Council advances indoor shooting rules

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

City council held first reading on four ordinances related to legislation to allow indoor shooting ranges, but city Law Director Brooke Zellers said amendments may be required before any votes are taken.

Zellers made the comment after the meeting Tuesday night, when four pieces of legislation were introduced, with one ordinance for commercial indoor shooting ranges and one for private residential.

He said at least two of the four proposed ordinances will have to come before the Planning Commission since they involve changes to the zoning code.

The Rules & Ordinances Committee has been discussing and debating the idea of indoor shooting ranges since last summer. Councilman Rick Drummond, a member of the committee, said he received a request from a resident who's interested in having a private indoor shooting range.

Besides the two ordinances to create the shooting ranges, there's a proposed ordinance noting the rule against the discharge of weapons in the city won't apply to indoor shooting ranges. There's also a proposed ordinance to allow an indoor shooting range as a permitted use in a commercial zone.

The proposed rules spell out stringent specifications for building an indoor shooting range, referring to standards set in The Range Source Book by the National Rifle Association. Plans must be prepared by a professional engineer or architect licensed by the state of Ohio. Much of the focus is on containment to keep bullets from leaving the range in any way, along with sound control, ventilation and filtering systems and permit requirements. Private residential facilities will have to follow the same specific rules in addition to only being permitted below ground.

In other business, Councilman Clyde Brown questioned Mayor John Berlin about some emails he said he sent to city Service/Safety Director Ken Kenst regarding an alleged violation to amendments for what's permitted in an M-2 zoning district. He said he sent a photo of the alleged violation and emailed Berlin and asked him to ask the law director to file an injunction, but had not heard back.

Berlin asked Brown to come to his office to discuss the matter, but Brown said he would rather have the answer now. Council President K. Bret Apple interjected that the mayor isn't required to answer now and has offered to meet with Brown in his office. Berlin added that Brown can call him anytime he wants.

Brown indicated if he can't do it in public, he's not going to Berlin's office.

Sparta, Tenn., picks up old city fire truck

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

The Salem Fire Department's former 1990 Sutphen ladder truck headed for its new home in Tennessee on Tuesday.

Chief Kirk Young of the Sparta Fire Department, one of his lieutenants and two firefighters traveled nine hours to pick up the used truck they purchased through govdeals.com for a bid of $19,000.

Salem firefighters gave them some pointers about the truck and explained the various controls and features before they left. Young said their current ladder truck doesn't have water capabilities like this one does. It's a Seagraves ladder truck from 1979.

His department has three other trucks in the fleet, a 2013 Sutphen pumper and two Pierce pumpers, one from 2001 and one from 2002.

Young said they had been looking for something used that's been in good service and came to Salem three weeks ago to look at the truck. They liked what they saw, except for the orange color, which he said will be repainted white over red.

Sparta is a city with a population around 5,000 with a combination paid/volunteer fire department. Five paid firefighters work shifts of 24 hours on/72 hours off and they have 22 volunteers.

Salem City Council gave permission for the old ladder truck to be sold after the city purchased a demo 102-foot platform truck which is now in service. When contacted

Ohio AG's office to handle case against former DTF chief

By TOM GIAMBRONI
Staff Writer

LISBON — The Ohio Attorney General's Office has agreed to pursue criminal charges against the former director of the Columbiana County Drug Task Force.

County Prosecutor Robert Herron recently filed a request asking the AG's office to serve as special prosecutor in the case of Dan Downard, who was suspended as DTF director in November 2012 after it was learned that a DTF cell phone may have been issued to non-DTF personnel.

County Sheriff Ray Stone requested the Ohio Bureau of Criminal Investigation conduct the probe to avoid any conflict of interest since he has deputies assigned to the DTF, not to mention he serves as chairman of the DTF board of control. The state auditor's office was also called in to assist.

With both state investigations recently concluded, Herron said it was time to ask the AG's office to prosecute the case to avoid any potential conflict of interest with his office.

"Obviously, there's the potential for Dan to be a witness in (pending) cases that he was involved in when with the DTF," said Herron, who also serves as secretary for the DTF board of control.

The AG's office agreed to present the case to the county grand jury and prosecute the matter if an indictment results, at no cost to the county.

Stone launched a preliminary investigation after possible irregularities within the DTF were brought to his attention. The board meeting minutes indicated his initial probe determined the DTF was billed for at least four months for a cell phone given to a non-DTF member.

Based on Stone's findings, the DTF office was closed for two weeks, the office locks changed and an office-wide inventory performed. A new DTF director was also appointed to replace Downard, who was on assignment to the DTF from the Lisbon Police Department.

Downard was placed on paid leave from the Lisbon Police Department pending the outcome of the investigation but he later resigned. His attorney previously declined comment.

Brush fires spring up with first warm day

Staff Report

It did not take long. On the first spring day that had real warmth in the air, a spate of brush fires sprung up in the county.

There is a lot of moisture in the ground, but also a lot of withered plants from last year and very little new green growth.

Of course, a strong westerly wind with gusts around 25 mph contributed greatly to the conditions.

In about a 60-minute span, reports of four different brush fires buzzed over the scanner in the news-room:

ALMANAC

Today is Wednesday, April 2, the 92nd day of 2014. There are 273 days left in the year. Ten years ago: A judge in New York declared a mistrial in the grand-larceny case against two former Tyco executives after a juror apparently received an intimidating letter and phone call for supposedly siding with the defense. (Former CEO L. Dennis Kozlowski and CFO Mark H. Swartz were convicted in a retrial of looting Tyco of more than $600 million in corporate bonuses and loans; each was sentenced to 8 1/3 to 25 years in prison.) Five years ago: Leaders of the world's rich and major developing countries met at an emergency G-20 economic summit in London; afterward, President Barack Obama hailed agreements they had reached as a "turning point in our pursuit of global economic recovery," but cautioned, "there are no guarantees."

NATION/WORLD

7.1 million: Obama basks in health care sign-up success — but will it save Democrats in fall?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mocking his critics, President Barack Obama boasted Tuesday that 7.1 million people have signed up for his health care law, an unexpected comeback after a disastrous rollout sent his poll numbers plummeting and stirred fears among Democrats facing re-election this fall. "The debate over repealing this law is over," he declared.

Despite lingering problems with the website, a late wave of enrollments pushed sign-ups higher than critics and even the White House had believed possible. Still, the administration hasn't determined how many of those people have closed the deal by paying their first month's premiums. Also unclear is how many were previously uninsured — the real test of Obama's health care overhaul. The law also expanded coverage for low-income people through Medicaid, but only about half of the states have agreed to implement that option.

The administration also hasn't yet released an updated demographic breakdown of enrollees, such as the number of younger people whose participation is critical to the law's success.

The late enrollment surge may do little to change the political dynamics heading into the midterm elections, particularly for Democrats running in conservative states where the health law and the president himself remain deeply unpopular. Even Obama's advisers acknowledge that the public's views on the law are unlikely to shift significantly between now and November.

Once unthinkable, US considering freeing Jonathan Pollard to keep Mideast peace talks alive

WASHINGTON (AP) — Every president since Ronald Reagan has refused to release Jonathan Pollard from prison. A CIA director once threatened to resign when Bill Clinton briefly considered freeing the convicted spy as part of Mideast peace talks. But now, in a gamble to extend negotiations that appear on the brink of collapse, the Obama administration is bringing the U.S. closer than it has been in years to granting Pollard an early release.

If Pollard's freedom leads eventually to a final peace settlement, it could mark a major victory for U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry, who has toiled to achieve an agreement between the Israelis and Palestinians after decades of distrust and violence. But if Pollard is freed and the talks fail, it could be a costly embarrassment.

Releasing Pollard now, just to keep Israeli-Palestinian negotiations going, "portrays a weakness on our part and a certain amount of desperation," says Aaron Miller, who was part of the U.S. negotiating team at two rounds of peace talks during the Clinton administration. "It guarantees almost nothing."

The White House insisted Tuesday that President Barack Obama has not decided on whether to release Pollard, a former U.S. Navy analyst who was sentenced to life in prison nearly 30 years ago for selling classified military documents to the Israeli government. Kerry, asked about prospects for Pollard's release, told reporters at a NATO meeting in Brussels, "There is no agreement, at this point in time, regarding anyone or any specific steps."

"There are a lot of different possibilities in play," Kerry said. He added: "All I can tell you is that we are continuing, even now as I am standing up here speaking, to be engaged with both parties to find the best way forward."

Atlanta archbishop heeds Pope Francis' call for simple living, apologizes for $2.2M mansion

ATLANTA (AP) — Archbishop Wilton Gregory seems to have gotten the pope's message about modest living.

Days after Pope Francis permanently removed a German bishop for his lavish spending on a new residence, the Atlanta archbishop apologized for building a $2.2 million mansion as his residence. He bowed to criticism from local parishioners and said he'd consider selling the new home in Buckhead, Atlanta's toniest neighborhood.

In letters, emails and a meeting, local Catholics told Gregory the price tag was outlandish, especially in light of Francis' frugality. The Tudor-style mansion, stretching nearly 6,400 square feet, includes two dining rooms and a safe room. The archbishop said the new pope has "set the bar" for church leaders and others, and Gregory said he hadn't looked at the project's cost in terms of his own "integrity and pastoral credibility."

"I failed to consider the impact on the families throughout the archdiocese who, though struggling to pay their mortgages, utilities, tuition and other bills, faithfully respond year after year to my pleas to assist with funding our ministries and services," Gregory wrote late Monday on the website of the archdiocesan newspaper.

It's a challenge bishops will be facing more pointedly — and publicly — in the age of Francis.

Sole winner of February's $425 million Powerball jackpot comes forward

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The sole winner of February's $425 million Powerball jackpot came forward to claim his prize Tuesday.

California Lottery officials said B. Raymond Buxton, a Northern California man, claimed the prize at the California Lottery headquarters in Sacramento.

"Unbelievable! is all I could muster," Buxton said in a statement on Tuesday. "Once the initial shock passed, I couldn't sleep for days."

After the winning numbers were announced, Buxton said, he sat in front of his computer in disbelief, checking and rechecking his ticket — and telling no one else that he had won. "Sitting on a ticket of this value was very scary," he said.

When he claimed his prize Tuesday, Buxton was wearing a shirt that featured a picture of the Star Wars character Yoda and read, "Luck of the Jedi I have."

Mr. Clean artist Richard Black of Ohio dies at 92

KETTERING, Ohio (AP) — The Ohio artist who created the Mr. Clean character that became a long-lasting advertising hit has died at age 92.

Fairmont Presbyterian Church in Kettering says services are planned Saturday for Harry Richard Black. The Dayton Daily News reports Black died Sunday at his home after a brief illness.

Consumer products maker Procter & Gamble Co. credits Black with creating the muscular bald man who cleans things up quickly. The company chose his depiction to represent its cleaner when it launched in 1958. Mr. Clean quickly became a popular brand and advertising character.

Black also was among artists behind depictions of Smokey Bear for U.S. Forest Service fire-prevention messages.

The Philadelphia native opened his own studio in 1950 and did illustrations for national companies and magazines. He was a longtime educator at colleges.

Magnitude-8.2 quake strikes northern Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — A powerful magnitude-8.2 earthquake struck off Chile's northern coast Tuesday night, causing landslides that blocked roads and setting off a small tsunami that forced an evacuation of coastal areas, but the region apparently escaped major damage and casualties.

In the city of Arica, 86 miles (139 kilometers) from the quake's epicenter, minor injuries were reported and some homes made of adobe were destroyed, officials said. The quake shook modern buildings in nearby Peru and in Bolivia's high altitude capital of La Paz.

The U.S. Geological Survey initially reported the quake at 8.0, but later upgraded the magnitude. It said the quake struck 61 miles (99 kilometers) northwest of the Chilean city of Iquique at 8:46 p.m., hitting a region that has been rocked by numerous quakes over the past two weeks.

Psychiatrist Ricardo Yevenes said he was with a patient in Arica when the quake hit. "It quickly began to move the entire office, things were falling," he told local television. "Almost the whole city is in darkness."

The quake was so strong that the shaking experienced in Bolivia's capital about 290 miles (470 kilometers) away was the equivalent of a 4.5-magnitude tremor, authorities there said.

At least 10 strong aftershocks followed in the first few hours, including a 6.2 tremor. More aftershocks and even a larger quake could not be ruled out, said seismologist Mario Pardo at the University of Chile.

Some roads in northern Chile were blocked by landslides, causing traffic jams among people leaving the coast. But coastal residents remained calm as they head inland while waves measuring almost 2 meters (6 1/2 feet) struck their cities.

Evacuations also were ordered in Peru, where waves 2 meters above normal forced about 200 people to leave the seaside town of Boca del Rio. But there were no injuries or major damage, said Col. Enrique Blanco, the regional police chief in Tacna, a Peruvian city of 300,000 near the Chilean border. "The lights went out briefly, but were re-established," Blanco said.

A tsunami alert was issued by the Pacific Tsunami Warning Center for all of Latin America's Pacific coast. Chile's Emergency Office warned that a large tsunami wave was expected to hit Robinson Crusoe island and others in the Juan Fernandez archipelago, hundreds of miles off Chile's central coast. Residents there evacuated ahead of the first waves. Chile's Easter Island, much farther off in the Pacific, was expected to get hit after midnight Wednesday.

Authorities in the U.S. state of Hawaii were on alert, but no tsunami watch was issued. The tsunami center said any higher waves would hit Hawaii starting 3:24 a.m. Hawaii Standard Time.

Chile is one of the world's most earthquake-prone countries because just off the coast, the Nazca tectonic plate plunges beneath the South American plate, pushing the towering Andes cordillera to ever-higher altitudes.

The latest activity began with a strong magnitude-6.7 quake on March 16 that caused more than 100,000 people to briefly evacuate low-lying areas. Hundreds of smaller quakes followed in the weeks since, keeping people on edge as scientists said there was no way to tell if the unusual string of tremors was a harbinger of an impending disaster.

The last recorded big quake to hit far northern Chile around Iquique was a devastating magnitude-8.3 in 1877. It unleashed a 24-meter-high (nearly 80-foot-high) tsunami, causing major damage along the Chile-Peru coast and fatalities as far away as Hawaii and Japan.

A magnitude-8.8 quake and ensuing tsunami in central Chile in 2010 killed more than 500 people, destroyed 220,000 homes, and washed away docks, riverfronts and seaside resorts. That quake released so much energy, it actually shortened the Earth's day by a fraction of a second by changing the planet's rotation.

The strongest earthquake ever recorded on Earth also happened in Chile — a magnitude-9.5 tremor in 1960 that killed more than 5,000 people.

Chile is the world's leading copper producing nation, and most of its mining industry is in the northern regions. Top mining companies said there was no serious damage to their operations so far.

Fatal fire on Country Club Lane remains under investigation

Staff Reports
GOSHEN TWP. — The fatal fire on Country Club Lane last month remains under investigation. According to Michael Duchesne, public information officer for the state fire marshal, investigators are waiting on the coroner's and toxicology reports before ruling on the fire which killed Anthony Thomas DeCrow Jr., 63. Damascus and Salem fire departments responded to the home shortly before 3 p.m. March 20 where the garage was engulfed in flames. The body of DeCrow was discovered inside the charred remains of a vehicle inside the garage. The coroner's report found no initial signs of trauma on the body.

Ensure Ohioans get tax refunds

After a scandal erupted last year when it was learned some Ohioans who had overpaid taxes were not told they were due refunds, state officials insisted they would keep that from happening again.

But legislators, apparently having heard too many similar promises from the bureaucracy, have decided to make it official.

A bill approved in the state House of Representatives would require the state to notify those who have overpaid taxes. It also could streamline the process of providing refunds or credit toward future taxes.

Current Ohio law does not require that taxpayers be notified in overpayment situations. Presumably, legislators in the past have assumed tax officials would do that simply because it is the right thing.

And, again, tax officials say they will keep the problem from happening in the future.

Still, there's nothing like writing it into the statute books.

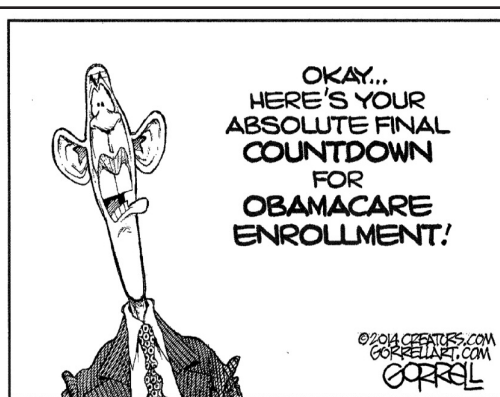

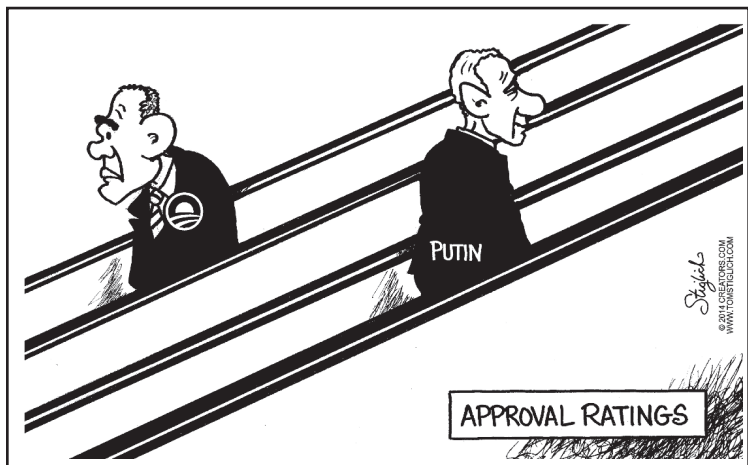

State senators should approve the House bill and forward it to Gov. John Kasich for his signature. Buckeye State residents and businesses should not have to rely on the kind-heartedness of tax officials to get them refunds.

OTHER VOICES

March 25 — Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch, on flood insurance increases:

You really need to know only two things about the federal flood-insurance program to evaluate its wisdom. First, many owners say they couldn't afford to have homes so close to the shore without the substantial subsidy. Second, the Obama administration considers it too socialistic. Last year, Craig Fugate, head of the Federal Emergency Management Agency that runs the program, said the administration wanted to move away from "subsidizing rates" to "a capitalist, private-sector model of managing risk." You know things have gone too far when the current White House wants a greater degree of laissez-faire.

Two years ago, Congress considered legislation that would have raised rates rapidly to market levels. Beneficiaries raised unholy heck. The other day, President Barack Obama signed legislation to increase rates more gradually. Those hikes are still steep — as high as 18 percent a year. But their very steepness testifies to how out of tune the subsidized policies had become. Washington — meaning the taxpayers — is $24 billion in the hole because of them. In essence, that means the federal government has spent $24 billion encouraging riskier choices than people would otherwise make. Homeowners faced with whopping premium increases — including a few hundred of them here in central Virginia — deserve sympathy. Politicians put down a rug and are now pulling it out from under them. That is the painful price of correcting a policy that never should have existed in the first place.

Lighten up on first lady

KATHLEEN PARKER

The past couple of weeks have marked a turning point in American ugliness as the mob has turned its full fury on first lady Michelle Obama.

From criticism of her trip to China to a recent "tell-all" by former White House assistant press secretary Reid Cherlin writing for The New Republic about Mrs. Obama's allegedly tyrannical behavior, the gloves have been removed.

As described, she was a perfectionist — super-attentive to detail and laser-focused on advance planning. And this is bad because? Worse, according to a former (anonymous) staffer, there was no barometer for meeting Mrs. Obama's high standards.

"The first lady having the wrong pencil skirt on Monday is just as big of a [mess-up] as someone speaking on the record when they didn't mean to or a policy initiative that completely failed," said the former aide. "It just made you super anxious."

Yes, high-pressure jobs are often like that. And the wrong skirt isn't nothing when every scarf, sweater or sneaker is analyzed as though Vladimir Putin's next move hinged on a hemline.

Other criticism sliming the Internet has been leveled at Michelle's China trip, which to some seemed like just another vacation for the first lady, her two daughters and her mother, Marian Robinson, who was described by a single disgruntled Chinese hotel staffer as "barking at the staff." All other staff commented on how nice everyone was, but a British reporter managed to find one ticked-off person.

Brilliant.

As for vacations, Hawaii may be an enviable destination, but China? (Please don't feel compelled to share your China vacation. I'm sure it was great.) Moreover, goodwill exchanges are among our most effective instruments in diplomacy, soft or otherwise. What is more humanizing than a mother, her daughters and their grandmother?

As for the conduct abroad, a snapshot doesn't tell the story. Mrs. Obama's no-press stipulation is problematic, to be sure, but I can confidently report that the Obamas are recognized for their superior attention to protocol. Witness Mrs. Obama when she met Pope Benedict XVI in 2009 and national security adviser Susan Rice during the president's recent visit with Pope Francis. Both ladies wore black attire, including mantillas.

This is proper dress for women at the Vatican and I'm told they were observed appreciatively. Aren't proper conduct and decorum what we really want from our presidential spouse?

Instead, the haters prefer to focus on a frame here and there in which Michelle Obama is either not wearing the happy-wife smile or dressed too casually for their taste. Those in the public eye for any period of time will fail to present their best face in every instance — or they'll have perfectionist minders micro-managing any potential downside.

Or backside.

When I traveled with then-first lady Laura Bush to the Middle East in 2007, members of the media were asked to turn their backs (and cameras) as Mrs. Bush climbed into a dug-out area in Petra, Jordan. At all times, we were told to position ourselves well ahead of the first lady. This was mostly for security but also ensured the most flattering camera angles.

Who besides Kim Kardashian wants a photographer snapping one's hind quarters as you climb a hill or hoist yourself into a camel saddle, as Mrs. Bush gamely did.

Is this contrived and, therefore, dishonest? Who cares? Honesty is about capturing the subject as she is — a lady with dignity who holds one of the most important positions in the world. Wouldn't we want our first lady seen at her best?

Every first lady faces trials, and Hillary Clinton's years in the White House were certainly no picnic. Even Laura Bush felt the sting now and then. But the harsh barrage against Mrs. Obama, often in the most personal terms, is in a class of its own.

To what do we owe this fresh venom?

Some might say it's all about race — and though surely true in some cases, this seems too facile an explanation. Perhaps with President Obama's approval ratings in the low 40s, it is our animal nature to pile on the weakened leader. How better to hurt Obama than to attack his family? Perhaps there is a kernel of truth to the East Wing as the "worst wing," as Cherlin called it.

Alternatively, maybe some staffers weren't up to the job and, lacking the maturity or self-awareness (not to mention loyalty), to accept their own responsibility, they turned to the dubious consolation of dishing dirt. The thing about dirt, however, is that it's dirty. And the used-to-be-somebody holding the shovel usually gets dirtiest of all.

40th anniversary of 'Year of Fear,' when mass murderers revved up

DIANE DIMOND

There is no subject that brings in more reader reaction than when I write about serial killers. The answer to why we are so fascinated by these multiple murderers is mercurial, depending on whom you ask.

Dr. Scott Bonn, a professor of criminology at Drew University says, "Serial Killers seem to be for adults what monster movies are for children. It's exciting — it's arousing," to learn about their exploits.

Dr. Casey Jordan, a criminologist, behavioral analyst and attorney in private practice says we are captivated by stories about serial killers because, "We wonder to what extent they are just like us."

I would take it one step further and say we are riveted to details about serial killers because we wonder if we might ever reach a point where we could do what they do.

I read as much about the topic as I can, and during recent research about serial killers I discovered an intriguing set of facts dating back four decades. You might say this is the 40th anniversary of the "Year of Fear."

In the '70s, the U.S. experienced a frightening uptick in the number of active serial killers. In that decade, according to the serial killer information center at Radford University, there were 450 individual serial killers at work. Over the previous decade, the number stood at 156.

What caused the spike? Were there that many more vicious and deranged predators roaming the country or did law enforcement become better able to identify those who killed over and over again?

Two years earlier, the FBI allowed a visionary special agent named Howard Teten to establish what would ultimately become the Behavioral Sciences Unit. Teten devised a groundbreaking analytical approach, now known as psychological criminal profiling, to try to identify unknown killers. His agents dedicated themselves to studying high-volume kill areas around the country and meticulously logged similarities between the cases. They analyzed the lifestyle, physical attributes and location of victims, the way the killers committed the murders and exactly how they left their victims. Patterns emerged. There was a swath of the county where pretty brunette co-eds were repeatedly reported missing. Some hospitals experienced an extraordinary number of unexplained deaths. Bodies were found with similar and unique wound patterns. Victims had been left in similar provocative positions. All similarities were put together like pieces of a big ugly puzzle. Agents began to know the "how" and "where" of multiple murders but not the "who." Not yet.

Although the exact date is unknown, this is the time the FBI began to use the term "serial killer" as opposed to the less precise "murder without motive" designation they used back then.

My research also led to a startling revelation I never knew about. 1974 was the year in which some of America's most notorious and prolific murderers began their reigns of bloody terror.

Ted Bundy committed his first murder in January 1974.

Dennis Rader (BTK-Bind-Torture-Kill) first murdered in January 1974.

John Wayne Gacy killed the second of his 34 victims in January 1974.

Coral Eugene Watts murdered the first of an estimated 90 victims in 1974.

Paul John Knowles went on a killing spree, murdering 18 people in 1974.

What was it about 1974?

Retired FBI special agent Jim Clemente worked in the FBI's Behavioral Analysis Unit (the modern day name of Agent Teten's original BSU) for the last 12 years of his 20-year career at the Bureau. He told me, "At the time, the BAU had no idea how devastating a year 1974 would turn out to be. Some of the most brilliant and prolific serial killers would launch their destructive careers at that time. But it would be decades before they were all brought to justice."

As FBI agents were building their multiple puzzles, the elusive Bundy would murder upward of 36 people over the next four years. Dennis Rader killed until 1991. Gacy wouldn't be caught until late 1978. Watts continued his bloody spree for more than eight years. The handsome Knowles was on a rapid path of destruction. His murder binge ended after five months when a police officer shot him dead.

Surely, there were news reports about some of these murders and missing people left behind in the frenzy of serial killing. But in 1974, the nation's attention was scattered. Vietnam was still ongoing. There was a frantic worldwide nuclear arms race underway. Watergate was toppling the administration of President Richard Nixon. Even though the daughter of multi-millionaire Randolph Hearst was kidnapped this year, most Americans didn't notice that the nation's crime rate was on the rise.

But the FBI knew the murderous score and, worried about creating public panic, kept the information quiet. Also in 1974, the agents were well aware of a murderous maniac operating in San Francisco who signed taunting, cryptic letters to police with the moniker "Zodiac" and someone else was systematically picking up military men home on leave in Southern California and dumping their dismembered bodies along major highways.

The takeaway from this look back at history is that since that peak of serial killing madness in the '70s and '80s — (there were 603 serial killers identified in the '80s) the numbers have decreased every single decade since. In the '90s there were 498 serial killers, in the 2000s there were 275. So far in this decade, there are just 67 active serial killers registered at the reliable Radford University site. It's a testament to the perseverance of the FBI and to all law enforcement that studied and implemented Special Agent Teten's revolutionary criminal profiling protocol.

Serial killers may still hold a place of fascination for many of us, but here's hoping their number continues to dwindle.

MUNICIPAL COURT

LISBON — In Columbiana County Municipal Court, William R. Halligan, 48, state Route 45, Lisbon, was fined $700, had his license suspended for 180 days and sentenced to 60 days in jail for OVI first offense and left of center.

Harold E. Moore Jr., 49, Westwood Avenue, Alliance, waived his right to an extradition hearing on Monday so he could be returned to Pennsylvania for a charge of theft by deception. On Tuesday, the case was dismissed after Butler County, Pa., notified the court the bench warrant is being lifted.

Teresa Cassinger, 36, Rose Avenue, Salem, was fined $375 and required 80 hours community service for two counts of driving under suspension.

Paula A. Green, 50, last known address Lynchburg Road, Kensington, was fined $250, credited with 22 days served and required 30 hours community service for violating a temporary protection order for going to the home and business of Duke Green. A second charge of violating a temporary protection order was dismissed.

Steven B. McKinney, 22, Maple Street, Salem, was fined $150, credited with 18 days served while ordered to serve one additional day and required 30 hours community service for resisting arrest fleeing from Salem police attempting to serve him with a warrant on March 13.

Tracie Duffield, 37, South Vine Street, Columbiana, was fined $150 for no license amended from a reckless operation suspension. A failure to control citation was dismissed.

David L. Byers Sr., 53, New Castle, Pa., was fined $150 for an equipment violation amended from a marked lanes violation.

Following an appeal to the Seventh District Court of Appeals confirmed the ruling against Lisa L. Odey, 55, Buckeye Avenue, Salem, Judge Mark Frost ruled Tuesday that Odey will serve the remainder of her unsuspended jail time of 30 days for a disorderly conduct while voluntarily intoxicated.

Jeffrey A. Crompton, 25, Washington, Pa., was fined $135 for driving under FRA suspension, seat belt violation and failure to display a valid sticker.

Michelle E. Shamrock, 45, Warren, was fined $100 for no license amended from driving under suspension.

Jackie W. Huling, 55, Hawkins Road, New Waterford, was fined $100 for no license amended from driving under suspension.

Steven N. Huth, 25, Main Street, Minerva, was fined $50 for disorderly conduct for claiming he took about 58.5 Xanax pills belonging to his girlfriend and leaving the house. The sheriff's office, Minerva firefighters and United K-9 Search and Rescue looked for him on the evening of March 22. Huth then reportedly showed up back home covered in mud but uninjured at 12:36 a.m. March 23.

An April 29 pretrial was set for Nicole L. Schnarrenberger, 23, Duquesne Street, Columbiana, cited with possession of instruments to ingest or inhale controlled substances for alleged marijuana paraphernalia, OVI second offense and failure to control.

A May 6 pretrial was set for Shane Burkhart, 25, West Pershing Street, Salem, cited with driving under FRA suspension.

A May 19 pretrial was set for George R. House Jr., 29, North Street, Lisbon, cited with prohibitions against tattooing and body piercing without approval of the board of health.

POLICE REPORTS

SALEM

— Police responded at 8:51 a.m. Tuesday to the Salem Post Office, 275 Penn Ave., for a report of menacing after a man walked into the post office and was very irate over a general piece of mail left in his mailbox. He was yelling and banging his fist on the counter. Witnesses and the complainant were given statements to fill out. Officers tried to contact the suspect, but he wasn't home.

— A woman from the Smith Center, 500 E. Fourth St., reported at 7:59 a.m. Tuesday that a vehicle drove through the lot Monday and the young male passenger yelled out the window a vulgar offensive comment towards the people at the center.

— Police responded to the area of North Lundy Avenue and East Third Street at 10:35 p.m. Monday for a complaint about a suspicious man allegedly in the area for 45 minutes. An officer found him along the sidewalk talking on a cell phone. He was identified as a resident in the 400 block of East Third Street who said he had gone outside to talk on his cell phone and that's all he had been doing. He was told about the complaint, but was told there was no problem with what he was doing.

— Officers on patrol at 9:32 p.m. Monday found an unlocked lock and cable at a business in the 2300 block of East State Street. There was no sign of damage or tampering. Officers attached the cable to store products located outside and locked the cable.

— A domestic was reported at 9:14 p.m. Monday in the 900 block of East Third Street where an argument between a mother and her adult son occurred. No physical violence took place. She was told the procedure for having her son evicted.

— Police responded to the 900 block of East Sixth Street for a report of 911 hangup calls from a residence at 8:08 p.m. Monday. A resident said he was having problems with his cell phone.

— A woman on East Fourth Street called at 7:27 p.m. Monday to report her ex-husband threatened to come over and harm her while they were talking on the phone. She was told her options.

— Several juveniles were reported in the street in the area of Park Avenue and Maple Street at 7:10 p.m. Monday, but none were found when officers arrived.

— Police were called at 6:29 p.m. Monday to the 400 block of Franklin Street for a fraud report. A woman said she received two phone calls from an unknown number, with a female caller leaving a message saying she was an independent contractor calling for a credit service that was attempting to locate the woman over two accounts in her name that were being turned over to collection. She said she does not have any debt and should not have anything on her credit report. She wanted to file a report for possible fraud and identity theft and was told to check her credit report for fraudulent items.

— A man on Superior Avenue at 5:28 p.m. Monday reported finding a set of keys on a retaining wall in the 700 block. The keys were placed in the police lost and found.

— A woman in the 700 block of East Third Street reported possible fraud at 4:03 p.m. Monday, saying she signed up for a product that had a 14-day free trial and after the fourth day, she had a charge to her account. She called the company and they had no record of her in their system. She contacted the bank to report a faulty charge on her account.

— Police were called at 4:02 p.m. Monday to the 800 block of South Lincoln Avenue for report of property being removed from a residence. Officers made contact with three people near the back of the property, all who reside on East Perry Street. They said some people had placed several items in a pile near the wood line at the rear of the South Lincoln Avenue property, which was also near the rear of their properties. One of the items was an aluminum step ladder taken from the exterior of one of their residences in the 500 block of East Perry Street. The remaining items appeared to have been removed from the residence or garage of the South Lincoln Avenue property, including a lawn mower, leaf blower and trimmer. Officers relocated the items to the garage/shed and secured it.

— A woman on Southeast Boulevard reported ongoing problems with her adult daughter at 3:04 p.m. Monday. The matters were mostly civil and she refused to try to prosecute the daughter on anything at this time.

— An officer on patrol at 3:02 p.m. Monday saw a vehicle parked on the sidewalk at East Third Street and North Broadway Avenue and issued a ticket.

— Chief J.T. Panzotti reported at 1:42 p.m. Monday that he received an email complaint from Councilman Clyde Brown in reference to a resident on Sharp Avenue parking on the city right-of-way and driving across the sidewalk. No specific address was given. The chief drove to the area and saw there had been heavy vehicle traffic across the sidewalk into the front yard at 476 Sharp Ave. and attempted to make contact with the resident, without success. A copy of the ordinance regarding driving on sidewalks, street lawns and curbs was left in the door of the residence.

— Jonathon Maines, 25, of Cherry Street, was cited for failure to yield and expired license after a two-vehicle accident at 11:47 a.m. Monday at Olive Street and South Lincoln Avenue. Then he was taken into custody and turned over to a deputy for an active arrest warrant out of Columbiana County. The report said Maines stopped at the intersection on Olive Street and failed to yield to oncoming traffic on Lincoln, striking the driver side of a northbound vehicle driven by Erin Atkinson, 34, of Pembroke Drive. No injuries were reported.

PERRY TWP.

— Police assisted the Columbiana County Sheriff's Office with a domestic dispute on Hoopes Road at 9:25 p.m. Monday.

— An officer at 6:22 p.m. Monday spoke with a woman and man via telephone in reference to a child custody issue, finding that an order was filed in Carroll County Common Pleas Court. Both were told to speak with their lawyers.

— A loud music complaint was filed at 3:21 p.m. Monday in the 400 block of Benton road. The music was shut off before police arrived.

SALEM FIRE

— Firefighters responded to a report of an odor of natural gas at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday in the 1100 block of Franklin Avenue. Upon arrival, they detected the odor and called Columbia Gas to respond. The gas company found the source of the leak and advised the scene was safe.

Bed tax topic at Columbiana Council

By KATIE SCHWENDEMAN
Staff Writer

COLUMBIANA — A suggestion to institute a bed tax that would generate money for the city and its Tourism Bureau has not been forgotten, but Municipal Attorney Daniel Blasdel said it should be revised, if the city opts to implement it.

Blasdel said he spoke with David Barbee, co-chair of the Chamber's Business Development Committee, and they agreed that implementing a 3 percent tax wouldn't be enough to benefit the bureau, a 501(c)3 non-profit originally established by the Chamber in 2010.

Barbee had presented the suggestion to council in February on behalf of the Chamber and said at that time the idea was to "think ahead" and implement a tax before someone else does on future developments.

The tax would assess a percentage fee for overnight hotel guests, and the city would share those tax revenues with the tourism bureau, which would use the money toward promoting annual events regularly funded by the Chamber and community sponsors.

The city's portion would go into the general fund.

Currently, the only establishment that would potentially meet the bed tax criteria is the Dutch Haus, which Blasdel said is already paying an excise lodging tax to Mahoning County.

He added that a 3 percent bed tax would benefit the city, but not the Chamber.

"Our intention is to benefit the community and certainly the Chamber if we possibly can, but we feel we are limited on that particular issue," he said.

Terry McCoy, a member of the tourism bureau, said whether the Chamber receives anything from the tax is "immaterial" but that the goal is to establish something before the township does on planned developments.

The matter was not discussed any further.

Council did act on the following matters, which were approved:

— Two sodium chloride/rock salt contracts through the Ohio Department of Transportation, with one being for summer fill and the other for winter use. The summer contract runs from May 8 to Oct. 31 and the winter contract runs from Nov. 1 through May 31, 2015. The cost of the material has not yet been determined, City Manager Lance Willard said.

— First readings of legislation allowing the city to participate in a local public agency bridge inspection program through the Ohio Department of Transportation, at no cost to the city, contracting with Mercer Lime and Stone Company of Slippery Rock, Pa., for the purchase of lime for the water plant at a cost of $148 per ton for a minimum of 18 tons, contracting with Lyden Oil Co. of Youngstown for the purchase of gasoline and diesel fuel, and contracting with Dunbar Asphalt Products of Wheatland, Pa., for the purchase of asphalt at a cost of $59.50 and $49.50 per ton for two different kinds of material.

Convicted Ohio Amish leader says evidence weak

CINCINNATI (AP) — The leader of 16 Ohio Amish men and women found guilty of hate crimes for cutting the hair and beards of fellow members of their faith is arguing in a new court filing that federal prosecutors are assassinating his character in the face of weak evidence. Samuel Mullet Jr.'s attorneys argue in the Monday filing that the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati should reject a request from prosecutors to uphold his conviction and 15-year prison sentence.

Mullet's appellate attorneys criticized the government's 64-page request as hyperbole and are asking the 6th Circuit to throw out Mullet's conviction and sentence.

The court could rule at any time. Mullet, 68, is serving his sentence in federal prison in Texarkana, Texas.

"Faced with weak evidence against Samuel Mullet, the government continues its character assassination, maligning Samuel as a deviant 'unquestioned,' 'self-appointed' and 'all-powerful leader,'" attorney Wendi Overmyer wrote in Monday's filing.

Overmyer argues that the government overstepped its bounds in prosecuting Mullet and that the hair- and beard-cuttings did not amount to hate crimes, but were family disputes that resulted in no serious physical injury.

The convictions stem from five attacks in Ohio Amish communities over the course of three months in 2011 in what prosecutors describe as apparent retaliation against members who had defied or denounced Mullet's authoritarian style in the insular community, which shuns many facets of modern life and is deeply religious.

"The victims were not chosen because they were Amish; rather, the victims and the defendants both happen to be Amish," Overmyer wrote.

Prosecutors argue that the hair- and beard-cutting amounted to ritualistic violence based on religion and were designed to shame fellow Amish accused of straying from strict religious interpretations. "The victims were devastated and physically injured, and the assaults injected terror and anxiety into a community that awaited the next nighttime assault," prosecutors wrote in a Feb. 28 filing with the 6th Circuit.

Mullet's attorneys also criticized a federal judge's decision to allow testimony at trial that Mullet directed his daughter-in-law to have sex with him for religious reasons. They say the 2008 sexual conduct was unrelated to the 2011 hair-cutting incidents and had a highly prejudicial effect on jurors.

COUNCIL FROM 1A

Later, when asked for the report of the Utilities Committee, which he chairs, Brown commented that if he owes the mayor an apology, he was apologizing.

"I have a lot of concern for what's going on in my ward," Brown said. "I have a problem that needs addressed."

He said he spoke with Planning and Zoning Officer Patrick Morrissey about doing an inspection at the site in question, but learned he had not had time available yet.

During Pleasure of Council at the end of the meeting, Brown said, "If I've embarrassed my fellow council members, I apologize."

After the meeting, Kenst was asked about the alleged violation and said it related to cars at a recycling business on West Pershing Street. Both he and Berlin said responses were sent to Brown shortly after the emails were received. Brown has made claims previously about alleged violations at the business, but both Morrissey and Zellers said at the time the business was in compliance.

The following council committee meetings were announced:

- Finance, 6 p.m. April 15, council chambers city hall
- Rules and Ordinances, 6:30 p.m. April 22, council chambers city hall, regarding shale oil/drilling monitoring regulations and rule regarding occupancy permits.

The next meeting of city council is 7 p.m. April 15.

TRUCK FROM 1A

about the recent sale, Auditor Betty Brothers explained in an email that the old truck was placed on govdeals.com, which she said is an approved method of advertising for bids and entering into contract for the sale of a fire truck.

Items are placed on the site for periods of two weeks. After the first two weeks, there were thousands of hits on the truck, but only one bid of $12,000 which was under the reserve amount and didn't have to be accepted. The truck was re-posted for another two weeks.

The original bid had been placed by the fire department from Sparta, which was interested enough in the truck to drive to Salem to see it in person. Again, the truck garnered thousands of hits but only bid, this time for $19,000 from the department in Sparta.

Brothers said they had indicated they really wanted the truck, but only had a budget of $20,000 to spend. The city accepted the bid of $19,000. Sparta was required to pay a fee of 5 percent of the sale amount, $950, to the website.

The seller also has to pay a fee of 7.5 percent, which totaled $1,425 for the city of Salem.

Brothers said the net amount of $17,575 will go into the city's capital improvement fund. The city had been hoping for more for the truck, but both she and Chief Jeff Hughes said they got a little bit more than if they had traded the truck in.

Rape suspect in custody

Staff Reports

LISBON — A day after announcing a search for Richard C. Short, 46, he was taken into custody Tuesday in Lisbon by the Columbiana County Sheriff's Office.

Short, 46, whose last known address was East Washington Street, was being sought by the sheriff's office and the U.S. Marshal's Northern Ohio Violent Fugitive Task Force. Chief Deputy Allan Haueter sent an announcement in the afternoon on Tuesday notifying the public Short was in custody.

He was being sought after the county grand jury issued a secret indictment in March for charges of rape and sexual battery in connection with alleged incidents involving an unconscious woman in a Lisbon home.

BRUSH FROM 1A

— The first came at about 2 p.m., a brush fire on Steubenville Pike. Lisbon firefighters responded with mutual aid provided by West Point.

— The second was in the 10,000 block of Bayard Road in the western part of the county. This seemed the largest, with Minerva firefighters being joined by crews from Hanover Township, Homeworth and North Georgetown.

— Ten minutes or so later a fire started in a residential yard on Hilltop Road off Depot Road not far from Guilford Lake in Hanover Township. The fire reportedly was getting close to a trailer. With Hanover units out on Bayard Road and Lisbon on Steubenville Pike, dispatchers toned out the Winona department to handle that fire.

— The final call came in the eastern part of the county, where New Waterford firefighters responded to a brush fire in the 4000 block of Unity Line Road at about 3 p.m.

Three other brush fires sprang up later in the evening, off McIntosh Road near Highlandtown. Two occurred near East Palestine, one off Jimtown Road and the other near state Route 170. Palestine and Negley crews responded.

No injuries were reported in any of the fire calls.

Lisbon man charged with drug trafficking

LISBON — James A. Parise, 40, Brown Street, Lisbon, was served a secret indictment for two counts of drug trafficking. Parise is accused of selling oxycodone on Sept. 9 and Sept. 13 in quantities greater than bulk, but less than five times the bulk amount. The charges are second-degree felonies.

The indictment was issued by the county grand jury in March.

Squares and Trines

To rebel against those who nurture and raise us is a natural step in life's cycle. Children grow and fly from the nest. Workers learn enough to become the boss. With the Aries sun at a terse angle to Jupiter in Cancer, there is tension around the maternal forces in our lives. Mercury and Saturn form a trine in support of this process.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Because you get along with others so well, you'll be able to leverage your relationships to get what you need and strike upon mutually beneficial arrangements.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You'll feel slightly indulgent, but that won't stop you from luxuriating in self-care today. By taking excellent care of yourself, you are giving something special and precious to your loved ones: you at your best.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). A relationship will have you adjusting your expectations again. It doesn't mean you were wrong before; it just means you're changing with the times.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Nagging is immature, but often the people who rely on this style of communication are in committed relationships and are old enough to know better. You'll now be inclined to distance yourself from nagging influences.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You make room for the people you want in your life, and so does everyone else. If you feel like you have to nudge your way into someone's life, or if someone is doing that to you, it's not a good match right now.

VRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). In some sense, you'll have to face the music. You'd rather do this sooner than later. Maybe it won't be as smooth and graceful as you'd like, but it will be done with, and then you can move on to a happier tune.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). People who don't know the real you but love an idea they have about you are giving you a love you can't feel. When you show the real you, you increase your chances of having true love in your life.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You've had many ties with people. Some have tested you, and others have taught you. You're wiser for all the people you've known, which is why you'll see that today's relationship opportunity is a good one.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Your best is good enough. Your worst isn't so bad. All the work you've done has counted toward something. You only need to keep going to live the truth of these statements.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Too many routine days in a row will make life speed by. You can pull the reins on time and slow down the hours by engaging in a brand-new experience. It all starts by saying "yes."

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). The information you've gathered in the past few days will be put to good use. For instance, now that you know how the person who came before you went wrong, you'll be sure to get that part right.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Many people are happy that you're in a situation you enjoy, and yet talking, tweeting or posting about it too much will quickly change that. It's a good time to keep your life semi-private.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (April 2). You'll often leave room for serendipity, and she won't disappoint you. She'll tickle your funny bone, introduce you to odd characters and send you on a delightfully pointless ride. Next month brings a source of family pride and an exciting relationship development. June and September are about turning a big profit. Cancer and Capricorn people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 6, 31, 20, 4 and 14.

FRIENDSHIP ADVICE FROM VENUS: This Venus transit, which began on March 5, has been particularly favorable for platonic love. This type of love sometimes gets a bad rap. Singles pursuing partnership often complain about being relegated to the "friend zone" and will employ strategies to steer clear of that category. Yet, from preschool to old age, companionate relationships are what primarily feed our social needs. And there are even those who never experience romance and are content within the comfort of close friends. Aquarius focuses the love goddess on the kind of love that doesn't often take over one's life in flames of passion. On these final days of Venus in Aquarius, the love goddess has a few words of advice on the topic of friendship.

Venus says: New experiences are as important to friendship as routines. A stellar platonic relationship requires shared fresh experiences to thrive, just as other kinds of relationships do. Without the spark of novelty, friendships will atrophy. Venus suggests 10 percent to 20 percent newness. So when making plans with friends, avoid returning to the same haunts again and again, discussing the same topics, bringing the same side dishes to the potluck, etc. Make an effort to keep it fresh by braving some new ideas.

Don't delay chicken

Heloise

Dear Heloise: I am a regular reader of your column in the (Rochester, Minn.) Post-Bulletin.

I remember a hint about microwaving bone-in CHICKEN PIECES a short time before grilling to ensure doneness. Could this have come from your column? Would you please research and respond? — Sue O. in Minnesota

Well, Sue, you may have read it in my column. So, here is the information you requested from the experts this expert relies on. You can microwave chicken first (according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture), but ONLY if you IMMEDIATELY plan to move it to a hot grill to finish cooking. Don't partially cook meat or chicken when planning to refrigerate and cook later. All of the bacteria may not be killed, and you certainly don't want to make your family sick! — Heloise

STAY FRESH

Dear Heloise: I love cookie jars and have a small collection. I like to actually use them (certain ones for certain holidays, etc.). However, I have found that many jars do not have a sealed lid to keep the cookies truly fresh.

I keep the cookies sealed in a plastic, zipper-lock bag inside the jar. You still are using the decorative jar, but are making sure that they stay extra fresh when someone goes to eat them. — Jane D. in Ohio

STILL ACTIVE

Dear Heloise: I was starting to bake, and noticed that the can of baking powder (which was open) had just expired. I recall reading somewhere that you can do a simple test to tell if baking powder is still active. Can you tell me how to test the baking powder? — Sandra M. in Wyoming

Sandra, it is a very simple test. Exact measurements aren't really important, but take about a cup of hot water and add about a teaspoon of the baking powder in question. If the baking powder is still good, it will immediately start to bubble when it hits the water. — Heloise

SPINACH OMELET

Dear Heloise: I read your column in The (Towanda, Pa.) Daily Review. Every morning I have an omelet for breakfast. Usually I put fresh spinach in it, but when I couldn't use up the spinach fast enough, I put it in the freezer so it wouldn't spoil. Once frozen, the spinach crumbles nicely for my omelet while still in the bag. This is much easier than cutting the spinach fresh, and it tastes just as good. Many thanks for all your hints! — Cathy in Pennsylvania

NO MESS

Dear Heloise: Before I spray any pan with cooking oil, I open my dishwasher door and place the pan on the inside of the door. I then am able to spray the pan, causing any overspray to be trapped in the dishwasher and washed away with the next load. No messy counter to clean! — Gina T. in Kentucky

Any good hint to help keep kitchen counters clean is a good one! That spray does seem to go places it should not! — Heloise

Can't stop flirting with other men

DEAR ABBY: I have been with my current boyfriend for a year and a half and I love him dearly. However, I often find myself drawn to other guys who I know are nothing but trouble. It never goes further than simple flirting, but I still feel guilty for doing it when I'm in a relationship. How do I keep myself from temptation? — HARD TO RESIST

DEAR HARD TO RESIST: Temptation to do what? To involve yourself with a man who is nothing but trouble? A way to discourage that would be to ask yourself how you would feel if you lost your boyfriend. That would be a high price to pay for acting immaturely.

However, if you're asking how to overcome the IMPULSE, my advice is to have an honest conversation with yourself about why you feel the need. Most of the women (and men) who act this way are constantly trying to prove to themselves that they are attractive. If this could be you, then start working on your self-esteem, because if you don't, I predict you'll ruin a good relationship.

DEAR ABBY: I'm in my 50s and overweight. I work hard, eat three meals a day and am — more or less — healthy except for sore feet after work. I'm aware of the medical warnings. Who isn't? But I have decided to accept myself as I am, relax and be happy.

For years I have been hard on myself for not being slim. This is me in my 50s. I don't expect myself to be slim like I was in my 20s. Now I can smile, breathe easier, have a good time, and finally buy the new clothes I have put off buying until I was thinner. My new spirit is weightless and my new attitude has made my life more meaningful. Any thoughts? — LIVING FREE AT LAST

DEAR LIVING FREE: Only this, that we all have choices to make about our health, what is important to us and how we want to live our lives. You have made yours, and at this point it appears to have been the right one for you. May it ever be thus.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has a paralyzing fear of driving over bridges. It interferes with our life together. He is otherwise healthy, but will not see a therapist for this problem.

We have been married for 27 years. I am 63 and he is 67. I am very sad that our life is so limited. Any advice? — LANDLOCKED IN VIRGINIA

DEAR LANDLOCKED: It would be interesting to know how your husband developed this phobia. But because he refuses to do anything about it and you feel restricted, consider traveling with another companion.

When patient overrides doctor's advice to refuse the recommendation of one's doctor? — F.V.

ANSWER: It is your body, and you have every right to make decisions about your treatment. However, you should be very circumspect about overruling your doctor, and you should be doing so for very good reasons. Your doctor has the obligation to tell you why he or she is recommending a treatment and what the downsides are from not taking it. You, on the other hand, are obliged to tell your doctor the truth.

In your case, it sounds like you don't want to take the aspirin because you feel the supplements you are taking have a similar effect to aspirin. Very few supplements, if any, have been studied as well as aspirin has. Aspirin has a clear risk of side effects, especially bleeding, but most evidence shows that it reduces the risk of heart attack more than it increases the risk of bleeding. It also might reduce cancer risk. The higher the risk of heart disease, the better aspirin is, in terms of risks against benefits. At 95, your risk for heart attack is higher than a 50-year-old's, and so it would be expected to have more benefit than harm. So while I agree with your doctor to take it, I also respect your decision not to.

Be sure you discuss your supplements with your doctor.

DEAR DR.

ROACH: I am 95 now and take no medications. My primary-care doctor wants me to take aspirin, even just the baby aspirin, twice a week. Some of the supplements I take do have blood-thinning characteristics, and for that reason I am fighting the aspirin recommendation. In general, is it OK

EKG and saw extra beats (PVCs). They recommended I go to a cardiologist, and he put me on a heart monitor, which showed that I had 5,000 extra beats within 24 hours. He had me come back in two weeks and did an echocardiogram (heart muscles are perfect) and heart monitor (still extra beats). He did a stress test, and it was normal. He has no idea why I have extra beats. I have a feeling they have been going on for a long period of time, because when the nurse asked me if I could feel them while she was doing the echo, it felt like a flutter, and I had been feeling them for at least a year (I didn't know what it was). He has me going back to see him in three months. Can you give me some insight? — D.J.

ANSWER: Premature beats are very common, almost universal, and come in two types: premature atrial beats (PACs) and premature ventricular beats (PVCs). These can happen in people with perfectly normal hearts, but your cardiologist did exactly the recommended tests, including an EKG, echocardiogram and stress test. This is to be sure your heart function and blood flow are normal. Since they are, you don't need to do anything about it unless the fluttering sensation is bothering you.

There are several mechanisms for PVCs. The electrical system of the heart can develop a kind of short-circuit, called a re-entry loop, which is the most common cause. Individual heart muscle cells also can trigger a premature beat.

BUSINESS HIGHLIGHTS

US auto sales accelerated as March moved along

DETROIT (AP) — U.S. auto sales went out like a lion in March. Automakers said Tuesday that new car and truck sales picked up speed halfway through the month, culminating in a strong final weekend.

March sales helped rescue what was otherwise a disappointing first quarter. Analysts had predicted flat growth for the first three months of this year after harsh weather in January and February hurt sales.

The surprisingly strong March results could help the first quarter pull off a sales increase, but it's not likely to top the 6-percent increase that the industry saw during the same period in 2013.

Sen. Paul: Give Caterpillar award for tax strategy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Caterpillar Inc. executives defended a tax strategy Tuesday that has saved the manufacturing giant billions in U.S. taxes. They got support from Republican senators, including one who said the company deserves an award.

Caterpillar has avoided paying $2.4 billion in U.S. taxes since 2000 by shifting profits to a wholly-controlled affiliate in Switzerland, according to a report released by Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich. Levin chairs the Senate investigations subcommittee. Levin grilled Caterpillar executives and their accountants at a hearing Tuesday on the company's tax strategy.

Caterpillar is the world's leading manufacturer of construction and mining equipment.

Craft beer reaches for the skies on US airlines

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Attention passengers, craft beer has reached 35,000 feet.

As the airline industry works to improve its food and beverage options, a new trend has emerged — airlines adding craft beers to their in-flight offerings. The assumption is that as more drinkers switch from mass market beers to specialty brews, they'll be happier if they don't have to give up the good stuff when they're in the air.

It's another sign that airlines are getting better at responding to changing consumer tastes. U.S. craft beer retail sales reached $14.3 billion in 2013, an increase of 20 percent from a year earlier, according to the Brewers Association, the trade group for the majority of U.S. brewing companies.

Eurozone unemployment stuck near record high

BRUSSELS (AP) — The 18-country eurozone may have emerged from recession last year, but that has done little good to the market, with unemployment stuck near a record high since then.

A new report on Tuesday showed that while the number of jobless in the currency union dipped in February, the unemployment rate remained at 11.9 percent — where it has been since October after peaking at 12.1 percent earlier in the year.

US manufacturing expanded more quickly in March

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. manufacturing grew at a slightly faster pace in March compared with February as factory output recovered from disruptions caused by severe winter weather. Manufacturers also received more orders, suggesting that production could strengthen a bit in the months ahead.

The Institute for Supply Management, a group of purchasing managers, said Tuesday that its manufacturing index increased to 53.7 from 53.2 in February. Any reading above 50 indicates expansion.

The increase suggests that manufacturing is growing at a steady but modest pace after cold winter weather caused a sharp slowdown in the first two months of the year. Even so, factories are hiring at the slowest pace in nine months, the survey found.

US home prices rose in Feb. despite weaker sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. home prices rose in February from a year earlier at a solid pace, suggesting that a tight supply of homes for sale is boosting prices despite slowing sales. Real estate data provider CoreLogic says prices for existing homes rose 12.2 percent in February from a year ago. That was up slightly from January's year-over-year pace of 12 percent.

Snowstorms, rising prices and higher mortgage rates combined to reduce home sales in February to their lowest level in 19 months. The number of available homes remains below the level typical of a healthy market.

Industry group seeks continuous flight tracking

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — An aviation industry group is creating a task force to make recommendations this year for continuously tracking commercial airliners because "we cannot let another aircraft simply vanish" like Malaysia Airlines Flight 370.

The 25-day-old search has turned up no sign of the Boeing 777, which vanished March 8 with 239 people aboard bound for Beijing from Kuala Lumpur. A multinational team of aircraft and ships are searching the southern Indian Ocean for the plane, which disappeared from radar and veered off-course for reasons that are still unexplained.

13 GM traffic deaths are tied to 57-cent part

WASHINGTON (AP) — The fix for a faulty ignition switch linked to 13 traffic deaths would have cost just 57 cents, members of Congress said Tuesday as they demanded answers from General Motors' new CEO on why the automaker took 10 years to recall cars with the defect.

At a hearing on Capitol Hill before a House subcommittee, GM's Mary Barra acknowledged under often testy questioning that the company took too long to act. She promised changes at GM that would prevent such a lapse from happening again.

"If there's a safety issue, we're going to make the right change and accept that," said Barra, who became CEO in January and almost immediately found herself thrust into one of the biggest product safety crises Detroit has ever seen.

But as relatives of the crash victims looked on intently, she admitted that she didn't know why it took years for the dangerous defect to be announced. And she deflected many questions about what went wrong, saying an internal investigation is under way.

Since February, GM has recalled 2.6 million cars — mostly Chevrolet Cobalts and Saturn Ions — over the faulty switch, which can cause the engine to cut off in traffic, disabling the power steering, power brakes and air bags and making it difficult to control the vehicle. The automaker said new switches should be available starting April 7.

Barra was firm, calm and polite throughout the proceedings. But she struggled at times to answer lawmakers' pointed questions, particularly about why GM used the switch when it knew the part didn't meet its own specifications.

When she tried to draw a distinction between parts that didn't meet specifications and those that were defective and dangerous, Rep. Joe Barton, R-Texas, shot back: "What you just answered is gobbledygook."

She also announced that GM has hired Kenneth Feinberg — who handled the fund for the victims of 9/11, the Boston Marathon bombing and the BP oil spill — to explore ways to compensate victims of accidents in the GM cars. Barra stopped short of saying GM would establish such a fund.

Some of the questioners appeared surprised that Barra hadn't reviewed the tens of thousands of pages of documents that GM submitted to the committee, and that she was unaware of some decision-making processes at the company.

Rep. Diana DeGette, D-Colo., held up a switch for one of the cars and said a small spring inside it failed to provide enough force, causing engines to turn off when they went over a bump.

DeGette showed how easy it was for a light set of car keys to move the ignition out of the "run" position.

GM has said that in 2005, company engineers proposed solutions to the switch problem, but the automaker concluded that none represented "an acceptable business case."

"Documents provided by GM show that this investment cost increase was only 57 cents," DeGette said.

The 57 cents is just the cost of the replacement switch. The figure does not include the labor costs involved in installing the new part.

Barra testified that the fix to the switch, if undertaken in 2007, would have cost GM about $100 million, compared with "substantially" more now.

Under questioning, she said the automaker's decision not to make the fix because of cost considerations was "disturbing" and unacceptable, and she assured members of Congress that that kind of thinking represents the old General Motors, and "that is not how GM does business" today.

"I think we in the past had more of a cost culture," Barra said, adding that it is moving toward a more customer-focused culture.

Rep. Tim Murphy, R-Pa., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations, read from an e-mail exchange between GM employees and those at Delphi, which made the switch. One said that the Cobalt is "blowing up in their face in regards to the car turning off."

Murphy asked why, if the problem was so big, GM didn't replace all of them in cars already on the road.

"Clearly there were a lot of things happening" at that time, Barra said.

In his prepared remarks, David Friedman, head of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, pointed the finger at GM, saying the automaker had information last decade that could have led to a recall, but shared it only last month.

Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., said that House Energy and Commerce Committee staff members found 133 warranty claims filed with GM over 10 years detailing customer complaints of sudden engine stalling when they drove over a bump or brushed keys with their knees. The claims were filed between June 2003 and June 2012.

Waxman said that because GM didn't undertake a simple fix when it learned of the problem, "at least a dozen people have died in defective GM vehicles."

SHERIFF'S OFFICE

— Donald LeMasters, Rose Drive, Lisbon, reported at 7:30 p.m. Monday he was having problems with neighborhood children. LeMasters also spoke with the manager of the apartments, who told the children to stay away from LeMasters.

— A domestic dispute was reported at a Hoopes Road address at 9:18 p.m. Monday. Deputies spoke to Rick Faulkner and his girlfriend. She had been upset and yelling at him, because he told her to move out. Both signed a refusal to prosecute.

— Virginia Brown, St. Jacob-Logtown Road, Lisbon, reported at 7:59 p.m. Monday someone stole a dismantled 2004 red and white Honda XR100R dirt bike from a barn she rents on Dobson Mill Road.

— Julie Bertram, Homeworth Road, Alliance, reported at 11:49 a.m. Monday a former friend posted something on Facebook saying she needs to get a gun and kill her, but was not specific about who the "her" was. The former friend also accused her of stealing from her son when Bertram went to the woman's house to try to get money back, which her former friend had borrowed. The son had told Bertram his mother was not home and Bertram told deputies she left.

— Cassandra Perry, Gaston Road, Negley, reported at 1:17 p.m. Monday there were three cows wandering through the front lawn. The cows headed toward Henderson's farm on Sprucevale Road. Deputies contacted the Henderson family, who offered to see if any of their herd was missing and collect the strays if they were theirs.

— Ralph Liebert, Grant Street, Lisbon, reported at 12:19 p.m. Monday he believed someone attempted to steal the catalytic converter off his car. It was not taken, but he found evidence someone attempted to get under the vehicle.

— Steven Raneri III, Bye Road, East Palestine, reported on Monday that 22 16-foot posts were taken from his property sometime from March 24-29. The posts had been strapped together for about four years and would be weathered with strap marks on them. He also knows someone has been attempting to sell the posts to local farmers.

— Steve Landis, state Route 7, Lisbon, reported Monday sometime between 6 a.m. and 8 p.m. Saturday someone stole a new grill and propane tank from his front porch.

— Dave Waseman, U.S. Route 30, Minerva, reported at 8:49 a.m. Monday both his and his girlfriend's cars were tampered with during the night. His antenna was bent and someone pulled the hood release on his girlfriend's vehicle. There was also a dent on the gas tank filler lid.

— Mary Jane Thompson, Dutchtown School Road, Rogers, reported at 7:15 a.m. Monday her neighbor's horses were on her property.

— Rosemary Koehn, Center Road, Alliance, reported at 7:15 a.m. Sunday she and her family are moving and she had multiple people over helping them. Later she found her purse missing. Then on Monday she reported she found the purse.

— Bonnie Mauch, Lower Elkton Road, Columbiana, reported at 11:48 p.m. Sunday a suspicious person walking up the road. Deputies found a younger man, who said he was walking to a friend's house to help his friend out after his friends got into a fight.

New Castle man gets 5 years for robbery, theft

LISBON — Daniel M. Keller, 23, New Castle, Pa., was sentenced in Columbiana County Common Pleas Court to five years in prison for robbery, theft, arson and two counts of breaking and entering.

In the first indictment, Keller attempted to steal at Hilltop Market, North Market Street, East Palestine, on Oct. 20, 2012. In doing so he threatened injury to Samantha Gerber.

In the second case Keller, along with co-defendant Steven Slagle, broke into the East Palestine Elementary and Middle Schools by throwing bricks through the windows on April 8, 2011. The pair then stole money, candy and cash boxes from each building. Additionally on the same date, the two took a Ford F-350 pickup belonging to Steven Grueber and parked at Bill's Auto Repair. They drove it to E.P. China where they set it the pickup on fire.

Maurice J. Brooks, 27, Youngstown, was sentenced to 12 months in prison for possession of drugs for 5.3 grams of brown powder containing heroin found in his hand on Feb. 23, 2013. He was credited with 51 days served. His license was suspended for 12 months.

Michelle A. Woodworth, 55, Prospect Street, Salem, was sentenced to six months in the Reformatory for Women in Marysville for three counts of theft for taking money orders from Lucy Turney, an elderly woman, last April. She was further ordered to make restitution in the amount of $720 to Turney.

Lori A. Smith, 52, East Pidgeon Road, Salem, was sentenced to two years probation after stipulating to violating her previous probation on a passing bad checks charge. The charge stemmed from writing a $750 check to Earl Shory in September 2009, which was dishonored.

Zachary John Sabol, 21, Franklin Avenue, Salem, was found in violation of his intervention in lieu of conviction probation on five counts trafficking in drugs and dishonorably terminated from the program. In February he had been sentenced to a five-year intervention program. Last week he was sentenced to regular probation for the same amount of time. Sabol was charged after preparing marijuana for sale on Feb. 5, 2011 at a Riffle Road home. Additionally, he sold 26.6 grams of marijuana to an informant for $150 on Sept. 28, 2011; 27 grams of marijuana for $150 on Oct. 1, 2011; 26.5 grams of marijuana for $150 on Oct. 11, 2011 and prepared more marijuana for sale on Oct. 14, 2014 from a North Beaver Street, Lisbon home.

Ray T. McGowan, 31, Youngstown, was sentenced to six months in prison, concurrent with another prison sentence he is serving in Jefferson County. McGowan had previously pleaded guilty to possession of drugs for between one and five grams of heroin on July 26, 2012.

Trevon J. Johnson, 20, Youngstown, was sentenced to four years probation including up to the first six months to be served at the Eastern Ohio Correctional Center in Winterville. Johnson pleaded guilty in January to possession of drugs with a forfeiture specification after he had 11.4 grams of crack cocaine in his underwear along with a small bag of marijuana in his sweatshirt pocket and $440 in cash on March 13, 2013.

Charity Anne Marie Riggs, 20, North Ellsworth Avenue, Salem, pleaded guilty to theft for taking a wallet containing a Visa credit card belonging to James Shearer on April 4, 2013. Count two of the indictment, a misdemeanor charge of misuse of credit cards, was dismissed. Sentencing was set for May 22. She faces up to 12 months in prison and a $2,500 fine in that case.

In a separate case, Riggs also pleaded guilty to theft and forgery for taking and writing a check belonging to Rebecca L. Simpson in February 2013. For those charges she faces up to an additional 24 months in prison and a $5,000 fine.

April L. Matthews, 28, Youngstown, pleaded guilty to trafficking in drugs. Matthews had been charged with four counts of trafficking in drugs after she reportedly sold 27.4 grams of marijuana to a confidential informant for $150 on Dec. 2, 2011; another 17.2 grams of marijuana on Jan. 12, 2012 for $115; another 27.2 grams of marijuana on March 23, 2012 for $150; and 83.2 grams of marijuana for $450 on March 28, 2012, all from an East Martin Street, East Palestine, address. She faces up to 12 months in prison, a five year license suspension and a $2,500 fine. Sentencing is set for May 22.

Troy L. Adams, 30, Richardson Avenue, East Liverpool, was sentenced to four years probation, including 148 days in the county jail, for a domestic violence charge. Adams harmed Josephine Cowdery on Nov. 1, 2013 by grabbing her, pushing her down, attempting to kick her in the head and threatening to kill her. He was previously convicted of domestic violence on Aug. 17, 2009.

Casey L. Reynolds, 34, West Lincoln Way, Lisbon, pleaded guilty to passing bad checks, a first degree misdemeanor. Reynolds wrote a check on the account of Teri Webber to Stadium GM in the amount of $5,800 for the purchase of a 2003 Chevy Trail Blazer and the check was returned for insufficient funds. She faces up to six months in jail and a $1,000 fine. Sentencing is set for May 22.

Benefit to aid girl, 6

A benefit for Destiney Hochins will be held from 6 p.m. to midnight April 12 at the Guilford Grille, 7094 E. Lake Road, Lisbon. There also will be a 50/50 raffle, Chinese auction and gun raffle for a 45 caliber 1911 American Tactile.

Destiney, 6, has vesicoureteral reflux (VUR) and bowel and bladder disorder.

These are disorders that affect the bladder, kidneys and bowel. She is treated at Akron Children's main branch weekly. Destiney takes medication to keep the VUR from causing severe infection. The family has insurance that covers a lot of the cost; however, there is a lot that is not covered as well as her medication. Also she is recently undergoing neurological treatment and seeing a heart doctor for internal seizures due to complications. The Gordon James Blues Band will perform from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Project A Band will play from 9:30 to 11:30 p.m. Tickets are $10 per person and free for 10 and under. For tickets call Cindy Wukotich at 330-277-3759, Emily Landsberger at 330-853-8237 or Sara Hochins 330-423-7192. (Submitted photo)

Man pleads not guilty in Ohio gun class shooting

LANCASTER (AP) — A central Ohio instructor who accidentally shot an adult student in the arm during a concealed-carry firearms class has pleaded not guilty to a misdemeanor count of negligent assault.

An attorney entered the plea Tuesday in Fairfield County Municipal Court on behalf of 74-year-old Terry Dunlap Sr., a Violet Township trustee.

Dunlap's attorney, Richard Ricketts, didn't immediately respond to a message seeking comment.

A special prosecutor earlier concluded that Dunlap should not be charged with any felony for the August shooting during a demonstration near Lancaster.

Dunlap had been certified to teach such firearms classes. He said he would not teach for at least a year after the shooting under an agreement with the Ohio Peace Officer Training Commission.

South Range HS senior achieves Eagle Scout Award

CHRISTIAN

SALEM — Troop 80, Boy Scouts of America, chartered to Mount Olivet United Church of Christ, has announced the presentation of the Eagle Scout Award to Taylor Christian.

He is the son of Ellen and Edward Christian of Salem and a South Range High School senior. Christian has been involved in scouting since 2003.

He earned his Tiger, Bear, Wolf, Webelo and Arrow of Light awards in Cub Scout Pack 1365 in Hickory, Pa. He joined Troop 80 in 2011 and has had troop positions of den chief, junior assistant scoutmaster, senior patrol leader, patrol leader, and troop trainer.

Christian has camped a total of 40 nights, completed over 265 hours of service projects and has earned a total 24 merit badges. He has attended four years of summer camp at Camp Independence and Liberty in Pennsylvania. In 2011 he participated in a 125 mile, 10-day backing trek at Philmont Scout Ranch in Cimarron, New Mexico. He has also earned the Messenger of Peace, Leave No Trace, Tote and Chit, Fire and Chit, Fifty Miler, and the Historic Trails awards.

For his Eagle Scout service project, Taylor planned, coordinated, and supervised the construction of picnic tables and benches for Paradise United Church of Christ in Canfield.

At South Range, he is a member of the high school academic challenge team, National Honor Society and a Boys State alumni.

His future plans include attending Youngstown State University for a degree in political science in preparation for his main goal, to become president of the United States.

The court-of-honor ceremony is to be held this spring. Troop 80 is part of the Whispering Pines District, Greater Western Reserve Council. Scoutmaster is Kurt Hilderbrand. Meetings are held 7 p.m. every Tuesday at Mount Olivet United Church of Christ.

KSU holding reception for photographer

LAWLOR

The Ohio Valley Regional Arts Council will host a reception for photographer Andrew Lawlor from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Thursday at the Kent State University Mary Patterson Gallery, 213 E. Fourth St., East Liverpool. Lawlor is an Englishman who moved to Fairfield Township in 2004 to marry East Liverpool native Debbie Beck.

He took up photography in 2011 and began the never-ending but enjoyable learning process that makes up the craft. A relative newcomer to photography, Lawlor already has won several local competitions, including Best of Show at the 2013 Pottery Festival and a blue ribbon at the 2013 Canfield Fair, both as a first-time entrant. The exhibit runs through May 9. (Submitted photo)

Quakers off to rough start vs. Lions

By CHRIS RAMBO
Staff Writer

MINERVA—Due to winter's prolonged grip, the Salem baseball team was not able to set foot on a field until yesterday. It showed.

The Quakers committed nine errors on their way to a ragged 13-3 six-inning loss to Minerva Tuesday at Minerva Middle School.

"All we've been able to do is throw a little bit in the outfield," Salem senior Alex Weikart said. "When you have a young team like we do it's a tough to go from taking infield in the gym to being outside."

It was the Northeastern Buckeye Conference opener for both teams.

Salem falls to 0-1 overall and 0-1 in the NBC. Minerva moves to 2-0, 1-0.

Weikart started on the mound and took the loss for the Quakers, whose shaky fielding allowed the Lions to steadily pull away.

Salem committed at least one error in each inning.

"We looked like a team that was playing on the field for the first time all year," Salem coach Gary Martin said. "The mistakes really added up for us."

Catcher Andrew Robbins led Salem with two singles and a run scored. He came home in the first on an RBI single by Jordan McGuire to give the Quakers an early lead, but it was all downhill from there.

Minerva took the lead with two runs in the second and exploded for four in the fourth to establish a 7-1 lead. In both innings, the Quakers misplayed potential double-play balls back to the mound which opened the door to most of the Lions' scoring. The Lions were led offensively by Matt Treep with a double, a single and an RBI, while Austin Catlett had two singles and three runs scored.

"Those fielding mistakes opened the floodgates," Martin said. "We are looking at completely different situations if we make some plays. We can't afford to give teams that many extra outs and expect to be competitive."

Senior Jansten Locke picked up the win for Minerva, throwing five sharp innings. The Quakers had two runners on with one out in both the first and fourth innings but Locke was able to wiggle free both times. It was Locke's first first pitching appearance in two years. He sat out last season to concentrate on AAU basketball.

"Jansten is a great athlete and has gotten stronger by playing basketball," Minerva coach Carl Michael said. "We really think he can help us on the mound this year."

"It felt great to be back out there," Locke said. "It was a little bit of a challenge to build back up my arm after being away for so long, but I thought I was sharp out there."

Minerva and Salem are scheduled to hook up again today at Salem, however, both Michael and Martin indicated that the game may be played at Minerva (with Salem as the home team) if Salem's field isn't ready.

Tuesday's game was originally scheduled to be played at Salem, but was moved.

Game notes

- Winds gusted to over 30 mph, creating a handful of adventuresome pop flies. Salem dropped two fly balls and Minerva misplayed a couple of foul popups.

"It made things all the more difficult for us," Martin said. "Being on the field for the first time and dealing with these conditions was tough."

- Both coaches felt Can-

American snowboarder Taylor Gold, who competed during the 2014 Winter Olympics in Sochi in February, performs a trick during Snowboarder Magazine's The Launch, a non-competitive showcase for up-and-coming talent held this week at Seven Springs Mountain Resort. (Submitted photo)

Olympic Snowboarders take to Seven Springs

SEVEN SPRINGS, Pa. — For most people, the image of relaxation doesn't involve hurtling through the air, twisting and contorting while strapped to a thin piece of wood and fiberglass no wider than their foot is long.

Then again, when you happen to be an Olympic snowboarder fresh off competing in the 2014 Winter Games in Sochi, the term "relaxation" becomes quite relative.

About 130 of the world's best young snowboarders ranging in age from 12 to their mid-20s — including five Olympians — converged on Seven Springs this week for The Launch, a non-competitive event sponsored by Snowboarder Magazine, which began Sunday and continues through today. This is the first time the event has been held at Seven Springs, after stops at destinations such as Lake Tahoe, Park City, Utah and Bear Mountain, Calif.

Snowboarding continues to grow in popularity, thanks in large part to the enormous exposure of the Olympics. According to Snowboarder Magazine editor Tom Monterosso, events like The Launch are key to continuing that trend.

"The Launch is a way to showcase the sport's young talent, but I think its ultimate objective is to aid the progression of snowboarding," Monterosso said. "I think it's events like this that grow it at its core."

When the decision was made to bring the event east of the Rocky Mountains for the first time, Seven Springs — hailed by the magazine as "one of North America's foremost freestyle playgrounds" — was a natural choice, according to Snowboarder Magazine's creative director, Pat Bridges.

"This is a world-class freestyle snowboarding destination. This is the beacon for snowboarding on the East Coast."

The Launch typically rotates locations every two to three years, Monterosso said, so officials expect a return to the Keystone State in 2015. Joel Rerko, terrain park manager at Seven Springs, said the resort is excited to play a role in the growth of the sport.

"The Launch has consistently pushed the future of snowboarding and has provided a proving ground for up-and-coming athletes," he said. "Our park program will provide a perfect venue for the riders by offering creative and innovative features for the athletes."

For Gold, the week is a welcome break from what has been a busy year.

"It's pretty nice to just be able to relax and just ride around your friends," said Team USA member Taylor Gold.

With a last name like Gold, his aspirations to Olympic glory should come as no surprise. The 20-year-old Colorado native's road to Sochi actually passed through Seven Springs, as he won the Burton U.S. Open qualifier there in 2013.

Noting course conditions prevented him from riding his best in Sochi, Gold said he was less than satisfied with his eighth-place finish in the men's halfpipe semifinals. But overall, he said, it was an unforgettable experience, and he's already thinking about the 2018 Winter Games in Pyeongchang, South Korea.

"To go and represent my country was just awesome," he said. "I hope I get another chance to do it."

ton South to be the overwhelming NBC favorite.

"They've won a bunch of district titles in a row and have nearly everybody back," Martin said. "Coach Trent McIlvain does a great job there."

"I think we can finish somewhere in the top four," Michael said.

Michael said Minerva's new turf football field enabled the Lions to practice outside much more than they normally would before the season.

"We were out there every possible day," Michael said. "I think it has helped our fielding tremendously. If you are able to field the ball, you have a chance to make a nice run during the season."

On this date

April 2 1983 - New York Islander Mike Bossy becomes the first player to score 60 or more goals in three consecutive seasons. 1993 - Cleveland's Mark Price falls one free throw short of tying an NBA record in a 114-113 loss to Charlotte. Price makes his first six foul shots of the game to give him 77 in a row, but misses the second of a two-shot foul in the fourth quarter. ... leaving intact Calvin Murphy's 12-year old record. 1984 - Georgetown, led by junior center Patrick Ewing and freshman forward Reggie Williams, beats Houston 84-75 to win the NCAA championship in Seattle. Houston becomes the second team to lose in two consecutive finals. 1986 - The 3-point field goal, at 19 feet, 9 inches, is adopted by the NCAA. 1990 - UNLV pounds Duke 103-73 to win its first NCAA championship and extend the Blue Devils' streak to eight Final Four appearances without a title. The Runnin' Rebels become the first team to score more than 100 points in a championship game and the 30-point margin is the largest ever.

Indians, A's game postponed due to rain

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) - Scott Kazmir will have to wait at least one more day to make his debut for the Oakland Athletics and pitch against his former team. It's not exactly the kind of doubleheader he had planned. The game between the A's and Cleveland Indians was postponed because of rain Tuesday night. It was the first rainout in Oakland since May 5, 1998. "I think Kaz brought all the rain with him. You can blame it on him," said right-hander Corey Kluber, the Indians' scheduled starter.

The game will be made up in a day-night doubleheader Wednesday. The first game is scheduled to start at 12:35 p.m. PDT and the second game at 6 p.m. PDT. Kazmir and Kluber will start the opener. Zach McAllister will take the mound for the Indians in the second game, while A's manager Bob Melvin said his starter is "to be announced." Jesse Chavez had been scheduled to start for the A's Wednesday, but Melvin said he will likely push him back until Thursday - and move the rest of his rotation back one day. Teams are allowed to add a 26th man to the 25-man roster for day-night doubleheaders, so Oakland could call-up a pitcher from Triple-A Sacramento to make the start.

Woods has back surgery, will miss the Masters

Tiger Woods chose surgery to heal his ailing back over a quest for another green jacket, announcing Tuesday that he will miss the Masters for the first time in his career. Woods said on his website that he had surgery Monday in Utah for a pinched nerve that had been hurting him for several months, knowing the surgery would keep him from Augusta National next week for the first time since he was a senior in high school.

NATO allies pledge to beef up eastern defenses

BRUSSELS (AP) — NATO foreign ministers moved Tuesday to beef up the defenses of front-line alliance members feeling menaced by a more assertive Russia, with Secretary of State John Kerry proclaiming the U.S. commitment to their security is "unwavering."

The ministers from NATO's 28 member nations also ordered suspension of all "practical civilian and military cooperation" with Vladimir Putin's Russia, though they made sure a line of communication with the Kremlin remains open at the ambassadorial level.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization, keystone of U.S. and European security since the end of World War II, is facing its most acute geopolitical crisis in years: the fallout from Moscow's unilateral annexation of Ukraine's Crimean Peninsula, which the Obama administration and its allies condemn as a brazen, illegal land grab.

On Tuesday, an estimated 35,000 to 40,000 Russian troops equipped with tanks, other armored vehicles and fixed and rotary wing aircraft remained positioned near the border with Ukraine, a NATO military official told The Associated Press, speaking on condition of anonymity because of the sensitive nature of the information.

The military official described the Russian buildup as "a complete combat force" that was highly threatening to Ukraine.

Those troops, and future aggressive moves that Putin's Kremlin may make, have become a troubling concern for NATO countries, especially the alliance's eastern-most members — the Baltic states, Poland, and Romania, all of which were once in Moscow's orbit.

To reassure those skittish allies, Kerry told a news conference, the U.S. has already sent six F-15 fighters to perform air patrols over the Baltic, deployed a dozen F-16s to Poland and dispatched the USS Truxtun, a guided-missile destroyer, to the Black Sea.

"And more U.S. support is on the way," Kerry said.

At the Tuesday afternoon meeting he attended with the foreign ministers, the secretary said, "more allies pledged their own contributions to make sure every ally from the Baltic to the Black Sea feels secure." He did not provide details.

A senior U.S. defense official said the U.S. was also likely to send a small team of soldiers to Europe and was encouraging NATO allies to contribute more aircraft to the Baltic air patrol mission.

Despite annexing Crimea, Putin and other Kremlin officials have said that Russia has no intention of invading other areas of Ukraine. Defense Minister Sergei Shoigu insisted Tuesday the Kremlin wants a "political settlement that would take interests and rights of the entire Ukrainian people into account."

Meeting behind closed doors, Kerry and his Canadian and European colleagues agreed unanimously on steps NATO must take in response to Russian actions.

A civilian alliance official who attended the session and briefed reporters afterward on condition of anonymity said the measures include possible deployment and reinforcement of military assets in NATO member countries that feel Moscow's actions may pose a security threat, as well as an increase of readiness levels for NATO rapid response forces. Other steps include a review of NATO's crisis response plans, as well as military training and exercise schedules.

While NATO ordered the suspension of "all practical civilian and military cooperation" with Russia, Secretary General Anders Fogh Rasmussen said later he thought some mutually beneficial cooperation programs with the Russians might continue, such as the project to train anti-narcotics personnel in Afghanistan, Pakistan and Central Asia.

The four-star U.S. Air Force general who is NATO's supreme military commander, Philip Breedlove, has been ordered to devise plans to provide visible reassurance to alliance countries in Central and Eastern Europe that other NATO nations are ready to help protect them "on land, air and at sea," Kerry said.

America's commitment to NATO's core principle — that an attack on one alliance member shall be considered an attack on all — is "unwavering," the secretary said.

NATO ministers also met Tuesday with Ukrainian Foreign Minister Andriy Deshchytisa. Kerry said "they stood together in defense of Ukraine's right to choose its future and in defense of international law." Kerry blasted what he called Russia's "tactics of intimidation, especially deployment of unprecedented forces around Ukraine's borders."

On Monday, Russia's Defense Ministry said one battalion — about 500 troops — had been pulled back, but NATO's secretary general downplayed talk of a major withdrawal.

"This is not what we have seen," Rasmussen told reporters. "And this massive military buildup can in no way contribute to a de-escalation of the situation — a de-escalation that we all want to see. So I continue to urge Russia to pull back its troops, live up to its international obligation and engage in a constructive dialogue with Ukraine."

Deshchytisa, the Ukrainian foreign minister, told a separate news conference that NATO ministers had treated Ukraine's situation with "understanding and support and knowledge."

His country doesn't need weapons, the Ukrainian official said, but is hoping for "military technical equipment." He said a delegation of experts from NATO member countries was expected to visit Kiev next week for consultations.

In other developments, Russia sharply hiked the price for natural gas to Ukraine and threatened to reclaim billions in previous discounts, raising the heat on Ukraine's cash-strapped government.

Alexei Miller, the head of Russia's state-controlled Gazprom natural gas giant, said the company has withdrawn December's discount that put the price of gas at $268.50 per 1,000 cubic meters and set the price Tuesday at $385.50 per 1,000 cubic meters for the second quarter.

The move is expected to eventually hit Ukrainian consumers hard. Household gas prices in Ukraine are set to rise 50 percent beginning May 1.

The Russian discount was part of a financial lifeline that Putin offered Ukraine's now fugitive president, Viktor Yanukovich, after his decision to ditch a pact with the European Union in favor of closer ties with Moscow. The move fueled three months of protests that sent Yanukovich fleeing to Russia in February.

Also Tuesday, the Russian parliament annulled its deal with Ukraine to rent its Black Sea Fleet's base in Crimea until 2042 for $98 million a year as well as discounts for Russian natural gas.

In Kiev, Ukrainian police moved to disarm members of a radical nationalist group after a shooting spree. Such groups played a key role in Yanukovich's ouster, but quickly fell out with the new government in Kiev. Many activists are still encamped on Kiev's Independence Square, known as the Maidan, and have signaled their intent to remain until the May 25 presidential election.

Last week, a leader of the most prominent radical group, the Right Sector, was shot dead while resisting police. Right Sector members then besieged parliament for hours, demanding the resignation of Interior Minister Arsen Avakov. They lifted the blockade after lawmakers set up a panel to investigate the killing.

Late Monday, a Right Sector member shot and wounded three people outside a restaurant adjacent to Independence Square, triggering a standoff that lasted overnight.

Police responded by surrounding the Dnipro Hotel, which Right Sector had commandeered as its headquarters, demanding that the radicals lay down their weapons and leave. Avakov said Right Sector members agreed Tuesday to do so.

FBI investigates high-speed stock traders

NEW YORK (AP) — The FBI is looking into the practices of high-frequency stock trading firms, adding to the scrutiny that is being placed on the practice.

Brokerage firms use high-frequency trading to get a jump on their competitors. Powerful computers analyze market information and then execute buy and sell orders for stocks within a fraction of a second.

One way that high-frequency traders have gained an edge is by receiving market-moving information, such as corporate earnings releases, before other traders and investors. They then exploit that advantage by placing buy or sell orders before other investors.

Until recently, the firms have been able to access crucial financial information by subscribing directly to companies that publish corporate reports, rather than accessing it through financial news wires such as ThomsonReuters, Dow Jones and Bloomberg.

That particular practice has come under increasing scrutiny in recent months, though. New York Attorney General Eric Schneiderman says high-frequency trading gives firms an unfair advantage and erodes public confidence in the stock market.

Business Wire, a company that distributes corporate earnings and other news releases, in February said it would stop providing its service directly to high-frequency trading firms. Even though the direct distribution of its electronic feeds to a "handful" of trading firms was not illegal, the company said it was concerned about its reputation.

The move was followed last month by Marketwired, a company which provides a similar service.

The FBI has been investigating high-frequency trading for about a year, according to a person familiar with the matter, who spoke on condition of anonymity. The Wall Street Journal reported Tuesday that investigators were examining the practice of placing a group of trades and then canceling them to create the false appearance of market activity.
