SALEM — City crews are preparing the streets for the 8th Salem Super Cruise this weekend.

Signs have been posted at entrances to the city advising motorists to "expect heavy traffic" from June 20 through the 23rd.

The Super Cruise will officially kick off at State Street and Broadway Avenue on Thursday evening, according to Service Safety Director Ken Kenst, but Essex I will hold its annual Back to the 50s car cruise from 5 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. today at 2511 Bentley Dr. Disc jockey Big Rick will start the show off on the Broadway stage on Thursday from 6 to 9 p.m. and the Stadium GM SuperStore is greeting cruisers with Dale Earnhardt Jr.'s race car on display at its new showroom at 292 W. State St.

Arby's will also hold a cruise on Thursday evening.

The Goodyear blimp Spirit of Goodyear is scheduled, weather permitting, to visit the Super Cruise on Friday afternoon and should be overhead from approximately 12:30 to 3

Barricades will start going up on Salem streets today to allow vendors to set up p.m.

Anyone wishing to post photos or comment on the Spirit of Goodyear can do so at www.facebook.com/GoodyearBlimp.

Most local residents are aware that East Third Street and East and West Pershing Streets are available as secondary routes off of State Street.

Pershing Street can take motorists from Georgetown Road, on the west side city limits, to Cunningham Road which is on the east side of the city limits.

"That's why we put those signs up," Kenst said Tuesday, explaining that for people wanting to avoid State Street altogether and didn't want to participate that East Third Street and Pershing Street were alternate routes.

Kenst said barricades will begin showing up between today and Thursday at different places in the city and South Broadway Avenue between East State Street and East Pershing Street will be blocked off this morning to allow vendors to set up.

South Broadway Avenue from East Pershing Street to Columbia Street will be blocked off on Thursday but will allow water department customers at the drive-through window in city hall access onto South Broadway Avenue.

Super Cruise T-shirts and hats are available at city hall in women's sizes of small through extra large and men's sizes from small through XXX-large and there are kid's sizes. All T-shirts are $10 each.

The red and black hats are one-size-fits all and are also $10 each.

Kenst said there will be a Super Cruise follow-up meeting at 7 p.m. Tuesday, June 24 in city hall.

For more information, visit www.salemsupercruise.com.

The Steel Valley Super Nationals at Quaker City Motorports Park will also be held this weekend.

S. Range reviewing cafeteria results

By KEVIN HOWELL
Staff Writer

BEAVER TOWNSHIP—South Range Local schools will be reviewing the cafeteria budget from the past school year.

Kelly Fullum, food service director with Nutrition Group which operates the school's cafeteria, told the school board Monday night that funds and participation are not where the company would like them to be after its first year at the school.

Schools Superintendent Dennis Dunham said the school has a stop-loss agreement with the company which provides a bail-out option if the cafeteria is losing money. He said the administration will be meeting with the company this week to discuss statistics from the past year.

Fullum told the school board that the numbers were low at the beginning of the year, but that state and federal guidelines for breads and proteins were relaxed mid-year, making it possible to offer a wider variety of food, such as the deli bar in which students and staff were able to make meals their way.

"It enabled [the Nutrition Group] to do a better job in getting kids what they want to eat," she explained.

Fullum expressed hope that the looser guidelines will help improve participation in the next couple years. She said that she is developing new concepts, particularly at the elementary level, to make students more aware of what is available and to promote participation.

Dunham commended Fullum for her efforts this past year, noting her cooperation with the school and commitment to providing healthy eating choices.

"She's communicated with us from day one," he

Street Art Contest set during Cruise Saturday

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

SALEM — Visitors to the Salem Super Cruise this Saturday will have the chance to watch street artists transform their creative visions to sheets of plywood during a Street Art Contest at Second and Lundy.

Downtown building owners Scott and Lisa Cahill, who recently commissioned some graffiti artists for some work in the downtown Salem area, are hosting the contest which is planned from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. in the parking lot of their building on the corner of East Second Street and North Lundy Avenue.

Scott Cahill spoke to city council about the Street Art Contest Tuesday night, explaining how some young people agreed to police others, remove graffiti they see and persuade others not to put graffiti on buildings. As part of the deal, the street art competition will give them an outlet to show people what they can do.

"Come out and watch these wonderful artists at work," he said.

He said the abatement of the graffiti in the city has been working, thanks to the involvement of the young people. He offered thanks to several people who have been working on the graffiti problem, including Jock Buta, city council members Cyndi Baronzzi Dickey, Rick Drummond and Clyde Brown and Mayor John Berlin.

Drummond, Dickey and Brown helped oversee the formation of an anti-graffiti group which planned a clean-up day in April to help remove graffiti from buildings and come up with ideas for an anti-graffiti campaign.

According to information provided by Lisa Cahill, each

Fire official quits EMA board over 'instability' WB personnel moves OK'd

By TOM GIAMBRONI
Staff Writer

LISBON — A local fire official resigned as the Columbiana County Emergency Management Agency's certification compliance designee for St. Clair Township because of "instability" within the EMA and the qualifications of the new director.

Glenmoor Fire Capt. Mark Stovall submitted his resignation to EMA Director Luke Newbold in a letter dated June 5, saying his decision was "due to the instability and recent actions of your director's position."

"I will not be part of this mockery of the Emergency Management Agency System for Columbiana County any longer, or the politics that have been played by the county commissioners in filling this position," he wrote.

When asked to elaborate, Stovall said his disagreement is with commissioners for hiring an unqualified person in former Navy SEAL Luke Newbold to run the EMA.

"I just don't want to be part of the cluster," Stovall said, adding his displeasure is directed more at commissioners than at Newbold, whom he has yet to meet.

"I thank him for his military service and he sounds like a great guy, and I hope he can get up to speed," he said of Newbold.

Newbold was hired in January to replace EMA Director Darren Dodson, who resigned last July to take a job in the private sector. Commissioners took applications but rejected the three finalists recommended by the screening committee and instead decided to wait until 2013 to fill the position, with the delay becoming a campaign issue during the November election.

Meanwhile, commissioners learned Newbold, who was not among the original applicants, wanted to return to the county after serving 13 years as a SEAL, and they decided to hire him instead.

Stovall, in his letter, said he was particularly troubled that commissioners would hire someone who lacked the minimum required NIMS certifications. NIMS stands for the federal National Incident Management System, which establishes emergency preparedness standards for federal, state and local agencies. As a NIMS point of contact person for the EMA, Stovall was charged with overseeing compliance in St. Clair Township.

In his letter, Stovall pointed out he has 17 NIMS certifications. According to information provided by Commissioner Tim Weigle, Newbold has obtained 14 NIMS certifications since he was hired five months ago, plus a certificate for Basic Weather Spotting. Newbold also completed the Federal EMA's Emergency Management Institute's professional development series and is in Summit County this week for training to obtain two more certifications, after which Newbold will have met all of his mandatory training for the year.

"He's working hard to get all of the necessary certifications. As he learns more about what the EMA does, he'll be fine," Weigle said

"I know he's out meeting people because I attend the monthly fire chiefs and fire association meeting and Luke's been there," he added.

Tamara McBride, chief of public affairs for the Ohio EMA, said while the state establishes the duties of a county EMA, there is no state law setting minimum qualifications for directors, which is left solely to the discretion of commissioners.

As for Stovall's comment suggesting the Newbold hiring had something to do with politics, Weigle expressed puzzlement. "I would like to meet with him and talk to him about that political issue because I have no idea what it is," he said.

Career Center board awards construction bids

By DEANNE JOHNSON
Staff Writer

LISBON — With several renovation projects slated to begin soon, the board at the Columbiana County Career and Technical Center on Tuesday awarded four bids for the project.

The Career Center plans to renovate the science rooms, the restaurant, coffee shop, a small office and add exterior lighting to the parking lots and driveway.

Superintendent Chuck Adkins said he was happy with bids for the project, which came in 16 percent below the estimate. Additionally he was happy about the lowest bidders being local contractors.

J. Herbert Construction Co. of Salem was named the general contractor with a bid of $408,400. JP Plumbing of Lisbon received the plumbing contract with a bid of $119,000. The Conti Corp. of Lowellville was granted the HVAC contract with a bid of $439,520. Finally, Graft Electric of Columbiana received the electrical contract of $303,545.

In another matter, Adkins discussed with the board information about new state legislation being considered, which would change the way seats on Career Center boards are filled. Currently, each partner school in the county sends a member of its own school board to fill a seat on the board.

However, Adkins said proposed changes would cause the local boards to have to choose someone from their district, not on the school board, as a representative of the board.

"It would give people a say over tax dollars who are not elected officials," Adkins said. "I have a problem with that. I see a lot of pitfalls."

Adkins said he hopes legislators will study the idea longer before enacting it. He urged board members and others concerned to send e-mails to their state legislators.

Doug Lammert, the representative to the board from East Palestine, said he sent a letter already.

"I couldn't see any difference between that and having the senators appointed," Lammert said.

In other matters before the board:

— The board approved an agreement with the Ohio Attorney General's office which will allow them to collect delinquent debt from adult education students who quit a program midway through the semester and then stop making their payments on the class.

— The board approved Jacob Clark as adult education diversified industrial training coordinator for a one-year contract. Carolyn McCune was approved for another one-year contract as the adult education LPN program coordinator. Additionally, a list of instructors and substitutes were improved for the upcoming school year.

— The board approved new policies. The policies were for evaluations of directors, administrators and standard based teacher evaluation. Adkins pointed out instructors at the career center are usually very motivated and insist administrators push them harder anyway.

— The board also approved an end of course exam for government class.

— The board accepted the donation of 55 gallons of foam from the Stratton Volunteer Fire Department, which will allow the fire extinguishers to be refilled in the public safety services program.

Columbiana school issue resolved

By KATIE SCHWENDEMAN
Staff Writer

COLUMBIANA — A lawsuit is not being filed against the Columbiana School District, according to Superintendent Don Mook.

Mook said the family of a high school student has decided not to pursue legal action and the matter has been resolved.

The female student and her mother spoke with Mook and the board of education behind closed doors during a special meeting at the school on May 24.

Mook did not wish to comment recently on what was discussed at that meeting and also did not wish to reveal the student's identity.

He did say no school employees' jobs were affected as a result of the "issue" which has since been "resolved."

"Ultimately I was able to correct problems that were occurring," he said.

Mook then referred additional questions to the board. Board members Mark Hutson and Randy Guy did not return phone calls last week and a call to Kelly Witmer was not immediately returned Monday. Board members Jay Hertel and Tony Roncone could not be reached.

Man pleads guilty to Home Savings robbery

Staff Reports

LISBON — The Canfield man responsible for robbing the Home Savings and Loan in the Glenmoor area last February, Tary L. Gilbert, pleaded guilty Monday in Columbiana County Common Pleas Court to robbery.

According to court documents, Gilbert of Indian Run Drive, Canfield, slipped a note to a bank teller, threatening to harm the person and demanding money at about 3 p.m. on Feb. 19. He did not show a weapon.

After being given an undetermined amount of money, Gilbert fled in dark-colored Nissan traveling west on Y&O Road. Bank employees were able to get the car's license number.

County sheriff's deputy Steve Boyd, who was stationed on state Route 11 just north of the state Route 154 exit near Lisbon, spotted the vehicle traveling north. Boyd followed the car while waiting for Columbiana police to provide backup.

Gilbert exited Route 11 onto state Route 344, and headed toward Columbiana where he was stopped by Boyd and the Columbiana officers. Gilbert was arrested without incident.

Sentencing is set for Aug. 9. He faces up to three years in prison and a fine of $10,000 for the third-degree felony charge.

Residents protest shooting of feral kittens

NORTH RIDGEVILLE (AP) — Residents have packed a city council meeting to protest the shooting of five feral kittens by a humane officer.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer reports (bit.ly/11Lzfh) that most speakers at Monday's meeting called for a change to a city policy allowing the cats to be shot if an officer feels they are a threat. Two people complained the cats can be nuisances, causing fleas and odors.

About 100 people were in the council chambers and others rallied outside.

Representatives of the Ohio Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and Alley Cat Allies condemned the shootings, saying most cities have banned the practice. They called for a trap, neuter and release method.

Police Chief Mike Freeman says the city will review its policies.

Car dealer sued for defamation

By DEANNE JOHNSON Staff Writer

LISBON — The owner of Columbiana Buick Cadillac Chevrolet has sued the owner of Brittain Motors in East Palestine in a defamation lawsuit filed Monday in Columbiana County Common Pleas Court.

According to the lawsuit, David A. Flynn Inc., doing business as Columbiana Buick Cadillac Chevrolet, claims Thomas Brittain and his attorney David P. Powers sent a letter containing "false and/or misleading statements" about Flynn to the East Palestine village manager on June 18, 2012.

The letter was discussed before East Palestine Village Council that month, leading to a story being printed about why Brittain Motors Inc. was not going to be able to move to a new location on state Route 14.

Powers confirmed the lawsuit deals with the negotiations about the move, which still has not happened.

According to coverage at the meeting, Powers had said that in order to relocate, the move must have the consent of neighboring dealerships within a 10-mile radius. He said the requirement is based on the Ohio automobile franchise law. The story continued that Powers had said in a letter to Village Manager Pete Monteleone that Brittain and Flynn had reached a written agreement regarding the move, but Flynn has since "reneged" and was refusing to sign off on the document.

A copy of the letter is not attached to the lawsuit filed this week.

"The conduct of the defendants in publishing said letter containing falsehoods against and about the plaintiff, conveyed the commonly understood inflection that the plaintiff breached an agreement with defendant, Thomas J. Brittain and Brittain Motors, Inc. That defamation was and is false," the lawsuit reads.

The lawsuit continues to claim the act of having the letter published was libelous and sending the letter to a governmental entity was an act of malice, hatred and ill will toward Flynn.

Flynn is claiming the defamation of his character has cost his good reputation as a business person in the area. He is seeking more than $25,000 in damages.

Brittain said he has not yet seen a copy of the lawsuit, although he was aware of it. He reserved his comments for a later date.

Flynn did not return phone calls to him at his dealerships on Tuesday. Neither did his attorney, Robert S. Bouffard of Youngstown.

OUR SIDE

Officials must act before next lawsuit

Attend a board of education meeting in Ohio, and there's an excellent chance you will hear school officials worrying about how to pay the bills. In some districts the situation is viewed as a crisis.

In truth, the Buckeye State's public schools could be operated more efficiently. The 611 or so school districts in the state represent an excellent opportunity for consolidation to both spend money more efficiently and provide young Ohioans with better educations.

But that solution never seems to gain much traction. Politicians take it for granted the few voices loudly protesting against any consolidation represent the will of most of the people, so opportunities to pursue the idea are not presented.

And many Ohioans think the existing system is fiscally practical — or would be if the state provided an equitable school funding formula.

What, you say? That has been the law of the land for more than a decade, since the famous "DeRolph decision" by the state Supreme Court, you say?

Perhaps so. But as high court Chief Justice Maureen O'Connor remarked a few days ago, the General Assembly still has not complied fully with the series of four rulings in the DeRolph case.

"I don't think it's changed," O'Connor said of the school funding situation.

She added she is "waiting like everyone else to see what the legislature and the governor are going to do with it."

O'Connor wasn't even on the state Supreme Court when, in 2002, justices issued the last of the four decisions ordering the state to provide a more equitable funding system for public schools. But she clearly has strong opinions about the issue.

In what Gov. John Kasich and legislators should take as a warning, O'Connor said she often is asked why the high court doesn't do something about school funding, and responds justices "can't resurrect a case to bring it before us."

It does not require a judicial scholar to understand what O'Connor seemed to be suggesting — that if a lawsuit similar to DeRolph is filed in the future, the court would come down hard on the governor and General Assembly for failing to implement its earlier ruling.

Kasich and lawmakers do not deserve wholesale condemnation in the situation, however. They have had their hands full during the past couple of years, getting the state budget in balance after years of mismanagement. They deserve credit, not criticism, for that.

Still, O'Connor's comments, combined with the real need seen in so many school districts, are a call for the governor and legislators to put new emphasis on equitable school funding for all Ohio public schools. The task needs to be made a priority — before the state Supreme Court gets an opportunity to put discontent like O'Connor's in the form of an order.

Distrust of government is what many disputes about

Another week, another controversy in official Washington.

At the moment, 35 percent of voters consider recently exposed National Security Agency surveillance efforts as the most serious. The Internal Revenue Service's targeting of conservatives is No. 2 on the list, followed by concerns about the Obama administration's handling of the incident in Benghazi last fall in which the U.S. ambassador to Libya was murdered. The Justice Department's secret probe of reporters' phone and email records is seen as the top concern by only 9 percent.

Competing for attention with the controversies are ongoing policy disputes over immigration, gun control and full implementation of the national health care law.

While each of these stories has its own cast of characters and internal dynamics, it is now possible to identify a unifying theme.

President Obama, whose deeply held faith in government is unwavering, unintentionally provided that moment of clarity last week. In attempting to dismiss concerns about the NSA disclosures, he said, "If people can't trust not only the executive branch but also don't trust Congress and don't trust federal judges to make sure that we're abiding by the Constitution with due process and rule of law, then we're going to have some problems here."

We have a problem. Just 30 percent of voters nationwide have that much trust in government officials when it comes to these surveillance efforts.

Only 24 percent now are confident that the federal government does the right thing most of the time.

This popular distrust of government is the theme that ties all the recent news stories together. It's driving all the current policy debates.

On immigration, there is broad popular support for comprehensive immigration reform. Most Americans believe legal immigration is good for the country, but most do not trust the government to enforce any provisions in the new law that would improve border security and reduce illegal immigration. Only 7 percent believe that enforcement is "very likely" to happen.

This is not just Republicans grumbling about Barack Obama in the White House. The same skepticism was there when George W. Bush was president. Unless the government does something to address the border problem, it will be there for the next president, as well. Because of that distrust, prospects for passing serious immigration reform this year are slim indeed.

Similarly with gun control, Americans overwhelmingly like the idea of requiring background checks for those who want to purchase a gun, but they are very suspicious of where the president and New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg want to go from there. If voters were convinced their plan was for background checks and nothing more, it would have enjoyed broad popular support.

The president's health care law is facing the same challenge. New mandates will soon force people to buy more expensive insurance plans. Advocates say they're not really more expensive because they provide more coverage. But most Americans are uncomfortable with trusting the government to decide an appropriate level of coverage. They're also suspicious of all government cost estimates.

Many in Washington are frustrated by the public distrust. They dream of public relations programs to overcome it. What is needed, though, is for the government to change its behavior, so that it can earn the trust of the people it serves.

OTHER VOICES

The (Toledo) Blade, June 17

There's good and bad news in college Republicans' report to GOP leaders on the party's shellacking in the 2012 election. Trying to understand how President Obama amassed a 5-million-vote margin over Mitt Romney among voters under 30, the young Republicans conducted a listening tour of their generation.

The good news for the party is that, as a voting bloc, millennials aren't particularly in love with Democrats. The bad news is that the most recent crop of Republican candidates and the party itself are considered too extreme to be a credible alternative.

The GOP is held in such low regard by those born since 1980 and later that the party's brand has become convenient political shorthand for "close-minded, racist, rigid, old-fashioned," the report says....

The report also calls for a more robust outreach to racial minorities based on appeals to opportunity and fairness for all, and a less hostile orientation toward gays and lesbians.

The report says the GOP has become too identified with negative messaging, such as opposition to same-sex marriage and to Hispanic immigration....

Reaction to the report by the GOP establishment has been mixed. Fox News host Bill O'Reilly asked the report's author why the Republican Party should care about the opinions of "a bunch of kids who don't know anything."

This kind of condescension will condemn the party to continue losing national elections. The fact that one of the nation's most prominent conservative broadcasters felt no hesitation about insulting young conservatives about the need to repair their party's image encapsulates the GOP dilemma perfectly.

Googling ourselves to death for online shopping

KATHLEEN PARKER

At a party a few years ago, a young reporter bounded over to my cluster of social noddies and, with the breathlessness of a born tweeter, chirped: "What's the new hot thing?"

Without disturbing my mascara, I replied: "Anonymity." She looked befuddled.

I continued: "To be Googled and to have nothing turn up. That's hot."

Too late, alas, even then. In these post-Snowden days, the notion of anonymity is ludicrous. But so it has been for some time, though recent disclosures bring pause even to the habitually injured. It is one thing for Mrs. McQueen and Mrs. Harry G. Brown, my elderly dowager neighbors from childhood, to spy on each other through their porch screen doors. It is another for the National Security Agency to compile records of one's phone calls.

Oh, for the days when Mrs. McQueen trumpeted gleefully: "I saw you eating that apple pie!"

While Americans bemoan their loss of privacy -- and allow me to ululate right along with you -- it is helpful to recall our own role in this gradual process of, shall we say, re-gurgitative knowingness.

That is, our apparent willingness to show-and-tell every little thing in the quest to be known. Fame and Celebrity are by comparison higher callings than whatever compels strangers to display, say, their tongues (or other points of anatomical interest) in the public forum of social media. These acts of baboonery, not so feigned after all, are unsubtly reminiscent of chimpanzees who, unconsciously aware of the camera's hostile intrusion, try to offend it with grimaces, grins and lingual extrusions.

Now, suddenly we're offended that national security operatives are following our behavior patterns? Cue Cheetah's laugh track.

Whether Edward Snowden, the self-admiring 29-year-old who decided to save us from ourselves if not our enemies, is hero or villain will keep us amused until time tells. Most likely he's a hybrid of the two, the heroic concentrated mostly in his having spawned an urgent and overdue debate about the costs of privacy in the service of security.

Meanwhile, Americans are scrambling to read Aldous Huxley's "Brave New World," the subject of my high school thesis. One of my more ironic literary friends called to recite Joseph Heller's "Catch-22" scene wherein another famous Snowden, mortally wounded, literally spills his guts.

Early infatuation with Huxley and other prescient writers -- George Orwell's Big Brother seems suddenly cuddly -- made me rationally paranoid, yes, but mostly aware of the tyranny of caring. It comes gently at first -- we only want to protect you -- but soon-ish becomes oppressive.

Distracted by our gadgets, we hardly notice until a Snowden materializes. We love Google Earth because we can see our very own houses on our very own laptop screens. Wow. But who else is watching?

When I visited then-Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson at his post-9/11 "Command Center" -- a vast room filled with gigantic plasma screens and computer arsenals manned by military personnel -- he pointed to my South Carolina office building on one of the screens.

I asked Thompson if he could tell me whether my assistant was there. "Not yet, but soon," he said.

Fast forward to the set of CNN's "Parker Spitzer" a couple of years ago when I asked Google CEO Eric Schmidt what options were available to people (like me) who might find his "Street View" a little creepy.

"You can just move," he said.

Well, no, you can't.

There's no habitable place left on the planet where one can move to escape the data stalkers. Speaking of which, a peeve more personally concerning than whether Edward Snowden discovers where I get my tasteful highlights -- or, as the Obama campaign mastered, which candidate I might support given my proclivity for same.

Online shopping.

Take one little tiny peek at an item of even remote interest and you are owned by The Thing. Once I Googled a purse that, turned out, cost $1,200. I moved along.

Not so fast, hissed the serpent.

A full year later, I'm reading about immigration reform and suddenly the $1,200 purse slithers into view, imprinting my brain with temptation. I didn't invite.

But, yes, I did. I Googled. I oogled. And, though I resisted, I am henceforth captive to an automated data pimp.

Know this: Whatever you have done online is known. Whatever you will do will be known. And thanks to me, not even Mrs. McQueen and Mrs. Harry G. Brown, bless their dear, departed hearts, can ever be anonymous. Or hot.

Salem committee to begin 5-year planning process

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

SALEM — The Planning Committee to oversee a five-year process for Salem City Council to plan ahead for spending and action items will hold its first meeting at 6:30 p.m. Thursday in council chambers at city hall.

Council members first talked about the idea last month during a Committee of the Whole meeting where Councilman Dave Nestic offered a written proposal for a planning process that can be reviewed each year once it's in place.

The idea is to plan in advance for any moves related to infrastructure, community development, housing and zoning and services to residents.

Under his proposal, four sub-committees covering each of those core areas that represent the functions of city government will develop lists of actionable items the administration and council can review when planning for budgets and answering requests for funding.

As part of the plan, he said they'll use some information already gathered in other reports, such as Salem Area Chamber of Commerce Sustainable Plan, the Salem Downtown Revitalization Technical Advisory Committee or the Salem 20/20 report from several years ago.

The Planning Committee will include Nestic, who serves as the Committee of the Whole chairman, along with the council president, mayor, auditor, service director and sub-committee chairs. Each sub-committee will include a council member as chair, the mayor or service director or both, a representative of the Chamber, a member of TAC, a representative of the Sustainable Opportunity Development Center board, appropriate city managers (chiefs, parks, streets, etc.), and at least one citizen not affiliated with any of the listed groups.

In other business, the Rules and Ordinances Committee meeting canceled last week has been rescheduled for 6:30 p.m. June 26 in council chambers. Some of the agenda items may include a review of an update to the M1 and M2 zoning ordinances, an updated tax ordinance and a possible draft ordinance regarding indoor shooting ranges.

Part of the reason for the review of the M1 and Ms zoning ordinances stems from questions being raised over the Downtown Metals business on Pershing Street by Councilman Clyde Brown.

Once again, Brown raised the issue during Tuesday's city council meeting, asking that an email sent to city Law Director Brooke Zellers by Mayor John Berlin be read into the record. The email discussed a meeting the mayor had with Brown and Councilman Jeff Cushman regarding the M1, M2 and M3 zones and whether the business sold a manufactured product, which they concluded the company did and therefore that required them to conduct all processes inside their building.

After the council meeting, both Zellers and city Planning and Zoning Officer Patrick Morrissey said the business was in compliance, as they've said previously.

Council took action on several items, including authorizing an appropriation of $10,000 for repairs to the fire department's aging ladder truck along with other transfers and appropriations and approving a raise of $2.45 per hour for the street foreman to bring his salary to $24.04 per hour to correct what the mayor considered a disparity with what other supervisors in other departments received compared to the people below them.

Council also amended resolutions related to employee contributions to the Ohio Police and Fire Pension Fund to reflect a 75-cent increase by the state to the mandatory employee contribution for retirement. The city will pick up the 75-cent difference for members of the fire department since they did not receive a wage increase for the last contract.

City Service/Safety Director Ken Kenst spoke briefly about plans for the Salem Super Cruise which starts later this week and Council President Mickey Cope Weaver asked people to keep cruise planner Jim Bonfert in their prayers due to him being ill at this time. She credited him with helping to push for the cruise.

Goshen police prepare for traffic from Steel Valley Super Nationals

By LARRY SHIELDS
Staff Writer

GREENFORD — Expecting a large turnout for this weekend's Steel Valley Super Nationals at Quaker City Motorsports Park, Goshen Township Police Chief Steve McDaniel told Green Township trustees on Tuesday there will be extra patrols deployed.

Goshen Township police are contracted by Green Township for police protection.

"It's going to be big," McDaniel said, "we'll have extra cars out for OVI and speed enforcement.

"We're going to have pretty much zero tolerance ... like always. I think probably liquor control will have their agents out and we'll have 15 to 20 more hours of patrols out, mostly covered by the OVI task force grant."

McDaniel said there will be Goshen Township officers on the the drag strip grounds too.

"There's going to be a lot of people there ... two bands ..." he said, adding that having state Route 165 completely open after two sections of road work had it closed off will help ease the traffic pressure.

Fire Chief Todd Baird said there is a fireworks show between the band performances at 9:30 p.m. and his department will inspect the site on Friday afternoon.

"We'll be there when they launch them and during the cleanup," Baird said.

In other fire department business, Baird received approval to get five trucks serviced at a cost of $2,050 with a 2-0 vote. Trustee Dave Slagle was absent.

Trustees also approved a purchase order for $5,080 to purchase four tires for a truck from North Lima Tire.

Baird said the department will purchase two aluminum wheels for the truck if trustees buy the tires.

Baird also passed along a request by a wedding reception at the Christian church this Saturday to fill water barrels that will be used to secure a 40-foot by 80-foot tent.

"They're requesting us to put water in," he said and wondered if there shouldn't be "some sort of charge" to do it for something other than a non-profit group.

Trustee George Toy said, "I personally don't think we should" and Trustee Chairman Mark Stepuk asked Baird what a minimum charge would be.

Baird said $250 and Stepuk said, "Once you start doing that then you start going outside the scope of emergency services ..."

"No problem," Baird said, adding that he would call the people back and advise them of the outcome.

Zoning Officer Bill Pitts said there were six permits in May, two for homes, two for pools, one out-building and one addition. Two other requests were denied and he said he traveled to Austintown to speak to one property owner about about unkempt property.

Pitts also advised the board that the new LED sign will be shipped on July 11 and said the zoning board asked who would be allowed to use it.

Toy said, "At first, I thought it was government ..."

Pitts said it was the zoning board's contention that tax dollars paid for it and Fiscal Officer Randy Chismar said that "doesn't give them the right to advertise on it."

Trustees bounced the issue back and forth and Pitts said "you can put a thousand messages on it."

He added, "For the time being it will be township only."

Pitts also noted that the aluminum fascia on the zoning building was ripped out exposing rotted-out wood behind it.

Trustees also discussed re-arranging the recycling station area after they find out what they need regarding the fire station extension. Baird said plans for that are very close to completion.

Suspect in Columbiana car theft last week surrenders to police

By KATIE SCHWENDEMAN
Staff Writer

COLUMBIANA — One of the men alleged to have stolen a car last week in Columbiana turned himself in to police on Monday.

Columbiana Officer Richard Whitfield said Matthew Faulkner, 21, of East Palestine, came to the police station and admitted to Detective Wade Boley he was in the vehicle reported stolen from Dalton Lappert of New Waterford.

Faulkner and his older brother, George Faulkner Jr., 26, also of East Palestine, reportedly met Lappert at the 7&14 Truck Stop in Columbiana last Wednesday.

Lappert was attempting to sell his 1996 Pontiac Firebird vehicle and allowed the brothers to take it for a test drive. When they did not return 20 minutes later, he reported it stolen.

Pennsylvania State Police found the car unoccupied on Anderson Road in Enon Valley, Pa., later that day but the brothers were nowhere to be found. Two days later, after some online investigative help from local Facebook users, police identified the brothers and issued a warrant for their arrest.

Whitfield said Matthew Faulkner did not admit to arranging the car theft, but did admit he had been a passenger.

"He didn't admit that it was his idea ... He didn't give any information as to where his brother might be," the officer said.

Patrolman Kevin Kloss took Faulkner to the county jail and he appeared in county Municipal Court Tuesday on the theft charge.

A June 27 preliminary hearing was set, with bond set at $10,000 cash or surety.

Meanwhile, police are still looking for Faulkner Jr., and Whitfield said it is not the first time he has evaded officials.

"He has a history of running from the police so it's anybody's guess where he might be," he said.

Police Chief Tim Gladis is optimistic the elder brother will be found.

"We would hope he could turn himself in. He'll turn up," he said.

The chief thanked the Facebook users who helped police identify them after Lappert posted the theft on his own profile.

"Social media is a crime-fighting tool. They gave us names based on the descriptions of the men and their tattoos. Things like that solved the case," he said.

He added it's not the first time social media has played a role in solving crime locally.

artist participating in the contest will be given a 4-foot by 8-foot sheet of plywood, painted white, to create their art. They can begin at 10 a.m. and all painting will stop at 6 p.m., to be followed by the judging and presentation of trophies and prizes for first, second and third places.

A maximum of ten artists can participate and at this time, eight are confirmed. The public is invited to watch the artists paint throughout the day, and to cheer on their favorite in the judging.

Once the prizes are awarded, the art will be auctioned off. Anyone who cannot accommodate such a large work of art can have a piece photographed and reproduced in a smaller size. Proceeds from the art work auction will go to the individual artists.

In an email, she explained how the contest was the "outcome of the efforts to stop the graffiti about town. In exchange for having this contest, giving them some commissioned murals, and generally legitimizing their art, the area graffiti artists agreed to "self-police," and keep illicit tagging and graffiti off area buildings, or clean it up if it occurs. They have kept their end of the bargain very successfully, and no new graffiti has been reported since before the Clean Up Day, April 20, when they helped to scrub graffiti off buildings. This contest is our end of the bargain."

Cash prizes of $250, $150 and $100 will be awarded to first, second and third place.

For information about the contest, send an email to savedowntownsalem@gmail.com.

Dunham noted that the main issue has been student awareness. "Quality, quantity and taste has not been an issue throughout the year," he said. "We've tried many, many things in making kids aware of choices."

'Godspell' offers religious experience for audience at Stage Left Theatre

By CHARLES CALABRESE

LISBON — The Stage Left Theatre of Lisbon's current production of John Michael Tebelak and Stephen Schwartz's classic musical, "Godspell," is truly a religious experience for audience members, not only because of the script's basis in the gospel according to St. Matthew, but also because of the powerful and sincere performances by the superb ensemble cast.

Co-directors Nathan Kuhns and Reed Worth and musical director Jo-dine Pilmer have assembled a group of energetic, well-coordinated young actors who maneuver about a set, designed by Kuhns, that is part playground and part obstacle course, and they do it with seemingly effortless grace as they move to Worth's well-thought out choreography.

The singing also is uniformly excellent, whether it involves solos or multi-part harmonies. The cast is accompanied by a four-piece ensemble, consisting of Pilmer on keyboard, D. J. DePanico on guitar, Dan Kalosky on bass and Stephen Ley on drums, that enters perfectly into the gentle, folk-rock spirit of the score.

Reed and Kuhns also contribute their own acting and singing skills to the production. Reed is one of the few physically believable actors I've ever seen play Jesus. Directors sometimes forget that Jesus was a carpenter by trade in the days before power tools, which means that he should be played by an actor who looks capable of manual labor.

Reed has that look, plus a powerful singing voice and the ability to play Jesus and speak the words of Sacred Scripture with utter sincerity without ever coming across as preachy or sanctimonious. This is a Jesus who is as human as he is divine, with a sense of humor to temper the authority with which he speaks.

Kuhns is equally effective in the dual role of John the Baptist and Judas Iscariot, playing John with a purity of heart and an unreflected evangelical fervor that is infectious in a body language similar to that of Jesus, and a singing voice that is perfect for "Prepare Ye," John's call to repentance.

Kuhns later morphs subtly into Judas, first one of The 12, fully involved in the message and mission of Jesus. But Kuhns' body language gradually changes from displaying the fervent excitement of a new disciple to that of a doubter and, ultimately to that of a conspirator. It all happens in the midst of parables and production numbers, and it is so subtle that you might miss if you blink, but it is there in a complex, multi-layered performance.

Allison Dolphin gives her best performance ever as one of the disciples, whether she is participating in the parables or other encounters with Jesus, or doing true justice to one of the show's signature songs, "Day by Day," or performing a touching duet with Sidni Worth on "By My Side," she is an actress-singer at the height of her powers.

Kasey Sanor contributes a moving dance solo to "On the Willows" that is just as much a prayer as the 137th Psalm on which it is based, acting as a perfect counterpoint to the sung prayer by Connor Bezeredi, Jacob Ward and Matt Malloy. Sanor and Christina Fonner also lead the cast in a powerful rendition of "Light of the World."

Natalie Martziel contributes the perfect balance of humor and wholesome sexiness to "Turn Back, O Man," interacting easily with the audience and giving all of us a new appreciation for the classic feather boa.

Carly Ellis and Kathi Steeb each contribute powerful solos to the production, backed in both cases by the ensemble. Ellis' rousing "Learn Your Lessons Well" and Steeb's soulful "O Bless the Lord My Soul" are both memorable and unique, despite the fact that they are placed back-to-back in the show's structure.

Jacob Ward once again demonstrates his flawless comic timing in various sketches as well as teaming with Matt Malloy on a rousing rendition of "We Beseech Thee." Malloy, despite an unfortunately distracting hairstyle (sort of Pee-Wee Herman meets Alfalfa) displays a fine singing voice and excellent comedy skills in various sketches.

In addition to his contribution to "On the Willows," Connor Bezeredi acquits himself admirably with a solo on "All Good Gifts," as well as the various parables and interactions with Jesus. Christina Fonner shows her funny and serious sides equally well in the sketches, in addition to her lively contribution of "Light of the World."

Despite being the youngest member of the ensemble, Sidni Worth shows herself a worthy and equally talented part of the cast, not only in her duet with Dolphin on "By My Side" but also in various characterizations in the sketches.

The final member of the cast, Ashley Whited, was not present when I saw the show on opening night, but the rest of the cast did a fine job of covering her part in the finest ensemble tradition.

"Godspell" will be presented again this Friday and Saturday and next Friday and Saturday at 7 p.m. as well as this Sunday and next Sunday at 2 p.m. Call for reservations at 330-831-7249.

For those who might be concerned about a musical theater treatment of scripture, I can assure you that this production of "Godspell" is true to the gospel, including a definite appearance by the Risen Christ, without in any way altering the script or music to do it. Add to this the overall excellence of Stage Left's production, and I can give "Godspell" my highest recommendation for all family members.

Sun and Jupiter Conjunction

The merry procession of well-wishing begins with the sun and lucky Jupiter in conjunction at the last degrees of Gemini. The solar tides are about to turn, and this is a time for celebration of the new friends made, games played and agreements struck during the bright, carefree days of the Gemini sun.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Many ideas will come to you, and there is a real gem among them. Write them down so you can scrutinize your collection later and find the truly valuable item.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You often hear someone say, "It's not a competition." "But it is!" you reply in your mind. Take that competitive spirit and put it to good use by remembering your most important competitor: yourself.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). It might seem like a strange thing to consider, but you have a starring role in someone's memory bank, and thus you have the chance to make the story more interesting. You'll be in just the mood to seize this opportunity.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Problems at work or at school are multiplying, but you'll stay on top of them as long as you remember to stop, take a deep breath and prioritize instead of worrying.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Some think that being able to entertain other points of view means your own isn't so strong — untrue! It is precisely because your worldview is so solid that you are able to entertain other ideas.

VRIGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). A positive spin on an awkward situation will do wonders for flagging morale, but resist the temptation to let your emphasis on the bright side spin out of control into a denial of problems that require attention.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). It goes something like this: You stray from the boring path, get lost, struggle, think you know where you're going, wind up worse off, try again, find your way back and are happy for the adventure of it all.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Your past pain was like a magic growing potion that escalated you quickly through many levels of knowing. Now you are wise. There's a memory, and a sadness, that will always be with you in some way.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). A wise person once said, "Those who try to be a friend to everyone often wind up not being a friend to anyone." Remember to be fair to both parties in a dispute, but don't withhold your judgment when asked.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). When you use your talents, you excite fans and peers alike. Watching and experiencing enthral the former, and the latter are inspired to unleash their own talent in answer to your gesture.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). After an unexpected interruption, it feels like that connection you made will never come to fruition. But don't give up. The other person is simply waiting for you to close the circuit.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). When you feel as if you're on the outside looking in, your face pressed against the glass, it's easy to forget that there's a whole vast world behind you. Don't forget to turn around and see it.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (June 19). In the past, you've had fewer options, but now you'll find yourself in a position to be discerning and selective. What happens in July makes you more interesting and also more interested in others. A certain someone or something enthralls you in August. September brings a self-imposed challenge and a well-won victory. Capricorn and Sagittarius people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 3, 22, 39, 42 and 15.

WHAT'S YOUR SUMMER THEME? Even though it seems like summer already, what happens post-solstice will get to the heart of what this summer is about for you. For ARIES, the operative word is "relationships." One in particular will get the lion's share of your attention. The unfolding of this scene will open something up in you.

TAURUS is on a taste-making journey this summer, homing in on the finer things in life from a highly personal perspective. Pleasing and delighting the senses is a key to happiness in general. Taurus might be surprised to discover it's actually a lot of work figuring out exactly a GEMINI is just coming out of the spotlight and feels ready for some behind-the-scenes activity this summer. The pressure is off at work, and it will feel like there's less to do at home and in relationships, too. Finally, real relaxation sets in — not the hectic substitute for relaxation that comes with family visits, theme parks and the like. In a word, the theme for Gemini's summer is "chillin'."

CANCER, on the other hand, has a personal agenda. Energy is high, change is desired, and improvements will occur. Cancer is focused, serious and ready to make things happen.

Marshmallow meld

Heloise

Dear Heloise: I bought a bag of miniature MARSHMALLOWS, which I stored in the pantry. I opened them three weeks later to use, and they were all stuck together in one big blob. It was a sticky mess getting them separated to use in my dessert recipe. How can I avoid this problem? -- Ruth F. in Ohio

Just place them in a container with a tightfitting lid, or in a freezer-safe plastic bag, and store in the freezer. Remove from the freezer and let the marshmallows warm to room temperature before using.

If the marshmallows are stuck, pour a little confectioners' (powdered) sugar or cornstarch in the bag and shake to coat. The marshmallows should just break apart. -- Heloise

FLAVORED WATER

Dear Heloise: I love the different flavored waters, but they can be expensive. My hint is to make them yourself. I use bottled water and add sliced fruit (strawberries, raspberries, grapes, pineapple, lemon and lime), cucumbers, etc. You even can add mint leaves. Place the pitcher or container in the refrigerator for at least six hours to let the "additive" infuse into the water. -- Linda B. in California

COOKING ODORS

Dear Heloise: I have a hint for when cooking broccoli, cabbage, Brussels sprouts and even poaching salmon. I rinse and trim a stalk of celery, cut it into thirds and add it to my liquids. It eliminates the cooking odors and does not impart a celery flavor to what I am cooking. I don't know how, but it really does work! -- M.D., via email

Many readers add different things to the water to avoid the odor, like lemon slices, but this is the first I've heard of celery! I tested this when cooking some fresh broccoli, and it did seem to help. And then there is my classic hint of setting a bowl of vinegar on the counter and turning the exhaust fan on while cooking odorous vegetables.

Have you ever wondered what causes the odor? It's the gas that is released as the vegetables are cooked. The LONGER the vegetables are cooked, the STRONGER the odor becomes, so, if you can, try less cooking time and see if there is less odor. -- Heloise

FORK DESIGNS

Dear Heloise: I love to bake. One of the easiest hints I have is to use a fork to make designs on cookies, cakes and lemon bars. Just by scraping the tines of the fork across the frosting or powdered sugar, you can create simple or intricate designs on many baked goods. -- Kelly D., via email

LOOKING FRESH

Dear Heloise: I have a hint so that you can go ahead and slice up those apples and pears the day before you need them without them turning brown. Just refrigerate them in lemon-lime soda. There's no need to keep fresh lemons on hand or put up with the mess of squeezing them. -- Kathi P. in Arkansas

Grandma on sidelines wants to join game

DEAR ABBY: My son married a sweet girl three years ago, and I thought we would become a close family. I haven't bothered them at all. Since then, she has become cold and distant to me. My son rarely calls or comes around.

They are expecting their first child soon. I have been left out of all the excitement of the baby. She has not invited me to the baby showers or to see the nursery, etc. I know it's not all about me, but I would like to be included.

My side of the family doesn't seem to matter to her or my son. Because he doesn't stand up for me, I fear I will never get to be close to my grandchild. I don't want to upset them, but how do I handle this? -- SAD GRANDMA-TO-BE

DEAR SAD: Talk to your son about your feelings, and ask if there is a reason for his wife's behavior. Then ask if he WANTS you to be a part of his child's life, because the way things are going, it doesn't appear to be the case. That you haven't been invited to the baby showers is terrible, but nothing will change until you bring your concerns out into the open.

I'm sad to say your problem isn't unusual, and it usually happens in marriages where the husband is afraid or unwilling to talk about uncomfortable subjects and prefers to avoid confrontation.

DEAR ABBY: I have been a widower for 15 years. I had kids at home, so restarting romantic life wasn't a priority after my wife died. Ten years later, I realized I was no longer interested in women, and my love life since then has been with men. While I have never been vocal about it with family and friends, I assume they all probably know.

A couple of months ago, one of my male friends -- much younger than I and from my poker group -- came to my home to take me to lunch. I had always assumed he was gay. I made a pass and ended up seducing him. He was a great sex partner, but he changed his mind about going to lunch afterward. He has never shown up for poker since and no one has heard from him.

I feel bad, but I am not ashamed and I would never say anything that would lead anyone to know what happened. Should I contact my former friend and reassure him? He's a good man and I worry about him. -- MISSING A FRIEND IN MIAMI

DEAR MISSING: The man you seduced may not have been as comfortable with gay sex as you assumed he was. Try to contact him once, but if he wanted to see you again, he wouldn't have disappeared. My advice is to leave it at that because it appears he isn't interested in another round of poker -- or anything else -- with you.

DEAR ABBY: I have discovered that the man I have been seeing for several years has been stealing money from me. There is no question in my mind that it's him. What is the best way to confront him? It breaks my heart, but I need to give him a chance to be honest about this.

I care for him as a person but no longer trust him. I know he's going through a lot right now, but so are a lot of us. Please guide me. I don't do confrontations well. -- USED IN INDIANA

DEAR USED: If you have proof of what he has done, a way to approach it would be to discuss with him IN A PUBLIC PLACE that money has disappeared -- and you would like his "help" in figuring out where it went. Depending upon his response, you may have to take specific action by involving your lawyer, your CPA or the police.

Arthritis can take different forms

Dr. Keith Roach

DEAR DR. ROACH: You published an article in April discussing the differences between osteoarthritis and rheumatoid arthritis. How does "degenerative arthritis" differ from the other two? -- R.L.

ANSWER: Degenerative arthritis is osteoarthritis; it's an old term that dates from a time when arthritis was thought to be caused by normal aging processes and from "wear and tear" caused by exercise. That is no longer accepted. For example, runners are at no greater risk for osteoarthritis of the knee than non-runners. Furthermore, exercise is a valuable therapy for osteoarthritis, and stopping an exercise program leads to more pain and disability. However, injuries clearly do contribute to the development of osteoarthritis.

Being overweight is the most important modifiable factor for the development of osteoarthritis.

DEAR DR. ROACH: I have a good friend who has arthritis in his hands and lower back. His physician has never suggested cold laser treatments to him. From what I have read on the Internet, they seem to be an effective, low-risk treatment option. What's your assessment of them? -- R.H.

ANSWER: Whether laser treatment is effective depends on what kind of arthritis your friend has. I discussed osteoarthritis briefly in the previous question, but it is much more common than rheumatoid arthritis, an autoimmune disease in which the immune system attacks the joints (and sometimes other important organs). Osteoarthritis is more likely to affect the back.

Low-level laser therapy, also called cold laser, has been studied in both rheumatoid arthritis and osteoarthritis. In people with rheumatoid arthritis of the hand, the laser treatment reduced pain and morning stiffness, and improved flexibility. In osteoarthritis, the jury is still out; some studies showed benefit, and others showed none. It does seem to be a safe treatment.

DEAR DR. ROACH: I am writing about my 16-year-old grandson. He was taken to the hospital with chest pain, and was diagnosed with a viral infection of the lining of the heart. He is now OK. He later had an MRI, and the doctor said the virus had damaged the outside of his heart and that he would need to be seen again in a year.

Buccos end Latos' streak

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pittsburgh manager Clint Hurdle figured the odds were against Mat Latos extending his impressive streak without a defeat.

"He's due to lose," Hurdle said pregame.

With one good inning, the Pirates pulled it off. Pedro Alvarez singled home a pair of runs in the first inning, and the Pirates ended Latos' streak of 21 regular-season starts without a loss, beating the Cincinnati Reds 4-0 on Tuesday night.

Latos (6-1) hadn't lost a regular-season game since last August, setting a club-record streak of avoiding defeat. He couldn't overcome Pittsburgh's three-run first inning set up by his uncharacteristic control problems.

"I was aggravated with myself," Latos said. "I didn't throw too well in the bullpen and kind of took it into the first. I beat myself today. It's always hard when you put your team in a 3-0 hole."

Latos had nine of Cincinnati's 17 strikeouts, which matched the club's nine-inning record. The Reds also had 17 strikeouts on opening day, but that came in a 13-inning loss against the Los Angeles Angels.

Charlie Morton (1-1) was better during his second start since returning from elbow surgery. He gave up three singles and threw 61 pitches in 5 1-3 innings, starting the Pirates toward their NL-leading 12th shutout.

"Fortunately the few times they hit it really hard, they hit it at people," Morton said.

Cincinnati's lineup managed four hits while getting shut out for the second time in their last four games.

The Ohio River rivals have split the first two games of their four-game series, leaving the Reds a half-game ahead of the Pirates. They've been right behind the NL Central-leading Cardinals most of the season.

There was an undercurrent from Monday's game, when Reds closer Aroldis Chapman threw an up-and-in fastball that leveled Neil Walker. The Pirates weren't happy about the pitch's location.

Morton's first pitch plunked Shin-Soo Choo on the leg. Morton also threw one inside to Joey Votto, who refused to budge from the box. Votto flied out, and that was the end of the drama.

Hurdle encourages his staff to pitch inside, part of what he thinks pitchers need to do in order to control the strike zone. Pittsburgh has hit 39 batters, the most in the majors, but also leads in shutouts.

"When two teams are focused on winning and neither one wants to blink and they just want to play hard and compete, you push the envelope in a lot of different places," Hurdle said. "Not just at the plate trying to get balls in on people,

Feds bag three more pleas in Flying J case

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Three more employees of the truck stop chain owned by the Cleveland Browns' owner and Tennessee's governor pleaded guilty Tuesday in what authorities call a scheme to cheat trucking firms out of rebates.

Regional sales manager Kevin Clark pleaded guilty to mail fraud in federal court in Knoxville. Local media reported that account manager Holly Radford and salesman Jay Stinnett entered similar pleas later in the day.

Court records state Clark "knowingly and voluntarily joined and participated in the conspiracy" with others at Pilot Flying J, the country's largest diesel retailer, to short-change trucking companies between 2009 and this spring in order to increase Pilot profits and boost sales commissions.

Federal agents raided the privately held company's Knoxville headquarters in April. Pilot is run by Browns owner Jimmy Haslam, the brother of Gov. Bill Haslam. Jimmy Haslam has denied any personal wrongdoing.

"We are disappointed in the actions of these employees towards our customers," Pilot spokesman Tom Ingram said in a statement. "We assure our customers that our five-step plan to correct any wrongdoing and to make certain these actions do not happen again is ongoing."

The governor maintains he is not involved with operating Pilot Flying J, though he continues to hold an undisclosed ownership stake in the company posting annual revenues of $31 billion.

As part of the plea agreement, prosecutors said they will only hold Clark responsible for rebate reductions he personally approved, rather than all of the alleged fraud committed as part of the conspiracy. Clark has agreed to cooperate with the investigation and testify on behalf of the prosecution.

Clark's attorney did not immediately return messages seeking comment. Radford's and Stinnett's court records had not been unsealed by Tuesday evening, and information about who their lawyers are was not immediately available.

Secret recordings made as part of the investigation show that members of the Pilot sales team derided some clients as unsophisticated, lazy and undeserving of rebates they had negotiated when signing a deal to buy fuel from Pilot. An FBI affidavit indicates millions of dollars were unfairly withheld.

According to the transcript of a Nov. 28 conversation, Clark recounted how managers of Omaha, Neb.-based Morehouse Trucking had failed to keep track of how much money was due in rebates.

"The dumb (expletive) never checked, I guess," Clark said. "I felt like sayin', 'Well you're the moron that didn't check it!'"

Jimmy Haslam in one of his first public appearances following the April raid told reporters that he had called Clark to obtain a phone number for Morehouse and made arrangements to reimburse any rebates the company had failed to pay.

Manager Curt Morehouse said in a phone interview Tuesday that he had always had a good impression of Clark before the details of the rebate allegations began to surface.

"Everything about him was positive, until I read the affidavits," Morehouse said. "At that point my opinion of him changed."

Tribe bags a close one vs. Royals

CLEVELAND (AP) — Once Vinnie Pestano stopped at third base, he had plenty of company.

Standing within a few feet were two Royals baserunners, two umpires, a Kansas City coach and several teammates screaming at him.

He had no idea being a temporary closer would be this difficult.

Pestano wiggled out of a jam in the ninth inning when Kansas City's David Lough ran past his third-base coach and failed to score the tying run, giving the Indians a 4-3 win over the Royals on Tuesday night.

"I had every intention of going out there and making it a 1-2-3 inning," Pestano said. "But it didn't happen that way. But at the end of the day no runs were scored and we got the 'W.'"

Barely. Michael Brantley's sacrifice fly capped Cleveland's three-run eighth inning and the Indians held on through a wild ninth to stun the Royals.

Held to one run and three hits over seven innings by Ervin Santana, the Indians finally strung something together in the eighth off Kelvin Herrera (3-5) and Tim Collins. Michael Bourn and Jason Kipnis delivered RBI hits before Brantley drove in Mike Aviles with the go-ahead run.

helped the Royals take a 3-1 lead, got the win. Pestano, who is filling as Cleveland's closer while Chris Perez is on the disabled list, gave up three singles and a walk in the ninth but held on for his second save.

"Never a doubt," he joked.

The Royals lost for just the third time in 14 games and missed a chance to move over .500 for the first time since May 18.

They probably should have tied it in the ninth when Alcides Escobar singled to right with one out and runners at first and second. But Lough ran past third-base coach Eddie Rodriguez's stop sign, and got caught in a rundown between home and third.

Lough got back to the bag safely, but Mike Moustakas was also there and was tagged out. It appeared Lough would have scored easily as right fielder Drew Stubbs' throw was off target.

"I take full responsibility," said Lough, who is from nearby Akron and had several family members and friend at the game. "It's 100 percent my fault."

Lough nearly made another mistake as he briefly took his hand off the bag and almost got doubled off by Pestano, who got involved in the rundown and tagged Moustakas out. Pes-

Chisenhall gets another shot

CLEVELAND (AP) — Lonnie Chisenhall took his demotion in stride. He didn't go down to the minor leagues and sulk. He picked up his bat and hit his way back to the Indians.

Chisenhall, who began the season as Cleveland's starting third baseman before a slump led to him being optioned on May 13, was recalled Tuesday from Triple-A Columbus and was in the starting lineup and batting seventh against the Kansas City Royals.

Being called up for the third time to the majors wasn't as thrilling to the 24-year-old Chisenhall as his first time, but it represents a fresh start to a season that started poorly.

"It's not quite as life-changing as it was in 2011," he said. "But it's definitely a positive to get back and contribute to the team what I can."

Chisenhall was batting just .213 (20 for 94) with three homers and 11 RBIs in 26 games and his defensive was suffering before the Indians decided to send him down to the Clippers. They wanted him to clear his head, take a deep breath and relax. It was obvious he was trying to do too much and was only making his problems worse.

At Columbus, Chisenhall got his swing back.

He batted .390 with six homers and 26 RBIs in 27 games, and hit an eye-popping .467 with 16 RBIs in 16 games since May 29.

"We wanted him to get his swing in order and he certainly did that," Indians manager Terry Francona said. "He's swinging the bat great."

Cleveland's offense could use a boost. The Indians have scored two or fewer runs in three of their last four games. Also, the Indians are without All-Star shortstop Asdrubal Cabrera (leg) and first baseman Nick Swisher (shoulder), who won't be back in the lineup for a few more days.

"Maybe he gives us a little jolt while he just plays his game," Francona said. "He did a really good job of going down and doing what you ask him to do."

Chisenhall, who missed two months last season with a broken arm, was pressing during the early part of the season. He wanted to please, but the harder he tried, the worse things got.

Heat bands together to defeat Spurs in OT

MIAMI (AP) — LeBron James shrugged off a poor start to get 32 points, 11 assists and 10 rebounds, Ray Allen hit a 3-pointer with 5.2 seconds to play to force overtime and the Miami Heat staved off elimination with a 103-100 victory over the San Antonio Spurs in Game 6 of the NBA Finals on Tuesday night.

James missed nine of his first 12 shots, but scored 16 points in the fourth to rally the Heat from a 10-point deficit. The Heat trailed 94-89 with 28 seconds to play, but James hit a 3 with 20 seconds to go and Allen drilled another to tie it.

James' layup with 1:43 to play in overtime gave the Heat a 101-100 lead, and Allen added two free throws to force Game 7, which is on Thursday night in Miami. The Spurs had one final chance down 103-100, but Chris Bosh blocked Danny Green's 3-pointer from the corner as time expired.

Tim Duncan had 30 points and 17 rebounds in a performance straight out of 2003. But he was scoreless in the fourth and overtime and the Spurs squandered a golden opportunity to close out the series and win their fifth championship.

Mario Chalmers scored 20 points, Bosh had 10 points and 11 rebounds and Shane Battier hit three 3-pointers for the Heat, who trailed 75-65 after three quarters.

James eschewed his trademark headband in the fourth quarter, then spearheaded the ferocious comeback. He scored six straight points for the Heat, then fed Chris Andersen, who made a free throw to pull the Heat within two at 82-80 with seven minutes to play.

San Antonio Spurs guard Tony Parker (9) and Miami Heat forward LeBron James (6) collide during the second half of Game 6 of their NBA Finals on Tuesday in Miami. (AP Photo)

James then blocked a layup by Duncan and scored on the other end to tie it and Allen's reverse layup gave the Heat an 84-82 lead with six minutes to go.

The Heat led 89-86, but Tony Parker hit a step-back 3 and a layup to take back the lead.

After Allen's big shot from the corner sent the game into overtime, James scored on a layup for a 101-100 lead with 1 minute to go. The Spurs had a chance to take the lead in the closing seconds, but Manu Ginobili's drive was thwarted and Allen hit two free throws.

Bosh blocked Danny Green's 3-pointer at the buzzer, and the defending champs lived to fight another day.

Parker finished with 19 points on 6-for-23 shooting and eight assists and Kawhi Leonard had 22 points and 11 rebounds for San Antonio. Green, who broke the NBA Finals record for 3-pointers, had just three points on 1-for-7 shooting.

After a vintage first three quarters from Duncan had the Spurs steamrolling toward the championship, James delivered a vintage performance of his own in the fourth. Tentative and flustered through the first three, James went into full-on attack mode in the fourth to force a Game 7.

It was the force-of-nature showing that had been all too rare for James in these finals, but the Heat have never needed it more after Duncan took it to them the first 36 minutes.

Duncan hit his first eight shots of the game, conjuring the dominant form that brought four titles to San Antonio between 1999 and 2007. But he long ago handed the reins of the Spurs offense over to Parker, letting the speedy French point guard take over as Duncan grew older. Until Tuesday night.

After getting a vintage performance from Manu Ginobili in Game 5 to take control of the series, the Spurs got a throwback effort from Duncan to start Game 6.

With the Heat leading 40-33 and threatening to pull away with 7:30 to go in the first half, Duncan scored San Antonio's next 13 points to start a 17-4 run that gave San Antonio a 50-44 lead at halftime.

Duncan has never scored more points the first half (25) of a finals game in his career, a performance reminiscent of his 32-point, 20-rebound, seven-block game in Game 1 of the 2003 finals against New Jersey. But this one was so much more important.

They entered the game with title No. 5 sitting right there in front of them. They had two cracks to bring the trophy back home to San Antonio, but the last thing they wanted was to have to play a Game 7 against LeBron James on the road for the championship. There have only been five Game 7s in the finals since 1978, with the home team winning all those contests. The last road team to win a Game 7 for the title was the Washington Bullets over the Seattle SuperSonics in 1978.

Chalmers was 4 for 19 over his last three games, but came alive in this must-win for Miami. He made 5 of 7 shots, including two 3s, in the first half to get the Heat out quickly.

Wade seemed to tweak his left knee after being whistled for an offensive foul early in the first quarter, but he looked fine moments later when he dunked over Duncan to tie the game at 16.

It's been 12 games since the Heat have won two in a row, a startling stretch of inconsistency for a team that won 27 straight in the regular season and figured to turn this postseason into a coronation rather than a competition.

But the short-handed Chicago Bulls put up an inspired fight in the Eastern Conference semifinals, the Indiana Pacers took them the full seven in a rugged conference finals and the Spurs picked them apart in three of the first five games in this series.

For most of the last two months, the Heat have preferred to wait until they were in serious trouble before finding that extra gear that only they seem to have. Down 2-1 in the series, James, Wade and Bosh combined for 85 points to even the series.

Always a bridesmaid for Mickelson at the U.S. Open

By DOUG FERGUSON

Associated Press

ARDMORE, Pa.—The U.S. Golf Association is not opposed to inflicting cruel and unusual punishment at its premier championship, so here's something it might want to consider.

Award the "Phil Mickelson Medal" to the runner-up in the U.S. Open.

There is precedent. The U.S. Open champion has received a gold medal ever since this brute of a tournament began in 1895, and yet the USGA tinkered with 117 years of tradition by last year changing the name to the "Jack Nicklaus Medal."

An argument can be made that Nicklaus, a four-time champion, isn't even the face of the U.S. Open. Bobby Jones won it four times in eight years. The remarkable career and comeback of Ben Hogan was defined by the U.S. Open. He won his four titles in six years, including the year he couldn't defend because he was recovering from near-fatal injuries after a head-on collision with a bus.

But there is no disputing who has cornered the market in silver.

Mickelson broke the U.S. Open record with his fifth runner-up finish in 2009 at Bethpage Black. There was a three-way tie for second that year with David Duval and Ricky Barnes, and the USGA had only one medal to present at the closing ceremony.

"I've got four of those," Mickelson said. "I'm good."

Sam Snead was a runner-up four times, and that doesn't even include the 1939 U.S. Open in Philadelphia when he had a two-shot lead with two holes to play. He made bogey on the 17th and, not knowing the score, played the par-5 18th aggressively and took a triple bogey. Snead also lost in a playoff to Lew Worsham in 1947 at St. Louis when there was a dispute over who was away on the last hole. Worsham called for a measurement. Snead went first and missed a 3-footer to lose by one.

So maybe Mickelson has that going for him. He hasn't lost in a U.S. Open playoff yet.

There's still time, of course, and that's the good news. The hunch — the hope — is that Mickelson will come back for one more shot, even if that means another kick in the gut for a guy who already has had the wind knocked out of him enough.

Don't read too much into the golf course.

There's a lot of chatter about the U.S. Open returning next year to Pinehurst No. 2, where Mickelson was runner-up for the first time in 1999 to Payne Stewart. But what about Pinehurst in 2005, when Lefty was 12 shots out of the lead in a tie for 33rd?

Also on the schedule are newcomers Chambers Bay and Erin Hills, along with Oakmont, Pebble Beach, Shinnecock Hills and Winged Foot, which will take Mickelson to his 50th birthday. His advancing age is a greater factor than where the U.S. Open is played. Because Mickelson can win — and fail — anywhere.

Despite his record six silver medals, the U.S. Open is the one major that Mickelson has had the most chances to win.

He plays the Masters consistently better, and he has won three green jackets, but Mickelson had only three other reasonable chances to win at Augusta National.

Mickelson has had only two good shots at the British Open, in 2004 at Royal Troon and in 2011 at Royal St. George's. And while he won the PGA Championship in 2005 at Baltusrol, his only other chances were at Valhalla in 1996, Atlanta in 2001 when David Toms beat him with a par putt on the last hole, and Whistling Straits in 2004 when he finished two shots out of a playoff.

But the U.S. Open? Lefty seems to be in the hunt every other year.

He twice had chances at Shinnecock Hills. He played the par-5 16th hole in 6-over par for the week in 1995. That would be operator error. In 2004, Mickelson ran into a great putting performance from Retief Goosen, who one-putted the last six holes on greens so fast they barely had any grass. Mickelson contributed to his runner-up finish with a three-putt from 5 feet above the hole on No. 17 for a double bogey.

Mickelson gave a valiant effort at Bethpage Black in 2002. He started the day five shots behind Tiger Woods, which was not a fair fight. Mickelson was six shots behind going into the final round at Bethpage in 2009 and was tied for the lead with five holes to play. He missed a 3-foot putt on the 15th and an 8-footer on the 17th.

He was right there at Pebble Beach in 2010, the most visibly angry he's been over how the USGA let the greens get away in the last round. How his birdie putt stayed out on No. 14 in the final round is one of golf's many mysteries.

Every discussion about Mickelson and U.S. Open has to include Winged Foot in 2006. He had a one-shot lead and made double bogey on the last hole by trying to hit 3-iron around a tree from left of the fairway. If he had punched it down the fairway, he had a good chance at par and at worst made bogey. Instead, he delivered a line that lives in U.S. Open infamy. "I am such an idiot," he said.

As for Merion?

"This was my best chance of all," Mickelson said. "I had a golf course I really liked. I felt this was as good as opportunity as you could ask for. It really hurts."

He had the outright 54-hole lead for the first time, though add some U.S. Open reality — seven guys were separated by two shots, which in effect is like having no lead at all. Mickelson didn't blow this one, not as he did at Winged Foot. Everyone makes mistakes in the final round of golf's toughest test.

Mickelson had a pair of three-putts on the front nine for double bogey, another on the back nine when his first "putt" was with his wedge. The USGA had him for 37 putts in the final round. What let him down were his wedges — too strong on No. 5 and No. 13, too weak on No. 15, three holes that cost him four shots.

Justin Rose three-putted the 11th. He nearly shanked a bunker shot on the 14th. He three-putted the 16th.

What will be remembered is how Rose saved his best two swings for the final hole, including that 4-iron that he said might have made Hogan proud. And this U.S. Open will be remembered for Mickelson leaving with another silver medal. No one ever said golf was fair.

Daytona will get $400 million facelift

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Daytona International Speedway is getting another facelift, this one considerably bigger than the last.

Three years after a complete repaving project, the famed track is overhauling the frontstretch to enhance the “fan experience.”

International Speedway Corp., which owns Daytona and 12 other NASCAR tracks, announced funding approval Tuesday. ISC estimates the redesign with cost between $375 million and $400 million. Daytona had hoped to get some public funding, but the Florida House of Representatives declined to even vote on a bill that would have provided financial assistance to several sporting venues in the Sunshine State.

ISC pushed forward anyway, scheduling the project to begin July 5 and be completed by January 2016 — in time for the Rolex 24 At Daytona and the Daytona 500.

The redevelopment will give Daytona’s aging grandstands a modern look and feel. It will include expanded entrances and a series of escalators and elevators to transport fans to three different concourse levels, each featuring spacious and strategically-placed social “neighborhoods” along the nearly mile-long frontstretch. Those 11 neighborhoods, each measuring the size of a football field, will allow fans to meet and socialize during events without ever missing any on-track action.

“We are truly creating history with this unprecedented endeavor,” ISC CEO Lesa France Kennedy said. “I commend the board’s decision to move forward on our plan to redevelop the company’s signature motorsports facility, thereby shaping the vision of Daytona for the next 50 years.”

“The decision was made with strong consideration of the current macroeconomic condition and a clear view for our long-term growth. This significant private investment is a strategic use of our capital that will ensure the long-term viability of the iconic speedway, and when completed, will contribute favorably to the company’s revenues, as well as to our community and the sport as a whole.”

Backstretch grandstands

will be removed while wider and more comfortable seating will be installed throughout the frontstretch. When the project is complete, Daytona will have reduced its capacity by 46,000 seats to 101,000.

“The redevelopment of Daytona International Speedway reaffirms its status as the ‘World Center of Racing’ for years to come,” France Kennedy said. “It is imperative that we build upon my grandfather’s vision to create a world-class facility with premium amenities to provide unparalleled experiences for our guests and partners. Doing so will ensure that the Daytona 500 and all our other events continue to drive our business while serving as a significant economic engine for the region.”

but breaking up double plays and everything.

“So we’ve got to beat these guys and we’ve got to beat the Cardinals to get to where we want to go.”

Latos yelled from the dugout after Choo got hit. Latos hit Walker in the first inning in Pittsburgh last Saturday, prompting plate umpire Bob Davidson to warn both teams.

“It’s time somebody stepped up and did something about the team that’s hit more guys in the league than anybody,” Latos said. “I got fined for hitting Neil Walker, but you’ve got a team drilling guys over and over again. It’s time for the league to step up and end it. That fired me up.”

Latos hadn’t lost since Aug. 24, when the Cardinals beat the Reds 8-5. In the last 21 starts, he’d gone 10-0 with a 2.80 ERA. The Reds were 17-4 during that streak. Also, Latos had never lost to the Pirates, going 4-0 in eight starts with a 2.29 ERA.

Finally, they caught him in a slow start.

He struggled with his control at the outset, needing 32 pitches to get through a 19-minute first inning. Starling Marte tripled and scored on Russell Martin’s infield single, giving Pittsburgh a run after only four pitches. Latos walked Garrett Jones and Walker, and Alvarez singled for two more runs.

Latos settled down after the first, fanning eight of the next 11 batters. The problem was his pitch count, which was at 88 when he left for a pinch hitter with two runners aboard in the fifth inning. His streak was left in the hands of the bullpen and the offense.

They couldn’t bail him out. Marte singled home another run in the seventh. Morton had a lot to do with it, too.

The right-hander dominated the Reds in 2011, giving up only one run in two complete games at Great American Ball Park. He had his right elbow rebuilt last June 14 and returned to the majors last Thursday, allowing four runs and seven hits in five innings of a 10-0 loss to San Francisco.

He was much better this time, an encouraging sign for a Pirates rotation hit hard by injuries. Tony Watson, Mark Melancon and Jason Grilli finished it.

NOTES: The Pirates agreed to terms on Tuesday with C Reese McGuire, their first-round pick and the 14th overall selection in this month’s draft. ... Pirates LHP Wandy Rodriguez, on the 15-day DL retroactive to June 6 with a tight left forearm, will throw all of his pitches in a bullpen session on Thursday. If he comes out of that without problem, he will make a rehab start in the minors on Sunday. ... Choo has been hit a career-high 19 times, most in the majors.

tano said the Indians don’t necessarily work on situations where two runners are on the same base.

“Luckily, I had about seven guys shouting at me about what to do so I just chose the thing that I heard twice,” he said with a laugh. What was he hearing?

“Run it back, run it back,” he said. “Don’t throw it, don’t throw it. Tag him, tag him, it’s his base.” I had to process a lot of information.”

Indians manager Terry Francona said he has one basis rule in those situations.

“Tag everybody in sight,” he said. “Umpire, everybody and hope somebody gets off the bag. It’s confusing. That’s why you tag everybody. They (umpires) can figure it out.”

Pestano settled down after the crazy play and got Eric Hosmer on a groundout with the bases loaded as the Indians got their 10th come-from-behind win.

The Indians did next to nothing against Santana, but they pounced on Kansas City’s bullpen in the eighth.

Ryan Raburn drew a leadoff walk from Herrera, moved up on a groundout and scored when Bourn slapped a single inside the left-field line.

Aviles followed with a single and Kipnis, who stranded seven runners in a 2-1 loss on Monday night, delivered an RBI double off Collins to tie it. The Royals walked Carlos Santana intentionally to load the bases and Brantley hit a fly ball to right, easily scoring Aviles.

Before the comeback, the Indians were in danger of falling another game behind Kansas City in the AL Central.

“I won’t say we needed it, but we wanted it,” Bourn said. “They took second place over us yesterday and we came back today. Not only that, we want to win those close games like that. Those close games matter.”

Santana deserved a better outcome. The right-hander made it look easy against an Indians lineup that was in a deep offensive funk.

Santana, who pitched the only no-hitter in Progressive Field history in 2011 for the Angels, didn’t allow a runner to reach second base until the sixth and had Cleveland’s hitters guessing most of the night.

“He was spectacular,” Royals manager Ned Yost said.

Ubaldo Jimenez’s wildness helped the Royals take a 2-0 lead in the third without benefit of a hit.

He walked No. 9 hitter Escobar and Alex Gordon to start the inning and then uncorked a wild pitch, advancing the runners to second and third. Hosmer followed with an RBI groundout, and with Salvador Perez batting, Jimenez bounced another pitch in the dirt that got away from Santana, scoring Gordon.

The Indians came in leading the AL with 38 wild pitches, 29 of them with Santana behind the plate.

Before the game, manager Terry Francona defended Santana’s ability to block pitches. On Monday night, the Royals scored the go-ahead run in the eighth on a wild pitch from Bryan Shaw that Santana let go through his legs.

Unable to get anything going for the first five innings against Santana, the Indians closed to 2-1 in the sixth on Aviles’ two-out RBI single.

But the Indians gave back an unearned run in the eighth.

Hosmer led off with a comebacker to Allen, who fielded the ball cleanly but fired it past first baseman Mark Reynolds. The ball rolled down the track along the first-base line, and Hosmer hustled into third with a headfirst dive. Perez followed with an RBI single to make it 3-1.

NOTES: Perez gave up three home runs and a double, and hit a batter during a rough 23-pitch rehab performance for Double-A Akron. Perez, recently arrested on misdemeanor drug charges, had expected to be activated from the disabled list on Friday. ... Royals RHP Felipe Paulino, attempting to come back from Tommy John surgery, has been pulled back from a minor league rehab assignment because of back stiffness. Manager Ned Yost doesn’t think the back issue is serious. ... Cleveland Browns rookies, including first-round pick Barkevious Mingo, attended batting practice and several met with Francona, Santana and Bourn as the Indians took their pregame cuts.

Serena Williams comments on rape case in interview

Serena Williams says in an interview with Rolling Stone magazine that, while not blaming the victim in the Steubenville rape case, “she shouldn’t have put herself in that position.”

The comment is made in one paragraph of a lengthy story posted online Tuesday about Williams, a 16-time Grand Slam title winner who is ranked No. 1 heading into Wimbledon, which starts next week.

Two players from the celebrated Steubenville, Ohio, high school football team were convicted in March of raping a drunken 16-year-old girl; one of the boys was ordered to serve an additional year for photographing the girl naked. The case gained widespread attention in part because of the callousness with which other students used social media to gossip about it.

According to the Rolling Stone story, Williams says the perpetrators of the crime “did something stupid,” and she asks: “Do you think it was fair, what they got?”

She adds, “I’m not blaming the girl, but if you’re a 16-year-old and you’re drunk like that, your parents should teach you: Don’t take drinks from other people.”

And Williams also is quoted as saying: “... she shouldn’t have put herself in that position, unless they slipped her something, then that’s different.”

Williams is in England preparing for Wimbledon. Her agent, who also is in England, did not immediately respond to requests for comment Tuesday night. (AP)

MGM, AEG to develop 20K seat Las Vegas Strip arena

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Years of talk about building an arena capable of hosting professional sports and big-name concerts yielded an announcement Tuesday that casino giant MGM Resorts International and entertainment company AEG will build a privately financed 20,000-seat indoor venue on the Las Vegas Strip.

Construction on the $350 million arena should start next summer on land that MGM Resorts owns between the New York-New York and Monte Carlo resorts, the two companies said in a joint announcement. Completion is expected by spring 2016.

The international design firm Populous will draw up plans for premium seating and hospitality areas for entertainment and sports events, the statement said. Populous designed London’s O2 arena, Berlin’s O2 World arena and Kansas City’s Sprint Center, among other projects.

USMNT take a step closer to World Cup

SANDY, Utah (AP) — Jozy Altidore scored a goal in his fourth consecutive international match, enough for the United States to edge Honduras 1-0 in a World Cup qualifying game Tuesday night.

Before 20,250 fans at Rio Tinto Stadium, the Americans remained atop the six-team CONCACAF group. The United States (4-1-1) won three straight games this month, all since a 0-0 draw at Mexico gave it a boost toward the top.

It has also shut out its last two opponents, Panama and Honduras.

Honduras (2-3-1) was the last team to win at the United States in a World Cup qualifying match, back in 2001. The Americans have won or drawn 25 straight at home since then.

The visitors made it difficult on the Americans for much of the game by slowing the pace before Altidore broke through.

After several second-half near misses, the U.S. got its goal in the 73rd minute. Altidore took a cross from Fabian Johnson from near the end line and put it past goalkeeper Noel Valladares across the goalmouth inside the right post.

It was Altidore's ninth goal in a qualifier as he finally develops into the scoring threat the United States has hoped for.

Both teams played physical soccer in the first half, leading to an emphasis on defense and a limited number of scoring chances on either side of the field. Just before the first period ended, though, Tim Howard was forced to make a difficult save when Andy Najar launched a running right footer from the right side of the box. Howard met the ball in the center of the box and deflected it outside the right post.

Eddie Johnson had a chance in the 17th minute when he latched onto a cross from Fabian Johnson. His left-footed shot from the center of the box was knocked away by Valladares.

When the U.S. stepped up the offensive pressure early in the second half, it put Honduras on its heels. Altidore had the finishing touch.

He even appeared to score earlier in the half. Moments after Graham Zusi sent a free kick into a crowd of players just outside the 6-yard box in the 56th minute, only to see Brad Evans' header go right into Valladares' gloves. Altidore got behind the defense. Clint Dempsey sent a through ball ahead to Altidore, who was ruled offside and his score was negated.

Valladares came up with another clutch save in the 69th minute. Zusi, who was particularly active all night after sitting out the win over Panama because of yellow card accumulation, sent a ball into Dempsey in the center of the box and he leaned into a point-blank header. The ball bounced off of Valladares' hands and Michael Bradley sent a follow-up shot too high.

U of Oregon plans to bar too-wide seat cushions

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Some University of Oregon fans say it's getting crowded in the bleachers. The problem: Jumbo seat cushions.

So the school proposes to limit cushions to 17 inches wide.

University spokeswoman Julie Brown says there have been "a few complaints" about extra-wide cushions taking up too much space at venues with bench-style seating, such as Autzen Stadium and Hayward Field.
