Salem Historical Society wants to ID old photos

By LARRY SHIELDS

SALEM — At 10 a.m. Wednesday, the Salem Historical Society will offer the first of many opportunities for the community to assist with the identification of old photographs.

"This session will be held as part of the 'History in the Round' initiated recently," David Stratton, director of the Salem Historical Society Museum, said.

The society is in possession of hundreds of photos and the sessions will be held in the Shaffer Library meeting room located at 239 South Lundy Ave.

Anyone interested, of any age, is invited to participate and share their knowledge with these valuable resources.

Stratton explained that for years the Salem Historical Society has received hundreds of photographs of Salem and other topics.

"Often these pictures are not fully identified which requires an effort to determine the view and/or the individuals related to Salem's history," he said.

The inspiration came from Florida resident Phil Shasteen who visits his father, Gordon in Salem, regularly.

A 1967 Salem High School graduate, Phil Shasteen said that two years ago he and his dad took the Salem History Museum tour.

Afterward, Shasteen said he mentioned to one of the guides how impressed they were with displays.

But one thing bugged him.

"I was disappointed that there weren't more old photos of Salem's buildings, events and residents," he said.

"For example, unless I missed them, there were no photos of the Fourth Street School, the Metzger Hotel, the Lape Hotel, or the Ohio Bar and Grill.

"While many of the old buildings are not of historical significance in the traditional sense, they have special meaning to many Salemites."

He then learned the museum has hundreds of photos but not have the manpower to sort through and label them with notes of what they depict and the significance of the photos.

Shasteen explained that after mentioning it to the society, he brought the subject up with others who suggested "having my 89-year-old father and his SHS classmates spend one day or morning (or maybe more) each week to sort through the photos and record the pertinent information."

His father is a lifelong resident of Salem and "between him and his classmates," Shasteen said, "I'm sure the museum would garner priceless information and insight into the significance of the photos."

"All they would need is someone to record their observations."

It was a great idea whose time had come.

But there is also a sense of urgency, Shasteen said.

Wetlands cleanup of bentonite spill nearly complete

By LARRY SHIELDS

Staff Writer

FRANKLIN SQUARE — Cleanup at the bentonite spill in the wetlands just off state Route 558 in Salem Township should be completed in a few days, company officials said Monday.

The Ohio EPA was advised on May 19 there was a problem at the site that is about one mile east of state Route 45.

Two silk containment fences were placed around the area and the EPA issued a regulatory response notice to the responsible party, Access Midstream, of Oklahoma City.

There is no hazard or danger of it getting into the air, the EPA said, and the main concern is damage to the wetland, and wetland habitat.

The company is directionally drilling and laying a gathering pipeline to transport oil and gas products from area wells to larger collection lines for transport out of the area.

Steve Hall, the manager of environmental health and safety for Access Midstream, said the pilot hole was completed and once the pipe is pulled through the established hole the clean up will be finalized.

Explaining that the borepath is determined by right-of-ways obtained from landowners willing to accommodate the line, Hall said the bentonite is being vacuumed out and recycled back into the drilling process.

Once the path is established the boring rig sets in and a couple of passes are made, one of which at the wetland's site, was "inadvertent," Hall said.

A small amount of bentonite clay slurry is used to lubricate the cutting tool head and after the water dries out it cakes and solidifies around the hole, acting as a sealant.

The pipe is currently being "pulled through" Hall said explaining the length under the wetlands is just shy of 2,000 feet and the deepest point in the arc is 100 to 120 feet down.

The total length of the line is 6,400 feet.

Hall said a reamer opens the hole a couple of inches wider than the radius of the pipe and over the length of the borepath there is a "gentle bend."

South county hail storm boosts business for Port

By TOM GIAMBRONI

Staff Writer

EAST LIVERPOOL — Last month's hail storm will mean more business for the Columbiana County Port Authority, at least on a temporary basis.

The port board agreed Monday to lease 11,000 square feet of warehouse space and another 800 square feet of office space to the Banner Supply Co. With locations in Youngstown, Warren, Cleveland and Greensburg, Pa., Banner is a major supplier of roofing, siding, window, sputting, and heating and air conditioning materials.

"They're doing a lot of repair work after the recent hail storm, and this has the potential to turn into something long term," said port authority CEO Tracy Drake.

Company president Richard Abel was contacted afterwards and he said they have several contractors in the southern part of the county who purchase their supplies from them. The contractors are active in repairing roof damage caused by the May 14 storm that rained down hail the size of golf balls in the Calcutta and East Liverpool areas.

Renting warehouse space at the port authority's Louthan property gives Banner a place where contractors can come to

Washingtonville council acts to raise pay for village police

By LARRY SHIELDS

Staff Writer

WASHINGTONVILLE — Council voted unanimously to draft legislation to give the police department raises during Mondays meeting.

Councilman Jim Smith brought the issue up saying it has been tabled for a long time.

Mayor Will Jones said, "We've talked about this for three months" and Fiscal Officer Dale Davis said he needed to begin the process with legislation.

The proposed legislation will increase the starting patrolman wage from $9 to $12.50 per hour; corporal from $9.25 to $13 per hour; sergeant from $9.50 to $13.50 per hour; assistant chief from $10 to $13.75 per hour; and chief from $11 to $14 per hour.

In other police business, the newest member of the department, Gabriel Manner, was sworn into office.

Jones also asked council to consider adding a third seasonal employee to the street department "as long as they don't go over the hours" allocated to the department.

Council agreed and Jones said he would obtain applications for the next meeting. Anyone interested can call 330-427-1526 and leave a message.

Street department Foreman Ed Garrett requested 10 new American flags for the village streets for holidays.

He said they put out between 43 and 45 flags and about 36 are in decent shape while others are torn and frayed.

Davis said there was about $703 in the flag fund and council approved the request. Garrett said the brackets were OK.

Councilman Herman Frank wondered about having the flags donated and Davis said the VFW has supplied poles and Frank said he would contact the VFW post.

In other business, Jones provided council with three estimates to fix the sinkhole at the northwest corner of Union Street and South County Road.

Garrett advised council about it last month, noting it was about four feet long and two- to two-and-a-half feet wide.

At the last meeting, utilities Superintendent Brian Gudat said a 75-foot section of pipe will be needed and placed the preliminary cost at about $1,196 for that and labor at around $1,354.

The quotes, with different features, were $4,312 from Hillcrest Excavating; $9,950 from Hippyle Excavating; and $4,181 from Bartzli Excavating. Council said it will see about obtaining a grant for that repair.

The Boston Street culvert received a $26,560 Ohio Public Works Commission grant approval, Jones said and asked for a council member to contact the Salem engineering firm of Howells and Baird regarding an estimate.

Council President Ramona Custer said she will contact the company. Davis said the state bidding threshold is currently $50,000 "and anything under that you don't have to bid."

Also, in other business, council set a cleanup day for 9 a.m. Saturday, June 21.

Jones said, "I want the village cleaned up" adding they have been passing out warnings for unkempt properties.

He also asked for a list of residences that are in need of mowing; and council also passed the annual resolutions regarding the distribution and formula for the Local Government fund unanimously.

— Police reported a suitcase was found in front of Pondi's at 8:43 a.m. Friday and a man later identified as Michael J. Thornburg was sleeping on the sidewalk outside the restaurant. Thornburg woke up and walked away but left the suitcase behind, which was taken into custody by police. A half hour later police were told that Thornburg was lying on the ground in the C & R Auto parking lot, just north of Pondi's. When asked what he was doing, the 42-year-old Thornburg said he was "just enjoying the sun." Thornburg, of Palmdale, Calif., said he had been drinking with some people while watching the Blackhawks-Kings NHL playoff game at the Pittsburgh Greyhound station. He allowed police to search his bag, and they found some more alcohol and prescription medication. Thornburg said if his cell phone was charged he would call his foreman at the oil and gas company he was going to work for. At this point, an ambulance was summoned and Thornburg agreed to be transported to a local hospital to be examined.

— Police were called to the post office at 9 a.m. Friday in regard to a customer who believed he was having a heart attack. — Terry Thomas, Cedar Street, reported at 9:47 p.m. Sunday his girlfriend's son buried a hole in the carpet but he is saying his friends are responsible and he does not know their names. The officer spoke with the youth, who admitted doing it, and the officer told him not lie.

Thomas returned the security camera and the officers left.

Thieves take 13,000 diapers from nonprofit

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Authorities in North Carolina are searching for whoever made a massive, unauthorized withdrawal from a diaper bank. The Diaper Bank of North Carolina says 13,000 diapers were stolen last weekend. The Durham-based nonprofit provides diapers to struggling families.

Founder and executive director Michelle Old said she went Monday to pick up an order to be distributed to a homeless shelter. She found the order had been strewn across the floor, and various sizes of diapers were missing.

Old said losing the sizes 4 and 5 diapers was especially difficult because babies can stay in them for up to a year and they are hard to keep in stock. "We already struggle and usually are low on those, but they completely took every diaper," Old said.

OUR SIDE

US wastes chance to leverage energy

A major new natural gas contract will do more than keep tens of millions of Chinese warm. It also will thaw relations between their government and Russia. Meanwhile, U.S. officials seem to be doing all they can to limit diplomatic leverage our country can enjoy through energy sales.

Under the contract signed earlier this month, Russia will sell $400 billion worth of gas to China during the next 30 years. That establishes a new tie between the two countries, which have not enjoyed good relations for several decades.

There is virtually nothing U.S. officials can do about that.

Americans have plenty of fossil fuels — and many eager buyers. But the federal government continues to move at a snail's pace to approve seaport terminals needed to export liquefied natural gas. In the West, efforts to export more U.S. coal to Asian markets are being blocked by radical environmentalists.

On the other side of the coin, of course, is the proposed Keystone XL pipeline to bring Canadian oil to this country. President Barack Obama's administration continues to block construction. At some point that could drive the Canadians to sell their oil elsewhere. China has been suggested as a buyer.

For both diplomatic and economic reasons, the Obama administration's policies on energy make no sense. The China-Russia deal should serve as a wake-up call.

Ohio's Unemployment Compensation Trust Fund troubles are an early warning for what many federal government assistance programs face in coming years, if officials do not do a better job of getting their affairs in order.

In Ohio, $1.8 billion was disbursed to more than 350,000 people in need of unemployment compensation last year. But according to Sean Chichelli, of the Ohio Chamber of Commerce, the fund is $1.6 billion in debt, and has been failing since the early 2000s. What this means for everyday folks is that within the next couple of years, the trust fund will have to make up the difference by nearly doubling the amount of money it takes from employers - per employee - from $105 now to more than $200 per year.

These benefits, initially funded by taxes paid to Ohio by employers, are now being subsidized by heavy borrowing from the federal government. Those loans will have to be repaid someday. Employers and other taxpayers will continue to feel the pinch for the foreseeable future.

Among the problems facing the system is the level of fraud; millions of dollars being stolen from the system by reprehensible human beings with no real need of the benefits. Ohio must do a better job of tracking down these thieves and trying to get some of that money back.

But it also must do a better job of managing the system that was supposed to be a safety net for hard-working people who, through their employers, paid into the fund. If even at the state level the administrators of such social welfare programs cannot find a way to make them work without creating more burden than help, what hope do the bloated programs at the federal level have of solving such problems?

"Any state that has a deficit will have to have a tax increase every year until the deficit is paid off," according to Chichelli.

Multiply such increases by 50, and add the exponentially greater federal load, and taxpayers are looking at a grim picture.

Showdown for US Senate seat in Tar Heel country

GEORGE WILL

CHARLOTTE, N.C. -- "Twenty-four times" is Thom Tillis' answer, delivered with a faint flicker of a Cheshire Cat smile. The question was: How many times, that his campaign knows of, has Democratic Sen. Kay Hagan said on camera that under Obamacare, if you like your health insurance, you can keep it? Tillis will be sharing some of her video promises with voters as he seeks to become part of a Republican Senate majority in January 2015.

Tillis will also suggest that Obamacare, which Hagan pluckily says she would vote for again, portends a dismal future of government-run health care akin to that offered in today's alarming VA hospitals, including a troubled one in Durham. There are, however, limits to Hagan's kamikaze loyalty: When Barack Obama visited North Carolina last January, she stayed in Washington.

"If I thought there was a way to get [a Senate Republican majority] without North Carolina, I would not be running," says Tillis.

53. Although he did not complete earning his college degree until he was 37, he had a fulfilling professional life as a partner in PriceWaterhouseCoopers, and then with IBM, before being elected to the state Legislature in 2006, pledging to serve only four terms. In his third term he became only the second Republican speaker of the House in the 20th century.

After the 2008 elections, Democrats controlled the state House of Representatives 68-52. Today Republicans control it 77-43 and they have upset The New York Times' emotional equilibrium by measures such as cutting from 17 to 10 the number of days for early voting (which is 10 more days of early voting than New York has), curtailing unemployment compensation (which had been the most generous in the Southeast), cutting taxes by about $2 billion over five years, expanding school choice, etc. The Times has lamented "the decline of North Carolina." Some decline:

The state has added more than 200,000 jobs in three years. Unemployment has fallen from 10.4 percent in January 2011, then eighth highest in the nation, to 6.2 percent, one of the largest improvements among the states in the last 13 quarters. The Tax Foundation says North Carolina's business-tax climate may go from the nation's seventh worst to the 17th best. In 2013, the Census Bureau estimated that North Carolina was just 48,000 residents behind Michigan, so by now this state probably has replaced Michigan as the ninth most populous state.

Although Tillis has been an enthusiastic enactor and implementer of the conservatism that North Carolinians voted for, the Republican Senate primary elicited a river of lazy journalism about the "Republican civil war" pitting tea party and other conservatives against "establishment" moderates, such as Tillis. Actually, all Republicans are more or less conservative, just as all Democrats are more or less liberal.

The Republicans' supposed civil war is just a manifestation of what has been called "the narcissism of small differences," the phenomenon of people with minor disagreements being more bitter about them than are people with large differences. As novelist Anthony Trollope wrote, "the apostle of Christianity and the infidel can meet without a chance of a quarrel; but it is never safe to bring together two men who differ about a saint or a sorciere."

Hagan, who is in her first term, defeated Elizabeth Dole, whose one term followed Jesse Helms' five terms. Helms, however, never received more than 55 percent of the vote and averaged 53 percent. North Carolina's other Senate seat, currently held by Republican Richard Burr, in his second term, has had seven occupants -- four Republicans and three Democrats -- since Democrat Sam Ervin vacated it at the end of 1974. There are 2.8 million registered Democrats, 2 million Republicans and 1.7 million unaffiliated. In 2008, Obama defeated John McCain 49.7 percent to 49.4 percent. In 2012, North Carolina was Mitt Romney's narrowest victory, 50.5 percent to 48.5 percent.

Including spending by national groups, this will probably be the year's second-most (behind Kentucky) expensive race, drawing upward of $100 million. Americans for Prosperity, supported by Charles and David Koch, has already run $8 million of ads against Hagan, who is toiling to arouse voters' wrath against the brothers from Wichita, of whom many North Carolinians know nothing.

Democrats intervened in the Republican primary, spending millions in attempts to drive Republican voters away from Tillis with ads on television and conservative talk radio questioning his conservative credentials. Now Hagan says his conservatism is extreme. Intellectual whiplash is an occupational hazard of crimson liberals in purple states.

Selling candidates NOT like selling beer

MARK

Light, which in the same year captured a respectable 9.9 percent market share.

Politics are a lot more unforgiving. In 1976, Republican President Gerald Ford won 49 percent of the "market share" and not only lost his job but also was summarily evicted from his place of residence. Not to mention Democrat Al Gore, who in 2000 won 50.27 percent of the two-party vote and was forced to go before the nation and concede to George W. Bush, his competitor who got a smaller "market share."

However, there's a much more important difference between the TV ads for a presidential candidate and those for any popular consumer product. The 2012 campaigns of President Barack Obama and Mitt Romney, between them, bought approximately 1 million TV spots. But totally unlike TV spots for toothpaste or beer, nearly 90 percent of the expensive TV ads created and purchased for both Romney and Obama were negative commercials attacking the opponent.

You will never catch Budweiser buying costly TV time to warn us not to drink Heineken or Corona because they may make you fat, give you bad breath or even a hangover. It's not because the brewers are more noble and high-minded; it's because they know that such attack ads would inevitably hurt the overall beer business.

Politics, with the possible exception of column writing, is the most imitative of art forms. In 2004, according to the Wesleyan Media Project, which keeps track of the data, 55 percent of Democrat John Kerry's TV ads were positive and about his own record, biography or agenda, while Republican George W. Bush's TV ads that year were 72 percent negative, emphasizing the shortcomings and defects of Kerry. Bush won in 2004, and so, too, did Obama in 2012, when his TV ads were slightly more negative than Romney's.

There are only really two ways to run any campaign: the high road or the low road. The high road is when the candidate ideally tells voters what he proposes to do in office, such as: "I believe we can make our public schools great, but it will mean no tax-cuts -- maybe even a small tax increase and a smaller military." The low-road campaign is not about what together we might achieve but instead about how intellectually and morally bankrupt my opponent is. In short, I may not be an Abraham Lincoln or a Franklin Roosevelt, but the other guy is an ethical leper who would steal a hot stove and then go back for the smoke.

This kind of attack politics, as we have learned painfully, does not end on Election Day. It can be found daily on Capitol Hill or along Pennsylvania Avenue. Cooperation and compromise, the lifeblood of a national democracy, become difficult if not impossible. The already-diminished public confidence in our national government and in our collective capacity is further depleted. No parent swells with pride at a child's ambition to make politics her career. Public service, which deserves respect, is mocked.

No, we do not "sell" our political candidates like we sell beer; it's much worse and a lot more harmful.

OTHER

VOICES

The Commercial Appeal, Memphis, Tennessee, on China-Russia natural gas deal:

It's always a mistake to read too much into body language, but in a Financial Times photo of the Russian and Chinese presidents signing a huge 30-year, $400 billion natural gas deal Vladimir Putin looks slightly discomfited while Xi Jinping looks like the proverbial cat that swallowed the canary.

The deal eased pressure on Russia from Western Europe's dependence on Russian gas, which Putin has been willing to wield as a diplomatic weapon in his efforts to get his way in Eastern Europe, a fact surely not lost on the Chinese.

The Chinese, whose booming economy seems to have an inexhaustible demand for energy, are looking for alternative sources of natural gas. Given the up-and-down relations between the Russians and Chinese, it's inconceivable China would allow itself to become wholly dependent on Russian supplies, especially after the European example. Meanwhile, Russia, whose treasury is resource-dependent, must have markets for its gas.

Owing to problems Russia and its gas company, Gazprom, have had with the European market, the Chinese were apparently able to drive a hard bargain, forcing concessions they would not have gotten in normal times. Gazprom has committed to build a $55 billion pipeline to the Chinese border and develop its eastern Siberian gas fields to supply the Chinese.

Putin faces a thorny long-term problem. Russia's population is shrinking, especially in its far East. China's population is growing, desperate for work, and right next door is resource-rich but underpopulated eastern Siberia. Already illegal Chinese immigrants have begun to leak across the border.

There's a saying in Western financial circles: If I owe you $10,000 I don't sleep at night; if I owe you $10 million, you don't sleep at night. Outside observers can only wonder: Who's sleeping more soundly over this deal: Putin or Xi?

"The bentonite slurry is pushed through ... it's primary purpose is it moves solid rock back to the drill rig to keep it clean, and partly to cool it," Hall explained, adding bentonite fancy word for dirt.

He said the Ohio Department of Natural Resources recommends it for building ponds, for a impermeable layer.

"It's basically environmentally sound," he said.

He added, "I know that in the process, they are sucking out all the bentonite" and will make sure there is no additional bentonite there.

Due to the ongoing nature of the incident the EPA and the company is monitoring the cleanup progress.

He said they will be pulling the pipe through for the next couple of days. "We're talked to the contractor and it expects to pull the pipe through in the next few days."

He said when the silk fence is dismantled, the cleanup work will be completed.

"Due to his and his classmates' ages, this is a time-limited opportunity," he noted.

That led to contact with Michele Mickey Weaver and the ball got rolling and the society scheduled the first "History in the Round" for June 4.

Stratton said, "Although registration is not necessary it will help with arrangements if a phone call could be made beforehand to 330-337-8514.

Light refreshments will be provided.

Further information can be obtained by contacting the Society.

Shasteen put the idea a little further down the road.

"I also believe that this process could yield a coffee table book of the most significant photos that could be sold to raise funds; or a web-based catalogue with donation requests imbedded strategically among the photos," he said.

Prizes for the vehicles include a first place trophy, People's Choice Award and Kids' Choice Award. Cigarette World is located in the plaza off of Cunningham Road across from the Walmart entrance, but has an address of 2789 E. State St., Salem.

The Chinese auction of raffle baskets and other items valued up to $100 will include a smoker's basket, a campers' basket containing a four-person tent with two youth sleeping bags, three lottery baskets valued at $50 each donated by the Ohio Lottery Commission, a garden wagon donated by a customer, $50 bocce gift certificates from the Guilford Lake Grille, $50 gift certificates from Tiny Tots Depot in Lisbon, two free hair cuts from Great Clips, free pizza gift certificates from East of Chicago, a beaded with diamonds necklace donated by a customer, three cigar baskets from Romeo & Juliet Cigars, valve covers from Summit Auto and many more gift cards and miscellaneous basket items.

Tickets can be purchased now at the store or during the event, which is held on a Saturday this year instead of Sunday. There's also a 50/50 raffle and mystery grab bags for kids, smokers and miscellaneous for $1 each. There will be balloons for kids and $1 face painting.

Food will be available for purchase, including sloppy joes, hot dogs and root beer floats, with combo specials. A DJ will be provided, courtesy of Salem Sewer and Drain Company, and KLG Ambulance will be on hand with an ambulance for people to explore.

The quest to help the local shelter started with the store's previous manager, Jackie Spencer, who sold chances for a patio set in 2011. The following year, she gathered enough donations from businesses and individuals to do a series of raffles for various gift baskets and started Cruzin' for a Cauze. The event was even bigger last year and each year the business has managed to increase the size of its donation to the Christina House.

Christina House Case Manager Debbie Chaffin said the fundraiser means a lot to the shelter and those who operate it because the grants from the federal government have been decreasing. "Any amount we get is a help to us and we appreciate it," she said.

Burkey said they'll accept any kind of donation that will benefit a woman or child. "It's just a good cause for your community," she said, adding she hopes people will come out and support it.

She offered thanks to store owners David and Karie Newmann and to Spencer for all her assistance this year. "Thanks to her for helping us carry on the tradition," Burkey said.

Store clerk Melissa Jenkins praised Burkey for what she's given to the project — a project she described as "dear to our hearts." When women and their children seek shelter, she said they're scared and the Christina House "gives them a little bit of normal." She said she's proud to be helping the women and children who suffer on a day-to-day basis.

The Christina House is operated through the Christina Center and Catholic Charities, which has an office in Lisbon at (330) 420-0845. The 24-hour crisis lines can be reached at (330) 420-0036 and (330) 420-0037.

LISBON — Center Township trustees are one step away from placing a proposed township zoning plan before voters in the Nov. 4 election.

The trustees held a required public hearing on the plan last week, and since no changes are anticipated they will likely vote to place it on the ballot at their next regular meeting on June 12, according to Trustee Joe Csonka.

He said the hearing was attended by about 30 people, most of whom appeared to oppose the plan. The Morning Journal was unable to attend the meeting.

"No one really brought up a specific issue they wanted changed," Csonka said. "They just said they were against the whole thing."

The 110-page plan creates three zoning districts: residential/agricultural, commercial/industrial and special. Among other things, the plan prohibits outside storage of junked and abandoned vehicles, and disabled and inoperable machinery and equipment in residential/agricultural districts.

A five-member zoning board appointed by trustees would oversee the plan, with a permit fee structure created to help pay for a zoning inspector and related costs.

Csonka, who chaired the meeting, said they tried to come up with a minimalist plan that strikes a balance between protecting residential property owners from a bad neighbor but is not so overly restrictive that it unreasonably interferes with private property rights or interferes with economic development. For example, the plan includes no restrictions on oil and gas development.

"All I told them is I feel sorry for people who keep a nice property and then a jerk moves in next door and keeps his property trashy," Csonka said.

Most of the two-hour meeting was spent dispelling misunderstandings about how the plan would work, he said. For example, one person thought if his home burned down he would be prohibited from rebuilding because his property would be in a residential/agricultural district. Csonka said that is not the case.

Another person who owns a business in what would become a residential/agricultural district wondered what would happen if he sold his business. Csonka said the new owner could seek a variance to continue operating the business at the location and it is unlikely such a request would be denied.

"Why wouldn't five people (on the zoning board) and three trustees want to see it stay in business and continue to employ 15 people?" he said.

Others wanted the zoning board to be directly elected by voters instead of appointed by trustees. "I told them you picked us to represent you, and that's the way government works," Csonka said, adding they can always vote out the trustees if they disagree with their zoning board appointments.

Trial set for man in Rite Aid thefts

By DEANNE JOHNSON

Staff Writer

LISBON — A Youngstown man accused of stealing items from two Rite Aids last summer was arraigned Monday before Judge Mark Frost in Columbiana County Municipal Court.

A June 9 pretrial was set for Frank J. Crone, 35, Youngstown, charged with two counts of theft for allegedly placing $418 in merchandise into a cart and leaving the Lisbon Rite Aid on July 12, 2013 and then taking 18 boxes of Prilosec acid reducer on July 16, 2013 from the East Palestine Rite Aid.

Defiant Leo Moon

The Gemini sun says, "Lighten up," while the Leo moon says, "Stop telling me what to do." The Leo moon can be intensely passionate one minute and silly and playful the next. This mix of energies is a free pass to experiment. Dare to attract sideways glances! Dull energy will be refreshed by novelty, surprise and laughter.

ARIES (March 21-April 19).

You don't like to be led down thought paths, and when you feel like someone is trying too hard to influence you, you resist. You'll get the facts you need to reason out a problem for yourself.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20).

You are on fire with the mystical forces, the same ones that made the stars and wild horses and Ferris wheels. Your sense that anything is possible is absolutely true.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21).

You do not want to do as your friend tells you. You feel you know better, even though you may have no practical experience in the matter. Your resistance is there for a reason on this one.

CANCER (June 22-July 22).

Think of your thoughts as a kind of worship, and every time you think of something, you are paying a kind of homage to that thing. So what are you worshipping that you don't mean to be?

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22).

You're inhabiting this thing you think is your personality, when really, if you take a step back from it, it is just a series of decisions you made. You can agree to them or change them at any point.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22).

As long as you're doing this business of imagining what your life could be, you may as well imagine immensities. The people you admire certainly have! Look where it got them. You can do this, too.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23).

The object of your attention and affection will run. Don't chase. This requires the utmost discipline, but if you can manage to stand still until the other person comes back around, you'll both be in a better place.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21).

You're entitled to change lanes when it's safe for you to do so. You may get a few looks -- people don't like change; it makes them nervous. No matter, you're allowed and should claim your new direction.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21).

If you make a goal of proving yourself, you'll have to do it over and over endlessly. Instead, make a goal of growing. That may also be endless, but you'll unquestioningly be better for it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19).

You are privileged in some way, and because of this privilege, you are obligated to those who are less so. Start as early as you can in this endeavor so you have longer to work on it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18).

You're quite simply not doing what you love often enough. How could you get in more of it? Could you cut back on another activity -- one that doesn't make you nearly as happy?

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20).

Ignore the definitions others give you, and don't define yourself, either. As for your potential, act on the premise that it is unknown and unknowable.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (June 3).

You've been working on yourself inside and out. Improvements have you feeling good, and it will show in all you do. You'll win a contest next month. August heals a relationship and begins a new adventure. You'll get rid of something you've been carrying around with you and feel free in September. Capricorn and Sagittarius people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 5, 10, 1, 36 and 40.

PRE-RETROGRADE

CLEANUP: There's much to get done before the Mercury retrograde at the end of the week. One small task done well will set the tone for a mighty productive week. What's your lucky task?

CANCER: As the sign of domesticity, you often rate yourself based on how clean your house is. Of course, you are not really your home environment, and yet you can't help but identify with it as you give such special care to your surroundings. Your lucky task this week is cleaning all doors and door fixtures. Brightening these items you touch every day will elevate your mood.

LEO: No, you're not vain. Still, when the mirror that reflects your attractive assets also happens to be sparklingly clean, it does something positive to your self-concept. Consider using a homemade glass cleaner -- the Internet is filled with secret recipes that promise a streak-free experience. Also, use newsprint instead of rags for your final shine.

VIRGO: Even though you're the emperor of order, a cleaning-supply aficionado and a neatnik extraordinaire, where you really get the biggest boost for your time this week won't be indoors. The work you do outside will connect you with your earth spirit.

Candle wicks safe

Heloise

Dear Heloise: I bought a CANDLE while on vacation in another state. When I began to burn the candle at home, I discovered that it had a metal wick. Reading the container gave me no information about the wick or what metal it is made of, but I am concerned about lead and remember those types of wicks causing a concern. Should I be worried? -- Natalie B. in Indiana

According to the National Candle Association, you do not need to worry, because the chance that the wick is lead is very unlikely. In 2003, the United States banned lead wicks. However, metal-core wicks are still used at times with certain candles to help the wick stand up. Don't worry, though. The metal in these wicks has either a zinc or a tin core, which is perfectly safe. -- Heloise

DOUBLE DUTY

Dear Heloise: I have a medium-size dog that gets treats on a regular basis. After his treat bag is empty -- the kind with the zip closure -- I place it beside my regular trash bags under the sink. When I get something that smells, I place it in the treat bag before putting it into the garbage. This saves me from having to take out the trash just because it smells bad.

I also use the plastic containers that powdered drinks come in for his water and food when traveling. The lids are the size of a small bowl. -- Susan H. in Kentucky

BATHROOM CLEANER

Dear Heloise: I accidentally spilled some mascara on the bathroom sink. Without any plan, I rubbed some toothpaste on the mascara smear, and presto -- the smear is all gone. -- Susan R. in Florida

Many household hints are discovered by accident, and you have discovered a good one! Not only can the toothpaste clean the sink, but it also can shine the chrome as well. Be sure to use only nongel toothpaste when cleaning! -- Heloise

VACUUM HINTS

Dear Heloise: I keep an old toothbrush with my vacuum. When vacuuming, I use the toothbrush to pull dirt and hair away from the baseboards to where the vacuum can reach it. This is much easier than repeatedly banging the vacuum base against the wall.

I also place the hose nozzle in the exhaust (it's an older vacuum) and blow out all the dust bunnies from under the furniture to where the vacuum can reach it. These simple hints make vacuuming much easier! -- C.C. in New York

STRAIGHT LINE

Dear Heloise: While making curtains for my great-grandson's room, I needed to cut a straight line. I used my dining-room table by opening it, as if to put in the extra leaf. The 1-inch opening provided the line I needed. It worked just like the ones they use at fabric centers. -- Dorothy S. in Texas

Think twice before handicap protests

DEAR ABBY: I suffered a serious accident at work and have endured numerous surgeries, with another on the horizon. Because the injuries are in the cervical and lumbar areas, they are not visible.

Last week, I parked my car in a handicapped spot in the supermarket parking lot. Having a proper tag on my license plate, I didn't think twice about it. As I entered the store, a woman who had parked nearby started shouting at me, saying I shouldn't have parked where I did. I indicated she should read my plate, to which she then replied that I was "phony" for taking advantage of the system. I imagine she thought this because I was walking unaided that day.

Abby, please inform your readers that not all injuries are visible and not to assume that someone is taking advantage because he or she doesn't meet your expectations of how a disabled person "should" appear. -- HURTING IN NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

DEAR HURTING: Gladly. This subject has appeared in my column before. You are correct that not all disabilities are visible. One that comes to mind would be a heart problem that prevents a patient from walking long distances. Another would be multiple sclerosis.

Readers, if you are concerned that someone is gaming the system, rather than confront the person, write down the license number of the car with the handicap plate and inform the Department of Motor Vehicles. If you are correct, the authorities will be interested in that information. And if you are not, you won't have caused someone who already has problems additional distress.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married to "Gilbert" for more than 30 years. We have always managed to resolve our differences in a relatively short time, but this time I'm not too sure.

Our son was married last weekend, and because we're of Celtic heritage, I chose to wear a beautiful dress from Ireland. Because it was short sleeves I brought a shawl to keep warm. When I asked my husband why he never said I looked nice, he replied he didn't know whether I looked nice because he "couldn't see me under that damned blanket!"

I was stunned. I wore the shawl only when I was near the door because it was cold there. I danced with him and several others many times and didn't have it on then. I must have told Gil at least 20 times how handsome he looked, and so did everyone else. The shawl may have been a little big on me because I am only 5 feet tall and weigh 95 pounds. But I didn't think I looked hideous.

I'm hurt over his remark, and we haven't really spoken for several days. What can I do to get past this awful feeling that we're going in opposite directions? -- OFFENDED IN THE EAST

DEAR OFFENDED: A good beginning would be to ask your husband why he made such a mean-spirited remark. He owes you an apology for his tactlessness. If he really hadn't thought you were dressed appropriately for your son's wedding, he should have mentioned it BEFORE you left the house so you could change if you wished. Slapping you afterward wasn't helpful, and your hurt feelings are understandable. But unless you have other reasons for worrying that you might be headed "in opposite directions," don't let this be blown out of proportion.

► STATE TRACK AND FIELD MEET

Columbus is like Parks' second home

By CHRIS RAMBO

Staff Writer

HANOVERTON—Just days from her fourth straight appearance in the state track meet, United senior Allison Parks vividly recalled her first experience.

As a freshman, Parks qualified in the 1600-meter run. She fell behind early and was dead last by the second lap on her way to an 11th-place finish.

"I remember looking at the big stadium and being so intimidated," Parks said. "I felt like I was on the coattails of all the seniors that went down that year. They were like gods to me."

Four years later, things are much different.

Parks is set to make one final trip to Columbus as a seasoned veteran and one of the most decorated runners in school history. She qualified in the 1600 run for the fourth straight year with a second-place finish last week at the Austintown Division II regional. Her time of 5:10.20 is the best in the area this season. Parks is also adding the 800 run after a third-place finish (2:17.39) at the regional meet.

"I feel so comfortable going down there now,

"This year I had the mentality that it's now or never. I never stopped running in the offseason."

ALLISON PARKS,
UNITED SENIOR

Parks said. "After four years I'm used to everything that goes with the state track meet. It feels like my home."

Parks is the only distance runner from Columbiana County to make it to Columbus. Unlike in previous years, she is the only United girls representative. In each of the last three years she also qualified as a member of a relay team.

"It's really sad not going down with any other girls my last year," Parks said. "One of the things I loved most was going down with a relay team. It felt like more of a team atmosphere than when I went to state in cross country. I'm happy to have the boys though."

Parks won't be all alone as teammate Maggie Briceland has acted as her training partner this week and will accompany her to the state meet.

"Maggie has been amazing," Parks said. "She has taken time to help me get ready this week. She has been a great teammate."

Parks' finishes in the 1600 run have gone up steadily each year, from 11th to seventh to fifth. However, there is a new challenge this year, as United has moved up to Division II. Last week's regional time places her towards the middle of the 16-runner field for the state meet.

"I try to stay away from looking at times," Parks said. "I'm much better if I focus on just competing instead of worrying about times. I try and think of the place I want and compete as hard as possible. The times will follow."

While she expected to make another state run in the 1600, the 800 emerged as something of a surprise for Parks. She did not place in the event at regionals last year, but entered this season determined to make it to state in two individual events.

"I was on the podium last year for the 1600 and (at regionals) had to jump right off and run the 800," Parks said. "It opened my eyes at how hard it was to make it in two individual events. This year I had the mentality that it's now or never. I never stopped running in the offseason. This year I ran with the boys a lot in practice and it really pushed me."

After making her last run in Columbus, Parks' focus will shift to preparing for the U.S. Naval Academy, where she hopes to study medicine and join her sister Sierra—a 2011 United graduate and a junior at the academy—on the track team.

"My sister is the captain of the team," Parks said. "It would be awesome to run with her again," Parks said. "You are required to play one sport there and I'm going to give everything I have to making the track team."

Parks comes from a naval family and has bounced around quite often during her life, living everywhere from Virginia (three years) to Italy (three years) to Hawaii (two years). She has at-

Indians' ace back in form

CLEVELAND (AP) — Once Justin Masterson found the strike zone, he stayed there.

And there was little the Red Sox could do about it.

Masterson shook off a rocky start and pitched seven scoreless innings as the Cleveland Indians ended Boston's seven-game winning streak with a 3-2 victory Monday night.

Masterson (3-4) walked four in the first three innings, but got a huge strikeout to escape a bases-loaded threat in the first and settled in to win for the first time in five starts. He allowed just three singles, struck out a season-high 10 and retired 12 of his last 13 batters.

During one stretch from the third to sixth, Masterson threw 25 consecutive strikes.

"I feel like I've probably thrown 25 balls in a row in one game," the affable right-hander said with a laugh. "It felt like we were pounding the zone."

Lonnie Chisenhall hit a two-run single in the first off John Lackey (6-4), and the Indians won their fourth straight.

Xander Bogaerts hit a two-run homer in the Boston eighth off Bryan Shaw to bring the Red Sox to 3-2. But left-hander Marc Rzepczynski retired David Ortiz for the final out in the inning, and Cody Allen worked a 1-2-3 ninth for his fourth save.

Cleveland improved to an AL-best 19-11 at home.

Masterson was two different pitchers against the Red Sox.

Denver Broncos defensive lineman Derek Wolfe, a Beaver Local High School graduate, stretches during team drills on Monday in Englewood, Colo. (AP photo)

Wolfe returns to his true love

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. (AP) — The seizure, the weight loss, the false-start of a comeback. Derek Wolfe endured them all while always keeping one goal in mind: Getting back on the football field.

"That's my life, that's my love," the Broncos defensive lineman said Monday, after the team's latest off-season workout. "It's what I love to do. Take that away from me and I'd have a rough time."

That Wolfe kept football on the front burner through the difficult times is a testament to the third-year veteran's love of the game. This was not, by any means, your typical football injury.

Wolfe, a 2008 graduate of Beaver Local High School, suffered a seizure during the bus ride to the airport for Denver's flight to Kansas City last Nov. 29. He ended up in the hospital for several days, and was put in a medically induced coma while doctors performed procedures to rule out a brain tumor.

Out of danger and released from the hospital a week later, Wolfe hurried back, and was at practice as the Broncos prepared for the AFC championship game against New England.

But he had dropped about 20 pounds and was low on energy. He couldn't get much done, even working on the edges of the defensive line — not the interior, which is where he was used to playing.

"I wasn't feeling right, and I didn't tell anyone I wasn't feeling right," he said. "That came back to bite me. It's kind of my fault. I tried to push it aside because we were playing great and I didn't want to miss out."

He missed the Super Bowl — not such a terrible game to miss, it turns out — and now he's getting ready for the 2014 season, playing on the inside, and back at his ideal weight at around 290 pounds.

"He's a motivated kid," coach John Fox said. "Football's a pretty big part of his life."

The lessons learned from his harrowing weeks on the sideline: "It's taking things in stride, saving my energy for game day," Wolfe said.

Other linemen, including Malik Jackson, have stepped up in Wolfe's absence. There are no guarantees the 2012 second-round draft pick, who has 10 sacks over his first two years, will get his starting job back.

He doesn't shy from the competition. Says he appreciates it, in fact.

Simply being back on the field is the reward that means the most to him right now.

"Something happens and you don't know if you're going to be able to play again," Wolfe said. "To be out here and to feel better than you've ever felt, it's an emotional feeling. It's a happy occasion."

Browns sign Berry

CLEVELAND (AP) —

The Browns are giving

troubled cornerback Aaron

Berry another chance.

The unrestricted free agent signed Monday with Cleveland, his third pro team in four years. Berry, who has had legal issues and injuries, previously played for Detroit and the New York Jets.

Last summer, Berry sustained a season-ending knee injury on the first day of training camp with the Jets. In 2012, he played under Browns coach Mike Pettine, who was New York's defensive coordinator.

Double duty for clippers' Moschella

By KATIE SCHWENDEMAN

Staff Writer

COLUMBIANA — For what is believed to be the first time in Columbiana County history, a coach will lead both the boys and girls varsity basketball teams.

The Board of Education approved by a 4-1 vote Monday giving coach Ron Moschella a one-year contract as the Columbiana boys head coach for the 2014-15 school year.

The boys had four straight losing seasons under the last two coaches.

It is Moschella's success with the girls team that made him a front runner for the position, according to Superintendent Don Mook.

Others who applied were boys junior varsity coach Will Johnston, Lisbon varsity assistant coach Todd Johnson, Crestview freshman boys coach Gerard Grimm and Salem junior varsity boys coach Jake Zatchok.

Mook, along with others in favor of the hiring, said Moschella completely turned the "floundering" girls team around when he was brought on as coach in April 2012, only a few months after he stepped down from a 31-year coaching career in Boardman.

Moschella led the Spartans to 546 wins, making him one of the winningest girls basketball coaches in Ohio history.

Mook said the Clippers won only six games the season before Moschella's hiring and he turned the program around practically overnight.

Columbiana won 21 games in his first season and a school-record 23 wins and a share of the Inter-Tri County League lower tier title this past season.

Ron Moschella

"I believe he will be able to develop the same fundamental skills with a competitive edge for our boys team," Mook said.

His optimism was mirrored by others at the meeting.

"Moschella took the girls team from one of the worst to the league in the first year. I was very excited to hear coach Moschella" was being considered, district parent Kevin Smith told the board before the hiring Monday.

Smith visited a few of the open gyms recently to watch Moschella with the boys.

"They are all varsity and junior varsity players. He is a motivator. Watching him teach these kids was very, very impressive," he said.

Deanna Tringhese, who has one daughter on the team coached by Moschella and another coming into the eighth-grade program, said he is a "very intelligent man and well qualified."

She and Mook's wife, Debbie, agree Moschella has an open-door policy and like the comradery that is fostered among the team.

tended United for the past eight years, but is eager to travel again, citing it as one of the big attractions to a Navy career.

"I miss traveling all the time," Parks said. "It's weird for me to stay in one spot. I like moving around and seeing new cultures and different points of view on life."

For the time being though, she is still representing United. Over her career, Parks has developed a strong attachment to the school district and couldn't think of a better way to go out than a final trip to state.

"I've never been in one place so long my entire life," Parks said. "I just want to say thank you to everyone here at United. Everyone really took me in and made me feel like I was at home. I've had the best coaches and teammates. At the end of the day, I'm really happy I ended up here."

daughter of Don and Debbie Mook, has played under Moschella and said she thinks he will be able to successfully coach the boys team without letting the girls team falter.

In fact, she said the coach assured the team that if he was hired for the position nothing would change for their team.

"I believe Ron Moschella would be a great asset to the boys team," she said.

Kathy Roncone, wife of board member Tony Roncone, also voiced support for the hiring.

Their daughter Lindsey played under Moschella for one year before graduating this year and Mrs. Roncone is looking forward to her son Matt being led by him on the boys team.

"To have him be able to coach my son is a huge blessing. He is a motivator a hard worker. He is just as kind and good with kids as anyone I have ever seen. I feel 100 percent that if anybody could do it, it would be him," she said.

She doesn't believe the shared duties will be a problem, and scheduling shouldn't be a conflict, according to Debbie Mook, who said practices and tournaments are rarely ever at the same time for boys and girls teams.

Moschella made $6,251 on this year's girls head coaching contract and will make the same amount on the one-year boys contract awarded Tuesday, Treasurer Lori Posey said.

Another one-year contract for Moschella to continue leading the girls team will be presented to the board at the June 10 meeting, she added.

Board member Kelly Witmer, whose daughter Emily plays varsity basketball, was the only one who opposed the hiring, although she personally approves of him as coach.

She said the decision was based on the concerns that were shared to her by others in the district which had to do with the precedence being set of one person coaching two different teams.

"I feel Ron is qualified to coach and teach fundamentals... I think he is absolutely capable," she said.

Board members discussed the hiring behind closed doors for nearly an hour before making the decision.

Board member Mark Huston said hiring Moschella seems to be the best decision for the district at this time.

Members of the boys basketball team also attended the meeting but none spoke, and Moschella was not present.

Mook said Moschella will be hiring assistants soon and has already targeted Matt Liggett for a junior varsity position, who was a volunteer assistant under Moschella last year.

He will also be recommending Courtney Schiffler, who played at Michigan State and under Moschella at Boardman. Dave Donnelly, who assisted the girls team season year, is also being considered.

INDIANS

His wildness had him flirting with danger in the first and third innings, but he managed to pitch out of trouble both times. Masterson needed 61 pitches to get the first nine outs, but he struck out the side in the fourth on just nine pitches.

Masterson retired eight in a row before Ortiz singled through Cleveland's shift in the sixth. Masterson then induced A.J. Pierzynski to hit into an inning-ending double play for the second time.

It's been that kind of season for Masterson, who has struggled with his control and has not pitched like the All-Star ace the Indians are counting on.

"In the first three innings he usually runs into some tough spots," manager Terry Francona said. "He kind of flipped it tonight. Boy, did he ever. You looked up in the third inning and thought, OK, we got the lead, but we're going to be in the bullpen early. He got us pretty deep."

Red Sox shortstop Stephen Drew went 0 for 2 with a walk in his season debut. He re-signed with Boston as a free agent last month.

Boston outfielder Grady Sizemore was hitless in four at-bats — he popped up for the final out — in his return to Cleveland. Sizemore was a three-time All-Star in nearly eight seasons with the Indians.

Masterson managed to work in and out of a mess he created for himself in the first. The right-hander gave up a single and two walks before throwing three straight balls to Jonny Gomes. Masterson, though, battled back and fanned Gomes, who took exception with plate umpire Phil Cuzzi's called third strike on a low fastball.

"From 3-0 to 3-3, which is pretty nice," Masterson said.
