Salem man arrested after runaway found

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

SALEM — Salem police found a 14-year-old missing runaway girl in a vacant apartment on Ellsworth Avenue Thursday morning after noticing an extension cord outside leading from the first story to an upstairs window.

Lacy Crowe, of East Third Street, had been reported missing Monday afternoon by her parents, Les Crowe and Tamara Egolf, when she failed to return home after school.

On Wednesday, police Chief J.T. Panezott and Det. Brad Davis sought the public's help in finding her, with a news story appearing Thursday morning.

Panezott said she was taken into custody on a warrant for an unruly charge through Juvenile Court and was being transported to the Louis Tobin Attention Center in Lisbon. Davis explained that it's not unusual in a case like this for a warrant to be issued, noting that he advises parents to file unruly charges in cases of missing/runaway juveniles.

Mark Knight Jr., 26, of 435 N. Ellsworth Avenue, apt. 2, was taken into custody for obstructing official business after he tried to leave the scene at the apartment when told to stay put by police. Panezott said more charges could be filed depending on the outcome of the investigation.

Police received a tip early Thursday morning when a patrolman was approached by some newspaper carriers who thought they saw the missing teen at 435 N. Ellsworth Ave. with Knight. Later in the morning, Panezott, Davis, Patrolman

Mike Garber and Sgt. John Scheets arrived at the house to find Knight leaving in a car.

The vehicle was stopped and Panezott said he denied any knowledge of the juvenile being around and gave police consent to search his downstairs apartment. Nothing was found, then officers walked outside and could see the extension cord plugged in downstairs and going to an upstairs window.

Knight allegedly told police the apartment was vacant and it was padlocked. They went upstairs and found the hasp on the padlock and Flu shot supplier cuts off Salem Health Dept.

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

SALEM — Flu vaccine provider VaxCare discontinued service to the Salem City Health Department this month due to low usage last flu season, but city health officials don't want to give up on giving flu shots just yet.

On Wednesday, health board members instructed city Health Commissioner Richard Setty to find a way to increase the numbers as close to the 100 doses required by the company as possible. They also advised him to find out what it will cost if they order 100 doses and don't administer that many.

"It's public health. Protecting the public is what we're all about. This is what we do," board member Judy Sicilia said.

The department administered a total of 46 seasonal flu vaccinations during the 2012-2013 season, with that number including 19 vaccinations administered to employees at city hall in January.

Large pharmacy chains have been offering flu shots since early August, with the Salem Area Visiting Nurse Association holding clinics this month and doctor's offices also offering flu shots to their patients. Many large employers have already made arrangements for their workers to get flu shots at their place of employment, with some through Salem Community Hospital.

Setty said he spoke to the VaxCare representative on Tuesday and was told if the health department could line up enough clinics to get to 100, he would take that information back to management and see if they'll change their mind. Setty said he had the department nurse call some employers in town about possibly having a clinic, but the response was not good.

"Frankly, it's not looking good at the moment," he said.

Sicilia said they could set up a clinic for city workers again, they could open up the offer to their family members, too. She also suggested approaching the senior citizen program at the Memorial Building. Suggestions were also made to check with the Banquet of Salem and the Salem Community Center about possible clinics.

"I think we should try," Sicilia said. Setty explained that under the VaxCare program, the city didn't pay anything. The company billed people's insurances or Medicare and the health department received a $7.25 rebate for each shot administered. With self-pay of $25 for a flu shot, he said the health

Parks board seeks help for summer concerts

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

The Salem Parks Commission is still working on finding help to keep the summer concert series going next year and wants volunteers to step forward.

Longtime Music in the Park coordinator Jack Yarnell recently stepped down from the unpaid volunteer job he did for the past 21 years, leaving the Salem Parks Commission to find someone to replace him, possibly a committee of people.

Anyone interested in serving should submit a letter of interest to Salem Parks Commission Chairman John Panezott at the Salem Parks Commission, 785 E. State St., Salem, Ohio 44460.

The free summer concert series takes place in the band shell at Waterworth Memorial Park, usually on Sunday nights, with donations used to cover the costs of the performers. Yarnell did everything himself, including scheduling the groups, soliciting funds, emceeing the concerts and coordinating the volunteers for the concerts.

In other business, the commission granted permission for the third annual Race for the ROC to be held Aug. 16, 2014 at Waterworth Memorial Park. Denise Weingart, a member of the ROC Board, told members that third Saturday in August seemed to work well this year. She also asked if they could use the band shell

Woman killed in Route 9 cycle crash

A 21-year-old woman was killed Thursday in a motorcycle accident on state Route 9. The Lisbon Post of the Highway Patrol is investigating and according to information released Thursday night, Kara Molnar of Adena, Ohio was a passenger on the motorcycle driven by Richard Hall, 28, of Kingsport, Tenn. The crash occurred just south of Whinery Road in Butler Township shortly after 3 p.m. when Hall failed to negotiate a curve and went off the right side of the road into a wooded area hitting two trees. He and Molnar were ejected upon impact and were not wearing helmets, according to the report. Molnar was pronounced dead at the scene by the Columbiana County Coroner's office, and Hall was taken by medical helicopter to St. Elizabeth's Hospital where he was reported to be in stable condition. The Winona Fire and EMS Department and KLG Ambulance responded. (Salem News photo by Kevin Howell)

ALMANAC

Today is Friday, Sept. 27, the 270th day of 2013. There are 95 days left in the year. Ten years ago: President George W. Bush and Russian President Vladimir Putin urged Iran and North Korea to abandon suspected nuclear-weapons programs but disagreed over how to deal with both countries; Putin also declined at the end of a two-day summit at Camp David to pledge any postwar help for Iraq. Five years ago: China marked its first spacewalk as astronaut Zhai Zhigang floated outside the Shenzhou 7 for 13 minutes. One year ago: Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, holding a diagram of a cartoon-like bomb, told the U.N. General Assembly that the world had only a matter of months to stop Iran before it could build a nuclear bomb.

NATION/WORLD

As carnage unfolded at mall, tales of survival emerged

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — It's 1:30 on Saturday afternoon in the Westgate Mall. Rafia Khan is huddling in a crawl space of the Millionaires Casino with her cousin and eight other people as gunmen roam the building and shoot, again and again, into crowds of shoppers.

Now she is teaching those in hiding — perfect strangers — words that she hopes will keep them alive.

The group had found the ceiling-level space as they fled gunfire and explosions.

While they are hiding, word spreads by mobile phone text messages that Islamic militants have taken control of the shopping mall that houses the casino. Word also spreads that the gunmen are allowing Muslims to leave — testing them by asking about their knowledge of Islam.

Khan and her cousin are the only Muslims among the small group. They decide to teach the others to recite the Shahada, the short Arabic-language creed that proclaims there is only one God and Muhammed is his prophet.

US, allies welcome new Iranian attitude in talks

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The U.S. and its European allies said Thursday they were pleased by a new tone and a significant shift in attitude from Iran in talks aimed at resolving the impasse over the country's disputed nuclear activities. Iran said it was eager to dispel suspicions that it is trying to develop a nuclear weapon and to get punishing international sanctions lifted as fast as possible.

Iranian Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif, who also had an unexpected one-on-one meeting with U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry, said six world powers and Iran had agreed to fast-track nuclear negotiations with the hope of reaching a deal within a year.

Iran, the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council and Germany also agreed to hold a new round of substantive nuclear negotiations on Oct. 15-16 in Geneva.

"We agreed to jump-start the process so that we could move forward with a view to agreeing first on the parameters of the end game ... and move toward finalizing it hopefully within a year's time," Zarif said after the talks ended. "I thought I was too ambitious, bordering on naiveté. But I saw that some of my colleagues were even more ambitious and wanted to do it faster."

Kerry said he was struck by a "very different tone" from Tehran after their sessions, which marked the highest-level direct contact between the United States and Iran in six years. But, like his European colleagues, he stressed that a single meeting was not enough to assuage international concerns that Iran is seeking to develop nuclear weapons under cover of a civilian atomic energy program.

Powers reach agreement on UN resolution on eliminating Syria's chemical weapons

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The five permanent members of the deeply divided U.N. Security Council reached agreement Thursday on a resolution to eliminate Syria's chemical weapons, a major step in taking the most controversial weapon off the battlefield of the world's deadliest current conflict.

Senior U.S., Russian, British and French diplomats confirmed the agreement, which also includes China. Britain's U.N. Ambassador Mark Lyall Grant said he would introduce the text to the Security Council's 10 non-permanent members Thursday night.

A vote on the resolution still depends on how the full council responds to the draft, and on how soon an international group that oversees the global treaty on chemical weapons can adopt a plan for securing and destroying Syria's stockpile. Diplomats said the earliest the Security Council could vote would be late Friday.

On Twitter, Lyall Grant said the five veto-wielding members, known as the P-5, had agreed on a "binding and enforceable draft ... resolution." A senior U.S. State Department official said the Russians agreed to support "a strong binding and enforceable resolution."

Intelligence chief sidesteps questions about tracking locations of cellphone calls

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's top intelligence official on Thursday sidestepped questions from a senator about whether the National Security Agency has ever used Americans cellphone signals to collect information on their whereabouts that would allow tracking of the movements of individual callers.

Asked twice by Sen. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., if NSA had ever collected or made plans to collect such data, NSA chief Gen. Keith Alexander answered both times by reading from a letter provided to senators who had asked the same question last summer. He also cited a classified version of the letter that was sent to senators and said, "What I don't want to do ... is put out in an unclassified forum anything that's classified."

No compromise: Government on brink of a shutdown?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Moving closer to the brink of a government shutdown, House Republicans vowed Thursday they won't simply accept the stopgap legislation that is likely to remain after Senate Democrats strip away a plan to dismantle President Barack Obama's health care law.

A sense of confusion settled over the House, both over how to avoid a shutdown and how to handle even more important legislation to increase the government's borrowing ability to avert a default on U.S. obligations. Short of votes, House leaders shelved a vote that had been expected this weekend on the debt limit measure and gave frustrated GOP lawmakers few clues about what they plan to do to avoid a shutdown.

The chaos sets the stage for weekend drama on Capitol Hill, with the Senate planning to send the fractious House a straightforward bill Friday to keep the government operating through Nov. 15 rather than partly closing down at midnight Monday.

Speaker John Boehner of Ohio and several rank-and-file Republicans said the House simply won't accept a "clean" spending measure, even though that's been the norm in Congress on dozens of occasions since the 1995-96 government closures that bruised Republicans and strengthened the hand of Democratic President Bill Clinton.

"I don't see that happening," Boehner said. Still, he declared that "I have no interest in a government shutdown" and he doesn't expect one to occur on Tuesday.

Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid of Nevada said the Democratic-led chamber will not relent.

"The Senate will never pass a bill that guts the Affordable Care Act," Reid declared.

A partial government shutdown would keep hundreds of thousands of federal workers off the job, close national parks and generate damaging headlines for whichever side the public held responsible.

Washington faces two deadlines: The Oct. 1 start of the new budget year and a mid-October date — now estimated for the 17th — when the government can no longer borrow money to pay its bills on time and in full.

The first deadline requires Congress to pass a spending bill to allow agencies to stay open. The mid-month deadline requires Congress to increase the government's $16.7 trillion borrowing cap to avoid a first-ever default on its payments, which include interest obligations, Social Security benefits, payments to thousands of contractors large and small, and salaries for the military.

The standoff just four days before the end of the fiscal year increased the possibility of a shutdown, with no signs of compromise.

The No. 2 Democrat in the Senate, Dick Durbin of Illinois, said that because of the time it takes the Senate to approve even non-controversial bills, if the House amends a Senate-passed spending bill and returns it to the Senate over the weekend, "That is a concession on their part that we're going to shut down the government."

Not far from the Capitol, at a community college in Largo, Md., Obama insisted he would not negotiate over his signature domestic achievement, either on a bill to keep the government operating or legislation to raise the nation's borrowing authority.

"The entire world looks to us to make sure that the world economy is stable. You don't mess with that," Obama said of the debt ceiling/default measure. "And that's why I will not negotiate on anything when it comes to the full faith and credit of the United States of America."

Responding to Obama's non-negotiable stand, Boehner said, "Well, I'm sorry but it just doesn't work that way."

Meeting behind closed doors, House Republican leaders encountered resistance from their rank and file over the debt limit measure even though they were attaching a list of other Republican favorites such as green-lighting the Keystone XL oil pipeline, blocking federal regulation of greenhouse gases and boosting offshore oil exploration.

Republicans who lost the presidential election and a shot at Senate control last year are trying to use must-pass measures to advance agenda items that the Democratic-led Senate and Obama have soundly rejected. The last-ditch effort on "Obamacare" comes just days before coast-to-coast enrollment in the plan's health care exchanges begins Oct. 1.

Despite the popular items, the leadership was struggling to win over its recalcitrant GOP members, especially tea party-backed lawmakers pressing for deeper, deficit-cutting spending measures. The spending cuts the Republicans would attach to the debt-limit legislation would be likely to represent a small fraction of the almost $1 trillion in new borrowing authority the bill would permit.

SHERIFF'S OFFICE

— Floyd Lile, state Route 517, Lisbon, reported at 8:23 a.m. Thursday he saw two men about 18 to 25 years old walking along the road in front of his home on Wednesday. Each was carrying some type of walking stick and was pointing them toward his house and other buildings while talking. When Lile went around to the front of the house to confront them, they were gone. Lile was concerned due to the number of burglaries in his area recently.

— Megan Copenhaver, Spillway Road, Lisbon, reported at 11:48 p.m.

Wednesday two women were outside her trailer harassing her, banging on her trailer and urging her to go outside and fight. The other women left the area before deputies arrived, and they were not at their trailer either.

— Michael Miller, Freeman Road, Lisbon, reported at 7:05 p.m. Wednesday he let a woman use his car about a month ago and has since asked her to return it. Deputies spoke to the woman, Patti Colon, who admitted Miller has asked her off and on to return the vehicle for awhile. However, she said Miller also offered to sell her the vehicle. Then on Saturday she saw the vehicle was gone from her driveway and just assumed Miller came and took it. Miller filed a stolen vehicle report.

— Cheryl Dolence, a teacher, and Jayson Yeagley, both of Beaver Local High School, reported on Sept. 20, a 17-year-old student took items from Dolence's purse on the previous day. The teacher's cell phone was destroyed and placed in the trash in the boy's restroom along with her wallet. Also taken was a $110 and a Home Depot card. The boy was found with the card in his sock and reportedly admitted taking the items. He was suspended from school. He also told Dolence he had given her money to another student, a 15-year-old boy, who denied having it.

Salineville police to file charges in recent string of burglaries

By DEVIN BEZEREDI
Staff Writer

Salineville — The village police department is filing a felony receiving stolen property charges against two individuals they suspect are involved in a string of burglaries, which began in August and continued into this month.

Police Chief David Hilliard Jr. declined to name the suspects, however, he stated both are males who reside in the village and are between the ages of 19 and 24.

Hilliard said for now, the suspects are being charged with one count of receiving stolen property each, but more charges are likely to be filed against them.

Hilliard noted it is likely charges will also be brought against two to three more individuals suspected to be involved in the burglaries. These suspects he said are also in the 19 to 24 year old age bracket and reside in the village. Several of the suspects could face similar charges in bordering counties where they are suspected to have burglarized several properties.

There have been approximately 10 burglaries in the village since early August. Hilliard said it appeared the suspects would target various small neighborhoods around the village, sometimes breaking into as many as three or four houses at one time. The suspects would then wait a week or two before moving on to the next neighborhood and repeating the process, said Hilliard.

Hilliard noted that the suspects took advantage of his department's limited manpower during the day time and committed several of the burglaries in broad daylight when homeowners were at work.

"If you're at work and there's a car at your house how do we (the police) know you're not home or there's a visitor at your house," said Hilliard. He also noted that the suspects often entered homes through an inconspicuous entrance, like the basement or through an entrance on the back side of homes rather than through the front door.

Hilliard said his department started their investigation by looking for stolen items at pawn shops in Jefferson, Carroll and Columbiana counties. He said officers were able to track down items stolen from a village residence at a pawn shop in Salem. This particular pawn shop requires those pawning or selling items to show photo identification. By checking the pawnshop's records, police were able to trace the stolen items back to one of the suspects.

Village police were also tipped off when one of the suspects was locked up in the county jail for several days and burglaries seemed to momentarily subside only to pick back up again when the suspect was released.

"It was just too coincidental for us not to be having burglaries when they were locked up and when they came back out it picked up again," said Hilliard.

Most of the suspects are drug dependent and sold the stolen property to feed their addictions according to Hilliard.

"They're breaking into houses selling off whatever they can sell off, so they can go to their dealer and get their fix," said Hilliard, adding that many of the suspects have criminal records for drug and theft related offenses.

Hilliard said the burglaries are a side effect of a growing drug problem in the village, namely heroin and cocaine.

"We need a full time police department here because the drugs have come in so heavily, and since the village went to a part time police department the drugs have come in even more," said Hilliard.

The chief said patrolmen Stephen Thomas was particularly instrumental in investigating the burglaries and gathering information so charges could be filed. "He did great work by getting us information we needed."

Hilliard said although he is resigning as chief and several officers have recently resigned, it was important for him to show residents the village police department can still be effective in combating crime. "I want the citizens to know they are still getting the police protection they deserve."

Hilliard applauded the recently formed neighborhood watch group for their vigilance. "It's a positive thing for the community. The best thing people can do is keep their eyes open, if they see a suspicious vehicle or person by all means call us and let us know."

Robert K. Barrett, 29, East Sixth Street, East Liverpool, was charged with aggravated trespassing, a first-degree misdemeanor, for allegedly entering the property of Thomas Beaver on Aug. 13 with the purpose to commit a crime involving causing physical harm to another person.

Joshua E. Martin, 22, Trentvale Street, East Liverpool, was charged with aggravated robbery and two counts receiving stolen property and forgery. According to court documents, Martin allegedly displayed a knife while committing a theft on Aug. 14. Additionally, he reported had two checks in June and July 2012 belonging to Stanton C. Brown, which he forged.

Robert P. Chan, 56, Ogden Street, East Liverpool, was charged with permitting drug abuse and three counts possession of drugs. According to court documents, Chan between Aug. 1 and Aug. 15 allowed his home to be used for the commission of drug-related crimes. On Aug. 15, he reportedly had possession of heroin, cocaine and morphine.

The secret indictments will be released as they are served. The grand jury decided not to indict on one case presented to them.

CLARIFICATION

The Common Pleas Court docket entries in Wednesday's paper listed Melissa Crow vs. Jerry Tenney, et al., bankruptcy filed, case on hold. According to court documents, Tenney was dismissed from the case on June 24. The bankruptcy referred to in this week's docket entry was filed by another defendant in the case. Court documents often refer to the case by only the name of the first plaintiff vs. the name of the first defendant, leaving Tenney listed as the defendant on the court document.

Fix Ohio police, fire pension plan

A few years ago, Ohio officials began facing up to the reality of severely underfunded public employee pension programs. State law now requires all of the programs be able to pay off all their obligations within 30 years.

Invariably, some people don't read the memo. Ohio's Police and Fire Pension Fund is so far behind that, according to a study last spring, it will be 70 years before it has enough money to cover all its obligations.

Since then, some changes have been made. Law enforcement officers and firefighters signing up for the program will not be able to collect full pensions as early as in the past. Amounts withheld from their payments to help fund pensions have gone up and will increase more during the next two years.

That will not be enough to get the program within the 30-year rule, however. One analysis is that, even with the changes, 44 years is a more likely scenario.

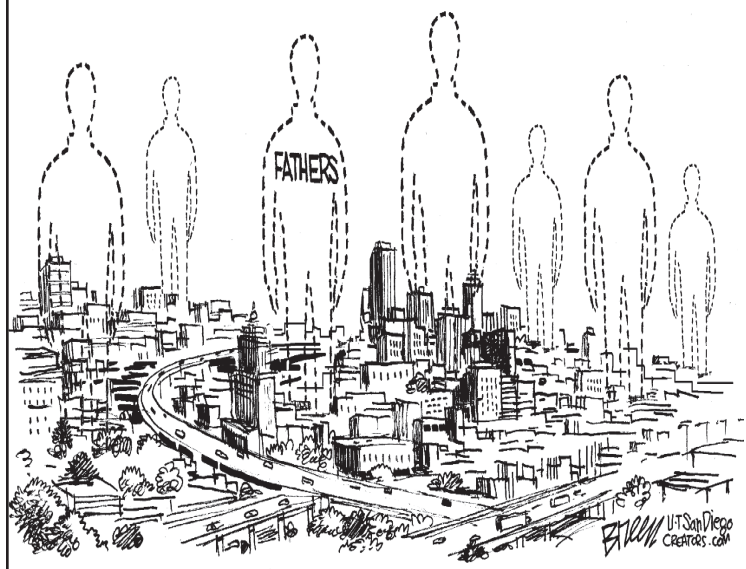

Yet officials of the Police and Fire Pension Fund don't want to do any more to make the program sound in the long run. They have told members of the Ohio Retirement Study Council, which supervises public employee pension programs, that the fund should be left as it is until at least 2017.

That would allow more than three years for the fund to build up new liabilities.

Some members of the oversight council have suggested drastic steps need to be taken regarding the police and firefighters program. Eliminating its separate board and combining it with another public employee pension program has been suggested.

That could cause a whole new set of problems. Still, unless the fund's officials face up to reality and do more to ensure long-term solvency, the council may have to take action.

Game soon over on Obamacare

FROMA HARROP

Voices from right field are explaining why they're justified in threatening the United States with default if Congress does not defund Obamacare. The Wall Street Journal's Kimberley Strassel said on Sunday chat TV, "There isn't one poll that shows that Americans approve, as a majority, of this health care law." That's an interesting concept: repeal by poll. Can't find it in the civics books. And seeing as the polls also show huge chunks of the public unaware of what's in the Affordable Care Act — or even of its existence — of what use are those numbers? Further note that a significant slice of the unhappy ones complain that the reforms don't go far enough.

Of course, Obamacare could be repealed the old-fashioned civics-book way. That's not going to happen as long as there's a Democratic majority in the Senate. But Republicans could ride the imagined discontent to victory, via an election, and then get rid of the law.

Perhaps the objective of the game is the game. For pure excitement, it's hard to beat threats of a government shutdown — and the attendant trauma to business, markets and the delicate economic recovery. The game is not good for the American people, and as wiser Republicans say, it's not good for the Republican Party. Even a government shutdown, however, would not stop Obamacare, according to the Congressional Research Service.

The lapse in appropriations would hit only "discretionary" funding. Most of Obamacare is on the "mandatory" spending side of the budget. And the White House could move some mandatory spending around to fill discretionary cuts.

All this civics talk is giving the American people a headache. So let's look at the polls for Romneycare, the Massachusetts health care law and model for Obamacare. What do the Bay State polls say?

When it went into effect seven years ago, polls showed a skeptical, if not hostile, view of Romneycare. Now you couldn't pull the health plan out of the people's cold dead hands. The latest Massachusetts Medical Society poll has 84 percent of state residents happy with their health coverage, versus national polls showing only 67 percent of Americans so content.

Like Obamacare, the Massachusetts plan caused some confusion at first. Kinks needed to be ironed out and were.

Forgive this brief foray into policy. Warnings that Romneycare would lead Massachusetts businesses to drop their workers' coverage did not come to pass. On the contrary, employers offering insurance rose to 76 percent, from 70 percent before the reforms.

Obamacare is more fiscally conservative than was the original Romneycare. It does more to control costs.

For example, Obamacare proposes bundling payments for a medical condition. That basically means one check is written to cover soup-to-nuts treatment for an ailment, such as a broken foot. That removes incentives to order more X-rays, office visits or other care not needed. And it rewards providers who do a good job the first time around.

Massachusetts offers subsidies to those earning less than 300 percent of the federal poverty level. The federal government is less generous, starting subsidies at 400 percent of the poverty marker.

The fiscally conservative Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation praises Romneycare. The program's sharpest critics, the group says, are from out of state or single-payer advocates on the left.

Obamacare, like Romneycare, will soon earn the people's love. But between now and its full implementation, Americans will be dragged into the basement for another round of threats to their well-being.

There's no stopping the tea party folks from trying, but Obamacare will soon be part of the people's lives. The big neon sign will flash "Game Over," and the right-wingers will move on to their next adventure.

OTHER VOICES

Sept. 15

The Seattle Times on policing privacy on the Internet and Facebook:

As a good rule of thumb, assume any information posted on social media will be harvested like a veal calf headed for sale on a digital town square.

Recently, the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) reminded us all of that pipeline in announcing it was looking into Facebook's new privacy policies.

Those policies — unveiled just before Labor Day weekend, when presumably few would be paying attention — made clear that Facebook considers signing up for its service is de-facto consent to resell users' data to advertisers.

The FTC, on the other hand, considers that a potential breach of a 2011 regulatory agreement, which requires Facebook to get explicit consent from users. Facebook, which has a troubling record of eroding privacy standards, looks like it tried to slip one past consumers.

Thank goodness someone is looking, because the vast majority of consumers are not. The boilerplate legalese of online contracts is scrolled past, in search of the quick "Agree" button.

Facebook isn't alone. Since 2011, Google, MySpace and Path social-networking sites all have settled FTC charges that the companies duped consumers regarding privacy policies.

A digital thumbprint is easily left but nearly impossible to erase.

It will get even more difficult to erase with advances in facial-recognition software, which suggest a future in which embarrassing "selfie" photos are instantly matched to LinkedIn business profiles and Facebook "likes" for lingerie manufacturers.

In a Slate essay, writer Amy Webb described her aversion to posting any pictures of her child. ...

That future is hypothetical. Facebook, and other social-media companies, can ensure a present modicum of privacy. Signing up for a Facebook account is not an invitation to harvest our lives for sale on the town square of digital advertising.

Obsessive bugaboo on Obamacare damages Republicans

JULES WITCOVER

Tea party and other Republican fear-mongers are again working themselves into a lather in their latest assault on the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, a key part of which will be implemented Oct. 1.

Intentionally re-labeled Obamacare by foes as a slander against both the law and president who signed it, the health care reform is about to take its place next to Social Security and Medicare as the nation's most enlightened social welfare programs.

The name is used by the Michele Bachmanns and Ted Cruzes of ultraconservatism as synonymous with the black plague of medieval times. They prophesy unimagined chaos and everything from the destruction of the hallowed doctor-patient relationship to the end of the universe.

There is also in the epithet more than a tinge of disparagement toward the president himself. He arouses a bare collective contempt in conservatives for his unusual and complicated origins as man born of a mixed racial union. His "strangeness" has led many of his foes to question not only the place of his birth but also his loyalty to America.

Obama finally embraced the term Obamacare himself as a proud sobriquet for a program designed to improve the health care of millions of the uninsured. But his personal embrace has not dissuaded the wide use of the term by critics as a sort of national boogeyman.

The scare tactics have not been diminished by the Supreme Court's declaration of the law's constitutionality, a surprising blow to the critics. Nor have they been discouraged by the repeated, stillborn House votes to repeal it, upwards of forty times and counting.

The now-shopworn war cry of "repeal and replace" has given way to demands in the House to "defund" it, also assured of a quick death in the Democratic-controlled Senate. Some Republicans threaten to withhold a vote to raise the debt ceiling, at the peril of shutting down the government, unless Obamacare is repealed.

Even the ultraconservative editorial page of the Wall Street Journal has expressed horror at the tactic. It has compared the anti-Obamacare zealots in the House to the Japanese kamikaze pilots of World War II, threatening "to crash their zeroes into the aircraft carrier of Obamacare."

Some fearful Republicans have warned that this sort of political suicide mission will end only as did a similar stare-down of President Bill Clinton by House Speaker Newt Gingrich in 1995. Gingrich blinked then and his Republican Party was widely blamed for the unpopular shutdown of national parks and other federal facilities.

The present GOP Speaker, John Boehner, has displayed none of the delusional aspirations of grandness that marked Gingrich then and now, but he has knuckled under to the most conservative anti-Obamacare zealots in the House. In not quite leading them over the cliff but giving them the leeway to jump, he puts his own tenure as speaker in question.

More seriously for today's Republican Party is the damage to its brand. It is becoming inexorably more right-wing and exclusionary, elevating the defunding of Obamacare to the heights of a holy grail. Talk after the 2012 Romney defeat about broadening the party's base in the face of the demographic growth of minority ethnic voters has been overwhelmed by the anti-Obamacare crusade.

Cruz, perhaps unwittingly, put his finger on why defunding the health care law is so urgent to himself and followers. He warned that once the reforms were fully implemented, voters might embrace them as they have widely accepted Social Security and Medicare. Both programs, similarly targeted in Armageddon-like terms in their cribs, became untouchable "third rails" not to be trifled with.

For all of Barack Obama's reputation as too prone to compromise, if there is one issue on which he is unlikely to yield, it is the sabotaging of his one major domestic legislative victory that now, for good or ill, bears his name. For once, he holds all the high cards on this suicidal Republican scheme to call his bluff. Obamacare is the law and will continue to be despite the bravado of the mindless self-immolation fringe of the GOP.

the screws were unsecured, able to be turned with a finger. Panezott said they loosened the padlock, went into the apartment and found a mattress on a floor in one of the bedrooms, along with girls' clothing, a girl's purse and girls' shoes. Panezott said he then turned around and found the girl standing behind the door.

In the meantime, Knight was outside and tried to leave by walking away. He was told to stop by Garber and then ran around the apartment entry. He was ordered back after he met and exchanged words with his father. An affidavit said he claimed not to hear the officer's instructions. He was taken to the Columbiana County jail.

Panezott said they're continuing to investigate what happened and the relationship between Knight and the girl. When she was first reported missing, Knight's apartment was searched and nothing was found.

"We're very pleased with the public's outpouring of support for the family and for helping us," he said.

Davis said Lacy's missing poster was shared 2,000 times online and the department received calls from all over the area with possible tips.

on June 14 for a contemporary Christian bands concert, but Parks Director Steve Faber said he needed to check the date first.

Faber said the Race for the ROC event, which is a 5K obstacle course race to raise money for the faith-based community youth center located on South Lundy Avenue, appeared to be a success again. Weingart didn't have the final numbers for what was raised, but said this year more of the money came from the participants than the sponsors.

Faber also reported on the success of some other recent events in the parks, including the Eyes for Olivia Scramble Run and Carnival for a Cure at Waterworth, the fishing derby held at the city lake on Gamble Road and the work on the Centennial Park playground by Emmanuel Lutheran and Holy Trinity Lutheran churches.

He said the Eyes for Olivia event was well-organized and he's hoping they continue to do it, noting it's for a good cause. Money raised was going for research through the Curing Retinal Blindness Foundation.

He was impressed by how much better the playground looks after the efforts of the churches and volunteers who showed up on three different days. The parks department helped spread the new wood fiber material on the playground, with Faber noting it's not mulch, but a specially made material for playgrounds.

Parks Foreman Jim Grimm said his crew has continued with normal maintenance at the parks, but they're also servicing the leaf equipment in preparation for fall, painted the basketball backboards at Centennial, helped install a swinging bench at the city lake, and cut perennials back. They also helped set up for the Eyes for Olivia event.

Recreation Supervisor Shane Franks thanked Grimm and the maintenance crew for the work done on the ball fields for a recent church league tournament and for the fall softball league. He said he was happy with the turnout for the fishing tournament.

Both Panezott and commission vice chairman Terry Hoopes praised Franks' efforts to try new programs to see what works, especially at the city lake where they wanted to increase usage and programming.

The next meeting will be 5 p.m. Oct. 23.

department received an even larger percentage.

"I feel especially with city employees, we need to establish that niche," Sicilia said, adding "I feel we need to be a presence."

Setty expressed concern about what it may cost if they fall short of the 100 doses administered. Board member Steve Faber also said they better find out what it will cost since they're already two or three months behind.

Mayor John Berlin, who serves as chairman of the board, asked Setty to check with the East Liverpool and Columbiana County health departments to see how they handle flu shots.

In a related matter, the board set the fees for flu shots, if they're able to participate, at $25 for the seasonal flu vaccine (trivalent), $30 for the quadrivalent (which includes four strains), $45 for the high-dose and $30 for the intra-nasal.

In other business, the board approved a resolution and a memorandum of understanding for the city of Salem, city of East Liverpool and Columbiana County health districts to work together for joint completion of the Centers for Disease Control National Public Health Performance Standards Local Assessment report.

Setty said county Health Commissioner Wes Vins submitted a grant application on behalf of all three entities for $81,320 to help cover some of the costs they'll incur to complete the report required for them to continue receiving state funding. The grant will cover $72,980 and the county agreed to cover the required in-kind contribution of $8,340.

The next health board meeting is set for 10 a.m. Oct. 23.

POLICE REPORTS

COLUMBIANA

— A man reported at 8:23 a.m. Wednesday a man in a green jacket appeared to be trying to get into Grace Church on South Main Street. Police found the man was there for property maintenance and trying to water the outdoor plants.

— A woman reported at 9:38 a.m. Wednesday a person driving a large flatbed trailer was trying to back up at the corner of South Middle Street and the last time this happened, everyone had yard damage. Police watched the truck, and it did not cause any damage.

West Branch pleased with transportation changes

By KEVIN HOWELL
Staff Writer

BELOIT— The West Branch Local transportation department was commended Thursday for a job well done at the start of the school year.

Schools Superintendent Dr. Scott Weingart told the school board that the department this year has shifted pick up and drop off to the common area between the high school and middle school, making it possible for both to start and end at the same time. The change has enabled drivers to save 10 minutes from last year's schedule in picking up and dropping off elementary students, he said.

Weingart said even though the change seems insignificant, it has made a difference for the elementary students. He noted that he typically receives telephone calls from concerned parents at the beginning of each year regarding transportation, but this year has received none so far.

In other business, the board granted a continuing contract for the 2013-2014 school year to intervention specialist Aaron Bernstein and hired Traci Courtney as a five-hour transportation aide, Mindy Steer as secretary in special services, Kelly Vrable as an intervention specialist and John Ault as a substitute administrator as needed. The board also accepted the resignation effective Sept. 20 of bus driver Cheryl Firestone, who had been with the district since 1995.

The board also approved supplemental contracts to Tiffany Fitts, Jennifer Woods and Andrea Soltis, freshman volleyball; Abbie Millard and Krista Roe, eighth-grade volleyball; and Susan Miklos-Moss, middle school newspaper.

Additionally the board granted permission for John Zamarelli and the Young & Alive to travel to Florida from Dec. 26 through Jan. 3 to perform at Walt Disney, Sea World and Busch Gardens; and approved a Letter of Engagement with the Auditor of State for the audit of the district not to exceed $20,992 (cost of each of the prior three audits $21,000 per year).

The board also accepted donations of $20 from Valic, $35 from Baxter & Associates and $100 from ASECU to the West Branch Local Schools for staff breakfast; $100 from the American Legion to the National Honor Society for flagging veterans' graves; supplies for breakfast from Catered Affair and Nickle's Bakery; and school supplies from the American Legion Post 76 Youth Foundation.

The next regular board meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 31 in the high school library.

Former neighbors sue, alleging intimidation

By DEANNE JOHNSON
Staff Writer

LISBON — A man's former neighbors are seeking money for alleged threats and ethnically-based intimidation allegedly caused by him while they lived nearby.

Donald Stanley and Michelle Kibler, Alliance, along with Stanley's children, are seeking in excess of $25,000 from Ronni Wafler, Salineville. The lawsuit filed this week in Columbiana County Common Pleas Court alleges Wafler threatened the family and caused them distress, including medical issues for Stanley, which were treated by a physician.

According to court documents, while the plaintiff's and defendant were neighbors, Wafler engaged in ethnic intimidation and hatred toward Stanley, Kibler and Stanley's children and toward any neighbors who befriended them.

The case cites several examples of the alleged behavior, which made it difficult for the family to come and go from their home. For instance, it alleges Wafler made false theft accusations against the children, directed numerous racial slurs at them and on at least one occasion, brandished firearms at them in a threatening manner.

Additionally, Wafler reportedly threatened to sick a dog on Stanley's children. On another occasion it alleges he attempted or at least threatened to run Stanley over with a car.

Finally, the case charges Wafler threw trash on the plaintiff's lawn and threatened to have Stanley's Social Security disability benefits cut.

According to the court documents, Stanley developed a condition where he suffered from seizures, which his doctor determined to be triggered by stress.

Court documents show Stanley filed for a civil stalking protection order against Wafler in 2010, while both were living in Kensington.

Woman sentenced for parole violation

LISBON — Brandy A. Cottrill, 22, Ephriam Street, East Liverpool, stipulated to violating her probation and was sentenced in Columbiana County Common Pleas Court to an indefinite term in the Eastern Ohio Correction Center for Women for illegal use of supplemental nutrition assistance program benefits in March 2011.

Todd A. Bennett, 36, Strader Road, East Liverpool, pleaded guilty to receiving stolen property and was sentenced to nine months in prison, concurrent with a sentence he is currently serving on charges out of Jefferson County. Bennett had used a credit card owned by Lewis Bennett at Walmart, without the owner's permission.

Nicole L. Wright, 24, Franklin Street, Toronto, pleaded guilty to possession of drugs for heroin in her possession on Dec. 7, 2012. Sentencing is set for Dec. 16.

Man charged with kidnapping 6-year-old girl

JACKSON (AP) — A southern Ohio man has been indicted on five charges including kidnapping and rape in the disappearance of a 6-year-old girl in July.

Attorney General Mike DeWine on Thursday announced the nine-count indictment against 30-year-old Zachary Dunn. He also faces abduction, gross sexual imposition and felonious assault charges.

Court records don't show an attorney for Dunn.

DeWine in a statement said Dunn grabbed the girl from her home and "terrorized" her until she escaped.

The girl was found July 26 hours after she disappeared in Jackson. At the time, the city's mayor said a woman located the girl about six miles away from her home.

Police had searched for the girl by land and air and issued a statewide alert.

HIGHWAY PATROL

— Jacqueline M. Marsico, 50, Poland, was eastbound on U.S. 62 in Knox Township at 4:25 p.m. Tuesday and Norma J. Steed, 54, Alliance, was westbound and went left of center and collided with Marsico. Steed was cited for lanes of travel and she and a passenger, Martha J. Harton, 71, Sebring, were taken to Alliance hospital with non-incapacitating injuries. Marsico was taken to Salem hospital with possible injuries.

— Jason E. Harris, 27, Huck Road, Lisbon, was southbound on Steubenville Pike in Wayne Township at 6:24 p.m. Sept. 19 and the vehicle caught fire. He was cited for driving under suspension.

— Erin E. Surmaceviz, 36, state Route 164, Lisbon, was southbound on state Route 45 in Center Township at 10:30 a.m. Monday and Linda R. Vandyke, 48, state Route 45, Lisbon, turned left from a private drive onto state Route 45 and the vehicles struck one another. No citations were issued.

— Angel M. Gorby, 31, Beloit, was stopped in Knox Township at 10:49 p.m. Sunday delivering phone books and Evan J. Zwick, 20, Park Avenue, Minerva, was southbound on 12th Street and went off the right side into an embankment and a mailbox. Zwick was cited for failure to control. Something struck Gorby's vehicle, but it was not known what.

FirstEnergy sets renovations at Beaver Valley plant in 2017

SHIPPINGPORT, Pa. (AP) — A western Pennsylvania nuclear plant will undergo major renovations in 2017, its owner said.

The steam generators and reactor vessel head in Unit 2 of FirstEnergy Corp.'s Beaver Valley Nuclear Power Plant will be replaced during a scheduled refueling outage, at a cost of hundreds of millions of dollars, company spokeswoman Jennifer Young told The Beaver County Times.

A similar replacement and maintenance project was completed on Unit 1 of the Shippingport plant in 2006. Both units have been granted 20-year license extensions, running until 2036 for Unit 1 and 2047 for Unit 2.

Young said the components to be replaced are original, and new steam generators and reactor heads will help ensure long-term plant safety.

"Certainly, whenever you put in new components, there is a lot of engineering analysis that goes in ahead of time, just to make sure you are not putting additional pressure on the plant," she said. "But what they are putting in Unit 2 is exactly the same as what they put in Unit 1 in 2006."

Unit 1 is "operating very well with no challenges," she said.

Akron, Ohio-based FirstEnergy awarded the Unit 2 contract to San Francisco-based Bechtel Corp., the same company that replaced Unit 1's steam generators.

Postmaster: Money woes behind emergency rate hike request

WASHINGTON (AP) — Postmaster General Patrick Donahoe said Thursday the Postal Service had no choice but to ask for an emergency rate hike given the agency's dire finances.

One day after his cash-strapped agency proposed raising the first-class stamp price to 49 cents, Donahoe urged swift action by Congress to overhaul the Postal Service and fix its finances.

The post office expects to lose $6 billion this year. It wants to raise stamp prices by 3 cents next year. The request must be approved by the independent Postal Regulatory Commission.

"We did not want to take this step, but we had no choice due to our current financial position," Donahoe said.

Donahoe appeared before the Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee to press for approval of bipartisan legislation that would allow his agency to end Saturday delivery after one year and cease door-to-door delivery for new residential and businesses addresses. Many lawmakers and postal worker unions say the delivery changes would inconvenience customers.

"The choice is simple: greater flexibility and authority now, or massive taxpayer exposure and service degradation later," Donahoe said.

Donahoe noted that his agency's request for a price hike probably won't be decided for three months, a delay that he said hampers the Postal Service's ability to run an efficient and competitive business.

"That's not a good environment to be in when you are fighting for your life," he said.

The Senate bill also would provide greater flexibility for the Postal Service to set prices on its own. Under federal law, the post office cannot raise its prices more than the rate of inflation unless it gets approval from the commission. The Senate proposal would have the inflationary rate cap expire in 2016.

For years, the Postal Service has struggled with declining mail volume and a 2006 congressional requirement that it make advance payments to cover expected health care costs for future retirees.

The bill would change how health costs for future retirees are calculated. The Postal Service is seeking to reduce its $5.6 billion annual payment for future retiree health benefits. It missed two of those payments in 2012, deferred one from the previous year and is expected to miss another at the end of this month, when its fiscal year ends.

Wrapping supplementary insurance plans around Medicare and other changes could help to reduce the Postal Service's health care costs by up to $8 billion annually, Donahoe said.

Accountant arrested in Madoff fraud
NEW YORK (AP) — A senior partner at a New York accounting firm has pleaded not guilty to federal charges that he aided financier Bernard Madoff in his epic fraud.

Paul Konigsberg entered the plea Thursday at an arraignment on five charges that he conspired with Madoff and helped him lie to investors.

He is accused of participating in and helping to direct false bookkeeping. Prosecutors say he is the only person outside the Madoff family to have held an ownership interest in Madoff's private investment business.

Konigsberg's lawyer tells a magistrate judge that his 77-year-old client was unaware of Madoff's Ponzi scheme. Konigsberg has been released on $2 million bail. Madoff is serving a 150-year prison sentence after admitting his fraud in 2009.

eBay to buy payments company

NEW YORK (AP) — E-commerce giant eBay Inc. reached a deal to buy online and mobile payments technology provider Braintree for $800 million in cash.

The move comes as eBay's PayPal unit works to evolve from its roots as an online payments provider, expanding its offline, mobile and online offerings to stores, restaurants and other business.

Braintree's payments technology is used by popular startups such as vacation rentals site Airbnb, cab-hailing app Uber and restaurant reservations site OpenTable. The company charges businesses a fee of 2.9 percent plus 30 cents per each transaction, and expects to process about $12 billion in payments this year.

Guinness-fueled 'holiday' troubles many

DUBLIN (AP) — Guinness has been put on the defensive amid surging protests that Arthur's Day is compounding an alcoholic culture that costs Ireland 3.7 billion euros ($5 billion) annually in hung-over workers, a Europe-leading rate of liver disease, late-night vandalism and violence in emergency rooms.

Arthur's Day, honoring the 18th-century founder of Ireland's quintessential drink, was launched by Guinness in 2009. Thursday's celebrations feature surprise musical performances in 815 pubs and clubs across Ireland as well as concerts worldwide from Malaysia to Jamaica, as well as a free print at some pubs.

Guinness says the annual festivities provide a needed tonic for a 7,500-strong Irish pub network struggling to maintain profits in the face of a five-year debt crisis that has ravaged employment and incomes. But some critics say it is an "alco-holiday" that causes disorder and worsens drinking issues.

Smithfield closes sale to Shuanghui

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Pork producer Smithfield Foods Inc. on Thursday completed its sale to Shuanghui International Holdings Ltd., the largest shareholder of China's biggest meat processor.

The $34 per share deal approved by shareholders earlier this week is the largest takeover of a U.S. company by a Chinese firm, valued at about $7.1 billion including debt. The Smithfield, Va., company's sale to Shuanghui comes at a time of serious food safety problems in China, some of which have involved Shuanghui, which owns food and logistics enterprises.

McDonald's to offer salad, fruit as side

NEW YORK (AP) — Want a side salad with that Big Mac?

McDonald's says it will start giving customers the choice of a salad, fruit or vegetable as a substitute for french fries in its value meals.

McDonald's Corp. will roll out the change early next year in the U.S., where people will be able to pick a salad instead of fries at no extra cost. McDonald's says it already lets customers make such swaps in some countries, such as France.

But now it says it now work to make the options available in 70 of its biggest markets around the world, which represent 85 percent of sales. McDonald's, which has more than 34,000 locations around the world, said the change will be in place in 30 to 50 percent of the areas within the next three years and 100 percent the regions by 2020.

The world's biggest hamburger chain made the announcement at the Clinton Global Initiative in New York City, where CEO Don Thompson made an appearance on stage with former President Bill Clinton.

In an interview before the announcement, Thompson said McDonald's is looking at developing other healthy sides that will appeal to customers. He noted that the company could also take the fruits and vegetables it offers in other parts of the world, such as cups of corn and kiwi on a stick, and make them more widely available.

"What is it that customers will choose, and what will they eat?" Thompson said. "What we don't want to do is just put something on the menu and say, hey, we did it. We really want consumption."

McDonald's also announced that it would use its packaging to make healthier options more appealing to kids. For example, a side of carrots might come in a more colorfully designed bag. Parents will still be able to order soda with Happy Meals, but McDonald's says it will only promote milk, juice and water on menu boards and in advertising. All advertising to kids will include a "fun nutrition or children's well-being" message, the company said.

Margo Wootan, director of nutrition policy at the health advocacy group Center for Science in the Public Interest, said taking soda off the menu as an option for Happy Meals was a big step that other fast-food chains should follow. But she said the push to include positive nutrition messages in ads to kids could help to give McDonald's a "health halo" that it doesn't necessarily deserve.

"The changes McDonald's are making make the food somewhat healthier. But I don't think a hamburger, some apples and fries is something I'd call healthy," she said.

The announcement comes as McDonald's faces criticism from health advocates who say it promotes bad eating habits. After years of outperforming its rivals, McDonald's is also struggling to shake its fast-food image and keep up with shifting tastes. Late last year, the company reported its first monthly sales decline in nearly a decade and sales performance around the world has been choppy ever since.

To better reflect the way people are eating, McDonald's recently started giving customers the choice to substitute egg whites in all its breakfast sandwiches. It also rolled out chicken wraps, which are partly intended to go after people who want foods they feel are fresher or healthier. Earlier in the week, rival Burger King rolled out lower-calorie french fries, reflecting the growing demand for better-for-you options.

McDonald's marketing to children is also an ongoing issue. A recent study by the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, for example, found that the chain's ads targeting children often emphasize toy giveaways and movie tie-ins, rather than food. And at its latest annual shareholders meeting, a 9-year-old girl made headlines after she stood to ask Thompson to stop "tricking" kids into eating the company's food.

The girl was with her mother, who was affiliated with Corporate Accountability, which has pressured McDonald's to change its marketing practices to kids.

POLICE REPORTS

PERRY TWP.

— A Kent State University Salem branch security officer contacted police at 4:44 p.m. Wednesday to request how to obtain information about a student who claimed to have made police reports in reference to allegations of threats made against the student while in Perry Township. He was told how to submit a public records request.

— Police were called at 4:20 p.m. Wednesday for a suspicious person soliciting on Beechwood Road. The resident requested some identification from the solicitor and asked a few questions and did not get a satisfactory response about the company or the solicitor. The person was located on Beechwood and identified, with no warrants found. The company can be checked online for complaints received. Police told the resident buyer beware.

— Police were called at 1:54 p.m. Wednesday to the 1100 block of Highland Avenue for a man going door-to-door selling books. He apparently had an altercation in the city while attempting to sell his magazines and Salem officers were looking for him. The man was found and identified as a 23-year-old from Alabama. He was told about the complaint.

SALEM

— Alyssa Sluter, 22, of 549 Newgard Ave., was taken into custody at her residence at 1:17 a.m. Thursday on an warrant for failure to appear on a driving under suspension charge.

— A reckless white vehicle was reported at 9:07 p.m. Wednesday in the area of Rose and Vine avenues, but was not found.

— A man was reported trespassing on Continental Drive at 8 p.m. Wednesday. The man was found to be a resident of Courtyard out for a walk. With the caller concerned for his safety, he was transported back to Courtyard by police.

— A car title was found on Franklin Avenue at 7:01 p.m. Wednesday, with the owner notified to pick it up.

— Police responded to several calls Wednesday afternoon regarding solicitors, who are required to secure a permit from city hall before going door-to-door. A female had been reported on Hickory Lane at 4:08 p.m., but was not found. At 1:54 p.m., people in a blue Ford truck were reported soliciting to seal driveways on Southeast Boulevard. They were told they would be cited if they didn't get a permit. Solicitors were also reported on East Ninth Street and found on 11th Street at 1:26 p.m., with Perry Township notified. One was found on Highland Avenue who said he was asking for voters to be number one. He said his boss told him this city didn't require a solicitor's permit. He was corrected on that and said they were dropped off and he couldn't contact anyone because he had no phone. He also wanted to explain his side of the story regarding a male who became irate with him and that he did swear at him and call him a name.

He was told he would be cited if he continued. An officer spoke to the male resident who said he was upset over how the man treated him and then went to the neighbor's and was staring in their garage.

— At 11:17 a.m. Wednesday, police were called to the 1300 block of East Third Street for a black male with a baseball cap on backwards and a brown leather jacket going door-to-door asking for money. A woman said when she refused to give any money, he said it was a racial thing. Officers did not find him.

— An anonymous caller at 3:07 p.m. Wednesday reported a man with an open container in a blue Dodge truck in a parking lot in the 100 block of South Lincoln Avenue. The open container was root beer.

— The fire department requested an officer respond at 2:53 p.m. Wednesday for an open burning violation on Cedar Street. A man was found burning bushes in a burn pit and said the property owner gave him permission. The fire department told him it was illegal. He put the fire out with a garden hose.

— Barking dogs were reported at 2:13 p.m. Wednesday on West 14th Street. An officer attempted to contact the homeowner, but no one was home.

— A woman from a store in the 500 block of East State Street reported at 1:18 p.m. Wednesday that two females were trying to steal several clothing items. She got some of the items back, but was unsure how many items were taken. The females had left.

— A man on West Fourth Street reported at 1:09 p.m. Wednesday that he was being harassed by a male known to him in the 1100 block of East State Street where the other male pulled into the lot, blocking him in. He reportedly made statements that he was going to have him lose his job. He wanted it documented due to ongoing harassment.

— Wanda Clark, of Buck Road, Alliance, reported at 12:43 p.m. Wednesday that a 2003 Dodge parked in the lot behind Randy's Barber Shop was damaged. The glass was cracked on the windshield, the door was scratched and there were scratches on the roof. It appeared someone tried to pry open the door.

— A woman at a business in the Eastgate Plaza on East State Street reported at 12:42 p.m. Wednesday that a customer became upset over a discrepancy with the expiration date of the tanning package he purchased. He made a statement about getting his money back one way or another.

— A suspicious person was reported at 9:56 a.m. Wednesday on Salem-Unity Road. No one was seen around and it was determined to be outside the city limits. Goshen Township was notified.

— Suspicious vehicles were reported at 9:53 a.m. Wednesday in Centennial Park, but left before police arrived.

— A man in the 300 block of West Fifth Street reported at 9:46 a.m. Wednesday that he walked across the street to his friend's house and found a large machete knife in the yard. He and his friend both believe the machete was left there by a local male juvenile. An officer took the object, with the matter turned over to the juvenile officer.

LISBON

— A West Pine Street woman reported at 9:40 p.m. Wednesday her son's car was vandalized while parked at football practice.

— The manager at Smith Oil reported Sept. 22 they had a customer purchase a gasoline a week ago but the person has yet to return to pay despite efforts to contact the person. The officer told the manager not to let anyone get gas without paying.

Quakers to battle 'hungry' Aviators

ALLIANCE — A popular saying among football coaches is that if a team alternates between two starting quarterbacks, it may as well not have any. It's a theory that Salem coach Ron Johnson is holding firm to as he prepares the Quakers for their second Northeastern Buckeye Conference game at Alliance tonight.

Trace Jenkins—who has started under center for the past year and a half—suffered an injury in the first half of the Quakers 41-28 loss to Louisville last Friday.

Johnson turned to backup Matthew Weingart in the second half. The sophomore responded by completing 11-of-18 passes for 202 yards and two touchdowns and no interceptions.

The Quakers—who were down 34-7 after three quarters—rallied to make the score respectable. Johnson said, however, there is no dilemma at quarterback. If Jenkins is healthy he will start tonight against Alliance without question.

"Matt is a pure drop-back passer and did an excellent job in the second half, but I do not believe in alternating quarterbacks," Johnson said. "Trace is our starter and if he can play, he will start. We'll have to evaluate how he feels, it will probably be a game-time decision."

No matter who starts under center, Johnson knows he will be up against a hungry opponent in Alliance. The Aviators—like the Quakers—come into the game with a record of 2-2 with back-to-back losses.

They are coming off a 21-19 loss to Minerva when a late field goal sailed wide left. "They are a very athletic fast team," Johnson said. "They will be wanting to get their first conference win just like we will. We are going to need to be at our best."

According to Johnson, the Aviators feature skill across the board, but especially on offense. Wideout J.J. Kukura is averaging 16 yards per catch over the last two years and is coming off an eight-reception 138-yard game against Minerva.

Quarterback Kordelle Phillips has completed nearly 70 percent of his passes this season for 533 yards and five touchdowns. He dissected the Quakers for 210 yards in last year's 44-14 Alliance rout.

Meanwhile, running back Parrish Martin is averaging over 6 yards per carry and is also capable of playing quarterback. He subbed for an injured Phillips in Alliance's opener against Canfield and led the Aviators to a comeback win.

"They have great speed all over the place," Johnson said. "Next to Liberty they might be one of the fastest teams we play this year. We are going with a very similar gameplan this week. The main focus will be keeping their athletes in front of us."

For the Quakers to win, Johnson also feels it imperative that they shore up their run defense. Last week Louisville ran for 270 total yards, which was a key factor in the Quakers falling way behind.

"That is certainly a concern for us," Johnson said. "For the past two weeks we have not been able to play a full 48 minutes of defense. We need to correct that."

Salem girls fall to Carrollton

By CHRIS RAMBO
Staff Writer

SALEM—Three nights ago in a win over Louisville, the Salem Quakers utilized all of their collective talent and played what coach Allie Winner called "perfect volleyball."

Unfortunately for the Quakers, they could not summon the same level of play Thursday night against conference-leading Carrollton.

With a share of first-place in the Northeastern Buckeye Conference on the line, the Quakers stumbled, losing to the Warriors 25-10, 25-23, 25-21 at Cabas Gymnasium.

"It was an off night for a lot of people," Salem senior Camrin Costal said. "Our communication was not where it needed to be and we just kind of fell apart out there."

Carrollton improves to 15-3 overall and 9-1 in the NBC. The Warriors open up a two-game lead on the Quakers (11-4, 7-3 NBC) with four conference matches left.

"Obviously if we wanted to win the conference that was a key game for us to have," Winner said. "But you never know what is going to happen the rest of the way. We have to stay focused and hope Carrollton comes back to the pack."

In the first meeting between the two teams, the Quakers came away with a four-game victory. However, it became apparent right from the outset on Thursday that things were going to be different. Carrollton raced out to an 11-point lead before the crowd even had a chance to get settled on their way to a dominant 25-10 first-game win.

"The thing I noticed early was that Carrollton's defense was a lot better than the first time around," Winner said. "On our side we just came out shaky and gave them too many easy points."

"We came out right away with intensity," Carrollton coach Amanda Tressa said. "To get off to that kind of a start was huge for us. One thing we've had to battle this year is doubting ourselves after slow starts but we came out and attacked tonight."

The Quakers gathered themselves during the break and turned the second game into a dogfight. The teams battled back and forth before Carrollton broke a 21-21 tie with three straight points and hung on 25-23.

"Everyone realized what was at stake before the second game and knew they had to pick it up," Costal said. "We came out and 1894 — Aqueduct Race Track opens its doors. The building is torn down in 1955 and the new Aqueduct re-opens on Sept. 14, 1959.

 1947 — Armed, then the world's leading money-winning thoroughbred, meets 1946 Kentucky Derby winner Assault in the first $100,000 winner-take-all match race, held at Belmont Park. Armed earns an easy victory over Assault, who was not in peak racing condition.
 1950 — Ezzard Charles wins a unanimous 15-round decision over Joe Louis at Yankee Stadium in New York to retain the world heavyweight title.
 1975 — Kansas quarterback Nolan Cromwell rushes for an NCAA record 294 yards in a 20-0 victory over Oregon State.
 1992 — World champion Nigel Mansell sets a single-season victory record, leading from start to finish in the Portuguese Grand Prix for his ninth win of the Formula One season.
 1996 — San Francisco's Barry Bonds becomes the second player to hit 40 homers and steal 40 bases in a season. Jose Canseco is the other. Bonds, who had 42 homers, stole his 40th base in a 9-3 win over Colorado.
 1998 — Mark McGwire gives baseball a new magic number, hitting two homers to reach No. 70 in the St. Louis Cardinals' season finale against Montreal. It's McGwire's fifth homer in the season-ending, three-game series. McGwire's 70th and final home run of the season was a line shot over the left-field wall on a first-pitch fastball from Carl Pavano in the seventh.
 2000 — The Women's British Open is elevated to major championship status on the LPGA Tour, replacing the du Maurier Classic. The other majors are the Nabisco Championship, the LPGA Championship and the U.S. Open.
 2003 — B.J. Symons of Texas Tech throws for 661 yards — a school and Big 12 record — and six touchdowns, in the Red Raiders' 49-45 win over Mississippi.
 2007 — Brazil and its star soccer player Marta put on a dazzling performance against the United States and cruises to a 4-0 victory in the semifinals of the Women's World Cup.

Things get dicey for Indians in Minnesota

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Reliever Joe Smith struck out pinch-hitter Oswaldo Arcia to stop a ninth-inning rally and the Cleveland Indians won their seventh straight game, holding off the Minnesota Twins 6-5 Thursday night to keep their edge in the AL wild-card race.

The Twins scored four runs in the ninth and had runners on first and second before Smith got the final out.

Cleveland leads Texas by one game for the second wild-card spot. Each team has three games left in the regular season. Tampa Bay is on top in the chase, one game ahead of the Indians.

Yan Gomes hit a towering two-run homer and Michael Brantley added three hits and two RBIs from the leadoff spot.

Bryan Shaw (7-3) picked up the victory in relief of Zach McAllister by getting five key outs over the fifth and sixth innings.

The Indians were cruising with a 6-1 lead until closer Chris Perez came in for what looked like mop-up duty in the ninth.

But Alex Presley hit an RBI triple, Josphil Pinto hit a two-run homer and suddenly the Twins were within one. Smith gave up an infield single and a walk before fanning Arcia on three pitches for his third save.

McAllister had a shutout intact despite allowing runners on in every inning. After a walk and a single with one out in the fifth, Shaw was summoned and got Ryan Doumit on a double-play grounder.

McAllister gave up six hits and two walks while striking out three. This was the right-hander's shortest start in September, and the 68 pitches were his second-lowest total of 24 starts this season.

Shaw is 5-0 in 13 appearances this month, and hasn't permitted a run in 15 1-3 innings.

The Indians caught quite a break with their September schedule, facing the teams with the three worst records in the league in 14 of their final 17 games: the Twins, White Sox and Astros.

The Twins have won a mere four of their last 21 home games since mid-August. They've lost 17 of 22 overall.

Doumit's two-out single in the seventh finally put the Twins on the board.

The Twins had to watch their opponents celebrate division-clinching wins in each of the last two series, in Oakland and then Detroit here in their own ballpark. They'll have to win a couple of games this weekend to prevent another party at Target Field.

Ryan Raburn singled in the fourth and took second on a balk by Twins starter Andrew Albers (2-5). Then Albers almost made a sliding catch of Asdrubal Cabrera's popped-up bunt in front of the mound, but the ball leaked out of his glove. The throw was in time for the out, but first baseman Chris Colabello simply missed it as it sailed into shallow right field for an error. Raburn hustled home on the blooper reel.

Then Gomes sent a soaring fly ball bouncing off the facade along the second deck above left field for a 3-0 edge.

Albers was pulled with the bases loaded and two outs in the sixth, and Brantley met reliever Ryan Pressly with an RBI single to pad the lead. Carlos Santana's double in the seventh made it 5-0, and Brantley added another RBI single in the eighth.

played with a sense of urgency, they just made a nice run at the end."

Carrollton wasted no time taking control in the third set, building an early seven point lead that was later stretched to nine. The Quakers slowly chipped away and pulled within three late before the Warriors slammed the door.

"All season we've had a problem with slow starts," Costal said. "Most of the time we were able to get ourselves together in time to win. It just happened too late tonight."

Maria Shivers led the Quakers with nine kills, an ace and three blocks. Tori Jones chipped in six kills and Carson Herron had 25 assists. Carrollton was led by Addie Borland with 17 kills, Roz Prideman with four blocks and Kelsey Voll with 35 assists.

"A big key tonight was that they had their whole team firing on all cylinders," Winner said. "I had a couple of my girls on but the rest off. It put a lot more pressure on the one that were playing well."

Salem won the junior varsity match 25-9, 25-11. Dori Miller had six kills and three aces.

The Quakers host Hubbard on Monday.

Ron Firth extended his lead over Chuck Greenwood with an 11-2 week. Nathan Boley and Michael Burich also put up 11-2 marks, but both trail first place by four games. Chris Rambo and Steve Rappach are in danger of falling out of contention. After this week, the season will be half-way over. If there was any time to make a bold move for a jump in the standings, that time would be now.

Browns' Jordan Cameron catching on as playmaker

BEREA (AP) — Jordan Cameron's hoop-playing days are over. Still, every once in a while he'll join a pickup basketball game, and at some point dunk on some unfortunate defender.

"That's all I can do," the tight end said, cracking up. "I can't shoot."

Fortunately for the Browns, his football skills are much more diverse.

Cameron, who played basketball at Brigham Young and walked-on USC's team before concentrating on his football career, has quickly developed into one of Cleveland's top offensive players.

Through three games, the 6-foot-5, 252-pounder leads the team in catches (20), yards receiving (269) and touchdowns (40).

Last week, he tied a Browns record with three TD catches, including one off a fake field goal as well as the game-winner from quarterback Brian Hoyer with 51 seconds left.

For Cameron, it had been quite a drought between three-TD games.

"High school," he said. "Back in the day."

The Browns have been pleased with Cameron's progress and development as a big-time target.

A fourth-round pick in 2011 after catching just 16 passes in 12 games for the Trojans, he had just six catches as a rookie. He finished last season with only 20 receptions for 226 yards, numbers he's already surpassed with 13 games remaining.

Before training camp began, there were questions about his durability and whether Cameron could handle a heavy workload or the complexities of first-year coach Rob Chudzinski's offensive system.

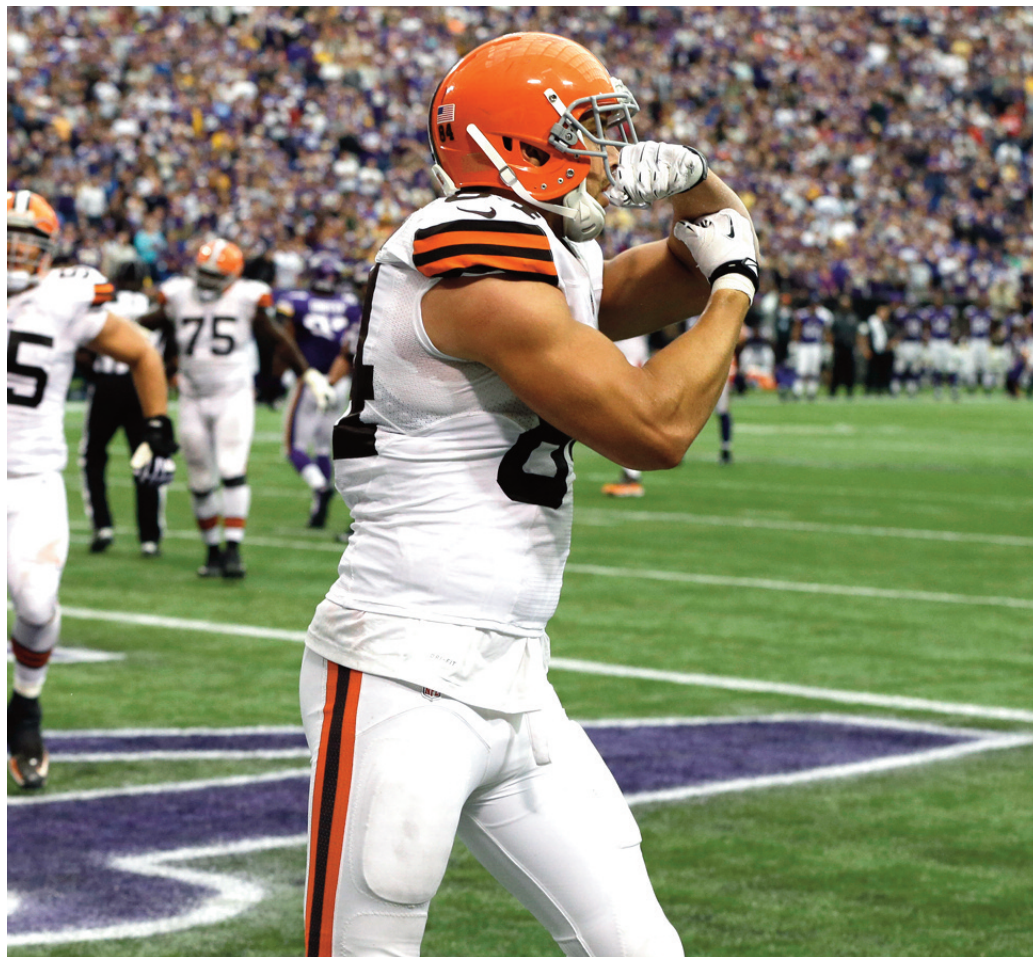

So far, Cameron has delivered.

"It feels good," the 25-year-old said. "It's kind of one of those things that I've been working for so long that it just feels like forever. You have to be patient and I just put my head down and kept grinding every day and I'm just trying to focus on the little things."

"Sometime you can get caught up in hearing everyone else say, 'You're not going to make it. You're not good enough. You're just a basketball player.' I haven't made it by any means."

"I have a lot of work to do and I've got to keep progressing each week."

Browns offensive coordinator Norv Turner knows a good tight end when he sees one. Turner spent several seasons in San Diego with Antonio Gates, a former Kent State basketball player who has built a Hall of Fame resume with the Chargers.

While Cameron has a long way to go to be mentioned in Gates' company, he's making the right strides for the Browns.

"I just like the consistency," Turner said of Cameron's growth. "I think there was a concern in spring and people talked about me getting to know him: 'Is he a consistent guy? Is he a guy who can show up and do it?' And right now, he's done that for three games. He creates problems for defensive players."

Cameron finished with six catches for 66 yards against the Vikings. After three games, he's second among tight ends in yardage, tied for fourth among all AFC players and 11th among NFL players.

While others may seem surprised, the confident Cameron doesn't seem shocked by his fast start.

"I'm just trying to be a playmaker for this team," he said. "It's not one of those things where I was going to have any objectives for myself this season. I just wanted to be a guy that this team could count on, be reliable and that's my goal this year."

With size and jumping ability, Cameron is part of a new breed of tight ends changing pro football. Browns defensive coordinator Ray Horton said players such as Cameron are a matchup nightmare.

"They're wide receivers in tight ends bodies and it's bringing a new dimension to the game," he said. "It's how the DBs have now changed from the small guys to the bigger guys. You just tend to match what the other side of the ball is doing and it poses problems for people."

"Because they're so big, they're faster than the line-backers but they're bigger than the safeties. It's kind of that hybrid position that everybody covets right now."

It's the position Cameron prefers. Once he walked away from the basketball court, he was determined to make plays on the field. He's quieted some of the doubters and wants to silence them for good.

"It is motivation, but frankly I'm tired of hearing about basketball," he said. "I'm not a basketball player. I'm a football player now. I guess it helps. These tight ends nowadays have basketball backgrounds, but I don't want to be known as a basketball player."

That appears to be a slam dunk.

NOTES: LB Jabaal Sheard did not practice again because of a sprained knee. It's likely he will miss Sunday's game against Cincinnati and possibly more time. With Sheard out, rookie Barkevious Mingo will likely make his first start, and Horton believes the first-round pick is ready for a full workload. "He's growing," Horton said. "I think he will be better this coming week than he was last weekend." ... DE Billy Winn (quadriceps) and K Billy Cundiff (quad) also sat out practice. ... QB Brandon Weed (sprained thumb) was not wearing a brace on his hand for the first time since he got hurt. ... RG Shawn Lauvao could make his season debut this week after undergoing ankle surgery.

EA Sports settles college athlete likeness cases

NEW YORK (AP) — The NCAA is now on its own in the legal battle over whether athletes should share in the money made from the use of their likenesses.

Electronic Arts and the Collegiate Licensing Company have settled all lawsuits brought against the companies by former and current college athletes over the unauthorized use of the players' images and likenesses in video games and other merchandise.

The NCAA is not part of the settlements, which includes the O'Bannon case. Brought by former UCLA basketball star Ed O'Bannon, that lawsuit was asking for the NCAA, EA and CLC to share billions of dollars in revenues — including those made from massive television rights deals — with college athletes.

The settlement was submitted for approval to the U.S. District Court in Northern California and the terms were confidential.

"We learned of this notional settlement today," said Donald Remy, chief legal officer for the NCAA. "We have asked for, but have not yet received, the terms so we cannot comment further."

Remy told USA Today in a story posted earlier that the NCAA was prepared to take the O'Bannon case and others like it to the Supreme Court.

The other cases settled were brought by former Rutgers quarterback Ryan Hart, former Nebraska and Arizona State quarterback Sam Keller and former West Virginia running back Shawne Alston.

"Today's settlement is a game-changer because, for the first time, student-athletes suiting up to play this weekend are going to be paid for the use of their likenesses," said Houston-based attorney Eugene Egdorf in a statement. Egdorf represents Hart, who sued EA Sports in 2009.

Bud Selig will retire in January 2015

NEW YORK (AP) — Bud Selig took over a sport with $1.7 billion in revenue, four teams in each year's postseason, economic disparity among the clubs and a fixation on sticking with traditions that dated to the 19th century.

After a decade of maintaining his departure was imminent, the 79-year-old baseball commissioner put his exit plans in writing Thursday and said in a statement he will retire in January 2015 after 22 years — the second-longest term behind Kennesaw Mountain Landis.

His revolutionary reign produced an $8 billion industry, interleague play, an expanded postseason and two decades of labor peace. But, he also presided over a canceled World Series and long-running drug scandal.

"He's been the voice of baseball. Some people liked his voice. Some people didn't," Minnesota Twins manager Ron Gardenhire said. "I have a lot of respect for the guy."

Selig has been a bit of the Boy Who Cried Wolf in the past when it came to his retirement. He said in 2003 that he would step down at the end of 2006 but has repeatedly accepted new contracts.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Penske Racing's most recent winner heads to Las Vegas Motor Speedway this weekend for a regularly scheduled Truck Series race.

That's as far into the future Ryan Blaney is willing to look right now.

Under contract to Penske Racing, he's gotten two Nationwide Series starts this season and picked up his first career victory Saturday night at Kentucky in the No. 22 Ford. He drives full-time for Brad Keselowski Racing in the Truck Series, and has one win and is ranked fifth in the standings headed into Las Vegas.

But after that win at Kentucky, everybody wants to know what the 19-year-old driver is doing next year. Blaney said Wednesday he doesn't know.

"There has been very, very little talks with other teams, right now my loyalty is to Penske Racing and finishing out this 2013 season very strong, either in that Nationwide car, if I get another race, or finishing out the Truck season very strong for Brad Keselowski Racing," he said. "Just really focused on that right now, and then in the offseason, we'll see what doors open up or if we progress here with Penske like planned."

"So we'll find out here in the coming months, but right now my loyalty is to Penske and finishing out this 2013 season very strong."

Blaney's name had been heating up even before Saturday night's victory.

With Furniture Row Racing needing a replacement for Kurt Busch in the No. 78 Chevrolet in the Sprint Cup Series, the team had recently seemed keen on finding a young driver and Blaney's name had been mentioned as a possible candidate.

But the Penske organization seems determined to keep him, particularly now that Nationwide Series points leader Sam Hornish Jr. has revealed he's looking for something for 2014. Penske fields cars in the Cup Series for defending champion Keselowski and for Joey Logano, and the two share a seat in the Nationwide Series alongside Hornish.

Blaney admitted he wants more races.

Fickle Venus

What happens smack in between yesterday's trine of Venus and Jupiter and tomorrow's square between Venus and Mars is a lot of "she loves me, she loves me not." Libra's dominance over the sun gives another push to the back and forth pendulum of fickle romance. Just remember that whichever way it swings, it will always come back.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Amazing things do happen. Prayers get answered; wishes come true. When you see examples of wondrous things happening for other people in the world, it fortifies your belief that it can also happen for you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Environments matter. It's easier to study in a clean room, do somersaults in a big stretch of space and practice singing without competing noise. Make your environment conducive to the activities you want to do more of.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21) Sometimes an act of conformity is the polite thing to do, but if you have to disown your strength or ignore your intuition in the process, then perhaps you're putting too high a value on politeness.

CANCER (June 22-July 22) You want to be with someone who inspires more than a mental tally of matched qualifications. What's good on paper isn't always good in your body and soul. You want true chemistry, and that's what you'll get.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You are consciously aware of the broad strokes, but often it's what you pick up subliminally that has the biggest effect on your energy. Tune in to the moods of others and the feel of each interaction.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) To remain open to the world yet inwardly strong is a kind of victory. Because you are so grounded in your earth-sign nature today, you will achieve this peaceful and rare balance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) As a rule, you're generous with compliments even when your surroundings aren't quite praise-worthy. Complaining is bad form unless health and safety are threatened.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21) One pace does not fit all. Faster is not better or worse; it's just different. The same goes for slower. You'll feel most comfortable and energized around people who match your rhythm.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) When being around people is draining, you find energy in other kinds of connections. For instance, through your special connection with animals you appreciate nature and its beauty.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your impeccable taste will be called on as you host or assist a friend in hosting a group. The person who controls the details such as music and lighting is also controlling the mood.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You don't believe that anyone's time is more or less valuable than yours. You prove this by being punctual. It will take special planning to pull this off with today's busy schedule.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) There is much that will go right even though the challenges of the day are steeper than usual. When things come together, it will be because people decide to be agreeable and positive.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Sept. 27) You will be increasingly aware of your needs, and next month you'll courageously get them met. Don't ignore one part of your life — do what's best for your overall scene. October and July bring bonus money. November seals a deal. December features excitement and happiness through music. Moves happen in May. Leo and Gemini people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 8, 2, 24, 13 and 49.

WEEKEND LOVE FORECAST:
ARIES: The person who loves you will follow you on your tangent of the moment, but you'll both be better off if this effort is somehow rewarded. TAURUS: You value loyalty and will avoid people who are obviously disloyal. GEMINI: Thinking takes energy, and that's why you don't mind if someone you trust makes a few decisions on your behalf. It's actually kind of nice. CANCER: Energy never lies, so if you get a feeling about someone, it makes no sense to fight it or deny it. LEO: A relationship growing slowly is better than one that stands still. VIRGO: The best way is to speak directly about what you want from someone. LIBRA: Social ease takes practice, and it's especially challenging to relax around an attractive stranger. If you mess it up a few times, who cares? Go easy on yourself. SCORPIO: You'll follow your fashion sense to create a look many will find attractive. SAGITTARIUS: Eye contact will allow you to read a person's soul. CAPRICORN: Don't let a loved one's expectations dominate your schedule. AQUARIUS: Leave some of the relationship work undone so the other person has to make an effort. PISCES: You'll ask for and get a commitment.

Get ready for the call

Heloise

Dear Heloise: I answer the phone for an agency that services the whole state. We receive 300-400 calls per day. The following are suggestions that would be so helpful for us when THE PUBLIC CALLS OUR OFFICE:

- Have a pen/pencil by the phone, and paper to write on.
- The information they need in their hand (e.g., name and extension number of the person they need to talk with, etc.).

— Also, reduce noises in the room — TV, kids yelling, cellphone, etc.

Thank you so much. It would make our day so much brighter! — Ms. Douglas in Mississippi
Thanks for your good insight! Hint from Heloise: Always have something to do (read a magazine, clean out a drawer, etc.) so you don't "waste" time while on hold. — Heloise

CLEANING DOG BEDS

Dear Heloise: I read your column daily in the Amarillo (Texas) Globe-News and want to thank you for all the wonderful advice you give. I have three large dog beds. The stuffing is anyone's guess, and the labels say "Do not wash." How do I get rid of the dog smell? — Emily S. in Texas

"Woof, woof" — no one likes a stinky dog. You can open a seam, dump out the "stuffing" and wash the covers to give them a good cleaning. Also, use one of my favorite household products: baking soda! Sprinkle the bed generously, rub in well and let sit for a while, then take outside and shake out the baking soda. If you are worried about future smells and stains, cover the bed with a plastic trash bag and then put a washable cover over that. When the cover gets dirty, just take it off and wash. Baking soda is a great product and can be used for so many things! Are Fido's plastic toys dirty? Scrub with a solution of baking soda and water to clean. — Heloise

TRAVEL HINT

Dear Heloise: Just a reminder for all of your readers who travel: When you get to your hotel, check the bottles of shampoo, lotion, etc., to make sure the seal hasn't been broken and they are new before you use them.

You even can check the coffee or anything else that is provided in the hotel rooms. Housekeeping is very busy, and sometimes they might miss something accidentally. Happy travels! — Stanley in Oklahoma

Hmmm — something I'd never thought about. Thanks for the hint. — Heloise

TREASURE FOREVER

Dear Heloise: This is in response to the lady who couldn't part with her child's baby clothes. Have a quilt made from the clothes! If you don't quilt, go to a local quilt shop, which will help you find someone to do the work. You will then have a treasure forever. — B.T., via email

Questions support as she changes jobs

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of a 4-year-old daughter and pregnant with my second child. My boyfriend and I live in a nice house and have a comfortable lifestyle. We each pay our own bills, and I pay half the mortgage that is in his name. I am extremely unhappy at my job. The job itself isn't the problem; it's the management team and its effect on office morale. They treat us employees like dirt, thus everyone is always fighting with each other. I try to stay out of it, but I am unhappy to the core there. I want to find another job after my maternity leave, but I'm afraid my soon-to-be-fiance won't be willing to pick up the slack financially while I'm temporarily unemployed.

Isn't this the normal give-and-take that "married" couples go through? Shouldn't I expect him to help me if I'm going through a rough patch? Are my expectations unreasonable? — EXPECTING AND DEPRESSED IN TEXAS

DEAR EXPECTING: I assume that you have discussed this with your boyfriend and he wasn't receptive. Your expectations wouldn't be unreasonable if you WERE married or at least engaged. But you're not. While you and I think he should help you financially over this rough patch, he may feel no obligation to do so. If that's the case, your not-quite-fiance appears to be treating you like a roommate-with-benefits. Because you are not on the title of the house you pay half the mortgage on, there is no guarantee you will ever have anything to show for your contribution.

In light of that, of course he should be supportive emotionally and financially if you leave your job. Expecting him to step up to the plate is not unreasonable. But whether he agrees with you and me is another matter. Please find out before you invest any more money or he impregnates you again.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are well into a relaxed retirement. His successful, middle-aged son "Rory" has developed the habit of stopping by unannounced occasionally on his way home from work. This would be fine except that it falls in the middle of the dinner hour. Although we ask Rory to join us, he prefers to just stand over us and talk about his day while we eat. This wasn't his childhood home, so it's not a matter of an extended familiarity with this residence.

I have asked his father to speak to him about it, and while he agrees that his son's actions are rude, he refused to say anything. My husband is mild-mannered and seems to be happy that Rory takes the time to see him. To me, it looks like this is the most convenient time for Rory to get the occasional parent visit out of the way while not considering our feelings.

Because I have had a good long-term relationship with my stepson, I took him aside and politely explained that these dinner interruptions are discourteous. Rory blew up at me! I was astonished to see a mature man I respected act in such a childish manner. Now I'm the culprit in a family rift, while my husband remains mute. Should I have focused on digestion and held my tongue? — DISAPPOINTED STEPMOM

DEAR STEPMOM: Because your husband refused to say anything and won't back you up, it appears the answer is yes. While some people consider the dinner hour to be sacred, not everyone does, and your stepson's visits were only occasional. Your request might have been better received had you told Rory that his hovering makes you nervous, and if he didn't care to share the food you had prepared, you'd appreciate it if he would at least sit at the table with you for everyone's comfort.

Longtime palpitations sign of low iron

Dr. Keith Roach

DEAR DR.

ROACH: I had palpitations for several years. I eventually went to a specialist, and I spent two weeks in hospital to no avail. Then my doctor said, "We have never checked your iron." The next day I had a blood test for iron. Within 24 hours, I had received two pints of blood and felt great!

DEAR DR. ROACH:

I am very concerned about my 71-year-old husband, who has chosen not to have his teeth cleaned in more than 10 years. When I urge him to do so, he does not take the suggestion well. I do not know the reason for this. He's basically healthy other than having had a triple bypass 10 years ago. He is very active around our property. He seems to think brushing twice a day (and rarely flossing) and rinsing with Listerine twice a day is enough. I seem to recall hearing about gum disease and heart-related illnesses being linked. Can you set my mind at ease about this? I am choosing not to have World War III over this! He did quit smoking 33 years ago, and for that, we are grateful. But I'm so afraid that this lack of dental hygiene is going to have negative effects. — A.

It seems that my iron content was nearly nonexistent. I had iron injections for a while and felt great. Now, 18 months later, the palpitations are starting up again, with another blood test showing low iron that's getting lower. I was getting weaker every day until I finally was able to get a four-hour iron infusion at the hospital. This apparently takes a few weeks to have a full effect, but I can say that today I feel about 80 percent, which is really good. But I still have no actual reason as to why this is happening. I am trying to eat and drink foods high in iron. Any advice? — J.H.

ANSWER: There are many good reasons to see a dentist and hygienist. Poor hygiene may lead to tooth loss. People with tooth problems from poor hygiene often are less self-confident. The data on vascular disease (including both stroke and heart disease) remain controversial. It is clear that people with poor dental hygiene have higher risk of disease, but it's not clear whether the gum disease is causing it. I suspect there actually is a higher risk of heart disease in people with periodontal disease, but even if there isn't, I still recommend regular dental hygiene by a professional.

ANSWER: While it sounds like the iron replacement is going well, you still need to figure out the cause of your iron deficiency. I'd start with malabsorption, which means your body isn't absorbing iron properly. One common cause of this is celiac sprue. It's also possible that you are losing iron (the usual place is through the GI tract, such as a polyp or inflammatory bowel disease). You should be checked for both possibilities, with a colonoscopy if you haven't had one recently, and with a look for malabsorption if the colon looks OK.

READERS: The booklet on colon cancer provides useful information on the causes and cures of this common malady. Readers can obtain a copy by writing: Dr. Roach — No. 505, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Can. with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.
