2014 Super Cruise deemed a success

Show n' Shine closes event that attracted thousands of fans

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

Former drag racer and retired construction worker Ron Dycman of Canfield said he always wanted to build a car from scratch.

Nearly a dozen years later, his labor of love earned a Best of Show trophy.

"The work put into the car was worth it — this makes it all worthwhile," he said.

Dycman and his wife Bonnie hoisted the hardware Sunday in the Show n' Shine lot sponsored by Bricker Automotive at the Salem Super Cruise after Gene Johnson of the Arby's Cruisin' Crew announced their 1939 Lincoln Zephyr as the winner.

Mayor John Berlin made the presentation of their trophy and all the trophies awarded in the various categories for the selected show vehicles in the Pershing Street lot.

Dycman said he used to race at Quaker City, so he's worked on cars before, but he had never built a car by hand, piece-by-piece. His wife saw a Lincoln Zephyr in a magazine and they were sold on the two-seater coupe.

"It looked hot. We didn't want the same old run-of-the-mill. We wanted something different," Bonnie said.

The parts came from all over — body from Arkansas, frame from North Carolina, interior by Portage Trim and paint job by Mike Garnica of Lisbon. Dycman worked on building the car for nine years and finished in 2011.

The car features suicide doors which open the opposite way of a conventional door, air bags, air conditioning, racing suspension, stereo and a 502 Chevrolet engine with a turbo 400 transmission.

This was the car's first trip to the Super Cruise show lot. Dycman said they don't normally drive it to shows — they haul it — but since they live in the area and the weather was perfect, they decided to take a chance on the final day.

"This is great. Can't beat it," he said.

The Super Cruise wrapped up with some music, food and games on Broadway and pristine show cars in the Pershing Street lot. Autocross was held at the high school parking lot.

Johnson, whose Arby's Cruisin' Crew and an army of volunteers oversaw the show lots throughout the four-day event, offered thanks all around as the festivities wound down. He gave some gratitude to his Arby's crew, the Salem food pantry volunteers, Salem-Perry Township Area Crime Watch members and the Kool Time Cruisers, estimating the 90 volunteers logged about 500 man hours into the cruise.

"We had some great volunteers," he said.

He extended a thank you to Tom and Patty Hall of

Exploratory skateboard park meeting planned June 26

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

Anyone wanting to talk about the idea of having a skateboard park again in the city can attend a public meeting at 6:30 p.m. June 26 in council chambers.

Hosting the meeting at city hall, Councilman Rick Drummond said in an email that it's his belief "that residents of the city of Salem should be the drivers of the creation and maintenance of such a park."

The topic came up at a city council meeting in May and again during a Parks Committee meeting earlier this month. Drummond chairs the committee and stressed then that people who want a skateboard park would have to step forward to make it happen. He said the city parks department can't afford to build or maintain a skateboard park.

"I believe the city's role can be that of an 'adviser' where necessary and if assistance is needed for such things as review of city ordinances, the city can do so," he wrote in the email.

When reached by phone, Drummond said he's received four phone calls from people interested in becoming involved in the skateboard park project. He can be reached at his council-dedicated number at 330-277-5668. He noted that there were business people and people who seemed serious about the idea.

"If they back up their words with deeds, it could be successful," he said.

Drummond referred to himself as a facilitator, but said he won't be driving the project — he said that's a job for residents who want to form a group to make the skateboard park happen. He said he'll be happy to help if there's something that's needed from the city.

The city had a skateboard park area at one time at Waterworth Memorial Park, but it only last about 10 months, according to Parks Director Steve Faber, who said it became a nuisance and that's why it was shut down.

According to previous stories about the skateboard park issue, the city parks department set up the temporary skateboard park in 2002, but then disassembled it due to complaints. In 2008, a non-profit group was leading the charge to bring one back to the city, but a location couldn't be settled upon. A $10,000 grant that had been secured for the project ended up being used on the duck pond.

Veteran driver Lloyd Willis of Rogers steers his Mini Cooper around the course laid out at the Salem High School parking lot Sunday during the autocross competition held as part of the Super Cruise. An autocross is a timed competition in which drivers navigate one at a time through a defined course, in this instance marked by cones. Autocross differs from road and oval racing in that usually there is only one car on the track at a time, racing against the clock instead of other cars. (Salem News photo by J.D. Creer)

Building housing businesses showing signs of collapse

By TOM GIAMBRONI
Staff Writer

A village councilman is concerned a building that houses two downtown businesses could collapse unless something is done to shore up the structure.

Joe Morenz was talking about the rental property at the corner of South Market Street and South Park Avenue that is home to Sweet Jane's restaurant and a beauty salon. He recently discovered the lower corner of the building facing South Market Street, where the restaurant is located, has a hole in it the size of his open hand or larger.

"It's going to fall down like the McCook House did unless we do something," Morenz told his colleagues during last week's council meeting. Years ago, the historic McCook House restaurant located on North Market Street fell apart brick by brick until an entire section collapsed, and then the building was razed.

Zoning Secretary Alisa Gostey said the zoning inspector is aware of the problem and intends investigate, and Village Solicitor Virginia Barborak said she will send a letter to the landlord, Gary Hamilton, who lives in Trumbull County.

Barborak, whose private law practice is located in the building next door, said she has already complained to Hamilton about the building's condition.

Morenz said he just wants the building repaired so it can continue housing the two businesses. "It's getting to be a danger for people walking down the street. Plus, we have two businesses we want to stay," he said.

"I'm compassionate to that, but I don't want the building to fall into the street," said Council President Roger Gallo.

In other action, council was addressed by Sean Logan, a consultant representing the Northeast Ohio Public Energy Council, or NOPEC, which has a six-year deal with NextEra Energy Services Ohio as its exclusive natural gas supplier.

NextEra intends to get most of its gas from companies drilling in Ohio, and NOPEC expects that it will be significantly cheaper than gas obtained from outside the state. Logan said NOPEC is offering to pass those savings onto citizens whose communities agree to participate in a program that would lock them in at a fixed rate.

He said it would work similar to the electric aggregation program communities participated in several years ago. Voters would be asked to approve a ballot issue giving their town council or township trustees permission to negotiate a two-year contract with NOPEC. Once that occurs, households would automatically be enrolled in the gas discount program unless they choose to opt out. Households which join can also opt out at any time without having to pay any fee.

Logan said they will not know the price until next year, but the Cleveland Plain Dealer reported the deal with NOPEC could save households and businesses $100 a year.

Mayor Dan Bing will meet with Logan to learn more about the program before council decides at its July meeting whether to place the issue on the Nov. 4 ballot. The filing deadline to do so is Aug. 6.

Logan said Butler, Center, Hanover and Unity townships have already agreed to place issues on the ballot.

Logan is a former state representative, Columbiana County commissioner and served as director of the Ohio Department of Natural Resources during the administration of former Gov. Ted Strickland.

Jindal: Rebellion brewing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Louisiana Gov. Bobby Jindal on Saturday night accused President Barack Obama and other Democrats of waging wars against religious liberty and education and said that a rebellion is brewing in the U.S. with people ready for "a hostile takeover" of the nation's capital.

Jindal spoke at the annual conference hosted by the Faith and Freedom Coalition, a group led by longtime Christian activist Ralph Reed. Organizers said more than 1,000 evangelical leaders attended the three-day gathering. Republican officials across the political spectrum concede that evangelical voters continue to play a critical role in GOP politics.

"I can sense right now a rebellion brewing amongst these United States," Jindal said, "where people are ready for a hostile takeover of Washington, D.C., to preserve the American Dream for our children and grandchildren."

The governor said there was a "silent war" on religious liberty being fought in the U.S. — a country that he said was built on that liberty.

"I am tired of the left. They say they're for tolerance, they say they respect diversity. The reality is this: They respect everybody unless you happen to disagree with them," he said. "The left is trying to silence us and I'm tired of it, I won't take it anymore."

Earlier this week, Jindal signed an executive order to block the use of tests tied to Common Core education standards in his state, a position favored by tea party supporters and conservatives. He said he would continue to fight against the administration's attempts to implement Common Core.

"The federal government has no role, no right and no place dictating standards in our local schools across these 50 states of the United States of America," Jindal said.

Jindal used humor in criticizing the Obama administration on several fronts, referencing the Bergdahl prisoner exchange and the deadly attack on the U.S. mission in Benghazi, Libya.

"Are we witnessing right now the most radically, extremely liberal, ideological president of our entire lifetime right here in the United States of America, or are we witnessing the most incompetent president of the United States of America in the history of our lifetimes? You know, it is a difficult question," he said. "I've thought long and hard about it. Here's the only answer I've come up with, and I'm going to quote Secretary Clinton: 'What difference does it make?'" The conference featured most of the well-known Republicans considering a 2016 presidential run.

Lawmakers call for investigation into mass graves

McALLEN, Texas (AP) — The mass graves of suspected unidentified immigrants buried haphazardly in a South Texas cemetery and uncovered this month by anthropologists should be secured by state police until a criminal investigation can be carried out, a Texas lawmaker said Sunday.

State Rep. Terry Canales, D-Edinburg, said he had asked the Department of Public Safety to secure the cemetery in Falfurrias following revelations of human remains buried in garbage bags and multiple remains put in a single body bag without proper records. DPS spokesman Tom Vinger said Sunday in an email that, "the Texas Rangers plan to meet with local officials Monday to determine the proper course of action."

Baylor University anthropologist Lori Baker and Krista Latham, a forensic anthropologist at the University of Indianapolis, worked with their students at the cemetery this month in an ongoing project to identify immigrant remains along the U.S.-Mexico border.

The teams worked in Falfurrias last year as well and found similar practices.

"There's no question in one way or another that this is illegal, whether it violates the actual penal code or it constitutes fraud," Canales said.

The remains were buried by the Funeraria del Angel Howard-Williams, which has offices in Falfurrias and Hebbronville, Baker said Friday. Both Brooks and Jim Hogg counties contracted with the funeral home to bury unidentified remains there. "This is not a respectful way of interring someone's remains," Baker said. "And we had one, of course, with all of these bags on top of bags this year and not in a coffin. Most of these remains were not within a coffin, they were buried just in the body bags or whatever else they were recovered in."

Baker said the group exhumed 52 graves this month, but will not know how many individuals they have until they are inventoried at the lab.

A message left at Howard-Williams over the weekend was not returned. The funeral home's Houston-based parent company, Service Corp. International, did not immediately respond to an email message Sunday. Service Corp. International told the Caller-Times in a statement, "No matter if this is one of our client families we serve on a traditional basis or a migrant family's loved one we're serving and we don't have any identification of the loved one, I do want to let you know it is our policy to treat the decedent with care, to treat them just like we would treat anyone else."

State Sen. Chuy Hinojosa, D-Corpus Christi, told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times on Friday that he was calling for a criminal investigation.

Hundreds of immigrants have been recovered on the ranches in Brooks County in recent years. Smugglers guide immigrants through the brush trying to circumvent a Border Patrol highway checkpoint an hour's drive north of the border. There is little water and the walk can take two or three days in punishing temperatures.

SALEM REPORTS

— Police responded to a report of children riding bicycles in the road at North Madison Avenue and East State Street at 10:56 a.m. Sunday, but didn't find them.

— A resident in the 200 block of North Madison Avenue reported at 5:05 a.m. Sunday that a male and female appeared to be hiding in bushes near a vacant residence. No one was found and the home was secure.

— Police responded early Sunday morning to the 500 block of Prospect Street for a public assist. A woman from North Jackson said her ride left her and she wasn't familiar with where she was due to her living in another community. Officers located her and took her to the police station to wait for a ride from a family member.

— Hospital staff at Salem Regional Medical Center called at 3:10 a.m. Sunday to request assistance in getting a recently released patient to leave the premises. At the patient's request, a taxi was summoned.

— Erica Sanor, 20, of 26444 state Route 172, East Rochester, and Kayla Potts, 20, of 29910 Tower Road, Salem, were each charged with underage consumption while Robert Bush, 23, of Lowville, N.Y. and Brett Johnson, 25, of Tenino, Wash. were both cited for open container after an officer on patrol saw a group of people in the 100 block of Railroad Street at 2:48 a.m. Sunday with open containers of alcoholic beverages.

— A barking dog was reported at 2:36 a.m. Sunday on Bentley, but no contact was made.

— A woman at 1:55 a.m. Sunday spoke to police on Railroad Street about a domestic violence complaint, reporting that the father of her oldest son grabbed her by the neck and said he was going to kill her. The suspect wasn't on the scene and she was told her options.

— Loud music was reported at 12:56 a.m. Sunday on North Lincoln Avenue and Third Street. The resident had already turned it down.

— People with open containers of alcohol were reported at 12:53 a.m. Sunday in a parking lot in the 1900 block of East State Street, but were found with no alcohol.

— Seth Holenchick, 21, of 394 W. Wilson St., was charged with speeding and operating a vehicle under the influence after a traffic stop at 12:48 a.m. Sunday on Maple Street near Morris Avenue.

— An officer on patrol at 12:18 a.m. Sunday noticed a motorcycle ahead of the cruiser which started to rapidly accelerate on East State Street near Woodland and Washington avenues. The officer clocked the motorcycle with a handheld radar at 68 mph in a 25 mph zone and activated the overhead lights and siren in attempt to stop it. The operator refused to stop and began to pass a couple vehicles. Officers terminated the pursuit at the city limits, with the motorcycle continuing east on state Route 14.

— Kurtis Materna, of the 500 block of Aetna Street reported at 12:16 a.m. Sunday that someone threw a glass bottle at a vehicle, causing damage. No suspect was found.

— Solomen Merryman of Rose Avenue reported at 12:16 a.m. Sunday that someone stole his dog but after police arrived, he said he found the dog.

— A caller at 9:17 p.m. Saturday reported someone in a truck parked in a lot in the 300 block of West Second Street threw beer bottles on the property.

— Police responded to a smoke investigation at 8:33 p.m. Saturday on Lexington Avenue and Continental Drive. An officer said the smoke started to turn black and also noticed the smell of burning plastic. A resident with a small fire was told the open burning laws.

— A man told police at 8:21 p.m. Saturday that he owes several people money and they threatened to damage his home. He would not identify them and was told his options.

— Intoxicated people were reported at 8:13 p.m. Saturday in the 200 block of East State Street. Police spoke to two men in a vehicle and saw no alcohol and detected no odor of alcohol.

— Police were dispatched at 7:56 p.m. Saturday to the Sparkle Market parking lot on South Lundy Avenue where a man complained about vehicles parking in the private lot which had no signs posted. He was told his options. Police could not tow the vehicles since they were on private property.

— A protection order violation was reported at 7:23 p.m. Saturday on South Broadway at East Pershing. Information will be sent to the prosecutor's office for review.

— A credit card found in the 100 block of South Broadway at 6:56 p.m. Saturday was placed in the police lost and found.

— Police responded at 6:30 p.m. Saturday to the parking lot of a business in the 200 block of West State Street where management wanted persons cleared from the parking lot who weren't customers. Management was told to post the parking lot next year to prevent a similar problem from occurring.

— A possible fight with a large group of juveniles was reported at 6:22 p.m. Saturday in the 500 block of East Pershing Street. There was no fight.

— Police at 6:21 p.m. Saturday assisted a motorist with a piece of farm equipment having difficulty navigating through the traffic on West State Street.

— A resident in the 300 block of Jennings Avenue reported at 6:05 p.m. Saturday that a suspicious male came to the door and tried to turn the knob. He was not found.

— Loud music was reported in the parking lot of Fred's Pharmacy on East State Street at 5:59 p.m. Saturday, but wasn't found.

— An Ohio ID card was found on East Fourth Street at 5:09 p.m. Saturday and turned over to police.

— A caller at 4:55 p.m. Saturday reported a group of juveniles walking from the area of South Union Avenue and Oak Street possibly in possession of open containers of alcohol. They were found on East Pershing Street and did not have any beverages in their possession, with no indicators that they were intoxicated.

— An intoxicated driver was reported at 4:35 p.m. Saturday in the 2300 block of East State Street, but was not found.

— Michael Jarrett Jr., 28, of Sebring, Fla., was charged with domestic violence after police were called to the 800 block of Homewood Avenue at 10:59 p.m. Friday for a domestic. A man said his son physically assaulted him.

— Loud music was reported in the 1800 block of Whinnery Road at 9:35 p.m. Friday, but was not heard when police responded.

— A reckless driver was reported at 8:53 p.m. Friday on North Ellsworth at East State Street. The vehicle was allegedly swerving around traffic at a high rate of speed, but was not found.

— A representative of Walmart, East State Street, reported at 7:59 p.m. Friday that a female stole several items and fled in a teal van. The van was not found.

— A vehicle alarm was reported going off on East Fifth Street at 5:28 p.m. Friday.

— The husband of Rosemary Stover, Tomahawk Drive, Negley, reported his cat was acting strangely upon entering the house so he used a spotlight to check the garden and driveway, where he saw a young man standing by his van, wearing all black. The man ran down the driveway and east on Tomahawk Drive. Her husband chased the man but did not locate him. Entry was not made to the van. Deputies also did not locate him.

Center Township trustees creating police department

By TOM GIAMBRONI
Staff Writer

LISBON — Center Township trustees are creating a police department that will be staffed by a single part-time officer, at least for now, starting in 2015.

Trustee Greg Shive said they voted recently to begin the process by hiring Adam Little to fill the part-time police officer slot and ordering a 2015 Ford Explorer for him to use.

The township relies on the sheriff's office and highway patrol for protection, but Shive said they decided they needed something more.

Between 2010 and 2013, the sheriff's office responded to between 631 to 663 calls annually in the township. This included 131 thefts, 88 domestic disputes, 22 breaking and enterings, 43 threats, 45 harassment complaints, 45 vandalism calls, 30 assaults and 74 juvenile complaints. Shive said these crimes, along with constant speeding complaints they receive from residents, led to the decision to create a police department.

"We've had people who have come in or called and say, 'Can't you do anything about these speeders,'" he said.

Little, a former part-time police officer in Lisbon and Perry Township, works full-time at National Heat Exchange in Columbiana. Taking the township police job will keep his law enforcement certification current.

Little, who lives in Lisbon, will work eight hours per week and be paid $12 an hour. Shive said Little's hours will vary, depending on the need.

"We kind of like him to mix it up, and I think once people see a presence in the township, things will change. At least we hope so," Shive said.

Trustees expect to set aside $50,000 from the general fund for the police department, plus $36,000 from the equipment fund to purchase the Ford Explorer. "Hopefully, we won't have to put more than $50,000 aside each year," he said.

The trustees did their homework before making a decision, meeting with the Leetonia and Lisbon police chiefs and Salem Township trustees, who have a constable. They also spoke with Sheriff Ray Stone, who said his standard fee for assigning a deputy specifically to patrol a township is $35 an hour — $25 for salary/benefits and $10 to cover cruiser expenses.

Shive said they opted to start their own department because they are considering adding more part-time officers in the future, and this arrangement would be cheaper in the long run.

Little has been sworn in and will spend the next six months setting up the department. "We are going to have him doing administrative stuff, like setting up an office at the (township) garage" and researching state and federal police grants, he said.

The sheriff's office has offered to handle the dispatching duties for free, but Shive said the trustees also want to speak with the Lisbon department before making a decision. tgiambroni@mojoneews.com

Vegas man who tried to stop gunman remembered

LAS VEGAS (AP) — A community that has mourned two slain Las Vegas police officers gathered again to remember a man who died while trying to stop the shooting rampage.

Nearly 400 people, including law enforcement officers, attended a memorial service Sunday in Las Vegas for Joseph Wilcox, 31.

He was fatally shot at a Wal-Mart after Jerad and Amanda Miller killed Officers Igor Soldo and Alyn Beck at a nearby pizza shop minutes before, declaring the start of a revolution.

Wilcox saw the shooters at the Wal-Mart on June 8 and pulled out his legally concealed handgun to stop them, but was shot by Amanda Miller. He was returning computer equipment at the time. The Millers died after a shootout with police at the store.

Sheriff Doug Gillespie eulogized Wilcox as a hero, saying his actions allowed other shoppers to safely leave the store.

"He made the decision to put his life in danger to help hundreds of others in the store," Gillespie said. "He is a man friends and family and the entire community should be proud of."

Steve Withey, associate pastor at the GV Christian Center, agreed.

"Joseph exemplifies what it means to fear no evil ... His courage is what we honor the most today," he said.

Las Vegas City Councilman Bob Coffin noted Wilcox, a lifelong Las Vegas resident, was awarded a posthumous Medal of Valor from the council.

"It's been controversial that Joseph carried a weapon," he said. "But Joseph followed the rules."

The service ended with the family thanking the community for its support.

Community Foundation sponsoring Banquet

SALEM — The Salem Community Foundation will host the Banquet in Salem from 5 to 7 p.m. today at the Memorial Building, 785 E. State St.

The menu offers fried chicken, mashed potatoes and gravy, peas or corn, cole slaw, fresh fruit and vegetables, and cake.

Additional sponsors are needed. For more information call Patty Colian at 330-831-2169.

"The day we lost Joseph, our lives changed forever," the family said in a statement. "Each day is difficult, but the overwhelming love, words of encouragement and financial support you have graciously given us has made this life-changing moment a little less difficult."

"Our hearts ache, but we are not alone — our thoughts are with the family and friends of Officer Beck and Officer Soldo as they, too, try to continue their lives without their loved ones."

Wilcox was in a check-out aisle when the assailants entered the Wal-Mart. After Jerad Miller fired a shot into the air, Wilcox drew his gun and approached him from behind. But Wilcox was unaware that a short distance away was Amanda Miller, who killed him.

Slashing service but spending more

Try getting an answer to your questions about government retirement benefits by calling your local Social Security office. Let's hope you have plenty of time to wait ... and wait ... and wait.

Perhaps you will be tempted to visit the Social Security office personally. Again, be prepared for long waits and red tape.

But you may want to make that call or visit soon, before the Social Security Administration decides to close your local office.

Since 2010, the agency has closed 64 field offices and at least 490 "contact stations."

That is the highest number of closures during a five-year period in the agency's history, and there still is more than a year and a half left in this five-year period.

In addition, service hours have been slashed in field offices that remain open. That happened some time ago.

The Social Security agency's budget for administrative expenses increases every year. During the 2012 fiscal year, $11.5 billion was spent for that purpose. The fiscal 2014 request was $12.4 billion — a substantial boost in two years.

And, of course, in asking for more and more money, Social Security officials annually boast of increased productivity.

So, more spending and allegedly better productivity have resulted in dramatic cutbacks in service. Why are we not surprised? It is the federal government, after all.

Use your hands to write, make something

FROMA HARROP

Have you stopped using your hands? Do your fingers struggle to sign your name? Is chopping an onion with a knife hard work? Must you call someone to fix a cabinet door off the hinges? Is it agony to sew on a button?

For many, computers and laziness have sapped our manual skills. This is not progress.

In a much-read essay, Maria Konnikova cites several studies revealing what's lost when people replace handwriting with a keyboard. At Indiana University, for example, psychologist Karin James showed preliteracy children a letter on an index card and asked them to reproduce it by tracing, drawing on blank paper or typing on a computer.

The children were put under a brain scanner and shown the letter again. Those who had drawn the letter freehand, Konnikova writes, "exhibited increased activity in three areas of the brain that are activated in adults when they read and write." Those who traced or typed were far less so affected.

James noted that the messiness in writing freehand yielded highly variable results. She believes the variability itself helped the children to learn.

In another study, older students taking notes by hand were found to process and remember information better than those using a keyboard.

The benefits of doing things manually could apply to a lot of things people once used their hands for but now do not much. Very often, the old-fashioned, hand-based activities also do a better job.

A friend tells me of his newfound preference for shaving with traditional instruments, as opposed to a plastic razor ripped out of the wrapping and soon disposed of. First, he must loosen screws on the razor holder. Then he inserts a double-edged blade and tightens the screws. He makes his shaving cream with an old-style shaving soap and applies it with a brush.

This makes the shaving routine more tactile and active. It also produces a better shave, my friend insists, exfoliating the skin while removing hair.

The great vegetarian food writer Deborah Madison calls hands "your most important tool," followed by an ordinary sharp knife. "Food processed in a machine never reveals the hand of the cook," she writes. "I always find it much more interesting to see the person in the way he or she cuts vegetables; it's one of the things that makes hands-on cooking so vital."

Like much else, sewing machines are now computerized. The upscale models come with a wide repertory of embroidery stitches.

Who does embroidery by hand these days? Only a few. Sadly, the machine-embroidered product doesn't hold a candle to hand embroidery, with its human imperfections.

My mother was a great needleworker. I recall helping out with one of her projects when I was small. It was a large tablecloth printed with marks for the cross-stitches. She gave me a corner to work on and never touched my sloppy stitching. I now tear up every time I use the tablecloth.

Back at the written word, even pre-computer typing creates a more crafted product than the perfect digital version. Banging the keys on a manual typewriter makes uneven letters and thus more personalized results. (I heard of a recent wedding where the couple set up an old typewriter with cards on which guests could pound out their comments.) And no, clever fonts that ape handwriting don't do the job.

Speaking of apes, modern humans hold dominion over the other hominids because of our manual dexterity and attendant brain development.

What will happen to a species that equips its toddlers with iPads? Can't say. But if Bigfoot ever learns to write thank-you notes, we may all be in trouble.

June 11

New Britain (Connecticut) Herald on regulation of commercial truck drivers:

At the same time that Congress is considering whether to relax work rules for freight haulers, a truck driver's lack of sleep is being blamed for the highway crash that injured comedian Tracy Morgan and killed Connecticut resident James "Jimmy Mack" McNair.

Wal-Mart trucker Kevin Roper apparently failed to slow for traffic ahead on the New Jersey Turnpike and then swerved to avoid a crash.

Instead, his rig smashed into the back of Morgan's chauffeured limo bus, killing comedian McNair and injuring Morgan and three others. Authorities said that Roper hadn't slept for more than 24 hours before the accident.

This comes at a time when a proposed change to federal regulations would effectively let drivers put in as many as 82 hours a week behind the wheel.

The change is backed by the trucking industry and opposed by safety advocates and the Obama administration.

An amendment that passed the Senate Appropriations Committee, sponsored by Sen. Susan Collins, R-Maine, would repeal a requirement that drivers take a 34-hour break, including no driving from 1 a.m. to 5 a.m. on two consecutive days.

"This regulation dumps concentrated amounts of commercial traffic onto the highway system at 5:01 a.m. Monday, when people are trying to get to their offices and their businesses ... and deliver children to schools," says Phil Byrd, chairman of the American Trucking Associations.

The senator and trucking industry officials said it is safer for truckers to drive at night when there is less traffic.

Those who oppose the change point out that nearly 4,000 people die in large truck crashes each year, and driver fatigue is a leading factor, according to the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration.

Do you want to share the road with a tired trucker? We didn't think so.

Obama's dilemma: Returning for another pointless Iraq war

ANDREW NAPOLITANO

As we watch the collapsing government in Baghdad surrounded by a highly disciplined and serious force of Sunni-oriented fighters that has taken control of the most populous third of the country, we must, in John Adams' words, resist the temptation to slay the world's monsters. This time around, the monsters are the Sunni — who ran the government of Iraq in the Saddam Hussein years and who are the ancient and persistent enemy of the Shia, who run the government today.

The political and military force that is aiming at Iraq's capital calls itself the Islamic State of Iraq and Syria (ISIS). Its fighting force consists of about 8,000 men, yet it has marched through Iraq quickly. Last week, as ISIS forces approached the capital, a half-million Iraqi civilians got out of their way and tens of thousands of Iraqi security forces dropped their American military gear and Iraqi military uniforms and fled. The Iraqi army — which the U.S. decimated 10 years ago — cannot defend the current Iraqi government, which is as corrupt, authoritarian, anti-democratic and untrustworthy as Saddam's was, yet far less competent.

There is a lesson in this, and it reveals the power of religious fanaticism when resisted by unprincipled political force. ISIS fighters are motivated by a hatred of American invaders and their Iraqi defenders and an embrace of fundamental Sharia principles, which are anathema to Judeo-Christian principles. These ISIS fighters truly are monsters — they have crucified and decapitated deserters, traitors, captives, recalcitrants, Christians and Jews — and many Iraqi soldiers would rather join or walk away from them than resist them. The U.S.-trained Iraqi soldiers by and large view themselves as defending a temporary and inconsequential government. The ISIS fighters view themselves as being on a triumphal crusade.

Complicating this is the affiliation that many of the political forces in ISIS have with the rebels fighting against President Bashar al-Assad of Syria. And adding to the politics-makes-strange-bedfellows aura of this mess is the offer of the Quds fighters from Iran's Revolutionary Guard — which the State Department considers to be a terrorist organization — to help defend Baghdad, relying on American air power to assist it. It is almost inconceivable that we could fight side-by-side, or bombs protecting boots, with the aspect of the government of Iran that both President George W. Bush and President Barack Obama have characterized as anathema to U.S. interests, and that has sworn to destroy Israel.

Hence, Obama's dilemma is daunting. He is on record as saying that the war in Iraq was "dumb"; that the government there is secure and its forces are well-trained; that the rebels fighting Assad are freedom fighters who deserve American military support; and that the American troops he brought home from Iraq are not returning on his watch.

Should he send troops back to Iraq to defend the government we installed when we toppled Saddam? Should American lives and tax dollars be spent in another pointless effort to bring democracy to a culture that has persistently rejected it? Should we take sides using our military in what is essentially an ancient religious civil war? Is the national security of the U.S. even remotely affected by the outcome of the current Iraqi civil war?

Since Bush persuaded Congress and the American people in 2003 that an appropriate response to 9/11 somehow was an invasion of Iraq, that country's stability has been undermined by the U.S., and it is now ripe for the sectarian violence that is devouring it. The stated purpose of the Iraq war was to root out weapons of mass destruction, which we now know did not exist there. Then the stated purpose became regime change, because Saddam tried to kill the elder President Bush. The other stated purpose of the war was our thoughtless embrace of the fanciful Bush doctrine, which was basically the rebranding of the discredited Wilsonian nonsense that we can use force to spread democracy.

That, too, failed profoundly. In the process, 5,000 Americans died; 45,000 Americans were injured; 650,000 Iraqis died; 2,000,000 Iraqis fled the country; a half-trillion dollars in Iraqi assets were destroyed; and we borrowed a trillion dollars to invade and occupy Iraq (and another trillion to invade and occupy Afghanistan), which we still owe to the people who loaned it to us. Al-Qaida, which was not present in Iraq before 2003, is now openly there along with ISIS, its sister organization that is about to conquer the most politically important parts of the country.

America is no safer because of the Iraq war, but we are weaker. Our relationships among the people in the Middle East are far less sanguine, we have planted three generations' worth of hatred, distrust, and lust for vengeance among Middle Eastern youth, and we have a crushing war debt. We also have American cash and military hardware, including expensive and lethal Stinger missiles, now in the hands of ISIS.

We are witnessing the contemporary incarnation of the old Sunni/Shia/Kurd rivalry that has persisted in what is today called Iraq for 1,000 years, and will persist until the country returns to its pre-modern sectarian borders and each ancient group has its own land.

There is no bona fide American national security interest in jeopardy because of the persistent Iraqi civil war, and we have no lawful right to choose a side and assist it militarily. But the American military-industrial-neocon complex wants more war. We must resist them. We should gather all Americans in Iraq, take what moveable wealth is ours and come home — and stop searching the world for monsters to destroy, as that will end up destroying us.

Courts fight heroin scourge with drug injections

LEBANON, Ohio (AP) — The twice-arrested heroin user listened nervously as the judge reviewed her record, then offered a deal he thinks could save her life.

"You're not a criminal, you're an addict," Judge Robert Peeler told Cynthia Fugate. "Something is driving you to use heroin that is beyond your control. Is that fair to say?"

"Yes, sir," she replied quietly. Peeler, a common pleas court judge in southwest Ohio's Warren County, is among a growing number of judges and corrections officials across the country trying to combat the fast-growing national heroin problem by fighting heroin needles with treatment needles. Peeler told Fugate he could order monthly injections of the opiate-blocking drug Vivitrol if she were willing.

"I'm 30 years old. I've overdosed four times," Fugate said, her voice quavering. "I want to be clean. I really do."

The shots, the judge said, could keep Fugate from "winding up in a body bag."

Peeler began researching the drug treatment shots last year after a young woman died of a heroin overdose, at least the third heroin user who had stood before him in his courtroom who later died. Nationally, overdose deaths have risen 45 percent from 2006 to 2010.

In Ohio, 680 people died of heroin overdoses in 2012, up 60 percent from the previous year.

Vivitrol has its skeptics, with some questioning whether it's effective enough to warrant the time and expense — shots can cost about $1,000 each — and suggesting it's a trendy, under-researched attempt at a quick fix. Sheriff Richard Jones in neighboring But-

Five things to know about heroin treatment Vivitrol

By The Associated Press

Vivitrol, increasingly being tried by courts, prisons and jails across the United States to fight repeat heroin abuse, offers a long-lasting treatment option advocates say addresses the day-to-day struggle of recovering addicts. Here are five things to know about the drug:

► HOW DOES IT WORK? — Vivitrol uses monthly, extended-release injections of the opiate blocker naltrexone, which prevents heroin users from getting high. It's an alternative to daily trips to methadone clinics, isn't potentially addictive like other drug treatments and provides a buffer for recovering addicts.

"It's very difficult to ask an opiate addict to adhere to a daily regimen of taking a pill that will reduce their addiction," says Richard Pops, CEO of drugmaker Alkermes PLC. "The secret of Vivitrol, or its major contribution, is its once-a-month dosing format that actually provides a safety net for the patient."

► HOW LONG HAS IT BEEN AROUND? — A daily pill form of naltrexone had been tried before without significant success. The longer-lasting version was approved for alcoholism treatment in 2006 by the Food and Drug Administration, and Vivitrol was approved in 2010 for heroin, morphine and other opiate drugs. At the time, the FDA called it "a significant advancement in addiction treatment."

ler County has called Vivitrol in jails "a waste of money," citing an earlier pilot program in Warren County in which only three of 12 subjects completed the program and stayed off drugs.

Peeler is among those who say the high toll of heroin-related deaths, crime and prison recidivism make it worth trying.

"To sit back and keep doing what we've been doing just isn't going to get it," Peeler said. "I want to stop people from dying."

The Warren County program is getting some $800,000 in state funding help for Vivitrol, and programs are also underway in dozens of other courts, jails and prisons in at least 21 states, from Cape Cod in Massachusetts to Lane County in Oregon. The programs are usually funded with grants, getting some help from drugmaker donations and discounts, and insurance usually will cover some shots.

Vivitrol, made by Alkermes PLC of Ireland, had been used for alcoholism. But after a Russian study showed it could be effective for users of heroin, morphine and other opiate drugs with once-monthly injections, it was approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration in late 2010.

Vivitrol uses naltrexone, an opioid receptor antagonist, to block heroin's effects on the brain. Unlike the widely used methadone treatment, it doesn't require clinic visits and daily doses and is unlikely to lead to trading one dependency for another, as can happen with other treatments, ad-

► WHY THE INTEREST FOR NEWLY RELEASED INMATES? — Heroin overdose deaths have soared across the country amid a surge in use of more widely available, cheaper heroin than before. Federal statistics show a 45 percent rise in heroin overdose deaths from 2006 to 2010. Studies have shown that fatal overdose rates are high among inmates newly released from correctional and treatment facilities because their bodies have been detoxified and can't handle the same level of opiate as before. A Vivitrol injection gives them a month to resist their old urges and begin post-release counseling.

► WHAT ABOUT SIDE EFFECTS AND RISKS? — Patients must be opioid-free when they start taking Vivitrol or could experience severe withdrawal symptoms. They should be aware that resuming drug use after stopping Vivitrol treatment could make them more susceptible to overdose.

There also can be severe reactions at the injection site, including tissue damage. Other potential side effects include liver damage, depressed mood and suicidal thoughts.

► WHY ISN'T IT IN WIDE USE? — Although an estimated 2.5 million Americans are addicted to prescription painkillers or heroin, less than half are receiving a medical treatment and only a fraction are on Vivitrol. It's relatively new, skeptics question its long-term efficiency and price — injections can cost $1,000 or more — and some doctors and officials are reluctant to use drugs to treat drug problems.

Pops, the drugmaker's CEO, says the cost of heroin-linked crime, prison inmates and fatal overdoses is much steeper. "It's extremely gratifying and at the same time extremely frustrating. It takes time."

vocates say. Effective for a month, it eases the daily temptation of people struggling to stay off heroin.

Because Vivitrol is long lasting, it has special importance for former heroin users leaving incarceration, said Mady Chalk, a former federal official on substance abuse who is now with Philadelphia's Treatment Research Institute.

"Patients return to their community having been detoxed, their systems have been emptied of the drugs; they return to environments that trigger all the things that one would expect," Chalk said. Many are unable to resist the urge to reuse heroin and don't realize they can't tolerate as strong a dose as before.

"The body simply can't handle it, and they die," Chalk said.

Giving users an injection before they leave custody provides a month's buffer to begin post-release counseling and to focus on rebuilding their lives.

Dr. Mark Willenbring, a former National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism official who founded Alltyr addiction treatment center in St. Paul, Minnesota, thinks there is too little evidence of success to consider Vivitrol a panacea. "It's not a wonder drug," Willenbring recently told the Alcoholism & Drug Abuse Weekly.

Peeler doesn't order shots for anyone who doesn't want them. In his courtroom the same day as Fugate, a male drug defendant declined, saying he believed the shots were dangerous — there are potential risks including liver damage and suicidal depression — and he didn't want to go through the therapy and probation requirements of the sentencing deal that potentially allows drug defendants to avoid a conviction on their record.

But Sherry Moore believes the shots saved her.

Not long after completing a nine-month sentence for heroin possession, she began using again. She told her probation officer she didn't know what to do, that she had already been through treatments.

"I'm like, 'I'm a mess,'" she recounted. "None of it worked for me." The officer asked if she wanted to try Vivitrol. After a year of monthly injections, she said she's been drug-free since late 2012. She and other Vivitrol advocates emphasize that counseling and a strong will to overcome addiction are needed, too. Moore, 53, also credits her return to church.

"I think God helped me with it," she said. "I think I would have died."

When gambling becomes a problem

By CATHY THOMAS BROWNFIELD

Family Recovery publicist

Annie had been patient for a long while, thinking that Barney would get through his gambling phase, realize what a financial drain it actually was, and decide to walk away from it.

But it had gone on too long and she was worried about paying bills, keeping them afloat financially, and holding on to the roof over their heads. And they had to eat, too.

Carl didn't know his wife, Diane, had a gambling problem. He went to work, his paycheck was direct deposited in their joint checking account and he trusted that she was paying the bills. It worked for him...until he accidentally stumbled over what was actually happening when Diane wasn't home and he opened the mail, much of it bills and termination notices.

Eugene's wife died. They had been married for nearly 60 years. With her passing he was lost. They had always gone to the casino, but they had set an amount they felt they could afford and when they lost it, they stopped their gaming and went home.

But with Frannie's passing, overwhelmed with grief and loneliness, the gambling had gotten the better of him. He exceeded every penny he owned and approached his brother-in-law for a loan. George refused to help him. He was in over his head and didn't have any idea how to fix things.

Here are some problem gambling quick facts from Ohio.gov's Ohio for Responsible Gambling organization:

- Problem gambling refers to any gambling that goes beyond the "normal" bounds of gambling for fun, recreation or entertainment.
- Compulsive gambling (or pathological gambling) is a recognized and treatable illness.
- Problem gambling rates among teens and young adults have been shown to be 2-3 times that of adults.
- Providing a financial bailout for compulsive gamblers may actually make the problem worse.
- Gambling is not a way to solve financial problems.
- Children of problem gamblers may be at higher risk for a broad range of health, mental health and school-related problems.

Common warning signs are bragging about winning, exaggerating wins and/or minimizing losses, spending a lot of time gambling, thinking about or planning to gamble, restless or irritable when not gambling, borrowing for gambling, hiding time spent gambling or hiding bills and unpaid debts, and lying about how much time or money is spent gambling.

Gamblers Anonymous advises it is "a fellowship of men and women who share their experience, strength and hope with each other that they may solve their common problem and help others to recover from a gambling problem. The only requirement for membership is a desire to stop gambling. There are no dues or fees for membership."

Man, 82, accused of flying kite while naked

TALLMADGE (AP) — Police in north-eastern Ohio say an 82-year-old man was cited for flying a kite while he was naked.

Officers say they received calls earlier this week about a bald man without any clothes who was flying a kite at the Summit County Fairgrounds. Police say the man initially denied being naked, but he had to search through a pair of pants on the passenger seat when he was asked for identification. The Cuyahoga Falls man was cited for disorderly conduct Wednesday and told not to return to fairgrounds. But police say the man went back to the fairgrounds fully clothed the next day. He told officers he was looking for kite-flying spots for his friends. He was given another citation for criminal trespassing.

Group challenges Ohio ban on campaign lies

CINCINNATI (AP) — A national anti-abortion group wants a federal court to block an Ohio law barring people from knowingly or recklessly making false statements about candidates seeking elective office.

The Susan B. Anthony List filed a motion Friday in U.S. District Court in Cincinnati, asking that the law not be enforced while the group continues to challenge its constitutionality. The motion says the statute violates free speech rights and "chills core political speech."

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled unanimously Monday that the group could challenge the law, raising doubts about whether Ohio's law and similar ones in other states can survive complaints that they violate free speech rights.

The anti-abortion group challenged Ohio's ban when it tried to post billboards attacking then-U.S. Rep. Steve Driehaus in 2010. The planned ads accused him of supporting taxpayer-funded abortion with his vote for President Barack Obama's health care law. Driehaus filed a formal complaint with the Ohio Elections Commission, saying the ads misrepresented the facts and violated Ohio's false speech law. The billboard owner feared threatened legal action by Driehaus and declined to post the ads. Driehaus dropped the case after losing his re-election bid.

When the Susan B. Anthony List challenged the law's constitutionality, a federal judge said the group didn't have the right to sue because the case had been dropped and the group hadn't suffered actual harm. An appeals court agreed.

The Supreme Court didn't rule on the Ohio law's constitutionality but sent the case back to the lower court to consider the question.

The anti-abortion group during the 2014 midterm elections plans to criticize members of Congress who voted for the health care law. The group maintains that its statement about the health care law allowing for taxpayer-funded abortion is true, group spokeswoman Mallory Quigley said Saturday. The Obama administration has steadfastly denied that.

"If granted, this injunction will allow us to continue our efforts to inform voters without fear of prosecution," Marjorie Dannenfelser, president of the Susan B. Anthony List, said in a statement on the group's website.

DeWine spokesman Dan Tierney said Saturday that the attorney general's office will defend the constitutionality of the Ohio law.

But he also said that DeWine will continue to make the courts aware of his significant First Amendment concerns on the issue.

No ID for Mt. Rainier body; friends mourn writer

SEATTLE (AP) — Friends are mourning a well-known outdoors writer and wilderness inspiration who had been missing for three days on Mount Rainier after searchers said they recovered a body.

Mount Rainier National Park says it will be up to the Pierce County medical examiner to confirm that the woman found Saturday afternoon was 70-year-old Karen Sykes of Seattle.

Sykes separated from her hiking partner Wednesday in the Owyhigh Lakes area east of the summit. Park spokeswoman Patti Wold says the body was found off-trail, about halfway down a steep hillside above Boundary Creek. She didn't know whether it was apparent that the woman had fallen or what caused the death. It remains under investigation. Sykes wrote trail reviews for online publications and newspapers and led group hikes.

Police investigating assault of man struck with hammer

Staff report

SALEM — Police are investigating the assault of an East Pershing Street man who said his attacker struck him in the head with a hammer Saturday.

Dewey Souers, 25, of 760 E. Pershing St., was taken to Salem Regional Medical Center, then transferred to St. Elizabeth Hospital where police were unaware of his condition as of Sunday afternoon.

Officers were called to the residence at 5:18 p.m. Saturday and found the victim bleeding from the head where he said he was struck by an unknown assailant. Fire department first responders and an ambulance crew arrived on scene and transported him to the emergency department.

A detective was called to the scene, with the incident under investigation.

According to police, a similar incident occurred in the early morning hours on Dec. 29 last year at the same address with the same victim, also involving hammers used for an assault. The incident was reported as a burglary in progress. Souers and another victim reported two unknown people forced entry into their residence and demanded money and other items of value before assaulting them.

Ohio court denies child's request over visitation

TOLEDO (AP) — A girl whose divorced parents took on her on trips around the world to hide her from one another didn't have a right to sit at the table during a visitation hearing, the Ohio Supreme Court ruled.

The case involves a custody dispute between the girl's Russian mother and her American father.

The state's high court ruled this past week that a juvenile court in Ottawa County was within its boundaries when it denied the girl, now 18, a seat alongside her attorney during the hearings.

The parents of Amelia Garmyn, identified only as A.G. in court documents, divorced in 2001 when she was 5.

Both her parents took her out of the country at various times to avoid court orders. Her Russian mother took her to Moscow and her American father took her to several states along with Costa Rica.

After the divorce was finalized, her mother took the girl back to Moscow where she said her daughter was abducted from her grandmother's home and taken from Russia to be reunited with her father.

Patrick Garmyn denied accusations that he instructed three men to take the girl.

An agreement reached in a Henry County court in 2002 gave Lolita Garmyn custody of her daughter as long as she remained in the United States and allowed Patrick Garmyn supervised visitation rights.

Her father in 2009 asked a court to approve unsupervised visitation at his North Carolina home. But the girl asked the court to end visitation and wanted to be at the table during those discussions. The court denied the girl's requests and granted unsupervised visitation to the father.

"Members of this court can debate whether the trial court's ultimate decision to exclude A.G., then 13 years old, was eminently reasonable or a close call," said Ohio Supreme Court Chief Justice Maureen O'Connor. "But we cannot honestly debate whether the juvenile court abused its discretion in ordering A.G. out of the courtroom."

The girl's attorney, Howard Whitcomb, said the ruling won't affect Amelia Garmyn because she is now 18 but could impact others in the future. "It's about choice," Whitcomb told The Blade newspaper in Toledo. "Do you have the right of choice? If a child wants to participate and chooses to do that, we believe the Constitution protects that choice."

Marathon bombings suspects' friends due in court

BOSTON (AP) — A friend of Boston Marathon bombing suspect Tamerlan Tsarnaev plans to ask a judge to release him on bail while he awaits trial on charges of impeding the investigation into the deadly attack.

Khairullozhon Matanov is due in federal court Monday for a detention hearing. Matanov is accused of deleting computer files and lying to investigators in the marathon probe.

Prosecutors said Matanov had dinner with both suspects, Tamerlan Tsarnaev and his brother, Dzhokhar, hours after the April 15, 2013, bombings.

He is not charged with participating in the bombings or knowing about them in advance.

Three people were killed and 260 were hurt when two pressure cooker bombs exploded near the finish line of the race. Tamerlan Tsarnaev was killed in a shootout with police several days later.

Dzhokhar Tsarnaev has pleaded not guilty to 30 federal charges and is awaiting a November trial.

Matanov, 23, of Quincy, initially waived his right to seek release on bail. His lawyer, Edward Hayden, said then that Matanov, who came to the United States from Kyrgyzstan in 2010, has no family here, lost his job as a cab driver after he was indicted and has nowhere to go if he were released.

Hayden did not return calls seeking comment Friday on the upcoming detention hearing.

During a court hearing this month, prosecutors argued that Matanov had shown a "pattern of deceit" that included using false names to send money overseas.

His lawyer said Matanov sent most of the money to his family and sometimes used false names because he was uncomfortable sending all the money in his own name.

Prosecutors said Matanov deceived authorities when he was asked about his relationship with Tamerlan Tsarnaev. But Hayden said Matanov went to police the morning after the FBI released photographs of the Tsarnaevs and gave police the brothers' address and phone numbers.

Matanov is one of four friends of the Tsarnaev brothers who have been charged with somehow impeding the investigation or lying to authorities.

Azamat Tazhayakov, a friend of Dzhokhar Tsarnaev, is also due in court Monday for a final hearing before his June 30 trial on obstruction of justice charges.

Tazhayakov is one of two college friends accused of removing items from Dzhokhar's dorm room at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst several days after the bombings.

Border Patrol shelves plans for California flights

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The Border Patrol on Sunday canceled flights scheduled to bring nearly 300 Central American migrants from south Texas to California for processing, but the plans could be reinstated, an official said.

It was unclear why Monday's flights for San Diego and El Centro, about 100 miles of east of San Diego, were shelved, said Ralph DeSio, a spokesman for Customs and Border Protection, the Border Patrol's parent agency.

"This whole thing is in a very fluid state," DeSio said. "I'm not sure if the plans will be reactivated but, as we're speaking here this moment, it has been canceled. Tomorrow is another day."

Paul Beeson, chief of the Border

Patrol's San Diego sector, told The Associated Press on Saturday that there would be two flights with 140 passengers each. They were expected to continue every three days, carrying mostly families with children and some adults.

DeSio said those statements were accurate at the time.

The government has been struggling to cope with a surge of Central Americans entering Texas' Rio Grande Valley, where the Border Patrol has made more than 174,000 arrests since Oct. 1. Immigration and Customs Enforcement decides whether families with young children and adults remain in custody or are released while they are in deportation proceedings.

U.S. border authorities have detained more than 39,000 adults with young children from October through May. Some have been released, but the Department of Homeland Security has refused to say how many and whether they failed to appear in immigration court.

The government has been actively looking for additional detention space — primarily for mothers with young children. ICE has only one detention center designed for families, an 85-bed facility in Berks County, Pennsylvania, that was once a nursing home. The government is planning a 700-bed center in Artesia, New Mexico, that U.S. Rep. Steve Pearce told the Roswell Daily Record would be only for families. Pearce, a New Mexico Republican, told the newspaper Friday that the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center in Artesia could house families but was not equipped to accommodate unaccompanied children.

The Border Patrol flew a large number of families from Texas to Tucson, Arizona, over Memorial Day weekend, drawing criticism from Arizona Gov. Jan Brewer when ICE later dropped them off at Greyhound bus stations there.

Gabe Pacheco, spokesman for the National Border Patrol Council Local 1613, which represents agents in San Diego, said he believed the California flights would have occurred if they hadn't been announced.

"It's just a matter of time. They'll do it when no one's paying attention," he said.

What is a slur? Redskins case forces us to decide

(AP) — Something is happening just beneath the fight over the name of a certain Washington, D.C., pro football team: America is working through the process of determining what is — or is not — racially offensive.

What is a slur, and who gets to decide? How many people must be offended to tip the scales? Why should some be forced to sacrifice their traditions out of respect for others?

We are a long way from consensus on these questions, judging by the response to a federal ruling that the "Redskins" team name is disparaging and its trademarks should be canceled. The team is appealing the decision, and even if it loses its trademark, it can still use the name. But this latest development highlights the limitations of how America wrestles with certain racial statements, and our struggle to balance free speech and social good.

A rapidly diversifying nation has more need than ever to figure out what is racially offensive.

Some offenses are undeniable: NBA owner Donald Sterling earned universal condemnation for asking his mistress not to bring black people to his games. Yet in an era of blunt and sometimes coarse online discussion and political debate,

Americans continue to disagree about the nature of calling Hispanics who cross the border without documents "illegals," or the propriety of images that depict President Barack Obama as a "witch doctor."

And it took years of discussion to win makeovers for Aunt Jemima and Uncle Ben, the stereotypical black faces used to sell syrup and rice.

Jim McCarthy, a lawyer who followed the Redskins trademark case, said he is not offended by the name, but "there's no denying the fact that a certain percentage of Native Americans are offended. We don't know if it's a minority, a majority, but it's a fact."

"If we want to be the best version of ourselves in our society, do we want to promote that, or do we want to minimize that?" he asked.

"I'd love it to be different where people just cooperate to effect change," he said. "But we're a very adversarial society."

Michael Lindsay, who was lead attorney for Indians in a prior trademark case, said there are two ways to determine if something is offensive.

"The first is the legal path. The other is out in the real world. The legal test, it seems to me, actually does have something to teach the real world," said Lindsay, of the Dorsey and Whitney firm in Minneapolis. Here is what the Trademark Trial and Appeal Board, ruling Wednesday in a case first filed more than 20 years ago, tried to show the real world:

— What matters is if "Redskins" is disparaging to Native Americans — whether other ethnic groups are offended doesn't matter.

— A "substantial" percentage of Native Americans must be offended — not a majority. The judges defined that threshold at 30 percent.

— A disparaging term does not require intent: "Redskins" can still be disparaging even if the team says it is intended to show honor and respect. Based on testimony from linguistics and lexicography experts, and a review of how the term was used in dictionaries, books, newspapers, magazines and movies, the board ruled 2-1 that the term was disparaging to Native Americans.

The dissenting opinion was not a ringing endorsement of the term: "I am not suggesting that the term 'redskins' was not disparaging ... Rather, my conclusion is that the evidence petitioners put forth fails to show that it was," the judge wrote.

All of which left Paul Calobrisi, co-founder of www.savethewashingtonredskins.com, quite unsatisfied. In his opinion, there's a simple way to determine whether something is a slur: The majority rules.

"I think an overwhelming majority of Native Americans should be against the name before we change it," said Calobrisi, who grew up in Virginia rooting for the team.

He resisted the idea that a few people could decide something is offensive when he did not intend to offend them. "If they think we're demeaning them, if they think we think they are mascots, if we were doing it in any negative way, they are wrong ... As Redskins fans, we love them. Cowboys and Indians, we were the Indians. We cherish these people."

But intent is irrelevant to Lindsay, the attorney: "When a substantial percentage tell you this is offensive, you should stop. It's really that simple."

"Even if you meant no offense, if you keep using it, what does that say about you?"

It says that some people care more about their traditions than determining what is offensive, said Gillian McGoldrick, editor-in-chief of the school newspaper at Neshaminy High School in Langhorne, Pennsylvania.

Pittsburgh mayor blasts need for Luke Bryan concert cleanup

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Public safety officials broke up 15 fights, ferried 34 people to hospitals and responded to at least 150 emergency calls related to a Luke Bryan concert in Pittsburgh, Mayor Bill Peduto said Sunday in calling for event organizers to pick up part of the tab.

About 50,000 fans descended on Heinz Field for Saturday night's show by the country superstar. But tailgaters, who arrived up to nine hours before the event, left behind mounds of trash in parking lots, surrounding neighborhoods and in the Allegheny River, Peduto said.

At least seven people were arrested, and public works employees were still cleaning up Sunday morning, Peduto said in a statement.

"The continued trashing of our city has to stop," Peduto said. "There is no reason ... (for taxpayers) to bear the burden for outsized amounts of garbage removal and public safety response."

The aftermath appeared less overwhelming than the mess left after a Kenny Chesney country concert last year, when crews hauled off more than 45,000 pounds of garbage, public works Director Mike Gable told the Pittsburgh Tribune-Review. More than 70 arrests were made related to the show.

While acknowledging the economic benefits of big concerts, the mayor said the city will begin billing promoters and related private parties for city money spent on cleanup and public safety efforts. Bryan's promoter did not immediately respond to a message from The Associated Press. Tailgaters on Saturday were given trash and recycling containers, which appeared to help.

"It's definitely cleaner than it was last year. People aren't just throwing their trash on the streets. They're using the bins and bags," Ryan Callahan, 25, of Delmont, told the Tribune Review on Saturday.

CRUISE

FROM 1A

Lisbon for securing everything for the Show n' Shine event.

He also thanked Berlin for giving the Arby's Cruisin' Crew the opportunity to be involved in the Super Cruise and raise money for the Salem community food pantry. A Lisbon resident won $1,360 in the 50/50 drawing. The other half of the $2,720 will go to the food pantry.

Johnson estimated the pantry will receive about $5,400 from the cruise, including the money from the 50/50, a tool box raffle and money from the city from T-shirt sales. He estimated the crowds at 3,000 to 4,000 at the Arby's lot and 7,000 to 8,000 at the Pershing Street lot on Saturday with small numbers in the Second Street lot.

"Saturday night was absolutely fantastic," he said.

More than 100 vehicles came for the Show n' Shine on the final day. The Sponsor's Choice winner was Frank Lang of Ellsworth for a 1948 Lincoln and the Mayor's Choice winner was Mary Long of Lisbon for her 1966 Chevy Impala SS.

Trophies were awarded to the owners of 20 vehicles chosen by their fellow participants for the Show n' Shine. The winners list included: George David, 1969 Chevelle; Richard Madjarac, 1958 Dodge Truck; Laura Wilson, 1968 Camaro; Bob Hoover, 1970 Dodge Super Bee; Bill Hoover, 1964 Dodge; Brian Roberts, 1958 GMC Truck; Rory Reiter, 1957 Chevy; Bill Greenamy, 1964 Chevy Bel Air; Mike Doak, 1964 Chevy Bel Air; Randy House, 1937 Chevy Truck; Bryan Sevenich, 1958 Ford Skyliner; Jim Miller, 1962 Olds Starfire; Jerry Beck, 1940 Buick Special; Dan Bartels, 1965 Chevy Impala SS; Steve Bailey, 1969 Chevy Nova; Wally Hartman, 1954 Ford F-100; Dan Crider, 1969 Camaro RS; Mel Harris, 1964 Corvette; Don Keyser, 1966 Mustang; and Roger McDaniel, 1946 Chevy.

Bergdahl moved to outpatient care

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The U.S. Army says Sgt. Bowe Bergdahl has been released from inpatient care at Brooke Army Medical Center in Texas.

A statement Sunday from the Army says the former prisoner of war in Afghanistan is now receiving outpatient care at Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio. The Army says his "reintegration process" is proceeding with exposure to more people and a gradual increase of social interactions.

The Idaho native was captured in June 2009 and freed by the Taliban on May 31 in a deal struck by the Obama administration in which five senior Taliban officials were released from detention at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

The Army said last week it's investigating Bergdahl's disappearance and capture. It says investigators won't interview Bergdahl until those helping him recover say it's all right.

Pee-wee Herman sketch stolen from ice cream shop

PORTSMOUTH, N.H. (AP) — A sketch of Pee-wee Herman has been stolen from its home of 25 years on the wall of an ice cream shop in New Hampshire.

The Portsmouth Herald reports that the owner of Izzy's Frozen Yogurt & Ice Cream in Portsmouth says the sketch drawing of actor Paul Reubens was stolen on Friday evening.

Owner Beth Gilbert says the store was full of people when the theft occurred and that two female customers saw a man take the sketch off the wall and walk out. Workers ran after the man, but he got away.

Gilbert says she paid about $100 for the sketch of Reubens wearing an Izzy's T-shirt.

The spot on the wall where it hanged is now bare as Gilbert hopes for the sketch's return.

Venus in Gemini

Venus, the love goddess, traipses into Gemini, a realm that highlights her charms and simultaneously lessens her interest in holding on to the love she attracts. Love is carefree and interesting during this transit, though it tends to be more about friendly intellectual connection than soulful emotional connection.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You have to start somewhere. Let it be bad, but don't think of it as "bad." Call it an early effort and move on to the next thing. You'll learn with each step, and eventually you'll look back and say, "Pretty good!"

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You will move yourself great distances, one mile at a time. You will push forward through boredom, irritation, interest, excitement and more. This will be a day to remember.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You're in the mood to talk, and you'll be talking. If people don't like the things you're saying, oh well. If they behaved better, you would have better things to say.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). The sword of truth is more of a showpiece to hang on the wall today. That's much better than battling someone with it, as the truth is different things to different people.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Intuition needs space. Take the pressure off with a simple song. "Whatever will be will be." This is not for you to discern in a few hours. Let go of the picture you had, and embrace the unknown.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). The person you likes and dislikes all of the same things that you do is most definitely not your soul mate. This person is copying you out of deference — sweet but misleading.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). The basic needs of life — air, water, sleep — are often taken for granted because they are available 24/7. Yet, it does a body good to think about and be grateful for them, and you'll graciously do so.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You may find yourself pulling out of what's going on around you as your mind races to accomplish something tonight. "Just breathe" may seem like a New Age cliché, but it's also the best method for reconnecting to the moment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You have no regard for what's in it for you. That's the great thing about what you're doing now. Your efforts are laced in luck because of your utter selflessness.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). In the cartoons, the evil plans of the nefarious mastermind always backfire and do far more damage to the bad guy than he intended for his innocent victim. You'll see evidence of this kind of karmic comedy today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Friedrich Nietzsche said, "In heaven, all of the interesting people are missing." Though you don't believe that, you also don't want to be so good that you lose your edge. You're the right amount of bad.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). It's good to think well of others, but not if it means you are ignoring your own talents and strengths. This is the perfect moment to focus on self-development.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (June 23). Believe in yourself and don't lose sight of who you are. In July, it may feel as though weeks pass without progressing your interests. But you can be sure that, in the long run, your efforts will prove to be essential development. August, November and May will be the most enjoyable and lucrative months. Virgo and Taurus people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 5, 36, 50, 15 and 1.

VENUS IN GEMINI: When Venus slips into Gemini, love is a fickle mistress with many personas, each more charming than the last. Gemini loves games and will turn romance into a contest of sorts. The question that begs to be asked is: How many winners will there be? This won't be a very fun competition if the answer is one.

So how do you know you're playing fair at the game of love? Here are a few guidelines for this Venus-in-Gemini transit:

Qualifying Score: In games of sport, there is often a structure in place to be sure the players will indeed be well matched. Leagues, ratings, qualifying scores and the like are put in place to ensure that each team gets at least a fighting chance. Think of love in this way during the transit, and stay in your league. If you sense that a potential love may be in over his or her head, as tempting as it is to enjoy being worshiped, the kind thing to do is not to start such a game. "Ego aside, compassion forward" is the best rule for games of romance.

CELEBRITY PROFILES: "American Idol" judge, Grammy Award-winning producer, entrepreneur and all-around top "dawg" Randy Jackson was born under the soulful Cancer sun. His Mercury and Venus in Gemini suggests easy charm and naturally superb social skills. His lucky Jupiter, exciting Uranus and deep Pluto are all in Leo, the sign of entertainment, indicating an innate understanding of performance.

Watts' up with that?

Heloise

Dear Readers: Here is this week's SOUND OFF, about the wattage of microwaves:

"I am constantly annoyed that microwave manufacturers do not print the wattage anywhere on the units. Different recipes call for various wattage ovens. How are we supposed to remember the wattage when it was only on the box it came in, which has been thrown away?" — A Frustrated Reader, via email

I share your frustration! It would make it much easier if the wattage were printed on the microwave. Here is a hint to try: Write down the wattage as soon as you get the product, and stick it on a cabinet door or some place where it is easily accessible. — Heloise

BLACK STAIN

Dear Heloise: I have a potted plant on my wood bar. I moved it the other day and realized that the water had leaked through, and now I have a black water stain where the pot was. Is there any way to remove it? Help! — Jessie in Texas

Since it is black, it sounds like you are dealing with mold or mildew and not just a regular water stain. You will need to kill it in order to get rid of it. Get some white or cider vinegar and, using a microfiber cloth or soft terry towel, rub it into the darkened area on the wood, rubbing in the direction of the grain. Don't soak the area, because you don't want the wood to swell. Let it dry for at least 24 hours, or until the wood is dry to the touch. If the stain isn't completely removed, repeat the steps. This method may lighten the wood, so you will need to use furniture oil on the spot once the stain is completely removed and the spot is dry. — Heloise

SEWING ASSISTANCE

Dear Heloise: I was sewing the other day using my serger. When using dark thread, I have a hard time threading the little holes — it's so hard to see the thread. I had a brainstorm. I took out a little bottle of correction fluid and spread some on the thread. It was quick-drying, and left the thread a little bit stiff. I could see it, which helped me thread the machine in a fraction of the time it usually takes. — A Reader in Texas

TUCKING IN

Dear Heloise: After reading your column about how difficult it is to make a bed on an oversized mattress, I decided to share my solution with you. I use a spatula to poke in all the sheet sides. It makes the sheets tight and smooth, without having to pick up the mattress. — L.B., The Villages, Fla.

Love of her life only a part-time passion

DEAR ABBY: I fell in love with a boy when I was 12, deeply in love. We met at our county fair. We grew up together and have remained friends for 30 years. He married and had children, as did I. I am now divorced, but he's still married.

Recently our friendship has grown into something more. He wants our relationship to continue, but he's afraid to leave his wife because of the kids. They have been together for 20 years.

What do I do? He's the love of my life. Any time I have with him is better than none. It's not that I don't know I deserve better, but he is unhappy, and I am miserable without him. What do I do? — PRISONER OF PASSION IN VIRGINIA

DEAR PRISONER: What you do depends upon your strength of character and what you want out of life. If you want to spend the foreseeable future as this man's "side dish," then continue as you have been, a "prisoner of passion" with not much common sense. If you would like to have a stable life and find a man who will make you No. 1 in his life, then you will have to call a halt to this affair and go through a period of withdrawal — the same as people have to do with any addiction. It may not be pleasant, but I recommend it.

DEAR ABBY: I'm turning 75 soon, and enjoying retirement, good health and a comfortable lifestyle, which is why I have arranged a "Celebration of My Life — So Far." I'm excited about it and eagerly anticipating more than 60 guests for cocktails and a sit-down dinner at a nearby hotel.

It's not uncommon these days for a celebration of life to be held after someone dies. However, I prefer to have mine BEFORE I leave this Earth so I can celebrate along with my loved ones. I want to be there, especially since I'm the one who's paying for it!

What do you think of my idea? Would you enjoy partaking in such a special event? — THINKING AHEAD IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR THINKING AHEAD: I think it's a terrific idea. And yes, I would enjoy celebrating such a special event, if I were invited. When is this party? I'll be standing by my mailbox!

DEAR ABBY: Why is it socially acceptable to refer to a grown woman as a "girl," and yet it would never be appropriate to call a man a "boy"? — BARBARA IN HUNTSVILLE, ALA.

DEAR BARBARA: I'm not sure whether all women would accept being called a "girl." In fact, some would find it condescending and offensive. If you call a man a "boy," he could regard it as an assault on his masculinity.

And yet, I have heard those terms used in the third person, as in, "What's my husband doing on Saturday? He'll be out playing golf with the boys, while I'll be going to lunch with the girls." And I have never heard that it was offensive to either sex.

The Salem Chamber's Salem Area Safety Council has a squirrel mascot named SAM - Safety Always Matters. He was recently spotted at the Quakertown Super Kids race that was held on June 7 in downtown Salem handing out coloring books and crayons to the children who attended the race. SAM will be seen at the Salem Grande Parade on Saturday evening, Aug. 9 and at Family Fall Fun Day held in the central business district of the downtown on Saturday, Sept. 13.

The Salem Chamber held its 42nd annual summertime golf outing at Salem Hills on Monday, June 16. In 2001 the chamber's outing was re-named in honor of Al Cleveland, former executive director of the Salem Area Chamber of Commerce who dedicated 29 years to the organization. The golf team seen in the photo are, from left, Matthew Mowery, grandson of Cleveland; Bill Mowery, Cleveland's son-in-law; Rich Cochran, Insurance Center of Salem; and Brooke Pidgeon, Church Budget. Golfers enjoyed a fantastic day as they played 18 holes of golf, received prizes and wrapped up the day with a delicious steak fry and buffet dinner.

Stadium GM has been the Hole in One sponsor for many, many years and the Salem chamber appreciates their ongoing support. The list of nearly 50 businesses and individuals who also supported the Salem chamber's "Al Cleveland Memorial Golf Outing" include: Adamson Veterinary Services, Advanced Auto Parts, AMVETS Post #45, AT&T, Auburn Skilled Nursing, BB Roomers, Bob Evans, BOC Water Hydraulics, Butech Bliss, BWLK CPA's, Centers for Hearing Care, Charter One Bank, Consumers National Bank, Copeland Oaks/Crandall Medical, Elaine and Jack Kothera, Emergency Medical Transport, Farmers National Bank, First National Bank, Fresh Mark, Giant Eagle, Gina McQuillan State Farm, Gordon Brothers Water, Holloway Insurance, Home Savings & Loan, Huntington Insurance, Jackson Auto/NAPA, Julie Needs, Kent State University, Lease Drug Company, Manhattan Cleaners, Masonry Materials Plus, Pecchia Communications, Quaker Mfg., Rapid Response Restoration, Ricky's English Pub, Salem Car Wash, Salem Hills Golf & Country Club, Salem Radiologists, Salem Regional Medical Center, Salem Tire Service, Sanor Insurance, Schroedel, Scullin & Bestic CPA's, Snyders of Berlin, Specialty Fab, Stark Memorial, Susan Frenger and Visiting Angels, Ventra of Salem and Walmart. ## Salem Grande Parade to be held on Aug. 9

Applications for the 2014 Salem Grande Parade will be mailed to last year's participants by the first week of July. This year's parade will be held at 6 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 9. The Grande Parade Committee, chaired this year by David Coy, selected the theme of "The Dog Days of Summer." Organizations, churches, clubs and businesses are invited to enter the parade and decorate appropriately. This year the annual dedication to the military will honor Vietnam War veterans. The route will remain the same with the parade stepping off from North Union Avenue onto East State Street and proceeding west through the downtown business district. At Ellsworth Avenue, the parade will turn right and disband at the Broadway Plaza on Second Street. For more information call the Salem chamber office at 330-337-3473 or e-mail Tammy at tlpeppel@salemohiochamber.org.

Objectives

- ▶ To coordinate the efforts of commerce, industry and the professions in maintaining and strengthening a sound and healthy business climate in the Salem area.
- ▶ To sponsor aggressive programs of work and stimulate activities which will provide for full development and employment of our human and economic resources.
- ▶ To provide creative business leadership and effective coordination of all interested parties in solving community problems and in initiating constructive community action.
- ▶ To create broad understanding and appreciation of the great opportunities in the Salem area and to promote the advantages and assets of our community, within our area, and in the state and the nation.

Purpose:

- ▶ We are organized to foster, promote and develop the advancement of the commercial, financial, industrial, professional and civic interest of Salem and the greater Salem area.

Council may change electric rate schedule

By KATIE SCHWENDEMAN
Staff Writer

City Council is preparing to vote on switching back to billing city electric customers by class in order to alleviate subsidizing. The change would also result in City Manager Lance Willard not being responsible for adjusting rates each month.

Customers began being charged the same rates in 2011, when Keith Chamberlin was manager, and he also adjusted rates on a monthly basis based on the cost of power and overhead.

The city purchases its power from American Municipal Power (AMP) and is responsible for distribution. At that time users were paying eight cents per kilowatt hour. That jumped to around 11 cents this year.

When they were lumped together customers were told the rates would be monitored and slowly increased over time to make up for the adjustment.

But a study by Courtney and Associates earlier this year found that commercial and industrial users were subsidizing other users on that rate schedule, and advised council that rates should be changed to reflect cost of service.

The study's results were presented to council in April and council gave a first reading to legislation enforcing the rate split at this week's regular meeting. A second reading is required before a vote.

John T. Courtney told council in April the only class providing enough revenue to the city are heavy commercial/industrial users, which at $3.03 million account for roughly 36 percent of all energy sales in the city. Residential accounts for 31 percent, at $2.79 million.

The city is spending $3.34 million to provide the service to heavy commercial/industrial users while bringing in $3.45 million, and spending $3.2 million and $2.5 million on residential and commercial users while only bringing in $3.1 million and $2.4 million.

Under the change before council, commercial non-demand users would pay a monthly service charge of $15 for single phase and $25 for three-phase service, and 10 cents per kilowatt hour used.

Demand service users would also pay $15 and $25 for single and three-phase, but be charged eight cents per kilowatt hour.

Industrial users would pay a $50 a monthly service charge, $15 per kilowatt of billing capacity charge, 50 cent reactive charge and four cents per kilowatt hour used, with discounts available to those owning their own substation.

Residential users would pay a monthly service charge of $5 and 9 cents per kilowatt hour used.

According to the legislation, rates would become effective for electricity distributed during the Sept. 1 billing cycle.

Willard said a large portion of customer bills would remain fixed, although a cost adjustment would be made based on the cost of power.

According to the legislation the base power supply cost included in the new rates schedules is six cents per kilowatt hour used.

Mayor Bryan Blakeman questioned the cost and said that according to Courtney's presentation a power supply base cost would only be considered in the event that rates changed drastically, or the result of a "drastic project."

Willard said he would look into it.

Council will not pursue a natural gas aggregate

By KEVIN HOWELL
Staff Writer

Village Council will not be pursuing a natural gas aggregate on the November ballot.

Village Council members Wednesday night agreed not to place the issue on the ballot due to insufficient information regarding proposed savings. Council members Sue Buchanan, Kevin Siembida and Mark Gardner participated in the discussion at a special meeting prior to the regular council meeting.

Brenda Fargo, manager of the gas program for the Northeast Ohio Public Energy Council (NOPEC), told council two weeks ago that the program, which has to be approved by general election, would provide fixed rates every three or four months. She said residents can opt out at any time at no cost.

However, Fargo said at the time that she was unable to provide an estimate of savings until closer to the election due to the flexibility in the gas industry.

Council members said they did not feel comfortable taking the issue to residents without knowing how much residents could save.

"I'm worried about buying on futures (for two to three months)," Buchanan said. "Too many people (in the village) are living near broke. I'm not going to recommend something so vague."

Siembida agreed, noting that if council members can't explain the issue, they can't ask residents to approve it.

"We'd be remiss if we do offer this without some kind of tangible information," Buchanan added.

Council members said they would remain open to the option if or when more information becomes available, but reiterated that they didn't feel there was enough information at this point to move forward with the issue.

Council would have to submit the issue to the board of elections by Aug. 6 to have it placed on the November ballot.

▶ 2014 SALEM SUPER CRUISE AUTOCROSS

Bob Bertelsen of Columbiana and his 1969 Chevrolet C-10 took top honors at the Salem Super Cruise Autocross on Sunday. He won the trophy in the experienced driver class and also for the coolest car. (Salem News/Patti Schaeffer)

Cruising turns to racing

By STEVE RAPPACH

Staff Writer

SALEM — Everything worked out right for the second annual Salem Super Cruise Autocross.

With warm temperatures and sunny skies, 30 drivers took to the Salem High School parking lot for the autocross event, an increase from last year's count of 18. Northern Ohio Valley Racing regional executive Joe McMullen credited it to more recognition.

"There was a lot more going on, there was a lot more help," McMullen said. "The Steel Valley Super Nationals had our name in their flyers. We even saw it in the newspaper, and this year, we saw 30."

Many drivers from last year returned this year, like the husband-wife team of Lloyd and Cindy Willis of Rogers, and enjoyed coming out as they ran with their Mini Coopers.

"We have a couple Mini S's," Cindy said. "They're supercharged and they're faster."

"It's a fun day for everybody to do car handling," Bertelsen said. "It's not like specialty things. Anybody who owns a car can do it, which is what makes it fun."

Bob Bertelsen's four years of racing experience paid off on Sunday. The Columbiana resident — who stayed at home instead of going to a race in Wisconsin this weekend — picked up trophies for "Coolest Car" and the "Quickest Experienced" as his best time was a 37.305 in his 1969 Chevrolet C-10, which he calls "Orange Rush."

"I race all over from Chicago to Massachusetts to Charlotte to race," Bertelsen said. "I've been gone four weekends in a row. I'm tired of traveling. Every event is like eight to 10 hours away."

The event also attracted newcomers like Sean Hays of Rogers and Kyle Myers of Alliance, who won the "Fastest Novice" award with a time of 39.242.

"I've never had a car to take to the drag strip," Hays said. "I don't drag race. This is something you can take whatever you have, and have fun."

"It was a total adrenaline rush," Myers said. "When I got done, my left leg was shaking. It was way more than I thought it would be. I wanted to go back and do it again."

Recent Salem High School graduate Dominic Righetti returned as this year's event coordinator. When he organized the event last year, he looked to see a variety of cars to see how well they can run the course.

"When people started coming, I didn't want it to be just a bunch of hot rods, or a bunch of Japanese-type cars," Righetti said. "I really wanted it to be a mix of different stuff. That way I can tell people,

comes close

MANAUS, Brazil (AP) — With Cristiano Ronaldo on the field, a one-goal lead is never safe.

The world player of the year rarely sparked on a hot and humid night in the jungle, but his inch-perfect stoppage-time cross set up Varela for the equalizing goal Sunday in Portugal's 2-2 draw against the United States at the World Cup.

The Real Madrid winger, who has been playing despite a left knee injury, showed flashes of his best, but his impact was minimal until the final seconds of the match. He curled the ball in to a diving Varela, who headed past Tim Howard to give the Portuguese team a slim hope of advancing to the second round and deny the Americans instant advancement.

"He made a great cross," said Howard, Ronaldo's former teammate from their days at Manchester United. "Football's cruel sometimes."

The United States now has four points in Group G, the same as Germany. Both Portugal and Ghana have one point. The Americans will face Germany on Thursday in Recife, while Portugal takes on Ghana at the same time in Brasilia.

"Obviously we're disappointed, but at the end of the day you've got to look at the positives, we got a point," said United States captain Clint Dempsey, who scored to give the Americans a 2-1 lead in the 81st. "It's going down to the last game and hopefully we get the job done."

Nani scored first for Portugal, shooting past a sprawling Howard in the fifth minute. But the Americans responded in the second half as Portugal seemed to wilt in the stifling heat.

Jermaine Jones made it 1-1 with a curling shot in the 64th after a cross from Graham Zusi made its way through the Portugal defense. And Dempsey, playing with a broken nose, then put the Americans ahead, using his stomach to direct the ball into the net from a cross by Zusi.

"Now we have to go out and beat Germany, that's what we have to do," U.S. coach Jurgen Klinsmann said. "We have to play Germany, we have one less day to recover, we played in the Amazon, they played on a place with less travel. We have to do it the tough way."

Dempsey's goal was his fourth at a World Cup and second at this year's tournament. Jones scored his third goal for the United States national team and first in almost two years.

Edwards captures first road course victory

SONOMA, Calif. (AP) — Carl Edwards has never been known for his road racing skills — to the point team owner Jack Roush had to send him testing in a two-seater so Boris Said could teach him the basics.

A decade later, Edwards finally has a win to show for his hard work.

And, he beat road racing ace Jeff Gordon to get to Victory Lane on Sunday at Sonoma Raceway, where Gordon leads all drivers with five wins.

“My road racing progression, it’s been a pretty long climb,” Edwards said. “The real special part to me was to stand in Victory Lane at Sonoma and have Jeff Gordon come and give me a handshake as the second-place finisher. I grew up watching Jeff Gordon, and specifically watching how he drove this race track and all the successes he had here, so I mean, that’s really super. It’s something I’ll never forget.”

Edwards’ win made Roush Fenway Racing the unlikely organization to end Hendrick Motorsports’ five-race winning streak. And, the win came a week after Roush was shut out at Michigan, where the organization failed to put a car in the top 10 for the first time since 2000.

Edwards took the lead on a restart with 25 laps remaining and seemed to have the win wrapped up until Gordon nearly chased him down on the final lap. Gordon had one good look at Edwards and couldn’t pull off the pass.

“That last lap was ugly,” Edwards said of trying to hold off Gordon.

It wasn’t a terrible day for the Hendrick organization, which had won every Sprint Cup Series race since Gordon’s victory at Kansas on May 10. Instead, HMS settled for all four of its drivers finishing in the top seven.

Gordon, the Sprint Cup Series points leader, wound up second. He said he made one mistake in overdriving a turn with about five laps to go that allowed Edwards to build a healthy lead.

“I just couldn’t put enough pressure on him,” Gordon said. “I think had I put some more pressure on him, I saw him really struggling with the (tire) grip level, but he did everything he needed to do. That last lap, I gave it my best effort and closed up on him and he didn’t overdrive it. I was hoping he might slide up and I’d get a run on him.”

Dale Earnhardt Jr. was third after rallying from an incident that wrecked Matt Kenseth.

RACING FROM 1B

“See, your car can do it, too.”

The event moved location to the high school lot this year following last year’s event at the Walmart parking lot. Those who competed last year, like Carl Roeger of Guilford Lake, liked the moved because of the extra space.

“It’s a tight track, but it’s a more open track, and it’s a good one for an inexperienced or minimally-experienced driver,” Roeger said. “The Walmart track was a very technical track and I don’t know if everybody did make all six runs and drive the whole course. It was a very small area we had to work with.”

Righetti also enjoyed the course and also acknowledged he had a little trouble with it at first.

“It’s tough, but it’s a fun course because it flows real well and it’s real tight. Then it’s fast and then it’s real tight,” Righetti said. “If you think something is going wrong, it’s better to stop. If you just go, bad things can happen.”

Stretch’s Rod Shop, owned by Roeger, sponsored the event. Roeger will take over as event coordinator next year as Righetti will step aside to focus on mechanical engineering studies at the University of Akron.

“The plan is for the event to come back next year, but I will not be back as I will be focusing on college,” Righetti said.

“Dominic will be in college next year, so he won’t be able to head it up,” Roeger said. “So I’m going to take the bull by the horns.”

Members of the Salem Chapter of the National Honor Society also helped with concessions. Proceeds from the event went to the Banquet in Salem, which offers meals at the Salem Memorial Building to anyone regardless of income.

Tomlin, Indians fall to Tigers

CLEVELAND (AP) — A weekend of high expectations and large crowds ended with a thud for the Indians.

Another rocky start by Josh Tomlin and three errors sent Cleveland to a 10-4 loss Sunday as Detroit completed a three-game sweep.

Tomlin (4-5) didn’t retire a batter in the fifth when the Indians committed two errors, which helped Detroit score seven runs. Meanwhile, the offense struggled until the ninth when the Indians scored three times.

Second baseman Jason Kipnis, who was 0 for 5 in the finale and 1 for 14 in the series, tried to keep the weekend in perspective.

“Is it disappointing? Of course, we just got swept at home,” he said. “But at the same time, we swept them last time they were here and now look where they are, they’re back in first place. So it just goes to show you how long the season is. It goes to show you how tight this division is.”

The Indians drew 100,280 fans on the weekend, including a sell-out on Saturday, and entered the series on a high note following Nick Swisher’s game-winning grand slam in the 10th inning Thursday against the Angels.

That momentum quickly came to an end, and the Indians have lost four of five at home following a 10-game winning streak at Progressive Field.

“We can’t just show up and win. We’ve got to do the little things,” Kipnis said. “We’ve got to play defense, pitch well and we’ve got to hit with runners on base. When we don’t have that going, you can see that games like this happen.”

Tomlin allowed eight runs in four-plus innings. He faced six hitters in the fifth and all reached base. He has been handed the loss in his last three starts.

Pirates’ Crumpton hot in June

CHICAGO (AP) — Brandon Crumpton’s first career game at Wrigley Field looked a lot like his previous three starts. It was another smooth outing for the young right-hander.

Cumpton pitched seven scoreless innings, Travis Snider hit a solo homer and the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Chicago Cubs 2-1 on Sunday.

Cumpton allowed just two hits, walked two and struck out four, helping the Pirates take the last two games of their weekend series in Chicago. The 25-year-old Crumpton (3-2) improved to 3-0 with a 3.09 ERA in four starts this month.

“Rookie or whatever you call it, this dude, he comes in every time and he battles,” Pirates second baseman Josh Harrison said. “He is a warrior. He is out there and he is going to grind. He does just that.”

Cumpton (3-2) retired 13 of his first 14 batters. He walked Nate Schierholtz in the fifth inning, but rebounded by getting John Baker to hit into an inning-ending double play.

Ryan Sweeney and starting pitcher Jason Hammel had Chicago’s only hits off Cumpton, who threw just 87 pitches.

“I really didn’t know what my pitch count was until I got done,” he said. “I felt like I threw a lot more than I did. Later on, I started to fall behind guys. I tried not to shy away from my strengths and when I got behind guys 1-0 I tried to go back and attack them with fastballs and they put them in play for me and the guys made plays behind me today.”

Mark Melancon got three outs for his 12th save in 15 chances.

World Cup

WORLD CUP SCENARIOS
(AP) — The United States and Germany both have four points and are atop Group G over Ghana and Portugal who have one point each. In the group stage of the World Cup, wins are worth three points, and draws are worth one point. All four teams have one game remaining.

Germany and the U.S. will play Thursday in Recife, and Ghana and Portugal will kick off at the same time in Brasilia.

Here are the scenarios:

- If the U.S. wins: They are through to the next round as the winners of Group G and will play the second place team from Group H. (Belgium currently leads Group H, followed by Algeria, Russia and South Korea)
- Germany would finish second unless Ghana or Portugal won and passed the U.S. on goal differential. The U.S. is plus 1, Ghana is minus 1 and Portugal is minus 4. The second place finisher plays the winner of Group H.
- If Germany wins: Germany wins the group.
- The U.S. would finish second unless Ghana or Portugal won and passed the U.S. on goal differential. The U.S. is plus 1, Ghana is minus 1 and Portugal is minus 4. So, if the U.S. loses to Germany, they will be rooting for Portugal, because it's less likely that Portugal could pass the U.S. on goal differential.
- If Germany and the U.S. draw: Germany wins the group and the U.S. finishes second. The result of the other game is meaningless.
- If Ghana and Portugal draw: The U.S. and Germany advance. Germany wins the group unless the U.S. defeats them.
- Other tiebreakers: In any of these scenarios involving goal differential, if two teams are tied on points and goal differential, the next tiebreaker is total goals scored. Germany has six goals, the U.S. has four, Ghana has three and Portugal has two.

ANGELS GET WEEKEND SWEEP

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Rookie Matt Shoemaker won his fifth straight decision in a starting role, C.J. Cron and Kole Calhoun homered in the second inning against Yu Darvish, and the Los Angeles Angels completed a three-game sweep of the Texas Rangers with a 5-2 victory on Sunday night.

Cron went deep for the third straight game, helping the Angels pull within five games of AL West-leading Oakland. Calhoun was credited with the first run of the game on a replay reversal in the first inning that led to the ejection of Texas manager Ron Washington by plate umpire Bill Miller.

VA falls short on female medical issues

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Already pilloried for long wait times for medical appointments, the beleaguered Department of Veterans Affairs has fallen short of another commitment: to attend to the needs of the rising ranks of female veterans returning from Iraq and Afghanistan, many of them of child-bearing age.

Even the head of the VA's office of women's health acknowledges that persistent shortcomings remain in caring for the 390,000 female vets seen last year at its hospitals and clinics — despite an investment of more than $1.3 billion since 2008, including the training of hundreds of medical professionals in the fundamentals of treating the female body.

According to an Associated Press review of VA internal documents, inspector general reports and interviews: —Nationwide, nearly one in four VA hospitals does not have a fulltime gynecologist on staff. And about 140 of the 920 community-based clinics serving veterans in rural areas do not have a designated women's health provider, despite the goal that every clinic would have one.

—When community-based clinics refer veterans to a nearby university or other private medical facility to be screened for breast cancer, more than half the time their mammogram results are not provided to patients within two weeks, as required under VA policy.

—Female veterans have been placed on the VA's Electronic Wait List at a higher rate than male veterans. All new patients who cannot be schedule for an appointment in 90 days or less are placed on that wait list.

—And according to a VA presentation last year, female veterans of child-bearing age were far more likely to be given medications that can cause birth defects than were women being treated through a private HMO.

"Are there problems? Yes," said Dr. Patricia Hayes, the VA's chief consultant for women's health in an AP interview. "The good news for our health care system is that as the number of women increases dramatically, we are going to continue to be able to adjust to these circumstances quickly."

The 5.3 million male veterans who used the VA system in fiscal year 2013 far outnumbered female patients, but the number of women receiving care at VA has more than doubled since 2000. The tens of thousands of predominantly young, female veterans returning home has dramatically changed the VA's patient load, and the system has yet to fully catch up. Also, as the total veteran population continues to decrease, the female veteran population has been increasing year after year, according to a 2013 VA report.

All enrolled veterans can use what the VA describes as its "comprehensive medical benefits package," though certain benefits may vary by individual and ailment, just like for medical care outside the VA system. The VA typically covers all female-specific medical needs, aside from abortions and in-vitro fertilization.

The strategic initiatives, which sprang from recommendations issued six years ago to enhance women's health system-wide, have kick started research about women veterans' experience of sexual harassment, assault or rape in a military setting; established working groups about how to build prosthetics for female soldiers; and even led to installation of women's restrooms at the more than 1,000 VA facilities.

Yet enduring problems with the delivery of care for women veterans are surfacing now amid the growing criticism of the VA's handling of patient care nationwide and allegations of misconduct, lengthy wait times and potential unnecessary deaths.

Used to treating the men who served in Vietnam, Korea or World War II, many of the VA's practitioners until a few years ago were unaccustomed to treating menopause or giving advice about birth control.
