No contest: Apple to take council president's chair

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

SALEM — Democrat city Councilman K. Bret Apple will switch to the president's chair in January since no Republicans or Independents stepped forward to challenge him on the Nov. 5 ballot.

Fellow city Councilman Rick Drummond, a Republican, withdrew from the race for President of Salem City Council in May and current Council President Mickey Cope Weaver chose not to run for re-election.

She had been elected as a Republican, but decided instead to seek a non-partisan seat on the Perry Township Board of Trustees this fall.

After Drummond's announcement, Columbiana County Republican Party Chairman David Johnson said he was seeking a replacement candidate to be selected by the Republican Central Committee to appear on the fall ballot.

Columbiana County Board of Elections Director Adam Booth had explained that since Drummond had been certified as the Republican candidate for the general election back in February, due to the lack of any contested races for the primary, the Republicans had the right to select a replacement candidate.

The deadline for picking a replacement came and went last month with no one named.

When contacted Monday, Johnson said he would have liked to have somebody run, but that's one of the difficulties he's been dealing with for years as chairman.

He approached a lot of people, but said it's difficult to get anyone to run for office. He looks for people who are qualified, who are interested and who will work to get elected.

"We're constantly urging people to get involved. It's what self-government's all about," Johnson said.

Salem school officials set goals based on new state report card

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

SALEM — Board members and administrators recently reviewed results of the latest state report card and set goals for the coming school year for improving in some areas.

"We're still digesting that," board member Howard Rohleder said regarding the new report card.

Rohleder serves on the board's education and tech committee and gave a brief overview of how the district performed, noting that a more detailed report may be given at a future board meeting.

Overall, the district received a B for the performance index and an A for indicators met, hitting 22 of the 24 required performance indicators. The two areas where the district did not meet the performance indicators were fifth grade math and science.

In the area of gap closing, where the state looks at whether every student is succeeding regardless of race, income, culture or disability, the district scored a B, with Rohleder noting that economically disadvantaged students were right at the state goal, with some above and some below.

For the progress area, which looks at whether students got a year's worth of growth in grades 4-8 in math and reading, Rohleder explained that if every single student made one year of progress, they would receive a C. According to the state report card, Salem received a D overall, with a D for gifted and an

A for the lowest 20 percent in achievement and A for students with disabilities.

He cautioned that the only way to get an A is for most of the students to exceed a year of progress, saying that would be difficult to sustain year after year.

For graduation rates, Salem received a C, graduating 87.4 percent of students in four years.

Rohleder said goals for this school year at each school include:

- Buckeye, focus on reading
- Reilly, focus on special education and reading
- Southeast, focus on fifth grade math and science
- Junior High, focus on inclusion of special education students
- Senior High, focus on graduation rate and prepared for success measures

He pointed out that 53.1 percent of Salem students are considered economically disadvantaged.

The latest state report card can be found on the Ohio Department of Education website at reportcard.education.ohio.gov by clicking on district and looking up Salem.

In financial matters, the board approved an amended certificate of estimated resources for the fiscal year ending June 20, 2014 which totaled $30,175,307, a slight increase from what was originally estimated back in June. Treasurer Jim Wilson said they ended up with a little more state foundation money than expected. The original estimate had

Port Authority looking at high-speed wireless Internet again

By TOM GIAMBRONI
Staff Writer

EAST LIVERPOOL — The Columbiana County Port Authority is reviving efforts to bring high-speed wireless Internet service to the county.

The Port Authority board voted at Monday's meeting to hire the Columbus consulting firm of Ice Miller Whiteboard LLC to apply for a state grant to study the financial feasibility of bringing wireless broadband service to the county. If the study results are favorable, the port authority would seek a state loan to implement the plan.

Icemiller Whiteboard's fee is $5,000, with the port authority contributing $2,000, and the city of East Liverpool and village of Wellsville contributing $1,500 each. Port CEO Tracy Drake said the plan is to bring wireless Internet to these two communities first and then expand northward across the rest of the county.

"What we're doing is we're going to see what we can do and at what cost," Drake said.

This is the port authority's second attempt to bring high-speed Internet service to the entire county. In 2010, the board contracted with Omnicity, an Indiana company specializing in bringing high-speed Internet service to rural areas and underserved towns. By mid 2011, Omnicity had filed bankruptcy and was later sold, but not before managing to get high-speed Internet service to at least one of the 18 townships in the county.

Meanwhile, the problem may be solving itself somewhat. There are private operators in the county offering both dial-up as well as wireless Internet services. Also, in 2011 a company by the name of Horizon been over $29 million. The expected revenue includes about $19.4 million for the general fund.

Telecom launched efforts under a federally funded state initiative to extend high-speed Internet service to the 34 Ohio counties that are part of the Appalachian region, which includes Columbiana County.

Drake said their effort this time will be focused solely on bringing wireless high-speed Internet to those areas in the county without reliable service. The plan would likely take advantage of the existing system of fiber optic cable in the county and identify existing towers where wireless equipment could be attached.

The board also adopted appropriations for the fiscal year totaling $25,694,964 for all funds, with $18,215,613 for the general fund.

In the area of Buildings and Grounds, board vice president Steve Bailey gave an update on the Reilly Stadium project, reporting that most of the work is completed except for the benches and pavers. Once those are installed, a ribbon-cutting ceremony will be held. He also said the maintenance staff power-washed the visitor side stands and then the football team painted the stands.

He noted the track was resurfaced and some problems have come up, prompting a call to the company to come back out and take a look. Some people who use the track said it was bubbling up in some spots.

Bailey said the district is working with the company, looking for possible solutions to fix the problem, but with the weather changing, they'll have to find out what can be done at this point.

The board also welcomed new member Angie Beck, who was selected to serve out the remainder of the term left vacant by former member Nich

Bush, who resigned last month because he was moving from the area. Beck works as a paralegal and office manager for attorney Brian Macala in Salem. Her term will expire Dec. 31, 2015.

"We think she'll do a great job," Superintendent Tom Bratten said. "We appreciate your time and your service."

In other matters, the board: approved Amir Murvatov from Tajikistan as a foreign exchange student; hired Michael Maietta as a high school social studies teacher; approved family medical leave for Michele Pieniazek; approved teacher substitutes Jacques Rich, Emily ReKolt, Rebecca Widzinski, John Miller, Danielle Burch, Christopher Paloski and Ruth Baker; approved classified substitutes Charles Ericksen, Melissa Falk, Ami DeMeo, Renaye Fisher and Helen Gorby; approved a contract between the Hannah E. Mullins School of Practical Nursing and Eastern Gateway for Project Hope Study; approved dual credit programs with Youngstown State University and the University of Pittsburgh; approved a contract with Auditor of State David Yost for the fiscal 2013 annual audit not to exceed $25,500; and approved a contract with the Columbiana County Board of Developmental Disabilities to provide educational services.

Non-athletic supplementals approved were: Amie Cochran, Key Club; Hannah McFarland, band director; Julianne Platt, assistant band director; George Spack, senior class advisor and student council advisor; Robert Viencsek, fall play director; Anthony Martinelli, fall play assistant director; and Will Klucinec, high school audio visual director.

The board also approved Steve Bosel for one half hour each school day at $22 an hour for security reasons. Bosel is the in-school suspension teacher and comes in early to monitor people in the building.

ESC not in line for state's Straight A funding

By DEANNE JOHNSON
Staff Writer

LISBON — Although many schools will be entitled to apply for money through the state's Straight A Fund, a pot containing $250 million, Educational Service Center Superintendent Anna Marie Vaughn told the board Monday that at this point that will not include ESCs.

According to Vaughn, some of the requirements is to show how the money can be used to improve student achievement and how it will affect the five-year forecast for the district. Because the ESC technically has no students or five-year forecast budget, at this time she is being told they cannot apply for the money for themselves. But she feels the ESC can partner with local school districts and help them write requests for the money.

Vaughn said there are some ideas of projects she plans to approach some local school superintendents with prior to the funding deadline.

According to a press release issued last week by the Ohio Department of Education, the Straight A Fund grants will provide seed money to the most creative and forward-thinking ideas of educators and their partners in the public and private sectors. The funds should help raise student achievement, reduce spending and target more resources in the classrooms.

Ohio's biennial budget will dedicate $100 million to the program in fiscal year 2014 and $150 million additional in 2015. Those planning to apply will need to alert the ODE of their intent by Oct. 4.

According to Vaughn, many of the local school districts do not have the time or resources available to dedicate someone to writing and maintaining grants. In other instances, the ESC has helped the local schools obtain the grant and even helped to implement parts of it on their behalf.

In other matters before the board, president Richard Stoudt pointed out he recently learned from state superintendent recent testing shows 26,000 third graders in the state are not reading at grade level. Additionally, more than 60 percent of the high school dropouts cannot read at a third grade level.

"(Richard) Ross said probably the most critical aspect in education is seeing that they can read," Stoudt said.

Although the study did not say how many third graders there are in the state, Stoudt said in his eyes the number still represents a significant number of children.

South Range superintendent says district making progress

By KEVIN HOWELL
Staff Writer

BEAVER TWP. — The South Range school district is making strides in student performance, even if not reflected in its local report card, according to schools Superintendent Dennis Dunham.

At the regular school board meeting Monday night, Dunham reported that the district met 24 of 24 indicators and earned a performance index of 105.9 while 73 percent of the students are performing above proficient including 36.9 percent accelerated and 36.5 percent advanced.

However, the district received a failing grade for value added, the same category with which the district has struggled the past few years, dropping the district from an excellent to effective rating under the previous report card system.

But Dunham said despite the failing grade, the district is making gains in the category and seeing a difference from recent years.

"We're committed to work hard," he explained. "We've spent an incredible amount of time on data, work— hard work— in areas that need improvement."

Dunham also reported on the pedestrian tunnel and turning lanes the Ohio Department of Transportation is installing at the K-12 campus/sports complex entrances on state Route 46, noting the tunnel is in place and structurally sound, with guardrails and lighting expected in the next month. The turning lane is currently under way and the entrance should be open in the next couple weeks, he said.

The project is being completed by ODOT at no cost to the district, as is the new parking lot at the sports complex, being fund by the South Range School Foundation, Dunham reminded the public.

In other business the board introduced senior Krista Murray as student representative to the board. The board also granted a supplemental contract to Joyce Stoffer as assistant cross country coach for 2013-2014; hired Joey Phillips as a cafeteria student helper; approved Rose Balog as a part-time cafeteria and part-time bus aide; approved Brandi Kemmer and Rebecca Coburn as part-time bus aides; granted a one-year, part-time classified food service contract to Patty Burns; and granted a two-year, part-time classified employee contract to Karla Baer, Stephanie Coleman, MaryLou Crank, Lisa Ketterer, Sue Molnar and Karrie Taylor.

A Citizens for South Range Schools informational levy campaign meeting is set for 7 p.m. Sept. 30 in the K-12 auditorium. Campaign chairpersons and school officials will be on hand to answer questions about the school's proposed 4.8-mill, 10-year levy on the November ballot.

The next regular board meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 21 at the K-12 campus.

D.C. police: Defense contractor on rampage killed 12 others at Navy Yard

WASHINGTON (AP) — A defense contractor went on a shooting rampage Monday inside a building at the heavily secured Washington Navy Yard, spraying bullets in the hallways and firing from a balcony onto workers in an atrium below. Thirteen people were killed, including the gunman.

Police said the gunman, 34-year-old Aaron Alexis of Texas, used a valid pass to get onto the base before launching the attack, which unfolded about 8:20 a.m. in the heart of the nation's capital, less than four miles from the White House and two miles from the Capitol.

Alexis died after a running gunbattle inside the building with police, investigators said.

"This is a horrific tragedy," Mayor Vincent Gray said.

Investigators said the motive was a mystery. The mayor said there was no indication it was a terrorist attack, but he added that the possibility had not been ruled out.

For much of the day, authorities said they were looking for a possible second attacker who may have been disguised in an olive-drab military-style uniform. But by late Monday night, they said they were convinced the attack was the work of a lone gunman, and the security lockdown around the area was eased.

"We do now feel comfortable that we have the single and sole person responsible for the loss of life inside the base today," Washington Police Chief Cathy Lanier said.

It was the deadliest shooting at a military installation in the U.S. since Maj. Nidal Hasan killed 13 people and wounded more than 30 in 2009 at Fort Hood in Texas. He was convicted last month and sentenced to death.

President Barack Obama lamented yet another mass shooting in the U.S. that he said took the lives of American "patriots." He promised to make sure "whoever carried out this cowardly act is held responsible."

The FBI took charge of the investigation.

At the time of the rampage, Alexis was an information technology employee with a company that was a Defense Department subcontractor, authorities said. Valerie Parlave, head of the FBI's field office in Washington, said he had access to the base as a defense contractor.

The dead ranged in age from 46 to 73, according to the mayor. A number of the victims were civilian employees and contractors, rather than active-duty military personnel, the police chief said.

Alexis had been a full-time Navy reservist from 2007 to early 2011, leaving as a petty officer third class, the Navy said. It did not say why he left. He had been an aviation electrician's mate with a unit in Fort Worth, Texas. A convert to Buddhism who grew up in New York City, Alexis had had run-ins with the law over shooting incidents in 2004 and 2010 in Fort Worth and Seattle and was portrayed in police reports as seething with anger.

Witnesses on Monday described a gunman opening fire from a fourth-floor overlook, aiming down on people on the main floor, which includes a glass-walled cafeteria. Others said a gunman fired at them in a third-floor hallway.

Patricia Ward, a logistics-management specialist, said she was in the cafeteria getting breakfast.

"It was three gunshots straight in a row — pop, pop, pop. Three seconds later, it was pop, pop, pop, pop, pop, so it was like about a total of seven gunshots, and we just started running," Ward said.

In addition to those killed, eight people were hurt — three of them shot and wounded, according to the mayor.

Those wounded were a police officer and two female civilians, authorities said. They were all expected to survive.

Man gets probation for assaulting 2 EL cops

By DEANNE JOHNSON
 Staff Writer
 LISBON — A man who pleaded to assaulting two East Liverpool police officers last October was sentenced to five years probation and ordered by Columbiana County Common Pleas Court Judge C. Ashley Pike to write a letter of apology to the patrolmen.
 "Those police officers go out there and put their life on the line," Pike told defendant Charles Walker during sentencing Monday. "They're not perfect. They get sent out there to try to sort out everyone's problems. You ought give them the presumption of authority."
 According to Assistant County Prosecutor Tammie Riley Jones, patrolmen Fred Flati and Greg Smith were sent to investigate a report of some missing children on Oct. 24, 2012. Walker, who was intoxicated, refused to listen to the police and allow them to conduct their investigation. Eventually, Walker intentionally kicked one patrolman, according to Jones, and struggled with them, resulting in injuries to both.
 Walker denied he was ever told he was under arrest, even when questioned by the probation department during his pre-sentencing investigation. Jones pointed out his story differs from what the police have told us.
 Defense attorney Charley Kidder said he believes Walker is a "good man" who made a bad decision on only one day. Walker had no previous convictions nor had he gotten into any trouble since last October. Walker also reportedly has already begun attending counseling, and all drug screens have been negative.
 "I believe he is as amenable to community control as anyone we have coming in here," Kidder said asking Pike for a probation sentence.
 Pike agreed, giving Walker five years to prove he can make good decisions.
 "Write a letter of apology to the police officers and say something in there about how you respect them for what they do," Pike added.

 A Sept. 23 preliminary hearing and pretrial was set for Jewell, 30, state Route 558, Leetonia, who is charged with aggravated burglary, as well as resisting arrest. Bond was set at $100,000 cash or surety.

OUR SIDE

Vicious cycle of terror never ends

A year ago, as Americans observed another anniversary of the Sept. 11, 2001 attacks on our nation, we were reminded forcefully that more than a decade of campaigns against terrorist organizations had been of only limited value.

On that day, Islamic terrorists attacked the U.S. diplomatic mission in Benghazi, Libya, and killed four Americans. On the same day, a mob attacked our embassy in Cairo. Just three days later, terrorists attacked a joint U.S.-British base in Afghanistan, killing two Marines and destroying valuable aircraft and other equipment.

Then, in April, two immigrants from Islamic regions of Russia set off bombs at the Boston Marathon, killing three people and injuring another 264. Many of the wounded were maimed for life.

This week we marked another anniversary of the 9/11 attacks. We do so in the knowledge Islamic terrorists have had very limited success in attacks within the United States.

At the same time we have come to recognize the enemy remains very powerful, with devotees scattered throughout the world, including right here in our homeland.

At times it seems as if one critic of the very term "war on terror" was right. "A war against terror has no end," he remarked.

During the past decade, U.S. strategy against terrorists has been primarily defensive, though with some successes in killing and capturing Islamic militant leaders. Perhaps it is time to think again about some way to go on the offensive.

Year after year we commemorate the 9/11 attacks in the knowledge many foes of our very way of life remain determined to kill Americans. Surely there is some way to end the vicious cycle.

The president's embarrassment over defeat on Syria

ANDREW NAPOLITANO

When Secretary of State John Kerry, apparently irritated by a lack of sleep, gave a snippy and what he thought was an unrealistic reply to a reporter's question at a London press conference last weekend, he hardly could have imagined the world's response. Asked whether there is anything Syrian President Bashar al-Assad could do at this relatively late hour to avoid an American invasion, Kerry told an international audience that if Assad gave up whatever chemical weapons his government possesses, the U.S. would forgo an invasion.

But not to worry, Kerry added. Assad is not going to do that, and we will end up invading Syria in order to vindicate President Obama's threat to do so. For two days, Obama remained silent on this as his arch-nemesis, Russian President Vladimir Putin, grabbed the spotlight and the high moral ground.

Putin, sounding more like a Nobel Peace laureate than the killer he is known to be, offered to broker a deal whereby the Syrian chemical stockpile would be surrendered to the United Nations, the Syrian government could go about defending itself from the al-Qaida-driven effort to take it over, and the U.S. would leave Syria alone.

Obama is generally firm in his belief that he needs to vindicate the threat he made last summer when he was trying to outdo Mitt

Romney on sounding tough. It was then that Obama threatened to intervene in the Syrian civil war if chemical weapons were used by the government. Nevertheless, hating the international embarrassment visited upon him when suddenly Putin seems more reasonable than he does, Obama conceded to my Fox News colleague Chris Wallace that the Kerry-inspired and Putin-pushed idea seemed worth considering. And then the Syrian government agreed.

Just last week, the president was arguing that only military force would show the world that the U.S. means what it says. Just last week, he realized that he needed political cover in order to justify an unpopular invasion, and so he asked Congress for permission to invade Syria, even while knowing that he already has the legal authority to invade on his own. Just last week, he dispatched his political team, including former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, to argue that war is the only way to go. And just last week, he intimated that he might bomb Syria even if Congress said no.

What happened? What happened was the president's head counters polled their allies on Capitol Hill earlier this week and informed him that he was about to become the first American president in history to seek war-making authority from Congress and have it denied to him, including by many members of his own political party.

The president cannot even say for sure that the weapons he and his advisers claim were used were in fact deployed by the Assad regime. Nor can they state with intellectual honesty that the freedom or safety of Americans is affected by any weaponry used in this civil war 6,700 miles from our shores.

The legal linchpin of American involvement in a foreign war is not American hatred of one of the weapons systems used in the war, but the imminence of danger to American freedom and safety if we stay out. Treaties to which the U.S. is a party and the body of international law to which the U.S. subscribes make clear that the U.S. cannot lawfully use military force to punish the government of another country without first demonstrating that the other country's military poses an immediate threat of danger to the U.S. Obama and Kerry have been unable to address this.

They also have been unable to address how the U.S. can punish Syria for using weapons that the U.S. and the U.N. have outlawed but Syria has not. Put aside the fact that Syria is a client state of Russia and hence will be protected by it at the U.N., Syria never agreed to the U.N. prohibition on chemical weapons in the first place. So the U.N. is without lawful authority to authorize any violent American intercession in Syria over the use of these weapons.

We don't know whether the Syrian government used chemical weapons on its own people who may or may not have been combatants in its civil war. But we do know that the government of Syria -- like all governments -- has a natural right to defend itself from violent attacks by terrorist groups. We also know that the U.S. used chemical weapons to kill hundreds of Vietcong soldiers in South Vietnam in 1965, and used them as well to kill 76 Americans in Waco, Texas, where federal agents murdered peaceful religious fanatics, including their children, in 1993. Can you imagine the response if another country sought to use violence to punish the Clinton administration for that?

What have we here?

We have a president heedless of his duty to uphold the Constitution by keeping the government within its confines, disdainful of international law when it fails to suit his purposes, and contemptuous of a Congress he once controlled when it feels the heat from the American people who have had enough of being lied to and tricked into wars. The American people have come to realize that war is the mother's milk of big government: It kills innocents, increases taxes or borrowing, diminishes personal freedom, and unleashes irrational fears and hatreds, and the government continues to grow.

While all of this has been consuming us, the federal debt is approaching $17 trillion and Obama wants to borrow another trillion, the NSA has been exposed as spying on every computer and every mobile phone in the country for the past two years at the insistence of the Obama administration, and the fiscal bankruptcy of Obamacare is now just below the horizon.

Does the president really expect the American people to approve his bombing and killing just to avoid his personal embarrassment? Or is it his professional incompetence he wants to hide?

Online privacy gone, get over it

FROMA HARROP

Feeling aggrieved over reports of widespread government surveillance? Feeling guilty about not feeling aggrieved? Relax. There's little you can do about the revelations.

But here are seven steps to help adjusting to a world in which the government has the ability to collect and recall your every keystroke:

1) Admit that we are powerless to stop this new technology. (We don't have to like it.)

2) Stop confusing capabilities with actions. The U.S. government is capable of leveling Mount Rushmore. That does not mean it has any intention of launching drone attacks on South Dakota, no matter what your local tea party chapter says.

3) Recognize that this surveillance is key to national security. Former FBI Director Robert Mueller was not alone in warning that a cyberthreat will "equal or even eclipse the terrorist threat." Other governments and bad people are racing for domination.

Whether we trust government, don't trust government or simply want more oversight, this is serious business. It's hard to count how many bloggers have likened the sort of information being culled today with the late FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover's collecting nude photos of political leaders in compromising situations. Those were relatively innocent days.

4) Appreciate that we do have safeguards. When the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court berates the NSA for violating the rules, that's an example of checks and balances in action. China and Russia pass on such niceties as surveillance courts, and they want to do exactly what the National Security Agency does (if they don't already).

5) Admit that commercial spying is a privacy matter, as well. Retailers follow your cellphone around the mall. Macy's knows how much time you spent in the shoe department. Amazon.com knows all about your interest in socialism and passion for manga cartoons. Of course, the telecom companies know whom you called and for how long. If the issue is privacy, what makes a business conglomerate more honorable than the government?

6) Call out media sources hurling thunderbolts at NSA spying while spying on you.

The New York Times recently ran a red-hot editorial railing over the agency's "inexhaustible appetite for delving into the communications of Americans." On the right side of the editorial's Web page was a list of article links labeled "Recommended for You." Now, how would The New York Times know what Froma might want to read?

A search by Ghostery, a browser extension that looks for third-party elements on Web pages, identified no fewer than 11 invisible entities tracking or analyzing the editorial's readers. They included advertisers -- DoubleClick, Google AdSense, Moat -- and three companies I never heard of doing "analytics." Naturally, the Facebook Connect widget was watching me, too.

The British newspaper The Guardian fancies itself the last bulwark against privacy oblivion. But over at the Daily Banter website, Bob Cesca reported finding 92 such Web bugs embedded on the Guardian page featuring a Glenn Greenwald post on the NSA's alleged crimes.

7) In assessing government surveillance activities, distinguish between a "who" and an "it." A computer is an "it." The fact that it is ruffling through all the meta-data -- phone numbers, email addresses, Internet searches -- or even keeping the content of such communications in a vault for five years should not overly concern us.

When an actual human being takes a look, then it's time for questions. When the system works properly, the NSA still needs a warrant to look at content.

I hope these seven steps help. We recently learned that the NSA has cracked the encryption tools protecting the privacy of Internet communications. Two responses: 1) Now we know it can be done. 2) Better us than them.

OTHER VOICES

Akron Beacon Journal, Sept. 8

On Sept. 4, the U.S. Department of Agriculture released its most recent report on "food insecurity" across the country. Ohio did not fare well. Just two states experienced a greater increase in the percentage of households forced to forgo meals or take other steps to compensate for lacking the resources to meet basic food needs. ...

Unfortunately, things are likely to get tougher for some Ohioans who face going hungry. Gov. John Kasich and his team plan to start limiting the availability of Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program, formerly known as food stamps.

For several years, the state has received a federal waiver from work requirements linked to food stamps, the relief largely a response to the deep recession. The full waiver likely could have been extended. Instead, the Kasich administration chose to restrict the waiver to those counties with an unemployment rate exceeding 120 percent of the national rate. Otherwise, able-bodied adults without dependents must either start working or complete job training programs to receive food assistance. ...

John Kasich has talked about the "blessed" helping "those in the shadows." Yet as he champions income tax cuts that largely benefit the wealthy, his administration follows the spirit, if not the entire scope, of too many in Washington, moving to restrict the availability of food assistance when the trend shows more Ohioans struggling with food insecurity.

Man who claimed bogus title sentenced for 11 counts of theft

By DEANNE JOHNSON
Staff Writer

LISBON — Kevin Ehrenberg, the man accused of misrepresenting himself as the CEO of Housing for Chesapeake, will spend only one year in the county jail and another indefinite term receiving counseling at the Eastern Ohio Correctional Center on 11 theft-related charges.

Ehrenberg, 52, used the bogus title to spend more than $21,000 belonging to a New Waterford couple and having another $31,000 in contract work done without the means to pay for it.

Ehrenberg, no address listed, appeared for sentencing Monday in Columbiana County Common Pleas Court.

Despite objections made by Assistant County Prosecutor Ryan Weikart — who was requesting a nine-month prison sentence — Judge C. Ashley Pike said he had to follow the legislative guidelines for fourth- and fifth-degree felonies.

Defense attorney Charley Kidder had noted Ehrenberg did not deny what happened and state legislative guidelines recently put in place would point toward only local incarceration or even probation for someone convicted of those crimes. Especially, Kidder noted, when that person has no previous felonies or even any traffic citations.

While the charges Ehrenberg pleaded to in July were all felony fours or felony fives, Weikart noted there were 11 of them plus he used deception in committing the crimes. He pleaded to misuse of credit cards, three counts forgery, three counts receiving stolen property and four counts theft.

According to Weikart, Ehrenberg represented himself as Kevin Sabatino, the CEO of Housing for Chesapeake. He approached Jeff and Linda Flowers, a New Waterford couple who own duplexes, to allow him to utilize those homes for Chesapeake employees. He convinced them upgrades needed to be made to the homes before the gas and oil employees could live in them, used their personal information to enter into contracts and open lines of credit and even began evicting the tenants renting from the Flowers.

Weikart continued that Ehrenberg talked Linda Flowers into quitting her job so she could go look for other properties for him. He took out a $5,000 home equity line of credit in their name, pocketed $1,000 and put $4,000 in another account to make it look like Chesapeake was beginning to pay for some of the bills.

Jeff Flowers appeared in court and talked about the man who cost him and his wife their credit and have left them with bills from multiple contractors which they cannot pay. Work was done to duplexes owned by the Flowers and at the direction of Ehrenberg by contractors Custom Concrete and Construction, Oliver's Construction and Bruderly Excavating. Additionally, Flowers said he and his wife had begun making deals with real estate companies to purchase more duplexes as Ehrenberg requested.

"I believe without incarceration he will just get back into the game," Flowers said. "He wasn't who he reported to be."

Pike pushed Flowers further to tell him about a letter reportedly sent to county Commissioner Mike Halleck. Flowers said he and his wife had put their intention to rent their duplexes to Chesapeake employees in a letter, which was hand-delivered to Halleck at an event held at a local church to answer the residents' questions about the gas and oil industry coming to the area. Flowers pointed out Ehrenberg could have even been there that night and somehow knew about a letter.

"Did the fact that he knew about this letter, did that give him some credibility in your eyes," Pike questioned?

"Yes sir," Flowers responded.

Prior to sentencing, Ehrenberg told Pike he was drinking a lot at the time and his father had recently passed away. He credited Detective Andy Sweeney of the Columbiana County Sheriff's Department with helping him survive what he had done. Ehrenberg said he did not know how it happened, adding he was down on his luck.

"There are 11 counts here," Pike said. "I find it hard to believe people are out thousands of dollars and you don't know how this happened."

Besides the jail time and EOCC counseling, Pike ordered a three-year term of probation and restitution.

"I don't think there's a chance you're going to get one penny out of him," Pike told Flowers. "Unfortunately, the court can't create money for those who have done things to others. This man's just a poor excuse for a human being." djohnson@mojoneews.com

The vehicle has a gas-powered engine and headlights. A neighbor told deputies he saw the Cushman leave the yard at about 8 p.m. after dark. He saw it nearly crash a couple times while it was driven through a couple yards and he heard two male voices yelling at each other. The vehicle then went east on state Route 154. Another neighbor told deputies he came outside and saw the vehicle sitting at the end of his driveway with the four-way flashers on, but did not see who was driving it because it was dark. It turned east onto state Route 154. Deputies checked the area.

— Terry Gott, Center Drive, Homeworth, reported at 10:37 a.m. Friday her mother has been sending harassing messages in the mail with no return address. Deputies contacted Gott's brother, who said his mother had sent Gott a letter asking her to please stop spreading rumors about her. Deputies told him to have his mother stop.

— Russ Williams, Beech Street, Hanoverton, reported at 2 a.m. Friday he saw what looked like flashlights in the interior of a neighbor's house. Deputies checked the house and found the outside light is flickering, which appeared as Williams reported.

— At 3:38 p.m. on Sept. 12, the mother, father and stepmother of a 17-year-old Haiti Road, Salineville, girl reported she had not come home. The stepmother had called the girl, who said she did not want to come home and hung up. The mother called her and she claimed she had gone to her 17-year-old boyfriend's home instead of to school and the two had driven five hours to Maryland, got married and came back. After Carroll County deputies went to the boyfriend's house and the girl refused to leave, the prosecutor's office in Columbiana County suggested a runaway warrant should be filed. The girl came home before the warrant was issued.

Neighbors reportedly saw a man, Josh Crooms, climbing into the house through a window at the back of the house. As deputies were walking to the house, the front door opened and a man came out. He was ordered to the ground at gunpoint and handcuffed. Crooms told deputies he lives at the house with his mother. Deputies confirmed with neighbors that Crooms and his mother live in the home. Crooms told deputies he climbed through the window because he has no key. He was released.

— Dottie Cutlip, Parkview Drive, Lisbon, reported gunshots in the area of Guilford Lake at 7:35 a.m. Friday. Deputies saw a small boat with a duck blind around it near one of the islands at the western end of the lake and heard gunshots from the area of the boat. The occupants voluntarily came ashore to meet deputies. The men were duck hunting and had registered with the park office to do so. The type of rounds the men were using should not have carried enough firepower for them to hit shore several hundred feet past the shoreline as was reported.

— While attempting to serve a warrant on Stephen Wesley Bell, 27, North Lincoln Avenue, Salem, he attempted to escape by taking a bicycle at 4:02 p.m. Thursday. He was ordered to stop and crashed in a gravel driveway. Despite being ordered to stay down, Bell reportedly ran and was chased by deputies. He was tased and fell in an alley. Bell was treated at Salem Community Hospital for his injuries.

Investigators check bus in Ohio crash

CINCINNATI (AP) — Investigators on Monday examined the brakes and other parts of a Greyhound bus that ran off an interstate and flipped over in the southwest Ohio over the weekend. The Ohio State Highway Patrol was getting help from the U.S. Department of Transportation and the Butler County Sheriff's office in trying to determine what happened along Interstate 75 in the early morning hours Saturday. At least 35 people were injured; six remained hospitalized Monday. "We're still putting together pieces of the puzzle," said Highway Patrol Lt. Edward Mejia. "We haven't determined the cause." Mejia said the 64-year-old driver was injured after being trapped inside the overturned bus, but Mejia didn't have an update on the extent of his injuries or condition. He said the driver, Dwayne Garrett of Cincinnati, gave a statement to investigators and voluntarily had blood drawn for testing.

"We know what we have but we don't what demand is out there," he said.

In other business, the board voted to extend Drake's contract for another year. Drake's contract was renewed last year, with two options to extend the contract for another year each time, which was a break from the past when he was awarded a six-year deal.

The terms and conditions of the contract remain the same. Drake is paid a base salary of $200,000, plus a vehicle allowance.

Board member Keith Chamberlin, who just came on board in March, said he had no problem voting in favor of extending Drake's contract but prefers they establish a job evaluation process in the future.

Washingtonville council hears 2 options on bridge repair

By LARRY SHIELDS Staff Writer

WASHINGTONVILLE — After viewing two options on fixing the old Boston St. bridge by W.E. Quicksall & Assoc. Inc. on Monday, Mayor Will Jones said there was one more legal issue to settle before council takes action on it.

Paul D. Logan, the senior engineer for W.E. Quicksall presented a complete replacement repair at a cost of $113,500 with money coming from an 11 percent local share, $49,000 from an Ohio Public Works Commission grant and $51,000 from an OPWC zero-interest loan.

The annual payments will total $1,717 over 30 years and the replacement would have a life expectancy of 75 years, Logan explained.

A second funding option for a complete replacement included an 11 percent share of $12,500 with an OPWC grant of $25,000 and a loan of $75,800 with an annual payback of $2,527 at zero-percent interest over 30 years.

A partial replacement had a project cost of $69,500 with an 11 percent local share of $7,640 and an OPWC grant of $30,310 and loan of $31,550 with annual payments of $1,052 over 30 years at zero-percent interest.

The second funding option for the partial replacement also has an 11 percent local share of $7,640 with an OPWC grant of $15,460 and loan of $46,000 with annual payments of $1,547 for 30 years at zero-percent interest.

Logan made several points the village should keep in mind before making a decision including considering the remaining life of the existing culvert — which is unknown; the condition of the concrete and depth of the existing abutments is unknown; and the village is taking a risk if a field inspection is not performed before submitting its application to the OPWC.

The deadline for the application is Nov. 1 and if everything proceeds smoothly the village could have the money next July 1 and Logan said the work should take three to four weeks.

"Our recommendation is to go with option one," Logan said, referring to the complete replacement and the most expensive repair.

"We don't know how old the existing culvert is," he said.

The project does not include wing-walls, just a head-wall, Logan said.

The company was looking for authorization from the village to move ahead with the application, but Jones said, "We have one other legal thing we have to do before we can take action," adding that he would let the company know later in the week.

In other business, Assistant Police Chief Mark Husk turned in his resignation effective Sept. 13 to take a position with the Greenville, S.C., sheriff's department.

Husk had been with the Washingtonville P.D. for five years and Jones said, "I hate to see you leave" after five years of "outstanding service."

Husk said it was an opportunity he had to take.

In other police business, council approved the promotion of Officer Bill Beaver to the rank of sergeant.

The village will hold its picnic in the park from 3 to 7 p.m. Saturday at 415 S. County Road. The event includes a bounce house, dunk tank, balloon pop, face painting, a corn hole contest and 50/50 raffle.

Any donations and money raised will go toward restoring the village park.

Hotdogs and beverages will be furnished.

Ohio Falls Prevention Awareness Day to be marked

EAST LIVERPOOL — North Star Critical Care has joined forces with state and local partners in observing Sept. 22 as Ohio Falls Prevention Awareness Day. Celebrated each year on the first day of autumn, Falls Prevention Awareness Day was designed to educate Ohioans that the risks of falling may increase as they grow older, but that falling is not a normal part of the aging process and can be prevented. The theme for 2013 is "Preventing Falls, One Step at a Time."

The Ohio Departments of Health and Aging are working to reduce the incidence of falls, while the Ohio Older Adults Falls Prevention Coalition, an action group of the Ohio Injury Prevention Partnership, works to increase awareness of this issue and promote evidence-based policies and interventions at the state and local level.

Four "small steps" can help reduce your risk of falls and falls-related injuries: increase your physical activity; visit your eye doctor once each year; review your medications; and remove environmental hazards.

To learn about available trainings and resources to help reduce your risks of falling, contact North Star 330-386-9111 or 330-420-9111, your area agency on aging (866-243-5678) or your local health department (www.odh.ohio.gov).

GM working on 200-mile electric car, executive says

WARREN, Mich. (AP) — As automakers race to make cheaper electric cars with greater battery range, General Motors is working on one that can go 200 miles per charge at a cost of about $30,000, a top company executive said.

Vice President of Global Product Development Doug Parks wouldn't say when or if such a car will be built, however.

Currently GM sells the $35,000 Chevrolet Volt plug-in hybrid, which can go 38 miles on electricity before a gas-powered generator kicks in. It also offers the all-electric Chevy Spark subcompact that can go 82 miles on a charge. It starts at $26,685. Electric cars are eligible for a $7,500 federal tax credit.

The 200-mile car would cost about the same as the current Volt, and it would match the range and be far cheaper than Tesla Motors' $71,000, all-electric Model S. The Model S can go up to 265 miles on a single charge.

A moderately priced electric car with a 200-mile range would make electric cars more appealing to Americans, solving the two chief complaints about such cars: Anxiety over running out of power and high price, said Tom Libby, lead North American analyst for the Polk automotive research firm.

"That would be a huge step forward, no question," he said.

Currently, cars powered solely by batteries make up only 0.3 percent of U.S. sales, Libby said, but he's confident that would increase if an automaker came out with a moderately priced 200-mile car.

Tesla gets accolades for the Model S, including the highest test score ever recorded by Consumer Reports magazine. And the Palo Alto, Calif., company also is working on a mass-market electric car. CEO Elon Musk has said it will have around a 200-mile range and cost about $35,000. It could go on sales as early as the end of 2016, he has said.

GM has taken a different approach from Tesla, Parks said, pricing electric vehicles from around $25,000 to about $40,000. They don't go as far after each charge, which has kept battery costs down and made the cars more affordable, he said.

"Their pricing is up there for a real unique customer," Parks said of Tesla. "The real trick will be who can do a 200-mile car for more of the price range I'm talking about. We're all in races to do that."

The 200-mile car won't be the next-generation Volt. Speaking at a Monday event to show off GM's expanded battery laboratory at its technical center in Warren, a suburb north of Detroit, Parks said that GM engineers are now working on a new Volt, which will go a little farther on electricity than the current model and cost a little less. He wouldn't say when it will arrive in showrooms or how much it will cost.

GM on Monday showed off a 50,000-square-foot addition to the battery lab. The added space, which nearly doubled the lab's size, will let the company test batteries and computer controls much faster than before. Parks said the goal is to develop electric cars twice as fast as the company could in the past. It took GM about four years to develop the Volt and bring it to market.

ITCL's lower tier off to fast start on gridiron

As this weekend's games came to a close there was plenty of good news for the Inter-Tri County League lower tier.

The ITCL lower tier completed the non-league portion of the schedule with an impressive 19-5 record and went 6-1 against playoff teams from a year ago.

Granted three of those wins against playoff teams came from Western Reserve (who by far had the most difficult out of league schedule), but it was definitive progress for a league who has two new members in Mineral Ridge and Jackson-Milton this time around.

With the addition of a seventh division, the ITCL lower tier should be in position to get a few years in the new watered-down version of the playoffs.

But don't look too glowingly at that 19-5 mark. The ITCL lower tier out-of-league opponent's combined record was 27-45.

The ITCL upper tier had balanced results in its non-league slate. Crestview and South Range, who meet this Friday in the league opener at the old South Range High School, are both undefeated after playing challenging opponents. The Rebels ripped off wins against new Div. IV members West Branch and Beaver Local before dispatching new Div. V member Youngstown Liberty on Friday. Crestview coach Paul Cusick called Liberty a "big school" after the win on Friday, but the Leopards are in the same division as the Rebels this season. Oh how times have changed.

The Raiders, a new member of Div. VI this season, knocked off Div. VII's Warren JFK, Div. V's Campbell Memorial and Div.

VII's Garfield Heights Trinity in their non-league affairs. IF the Raiders upset Crestview on Friday, the reward - outside of the inside track in the league race - will be a great deal of computer points. The Rebels won't benefit nearly as much with a win coupled with their Div. V status.

As for the ITCL upper tier as a whole, the league was 11-13. East Palestine and Columbiana going winless will hurt as far as the playoffs are concerned as will United, Southern and Lisbon's one-win performances. If 2-1 Springfield can stay consistent, the Tigers will be able to challenge for the league title as well as a playoff spot in Div. VI.

Overall, the upper tier was 4-3 against playoff teams from a year ago, but the stat that jumps out is the 43-29 record of the upper tier's out-of-league opponents.

It's a mixed bag for the area's Northeastern Buckeye Conference teams. Salem, West Branch and Minerva reside in Div. IV, Region 11 this season. The state's addition of a seventh division will allow greater room for error as far as the playoffs are concerned, but this will definitely be a one-week-at-a-time league slate for the 2-1 Quakers and Lions going forward as the league was a combined 16-8 in its non-league performances.

MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL — CLEVELAND AT KANSAS CITY

Royals slide past Indians, 7-1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — James Shields kept the Indians off balance for six innings, Salvador Perez led a scrappy Kansas City offense and the Royals pounded Cleveland 7-1 on Monday night to open a three-game set with significant playoff implications.

Shields struck out a season-high 10 for the Royals (79-71), who moved within 2 1/2 games of the AL's second wild-card berth. The Indians (81-69) remained a half-game back of Texas, which lost to Tampa Bay earlier in the night in a matchup of teams leading the wild-card race.

Shields (12-9) allowed only Lonnie Chisenhall's solo homer before turning the game over to his stingy bullpen. Wade Davis, Luke Hochevar and Tim Collins did the rest in a steady drizzle.

Scott Kazmir (8-9) gave up four runs in 5-plus innings for the Indians. He didn't get a whole lot of help from his offense, which racked up a season-high 17 strikeouts.

Perez finished with three hits and was among six different players to drive in a run for Kansas City, which is chasing its first postseason berth

Scott Shields struck out a season-high 10 for the Royals (79-71), who moved within 2 1/2 games of the AL's second wild-card berth since winning the 1985 World Series.

Accustomed to pitching in meaningful September games, Shields kept the Indians guessing all night. The former Rays ace struck out Yan Gomes to leave two aboard in the fourth — roaring as he walked off the mound — and then fanned three in the fifth after Chisenhall went deep.

The only other trouble Shields had occurred in the first. Nick Swisher reached on a single before Carlos Santana sent a two-out double down the right-field line. Swisher was held at third base, and then was stranded when Michael Brantley grounded out to end the inning.

Butler started the scoring by driving in Emilio Bonifacio with a two-out single in the first, and then Kansas City tacked on another run in the third thanks to some hustle. Alex Gordon struck out swinging but raced to first base when Kazmir's wild pitch went to the backstop. He reached third on Eric Hosmer's single and scored on Perez's two-out base knock.

Kansas City pulled away in the sixth with the help of shoddy Indians fielding.

Perez and Cain opened the inning with back-to-back triples for a 3-1 lead, and David Lough added a pinch-hit single to provide the Royals with another run.

Alcides Escobar reached base when shortstop Asdrubal Cabrera fielded his grounder and threw wide of first for an error, and then Bonifacio hit a dribbler toward Chisenhall at third that he mishandled for another error. The second in a span of three batters resulted in a 5-1 game.

The Royals added a pair of runs in the seventh inning to put it away.

Notes: RHP Yordano Ventura will make his big league debut for the Royals on Tuesday night in place of LHP Danny Duffy. ... Indians RHP Justin Masterson (oblique strain) threw from 110 feet before the game. Manager Terry Francona said he's hopeful Masterson will be available down the stretch. ... RHP Corey Kluber will start for the Indians Wednesday.

Browns QB Weeden has sprained thumb, may miss time

BEREA (AP) — Browns quarterback Brandon Weeden's thumb is only sprained.

Cleveland's offense is broken, and in need of quick repair.

Weeden injured his thumb in the fourth quarter of Sunday's 14-6 loss at Baltimore and will probably miss this week's game when the Browns (0-2) visit Minnesota.

Cleveland coach Rob Chudzinski seemed to be leaning toward starting either backup Jason Campbell or third-stringer Brian Hoyer

Coach Rob Chudzinski said the team will wait and see how Weeden's injury responds over the next few days, but he seemed to be leaning toward starting either backup Jason Campbell or third-stringer Brian Hoyer.

Campbell filled in for one series — he went 1 of 4 for 6 yards — after Weeden got hurt when he smacked his hand on a helmet after throwing a pass.

However, Chudzinski said he will consider starting Hoyer, who has been No. 3 on Cleveland's depth chart since the start of training camp, against the Vikings.

"I'm going to keep all of our options open," Chudzinski said, perhaps to keep the Vikings guessing.

"We have two options — Jason and Brian. I'm confident in all the guys that we have. We'll put the guy out there that I feel like is going to give us the best chance on Sunday if it's not Brandon."

Weeden was not available in the locker room during the period it was open to reporters on Mon-

Playing both ways

Crestview senior McDade one of few Rebels to start on offense and defense

By CHRIS RAMBO
Staff Writer

COLUMBIANA — High school football — especially at the smaller level — is generally the last place that fans can watch the game as it was played in the first half of the 20th century, with each player going the full game on offense and defense. Crestview High School is not one of those places.

The Rebels are one of the few area teams that can afford the luxury of two-platoon football. So far this season, senior defensive end-tight end Josh McDade has been the only Crestview player to shoulder a full workload on both sides.

"Playing both ways means that you have to be in top condition, both physically and mentally, to be able to last the whole game," McDade said. "To have so few guys playing both offense and defense is an advantage for us. It keeps guys fresh for late in the game."

Crestview coach Paul Cusick estimates that many of the Rebels' Inter-Tri County League opponents play 70 percent of their players on both sides of the ball. However, a roster that usually numbers around 60 allows the Rebels to split things up.

JOSH McDADE

"Every year when we get ready to start a new season we plan on having a minimal amount of guys going both ways," Cusick said, "It's something I truly believe in. Not only does it help prevent injuries, it gives a lot of players a role on the team and keeps them involved."

Cusick traced the start of his two-platoon system back to 2004, when the Rebels first started running a quick-tempo, no-huddle offense. He noticed that the fast pace was taking a physical toll on his team, and in 2005, began having the vast majority of players focus on one position. It is something the Rebels have done ever since.

"Our goal on offense is to

Buckeyes try their best to get up for Florida A&M

COLUMBUS (AP) — No. 4 Ohio State's players aren't exactly thrilled to be playing a Football Championship Subdivision opponent on Saturday.

Asked if he'd prefer to be playing a team similar in stature to the Buckeyes, safety Christian Bryant said, "I would. I like to showcase our talent. I would like to play, like, bigger games."

That's the dilemma facing the Buckeyes (3-0) heading into Saturday's game at Ohio Stadium against Florida A&M (1-2). They would like to tune up for the start of Big Ten play the following week, but first they must play an overwhelming underdog that doesn't exactly get the juices flowing.

Coach Urban Meyer recognizes the problem. He's heaped praise on the talent of opponents Buffalo, San Diego State and California — calling at least one player from each as one of the best in the nation at their position. But even he can't make the Rattlers sound like a viable threat.

"I could give you some coach-speak up here (but) it does make a difference" when the opponent is from a lower division, Meyer said. "So we are going to have to really coach (the players) hard this week."

The game marks the second time in recent years that Ohio State has elected to pay big money to an FCS — or, in the case of Youngstown State back in 2008, NCAA Division I-AA — school to come to Columbus.

Florida A&M, coming off losses to Tennessee State and Samford, will get $900,000 to take on the Buckeyes at noon on Saturday.

If he had a choice, Bryant said the opponent would "definitely be a top-10 team."

"But it's really out of our control," he said. "I'm not really sure who makes the schedule, but we've still just got to go out there and face whatever team is put in front of us."

The days of ranked teams playing FCS teams may be nearing the end, with Ohio State and most other top teams upgrading their schedules to accommodate the new four-team football playoff which begins next season. The Buckeyes have home-and-home series with Virginia Tech, Oklahoma, TCU, Oregon and Texas over the next decade.

For now, though, the Rattlers will have to do.

Ohio State is averaging 44.7 points a game — and that's without its top quarterback, Braxton Miller, who has missed almost all of the past two games with a sprained ligament in his left knee.

Meyer isn't worried. He stopped short of calling an over-matched team a "faceless opponent," but said he believes his team is in the right frame of mind.

The Buckeyes entertain Wisconsin a week from Saturday in their first conference game of the season. It's difficult to muster much motivation for the Rattlers.

"The one thing I told my guys today, I said, 'Listen, this week is about us,'" tight ends and full-backs coach Tim Hinton said. "This is a challenge (for) us. The bottom line is how well do we do what we need to do. Normally the odds are in our favor that if we do a pretty good job, we'll win the game."

The Buckeyes don't have a whole lot to clean up. They've walloped all three opponents so far, outrushing them by a 3-to-1 margin while passing for almost as many yards and forcing almost twice as many turnovers.

There still are some wrinkles to iron out, however. Cal quarterback Jared Goff threw for 371 yards, so maybe the pass rush could supply more pressure.

Defensive line coach Mike Vrabel said there's no hiding from the fact that an FCS team doesn't capture the imagination of the players.

"The players know it, everybody knows it," he said. "But our job is to go out there and be ready to play 60 minutes of physical, tough, Ohio State football."

Backup quarterback Kenny Guiton has been stellar since stepping in for the injured Miller. He's completing almost 70 percent of his passes with seven touchdowns and just one interception. This week's Big Ten offensive player of the week has also run for 175 yards the past two games.

Regardless of the opponent, Guiton said, the goals are always pretty much the same.

"You come out and you sharpen up your tools," he said. "We want to be perfect. You're never going to be perfect, but that's what you play for."

snap the ball within 12 to 15 seconds of it being spotted," Cusick said. "We weren't going to be able to sustain that kind of pace with players going two ways. There was too much wear and tear."

"Playing two ways, you almost never get a break," McDade said. "In this offense it's great for most of our linemen to not play defense full time. They are always hustling and trying to get on the ball as quick as possible. You can tell in the fourth quarter how fresh they are compared to the other team."

In addition to an advantage in stamina, Cusick also believes the two-platoon system has added an extra dimension to practices.

"If we need to, we can practice our first team players against one another," Cusick said. "We do that a lot in camp and in preseason practice and it really steps up the intensity. It also gives our younger players a chance to see how the scout team is supposed to work and allows them to get a feel for the pace we want to practice with."

The Rebels have been able to maintain their system due consistently high roster numbers—always a challenge at a smaller school.

"I think winning has a lot to do with the amount of players that keep coming out," Cusick said. "Also, with players only going one way, a lot of guys get a chance to be involved and be a part of the tradition.. It gives a lot of guys the chance to play special teams and earn a letter, which helps keep enthusiasm up."

This year, McDade has been the only full-time two-way player. An All-Ohio first-team tackle last season, the senior has been moved to tight end on offense in addition to playing defensive end. At 6-foot-2 and 254 pounds, he creates an inviting target for quarterback Collin Gilbert.

"I played tight end my freshman year, and it's a lot more fun catching passes than playing tackle" McDade said. "The main adjustment was learning the routes. The blocking has been pretty much the same."

Gilbert and linebacker Jake Ferris have also crossed over at times this season. Gilbert made a game-ending interception last week against Liberty and Ferris also saw time on offense, scoring the Rebels' first touchdown.

"We aren't going to be stubborn and hold guys to one position just for the sake of doing it," Cusick said. "If somebody playing both ways is going to help our team, we won't hesitate to do it. By limiting early season wear and tear we are able to plug some guys in on both sides of the ball if we see a weakness later in the year."

The Rebels and their two-platoon system will try and wear out South Range in an ITCL upper tier opener on Friday.

Pirates one-hit by Padres' Cashner, 2-1

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The San Diego Padres have gone 45 seasons without a no-hitter. Andrew Cashner nearly put a perfect end to their drought.

The right-hander carried a perfect game into the seventh inning and faced the minimum 27 batters in a one-hitter that sent San Diego past the Pittsburgh Pirates 2-0 on Monday night.

Cashner (10-8) retired his first 18 batters before Jose Tabata grounded a clean single into right field leading off the seventh. Tabata was erased when Andrew McCutchen grounded into an inning-ending double play, and Cashner cruised the rest of the way for his first complete game in 31 career starts.

"I've had some no-hitters broken up before and I think in previous times I've learned to stay with my game plan and keep making pitches," Cashner said. "That was a big spot in the game with McCutchen up. I kept telling myself to keep throwing my sinker where I wanted to, even though I gave up the hit on it."

The Padres, who began play in 1969, remain the only major league franchise without a no-hitter.

Cashner, who has not allowed more than three earned runs in any of his last 11 starts, did not second-guess himself about throwing a sinker to Tabata.

"I didn't want to get beat with my slider there," Cashner said. "I still think it's a great pitch. I still think it's the right pitch. That's the way it goes."

"I've had some no-hitters broken up before and I think in previous times I've learned to stay with my game plan and keep making pitches."

Cashner struck out seven, did not walk a batter and threw 97 pitches. He also scored from second on a single, sliding home with the second run of the game, moments before giving up Tabata's hit.

Though Cashner said he had never scored from second base or slid into home plate as a professional, he did not blame that for losing the no-hitter.

"Scoring that run helped keep me in the game," he said.

The Pirates lost for the second time in eight games after entering the day tied for first place in the NL Central with the St. Louis Cardinals, who played later at Colorado.

"Cashner was throwing three quality pitches for strikes and, most importantly, he was keeping them all down in the strike zone," Pittsburgh second baseman Neil Walker said. "Sometimes, you have games like this where the other guy just pitches a great game."

Kyle Blanks, Ronny Cedeno and Rene Rivera each had two hits as the Padres won for the ninth time in 13 games. They are 17-3 in their last 20 at PNC Park.

A.J. Burnett (8-11) took a shutout into the seventh but wound up with the loss. He allowed two runs and six hits in 6 2-3 innings, with three walks and eight strikeouts.

"A.J. pitched a heck of a ballgame himself," Pirates manager Clint Hurdle said.

San Diego broke through for two runs against Burnett in the seventh. Cedeno and Rivera opened the inning with singles, and Cashner bunted into a fielder's choice that left runners at the corners.

Will Venable hit a sacrifice fly, and Cashner scored on Jedd Gyorko's single to left.

The Padres left runners in scoring position in the fourth, fifth, sixth and eighth — but it didn't matter the way Cashner pitched.

"Once you get into the fifth inning, I always think about the possibility of a no-hitter," Padres manager Bud Black said. "The way Cash was throwing, where his pitch count was, the look in his eye — the whole everything was set up for a good game."

NOTES: San Diego closer Huston Street missed the game to attend to a personal matter and is not expected to rejoin the team until Wednesday. ... Padres 1B Yonder Alonso could take batting practice with his teammates sometime during the four-game series that concludes Thursday. ... A sizeable contingent of fans made the 90-minute drive from Morgantown, W.Va., to cheer Gyorko, a native of the city and former star at West Virginia. ... Pittsburgh LHP Jeff Locke (10-5, 3.14 ERA) starts Tuesday night against LHP Eric Stults (8-13, 4.03).

▶ NASCARIn The Pits: SpinGate spun out of control early

JOLIET, Ill. (AP) — Everything could have been handled better from the moment Clint Bowyer spun at Richmond to trigger the biggest credibility crisis in NASCAR history.

That spin started as the well-intentioned desire to help a teammate earn a valuable spot in NASCAR's version of the playoffs, and with a little honesty, a few deep breaths and some clear thinking, it might have ended there.

Instead, the situation snowballed, and NASCAR quickly had a full-blown scandal on its hands.

So on the eve of the opening race of the Chase for the Sprint Cup championship, chairman Brian France gathered all the competitors of his family-built series and tersely ordered them to give 100 percent at all times going forward.

That's right, the lasting slogan of this dark chapter for NASCAR will forever be "give 100 percent."

Where did things go so wrong?:

—There was no spin on the spin: Bowyer's attempt to bring out a caution was at minimum poor sportsmanship, but not uncommon in NASCAR. It just happened to be a big race with high stakes and a lot of people watching. His Michael Waltrip Racing crew chief had the bright idea to help Martin Truex

Jr. stave off elimination from the Chase, and instructed Bowyer over his radio to "itch" his arm.

Bowyer did have poison oak, but the command was so bizarre it was immediately recognized as an obvious code word. Bowyer also did himself no favors after the race, denying intent during a deer-in-headlights interview on live TV.

NASCAR, apparently unaware of the in-car audio conversation, dismissed as implausible the notion Bowyer might have intentionally spun. That only fueled conspiracy theorists.

When audio the next day revealed MWR general manager Ty Norris ordered a confused Brian Vickers to pit late in the race in an attempt to help Truex, NASCAR suddenly had a serious problem.

It's doubtful, though, the two MWR teams were ever working in concert. Nothing has indicated the players involved were smart enough to successfully execute any level of this conspiracy. And the entire organization went into lockdown for almost 48 hours, with team owner Waltrip carrying on with his duties as analyst for a Truck Series race with no mention of the controversy, even as rage was clearly building among race fans.

Pirates announce minor league players of year

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Pirates announced Monday that outfielder Andrew Lambo is their minor league player of the year and Tyler Glasnow is their minor league pitcher of the year.

The 25-year-old Lambo hit a combined .282 with 24 doubles, five triples, 32 home runs, 99 RBIs and a .574 slugging percentage in 120 games between Double-A Altoona and Triple-A Indianapolis. His 32 home runs are the most by a Pirates farmhand since Brad Eldred hit 38 in 2004.

Glasnow went 9-3 with a 2.18 ERA in 24 starts while spending the entire season with Single-A West Virginia, which tied a club record with 82 wins while making the playoffs for the third time in the club's nine-year history. The 20-year-old righthander set a club record with 167 strikeouts.

Juan Pablo Montoya to drive for Team Penske

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Juan Pablo Montoya has an added boost of motivation to win races again.

And he's teaming with longtime boss Chip Ganassi's top rival to do it.

Montoya ended his underwhelming NASCAR stint on Monday for a return to IndyCar, where he'll drive for Ganassi rival Roger Penske.

The Colombian has agreed to join Team Penske next season as a teammate to current IndyCar points leader Helio Castroneves and Will Power. He could also drive in some NASCAR races as part of the deal.

He could also consider the move a big piece of gamesmanship in the racing rivalry that spans two series between Ganassi and Penske.

Ganassi decided in August he was not bringing Montoya back to his NASCAR program next season. But he and Penske are fierce rivals in IndyCar, and Ganassi driver Scott Dixon is currently locked in the championship battle with Castroneves.

Murray scores late in OT to lift Jackets over Pens

COLUMBUS (AP) — Rookie defenseman Ryan Murray scored 4:38 into overtime to lift the Columbus Blue Jackets past the Pittsburgh Penguins 5-4 on Sunday night in the preseason opener for both teams.

Murray took a feed from R.J. Umberger and beat backup goalie Jeff Zatkott. Murray was the No. 2 pick in the 2012 NHL draft but missed the season with a shoulder injury.

Chuck Kobasew got Pittsburgh even 4-4 at 13:05 of the third period with a power-play goal — his second tally of the game. Mark Letestu and Cam Atkinson scored 30 seconds apart earlier in the period to give Columbus a 4-3 lead.

Dustin Jeffrey's power-play goal for Pittsburgh had made it 3-2 at 4:19.

Pittsburgh's James Neal opened the scoring 47 seconds in. Columbus' Artem Anisimov and James Wisniewski had goals in the first period.

Marc-Andre Fleury allowed two goals on 12 shots, and Curtis McElhinney made 24 saves for the Blue Jackets in two periods of work.

No joke: Seinfeld to broadcast Mets game vs Giants

NEW YORK (AP) — Stop me if you've heard this one before.

Jerry Seinfeld will join the broadcast crew Tuesday for the New York Mets, a team that is 15 games below .500 and with little to laugh about this season.

The comic is a longtime fan of the team. He will appear on the pregame show and then join Gary Cohen, Keith Hernandez and Ron Darling for the call of the game against the San Francisco Giants.

Seinfeld also broadcast a game between the Mets and Detroit on June 23, 2010.

Another comedian, Bill Maher, bought a minority ownership stake in the Mets last year.

Zach Johnson rallies to win BMW Championship

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — Zach Johnson is having a September to remember, and there's still one very big week to go.

In one tournament, he made a 25-foot birdie putt on his final hole to earn the last spot on the Presidents Cup team. In the next one, Johnson made a bunch of big putts in the final round of the rain-delayed BMW Championship for a 6-under 65 for a two-shot victory over Nick Watney.

His win Monday at Conway Farms gave Johnson the No. 4 seed going into Tour Championship, giving him a clear shot at the FedEx Cup and its $10 million prize.

Johnson's 10th career win came at the expense of Jim Furyk, who endured another dose of final-round disappointment. Furyk, who had a one-shot lead, has failed to win the last six times he had at least a share of the lead going into the last round. He holed a 12-foot birdie putt at No. 10 to build a two-shot lead, but played the last eight holes in 2-over and wound up with a 71 to finish alone in third.

Furyk had to settle for slice of history Friday as the sixth player in PGA Tour history with a 59. Only three players in that exclusive club went on to win — Al Geiberger is the only player to win when the 59 was not in the final round.

Two Browns players involved in traffic incidents

CLEVELAND (AP) — Two Browns players were involved in traffic incidents on Monday.

Wide receiver Greg Little, who has a history of driving troubles, was issued three traffic violations after being stopped at 1 a.m., Cleveland police said. Also, guard Shawn Lauvao got his car stuck on a curb when he drove into a downtown construction zone. Team spokesman Zak Gilbert said Lauvao was not injured and there was no alcohol involved.

Lauvao, who has been sidelined since undergoing ankle surgery last month, was headed toward the team's facility when he inadvertently drove onto the entrance ramp to a new bridge. He attempted to turn his car around and got stuck, Gilbert said. Lauvao's car had to be towed.

Little, who recently settled a ticket for driving with an expired license plate and was ticketed for speeding, was cited for a stop-sign violation, change of course and driving with a suspended license, Sgt. Sammy Moore said.

In April, Little was charged with drag racing after he lost control of his Audi and was involved in a single-car accident. He admitted to driving 127 mph, hit a guardrail, knocked down a light pole and left 40 yards of brake tracks. He was fined $350.

Last month, Little was cited for driving 81 mph in a 60 mph zone.

Browns coach Rob Chudzinski said he spoke with Little about his new traffic offenses. Chudzinski said any discipline for Little would be handled "in house."

Little had four catches for 33 yards in the Browns' 14-6 loss to the Baltimore Ravens on Sunday.

Myers homers to lift Rays over Rangers
ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Rookie Wil Myers helped the struggling Tampa Bay Rays get a key victory in the opener of a four-game series.

Myers homered and had three RBIs, Alex Cobb pitched eight solid innings and the Rays took the lead for the first AL wild-card spot by beating the Texas Rangers 6-2 on Monday night. "It's big ... just to come out here and beat this team," Myers said. Texas remained a half-game ahead of Cleveland for the second AL wild-card spot. Myers had a second-inning solo shot and hit a two-run double during a four-run fifth. Cobb (9-3) allowed two runs, six hits, one walk and had 10 strikeouts. Matt Garza (9-6) gave up six runs and eight hits over 4 1-3 innings to lose his third straight start for the Rangers, who have lost seven in a row and are 2-12 in September. Garza is 3-5 with Texas since being acquired.

Rockies keep Cards tied for 1st with win
DENVER (AP) — Todd Helton started his final home stand with a key single in the eighth inning that helped the Colorado Rockies beat the St. Louis Cardinals 6-2 on Monday night. Charlie Blackmon had three hits and drove in three runs for the Rockies, who prevented the Cardinals from taking over sole possession of first place in the NL Central. They remained tied with the Pittsburgh Pirates, who lost 2-0 to San Diego. Matt Carpenter and Matt Adams had two hits each for the Cardinals. Helton was playing in front of Colorado fans for the first time since he announced his plans to retire at the end of the season, his 17th. He received a standing ovation when he came to the plate in the first, and Cardinals starter Lance Lynn stood behind the mound and waited as the crowd saluted Helton. The first baseman was given a loud ovation in each of his four plate appearances. His night started slow, but he had a big hit during the decisive rally.

Troy Tulowitzki led off with a walk against reliever Trevor Rosenthal (2-4), and one out later Helton singled to center to put runners at the corners. Wilin Rosario singled to give Colorado a 3-2 lead. Helton was caught in a rundown between third and home for the second out, but Blackmon doubled to right to score Josh Rutledge from first to make it 4-2. Pinch-hitter Ryan Wheeler's two-run single off John Axford gave the Rockies a 6-2 cushion. Collin McHugh started for Colorado in place of lefty Jorge De La Rosa, who has a sore thumb on his pitching hand that forced him to miss his turn in the rotation. McHugh allowed one run on four hits.

NATIONALS GAME POSTPONED
 WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington Nationals postponed Monday night's game against the Atlanta Braves following shootings at the nearby Navy Yard. The game was rescheduled as part of a day-night doubleheader today. "It's a very emotional day. An extremely horrific act happened very near to the ballpark," Nationals general manager Mike Rizzo said. "Our thoughts and prayers go out to all the victims over there and all the people affected by this. We felt it was inappropriate to play a major league baseball game with such tragedy right down the street."

Mercury Makes Nice

Mercury has been causing strife with the likes of Uranus, Jupiter and Pluto, but the messenger attempts to make nice today via an auspicious connection with Mars. If you set out to tackle the big issues, you'll probably get absolutely nowhere. But if you take action on what matters to you, the world will respond to your passion in a big way.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You'll deal in this conundrum today: Struggling to prove your deservedness really only proves that you believe you don't deserve it. Believe in your worth, and the struggle ends.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). The phone will keep buzzing, and the emails will keep rolling in -- that's just modern life. Don't be bullied by your devices. You're still in charge. Just because it rings or dings doesn't mean you have to respond.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Some people can sit and do nothing at all. You rarely see the value in this, and you see laziness as a fault, not a skill. However, there is great benefit to doing nothing at all for a stretch of today.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You will notice the energy that's directed at you, as you are very attractive to people who are outside of your circle. You may talk and open up a bit, but remain protective of your time. It's a most valuable resource.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). People seem to expect something from you that is different from what you'd like to give -- a clue that you may be mismatched to your environment. The way to find out is to explore a bit and see whether things aren't better "over there."

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You may do nontraditional things with your loved one from time to time, but your relationship itself is quite traditional in terms of the role you expect each other to play. This works extremely well for you now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). There is always a simple solution and the hard way. Being relaxed helps you see and apply the simple solution. If you are not relaxed, you'll notice only the hard way and mistakenly assume it's the only route.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). It's one thing to be surprised by a sudden bout of good fortune and quite another to expect it. The latter is demotivating. If you're going to give someone a gift, let it be a surprise.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You're a fast learner. You may get it wrong once, but you won't get it wrong the same way twice. You'll switch tactics at least three times before the day is over.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You want to be independent, but someone will offer to help you, and you will seem like an ingrate if you don't take that help. This is a legitimate assist. And don't worry -- if it works out, it will still be you doing the work.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). If you can be still inside yourself, you will be protected from the chaos of the world. It will swirl around you, but you won't be swept up in the momentum. You'll be the eye of the storm.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Those who have not been well taken care of by their families value loyalty just as much as others do. Have patience with those who are still learning the power of allegiance.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Sept. 17). A special someone will help you understand and use your talents. October brings a career breakthrough. Spend many hours fully fleshing out your ideas before you share them with a potential team in November. You'll find a benefactor in December. Family events forward joint interests in 2014. Gemini and Libra people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 40, 22, 13, 29 and 48.

ASTROLOGICAL QUESTIONS: "I don't understand what I'm doing wrong. My boss seems to hate me. She's a Scorpio, and I'm a 23-year-old Pisces guy. I do everything she wants and more, and she still seems to favor my far less helpful colleague. How can I win her favor and possibly the management position that is opening up next month?"

Consider applying the Franklin effect to this relationship. Benjamin Franklin said, "He that has once done you a kindness will be more ready to do you another than he whom you yourself have obliged." It may seem counterintuitive, but people tend to like those who have helped more than those who have helped them. This explains why your boss is so fond of your colleague. You could get your Scorpio boss on your side by asking her for help. Why not ask her directly for career advice? For instance: "What would it take for someone like me to be ready for a position in management? I'd love your insight about this." Or: "Would you help me understand the company culture a little better? I'd love to hear about your experiences and any advice you think might help."

Reminder for candles

Heloise

Dear Heloise: I love SCENTED CANDLES. I place my candles near the night lights in the kitchen. When I turn on the night lights, it reminds me to put out the candles. To eliminate the smoke, I put on the lid or cover the flame until it goes out. --

G.E.N. in Somerset, Pa.

Good hint about extinguishing a candle at night, since more than 9,000 fires start each year from candles burning in homes (about one-third in the bedroom). It's always a good hint to place candles where you will remember to put them out. Here are some more safety hints from the National Candle Association:

- Never leave a candle unattended.
- Use a candle snuffer to put out a candle's flame.
- Before you leave the candle for good, make sure the flame is COMPLETELY out and no longer glowing.

MINUTE MAKEUP

Dear Readers: Many times when I buy makeup, it comes with a fun "gift with purchase" deal. Most of the time, the lipstick or blush isn't in my favorite shade. However, I use them by stashing them throughout the house, foyer and spare drawers for a quick touch-up during the day. It's a looong way from my office down the hall through the house to my bathroom, where my makeup is.

I learned this hint from my mother, the original Heloise (1919-1977). In her day, she recommended that every lady "Keep an extra compact and lipstick in a kitchen drawer so if your husband comes home, you can powder your nose and do your lips." -- Heloise SNEAKY SNAKES

Dear Heloise: My granddaughter and her family used to live outside the city limits of Abilene, Texas. They built a little room behind their house just for their dogs and put a doggie door going into the room.

Please warn people, if they live where there are rattlesnakes, that the snakes can go through a doggie door. My granddaughter had two rattlesnakes go through the door. -- Lucille Pointer, Abilene, Texas

Yes, they can, and something similar happened to me! We had a large rat snake (about 3 1/2 to 4 feet long) come slithering down the hall to visit me in the bedroom! That devil crawled up on the bed (I was dozing) and put its head on my chest before my husband was able to catch it! -- Heloise

TWISTED SHEETS

Dear Heloise: Please help me with a long-standing problem. My queen-size bedsheets ALWAYS twist and tangle in my washing machine. For years, I've wrestled with untwisting them. Please advise a solution! -- Susan R. in New Jersey

Try mixing the laundry load the following way: light sheets with some heavy towels mixed in, or heavier-fabric sheets with some lighter-weight towels.

Also, don't overstuff the machine! There needs to be enough room for the items to move around and get clean with agitation. -- Heloise

Volatile younger sister must seek help on own

DEAR ABBY: My younger sister, "Tanya," is 22 and a single mother. Her son is 2. She's pregnant again, and this time her baby will be a girl.

My sister is very dramatic and emotional. She gets angry easily and has a short fuse. She's great with her son, except he picks up on her drama and is somewhat dramatic himself. My worry is that girls are more likely to imitate that behavior, and I'm concerned my niece will be just like her mother. Although Tanya has a good heart, her emotional issues have caused her to have horrible relationships with men, as our mother did.

When I suggested to my sister that she talk to someone about her anger, she flipped out on me. We were both sexually abused as children. I have dealt with those issues and she has not. Was I rude to suggest she see someone about her emotional problems? -- JUST TRYING TO HELP

DEAR TRYING TO HELP: Suggesting that Tanya discuss this with a professional wasn't rude; it was a loving thing to do. Your sister reacted defensively because she isn't ready to admit she needs help. What you must do is hope that one day she will be receptive, but also accept that it may never happen. Not everyone is strong enough to face the fact that they need help or willing to reach out for it.

DEAR ABBY: How does a person quit being a quitter? At 46, I have realized that this is what I am. I have quit everything -- church, jobs, school. If I don't like a friend, I just drop the person. The same goes for books, exercise -- everything! How do you stop the lifelong habit of quitting? -- QUITTER IN CHARLESTON

DEAR CHARLESTON: I hate to see you give yourself a pejorative label. It's time to have yourself evaluated because it is possible you suffer from attention deficit disorder -- and if you do, there is help for it.

If that's not the case, then start small, give yourself a goal you CAN accomplish and don't stop until you have reached it. It doesn't have to be anything complicated, but see it through. Then give yourself another, more difficult assignment and finish it.

Perseverance is a skill that can be learned. Each time you succeed, you will reinforce the idea that you CAN do it. The more you do this, the better you will feel about yourself, and it will be reflected in your work and social relationships.

DEAR ABBY: I am a married woman with several single friends. They are always eager to do things with me, but married life is a lot different than being single. I'd love to connect these friends, who don't know each other. I realize making friends can be hard, and I'd love to help them in that way. What would be the best way to do this? I don't have a lot of time to spend inviting everyone together and having them get to know each other. I'd like to do a quick introduction, then let them go have fun doing "single people" things. Is this possible? -- UNIFIER IN PITTSBURGH

DEAR UNIFIER: Absolutely. Call or email your friends and tell them there are people you want them to meet because you think they'd enjoy each other. Then arrange a group lunch at a convenient location and introduce them. After that, if the chemistry is right, they'll become friendly.

Warfarin not linked to pancreatic cancer

Dr. Keith Roach

DEAR DR.

ROACH: My 82-year-old brother died in January from pancreatic cancer. Prior to his diagnosis, he was the picture of health: exercising vigorously every day, eating a healthy diet, keeping his mind active and alert and taking health supplements with no excessive drinking of alcoholic beverages (only occasional wine). His only health complication was getting deep-vein thrombosis from a long horseback ride, and he was placed on warfarin (Coumadin) and told to take it forever. He had his blood clotting levels monitored per the physician schedule. His dad lived to age 94, and our mother to 90. He thought he had the longevity genes. In researching the diagnosis and possible causes, we found several references to people taking this medication getting pancreatic cancer. --T.A.

ANSWER: Pancreatic cancer remains one of the most feared malignancies because there isn't an effective screening test, chemotherapy and radiation are only modestly useful and surgery, while the only reliable cure, often is not possible at the stage when most people with the disease present to their doctors. Although not the case for your brother, cigarette smoking and lack of exercise are clear risk factors for pancreatic cancer.

Pancreatic cancer is well known to cause blood clots. I suspect what may have happened in your brother's case is that the unknown pancreatic cancer, not the horseback ride, caused the initial blood clot. He then would have been on warfarin at the time the pancreatic cancer was diagnosed.

One can never be sure what happens in any particular case. However, to my knowledge, there has never been a study suggesting that warfarin increases risk of pancreatic (or any other) cancer.

DEAR DR. ROACH: I'm an 80-year-old man in fairly good health, but I have a problem that I can't find an answer for. I've asked my primary doctor, but he has not given me a good answer for it, and it could be that I did not ask the question right. When I get cold, I break out in hives. It happens when the temperature is below 70 degrees and I touch cold metal or something -- I will break out. The only thing that seems to work is to warm up the body. Do you have any suggestions? --D.M.

ANSWER: You have cold urticaria. "Urticaria" is the precise term for hives or wheals. Cold air can do it, but so can cold objects. Metal objects are more likely to do so because metal conducts heat away from your body faster

Judge: CCA in contempt for prison understaffing

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — A federal judge says private prison company Corrections Corporation of America is in contempt of court for persistently understaffing an Idaho prison in direct violation of a legal settlement.

U.S. District Judge David Carter made the ruling Monday in a lawsuit between inmates at the CCA-run Idaho Correctional Center and the Nashville, Tenn.-based company.

Carter wrote that CCA had ample reason to make sure it was meeting the staffing requirements at the prison, yet the level of understaffing was apparently far worse than the company originally acknowledged. He is appointing an independent monitor to oversee staffing at the prison, and says steep fines — starting at $100 an hour — will incur if the company violates the agreement again.

The judge also rejected CCA's contention that the former warden and other company officials didn't know about the understaffing, saying that they had been warned of the staffing problems multiple times and at the very least failed to check it out.

"For CCA staff to lie on so basic a point — whether an officer is actually at a post — leaves the Court with serious concerns about compliance in other respects, such as whether every violent incident is reported," Carter wrote.

The American Civil Liberties Union sued on behalf of inmates at ICC in 2010, contending that the prison was so violent inmates dubbed it "Gladiator School." CCA denied the allegations but reached a settlement that required increased staffing levels and other operational changes.

That settlement was set to expire this month, but the ACLU asked the judge to extend it and find CCA in contempt for failing to abide by the agreement.

CCA acknowledged earlier this year that its employees filed reports with the state that falsely showed 4,800 hours of vacant security posts as being staffed during 2012. But during the contempt of court hearing, witnesses revealed that number only included the night shift during a seven-month span.

"It is clear that the non-compliance was far worse than the report of about 4,800 hours would lead one to believe," Carter wrote. "... There is also no reason to believe the problem only began in April 2012 and was solved after October 2012. Indeed, even in the weeks prior to the contempt hearings, mandatory posts were still going unfilled — thus there remains persistent staffing pressure that is the backdrop to prison employees fabricating records. The difference today is that CCA may finally be presenting an accurate picture of its inability to fully staff its prison."

The Idaho State Police are currently investigating whether CCA committed any crimes when it gave the false staffing reports to the Idaho Department of Corrections and when it failed to meet the minimum staffing requirements under its $29 million contract with the state.

The federal judge said it would be up to the state to determine just how understaffed the prison was, and that he wouldn't order CCA to carry out its own audit.

"Further, IDOC has contractual remedies against CCA; it is up to that agency to determine what compensation it pursues for having been lied to," Carter wrote.

He also rejected CCA's "no harm, no foul" claim that the understaffing didn't lead to increased violence or other problems.

"Having enough correctional officers can deter violence, but also it offers other benefits, such as having enough staff on the prison floor to accurately track the levels of violence in the first place," he noted.

The private prison company better have its checkbook ready if the violations persist, according to the ruling: Carter indicated he would make the fines as stiff as necessary to make CCA comply.

"If a prospective fine leads to $2.4 million in penalties, CCA has no one to blame but itself," Carter wrote.

CCA spokesman Steven Owen said in a prepared statement that the company was reviewing the ruling and considering next steps.

"We believe we are taking all appropriate steps to correct the staffing matter and are unaware of any new findings beyond what we've previously acknowledged. We are meeting the contractual staffing requirements and are working on an ongoing basis to ensure that continues," Owen wrote. "... Our top priority is the safety of our staff, the inmates entrusted to our care and the communities where we operate, and we are committed to providing the state and Idaho's taxpayers with the highest quality corrections service."

ACLU attorney Stephen Pevar said in a prepared statement that the organization was thankful to the judge for carefully examining the evidence.

"It took great effort to uncover the truth," Pevar wrote. "ICC was missing thousands of hours of guards. What is particularly disturbing is that CCA failed to adequately staff ICC despite the obvious additional risk of assault that created for both prisoners and staff and the unnecessary stress and fear it generated."

Sierra Club sues for records in Youngstown waste dumping case

COLUMBUS (AP) — An environmental group seeking documents related to alleged illegal dumping of wastewater from oil and gas drilling into a northeast Ohio storm sewer is suing the state for access to the records.

The Sierra Club filed its suit Monday in the Ohio Supreme Court. The group alleges the Ohio Department of Natural Resources has failed to produce public records it requested six months ago.

The club's Ohio chapter is seeking documents related to the department's investigation of D&L Energy and Hardrock Excavating in Youngstown.

The department revoked the firms' permits in February amid a federal investigation into the dumping of up to 40,000 gallons of wastewater from hydraulic fracturing into a storm sewer that drains into the Mahoning River.

A spokeswoman said the department does not comment on pending litigation.
