurt his left hand after trying to gouge out of the deep rough on the opening hole. He grimaced and shook his left wrist again after hitting a 5-wood out of the rough on the fifth hole. He already had three bogeys though five holes before starting to make up ground with a 50-foot birdie putt on the par-4 sixth hole. Woods, however, failed to take advantage on the short stretch of holes in the middle of the round, and he was shaking his hand again after shots out of the rough on the 10th and twice on the 11th. He was 2-over for his round and had a 4-foot par putt on the 11th when play was stopped for the day.

For Mickelson, this could be the start of yet another chance to win the major championship he wants so dearly. Or maybe he's setting himself up for more heartache. Mickelson already has been a runner-up a record five times in the U.S. Open.

"I've got a lot of holes to play tomorrow," Woods said. "And, hopefully, I can play a little better than I did today."

Luke Donald was 4-under through 13 holes, making one last birdie before leaving the course. The first round was to resume at 7:15 a.m. Friday, and the forecast called for drier weather for the rest of the week.

Masters champion Adam Scott, playing with Woods and Rory McIlroy, was 3-under through 11 holes, while defending U.S. Open champion Webb Simpson was 2-under through eight holes. McIlroy was 1-under.

Lee Westwood got the full Merion experience. He was 3-under when his approach on the 12th hit the wicker basket — the signature at Merion, replacing traditional flags — and bounced off the green, leading to a double bogey.

For Mickelson, this could be the start of yet another chance to win the major championship he wants so dearly. Or maybe he's setting himself up for more heartache. He already has been a runner-up a record five times in the U.S. Open. "If I'm able — and I believe I will — if I'm able to ultimately win a U.S. Open, I would say that it's great," Mickelson said. "Because I will have had ... a win and five seconds. But if I never get that win, then it would be a bit heart-breaking."

Nicolas Colsaerts of Belgium, the only other player from the morning wave to break par, picked up

Key hole in US Open

ARDMORE, Pa. (AP) — A glance at the key hole Thursday in the U.S. Open. HOLE: No. 13 YARDAGE: 102 PAR: 3 STROKE AVERAGE: 2.7 RANK: 18th KEY FACT: Phil Mickelson made birdie on the short 13th to get to even par, and then played the rest of the way 3 under. Luke Donald also birdied the hole to top the leaderboard at 4 under before darkness suspended play. A total of 44 players made birdie on the par 3.

Fans flee threatening weather

ARDMORE, Pa. (AP) — The horn that suspended play at the U.S. Open also turned out to be the official signal to shop. The real early leader at Merion Golf Club was the merchandise tent — all three of them. Those crackles of thunder led to plenty of ka-chinging at the stores. Storms were expected in the Philadelphia area for most of Thursday, and when the alert sounded at 8:36 a.m., thousands of fans left their perches in the grandstands and went in search of souvenirs — $45 umbrellas and $27 hats. "We were so excited but we really didn't even get to see anything," said Samantha Jaffee, holding $88 worth of Open items.

Big 3 help Heat even NBA Finals with Spurs

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — LeBron James was better as promised. Dwyane Wade and Chris Bosh were the best they've been since the playoffs started.

Riding big performances from their Big Three, the Miami Heat tied the NBA Finals with a 109-93 victory over the San Antonio Spurs on Thursday night in Game 4. James had 33 points and 11 rebounds after failing to break 20 points in any of the first three games of the series, and Wade scored 32 points, 11 more than his previous high this postseason.

Bosh matched his playoff high with 20 points and grabbed 13 rebounds, he and Wade supplying the baskets that finally put the Spurs away for good midway through the fourth quarter.

Just like they have for the last five months, the Heat bounced back from a loss with a victory — a lopsided one at that. They are 12-0 after losses since Jan. 10, outscoring opponents by 19.8 points in the previous 11 victories.

"Right now it's a three-game series," Wade said. "Two great ballclubs, we just want to come out again and play well."

Tim Duncan scored 20 points for the Spurs, who have one more game here on Sunday. They fell to 10-3 at home in finals games, failing to back up their 113-77 victory in Game 3

Pirates manage only 3 hits in 10-0 loss to Giants

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Charlie Morton didn't view his return to the majors after undergoing Tommy John surgery as a make or break proposition.

"I didn't look to this start to validate that I'm back," Morton said. "It's part of the process, a long process."

One that's not nearly complete after the Pittsburgh Pirates right-hander gave up four runs in five innings of a 10-0 loss to San Francisco on Thursday night. Morton surrendered seven hits, walked one and struck out five in his first start since May 29, 2012.

"I wish it had gone better but I think I can take quite a few positives," Morton said.

1958 — Tommy Bolt beats Gary Player by four strokes to win the U.S. Open.

1958 — Britain beats the United States 4-3 at Wimbledon to win the Wrightman Cup, the first win for Britain since 1930.

1981 — Donna Capani Young wins the LPGA championship by one stroke over Jerilyn Britz and Pat Meyers.

1987 — The Los Angeles Lakers win their 10th NBA championship with a 106-93 victory over the Boston Celtics in Game 6 at the Forum.

1990 — Vinnie Johnson scores 15 points in the fourth quarter, including a 15-footer with seven-tenths of a second left, to give the Detroit Pistons a 92-90 win and the NBA title over Portland in five games.

1991 — Leroy Burrell sets a world record in the U.S. Championships in New York with a 9.90-second clocking in the men's 100 meters. Carl Lewis, who held the record at 9.92 since the 1988 Olympics, finishes second.

1994 — The New York Rangers hold off the Vancouver Canucks 3-2 in Game 7 for their first Stanley Cup in 54 years. MVP Brian Leetch, Adam Graves and Mark Messier score goals and Mike Richter makes 28 saves for New York.

1995 — The Houston Rockets complete the unlikeliest of NBA championship repeats, sweeping the Orlando Magic with a 113-101 victory. MVP Hakeem Olajuwon finishes with 35 points and 15 rebounds.

1998 — Michael Jordan scores 45 points, stealing the ball from Karl Malone and hitting a jumper with 5.2 seconds left to give Chicago an 87-86 win and a 4-2 series victory over Utah for a sixth NBA title.

2005 — Asafa Powell breaks the world record in the 100 meters with a 9.77 clocking at Olympic Stadium in Athens, Greece. Powell shaves one-hundredth of a second off Tim Montgomery's record of 9.78 set in Paris in 2002 — a mark that would later be wiped out because of doping charges.

2005 — Michelle Wie becomes the first female player to qualify for an adult male U.S. Golf Association championship, tying for first place in a 36-hole U.S. Amateur Public Links sectional qualifying tournament at Belle Vernon, Pa. Wie earns one of only two spots available in the 85-player qualifier for the U.S. Amateur Public Links on July 11-16.

2007 — The San Antonio Spurs, who bounced over from the ABA in 1976, move in among the NBA's greatest franchises with an 83-82 victory for a sweep of Cleveland in the NBA Finals. With their fourth championship since 1999 — and third in five years — the Spurs join the Celtics, Lakers and Bulls as the only teams in NBA history to win four titles.

2007 — Sidney Crosby skates away with the Hart Trophy, becoming the NHL's youngest MVP since Wayne Gretzky. The 19-year-old Pittsburgh captain gets 91 first-place votes and 1,225 points in a poll of the Professional Hockey Writers' Association.

birdies on the short seventh and eighth holes for a 69.

Former Masters champion Charl Schwartzel, Tim Clark, Rickie Fowler, Jason Day and Jerry Kelly were the only others who at least matched par at 70. Clark and Kelly were at 2 under deep in their rounds until running into trouble, which isn't hard to do in the U.S. Open, especially at Merion. Clark took a double bogey-bogey stretch in the middle of his back nine. Kelly was one shot behind Mickelson until a double bogey on the 18th hole.

"It's a lot tougher than they say it is," Schwartzel said.

It doesn't take much — just two holes for Sergio Garcia, who found Merion far more daunting than the few wisecracks from the gallery. Garcia received mostly warm applause, with some barely audible boos from the grandstand when he started his round on No. 11. It was his first time competing in America since his public spat with Woods took a bad turn when he jokingly said he would have Woods over for dinner during the U.S. Open and serve fried chicken.

"There were a couple here and there," Garcia said about some jeers. "But I felt the people were very nice for the whole day. I think that almost all of them were behind me and that was nice to see."

They saw him hit his tee shot out of bounds on No. 14 right before the first rain delay, leading to double bogey. Then, he hooked his next shot out of bounds and hit a bunker shot over the green on his way to a quadruple-bogey 8 at No. 15. Despite being 6-over on those two holes, he rallied for a 73.

Mickelson, meanwhile, looked as though he could play this golf course in his sleep. And he nearly did.

With two holes remaining, he hit 5-iron into 30 feet on the 237-yard ninth hole and told caddie Jim "Bones" Mackay that he was starting to hit the ball. Despite the constant smiling, Mickelson is intense inside the ropes, and Mackay told him to stop thinking about his swing, his next shot, the course or anything else related to golf during the walk to the green. Lefty rolled in the right-to-left breaking putt for another birdie.

"Being able to tune in and tune out was kind of nice the last hole or two," Mickelson said. "It's been a long day."

The only other time Mickelson opened with a 67 in the U.S. Open was in 1999 at Pinehurst No. 2, and his oldest daughter was part of that story, too. Mickelson carried a pager with him that week because his wife was due with their first child. He finished one shot behind when the late Payne Stewart holed a 15-foot par putt on the last hole, and Amanda was born the next day.

Mickelson was always going to be home before the U.S. Open because Amanda, who turns 14 next week, was chosen to be a featured speaker at her graduation. He left Merion on Monday, a day earlier than planned, when more heavy rain washed out most of the practice round. Besides, Mickelson felt like he knew the course well enough from his scouting trip last week.

"She told me that it's fine. 'Stay, it's the U.S. Open. I know how much you care about it.' And I told her that I want to be there," Mickelson said. "I don't want to miss her graduation. She spent nine years at that school. And she's worked very hard and I'm very proud of her."

The ceremony was at 6 p.m. PDT. Mickelson was on the plane two hours later, landing in Philadelphia about 3:30 a.m. He had a few hours of sleep on the plane, and then played five holes before the rain delay. He found a few cushions for a makeshift bed in the clubhouse library.

Despite his four birdies, including a 25-foot putt that fell on its last turn at No. 1, Mickelson saved his round with some crucial pars.

He missed the par-3 third green to the right, in fluffy grass down the hill, and hit a flop shot that landed on the collar and stopped 5 feet from the cup. He caught a break when his tee shot went into the hazard left of the fifth fairway, about a foot away from dropping into the small stream. He got that out, hit wedge to 8 feet and made a difficult right-to-left putt. And on the next hole, he swung hard to generate height and spin out of the bunker, the only way to get the ball close. He made an 8-footer for par.

Mickelson hit 9-iron to 2 feet on the seventh hole for birdie, and holed that 30-foot putt on the ninth.

And then, it was time to rest. "He had a crazy 24 hours," said Keegan Bradley, playing alongside Mickelson and Steve Stricker. "Sometimes that helps, not thinking about it."

that was the third-most lopsided game in the history of the championship series.

James insisted he would be better after shooting 7 of 21 from the field with no free throws in that game, saying he was the star and it was his job to lead his team.

But while James — and millions of critics worldwide — wanted to pile all the pressure on the league's MVP, it was Wade on Wednesday who said it was the Heat's three All-Stars who had to lead them together, or there would be no championship.

He was right. And now those championship hopes are right back on track.

Tony Parker had 15 points and nine assists for the Spurs, who made a finals-record 16 3-pointers on Tuesday but got up only 16 attempts in this one. Gary Neal scored 13 points and Danny Green had 10, solid nights but nothing like when they combined for 13 3-pointers two nights earlier.

The Heat guaranteed they will get at least one more game on their home floor. Game 6 will be Tuesday night, where they could have a chance to clinch a second straight championship.

Wade, battling right knee pain throughout the spring, put it away for Miami early in the fourth. He followed a basket with a steal and dunk, pushing the lead to 90-81, and after he made another jumper, Bosh scored the next six Heat points, taking the load off of James.

The Heat switched their lineup, inserting Mike Miller, who made 10 of his 11 shots, going 9 of 10 on 3-pointers, in the first three games of the series. They changed uniforms, too, switching from their road reds to their blacks.

The only change they really needed was in the performances of their Big Three.

James called it a "must-win" and it probably was: No team has overcome a 3-1 deficit in the finals.

And the way their three stars played, they couldn't lose.

The Heat blocked shots, made stops, and occasionally flopped, playing with renewed aggression after what coach Erik Spoelstra called a "miserable" day of watching and analyzing their passive performance from Tuesday.

to get settled in. Injuries to starters A.J. Burnett, Wandy Rodriguez, Jeanmar Gomez and James McDonald have left the surprising Pirates with little wiggle room, thrusting Morton back into the rotation for a least the next couple weeks.

Manager Clint Hurdle doesn't see that as a major problem after watching

Morton reach 96 mph on the radar gun — a tick up over his pre-surgery velocity — and mix in a curveball that kept the Giants off-balance for stretches.

"There's room for improvement but for being out a year, first time out on a major league mound, there's some things we can definitely work with," Hurdle said.

And there are certainly things to work on. Morton dealt with some jitters early on, hit three batters and seemed to tire near the end of his 86-pitch night. Then again, after undergoing career-altering surgery 364 days before, there are worse problems to have.

Even better, Morton's next start won't come against San Francisco's Matt Cain.

A year to the day after tossing the 22nd perfect game in major league history, Cain (5-3) shut down the Pirates. He allowed two hits, walked three and struck out two, surrendering only a single to Garrett Jones in the fifth and a double to Garrett Jones in the seventh.

"We got to see the real good Matt Cain tonight," Hurdle said.

Hunter Pence hit his 11th homer of the season, while Buster Posey, Gregor Blanco and Joaquin Arias had three hits apiece for San Francisco, which handed Pittsburgh its worst loss of the year.

New division for football in Ohio

COLUMBUS — All but three area football teams will be dropping a division due to the Ohio High School Athletic Association adding a seventh tournament division.

East Palestine, United and Crestview will remain in Division V, according to the divisions approved by the OHSAA Board of Directors on Thursday.

They will still have to deal with perennial state power Youngstown Ursuline in their region. Youngstown Mooney will drop to Division IV.

The playoff schedule also was approved Thursday. This fall, Divisions II, III, IV and VI will play their regional and state semifinal games at 7:30 p.m. Friday, while Divisions I, V and VII will play at 7 p.m. Saturday.

The board also decided to make the starting date for football practice always on Aug. 1 beginning in 2014 (unless Aug. 1 is a Sunday, in which practice will start Aug. 2).

This fall, football practice will begin Aug. 5 for schools that begin classes after Aug. 16.

Here is the list which divisions area schools will compete in and their boys enrollment in grades 9-11 for the recently completed school year:

DIVISION IV (213-280)
West Branch	267
Beaver Local	261
East Liverpool	260
Minerva	256
Salem	236

DIVISION V (156-212)
East Palestine	172
United	167
Crestview	162

DIVISION VI (112-155)
South Range	145
Columbiana	125
Lisbon	125

Mooney under investigation

By DANA SULONEN
Special to the News

YOUNGSTOWN — A formal investigation is currently under way by the Ohio High School Athletic Association in regards to an assistant football coach illegally trying to recruit middle school players to attend Youngstown Cardinal Mooney.

On Thursday, the OHSAA released a statement outlining allegations made by the Struthers school district against Mooney. Due to the investigation and possible punishment, the coach, whose name has not been released, has resigned his position with the Cardinals' football staff.

"In our investigation, this was one coach acting alone," said Randy Rair, assistant superintendent of the Diocese of Youngstown schools. "It wasn't a systematic situation. This was a coach going off on his own and breaking the rules. Again, once we found out, we needed to turn it over to the OHSAA."

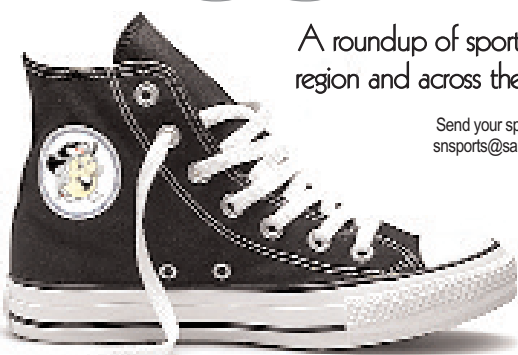

According to Rair, the self-investigation began roughly six weeks ago when Struthers superintendent Joseph Nohra notified the Youngstown Diocese of the allegations. The allegations, which were outlined by the OHSAA in a press release, stated two eighth graders from Struthers Middle School were hosted at a dinner by a coach from Mooney about their possible transfer to the school.

In addition, the press release stated one of the students involved has been accepted to attend Mooney High School.

Collins, Johnson picked as NL All-Star coaches

NEW YORK (AP) — Current Mets manager Terry Collins and former skipper Davey Johnson have been selected as coaches for next month's All-Star game at Citi Field.

Johnson, currently Washington's skipper, managed the Mets to their last World Series title in 1986. They were picked Thursday by San Francisco's Bruce Bochy, the NL's manager

Detroit's Jim Leyland, the AL manager, also chose coaches with Mets' ties: Robin Ventura of the Chicago White Sox and John Gibbons of the Toronto Blue Jays. Ventura played for the Mets' last NL pennant winner in 2000 and Gibbons is a former Mets player and minor league manager.

The All-Star game is July 16.

Leffler remembered as friend, teammate, father

SWEDESBORO, N.J. (AP) — Tony Stewart remembered Jason Leffler as a friend, teammate and doting father to 5-year-old son Charlie Dean a day after the NASCAR driver was killed in a crash at a dirt track.

The 37-year-old Leffler, a two-time winner on the NASCAR Nationwide Series, died Wednesday night after the crash in a heat race in a 410 Sprint Car event at Bridgeport Speedway, a 0.625-mile, high-banked dirt oval about 15 miles southwest of Philadelphia.

A spectator, 40-year-old Chris Taitt of West Deptford, said Leffler had been in second place, apart from other cars when his winged car slammed into a wall at the fourth turn. Taitt said the wing was "flattened like a pancake" and the seat appeared to be displaced.

Funeral services for Miami (Ohio) basketball coach

OXFORD, Ohio (AP) — Former players and coaching colleagues were among mourners at funeral services for former Miami (Ohio) basketball coach Charlie Coles, the school's career victory leader.

Hundreds of people attended the visitation and funeral services Thursday at Millett Hall on the Miami campus in southwest Ohio.

Former Miami stars Devin Davis, Damon Frierson, Kenny Hayes, Jermaine Henderson, Jason Grunkemeyer and Greg Knox were pallbearers. A Miami spokeswoman said President David Hodge and former coach Darrell Hedric were among the speakers celebrating Coles' life at the nearly three-hour services.

Photos of the coach with family, friends and players were flashed on a video screen.

Coles died last Friday in Oxford. He was 71.

Coles is survived by wife Delores, son Chris, daughter Mary Bennett and four grandchildren.

Steelers sign fourth pick Landry Jones

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers have signed fourth-round draft pick Landry Jones to a four-year deal. The former Oklahoma quarterback is the ninth and final Pittsburgh draft pick to come to terms. Details were not disclosed.

Pittsburgh selected Jones with the 115th overall pick in the draft and is the highest draft pick the Steelers have used on a quarterback since taking Ben Roethlisberger in the first round of the 2004 draft.

Jones started 50 games with the Sooners, setting school and Big 12 records by passing for 16,646 yards and 123 touchdowns during his career. He will compete with John Parker Wilson for the No. 3 quarterback spot behind Roethlisberger and backup Bruce Gradkowski.

Broncos release top rusher Willis McGahee

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. (AP) — Willis McGahee knew when he showed up at minicamp this week that he faced long odds of keeping his starting job since the Denver Broncos had used a high draft pick to select a running back for the second straight season.

Forty-eight hours after his arrival, that reality hit home for McGahee when the Broncos released the 31-year-old running back who led them in rushing last season despite missing the final two months with a right knee injury.

Even with 2nd-rounder Montee Ball, who scored an NCAA record 83 touchdowns at Wisconsin, joining 2nd-year speedster Ronnie Hillman in the backfield, McGahee shunned the team's three weeks of voluntary workouts this spring.

Lots of fluids, rest after 3OT Stanley Cup opener

CHICAGO (AP) — Long after the celebration was over, Marian Hossa finally made it home and managed to fall asleep around 3 a.m. The Chicago star woke up a few hours later, roused by a noisy neighbor.

"I think my neighbor decided he was going to drill in the morning. That was really unpleasant," Hossa said Thursday. "You know, hopefully, he is going to get the message for next time, he won't drill. Feel a little tired today."

It's OK, Marian. Everyone was a little tired after a rousing start to the Stanley Cup finals.

Chicago and Boston played three overtimes Wednesday night in the fifth-longest game in the history of the NHL's marquee series. It finally came to an end — at the stroke of midnight, no less — when Andrew Shaw deflected Dave Bolland's shot into the goal to give the Blackhawks the victory.

It was a deflating outcome for the Bruins, who also lost important forward Nathan Horton to an injury during the first overtime, while the Blackhawks seemed relieved that they didn't have to sit on such a heartbreaking loss for two days before Game 2 on Saturday night.

"It's one of those games being down 3-1, you come back to tie it 3-3, you feel like something was left on the table if you didn't come back and win it," forward Patrick Kane said. "The game went a long time. It's definitely a good feeling winning in the third overtime when it does go that long."

Game 1 most-watched since '97

NEW YORK (AP) — Chicago's 4-3 triple-overtime win over Boston attracted the most TV viewers for an opening game of the Stanley Cup finals in 16 years.

NBC's broadcast averaged 6.358 million viewers, the most to watch a Game 1 of the Stanley Cup finals since Detroit and Philadelphia drew 9,000 more on FOX in 1997.

It marked an increase of 119 percent compared to the Stanley Cup finals series opener last year with the Los Angeles Kings and New Jersey Devils.

NBC is averaging more than 3 million viewers during the playoffs, an increase of 38 percent compared to last year. NBC and the NBC Sports Network are combining to average 1.191 million viewers for each game, an increase of seven percent versus last year.

The winner of Game 1 has gone on to win the title in 56 of the 73 seasons since the NHL went to a best-of-seven format for the championship series in 1939. The Blackhawks won the first two games when they beat Philadelphia to win it all in 2010.

Just don't expect to see much concern coming from the Boston camp. The Bruins dropped the first two games at Vancouver in the 2011 finals, and went on to take the series in seven games.

"I don't think much is going to rattle our team," Bruins coach Claude Julien said. "We're a pretty resilient group of guys. We live in the moment."

Boston was on a power play during the first overtime when Horton tangled with Blackhawks defenseman Niklas Hjalmarsson in front of the Chicago net. Horton skated off with what appeared to be some sort of upper body injury.

"We're keeping our fingers crossed here," Julien said. "He's day to day, and he's back with us hopefully the next day."

Horton plays with David Krejci and Milan Lucic on Boston's dangerous top line, and any sort of extended absence would be a major blow for the Bruins. Lucic had two goals and an assist in Game 1, Krejci had two assists and Horton also had an assist.

The line has 21 goals and 36 assists in the playoffs.

"He's a guy that's been coming up big for us in the playoffs," defenseman Torey Krug said. "To not have him in the rest of that game definitely hurt us. But we have confidence in our guys."

While the Bruins just missed on a couple of great scoring opportunities, Johnny Oduya's tying goal for Chicago in the third period was headed wide before it went off the left skate of Bruins defenseman Andrew Ference. Then there was the carom off Shaw's right leg for the winning score.

"I think what it shows everybody is it's going to be a great, tight series," Ference said.

MALKIN FROM 1B

Pittsburgh's flameout against the Bruins. The NHL's highest scoring team managed just two goals in nearly 14 periods of hockey.

"It's my mistake that I scored zero goals," Malkin said following a 1-0 loss in Game 4. "It's not good for me."

The disappointment did little to shake Malkin's confidence in the future. He turns 27 next month. Crosby turns 26. They guided the Penguins to a championship in 2009 — with Malkin being named the playoff MVP — and with them in the fold for the next decade there remains plenty of time to return to the top.

"We're still young and can stay here a long time," Malkin said. "We're a group that we've won Stanley Cup before and I believe we will again."

Malkin was about to enter the final year of a contract that paid him about $8.7 million annually. Getting a new deal in place before he went home to Russia for the summer was important. He didn't want to enter training camp in September answering questions about his future.

Now that it's set, he won't have to. The deal includes a provision that would require Malkin's approval if the Penguins ever tried to move him. At the moment, it's a difficult scenario to imagine.

"I like the city, is good for hockey," Malkin said. "I like fans. I have house here and all my friends here. It's good for me."

And good for the Penguins. General manager Ray Shero praised Malkin for being adamant about his desire to stay in Pittsburgh rather than hit the open market in a year, when he could command an even higher salary and go to a team where he's not the 1b to Crosby's 1a.

"He made it very clear that this is where he wanted to play," Shero said.

U.S. Open

ARDMORE, Pa. (AP) — A quick look at the rain-interrupted first round of the U.S. Open at the 6,996-yard, par-70 Merion Golf Club (all times EDT): Clubhouse leader: Phil Mickelson, who shot 67 — after attending his daughter's eighth-grade graduation Wednesday in suburban San Diego and then flying cross-country overnight in his private jet to tee off at 7:11 a.m. Still to be determined: Luke Donald was at 4 under and playing No. 14 when play was suspended because of darkness. Also on the course at the time was Masters champion Adam Scott at 3 under. Play resumes Friday at 7:15 a.m. Where's Tiger?: Woods was at 2 over on No. 11 when play was called. Tough Merion: Nicolas Colsaerts at 69 was the only other player from the morning's groups to break par. Let it rain: A heavy downpour forced suspension of play twice, the first for 3 1/2 hours, beginning at 8:36 a.m. Mickelson used the delay to catch up on sleep, veteran Jerry Kelly caught up on his movie-watching, giving two thumbs-up to the "The Master," starring actor Philip Seymour Hoffman. Noteable: Neither of the two par 5s at Merion had an average score below par. Quoteable: "That was you guys. That wasn't us." — Kelly to reporters on predictions the winning score this week would be at least 10 under. Rays' David Price throws simulated game ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Tampa Bay ace David Price threw to a most surprising hitter in his latest workout — Kansas City pitcher James Shields. Price took another step toward rejoining the Tampa Bay rotation, working Thursday in his first simulated game since being sidelined May 16 because of a strained left triceps. The AL Cy Young Award winner had never before been on the disabled list. Price threw 54 pitches over three innings before the Rays played Kansas City on Thursday night. He got a good laugh when he took the mound to warm up and saw Shields, his former teammate, standing in the batter's box. Shields returned to Tropicana Field for the first time this season since being traded in the winter to the Royals. He watched five pitches by Price go by before stepping out. Price is expected to start a minor league rehab assignment next week.

OHSAA investigates recruiting violations at Cardinal Mooney

By DANA SULONEN Special to the News

YOUNGSTOWN — A formal investigation is currently under way by the Ohio High School Athletic Association in regards to an assistant football coach illegally trying to recruit middle school players to attend Youngstown Cardinal Mooney. On Thursday, the OHSAA released a statement outlying allegations made by the Struthers school district against Mooney. Due to the investigation and possible punishment, the coach, whose name has not been released, has resigned his position with the Cardinals' football staff. "In our investigation, this was one coach acting alone," said Randy Rair, assistant superintendent of the Diocese of Youngstown schools. "It wasn't a systematic situation. This was a coach going off on his own and breaking the rules. Again, once we found out, we needed to turn it over to the OHSAA."

According to Rair, the self-investigation began roughly six weeks ago when Struthers superintendent Joseph Nohra notified the Youngstown Diocese of the allegations. The allegations, which were outlined by the OHSAA in a press release, stated two eighth graders from Struthers Middle School were hosted at a dinner by a coach from Mooney about their possible transfer to the school. In addition, the press release stated one of the students involved has been accepted to attend Mooney High School, while it has been alleged that the other student continues to receive text messages from another coach at Mooney. The commissioner's office has ruled that the two students will be ineligible for interscholastic athletics for one year from their date of enrollment should they choose to enroll in and attend Mooney as freshmen in 2013-14. Penalties against Mooney have not been applied, pending completion of the investigation. "Though those are the allegations set forth, Rair argues some of unfounded after the Diocese's investigation. "One coach was accused to text messaging a Struthers player," Rair said. "We have found no evidence of that. As far as we're concerned, he hasn't done that and we think that is unfounded. "The other allegation was that a coach took two players and their families to a meal. We found that only one family went to this meal, so only one of the two was involved, the other boy they don't know who he is, he wasn't there."

In regards to the student, Rair thinks the OHSAA's punishment against him is unwarranted. "I'm disappointed in the OHSAA cause I feel that an adult, employee of ours, was at fault, and that the 14-year-old boy, who doesn't know what the rules are, is the one being punished. I'm disappointed in that ruling," Rair said. A call to OHSAA commissioner Dr. Daniel B. Ross was unsuccessful.

This is not the first time Mooney has been under fire for possible recruitment of players. At the beginning of the 2012 football season, junior football player Nick Bilas fought in court for his right to play for the Cardinals after transferring to the catholic school from Poland. While Mooney never was under fire for recruiting Bilas, Poland fought that he should have to sit out a year for transferring to the school for athletic reasons, which is per OHSAA bylaw.

Most area schools will drop divisions with new OHSAA football alignment

COLUMBUS — All but three area football teams will be dropping a division due to the Ohio High School Athletic Association adding a seventh tournament division. East Palestine, United and Crestview will remain in Division V, according to the divisions approved by the OHSAA Board of Directors on Thursday.

Table with columns: DIVISION IV (213-280), West Branch, Beaver Local, East Liverpool, Minerva, Salem, DIVISION V (156-212), East Palestine, United, Crestview, DIVISION VI (112-155), South Range, Columbiana, Lisbon, Springfield, Southern Local, DIVISION VII (111 and under), Leetonia, Western Reserve, Wellsville, Sebring.

PIRATES FROM 1B

to get settled in. Injuries to starters A.J. Burnett, Wandy Rodriguez, Jeanmar Gomez and James McDonald have left the surprising Pirates with little wiggle room, thrusting Morton back into the rotation for a least the next couple weeks. Manager Clint Hurdle doesn't see that as a major problem after watching Morton reach 96 mph on the radar gun — a tick up over his pre-surgery velocity — and mix in a curveball that keeps the Giants off-balance for stretches. "There's room for improvement but for being out a year, first time out on a major league mound, there's some things we can definitely work with," Hurdle said. And there are certainly things to work on. Morton dealt with some jitters early on, hit three batters and seemed to tire near the end of his 86-pitch night. Then again, after undergoing career-altering surgery 364 days before, there are worse problems to have. Even better, Morton's next start won't come against San Francisco's Matt Cain.

HOROSCOPE

By HOLIDAY MATHIS
6/14/13

Leo/Virgo Moon
Reverses the Order

The moon moving from Leo into Virgo makes this a two-toned day. Usually, Friday is about working first and then dropping it all (hopefully early) to go have some fun. Not this time. The fun comes first, and then you may realize that your peace this weekend hinges on getting something done before the end of the day.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You feel somewhat responsible for the happiness of those you love. There's no reason to hold back any advice you have that might help to enhance and augment their well-being, but do keep in mind that timing is everything.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). If you burn the bridge behind you, there still will be ways to get back. You could swim, build a boat or hitch a ride on a plane, but all of these ways are uncertain and time-consuming. Be nice to the bridge.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). The contradictions will seem to stand in defiance before you, daring you to make sense of them. This cannot be done with force or hard-line thinking. Gentleness and time will eventually bring all things into order.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You don't want to owe anyone, and yet, if you were to swallow your pride and accept some help, you would quickly find yourself in a much better position. You could help others from that place, too. Take the help.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Difficult tasks are just a series of easy steps — a really long series, to be sure. But since you're only tackling one step at a time, there is little difference between choosing a difficult task and an easy one.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You'll encounter two types of people now: the talkers and the doers. They need each other. The talkers will be the marketers and the publicity for all that the doers need to advertise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). If you don't guess right or make a smart move right off the bat, don't worry. This is just part of how you gain the experience you need. If you're always correct the first time, you won't make a good teacher later.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Just because love is true doesn't mean it is also easy. You're up for the adventure, though. Loyalties will be tested. You'll learn even more about one you love and yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Turn up the tunes and be care-free. One of your sign mates said this well: "I wish you music to help with the burdens of life, and to help you release your happiness to others." — Ludwig van Beethoven

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). It will be tempting to veer off course and set your sights on an entirely different goal. But you will gain so much confidence from doing what you set out to do, if only to prove the point that you're a person who follows through.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). People think you're brave for speaking your mind, but what they don't understand is that you're just not the type to bottle things up. To you, that would be far more painful than just telling the truth.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). What is it you most want people to feel around you? Your clear intentions have power. You'll cultivate and spread that emotion. Don't worry about how. The result you want will shape your decisions unconsciously.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (June 14). You already feel that life is good, but you're about to believe it's absolutely phenomenal. The next seven weeks bring an answer for every question, a date when you want one and opportunities galore. Give yourself a deserved break in August. September shows you rising up through the ranks of an organization. Pisces and Aquarius people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 4, 10, 23, 22 and 41.

WEEKEND LOVE FORECAST: ARIES: Your powers of imagination are strong. As you steer your dreamboat toward a romantic destiny, your powers of attraction get stronger, too. TAURUS: Love fills you with gratitude. You may even feel thankful for events that haven't happened yet. GEMINI: You'll do something amazing: You'll love happily without taking part in the alliances, rivalries and schemes that pervade a social scene. CANCER: Put yourself out there. You'll be hard on yourself, but needlessly. Others will be very impressed with what you have to offer. LEO: You wish for love, and it seems to be taking forever for that wish to be granted. Give thanks in advance. It reinforces your faith. VIRGO: Break out of yesterday's database, and dial a few new numbers. LIBRA: Loved ones may unwittingly infringe on your sacred territory, inviting you to lay down boundaries. SCORPIO: Your efforts to rebuild a relationship are starting to pay off. SAGITTARIUS: You will enjoy the benefits that come from having such a wide variety of friends. CAPRICORN: Long-time friends have accurate insights in regard to your current situation. Listen up! AQUARIUS: You are not mistaken: Someone is definitely flirting with you. PISCES: You're aware of the emotional and spiritual exchanges that occur day to day in your relationships. Sometimes it's exhausting to be so aware!

Rugs leave stains

Heloise

Dear Heloise: Unsightly YELLOW STAINS have appeared on the off-white vinyl tile in my bathroom where the rugs had been. I got rid of the rugs, but I cannot get rid of the stains. Do you know of a method or product I could use to eliminate these stains without ruining the finish on the floor? — Kathleen W. in Michigan

Sorry to say, Kathleen, there isn't much you can do at this point. The rubber backing on the rugs is the culprit. Because vinyl and rubber don't mix, it creates a reaction and causes the vinyl to actually turn yellow.

Also, other things can react and cause stains. Be careful when placing items like flowerpots, rubber wheels, anything made of plastic, etc., on a vinyl floor.

When buying rugs, look for tags labeled "nonstaining rubber backing," or stay away from rubber-backed rugs on vinyl or linoleum floors, as experts recommend. — Heloise

TRAVEL HINT

Dear Heloise: Here are a few travel tips I find helpful:

— Put your driver's license (identity card) in a plastic cardholder, and wear it as a necklace so it's easily available at the airport.

— After checking into a room, wipe down the TV remote control.

— Carry a small flashlight to be kept at bedside.

— Save those perfume paper strips that are in magazines and take them along rather than liquid.

— A Helpful Reader in the USA

Great hints! Thanks for the reminders. When you wipe down the remote, don't forget to wipe the door handles and light switches, too! I use the hand sanitizer I carry in my purse. — Heloise

BOX RECYCLE

Dear Heloise: Great hint about turning boxes inside out for mailing. Plastic mailing bags work the same way. If you are returning something you ordered, or are just mailing something else, you can turn the mailing bag inside out and tape your labels on the plain surface. — Bonita in Cleveland

OWNERS MANUAL

Dear Heloise: Here are some organizational hints I use when buying a new appliance: I keep a file of all my manuals. If the appliance has a serial number, I write it on the top of the owners manual. I also attach the receipt, warranty card and any other paperwork I was given upon purchase. That way, I have all the information I need if I must look something up or have it repaired. This has saved tons of hassle and frustration. — Craig in Indiana

EASY ICING

Dear Heloise: Whenever I bake a cake, I place it on whatever plate I am going to serve it on, then place it on a circular, rotating platter before icing. Because the platter rotates, it makes it much easier to turn the cake when icing. I don't have to constantly stop to turn the plate. I think it makes the icing look smoother and neater. — Wendy in San Francisco

Bewildered by 'theft' of her purse at party

DEAR ABBY: Recently, my cousin-in-law, "Carrie," attended a family party. I was happy to see her because I like her and haven't seen her since my wedding in 2011. Carrie has been going through a difficult time because of her mother's death two years ago and her father's remarriage plans.

I know people are prone to do odd things when under stress, but this has me concerned. During the evening, I went to retrieve an item from my handbag. Carrie was with me, and mentioned she loved my purse and then announced she was "stealing it." I realized it wasn't a joke when she dumped the contents of my bag on the kitchen counter in front of several family members. She then handed me $10 and put my purse in her car!

I was flabbergasted and didn't know how to react. Although I had mentioned that I bought the bag at a thrift store for less than Carrie gave me, I liked it because it is a vintage item. I don't think a replacement will easily be found.

While I was always excited to see Carrie before, I am now leery of seeing her again for fear of a repeat of what she did. Am I wrong to feel offended? Do I have any hope of getting my purse back? — STUPEFIED IN NEW YORK

DEAR STUPEFIED: Carrie's behavior was outrageous and may indicate that she has emotional problems that should be addressed. That you would be offended is understandable. That you would be so shocked you didn't immediately object is also understandable. The only hope of getting your purse back would be to pay this woman a visit, return her money and tell her it's time to return it. If you're up to the challenge, she may agree. But don't count on it.

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating "Wayne" for about a year. Everything is wonderful, but my problem is he is stingy when it comes to issuing a compliment. I'll get dressed up — makeup, hair, the whole thing — and ask him what he thinks, and his response is always, "It's OK. You always look beautiful to me, so you don't have to dress up."

Maybe I shouldn't complain about this, but sometimes I feel Wayne would say I looked good if I were sick and vomiting into a toilet. It's not like I want him to say I look awful; I just want more of a response than what I'm getting. Any ideas on how to approach this? — ALWAYS BEAUTIFUL? IN MINNESOTA

DEAR ALWAYS BEAUTIFUL: Yes. Approach your boyfriend directly. Tell him there is something you need from him that you're not getting — and that is acknowledgment when you make a special effort. Explain that while you're complimented that he thinks you're always beautiful, you feel let down by his reaction. If he cares about your feelings, he may be a little more generous.

DEAR ABBY: How and when do I tell the guy I just started seeing that I have bipolar disorder? I don't want to make him think I'm crazy. On the other hand, I really like him and hope our relationship will grow into something more. I don't want to start it off with a lie. — NOT REALLY CRAZY IN MASSACHUSETTS

DEAR NOT REALLY CRAZY: You shouldn't start off a relationship with a lie. However, health information of any sort is personal, and it need not be revealed until you become friendly enough that there is a reason to know. Once you become good friends, you should disclose any information that is pertinent, including your diagnosis and the fact that it is being managed.

Reducing salt eases high blood pressure

Dr. Keith Roach

DEAR DR.

ROACH: I have type II diabetes and high blood pressure, which I generally keep below 130/80 with medication. My doctor is concerned about my salt intake. When I pointed out that my sodium level from a recent blood test was in the middle of the normal range, my doctor stated that that was something different. Can you explain why? — G.A.

ANSWER: Sodium levels in the blood are not affected by salt intake in people with normal kidneys and access to water. This is because sodium intake is balanced by increasing water intake, so that the level of sodium in the blood stays tightly regulated. It's why we get thirsty after having a salty meal.

However, that extra salt and water in the body puts stress on the blood vessels and raise blood pressure. Most people have a small effect; however, in some people, the blood-pressure effect of salt is quite pronounced. People with diabetes may be more likely to have a pronounced blood pressure effect with salt intake.

Reducing your salt intake reduces your blood pressure, and it probably reduces the risk of heart disease and stroke. Recent evidence suggests that even in people with normal blood pressure, increased salt intake leads to a higher risk of stroke. The major societies would recommend no more than 1.5 grams of salt per day for someone who has been diagnosed diabetes or high blood pressure.

DEAR DR. ROACH: I've been diagnosed with Peyronie's disease and have had it for more than a year with no relief from the problems that it has caused. The trauma that caused the problem was minimal, and I didn't think much of it at the time. My urologist suggested vitamin E on a daily basis, but nothing has happened that makes me think it's helping. Is there a cure short of surgery? I'm 60 years
