Miller jury sent home for night

By DEANNE JOHNSON
Staff Writer

LISBON — Although they deliberated for more than three hours Tuesday afternoon, jurors in the Christopher Miller aggravated murder case were unable to reach a verdict.

Columbiana County Common Pleas Court Judge C. Ashley Pike requested the jury go home Tuesday, stay away from media accounts, get a good night's rest and try again this morning.

With the aggravated murder charge, Miller is facing a possible life sentence with the possibility of parole after 20, 25 or 30 years. The murder charge carries a possible sentence of 15 to life.

Jurors were sent to begin deliberating about 11:30 a.m., but chose to go to lunch almost immediately. They returned at about 12:40 p.m. and began discussing the three charges. They next asked the bailiff a question at 2:30 p.m., which the judge showed to both teams of attorneys along with the judge's response and the answer was returned to the back room where the jury was still deliberating.

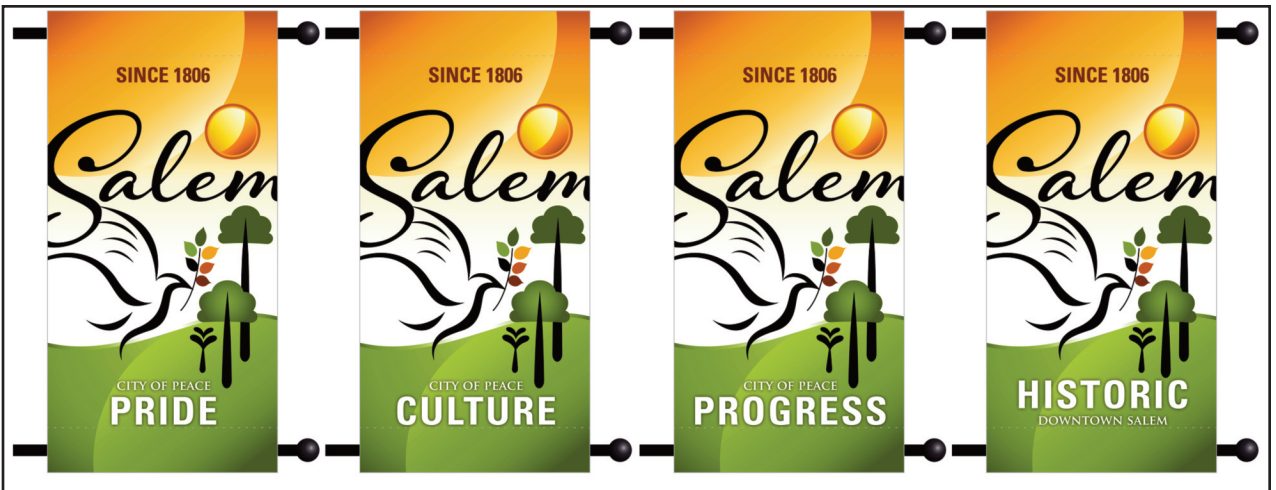

At 4 p.m., a note was sent from the foreman to Pike and in court, she confirmed, "I do not believe we will be able to come to a unanimous agreement."

Before letting them go for the day, Pike urged them to give it one more go in the morning, noting they were a carefully chosen group and the court believes it would be hard to find a more capable or intelligent group to which the case should be presented.

The jurors had been asked to decide the case after nearly two hours of closing arguments were given by both assistant county prosecutors Tammie Riley Jones and John Gamble, as well as defense attorney Jennifer Gorby.

Jones went first, laying out all the places and people Miller went to go see on Oct. 25 and Oct. 26, 2013. Bailey was killed on Oct. 26. Jones also reiterated points of the three different stories Miller gave when he asked to be

This is the final design agreed upon for the new banners for downtown Salem, featuring a symbol of peace, trees representative of Tree City USA and the sun shining over Salem, which was founded in 1806. Salem Renaissance secured a grant from the Pearce Foundation to pay for the banners, which are expected to be ready for hanging sometime later this summer. Banners back in business

SALEM — Nearly two months and several conversations after Salem Renaissance decided to hang up plans for new banners, group president David Schwartz announced getting the green light for the final design.

"We're very comfortable with the design, which is very similar to what was originally submitted, but with a few tweaks," Schwartz said Tuesday.

The project had been temporarily deep-sixed by members of the Salem Renaissance banner committee in late April/early May in response to changes requested by Mayor John Berlin and members of the city's Design Review Board. Salem Area Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Audrey Null had also expressed her opinion.

There has been a lot of back and forth dialogue since then between Design Review Board Chairman Ginger Grilli and Schwartz, who both met with designer Kristina Danklef of Sourballpython Studios of Salem to hammer out the final version of the banners. Danklef donated her time and effort for this project.

A company in Burlington, Vermont will produce the banners to be hung on light poles throughout downtown Salem, replacing the original banners Salem Renaissance purchased a dozen years ago. The group decided to pursue new banners due to the old banners becoming worn.

All involved expressed their satisfaction with the final banner design, including Berlin, who had a concern about a previous design version which he said made the script Salem look like satan. He said the script Salem is more legible in the final version and he liked the gradient shading of the orange coming into the white on the banner. He offered his thanks to the Salem

Renaissance members.

"I think this looks great. I'm glad they were willing to work with the Design Review Board," Berlin said. "I think it looks wonderful."

He noted that lots of dedicated people serve on Salem Renaissance who also serve their fellow residents in other capacities on other boards, such as Salem Beautification, Salem Preservation Society and the Salem Tourism Board. "They're very dedicated to the betterment of Salem, so I'm happy Design Review Board and Renaissance were able to make it work," he said.

Null said it was good to have a lot of different groups' opinions to get a broader perspective. In an email, she thanked everyone involved.

"This particular project is appreciated and the banners will be an outstanding addition to the landscape of

Major work in Neese cleanup expected in 2015

By LARRY SHIELDS
Staff Writer

SALEM — Major work at the Nease Chemical Superfund site is expected to begin in 2015, according to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

The 14-acre site is located on along state Route 14 two-and-a-half miles northwest of Salem on the Columbiana-Mahoning county line.

The EPA said there have been two legal agreements in place since 2006 that cover the cleanup's "design," one more agreement, called a "consent decree," that is being negotiated and will require site owner Rutgers Organics Corp. to build and maintain the actual cleanup of both portions.

The EPA said the consent decrees require the U.S. Department of Justice to act on EPA's behalf.

"We expect this one to be 'lodged' in federal court in late 2014, the EPA said and at that time, DOJ will announce a public comment period in the Federal Register because all comments must be sent to DOJ.

Department officials will review and respond to the comments before "entering" the consent decree in federal court where it will be deemed "final."

The final consent decree will be available on the EPA's webpage and at the public libraries in Salem and Lisbon.

When the legal requirements are completed, cleanup construction can begin in late 2014 and will take several years to complete, the EPA said.

The sites' history goes back to 1961 and 1973 when Nease Chemical produced various household cleaning compounds, fire retardants and pesticides—some of which included a chemical called mirex.

The EPA called mirex an "uncommon chemical."
Nease Chemical pumped the waste from its manufacturing process and treated it in unlined ponds where the hazardous substances seeped into the soil and ground water.

The waste was also placed in steel drums that were buried and eventually rusted and leaked. Consequently, the soil was contaminated with mirex and the groundwater was contaminated by a group of chemicals called volatile organic compounds, the EPA said.

Surface water runoff from the waste treatment ponds then flowed into nearby feeder creek tributaries running through the site causing heavy pollution in the Middle Fork of Little Beaver Creek, east of the site.

The EPA said mirex is an odorless, white, crystalline solid used to control fire ants and as a flame retardant in plastic, rubber, paints, paper and electrical goods.

Leetonia Library adds hours

By KEVIN HOWELL
Staff Writer

LEETONIA— The Leetonia Community Public Library is expanding its hours again.

Starting June 30 the library will open at 9:30 a.m. Monday through Friday, and remain open an hour longer until 4 p.m. on Friday and Saturday. The library will remain closed on Sundays.

According to Director Lisa Rohrbaugh, a recent update in technology and adjustment in staffing hours made the expansion in hours possible. She said a new server and windows update means the staff does not have to manually back up the computers each morning— a process that took up to 90 minutes— before opening. She also noted that staff hours have been adjusted, with no additional employees hired.

Rohrbaugh said that the new hours can only benefit the community.

"We're a public place, so the more hours we're open, the better it is," she explained. "Sometimes I'll see people leave in the morning because we're not open yet."

Rohrbaugh also explained that the additional hour at the end of the day on Friday and Saturday could be significant, especially during the school year.

"We're locking the doors and, especially when school is in session, that is when [patrons], students and teachers, want to come in," she said.

The expansion of hours is part of a continued effort by Rohrbaugh to restore hours that had been slashed prior to her arrival in 2011, including the re-establishment of Friday hours.

"We're happy to do it and hope that people take advantage of it," she said.

House, Senate in talks on vet health bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate negotiators opened compromise talks Tuesday on legislation to expand health care for veterans, and said they hope for quick response to a scandal that has uncovered long wait times, false record-keeping and accusations of criminal activity at the Department of Veterans Affairs.

At their core, the bills passed by the House and Senate would allow millions of former members of the armed forces to seek health care outside the government's veterans system if they were unable to get a timely appointment inside it.

"The simple truth of the matter is that the VA needs more doctors, more nurses, more mental health providers, and, in certain parts of the country, more space for a growing patient population," said Sen. Bernie Sanders, the Vermont Independent who chairs the Senate veterans committee.

Rep. Jeff Miller, R-Fla., and chairman of the House panel, noted the deaths reported among veterans awaiting care in Phoenix, Ariz., and said that for them, "our work begins too late. For veterans still waiting, our work begins" none too soon, he added.

Talking with reporters afterward, Miller said that because the House is insisting any increases be paid for, it will be necessary to "go outside the VA to look for offsets."

Several Republicans questioned the Congressional Budget Office's estimates of the cost of the legislation, saying the non-partisan agency didn't factor in provisions that would save money.

CBO put the cost of the Senate bill at $35 billion over three years. It said the price tag of the House measure is about $44 billion over six years.

Several aides said the goal is to reach agreement and pass a compromise by the end of July, although Miller declined to state a deadline for action. The first day's meeting consisted entirely of prepared speeches, delivered in turn by members of the House and Senate.

Firefighter to read story

Chris Wright, pictured, from the Leetonia Fire Department will be reading the book "Spark the Firefighter" at 10 a.m. Thursday at the Leetonia Community Public Library. Wright will bring his gear and talk about his work as a firefighter and EMT. The program is part of the "Stories and More" series on Thursday mornings in the summer. Children of all ages are welcome. Trial in November stabbing death outside Salem bar again postponed

By DEANNE JOHNSON
Staff Writer

LISBON — With the jury's verdict in the Christopher Miller case still pending, the aggravated murder trial of Robert Harmony was again postponed on Tuesday.

Harmony, 45, East Fourth Street, Salem, is accused in the stabbing death of Gerrod Lanzendorfer. A jury trial was scheduled to begin Tuesday. However, with Columbiana County Common Pleas Court Judge C. Ashley Pike, the same assistant county prosecutors, Tammie Riley Jones and John Gamble, and one of the same defense attorneys as the Miller case, Jennifer Gorby, all busy with the Miller case, there was no way to start the trial on time.

Jurors in the Miller trial did not begin deliberations until 11:30 a.m. Tuesday with closing arguments heard first thing in the morning.

So instead of going forward, a status conference held in the Harmony case on Tuesday afternoon where it was determined to push the trial back until late July. Pike noted there were several additional reasons for the delay.

Pike asked Harmony about some correspondence the judge had received from the county jail in which Harmony had been expressing dissatisfaction with his attorneys, Gorby and Fred Naragon. Pike said he had been led to believe Harmony planned to obtain another attorney. Additionally, Pike said he understood Harmony had been refusing to see his attorneys at the county jail.

Harmony admitted he had been seeking other representation, but it had not happened. Instead he said he planned to keep his current attorneys. Additionally, Harmony apologized to the court.

Pike said unless there was some objection he believed the defendant's actions had delayed the speedy trial statute. There was no objection.

The jury trial was reset for July 29 with a status conference scheduled for July 16.

This is the third time the trial has been postponed. It has been set to begin in January, April and this week in June.

Harmony is charged with aggravated murder and murder in the death of Lanzendorfer, a 23-year-old who was working as a bouncer at the Side Door Tavern in Salem in the early morning hours of Nov. 13. Lanzendorfer reportedly died as the result of one of the 14 stab wounds he had when Salem police were called to where he was lying near the business.

The aggravated murder charge means prosecutors believe Harmony not only knowingly caused Lanzendorfer's murder, but there was some planning involved as well. djohnson@mojoneews.com

Company successfully tests space-tourism balloon at Roswell

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — An Arizona company says it has successfully completed the first small-scale test flight of a high-altitude balloon and capsule being developed to let tourists float 20 miles above the earth.

World View Enterprises of Tucson said Tuesday that it launched the flight last week from Roswell.

CEO Jane Poynter said the system broke the world record for highest parafoil flight, lifting a payload to 120,000 feet.

"It went really, really, really well," Poynter said. "Actually, the guys hit the ball out of the park. We're thrilled."

The system uses a balloon similar to that used in 2012 to lift Austrian daredevil Felix Baumgartner 128,000 feet to make a world-record breaking 24-mile sky dive. That flight also launched from the Roswell airport.

Poynter said last week's flight was the first testing all the components together. It used a balloon about third the size of that planned for passenger flight to lift a payload of about one-tenth of what will be used to carry passengers.

The company is still planning to begin its $75,000 per-person flights in 2016, she said. The balloons will lift a capsule carrying six passengers and two crew members 20 miles up, where they will float under a parafoil for about two hours before floating back down to earth. The capsule will be big enough for the passengers to walk around.

The selling point is the view of the Earth and seeing its curve, the company says.

In filings with the Federal Aviation Administration, World View said it planned to launch its flights from Spaceport America in New Mexico. But Poynter Tuesday said that no final decision has been made on where to base the flights.

Spaceport is where Virgin Galactic plans to launch its first space-tourism flights at a cost of $200,000 per person. Development of Virgin's spacecraft has taken longer than originally planned, and it is unclear when the company, founded by British billionaire Richard Branson, will make its first flight. The company's newest target date is the end of this year.

Kasich fights subpoena to testify at federal trial

CLEVELAND (AP) — GOP Gov. John Kasich is fighting a subpoena that would require him to testify at the federal trial of a northeast Ohio businessman accused of funneling illegal campaign contributions in 2011 to two prominent Republican politicians.

A motion filed Monday on Kasich's behalf said attorneys for North Canton telemarketing millionaire Ben Suarez have no legal right to require Kasich's testimony. Kasich's office was served Friday with a subpoena that commands him to be available to testify in Cleveland between June 23 and July 10.

U.S. District Judge Patrician Gaughan hasn't ruled on Kasich's motion to quash the subpoena.

That motion, filed by the state attorney general's office, said Suarez's attorneys want Kasich to testify that it's not improper for constituents to seek the help of elected officials. The motion said defense attorneys believe Kasich's testimony would be persuasive to a jury.

Kasich spokesman Rob Nichols issued a statement Tuesday saying there is no reason for Suarez's attorneys to seek the governor's testimony.

"This is a federal issue, and the governor is not involved," Nichols said.

Suarez, 72, was indicted last year on charges that included conspiracy to commit federal campaign violations, making corporate contributions, making contributions in others' names and conspiracy to obstruct justice.

Prosecutors have alleged Suarez had employees, relatives and others donate a total of $100,000 each to the 2012 campaigns of U.S. Rep. Jim Renacci and the failed U.S. Senate bid of state Treasurer Josh Mandel in the hope they would help his company in an expensive consumer protection complaint in California.

Renacci and Mandel have not been accused of wrongdoing. Both campaigns returned the donations after learning of an FBI investigation into the Suarez contributions.

The two politicians wrote letters on behalf of Suarez Corporation Industries that spokeswomen for the politicians said is a common constituent service.

Kasich's also office received a letter from Suarez seeking help. Kasich's general counsel, Mike Grodhaus, wrote back to him March 29, 2011, and said it would be inappropriate for Kasich to get involved in the California matter.

But nearly a month later, on April 25, Grodhaus wrote to the California attorney general asking her to review the actions of the Napa County district attorney in relation to the complaint against Suarez Corporation Industries.

When asked about Grodhaus' letter to the California official, Nichols said Tuesday that it was "perfunctory, garden-variety casework."

"There were allegations of misdeeds, and our attorney brought it to their boss' attention," Nichols said.

Nichols said Grodhaus wrote the April letter because of Suarez's subsequent and repeated claims that the complaint in California would cost Ohio jobs.

Berresford grabbed a 9 mm handgun and exited his bedroom only to find a person later identified as Glen Fulton in his kitchen. Fulton had entered through a window and yelled for Berresford not to shoot him. Fulton fled but returned to retrieve his car keys before running outside again. Meanwhile, Berresford fired two shots into an embankment to get Fulton to stop but he continued on. An arrest warrant for burglary was issued against Fulton.

— Bethany Shelton, Main Street, East Rochester, reported her daughter was involved in a domestic dispute with a male at his residence on Bayard Road at 1:54 p.m. Sunday. Petre called the police department and was told no one there had called him.

— Deputies were called to Ridgeview Drive, Hanoverton, at 4:46 p.m. Monday in regard to a boy concerned about his mother driving around while intoxicated. After deputies arrived, the mother, Jennifer L. Morris, was brought to the scene by a person who had gone looking for her. Morris, 39, refused to calm down after repeated requests to do so and kept using profanity, some of which was directed at the deputies. At this point, Morris was arrested for disorderly conduct, but then she allegedly propositioned the deputies and began making other sexual comments to them. Once at the county jail she reportedly began twerking against the outside of a sheriff's cruiser before being handed off to a female corrections officer.

OUR SIDE

Why no outrage over IRS emails?

Using illegal methods to harm one's political opponents, then lying to cover it up, is serious business, as former President Richard Nixon learned. Claiming records sought by investigators were "lost" accidentally can expose one to ridicule, his secretary, Rose Mary Woods, found out.

But that was then and now is very different. Now, a president using the Rose Mary Woods defense may be about to get away with it.

Nixon resigned the presidency in 1974, as a result of the Watergate scandal. Audio tapes of conversations in the Oval Office were critical in the case against him.

But not all the tapes were available. Investigators found an 18 1/2-minute gap in one recording. Woods blamed an error on her part.

Few people believed her. Some in the press made fun of her attempt to demonstrate how she accidentally pressed two recording system buttons, a few feet apart, at the same time. They called it "the Rose Mary stretch."

Fast forward to 2014, when some in Congress are upset the Internal Revenue Service was used to harass some of President Barack Obama's political foes.

Evidence in that case is missing, too. But there has been less skepticism this time, despite the fact this situation is far less believable than Nixon's claim.

Investigators want email messages that may confirm a political conspiracy was involved. Much of what they want was generated by former IRS official Lois Lerner, who used her constitutional right to avoid self-incrimination in refusing to answer questions.

Thousands of Lerner's emails have disappeared. IRS officials say they were destroyed when the hard drive on her computer crashed and backup tapes also were destroyed.

And hard drives on at least six other IRS employees' computers also crashed, also destroying evidence, officials claim.

Where is the outrage over that dodge? Missing, except among a few Republicans and a minority in the press.

One Democrat congressman even apologized to IRS Commissioner John Koskinen, after Republican lawmakers told him the claim about emails destroyed accidentally is not believable.

It is not, and the American people should not accept it — any more than the IRS would allow the average taxpayer to get away with not providing tax records because seven different computers "ate" them and a backup server was set to delete information every six months.

Nixon was criticized justly for claiming that breaking the law was not a crime if a president did it.

Why is the Obama administration being allowed to get away with, in effect, claiming that if a lie comes from it, it should not be treated as a falsehood?

It's no fun being Goliath

MARK SHIELDS

Barely 18 months before Iowa's influential first-in-the-nation 2016 presidential contest, potential presidential candidate and former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton today holds a more commanding position for the nomination than any non-incumbent White House candidate has ever enjoyed, according to every national poll. National surveys continue to name her the first choice of basically seven out of 10 Democratic primary voters to be the party's 2016 nominee.

But more importantly, according to the respected Wall Street Journal-NBC News poll, 55 percent of Americans now rate Clinton "knowledgeable and experienced enough to handle the presidency."

This is a rare political strength. From Republican pollster Bill McInturff, who, with Democratic pollster Peter Hart, conducts this Wall Street Journal-NBC survey, comes this: "Never underestimate how incredibly powerful it is to (be able to) say you're knowledgeable and experienced enough to handle the presidency. To start a race with that is an extraordinary compliment."

Anyone harboring White House ambitions (a group that almost surely includes a majority of U.S. senators) would kill to have Clinton's numbers and standing. But, believe me, inevitability is not a winning campaign strategy. In 1971, I was the political director for the presidential campaign of an exceptional public servant, Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine. He was the strongest challenger in all polls, the only Democrat consistently defeating President Richard Nixon. To discourage other Democratic opponents and to demonstrate Muskie's breadth of appeal, we rolled out an impressive array of public endorsements from dozens of governors, senators, and leading party conservatives and liberals.

In the United States, we no longer deliver milk or bread, and nobody delivers votes. Democrats, admittedly, are not publicly religious, but most party members seem to cherish the Bible story of David and Goliath. Democratic primary voters, as Clinton painfully learned in 2008, regularly reject the powerful, better-known favorite, falling head over heels instead for some previously unknown long shot.

Only twice in more than half a century has a Democratic presidential nominee, in the year preceding the election, been the front-runner for the nomination in the Gallup poll: former Vice President Walter Mondale in 1984 and sitting Vice President Al Gore in 2000. Consider the track record of the first Democratic president since FDR to win two White House terms — Bill Clinton. Just 13 months before he would defeat President George H.W. Bush, Clinton was running fifth among primary candidates, the choice of a thumping 6 percent of Democrats. President Jimmy Carter did not even register in any of the Gallup polls conducted the year before he was nominated and elected. Before they were nominated, Michael Dukakis, George McGovern, John Kerry and Barack Obama were all political "Davids."

There will be, you can bet, at least one 2016 long-shot underdog candidate who captures both headlines and emotions, and excites Democratic primary voters. It's in our DNA: Americans root for the underdog.

For Hillary Clinton, the road ahead is tricky. With only 25 percent of voters seeing the country as "headed in the right direction," there is no popular groundswell for a third Obama term. Clinton must — without being disloyal — credibly establish daylight between herself and the incumbent administration in which, voters will be reminded, she was an important actor.

The strong temptation, understandably when her husband's eight years are widely regarded as "the good ol' days," could be to invoke a "Back to the Future" theme. But American presidential campaigns are ultimately about the future. Yes, Hillary Clinton's position is dominant. But inevitability is never a winning strategy, and it's not fun being Goliath.

OTHER VOICES

The (Cleveland) Plain Dealer, June 22
State Treasurer Josh Mandel, a greater Cleveland Republican, evidently likes to campaign. He traveled from Lyndhurst City Council to the Ohio House of Representatives to state treasurer in relatively short order — then, in 2012, challenged, unsuccessfully, Democrat Sherrod Brown for a Senate seat.

Now it's 2014, and Mandel is being challenged for re-election as state treasurer by state Rep. Connie Pillich, a suburban Cincinnati Democrat.

And Ohioans are supposed to believe it's a complete coincidence that, as the Dayton Daily News revealed, Mandel has become "the first Ohio statewide officeholder to hold (hour-long) 'tele-townhall' meetings with Ohioans." The Daily News reported that Mandel's office hired two teleconference vendors in April for $49,500 each — just under a threshold that would require state Controlling Board approval. The vendors dialed more than a half-million Ohio households; nearly 120,000 people accepted calls. Questions ranged from "bullying, to gasoline prices to consumer scams to pay-to-play fees for high school athletics," The Daily News reported.

Just as well, perhaps, that questions weren't limited to the treasurer's duties. While Mandel isn't the first state treasurer to miss meetings of the State Board of Deposit, which decides where to bank the state's cash, he skipped 14 consecutive meetings early in his tenure — although PolitFact Ohio reported then that, "we don't see evidence that the (treasurer's) office is not functioning properly..."

Regardless of what prompted the town halls, they suggest a lack of regard by Mandel for the taxpayers whose money he is charged with safekeeping and investing. He should desist.

Obama can still make America a lame duck democracy

THOMAS SOWELL

Pundits are pointing to President Barack Obama's recent decline in public opinion polls, and saying that he may now become another "lame duck" president, unable to accomplish much during his final term in office.

That has happened to other presidents. But it is extremely unlikely to happen to this president. There are reasons why other presidents have become impotent during their last years in office. But those reasons do not apply to Barack Obama.

The Constitution of the United States does not give presidents the power to carry out major policy changes without the cooperation of other branches of government. Once the country becomes disenchanted with a president during his second term, Congress has little incentive to cooperate with him — and, once Congress becomes uncooperative, there is little that a president can do on his own.

That is, if he respects the Constitution.

President Obama has demonstrated, time and again, that he has no respect for the Constitution's limitations on his power. Despite his oath of office, to see that the laws are faithfully executed, Barack Obama has unilaterally changed welfare reform laws, by eliminating the work requirement passed by Congress during the Clinton administration.

He has repeatedly and unilaterally changed or waived provisions of the ObamaCare law passed by Congress during his own administration.

President Obama has ordered Border Patrol agents not to carry out provisions of the immigration laws that he does not like. We see the results today in the tens of thousands of illegal immigrants entering the country unimpeded.

President Obama's oath of office obviously means no more to him than his oft-repeated promise that "you can keep your own doctor" under ObamaCare.

Why do we have a Constitution of the United States if a president can ignore it without any consequences?

The Constitution cannot protect our rights if we do not protect the Constitution. Freedom is not free, and the Constitution is just some words on paper if we do not do anything to those who violate it.

What can ordinary citizens do?

Everything! Theirs is the ultimate power of the ballot that can bring down even the most powerful elected official.

The most important thing the voters can do is vote against anyone who violates the Constitution. When someone who has violated the Constitution repeatedly gets re-elected, then the voters are accomplices in the erosion of protection for their own freedom.

Laws without penalties are just suggestions — and suggestions are a pitiful defense against power.

After voters have failed to protect the Constitution, the last-ditch remedy is impeachment. But Barack Obama knows that he is not going to be impeached.

Who wants to provoke a Constitutional crisis and riots in the streets? And, worst of all, end up with Joe Biden as President of the United States? Some cynics long ago referred to Barack Obama's choice of mental lightweight Biden to be his vice president as "impeachment insurance."

With neither the Constitution, nor the voters, nor the threat of impeachment to stop him, Barack Obama has clear sailing to use his powers however he chooses.

Far from seeing his power diminish in his last years, President Obama can extend his power even beyond the end of his administration by appointing federal judges who share his disregard of the Constitution and can enact his far-left agenda into law from the bench, when it cannot be enacted into law by the Congress.

Federal judges with lifetime tenure can make irreversible decisions binding future presidents and future Congresses. If Republicans do not win control of the Senate in this fall's elections, a Senate controlled by Majority Leader Harry Reid can confirm judges who will have the power to extend Barack Obama's agenda and complete the dismantling of Constitutional government.

Barack Obama can, as he said before taking office, fundamentally "change the United States of America." Far from being a lame duck president, Obama can make this a lame duck democracy.

JURY FROM 1A

questioned by detectives on Oct. 27 and Oct. 28 and then was interviewed a third time on Feb. 4.

“Those stories were as different as the colors I printed the summaries in,” Jones said, referring to her chart of the three stories color-coded by interview. “They were lies. They were attempts to avoid responsibility, attempts to blame it on everybody else.”

Jones and later Gamble went on to poke some holes in each of the three stories. Jones questioned how Miller was able to use Bailey’s cell phone when according to his stories he had fled the scene to get away from “the dude” and the girl he had said were also there when Bailey died.

She also questioned why Miller’s blood was not found on the back of the driver’s seat if he had fled as he had told detectives. He had a large gash on the back of his head at the time and Jones said he would have needed time to wipe the blood from it or blood evidence would have been found.

Gamble gave some examples of more holes which caused Miller to change his story. He also called the third story the most ridiculous because Miller will not even let his girlfriend, Patti Colon, drive the Explorer, so why would he allow Bailey to take it and leave him behind.

During Jones’ remarks she reiterated one of the statements Miller had made to investigators — “It’s not that complicated. You don’t have to make it that hard.” Prosecutors used that statement to try to convince the jury the case also is not that complicated.

While Jones noted there was a lot of evidence and exhibits given to the jury, she also offered the reasoning was not to impress them with quantity over quality. Jones said each piece was just a part of the whole puzzle jurors would have to look at in the case. Jurors were given more than 140 exhibits in the case and testimony took more than three full days.

Jones also pointed out there was a reason the prosecutors were not able to offer a witness to the murder or a murder weapon. She said only Miller and Bailey were actually there and it was Miller who not only got rid of the weapon, but also his clothes and other blood-covered evidence to the crime. She compared the description Miller had given of the dude to his own physical appearance and introduced Miller to the jury as actually “dude.”

Jones also said Robert Barrett, who knew Miller mostly from the time they spent together at the county jail, heard the confession of Miller. She pointed out Barrett told the truth and it was “unrefuted.”

Gorby during her statement challenged Barrett’s story, noting he was making a deal with the prosecutor’s office so additional charges would not be pressed against him. She also said she believed most of Barrett’s details about the case came from newspaper accounts of the case and not what he heard Miller say in jail.

As for motive, Jones said it was based around drugs and money to buy drugs.

“The defendant is a heroin addict,” Jones said. “As such he has one primary goal, to feed his addiction. To feed his addiction he needs money — money and or drugs. Matthew Bailey died on Oct. 26 because he didn’t give the defendant what he needed.”

Jones went over some of the other ways Miller attempted to get money during the 24 hours surrounding Bailey’s death. She noted Bailey was Miller’s last chance to get Colon’s money back before he had to meet her at 10 a.m.

Gorby also focused part of her closing argument around the money. She noted Miller took the time to chat with people he went to see or called. He did not demand money from Wanda Bender and Merve and Gayle Hilliard. Gorby also questioned why if Miller was so desperate for money, why he left jewelry on Bailey’s body instead of taking the items to Cashland in Alliance, where he was known to pawn other items.

Gorby challenged that blood evidence in the case was poorly collected without following the recommended protocol on the chemical manufacturers’ own literature. She also argued the items where Bailey’s blood was found, there was only one test performed, but on items where no blood evidence was found multiple tests were done.

She talked about the blood on the boots being found only six inches from the ground on the boots and should have been all over them if Miller bludgeoned Bailey. Gamble later countered it was because Miller’s pantleg may have been covering the top of his boots and then he burned the pants he was wearing. Gorby had claimed there was no evidence of the clothes being burned.

Additionally, Gorby pointed out there was a second pair of boots in the Ford Escape if Miller had wanted to get rid of his blood-stained boots too, but he did not.

She also questioned why investigators did not interview two people they found who looked like the two people Miller had described or shown him photos of the two people they had found to see if he could recognize them. Instead she said they told Miller the two people were “ghosts” who did not exist.

When it came to proving the aggravated murder charge, which meant the jury needs to believe Miller planned the event, Gorby said the prosecution had not proven anything close to a plan. She noted it was a drug deal in a field in the daylight, where hunters were possibly in the area to see what happened. She noted at that time of year it was possible to see the home of Todd Flickinger, who was the first to discover the body.

She pointed out there were more secluded places near Miller’s home in the Butler Mobile Home Park, such as the woods at the back of the property or the swamp to the east. She asked why someone would not choose a gun or another weapon, a murder method which would not lead to them being splattered by blood.

Gamble noted such a method of killing someone is more personal. He also challenged Gorby’s assertion that Miller, a drug addict himself, was not the type of person who would be sent out to deal with those who had drug debts. Gamble questioned if it was more probable for a drug dealer to call a local collections attorney like Geoff Goll of Salem, who could file a collection case against them in county municipal court.

“How ridiculous is that,” Gamble said. “(Drug dealers) go to people who are in debt to them, who are beholden to them.”

Although no murder weapon was found, Gamble speculated it could be a common hammer with a claw in the back for pulling nails. He demonstrated how Miller could have stood over Bailey and swung the hammer down on him and made the two types of marks in Bailey’s head. He also demonstrated how the back of the claw could have caught Miller in the back of the head while he was swinging it, which would explain Miller’s laceration.

Grandstand work

Making up for lost time, construction workers were hard at work Sunday on the new grandstand at the county fairgrounds. The structure that will sit 70 feet farther north on the grounds will be 20 feet shorter at 220 feet in length but five feet higher off the ground and will hold more people than the old structure. Steel erectors from Pappas Construction of Monroe, Tenn., bolted together the steel and laid the treads down on the structure. The grandstand, which is about 40 percent complete, will be ready for the sound systems and landscaping in a couple of weeks. (Salem News photo by Patti Schaeffer)

NEASE FROM 1A

The Ohio Department of Health posted red hazard signs along the creek advising people not to eat the fish caught in the creek. Many fish were deformed.

The EPA said it was not sure how mirex affects people’s health, but it may cause cancer and affect the skin, liver, and nervous and reproductive systems.

Exposure to mirex happens from eating food or touching soil containing the chemical.

Mirex breaks down slowly in the environment and may remain in soil for years, it said. Although mirex is not likely to travel far through the soil and into ground water, it can build up in fish or other organisms that live in contaminated bodies of water.

It can also build up in animals or people who eat contaminated fish

The EPA Superfund, created in December of 1980, is the federal government’s program to clean up the nation’s most polluted hazardous waste sites.

Mirex has not been manufactured in the U.S. since 1978 when it was banned and the Nease site, one of the most polluted in the country, was placed on the Superfund list 31 years ago, in 1983.

Rutgers Organics Corp. acquired the Nease property in 1977 but never operated at the site.

All of the work, which is being done and paid for by Rutgers, is overseen by the EPA and the Ohio EPA.

Rutgers is completing the design of a $22 million cleanup using innovative nanoscale zero-valent iron technology or NZVI that involves the injection of microscopic particles of specially treated iron into the ground water.

The tiny particles chemically clean deep ground water and allows the particles to flow with the ground water while cleaning the underground aquifer as they reach into the smallest cracks in the bedrock under the site.

The company has also provided vapor treatment systems to some nearby homes to prevent potentially harmful vapors from entering the basements.

The rest of the site will be cleaned up using a combination of methods.

The areas known as Ponds 1 and 2 will be cleaned up by mixing a cement-like substance into the ground to solidify any remaining contamination and then covered with a thick plastic sheet and a layer of clean soil.

This cover will prevent rain from soaking through and further spreading the contamination. Other areas will be covered with only clean soil as detailed in the 2008 Record of Decision.

A trench will be installed on the eastern and southern sides of the site to collect shallow ground water, pump it above ground, and treat it to remove contamination.

BANNERS FROM 1A

Salem,” she wrote. “Having a collective opinion about the final design has shown collaboration and cooperation that are needed abilities to leverage shared goals and spur innovative approaches to community projects that are large and small.”

Throughout the many requests for changes, Schwartz kept the designer in mind and in several emails thanked her for the work and time she’s put into the project. He said everybody got a little bit of what they wanted and everybody compromised.

“I think they look really nice. I think they read well,” Grilli said.

The Design Review Board had wanted more emphasis on historic downtown Salem, but Salem Renaissance stressed the banners were to represent the entire city, not just the downtown. Grilli was happy with the modifications. She said banners for the city should portray what the city wants. She said it was important for the city to have a say.

Schwartz had shown Berlin an earlier version of the design which employed the colors red, white and green. Berlin asked for some opinions and requested a special meeting of the Design Review Board members in April to hear their thoughts.

During the special meeting, requests were made by the board and the mayor for changes in the color scheme, from red, white and green, to just red and green, asking that a line going through script Salem to separate the colors be removed and that the words Historic Downtown be placed in larger typeface above the word Salem. The original proposed design included three background colors, with red at the top, then white, then green. Salem Renaissance proposed that orange be used instead of red.

In the end, the colors became orange, white and green, with the same basic design using the dove, sun, trees and script Salem and some compromise on the use of historic downtown Salem on a separate banner.

“This is something everyone can endorse and feel good about,” Grilli said.

Schwartz said the original plan called for 115 banners using a grant of $3,000, but he wasn’t sure if the price may have gone up. He couldn’t give a timetable for when he expects the banners to be ready, but said he expects them to be hung this summer.

He had hoped previously that they could have been hung in time for the Salem Super Cruise, which was this past weekend.

Members of the banner committee besides Schwartz included Lois Mountz, JeanAlice Fehr, Elaine Rousseau Kothera, Jack Kothera, Hope Theiss and Elizabeth Thatcher. mgreier@salemnews.net

Visiting Salem Kiwanis in June was Pastor Salamanca who works with the Guatemalan population of Salem and surrounding areas and is clearly a great asset for the community. He discussed with the club members the City of Hope Missionary project and the proposed building plan for 184 S. Broadway Ave. in Salem. The first floor will be used primarily for training, counseling and meeting areas; and the second floor will be used as a Bible training and worship center and recreation area throughout the week. This area is expected to be ready for use by summer of 2015. The third floor will be used as temporary housing for visiting mission teams and possibly women and children experiencing domestic violence. Shown here are Salem Kiwanians Lee Althouse, Pastor Salamanca and Kiwanian Board Member Omar Munoz.

Also visiting Salem Kiwanis in June was Scott Scheesley, food quality engineer at Freshmark Salem. Freshmark Salem is part of the Massilon, Canton and Salem Triple processing plants which process one of every 20 hams and 5 percent of the bacon sold in North America. One of Salem's largest employers, Freshmark continues to think outside the box with its own water treatment facility on plant grounds and its safety and hygiene policies and developments. Freshmark, Superior and Sugardale are leaders in the industry in food safety.

► The name Kiwanis stems from an American Indian language of the Detroit area, "nunch Kee-wants," which, like many aboriginal terms, had a variety of meanings, including; "We have a good time," "We make a noise," "We share our talents," or "We trade."

► Kiwanis is a world wide service club of volunteers dedicated to changing the world, one child and one community at a time.

► The Salem Club was organized on October 23, 1921. The Salem Club has 27 members.

► The best way to contact the Salem Kiwanis is by email at salemkiwanis@yahoo.com; however, if necessary, you may call 330-332-7748, and leave a message for a return call.

► Or they can see the web site: www.clubrunner.ca/salemkiwanis

► What is the Kiwanis Motto? "We Build." Throughout its history, the Kiwanis name has been synonymous with endeavors that build character, knowledge, commerce, communities, and—through genuine concern for others—hope. We Build in Kiwanis.

West may hit Russia with sector sanctions this week, but Putin overtures on Ukraine could slow penalties

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and its European allies are finalizing a package of sanctions on Russia's key economic sectors that could be levied as early as this week, though the penalties might be delayed because of positive signals from Russian President Vladimir Putin, administration officials and others close to the decision-making said Tuesday.

Penalizing large swaths of the Russian economy, including its lucrative energy industry, would ratchet up the West's punishments against Moscow over its threatening moves in Ukraine. The U.S. and Europe have already sanctioned Russian individuals and entities, including some with close ties to Putin, but have so far stayed away from the broader penalties, in part because of concern from European countries that have close economic ties with Russia.

But with the crisis in Ukraine stretching on, a senior U.S. official said the U.S. and Europe are moving forward on "common sanctions options" that would affect several areas of the Russian economy. A Western diplomat said those options included Russia's energy industry, as well as Moscow's access to world financial markets.

The U.S. and Europe have been eyeing a European Council meeting in Brussels later this week as an opportunity to announce the coordinated sanctions. However, the enthusiasm for new sanctions, particularly among European leaders, appears to have waned in recent days as countries evaluate whether Putin plans to follow through on a series of promises that could ease the crisis, officials said.

The Russian leader acted Tuesday to rescind a parliamentary resolution authorizing him to use the Russian military in Ukraine. He also urged the new Ukrainian government to extend a weeklong cease-fire and called for talks between Ukraine and pro-Russian rebels that are widely believed to be backed by the Kremlin.

Conceding loss of territory, Iraqi prime minister's focus is to defend Baghdad

BAGHDAD (AP) — Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki is ready to concede, at least temporarily, the loss of much of Iraq to Sunni insurgents and is instead deploying the military's best-trained and equipped troops to defend Baghdad, Iraqi officials told The Associated Press Tuesday.

Shiite militias responding to a call to arms by Iraq's top cleric are also focused on protecting the capital and Shiite shrines, while Kurdish fighters have grabbed a long-coveted oil-rich city outside their self-ruled territory, ostensibly to defend it from the al-Qaida breakaway group.

With Iraq's bitterly divided sects focused on self-interests, the situation on the ground is increasingly looking like the fractured state the Americans have hoped to avoid.

"We are facing a new reality and a new Iraq," the top Kurdish leader, Massoud Barzani, told U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry on Tuesday in Irbil, capital of the self-ruled Kurdish region in northern Iraq.

Two weeks after a series of disastrous battlefield setbacks in the north and west, al-Maliki is struggling to devise an effective strategy to repel the relentless advances by militants of the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant, a well-trained and mobile force thought to have some 10,000 fighters inside Iraq. The response by government forces has so far been far short of a counteroffensive, restricted mostly to areas where Shiites are in danger of falling prey to the Sunni extremists or around a major Shiite shrine north of Baghdad.

Ukraine's cease-fire thrown into peril by deadly rebel attack; Putin urges extension

MOSCOW (AP) — The shaky cease-fire in Ukraine was thrown into peril Tuesday when pro-Moscow separatists shot down a Ukrainian military helicopter, killing nine servicemen. Ukrainian President Petro Poroshenko warned he may end the weeklong truce ahead of time. The deadly attack came a day after the rebels vowed to respect the cease-fire, which began last Friday.

Russian President Vladimir Putin, meanwhile, played the peacemaker, urging Ukraine to extend the truce and sit down for talks with the rebels. He also moved to rescind a parliamentary resolution authorizing him to use the Russian military in Ukraine.

Poroshenko declared the cease-fire as part of a plan to end two months of fighting between government troops and pro-Russian insurgents in the east. The violence, which erupted after the Kremlin's lightning annexation of Crimea in March, has left hundreds dead.

The cease-fire has been repeatedly broken by sporadic clashes, and it was violated again Tuesday when rebels used a shoulder-fired missile to down a helicopter in Slovnyans, a key flashpoint in the insurgency.

One editor convicted, one cleared in British phone-hacking scandal at tabloid LONDON (AP) — It was a simple trick — punching in passcodes to listen to messages left on other people's phones.

For years the illegal technique, known as phone hacking, helped Britain's News of the World tabloid get juicy stories about celebrities, politicians and royalty.

But the fallout eventually led to the shutdown of the country's best-selling newspaper, split Rupert Murdoch's powerful media empire and brought a storm of outrage down on the country's rambunctious press.

On Tuesday, the scandal brought a criminal conviction for former editor Andy Coulson on a charge of conspiring to hack phones — and an apology from Prime Minister David Cameron, who employed Coulson as his spin doctor.

Fellow News of the World editor Rebekah Brooks, a Murdoch protege who was the chief executive of his British newspaper operation, was acquitted of all charges, as were her husband and three other defendants.

Panel overturns decision to defrock pastor who presided over gay son's wedding

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A Pennsylvania pastor who broke church law by presiding over his son's same-sex wedding ceremony and then became an outspoken activist for gay rights can return to the pulpit after a United Methodist Church appeals panel on Tuesday overturned a decision to defrock him.

The nine-person panel ordered the church to restore Frank Schaefer's pastoral credentials, saying the jury that convicted him last year erred when fashioning his punishment. He was then transferred to the California conference of the church.

"I've devoted my life to this church, to serving this church, and to be restored and to be able to call myself a reverend again and to speak with this voice means so much to me," an exultant Schaefer told The Associated Press, adding he intends to work for gay rights "with an even stronger voice from within the United Methodist Church."

Judge: No-fly list violates constitutional rights

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The U.S. government offers no adequate method for people to challenge their placement on its no-fly list, a federal judge ruled Tuesday in a case involving 13 Muslims who believe they're on the list.

U.S. District Court Judge Anna Brown found people lack a meaningful way to challenge their placement on the list, and the 13 people who sued the government have been unconstitutionally deprived of their right to fly.

"This should serve as wakeup call to the government," said American Civil Liberties Union attorney Hina Shamsi. "This decision also benefits other people wrongly stuck on the no-fly list because it affords them (an opportunity to challenge) a Kafkaesque bureaucracy."

U.S. Justice Department spokeswoman Dena Iverson said government attorneys were reviewing the decision.

Thirteen people challenged their placement on the list in 2010, including four military veterans.

Initially, Brown said she couldn't rule on the case. In 2012, the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals disagreed and sent the case back to her. Brown ruled in August that the 13 people challenging their presence on the list had a constitutional right to travel and, on Tuesday, found the government violated that right.

"For many," Brown wrote in Tuesday's decision, "international travel is a necessary aspect of liberties sacred to members of a free society."

The judge said placement on the no-fly list turns routine travel into an "odyssey," and some of those on the list have been subjected to detention and interrogation by foreign authorities.

The no-fly list, a well-protected government secret, decides who is barred from flying at U.S. airports, and is shared with ship captains and 22 other countries. The FBI has said the list requires secrecy to protect sensitive investigations and to avoid giving terrorists clues for avoiding detection.

The plaintiffs argued being on the list harms their reputations. Several who filed suit said they have been surrounded at airport security areas, detained and interrogated.

Brown expressed skepticism at the government's arguments in several court hearings in 2013 and earlier this year. U.S. government attorneys cautioned the judge not to engage in "policymaking" were she to rule against them.

The ruling shows Brown heeded that caution. She did not create a new procedure for those on the list to challenge their placement. Instead, Brown said the Department of Homeland Security needs to find a way to disclose to those on the list the unclassified information used to place them there.

Since much of what is used for placement is classified, Brown said the government should provide people on the list with the nature and extent of the classified information, the type of threat they pose to national security, and the ways in which they can respond to the charges.

Her suggestions for an overhaul of the system hewed closely to those prescribed by the 9th Circuit in a separate case involving an Islamic charity.

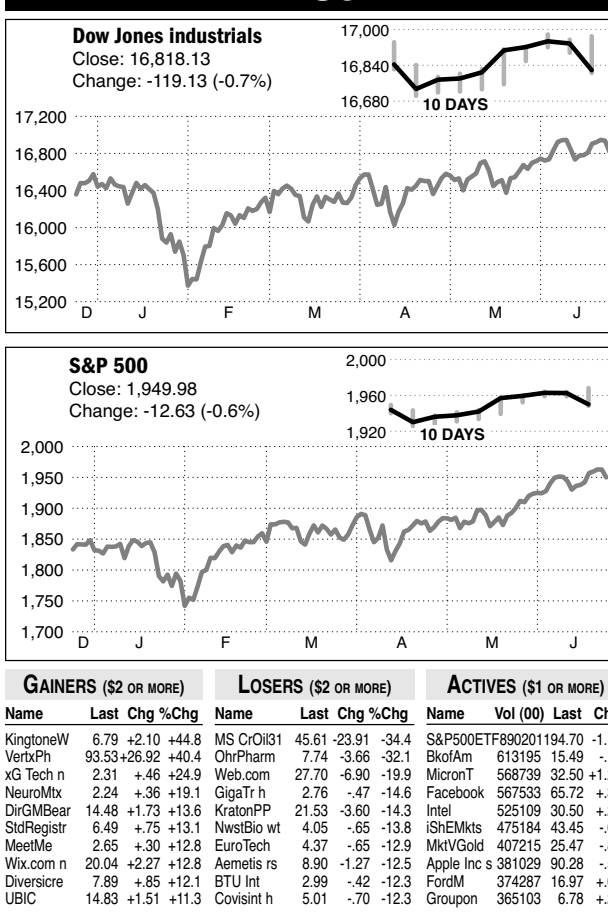

The process "does not provide a meaningful mechanism for travelers who have been denied boarding to correct erroneous information in the government's terrorism databases," Brown ruled.

In January, a California woman successfully challenged her placement on the list, but the ruling did not address the broader constitutional implications.

HOROSCOPE

By HOLIDAY MATHIS
6/25/14

Multitasking Gemini Moon

The clever Gemini moon wants to help you manage multiple endeavors at once. Planning and list making will keep you from getting overwhelmed, but not at first. Initially you may feel even more overwhelmed than you did before you got it all down on paper, but after some thinking, sorting and planning, you'll see your way to the Promised Land.

ARIES (March 21-April 19).

You'll get realistic about whether or not your efforts are bringing you the desired results. Usually, there is more gray area to consider — but not now. It's either working or it's not.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20).

Just because things wind up next to each other doesn't mean they should be compared. It may take a great deal of restraint not to make comparisons, and if you can pass this test, you are superhuman.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21).

There are definitely perks to being you. For one, you don't care too much about what people think right now, and that's part of what makes you so funny. You'll enjoy making people smile.

CANCER (June 22-July 22).

Style risks are part of the fun, and don't be afraid to take this beyond your previous limits. Hair grows back, and you can always change your clothes, so experiment. What do you have to lose?

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22).

Reach out to the people you haven't had a chance to talk to. You've all changed in interesting and positive ways. It's time to share those changes so you can get back in synch.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22).

Everything has a context. That's why so many private moments that were funny, exciting and generally awesome wind up being less so when you try to explain them to someone who wasn't there.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23).

The most powerful person isn't the one who's talking nonstop. It's the one to whom others are talking. When people feel compelled to share with you, you can consider it a sign of respect.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21).

You'll see your town the way a tourist sees it: with great curiosity and a desire to taste the most interesting offerings before you move along to the next place.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21).

It's better to celebrate a flaw than to conceal it. Once you bring attention to the thing you were trying to hide, it no longer can be called a flaw. It transforms into an item of interest.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19).

Even though you recognize that the thing you want is merely a symbol of success and not success itself, you still want it. Symbols are powerful, too.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18).

What you say has a very real power to expand, guide and direct the emotional flow around you. Choose your words carefully and your tone even more carefully.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20).

Unpredicted good fortune will befall you. You'll be rethinking your definition of advantages and disadvantages when what you thought was a disadvantage actually works in your favor.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (June 25).

Your willingness to fail is what leads to a July success of which you (and your loved ones) will be extremely proud. Seize the chance to perform as much as possible so you can work out the kinks. A mutually beneficial business relationship leads to an August windfall. November shows you traveling with a smile. Aries and Pisces people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 30, 21, 11, 17 and 42.

VENUS IN GEMINI:

When Venus slips into Gemini, she's tempted to turn romance into a game. So how do you know you're playing fair at the game of love? Here are a few guidelines for this Venus-in-Gemini transit:

—If you're going to play hard-to-get, let yourself be "gotten" when your suitor has successfully passed your test. If you're not playing hard-to-get but actually are not interested, make that clear, too. Let your actions tell that you're impossible to get if that's the way you really feel. It's better to be upfront than to promote false hope by being wishy-washy or too nice.

—Friendship first. Gemini in Venus lightens up our expectations of love. During this time, connecting and communicating on the little things that happen over the course of a day will be far more satisfying than falling into a passionate, soul-wrenching affair. Romantic partners who put friendship first have the best chance.

Furthermore, the worst thing you could do during this transit is pursue a romance that would infringe on your friendship code — for instance, by flirting with a friend's partner or dating his or her ex!

Freeze that fat!

Heloise

Dear Heloise: I always pour EXCESS COOKING FAT into a glass jar rather than putting it down the sink, so it won't clog drains. What I haven't been able to figure out is how to dispose of the jar once it's full. Do you have any hints? — Barbara V. in Virginia

I do! Keep the jar in the freezer so the grease hardens, then simply place it in the trash on garbage day.

When you collect the fat and grease from cooking certain foods and place it into a glass jar with a lid, first make sure the grease is completely cooled before putting it into the jar and then into the freezer. — Heloise

NO MESS

Dear Heloise: I like cupcakes and muffins, but I hate the mess to clean up afterward. One evening, I was getting ready to mix up a package of muffin mix when I had to move a quart-size, plastic, zipper-top bag. A light bulb went off! I put the mix into the bag, added the wet ingredients, slid it shut and mixed by squeezing and pressing the bag together. I then cut the corner off the bag and squeezed the mix into the muffin cups. I pitched the bag into the garbage and put the muffins into the oven. No mess, no cleanup and no dishes to do. — Joanne F., via email

SWEET RECYCLING

Dear Heloise: This is my favorite hint for tasty, always-available desserts, and it involves recycling. Use a cleaned-out yogurt cup, put several scoops of ice cream or sherbet into it, add some crushed nuts and drizzle chocolate syrup over it. Cover with a piece of plastic wrap, and then a final cover of aluminum foil, and place in the freezer. I usually make four or so at a time. Kids and husbands love them, and they are always ready! — Barbara in Florida

This is such a great hint! If anyone in your family has dietary restrictions, you can personalize the treats! Frozen fruit, graham-cracker crumbs and a little drizzle of honey can make for a healthier dessert, or even using frozen yogurt in place of ice cream. Be creative! — Heloise

CHIP BAG

Dear Heloise: When eating out, I occasionally like to get a small bag of chips with my lunch. I open the bag at the top and then pull the bag apart down the back seam. This gives the chips a larger surface to lie on without having to dump them out, and I can pick up a chip without shoving my hand in the bag. — P.W., via email

CRISPY CRUST

Dear Heloise: I got tired of frozen pizzas with white, limp-bottom crusts. My "thinking cap" was utilized, and I found a simple solution. I now put the baking-sheet pan into the oven while it heats. Then the frozen pizza goes on a hot pan, and the bottom crust bakes beautifully. — Betty B. in Florida

Puzzled by guy who refuses to get naked

DEAR ABBY: I met a guy four months ago. Our relationship is new and pretty casual for the most part. We like each other's company and spend nights together, but when we're intimate, he keeps his clothes on — boxers and all. He is only 26, but he has told me about past relationships, so I know he has had experience.

Over the past two years he has lost almost 100 pounds. He looks great now — healthy and toned. I have seen him get in and out of the shower. (I noticed a little excess skin on his stomach, but not much.) It's really weird. I don't feel comfortable taking my own clothes off when he doesn't.

This isn't exactly a deal breaker for me, as I obviously am attracted to him. I just would like him to be comfortable with me. Should I address this with him, and if so, how? Or should I just leave it be for now? — AWKWARD SITUATION IN GEORGIA

DEAR AWKWARD: It's apparent that he still has body issues having to do with his extreme weight loss. If you know him well enough to spend nights at his house, you should be able to communicate with him about sex on a mature level and tell him the experience would be more satisfying for you if there was less between you when you are in his arms.

DEAR ABBY: My fiancée and I work full time. We are trying to save for our wedding and a deposit for a house. The trouble is, after paying rent, bills and day-to-day expenses, we are left with next to nothing.

I played poker when I was in college, which generated a nice income during my late teens and early 20s. A few months back, I decided to pick it up again and found a group of people who like to play. Since then, I have been playing four hours two or three nights a week, and it has generated an extra monthly income of $1,000 to $1,500. Our finances have improved a lot.

There are nights my fiancée wants me to stay home. She says if I had a part-time job, she would understand why I couldn't stay home on the days she asked. But to me, poker is a part-time job, and it pays more than anything else I could find in this area. I play the same set schedule every week, so she should know what nights I need to go in to "work." What do you say? — ALL-IN IN VIRGINIA

DEAR ALL-IN: You appear to be a skillful card player or a very lucky one. Assuming that the games in which you are participating are legal, I see nothing wrong with what you're doing. Because your fiancée feels lonely when you're not with her, suggest that she do something with friends or take up a hobby. After all, you're doing this for the both of you, aren't you? And this "part-time job" isn't going to be forever.

Weigh pros, cons of brain shunt

Dr. Keith Roach

DEAR DR.

ROACH: About two years ago, my husband, who will turn 79 in June, developed a balance/gait problem. This has affected so many of his interests: golf, hiking, photography and some social events. His walking has deteriorated even further, to an extremely slow, shuffle-type walk. Parkinson's and MS have been ruled out. He had an initial CT scan of the brain, and no tumors were seen.

The following year he was scanned for fluid in the brain; the result was in the "normal" range. Since the neurologist sees the deterioration in his walking, another scan for fluid content will be done next week. After that, a spinal tap is being recommended to determine if the fluid is entering his spinal area. It seems that if this is the case, once the tap is done my husband should have near-normal walking for a day or so. If this happens, it will confirm that the fluid should be drained via a brain shunt. Naturally this is a very scary "solution."

He has some urinary concerns and

Indictment alleges Ohio charter school corruption

COLUMBUS (AP) — A former school superintendent and three other people have been indicted on federal charges alleging they used a charter school in Dayton in a corruption conspiracy. Federal and state officials in Columbus on Tuesday announced a grand jury indictment charging the defendants with conspiracy and with aiding and abetting federal programs bribery. The indictment states that the Arise Academy school operated through 2010 and received at least $10,000 a year in federal funding through the state. The indictment alleges that the school's superintendent, Shane K. Floyd, of Strongsville, and two board members solicited and accepted bribes from a man who operated Global Educational Consultants. That man, Carl L. Robinson, of Durham, North Carolina, also was indicted. There were no home telephone listings available for Floyd and Robinson, nor for Global Educational Consultants in Durham. The indictment alleges that Robinson formed the consulting business in late July 2008 and then quickly secured a consulting contract with Arise that resulted in Arise paying Global $420,919 over 12 months. The indictment says Robinson and Floyd had previously formed another educational consulting business together. The indictment alleges that Robinson paid Floyd thousands of dollars in cash, usually soon after Arise had made payments to Global. Robinson is alleged to have given one board member a trip to Las Vegas and the other money for a school security business she co-owned. The U.S. attorney's office says all four could face prison sentences and the government is seeking the $420,919 in forfeiture. State education department records show that the school is no longer operating. The indictment states it operated from 2008 to 2010.

Best friends Crittenden, Taylor will take the field once again

By CHRIS RAMBO
Staff Writer

COLUMBIANA—Salem senior wide receiver Marcus Crittenden has been best friends with his Quaker teammate line-backer Logan Taylor for as long as he can remember.

When the duo takes the field together at Springfield High School next Friday for the 35th annual Penn-Ohio Stateline Classic, they hope it won't be for the last time.

Crittenden—who will play football at Hiram College this fall—is trying his best to persuade Taylor to join him.

"I've been trying to get Logan to come up and play with me next year," Crittenden laughed. "I think I'm starting to convince him. he said he's going to try and get ahold of the coaches."

For his part, Taylor is non-committal about whether he will try to continue his football career past next Friday's game.

"It's going to be a last minute decision," Taylor said. "I've battled back injuries this year, and a lot of it will depend on how I do Friday and if I feel healthy enough to play. I haven't looked at any other schools."

Crittenden and Taylor—who say they have been friends since kindergarten—have seen their bond grow over the years through football.

"Marcus and I have gotten a lot closer through football these last few years," Taylor said. "Obviously we didn't win as many games as we wanted, but it was a lot of fun playing with him and everybody else on the team."

"I played varsity as a freshman, which was a great experience," Crittenden said, "But at the same time, I missed playing with Logan and the rest of my classmates. We had fun playing together."

Together, Taylor and Crittenden provided an athletic jolt for Quaker teams that struggled to a 3-17 record the last two years with one Northeastern Buckeye Conference win.

During the 2013 season, Taylor—who also saw occasional duty at safety—flew all around the field on his way to a team-high 126 tackles. The Quaker defense gave up 60, 63 and 74 points during one three game stretch, but Taylor was a bright spot.

"It got tough at times," Taylor said. "But I don't think we ever quit on ourselves, which was big. The whole team stayed pretty upbeat."

Crittenden proved to be a versatile asset for the Quakers, using his speed to make an impact at receiver, defensive back and on special teams. He saved his best game for last, racking up 244 yards of total offense and three touchdowns as the Quakers beat archrival West Branch 48-33 for their first conference win since 2011.

"To go out with a game like that was huge," Crittenden said. "I'll remember it forever. We didn't win a lot over the last couple of years, but I learned to not worry about record so much and to still enjoy having fun on the field."

LeBron tells Heat he will be a free agent

MIAMI (AP) — LeBron James delivered his message loud and clear, without actually saying a word.

He's willing to leave Miami, if that's what it will take to win more championships. And what happens next will likely be up to not just the Heat, but Dwyane Wade and Chris Bosh as well.

Through his agent, James informed the Heat on Tuesday that he has decided to opt out of the final two years of his contract, a move that means he becomes a free agent on July 1. He will be able to sign with any team, including Miami, and Heat President Pat Riley said he "fully expected" James to take advantage of his early termination option.

"We look forward to sitting down with LeBron and his representatives and talking about our future together," Riley said.

The Heat have been preparing for this for some time. James, Wade and Bosh all got six-year contracts when they teamed up in Miami in July 2010, the last time free agency was accompanied by the sort of frenzy that will envelop the league over the next few weeks. But each of those deals came with options to leave either this summer or in 2015, in part to allow both the players and the team to have financial flexibility.

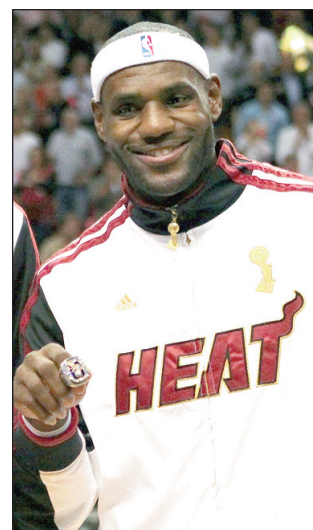

James — who averaged 27.1 points this past season — was owed $42.7 million for the next two seasons, though that seems irrelevant in the sense that he'll be getting plenty of money from the Heat or someone else for years to come. If he stays with Miami, he could sign a deal that would give the team room to maneuver within the structures of the salary cap and luxury-tax threshold.

So could Wade and Bosh, if they choose to opt out as well — and if both do, Miami would potentially have plenty of cash to spend on roster upgrades. Neither has announced their plans, though both have previously said they want to remain in Miami.

"No news here yet," Wade said Tuesday.

James stayed silent as well, with agent Rich Paul being the one who informed the Heat of the four-time NBA MVP's plan. But last week, while still dealing with the sting of losing the NBA Finals to San Antonio, James expressed how enticing the idea of flexibility is to him.

"Being able to have flexibility as a professional, anyone, that's what we all would like," James said last week. "That's in any sport, for a football player, a baseball player, a basketball player, to have flexibility and be able to control your future or your present. I have a position to be able to do that. ... There's a lot of times that you're not in control of your future as a professional."

He's in control now. He turns 30 next season. He might just be entering his prime.

James said last week that he, Wade and Bosh owed it to one another to have a conversation before deciding where to play going forward. It is unclear if those discussions have taken place.

And while James opting out was largely expected, the ripple effect of the move was seen all over the sports world.

The NFL, on its Twitter account, posted a photo of James dunking a football over the crossbar at the stadium his beloved Dallas Cowboys call home, lightheartedly asking him if he wanted to pass some time in a training camp while making his decision. And U.S. Soccer, also in a tweet, said it has a new team for him — then attached a photo of men's national team jersey bearing James' name and No. 6.

Even hockey got into the act.

"You know, you'd be 6-10 on skates," someone posted to the Carolina Hurricanes' Twitter account, in a message to James.

For now, all that seems

Cavaliers contemplate their draft pick options

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Cavaliers have had plenty of practice picking first in the NBA draft.

That doesn't mean they've gotten better at it.

For the second straight year, third time in four years and fourth time since 2003 — when they selected a high school phenom named LeBron James — the Cavs own the No. 1 overall selection. On Thursday night, the Cavs, who only chose new coach David Blatt last week, will once again be the first team on the clock.

They've been lucky. Now, they need to be good.

Cleveland is expected to select either Duke forward Jabari Parker or Kansas forward Andrew Wiggins, considered a pair of can't-miss prospects who could help push the Cavs back to respectability. Either of them could also make their roster more appealing in case James, who opted out of his Miami Heat contract on Tuesday, is thinking about bringing his talents back to his native Ohio after four years — and four straight trips to the finals.

James' decision to hit the free-agent market has Cleveland, and nearly every other NBA team, re-evaluating draft plans. The Cavs are in an interesting predicament: They could overhaul their roster by trading star guard Kyrie Irving or another starter two to create salary-cap space for James and to possibly land another All-Star, but then risk having James break their hearts again and sign elsewhere; They also could make a play for Minnesota's Kevin Love.

One thing is certain, the Cavs have several options at No. 1.

They could work a trade to acquire players or picks. It's possible the Cavs are still intrigued enough with Kansas center Joel Embiid, who recently underwent foot surgery and is expected to be sidelined for six months, of the trade deal, move out of the top spot and select the 7-footer.

Embiid may be raw, but some believe he's also rare, too rare to pass up.

"I still think Joel Embiid, the big guy, is the best prospect in this draft," ESPN analyst Jay Bilas said. "I understand the reticence because of his recent injury, but I would have to have a medical team tell me, 'Don't take this guy, this is a bad medical risk' for me to say no to him."

Cavs general manager David Griffin began receiving calls from teams looking to get their hands on the top pick shortly after Commissioner Adam Silver announced it had fallen in the lottery to Cleveland, a gift sent the club never expected. It will take plenty to pry the choice away from Griffin, who sees it as

Potters get second chance at Penn-Ohio

By CHRIS RAMBO

Staff Writer

EAST LIVERPOOL—With a 5-5 record, East Liverpool may not have had a standout football team last fall, but the Potters did boast a pair of fine two-way players in Zack English and John Miscuk.

On offense, English—in his first year at tailback—had a 1,000 yard rushing season with Miscuk paving the way at fullback. On defense, Miscuk wreaked havoc from his linebacker spot, while English roamed the secondary and finished the year with four interceptions.

The duo will get one last chance to leave their mark in the 35th annual Penn-Ohio Stateline Classic Friday at Springfield High School.

"I wish we would have done better last year, but it was fun playing with Zack," Miscuk said. "He's very talented. He really broke out in his senior year."

English carved a winding path to Friday's game.

As a freshman, he was admittedly not enthusiastic about working out and decided not to play his sophomore year, opting for soccer instead.

"I was really little as a freshman," said the 6-foot-1, 160-pound English. "I didn't really want to lift weights or do any of the extra work I needed to get bigger and stronger."

A year away from the game renewed English's hunger and he was back on the football field as a junior, playing at wideout.

"Playing soccer, I found out that I liked football a lot better," English said. "I started working a lot harder my junior year."

English was converted to tailback for his senior season and blossomed, eclipsing the 1,000 yard mark in the final game of the season against Weirton. His 274 yards in that game is the third highest single-game rushing total in school history.

"The coaches really pushed me hard this year," English said. "The hard work paid off."

Miscuk provided a steady presence during his three years as a starter. Though he never started for a winning team, Miscuk still exits East Liverpool with plenty of memories.

"I just loved going out there every week and competing," Miscuk said. "I loved going after the quarterback the most. There was nothing like blitzing and getting a sack."

Both Miscuk and English agreed that playing Beaver Local stood out more than any other game on the schedule. The two enjoyed looking back at the Potters 20-16 win over the Beavers last fall which snapped a two-game losing streak to their rivals.

"That was the biggest game of the year for us," English said. "They've always been a rival for us. We were fired up to play them. I'll always remember being on defense when we stopped them to win the game."

"The Beaver Local game always had a different feel than the other games," Miscuk said. "The preparation was always intense. They were making a comeback in the fourth quarter of last year's game. I was able to make a couple of key tackles late in the game that helped us out."

Miscuk will continue his football career past Friday night when he plays at Notre Dame College in Cleveland this fall.

"I'm excited," said Miscuk—who will major in accounting. "I'm going there to get my education first, but the football experience should be great too."

Meanwhile, English—who is attending Eastern Gateway Community College—will take the field for the final time on Friday.

"I had a great time playing on the varsity these last two years," English said. "John was a great guy to play with. Playing with him in this game is a good way to go out."

McCutchen has 2 RBIs, Pirates beat Rays

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates came out on top in their latest one-run game.

Andrew McCutchen drove in two runs, Jeff Locke pitched into the eighth inning, and the Pirates beat the Tampa Bay Rays 6-5 on Tuesday night.

The Pirates have the NL's best record (27-18) since May 6, and moved above .500 (39-38) for the first time since starting the season 7-6.

Pittsburgh, which took a 6-1 lead, is 18-15 in games decided by a run.

"You continually try and create separation," Pirates manager Clint Hurdle said. "You need them all. You don't take things for granted. Obviously it's another one-run game for us. We play a bunch of them."

The Pirates have won five straight road series after losing seven in a row.

McCutchen had an RBI single during a three-run third inning that put the Pirates ahead 4-0. The 2013 NL MVP had two RBIs in Pittsburgh's 8-1 win Monday night over the Rays.

Locke (1-1) allowed three runs and eight hits over 7 1-3 innings. His night ended in the eighth when Evan Longoria trimmed the Rays' deficit to 6-3 with a two-run homer.

"I'm just throwing strikes," Locke said. "Challenge them a little more."

Mark Melancon got his 13th save despite giving up Brandon Guyer's two-run single in the ninth that pulled Tampa Bay to 6-5.

Chris Archer (4-5) gave up five runs and seven hits in seven innings for the Rays, who have lost 20 of 28. The right-hander had given up nine runs — four earned — over 40 2-3 innings in his previous seven starts.

"We just tried to stay selectively aggressive in the zone," Hurdle said.

Pirates left fielder Starling Marte left in the fifth inning with concussion-like symptoms after a head-first slide during a failed stolen base attempt. He made contact with Rays second baseman Sean Rodriguez on the play.

Marte was sent to a local hospital for a CT scan.

Gregory Polanco started the first with a walk, stole second and advanced to third on catcher Jose Molina's throwing error, and scored to make it 1-0 on a grounder by McCutchen. Polanco has reached base in all of his 14 games since being recalled from Triple-A Indianapolis on June 10.

Tampa Bay got within 4-1 in the fifth when Logan Forsythe hit a two-out triple, a routine-looking fly ball that Polanco lost and Jose Molina followed with an RBI double. Molina, who has two RBIs in 43 games this season, is 2 for 34 with runners in scoring position.

"There's a lot of good things to draw from tonight, but we can't continue to lose this type of game," Rays manager Joe Maddon said. "The moral victories are not what we're looking for right now. We're looking for the actual victories."

Marte hit a run-scoring single and Neil Walker had a sacrifice fly in the third.

Josh Harrison had a sixth-inning RBI single and Russell Martin hit a solo homer in the eighth.

Walker returned after being on the 15-day disabled list since June 9 because of an appendectomy.

NOTES: Rays SS Yunel Escobar left with a sore right shoulder and will not start Wednesday's game. ... Hurdle should announce Wednesday when RHP Gerrit Cole (right shoulder fatigue) will return to the rotation. Cole threw a simulated game Monday, which lines him up to start this weekend. ... Tampa Bay C Ryan Hanigan was scratched due to neck stiffness. ... Maddon said RHP Jeremy Hellickson (right elbow surgery) will need at least one more minor league start before returning. ... NASCAR driver Aric Almirola took batting practice and gave Maddon a Rays' racing helmet. ... Tampa Bay LHP David Price (5-7) and Pirates RHP Charlie Morton (4-8) are Wednesday's scheduled starters. Price, the subject of trade speculation, said he has thought about the situation and it's the reason why he's been in a "bad mood" recently.

HEAT FROM 1B

certain is James sticking to basketball. What team, that's now up for debate.

He's been with the Heat four seasons, been to the NBA Finals in each of those years, winning two championships and winning more games than any other team over that span. He seems to have largely recovered from the hit his image took when he left Cleveland for Miami in 2010, often saying he's much happier now as a person than he was then.

Plus, his life has changed. He married longtime girlfriend Savannah Brinson last year, and the couple is expecting their third child.

"Players have a right to free agency and when they have these opportunities, the right to explore their options," Riley said. "The last four seasons have been historic and LeBron James, Dwyane Wade, Chris Bosh and Erik Spoelstra have led the Miami Heat to one of the most unprecedented runs in the history of the NBA."

will try to have as much fun as possible on Friday, hoping it won't be the last time they are on the field together, but playing like it might.

"Coming into this year, Logan and I thought it would be our last year together," Crittenden said. "But the possibility we might play in college together is really exciting. I think it would be one of the best experiences I've had."

"It might be the last game I play, it might not," Taylor said. "I just want to go out there and make the most of my opportunity to play on this team."

Notes

• Crittenden—who is not running track at Hiram—was a part of two state-qualifying (2012, 2014) 1600-meter relay teams for the Salem boys track team. Which sport does he prefer?

"I love scoring touchdowns and hitting people," Crittenden said. "But it's hard to beat going to state. In that aspect, I would have to say I like track more."

• Crittenden played on the Quakers last state playoff team as a freshman in 2010. He was a teammate of quarterback Trent Toothman, who played linebacker at Ball State before leaving the team due to knee injuries.

"Obviously going from making the playoffs as a freshman to not getting back again is tough," Crittenden said. "It doesn't get much better playing with an athlete like Toothman. After that season, we thought we might have a chance to get back, but we knew it would be hard to have a team as good as that one."

a chance to speed the team's recovery.

Assuming he hangs onto the choice, Griffin can't afford to miss as badly as the Cavs did a year ago, when the team's surprising selection of UNLV power forward Anthony Bennett at No. 1 backfired. Bennett arrived at training camp out of shape following shoulder surgery and never got his weight or game under control. He missed his first 16 shots, averaged just 4.2 points and 3.0 rebounds in 52 games and became emblematic of the Cavs' season: A huge disappointment.

This time around, the Cavs, who have made similarly risky picks (Tristan Thompson at No. 4 in 2011, Dion Waiters at No.

4 in 2012) may take a safer route.

To Bilas, that would mean Parker, who worked out for Cleveland last week.

"He's NBA ready on the offensive end right now," Bilas said of the 6-foot-8, 240-pounder, who became the first freshman to lead the Blue Devils in scoring and rebounding.

Wiggins, though, may wind up being the better player. A freakish jumper, the 6-8 Wiggins has been projected as this year's top pick since last year's draft ended. In fact, if he had been eligible, Wiggins, whose father Mitchell played in the NBA, would have probably been the No. 1 pick in 2013.

He averaged 17.1 points, 5.9 rebounds and accepted his role in the Jayhawks' system. But Wiggins had a tendency to disappear in big games, most jarringly in the NCAA tournament, when he scored just four points on 1-of-6 shooting as Kansas was eliminated by Stanford.

Bilas said if there's a knock on Wiggins, it's that he may not be ready to carry a team.

"Is he going to be the type of guy who is going to lead your team and be the best player on the floor?" Bilas said. "Does he have the burning desire to do that? I think that's still an open question with him. But athletically, he's the guy. I would take Wiggins if Embiid was out of the picture, but Parker's safer."

The Cavs have choices, now they have to make the right one.
