Brown will serve as Memorial Day marshal

BROWN

Hubert Brown, a World War II veteran, will lead this year's Salem Memorial Day parade as honorary parade marshal.

Brown was nominated and then selected for the honor by the Salem Memorial and Patriotic Association in recognition of his service to the United States.

Brown was born in West Virginia and had never seen the ocean. But in October, 1942, he enlisted in the Navy and soon discovered what he was in for. After completion of basic, he volunteered for submarine duty. After completing sea trials in the Atlantic he saw action in the Pacific Theater. He was a torpedo man third class aboard the submarine U.S.S. Pampanito. During one patrol, Brown's submarine hit an enemy ship with seven of nine torpedoes launched. He described the exploding enemy ships as "the most spectacular sight I have ever seen."

Numerous times his sub was the target of depth charges. During one such attack his submarine sustained severe damage and had to dive to 600 feet below the surface to evade the enemy.

The submarine, only qualified for a depth of 400 feet, emitted horrific sounds. Brown and the crew thought surely they would be crushed from the ocean's pressure.

Luckily the enemy thought they had destroyed the sub and eventually they were able to surface and return to port where major repairs were completed.

After 40 months of service, Brown was honorably discharged on Christmas 1945. He returned to Salem and worked for Hines Garage.

Brown, along with Richard Zeigler, formed a partnership and operated the Brown and Zeigler's Sohio station at the

U.S. Rep Johnson visits Holiday Inn work site

Tours construction area on Salem's east end with mayor, others

By LARRY SHIELDS
Staff writer

SALEM — Mayor John Berlin said the Holiday Inn Express on the east end of town is not just for the gas and oil industry.

"It's here for the people of Salem" Berlin said.

U.S. Rep. Bill Johnson (R-6) said it's the kind of development that's happening all over his district.

Johnson visited the site along with city officials and developer Rod Herron on Tuesday.

"Up and down state Route 7 and Interstate 77 hotels and restaurant starts are coming up everywhere," Johnson said. "People should take note of companies spending millions on brick and mortar projects."

He said the shale boom and the country's quest for energy independence is driving opportunities and forcing manufacturers to locate adjacent to the affordable resources.

Council closer to returning tap-in authority to Weingart

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

SALEM — City Utilities Superintendent Don Weingart is one step closer to regaining authority to approve water and sewer service applications.

The Utilities Committee of city council agreed Tuesday to recommend returning the approval power to the utilities superintendent or his designee instead of requiring action by the city Utilities Commission.

"It's more to allow the expediting of sewer service and water service taps," Weingart said.

Prior to 2009, the superintendent had the authority to approve tap-ins to existing or future approved water mains both inside and outside the city, with the exception of the Salem-Elkton Water Main. The superintendent also had the power to approve the extension of water and sewer mains within the city.

In 2009, the ordinance was changed to take the authority away from the superintendent and give it to the Utilities Commission, meaning anyone who wanted to get water or sewer service had to make a formal request through a commission meeting. The commission meets once a month. At the time, the city was coming out of the situation with the proposed fire district and Wein-gart said the commission felt a need to have the authority.

At the time, there was a slump in building and construction, but now he said there's an upswing. Projects could get bogged down due to the delay in getting approval for a tap-in. Also, the commission usually relied on the recommendation of the superintendent or assistant superintendent anyway.

Patience thin with girls home

By KEVIN HOWELL
Staff Writer

Patience is growing thin with the Sharon Lynn Home for Girls.

A neighboring resident spoke to trustees Monday night regarding what he called a "real problem" in the area being caused by the residents of the home, citing an increase in violence, sexual assaults and run aways since the home originally opened. He also noted that staff turnover seems extremely high and the facility management disorganized.

Police Chief Steve McDaniel responded that the state operates the facility, which is not locked down. He said that the girls cannot be arrested without cause and that although patrol is increased in the area, a walkthrough of the facility only aggravates the situation.

McDaniel encouraged the resident and others frustrated by the facility to write letters stating their complaints that he can pass on to the home's owners.

McDaniel also warned residents to avoid interaction with the residents of the home. He said to call police immediately if approached by a resident or if a disturbance occurs.

Combining fun and learning at Leetonia Elementary School

Leetonia Elementary kicked off its Right to Read Week on May 12 with an assembly, "A Cat and a Hat and Green Eggs and Ham," featuring Jim Kleefeld. The students were excited and enjoyed Kleefeld's love of Dr. Seuss's books, his humor and magic. Many activities, contests, and prizes were planned for the week. Staff from the Leetonia Public Library will visit to present a summer reading program, as well as to judge the door decorating contest. (Submitted photo)

ALMANAC

Today is Wednesday, May 14, the 134th day of 2014. There are 231 days left in the year. Ten years ago: Britain's Daily Mirror newspaper published a front-page apology after photographs supposedly showing British forces abusing Iraqi prisoners turned out to be fakes. Five years ago: House Speaker Nancy Pelosi accused the CIA of misleading her and other lawmakers about the waterboarding of detainees during the Bush administration, disputing Republican charges that she'd been complicit in its use. One year ago: In an op-ed appearing in The New York Times, Oscar-winning actress Angelina Jolie said she'd undergone a preventive double mastectomy after learning she carried a gene that made it extremely likely she would get breast cancer.

West Branch honors top students in class of 2014

ALLIANCE— West Branch High School held its 24th annual Senior Academic Recognition Banquet Tuesday at the University of Mount Union's Hoover-Price Campus Center.

This year's banquet honored 15 students who are in the top 10 percent of the Class of 2014 along with their parents and a teacher chosen by each honored senior. The seniors selected the educator who most significantly influenced their educational career.

Retired teachers Len and Lynda Slack served as guest speakers. The couple accumulated 75 years of experience at West Branch—Lynda as an elementary and middle school art teacher and Len as a teacher, coach and administrator.

Lynda also held many supplemental positions ranging from cheerleading advisor to student council advisor. She earned her B.A. degree from Mount Union College and her Master of Education degree from Ashland University.

Len started his career teaching science and physics at the high school where he also coached both football and wrestling. He then transitioned into administration where he served as the high school assistant principal, the high school principal, principal at Goshen Center Elementary and served as the district's administrative assistant when he retired. Len earned his undergraduate degree at Mount Union receiving a B.S. and his Master of Education in administration from Kent State University.

Additionally, she sold heroin on Jan. 23, 2013 and oxycodone on June 15, 2012. Sentencing is set for July 25.

John M. Simonds, 51, Main Street, Leetonia, pleaded guilty to two counts of OVI for driving on Aug. 15, 2011 after three previous convictions of OVI in the past 20 years. Sentencing was set for Aug. 1.

Chad E. Ratliff, 42, Darner Road, Lisbon, was found eligible for intervention in lieu of conviction and was sentenced to four years intensive probation for a possession of drugs charge. He had cocaine in his possession on May 22, 2013.

Robert J. Ketchum Jr., 26, Olive Street, Salem, was found eligible for intervention in lieu of conviction and was sentenced to four years intensive probation for receiving stolen property for having a truck belonging to John Zoellers on June 15, 2013.

Ohio drilling tax hike clears panel; House to vote

COLUMBUS (AP) — A contentious proposal increasing taxes on Ohio oil-and-gas drillers — but by less than what Gov. John Kasich wants — narrowly cleared a state House committee Tuesday, after objections from both Democrats and anti-tax Republicans.

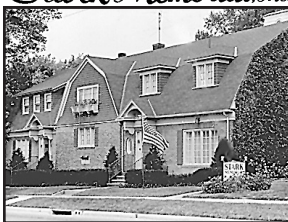

Ways and Means Chairman Jeff McClain conceded that he hadn't met one person during months of meetings who liked everything in the bill. It cleared the 21-member panel by a single vote and heads to the House floor Wednesday.

"I would have some changes to it as well," said vice chairman Gary Scherer, a Circleville Republican. "But when you take the body of work in its entirety, I think this is a bill worthy of passage. It does give the industry some certainty about severance tax liabilities that they will incur moving forward."

The Republican-dominated Legislature has repeatedly turned back Kasich's attempts to raise the tax, amid pushback from anti-tax groups. The governor wanted to see oil-and-gas extraction taxed at 4 percent, a rate he said was still lower than many other states.

Protecting slanted science in the EPA

Science, not politics, guides environmental policy in his administration, President Barack Obama insists. No, it does not.

Obama's blatantly political blocking of the proposed Keystone XL pipeline, in order to placate radical environmentalists, already has made that clear. But the point was reinforced this week.

Taxpayers' best — perhaps only — friends in the executive branch of government are the inspectors general that watch over most federal agencies. They root out waste and fraud and make it known to the public.

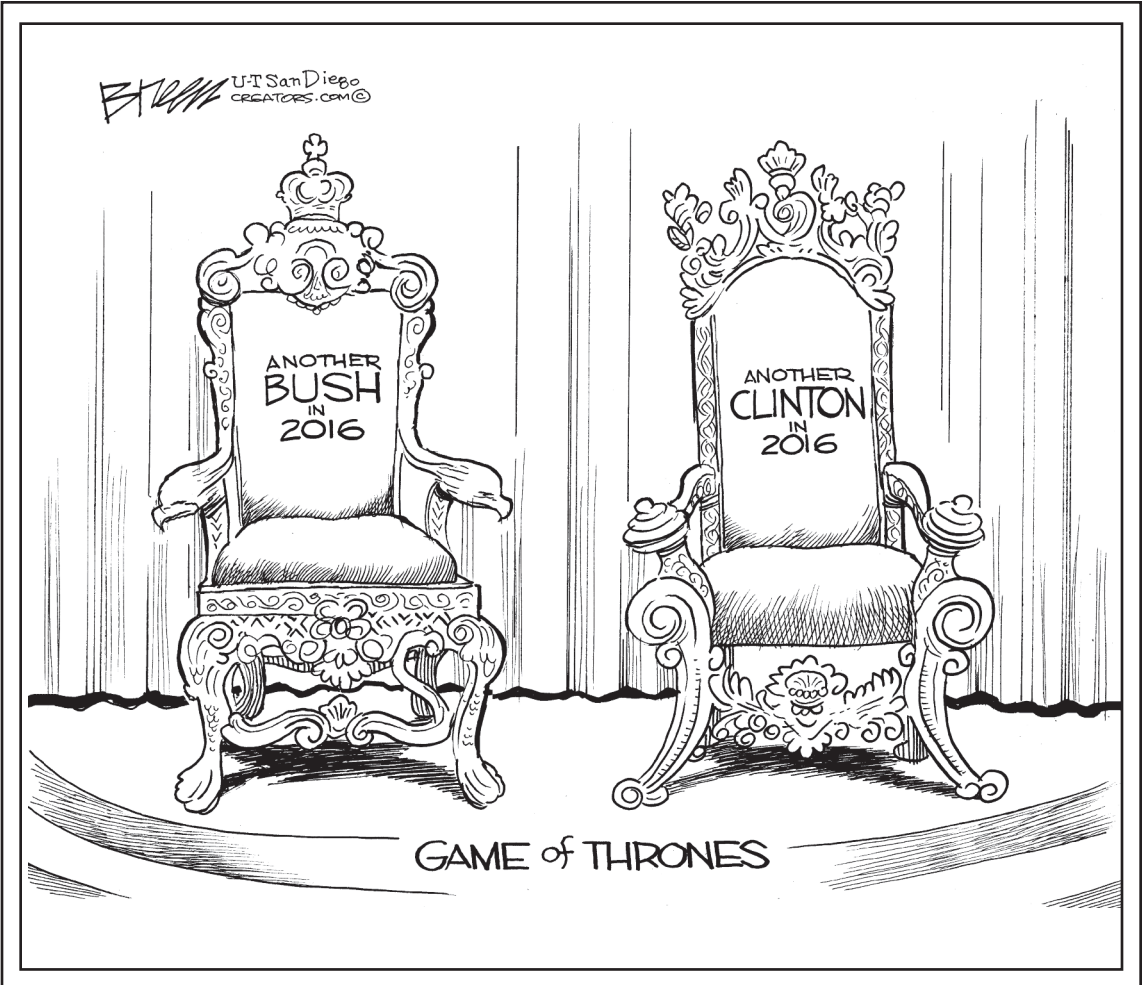

Obama's political operatives in the Environmental Protection Agency have been blocking that process for years. Members of Congress heard about it Wednesday from Patrick Sullivan, who is assistant EPA inspector general for investigations.

The EPA's 10-person Office of Homeland Security is run by Obama's political staff, lawmakers were told. Officials in that office have prevented the inspector general from obtaining information needed in investigations and have forced some EPA employees to sign non-disclosure agreements, Sullivan said.

He complained that the office "has no power whatsoever to tell the Office of Inspector General what it needs to know." Yet precisely that has been happening — again, for years.

Obama's administration has been called the most secretive in history. In addition to blocking access to information, the White House has been known to harass journalists. Now we learn the EPA — with a chief watchdog who knows only what the White House chooses — is, in effect, accountable only to Obama and his political aides.

Slanted, not settled, science has been the EPA's guide. Without an unfettered watchdog at work in the agency, we may have to wait for historians to tell us just how badly Americans have been misled about environmental policy.

Beating dead horse called Benghazi

JULES WITCOVER

After endlessly trying to repeal and replace "Obamacare," the GOP has come up empty-handed. The health-care law appears to be gaining more public acceptance. So congressional Republicans are doing what they can to revive another old hobby horse — Benghazi.

The name of the Libyan city where an American ambassador and three consulate officials were killed in a terrorist raid on Sept. 11, 2012 has become shorthand for what Republicans argue is a continuing political cover-up by the Obama administration. They charge that it continues to hide its incompetence in responding to the attack and attempted deception in the aftermath.

The allegation was first raised, and has been determinedly maintained, by Sens. John McCain and Lindsey Graham and by Rep. Darrell Issa, the latter heading a House investigating committee into the matter. Now House Speaker John Boehner has called for a separate select House committee, a proposal that has only generated more partisan haggling.

Some Democratic congressional leaders are threatening to boycott the proposed committee. House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi has asked for equal party representation on it, but with Boehner holding the House majority, why would he want to grant that?

The impetus for the latest GOP plan for another Benghazi inquiry was the recent release of a White House email written by Obama Deputy National Security Adviser Ben Rhodes to then-UN ambassador Susan Rice, now the national security adviser. Not included in an original batch of White House documents sent to Congress, the email was obtained by the conservative Judicial Watch organization in response to a Freedom of Information Act request.

The dispute grew out of Rice's first televised remarks after the attack, in which she stated that the attack appeared to be triggered by a video disparaging the Muslim prophet Muhammad rather than a planned terrorist operation.

Rhodes' email for Rice indicated its goal was "to underscore that these protests are rooted in an Internet video and not a broader failure of policy." It added that "since we began to see protests in response to this Internet video, the president directed the administration to take a number of steps. His top priority has been the safety and security of all Americans serving abroad."

"Benghazi" quickly became the code word for Republican allegations of inadequate security at the U.S. consulate there. The charge was used against Obama in his 2012 campaign for re-election, and now is being repeated indirectly against then Secretary of State Hillary Clinton as an anticipated presidential candidate in 2016.

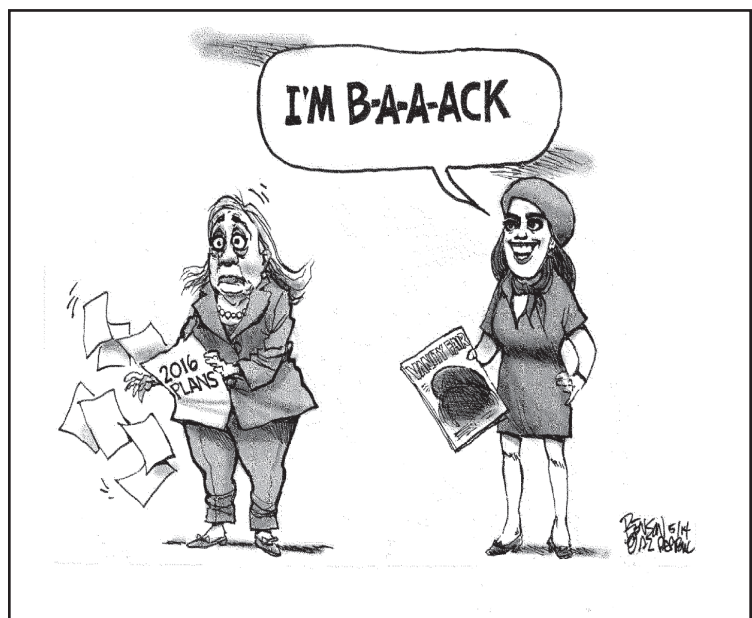

When the Rhodes email became public, Jay Carney, the White House press secretary, said it had not been released with the earlier requested documents because it was "explicitly not about Benghazi but about the general dynamic in the Arab — or in the Muslim world at the time." Questions from White House reporters reflected much skepticism.

While many politicians and arguably most of the country have moved on to other more immediate problems and crises such as a still sluggish domestic economy and a potential new war in Ukraine, crying "Benghazi" seems only the latest case of beating a dead political horse.

Ever since Republicans wailed over "who lost China" and "who lost Vietnam" in the last century, the tactic of flogging political cadavers has been a staple of both parties. During his communist-hunting heyday in the 1950s, Sen. Joseph McCarthy raised hue and cry over the commission of an obscure, suspected Army dentist, Irving Peress, demanding to know "Who promoted Peress?" The country was ludicrously whipped into a frenzy clamor by that particular search for a scapegoat during that infamous red scare.

Playing the "Benghazi card" may well produce the same result by the time the next presidential campaign rolls around, even if Hillary Clinton is actively seeking the Democratic nomination by then or has it locked up, as many in her party seem to believe will happen.

As for playing the same card against Obama to frustrate him for the rest of his second term, there are plenty of other political targets available at home and abroad to keep him on the defensive, as his stalled standing in the polls continues to attest.

OTHER VOICES

The Lima News, May 9

As Michael Davis learned, the laws regarding cell phones are murky at best when it relates to what police can or cannot do involving search and seizure at a crime scene.

Davis said he was doing nothing wrong when he used his cell phone to record a Lima Police Department traffic stop and the arrest of a person on drug charges. Police told him they wanted his cell phone. He refused to turn it over. What happened after that is a matter of opinion, but police ended up with the phone and Davis ended up with a trip to the hospital after a Taser was used on him.

He also has a court date in a few weeks for obstructing justice and resisting arrest, as well as a lesson in the law: What a person "thinks" the law might be can actually be very different from what the law truly is.

In the case of Davis' cell phone, the law currently allows police to confiscate a phone that records video if it possesses evidence of a crime and police reasonably believe the evidence could be lost or destroyed...

It is an issue that eventually will be settled in the courts. We can only hope that when that happens, the courts do not attempt to carve out new laws but instead adhere to the Constitutional principles on which our nation was founded....

Meanwhile, the Lima Police Department did nothing wrong under existing laws in seizing the phone of Davis, and Davis was not wrong to film the incident.

From Canada, an intriguing plan to create urban peace

DIANE DIMOND

Ten minutes on the phone with David Lockett and you realize this is a man of high integrity, compassion and vision. After a lengthy conversation with him, I came away believing if there was ever a man we should follow in the fight against crime, it is David Lockett.

Lockett's business background is in the trucking industry. He also developed and has run a program for nearly 20 years that embraces society's toughest, hard-core juvenile criminals and gives them the tools to turn their lives around. It's called the PACT LifePlan Coaching Program and its guiding principle is the idea that if we help young people avoid a lifetime of crime, everybody wins. Spend a little time giving a kid some skills and a plan for his or her future and the country gets a law-abiding, contributing taxpayer in return. In the long run, it's a lot cheaper than paying for their trip (or trips) through the U.S. justice system.

Youth courts in and around Lockett's native Toronto, Canada, are so impressed by his track record with these kids they automatically funnel the toughest cases his way, sentencing young offenders to a term in this very unique program.

As the PACT staff explains, their approach isn't therapy or counseling; it is coaching kids on how to live a meaningful life. There are specially targeted programs for both young males, the category so often at the center of street crime, and for young women, who are so susceptible to early pregnancy.

For the dedicated PACT coaches it can be a constant, almost 24/7 job to keep track of their wards — meetings, classes, outside projects with the kids, late night phone calls and teary heart-to-heart discussions. The children come from abusive homes or live in foster care situations. Many have been in gangs, have mental health or substance abuse problems. During the year-and-a-half long process, PACT coaches act like the dutiful parents these children never had.

The metaphor, Lockett told me, is simple. "Imagine a kid that's fallen into a deep pit. Many would rush in to pull up the kid. At our program, the coach comes to the edge of the pit and asks, 'Are you ready to figure out where your life should go? What are your goals? How do you plan to achieve them?'" And once the PACT coach gets satisfactory answers, Lockett says, "They go to Home Depot for lumber, nails and a hammer, and toss them down to the kid so they can build a ladder out."

For those who think the problem of youth crime is too widespread to tackle with a simple program, Lockett says he has proof that it really isn't. After much research and consultation with several police departments, the PACT program came to realize that a majority of crimes were being committed by a small group of troubled and forgotten teens.

"One youth court officer told me there were 60 kids in his area who were the worst. Those 60 kids committed 1,000 crimes," Lockett told me. Those under-aged lawbreakers became PACT's target group. "It dawned on me," Lockett said in the passionate tone he uses, "To break the cycle ... just help those 60 kids and your crime rate goes down!"

Now for the best part: Guess how much the PACT program's intensive, one-on-one mentoring costs Canadian taxpayers? Nothing, thanks to Lockett's creative and dogged approach to getting the community involved.

"From the beginning we decided we would not take government money because it just came with so much B.S. attached," Lockett said. "It just wasn't worth it. So I went and gave speeches to 30 Rotary clubs."

That is where PACT got its seed money back in 1995. And so it remains today. A combination of donations from service clubs, local businesses and corporations pays for everything. Right now there are 42 youngsters in the program, and the annual operating budget is about $300,000. That's less than the justice system spends on one teenaged repeat offender. So far, 10,000 teens have graduated from the PACT program. The success rate of all those who enter is near 70 percent.

Lockett, who calls himself a "social entrepreneur," uses tried-and-true business practices to keep his program running in very creative ways. First and foremost, PACT is careful with its money as the staff goes about giving kids hope and teaching them skills that will take them into the future — cooking, gardening, film production and light construction. One Lockett brainchild is a program that teaches kids patching, painting and how to place drywall, all with donated materials from local businesses. PACT then bids — underbids, actually — on local jobs and wins most of them. The money the team earns goes to pay some of the life coaches, salaries of up to $10 an hour for the most experienced teens, and the rest is distributed to the other kids as bonuses.

"Businesses are successful because they make plans, come up with a list of best practices ... and they thrive," Lockett said. "But we don't do that with social problems ... why not?"

Good question. Why don't we come up with concrete plans to creatively break the cycle of poverty and tackle the root issues that lure kids into crime: issues such as feelings of alienation and hopelessness, poor education, drug abuse, gangs and teen pregnancy?

Lockett's ultimate mission sounds lofty. He wants to "bring about urban peace," and he wants to convince communities and businesses that giving to his program is not a donation but an investment. As you might suspect, Lockett has his own wish list for the future.

"I want to build a social franchise and teach others how to create urban peace in the world," he told me. "Think about it. Our model really funds itself, it can be used anywhere and it works."

Any of you out there want to help create urban peace where you live? David Lockett will be glad to tell you how.

POLICE REPORTS

PERRY TWP.

— An officer on patrol at 9:53 p.m. Sunday saw a vehicle had traveled over the retaining wall at Shear's Car Wash and was stuck hanging partially on the wall. A man was behind the wheel. The township officer called Salem Police and remained with the driver until Salem Police arrived. The vehicle was a maroon 1999 Ford minivan registered to a Third Street resident in Salem.

— Possible trespassers were reported in a vacant residence on Plymouth Place at 5:38 p.m. Sunday. Officers located and identified the people, who were relatives of the property owner. The property owner spoke to police by phone and said trespassers had been in the residence without permission and relatives were there to secure the residence. An officer and relative of the owner checked the interior.

— A woman from the 2300 block of North Ellsworth Avenue reported at 5:27 p.m. Sunday that they received a goat from a person allegedly unable to take care of it about three months ago. They had fed it and invested money into the animal's well-being since then. On Sunday, the owner of the goat showed up and took the goat back, allegedly because it was not being cared for properly. She wanted to file a theft report, but was told it's a civil matter since they didn't have any proof of ownership or receipt or agreement for the care, boarding and maintenance of the animal. They were told to file a civil claim in small claims court.

— An East Palestine resident reported at 4:44 p.m. Sunday that he located a motorcycle for sale at a Springdale Street address and believed it was the same bike his father owned and had been parted out or stolen. An officer checked the VIN and titles of both vehicles, which appeared were two separate motorcycles but the same year and model. The man was told to contact an attorney since his problem was with a motorcycle repair shop in Mahoning County.

— Cynthia L. Vernon, 64, of West Pine Lake Road, Salem, was cited for assured clear distance after the van she was driving at 12:38 p.m. Sunday in the 1400 block of U.S. Route 62 struck the rear of a motorcycle driven by James Bevins II, 45, of South 15th Street, Sebring. No injuries were reported.

— A suspicious vehicle was reported at 7:24 p.m. Saturday on the Salem City Board of Education property east of Whinnery Road and south of Merle Road. An officer located a neighborhood parent and child attempting to fly a radio-controlled airplane in the fields. They voluntarily left.

— An officer was flagged down at 4:48 p.m. Saturday in the area of Garfield and Florida Avenue for a dog that had been captured to avoid it being struck by vehicles. The German Shepherd had no tags or identification. Police contacted the humane officer who responded to take custody of the animal for safekeeping.

— No citations were issued after a two-vehicle accident at the intersection of U.S. Route 62 and state Route 14 (Benton Road) at 7:38 a.m. Saturday. The report said Tammy L. Ray, 52, of Randel Road, Hanoverton, and James McCowin, 63, of state Route 9, Salem, were both northbound on U.S. Route 62 approaching the intersection when a black vehicle ran the red light eastbound, causing both drivers to hit their brakes and the McCowin vehicle to strike the rear of the Ray vehicle. They both reported having the green light. The black vehicle left the scene. The damage to both vehicles was minor and no injuries were reported.

— A loud music complaint was reported at 1:32 a.m. Saturday in the 300 block of Stewart Road. An officer made contact with the property owner and the outside music was shut off.

— A woman on Liberty Street reported at 4:29 p.m. Friday that she was receiving calls from a relative's residence, but when the phone is answered, no one speaks and they hang up. She also noted the relative had made a phone harassment complaint against her. She was told a report would be on file regarding the calls.

— A woman from Whinnery Road called police at 2:59 p.m. Friday to respond to a Goshen Road property to report she believed her estranged spouse had their children in the presence of a registered sex offender and wanted them removed from the estranged spouse after being told by her attorney to do so. The alleged offender was not present. Police spoke with the woman and the estranged spouse and told both parties this was a civil matter to be settled by their respective attorneys. The woman was told her options.

— Linda Bowling, 52, of Salem, was taken to Salem Regional Medical Center after a one-vehicle accident at 1:43 p.m. Friday in the 1800 block of South Lincoln Avenue. The report said she was traveling north when she apparently fell asleep causing her vehicle to leave the right side of the road and strike a telephone pole before coming to rest back on the road. Perry Township firefighters assisted in removed her from the vehicle with KLG taking her to the hospital. The incident was under investigation.

SALEM

— A woman on West Middletown Road reported at 5:34 a.m. Tuesday that she had a dispute with an acquaintance that escalated into him damaging her vehicle while it was parked at the rear of a residence on Vine Avenue. All her tires were cut and the driver side door was scratched. An officer explained the process of pursuing charges, but she declined and just wanted the person told to stop all contact.

— A parent from the 400 block of West State Street called at 1:32 a.m. Tuesday to report a missing/runaway juvenile. The parent said the juvenile was aware of a possible probation violation, went to school and never returned home.

— A man from the 700 block of East Fifth Street reported at 9:58 p.m. Monday that he's been out of town for several days and the woman who lives with him was going to ask him to leave the house, which he owns. He was told he has a right to be in his own house. If he wants her to leave, he'll have to evict her. He also showed officers text messages from the woman advising she would call the police on him for threatening her so he would have to leave. He was told his options.

— A man came to the police station at 8:43 p.m. Monday to report a green Dodge van parking illegally in the 400 block of North Howard Avenue. An officer responded and found the van parked in a no parking zone. The owner was found and moved it.

— Police responded to a report of menacing at 7:01 p.m. Monday in Centennial Park off of Oak Street where a woman said a man threw trash at her car, yelled at her and spit towards her car. She said she didn't know him or why he yelled at her. Officers located the man on South Union Avenue and he said the woman started yelling at him and saying vulgar things to him. He said she's done this to him in the past. Both were told to stay away from each other.

— A noise complaint was reported at 6:11 p.m. Monday in the 500 block of Jefferson Avenue. A resident was asked to turn music down.

— A representative of a business at 2586 E. State St. called police at 5:01 p.m. Monday about a shoplifter, saying a female was seen placing items in her purse and then attempting to leave the store. The female was confronted and emptied her purse and $10 worth of merchandise was found and recovered. She then left in a green minivan. It was unknown if she had any other stolen items on her. The business doesn't want her returning, but officers were unable to find her.

— A woman on Newgarden Avenue reported at 4:29 p.m. Monday that she split up with her boyfriend in January and has changed her phone number several times and asked him to stop contacting her, but he continues to contact her. He was actively sending text messages to her cell phone as officers were speaking with her. She was told her options. An officer attempted to call the suspect but ended up leaving a message telling him criminal charges could result if he does not stop contacting her.

HOME

FROM 1A

The home houses up to 16 girls at any given time. The police department has responded to the home 16 times since the beginning of April for cases ranging from sexual offenses and assault to criminal damaging and theft. Officers have recently made arrests at the home following a large brawl outside the facility and after three residents allegedly stole items from a neighboring building.

Salem businesses can file taxes through state gateway

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

SALEM — The city income tax department is reminding city businesses they can file their various tax paperwork electronically through the Ohio Business Gateway under business at www.tax.ohio.gov.

City Treasurer John Conrad talked about the Ohio Business Gateway at a recent city council meeting after it came to the department's attention that some businesses were saying they couldn't file electronically.

According to city Income Tax Administrator Fred Pamer, businesses have had that option since 2005 for their annual tax returns, business profit tax return, withholding taxes (quarterly or monthly), requests to file extensions and estimated tax payments.

He said he's noticed more businesses taking advantage of the electronic filing, noting that on one day, the city received 82 filings from businesses through the Ohio Business Gateway. He said a lot of businesses are probably already aware of the gateway, but they wanted to put the information out there.

Pamer explained that a business must contact the city income tax department to register as a gateway filer and register with the gateway. He said any business anywhere can do that, noting that the headquarters for some businesses who have to file in the city aren't necessarily located in the city.

He said businesses should go to the Ohio Income Tax website and just follow the instructions and make sure they're eligible.

Councilwoman Cyndi Baronzzi Dickey had asked if there was any option for individuals to file their city income tax electronically, with city Auditor Betty Brothers explaining that they did look into that but it would not have been cost effective. Pamer said it would have cost $15,000 to start up and there would have been a yearly maintenance fee of $5,000 a year. He said there would not have been enough usage to justify the expense.

He did note that residents with a simple return can go to the city website at www.cityofsalemohio.org for online tax preparation for their city income tax — they just can't file it electronically. The tax is calculated for them and they just have to print it out, attach the W-2 and file the return by mailing it or dropping it off.

The city income tax department has several forms available on the city website, including estimated tax payment forms, employers municipal withholding forms, tax forms and registration forms for individuals, businesses and contractors, along with a section for frequently asked question and instructions.

Conrad said people can just come to the income tax office located on the second floor of city hall for help, praising the staff he inherited from former treasurer Bob Tullis.

"They bend over backwards to help people," he said.

To reach the income tax department, call 330-332-4241 and select option 2. mgreier@salemnews.net

New Waterford council looks at garbage pick-up options

By LARRY SHIELDS
Staff Writer

NEW WATERFORD — Council will study a proposed change to garbage pick ups in the village.

Solicitor Walter Newton said a representative from the CCH Solid Waste District would be willing to make a presentation on a curbside recycling program and trash collection.

The village has three recycling dumpsters and Councilwoman Doris Ogle said they are full "all the time."

The village also currently has eight companies collecting trash and Mayor Shane Patrone and a couple of council members complained about the big trucks tearing up the village streets.

Village Administrator Fred Fink said all the trucks are full-sized.

As far as limiting the number of trucks, truck size and pick-up hours, Newton said the licensing, restricted hours and insurance requirements required study.

He suggested holding a public hearing to give service providers a chance to come in "so you can decide which way you want to go."

He said Leetonia discussed the idea years ago and decided against regulating trash haulers.

Newton said, "I think with the first bidding you're always worried about the big guys coming in and knocking everyone out with a low bid" and later raising it.

Patrone said, "There are some options with that" and Councilman Tom Cresanto asked about how it would be paid.

Patrone said they have different rates and explained the big thing is limiting the truck size and the hours of pick-ups so they don't interfere with traffic or school bus operations.

Patrone said there are eight or nine trucks a week.

"Why not two or three?" Or, council could look at the one carrier bid option.

If it saves residents money, "including us," Patrone said, then council can adopt the opt-out program. "If not we'll look at the truck size."

He added, "I think it would be a good thing," noting that if they have a large group of people they can get a better rate.

"This is something that's been an issue for years," he said, "you're (garbage trucks) killing our roads ... they may not like that ... they're flying around our roads in these big trucks."

Fink said trucks come from other communities and may be full by the time they arrive in New Waterford.

"So, we'll start the process," Patrone said and the representative from the CCH can address the recycling issue.

In other business, council voted 5-0, with Councilman Ken Biddle an excused absence, to say the Lord's Prayer before council meetings.

Patrone said a recent U.S. Supreme Court said a ceremonial prayer was acceptable as part of the opening of a public meeting. Patrone said they didn't want to exclude anyone and if a member of the public objected or wanted another prayer they are welcome to "come to council."

Cresanto made the motion that from "this day forward" an opening prayer would be said.

Also, Fink said he received the Amish buggy warning signs and expected to begin installing them soon.

The village chip and seal program is scheduled to begin on July 31 on Creek, Allendale and Hatcher roads while two layers will be placed on the parking lot at the plant using No. 8 limestone.

The village cleanup is scheduled for May 19 through the 26 and Patrone said there is no grant money available through the Emergency Management Agency for a community building generator.

A generator had proposed so the building could become an emergency warming center in the winter.

"I like to see government work at the speed of business," Utilities Assistant Superintendent Matt Hoopes said.

During their meeting last month, the commission agreed to request that the ordinance be changed back, giving the power to the superintendent instead of the commission as a way to keep projects moving. The policy change was being recommended to expedite the process for applications where water mains and sanitary sewer mains have already been installed by the developer or are already available.

Councilwoman Cyndi Baronzzi Dickey, a member of the committee, asked why the change was made in the first place. Weingart said he couldn't answer for what was in somebody's mind, but he felt it may have been because of the heated debate over the fire district issue, the commission wanted to slow down anything that could have an effect on the department's operation.

She also asked if a person not happy with his decision has recourse. He said they would still have the ability to take an appeal to the Utilities Commission. Any applications for extension of water mains or sewer mains outside the city remain under the purview of the Utilities Committee and city council.

She also asked about use of the Elkton Federal Prison Water Main. Weingart explained that they've begun using part of the line to extend water to the Columbiana County jail and other facilities near County Home Road. He explained that most of the 20-inch line is unused because there wouldn't be enough users along the way to keep the water from getting old since it's such a large line.

The amendment will now fall before city council.

Columbiana forced to change baseball coach

By KATIE SCHWENDEMAN
Staff Writer

COLUMBIANA — A man brought on by the Columbiana School District as a head baseball coach in December is no longer part of the program, and $4,000 is needed from the general fund to cover “over-promised” fund-raising efforts for new uniforms.

Superintendent Don Mook confirmed Tuesday that Kyle Moore opted to leave the coaching position after he was told he could not fully coach until he completed his credentials, which he never did.

Moore’s contract was approved pending verification of credentials. Because of that, he was never officially working on a contract and was not fired, Mook explained.

It was the first coaching position he held for any district, and Mook said he was initially chosen because of his college baseball background and knowledge of the game.

Mook said he met personally with Moore at the end of March and advised him at that time that he had until April 15 to complete his credentials and until then could not do any formal coaching.

“We hire people with the intent they are going to complete their credentials. He elected not to and quit coming,” he said. Following the March meeting the coaching was split between Brian Dickens and Larry Stacey. Stacey has since moved over to coach the junior varsity team and Dickens remains on as head coach of the varsity team, which has a record of 3-13 so far this season, winning three of their last six games.

The varsity team is playing in its first tournament today against Lisbon.

During the regular Board of Education meeting Tuesday Mook said $4,032.59 was needed from the general fund for the baseball fund-raiser fund to pay for the new uniforms purchased on credit earlier in the year.

“The dollars were expected to come in through fund raising. Now we do not have money to pay for these,” he said.

After the meeting he said Moore had said he would be able to secure some of the funding, but it never “came to fruition.”

Fund-raising is shared between the coaching staff who work together with the booster clubs. The $4,000 advanced from the general fund and must be paid back by the Diamond Club.

In other business, Mook announced Boak and Sons is expected to start working on the new roof over South Side Middle School at the end of this month or the beginning of June. The company is running slightly behind due to the weather but anticipates the roof will still be finished before the start of the next school year.

The board approved:

— A resolution accepting students from any Ohio school district to attend classes in the Columbiana district under the inter-district open enrollment policy for the 2014-15 school year.

— One-year contracts for 15 certified people and a continuing contract for teacher Melanie Strohecker, effective immediately.

— One-year full-time contracts for Jan Goehring and Kristy Cyrus and a one-year part-time contract for Nancy Bacon.

— Jeff Jackson as middle school math teacher for the 2014-15 school year, and Neely Jack as substitute support staff and Pam Shriver as substitute teacher.

— One-year supplemental contracts for the 2013-14 school year for Holly Ferguson, Saturday school monitor and director, high school musical, and Neal Chiprean director and musician, high school musical. Ferguson received $842 and Chiprean $200 for their contracts for the high school musical.

— The resignation of Neal Chiprean, effective at the end of this school year. Mook said Chiprean left the position to pursue a master’s degree in music.

— Musical contracts for the 2013-14 school year were also awarded to Alison Morris ($200), Eric Bable, Jackie Mortimer, Bill Richter Roger Lewis, Matthew Watkins, Scott Miller and Dan Paterson, who received $105.25 each.

— Tracee Stinedorf as Destination Imagination volunteer and non-renewal of 10 long-term substitute teachers.

— The updated five-year financial forecast, which had minimal changes since it was originally drafted in October, according to Treasurer Lori Posey. No deficits were projected until 2017 and 2018, when the district is anticipated to be over revenue by $80,000 and then $316,000, although the overall cash balance will remain in the black, with $2.8 million projected for 2018, down from $3.2 million projected for 2016, the highest of the five years beginning with 2014.

Lisbon school board plans town hall meetings starting in fall

By TOM GIAMBRONI
Staff Writer

LISBON — Can we talk?

The Lisbon school board wants to do just that by hosting a series of town hall meetings starting this fall to seek public input about the direction of the district as part of efforts to address financial problems looming on the horizon.

“We’re interested ... in what the people really have to say,” said board President Jim Smith, speaking at Tuesday’s meeting. “It’s really up to the people in the district, and not just parents, where we go in this district.”

Smith said the district’s deficit spending situation is only one of the reasons for the meetings. The board also wants to hear what the public has to say about moving the fifth grade from McKinley Elementary to the middle school. Superintendent Don Thompson made the suggestion in March as way to save money and improve the academic performance of fifth grade students, but he is retiring June 30.

The board decided against acting immediately on Thompson’s suggestion. “We thought it was way too late in the year to begin that conversation” and decided to make the possible fifth grade realignment part of the town hall discussions, Smith said, adding it only made sense to do so after Joe Siefke officially replaces Thompson as superintendent.

Earlier in the meeting, Treasurer Cindy Shultz delivered a gloomy five-year financial forecast. School treasurers are required to prepare forecasts every spring and fall, and Shultz reported that district spending will have exceeded revenue for the third consecutive year.

According to the report, district spending of $8.87 million is expected to exceed revenue by $709,594 for the 2014 school year, which ends June 30. The only reason the district will not end the school year with a budget deficit is because of the $3.2 million cash balance carried over from the 2013 school year.

This year’s deficit spending will reduce the balance to $2.5 million, and Shultz warned if this continues at the current pace the cash balance — which stood at $3.8 million as recently as 2011 — will disappear sometime during the 2017 school year.

The board has done its part, reducing spending by nearly $800,000 since 2011, but Shultz said other factors are continuing to work against them. For instance, enrollment continues to drop by about 30 students per year, while the number of students coming to Lisbon through open enrollment remains flat. This is important because state funding is based mostly on enrollment, with $5,700 in state aid received for each student.

State funding accounts for 60 percent of Lisbon’s revenue, and the district is the only one in Columbiana County not to receive any additional state money during the current two-year state budget.

Meanwhile, revenue generated by local property taxes, which accounts for 19 percent of the district’s funds, increased by only $24,000 this year, to $1.36 million.

Shultz was pleased spending increased by only 2.6 percent this year, given the jump in heating bills due so the harsh winter and other increases beyond their control. “If we could just see a 3 percent increase in revenue we’d be able to break even,” she said.

“Tough decisions are on the horizon, as you are well aware,” Thompson told the board.

Chrysler dedicates transmission plant

TIPTON, Ind. (AP) — Chrysler’s Tipton Transmission Plant, a sprawling factory seven years in the making, was dedicated Tuesday during an event that celebrated the promise of 850 jobs.

“Finally!” Tipton Mayor Don Havens exclaimed, summing up the collective feeling of the community and its workers after watching other employers emerge for the plant site along U.S. 31 south of Kokomo and then disappear.

The plant, which currently employs 200 workers transferred from Chrysler’s four other plants in the Kokomo area, will build the automaker’s fuel-efficient, nine-speed transmission. When it reaches full capacity, forecast for next year, it is expected to employ 850 workers and ship about 800,000 finished transmissions to Toledo, Ohio, for the Jeep Cherokee and to Sterling Heights, Michigan, for the Chrysler 200. It also will supply

FIAT plants in Italy, Turkey, Brazil and China.

“This opening has been a long time coming,” said. “In fact seven years ago and two false starts. But now that it is a reality, it is expected to employ 600 people and produce 400,000 transmissions by the end of this year.”

The factory was under construction for seven years and went through two other tenants before reaching its dedication. Chrysler and German auto parts maker Getrag originally had a deal that would have employed 1,400 workers and built the $580 million plant together, but the two parted ways after a financial dispute that ended with both companies filing bankruptcy in 2009.

A solar parts company was then poised to take over the building, but it too filed for bankruptcy.

Chrysler is investing about $160 million to finish the plant.

Official: Addiction epidemic filling Ohio prisons

COLUMBUS (AP) — The state's drug addiction epidemic is thwarting efforts to reduce the inmate population through changes to sentencing laws, the Ohio prisons director said Tuesday during budget testimony.

Judges trying to keep low-level offenders out of prison are forced to take action after seeing an offender relapse several times, the prisons official, Gary Mohr, told the Senate Finance Committee.

"They kept coming back, and at some point in time, judges said, 'I have to vacate this probation and send you to prison,'" Mohr said.

Ohio has struggled for years with illegal painkiller sales and abuse, and more recently with heroin addiction, as users turn to the cheaper, more available drug. Police chiefs across the state say addiction to painkillers and heroin is driving a rash of thefts, burglaries and other crimes. The most recent state data says 680 people died of heroin overdoses in 2012, up from 426 deaths in 2011, a 60 percent increase. The heroin increase also drove the overall number of fatal drug overdoses to a record of 1,272 deaths in 2012, up from 1,154 the previous year.

The Department of Rehabilitation and Correction is asking lawmakers for an extra $14 million this year and $40 million next year to reopen closed units at two prisons, take steps to address violence at the Toledo Correctional Institution, add parole officers because of the growing population and boost medical and mental health staffing.

Of that, $4.2 million this year and $8.5 million next year would pay for an additional 400 beds statewide in halfway houses and local corrections facilities to keep people close to home and out of prison.

Ohio currently has 50,250 inmates, 2,500 more than estimates from a 2011 law meant to reduce the inmate population, Mohr said.

The state has too many low-level offenders, with 42 percent of inmates serving less than a year and nearly one in every four inmates being "truly nonviolent" prisoners, he said.

"Many of these offenders could be more effectively punished in a community setting, thereby remaining employed, paying taxes, and supporting their families, as opposed to sending them to prison at a cost of nearly $23,000 a year," Mohr said.

There's reason for optimism in Ohio's big cities as prison alternatives like halfway houses are working, with the need for such programs highest in rural areas, he said. A provision in the 2011 sentencing law tied judges' hands when it came to imprisoning first-time low-level offenders, and that alone would not have reduced the population that much, said Mark Schweikert, director of the Ohio Judicial Conference. But he said there's no question the painkiller and heroin epidemic is countering the intentions of the law.

Consumers losing doctors with new insurance plans

MIAMI (AP) — The first thing Michelle Pool did before picking a plan under President Barack Obama's health insurance law was check whether her longtime primary care doctor was covered. Pool, a 60-year-old diabetic who has had back surgery and a hip replacement, purchased the plan only to find that the insurer was mistaken.

Pool's $352 a month gold plan through Covered California's exchange was cheaper than what she'd paid under her husband's insurance and seemed like a good deal because of her numerous pre-existing conditions. But after her insurance card came in the mail, the Vista, California resident learned her doctor wasn't taking her new insurance.

"It's not fun when you've had a doctor for years and years that you can confide in and he knows you," Pool said. "I'm extremely discouraged. I'm stuck."

Stories like Pool's are emerging as more consumers realize they bought plans with limited doctor and hospital networks, some after websites that mistakenly said their doctors were included.

Before the law took effect, experts warned that narrow networks could impact patient's access to care, especially in cheaper plans. But with insurance cards now in hand, consumers are finding their access limited across all price ranges.

The dilemma undercuts President Obama's 2009 pledge that: "If you like your doctor, you will be able to keep your doctor, period." Consumer frustration over losing doctors comes as the Obama administration is still celebrating a victory with more than 8 million enrollees in its first year.

Narrow networks are part of the economic trade-off for keeping premiums under control and preventing insurers from turning away those with pre-existing conditions. Even before the Affordable Care Act, doctors and hospitals would choose to leave a network — or be pushed out — over reimbursement issues as insurers tried to contain costs.

Insurance trade group America's Health Insurance Plans says studies show the biggest factor influencing consumer choice is price. Insurers say that if consumers want low premiums, their choices may be limited.

Insurance companies also argue there's wide variation in what doctors and hospitals charge, with some increasing prices every year. Insurers say there's little evidence that higher-priced hospitals or doctors are actually delivering better care.

Further complicating matters, the trade group says that doctors and health plans often renegotiate throughout the year, meaning a doctor listed in a network at the time of enrollment may not be there a few months later.

Insurance agents Craig Gussin in San Diego and Kelly Fristoe in Texas helped dozens of clients switch plans just before the enrollment deadline when clients realized their doctors weren't covered. Now, they're struggling to help clients who realized they were in that position after the March 31 enrollment deadline, when consumers are locked into plans for one year.

Gussin says that even after his mad-dash to make switches before the deadline, he still has a half-dozen clients who are stuck — and he expects the number to grow as more try to schedule with doctors. He and other agents fear it will be one of their most serious issues in 2014.

"Everybody I talk to is having the same issue. It's probably the number one item that we're seeing right now," said Gussin, who is petitioning Covered California for special enrollment status to help clients change plans.

Health counselor Nathalie Miliias, who helped enroll nearly 300 Miami-area residents in ACA plans, says most of them chose a plan with $0 monthly premiums and deductibles — but with much more limited choices. She says tax credits could have allowed them more robust plans if they were willing to spend more, but many are working poor who didn't want to pay another bill.

Marie Bien-Aime, a 59-year-old cook at a Miami restaurant, enrolled in that plan to avoid a monthly payment, but she realized her longtime health clinic didn't take the plan. Shortly before the enrollment deadline, Bien-Aime upgraded to a plan that costs $37 per month.

"Paying $37 isn't good for me, but I had to do it because I wanted to keep my doctor because he's so good," said Bien-Aime, who was previously uninsured.

Many consumers are still learning. They hear "Obamacare" and think it's free like Medicaid or Medicare, said John Foley, an attorney and navigator.

"They don't expect to pay anything," said Foley. "For a couple more dollars a month you can get a really good plan and they're like, 'This is free. I don't want to pay for this.'"

Even with pricier plans, some consumers have access problems.

James Potts' $647-per-month silver plan was issued by the same company that had insured him with a different plan cancelled under the Affordable Care Act. The 64-year-old property insurance agent assumed his doctors would remain the same under the insurer's new plan, but didn't double check.

When Potts got a nasty cold, he called three facilities near his home in Wichita Falls, Texas, and was shocked to find none took the insurance, including his primary care doctor.

"It was a waste of money for me," he said. "I couldn't find doctors that would talk to me."

West Virginia mine had history of safety problems

WHARTON, W.Va. (AP) — Two miners who were killed on the job Monday night worked in a coalfield that had so many safety problems federal officials deemed it a "pattern violator," a rare designation reserved for the industry's worst offenders.

Brody Mine No. 1 was one of only three mines last year to earn the label that regulators have put greater emphasis on since the 2010 Upper Big Branch explosion killed 29 miners about 10 miles away.

The designation subjects the mine to greater scrutiny from regulators, and it's the strongest tool the Mine Safety and Health Administration has, said Kevin Stricklin, the agency's administrator of coal mine safety and health.

"We just do not have the ability or authority to shut a mine just because it has so many violations," Stricklin told The Associated Press on Tuesday.

Brody No. 1 is owned by a subsidiary of St. Louis-based Patriot Coal, which in its annual report last December blamed the problems on a previous owner and said it was "vigorously contesting" the designation.

The company said the workers were killed during a severe coal burst, where high-speed coal is shot at anyone in the way. The burst occurred as they were doing retreat mining, a risky method that involves yanking supporting pillars of coal from inside the mine and letting the roof collapse as miners and equipment work their way out.

"Preliminarily, it looks like it was a rock outburst from the wall of the mine, which basically inundated the entries with coal and debris," said Stricklin. "That's what caused the two fatalities."

In August 2007, six miners doing retreat mining at Utah's Crandall Canyon died in a collapse and 10 days later, three rescue workers were killed in another cave-in.

In October, Brody No. 1 was one of three coal mines added to a Pattern of Violations list for repeatedly breaking federal health and safety regulations over the previous year. It was cited for 253 serious violations.

The designation is for operations that pose the greatest threat to workers' lives. It also meant that if a federal inspector were to find another significant violation, an order would be issued to withdraw miners from a specific area, effectively ceasing operations until the problem is corrected there.

Asked for comment on its safety record, a Patriot Coal spokeswoman referred to the company's latest annual report. Patriot's subsidiary purchased the mine Dec. 31, 2012.

But from April 1, 2013, to March 31 of this year, the mine was cited for 192 safety violations, including 33 for high or reckless disregard for miners' health and safety. It wasn't immediately clear whether any of the violations could have had anything to do with a coal burst.

Since January, six accidents have occurred at Brody No. 1, including one in which a miner's finger was caught in machinery and a portion had to be amputated, according to online federal records.

Damascus students will meet Seabee who they 'adopted'

BELOIT — Each year the students in Bridget Scofinsky's first-grade class at Damascus Elementary School participate in a service project. This year the students adopted Zach Orsburn of Sebring, a Navy Seabee who is serving overseas. They have been writing letters to Orsburn and asking him about his favorite things and his job in the Navy, and sending gifts. "One day I picked up a large package in the office and was shocked to see the mailing label was from Afghanistan. Zach had written the nicest thank you letter to my students telling about who he is and what he does as a Navy Seabee. The package was large because he had built us a flag case and included a flag that flew over his base. He included his email address in the letter in case they had more questions and instantly won the hearts of his 23 new best friends," said Scofinsky. Orsburn has just returned from Afghanistan and will be visiting his new best friends at 1:30 p.m. Thursday at the school. The students will host a welcome home party for him with all of his favorite things like Zepp's Pizza and swirly straws, which they learned about in their letters. "The students are so excited to meet him in person and share some of his favorite things with him. Swirly straws and all," said Scofinsky.

Total of 105 dogs, cats vaccinated during clinic

LISBON — Wesley Vins, Columbiana County Health Commissioner, reported that a total of 105 dogs and cats were vaccinated for rabies at the recent rabies prevention clinic that was held at the Columbiana County Career and Technical Center. Vaccinations were given by Dr. Gordon Schmucker, D.V.M. and his staff from the Lisbon Veterinary Clinic Inc. It is anticipated that another clinic will be held in the fall.

Applebud, Appleblossom applications being accepted

LISBON — Applications are being accepted for the Johnny Appleseed Festival 2014 Little Mr. Applebud/Little Miss Appleblossom. Contestants must be between 4 and 9 years old by Sept. 20, 2014, and live in Columbiana County. Applications and rules are available on the Lisbon Area Chamber of Commerce website at lisbonareachamber.com or may be picked up at the chamber office, 120 N. Market St. Applications will be accepted until June 20 and a copy of your child's birth certificate must accompany the application. For more information call 330-424-1803 or 330-424-9622.

CAA of Columbiana County accepts PIPP Plus applications

LISBON — Community Action Agency (CAA) of Columbiana County will continue taking applications to apply or reverify for PIPP Plus, as the program runs all year. Additionally, CAA will be taking applications for State HEAP until May 31 at the Lisbon office located at 7860 Lincoln Place (rear). Applications can also be picked up at local libraries and post offices. For more information about state HEAP call 800-282-0880. Neither program will offer immediate assistance with utility bills that are past due and/or in threat of disconnection. Summer Crisis should begin on July 1 and may provide assistance with electric utilities. However, no information about this program has been released at this time. Be advised that PIPP Plus, as well as all other energy assistance programs, is income based and applicants must provide 90 days of income to complete an application. Call 330-424-4013 if you have any questions about either program. Appointments for both state HEAP and PIPP Plus can be made by calling the automated system at 330-424-1386.

European court: Google must yield on personal info

AMSTERDAM (AP) — Google and other search engines were thrust into an unwanted new role Tuesday — caretaker of people's reputations — when Europe's highest court ruled that individuals should have some say over what information pops up when their names are Googled.

The landmark ruling by the Court of Justice of the European Union will force search engines to decide when to censor computer users' search results across the 28-nation bloc of over 500 million people.

The decision — which cannot be appealed — was celebrated by some as a victory for privacy rights in the Internet age. Others warned it could lead to online censorship.

The ruling applies to EU citizens and all search engines in Europe.

Senate votes to open debate on renewing tax breaks

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill to renew a package of more than 50 expired tax breaks cleared its first hurdle in the Senate Tuesday.

The Senate voted 96 to 3 to open debate on the bill, which has strong backing from the business community but would add about $85 billion to the budget deficit.

Almost every year, Congress routinely renews the tax breaks. This year, though, they were allowed to expire at the start of the year. The Senate bill would extend the tax breaks through 2015.

The tax breaks enjoy broad bipartisan support. But some Republican senators want the opportunity to change the package, and it's not clear whether Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-NeV., will allow amendments.

S&P 500 briefly crosses 1,900 for the first time

NEW YORK (AP) — The Standard & Poor's 500 index is flirting with a new milestone: 1,900.

The index briefly climbed above that level on Tuesday before dropping back to close just below it. Still, it set an all-time closing high by a fraction of point.

Stocks have gained as most investors remain optimistic that the economy will start to accelerate this year following a cold winter that stymied growth. First-quarter corporate earnings came in better than expected, giving stocks a lift.

Winter flight cancellations now in 20 years of data

NEW YORK (AP) — It's official: This winter was the worst for fliers in the 20 years that the industry has been collecting data.

During the first three months of this year, U.S. airlines canceled 4.6 percent of their flights, the Department of Transportation announced Tuesday. The worst winter before this was 2001, when 4.4 percent of flights were scrapped.

Mother Nature is mostly to blame, with a relentless wave of snow and ice storms paralyzing airline traffic across the nation. But airlines are also quicker to cancel flights these days, sometimes a day in advance of a storm.

US retail sales rise scant 0.1 percent in April

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. retail sales growth slowed in April, with consumers shopping less online and cutting back on purchases of furniture and electronics.

The Commerce Department said Tuesday that seasonally adjusted retail sales rose just 0.1 percent last month, after surging 1.5 percent in March following a harsh winter that had curtailed shopping.

Several economists said the April figures might have been depressed because of seasonal adjustments connected to a later than usual Easter. Still, the modest sales suggest that consumers may remain cautious during the still-slow economic recovery. Higher sales would help drive faster growth because consumers account for about 70 percent of the economy.

Law presses Beijing to ease exchange rate controls

BEIJING (AP) — The U.S. treasury secretary is pressing China to ease politically sensitive exchange rate controls and lower barriers to foreign investment. China has widened the narrow band in which it allows its yuan to fluctuate against the U.S. dollar. But it retained controls that critics complain keep the yuan undervalued and give its exporters an unfair price advantage.

Treasury Secretary Jacob Lew said in a meeting Tuesday with Chinese officials that it is important that the country move toward a more market-determined exchange rate. That would include opening China's markets wider to foreign investment and ensuring equal treatment for all companies.

Airbus plane orders down in Q1, profits up

PARIS (AP) — Airbus Group said Tuesday that orders for its jets slumped in the first quarter, but profits rose and it hopes to put its A350 long-range jet into service by the end of the year. The European plane maker, Boeing's chief rival, said that it took in 103 orders in the quarter, worth 21.1 billion euros (US$28.9 billion). That is down from 410 orders in the first quarter of 2013.

Drivers beware: Your air bag may not deploy

By DEE-ANN DURBIN AP Auto Writer

Here's an unsettling fact about cars equipped with air bags: They don't always deploy when drivers — or regulators — expect them to. Thirteen people have died in crashes involving older GM cars with defective ignition switches. In each of those crashes, and in others in which occupants were injured, the air bags failed to deploy after striking trees, guard rails or other objects.

Puzzled by these failures, federal safety regulators told Congress last month they believed the cars' air bags should have worked for up to 60 seconds after the engine stalled. But GM has since told The Associated Press that regulators were mistaken: The cars only had enough reserve power to sense a crash and deploy the air bags for 150 milliseconds after the switch malfunctioned and cut off the car's power.

General Motors is recalling 2.6 million small cars to fix the ignition switches. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration is now scrambling to find out from other automakers and air bag suppliers how their air bags would function in similar situations.

Regulators, lawmakers and ordinary drivers are learning what auto engineers already know: These billowing white bags are actually very complex. After a crash, a car's computer determines, in 15 to 20 milliseconds, where it was hit, what position the occupants are in and whether the 150-mile-per-hour speed of the air bag would do more harm than good. Then it deploys — or doesn't. Every automaker programs them differently.

"It's very complicated, the logic behind it. It makes it very, very difficult for an automaker or supplier to explain why it did or didn't go off in a certain situation," said Joe Nolan, senior vice president for vehicle research at the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, a group funded by the insurance industry that performs crash tests and other research.

If an occupant is unbelted or very small, or the car is traveling very slowly, the air bag may not deploy because it could cause even more severe injuries. Depending on the angle, the side air bags may deploy but not the front ones. If a car is parked and turned off when it's hit, the air bags won't work.

GM's switches created an unusual problem. Because of insufficient resistance, they moved from the "run" position into the "accessory" or "off" position while the car was moving, possibly due to a bump from the driver's knee or the weight of a key chain. With the switch in that position, the engine stalled and the power steering and power brakes stopped working, making the car harder to control.

In a 2006 crash in Wisconsin, a Chevrolet Cobalt traveling at 71 mph suddenly stalled. Two seconds later — outside GM's 150-mile-second window — it hit a clump of trees. The ignition was found in the "accessory" position and the air bags didn't deploy. Two passengers died and the driver was severely injured.

GM says the air bags in newer cars would work for a slightly longer period of time if the ignition is off, but still less than a second.

If the engine had stalled while the ignition was still in the "run" position, the crash might have had a different outcome. In that situation, the air bags, steering, brakes and most other equipment would have had power for up to several hours depending on the amount of charge in the car's battery, GM said.

A report on the crash, completed by a team from Indiana University that was hired by the government, said the air bags may not have deployed because the ignition moved out of position. But the report also noted two other reasons: The trees bent when the car hit them, so the impact may not have triggered the air bags. And none of the occupants was wearing a seat belt. Air bags are meant to supplement seat belts, not to replace them. The report said further analysis would be necessary to figure out whether the air bags could go off if the ignition was in the "accessory" position. Seven years later, that analysis is finally being done.

In a statement to the AP, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said it is talking to car companies and air bag suppliers about how air bag performance relates to the position of the ignition. The agency says it will take "appropriate action" based on its findings. It didn't specify what form that action could take, but the agency could make new rules governing how long air bags must work if power to the vehicle is cut.

Right now, federal regulations don't govern when air bags must deploy or how much power they need. Automakers are only required to meet government standards for protection of dummies in a series of crash tests. The lack of regulation is intended to promote innovation. A decade ago, for example, automakers unveiled advanced air bags that determine how much power to use based on occupants' size and whether they're wearing seat belts. But that also leads to a myriad of designs that are harder for safety regulators to track.

HOROSCOPE

Closure Moon

Your every breath is a re-creation. Each time you inhale, you are rearranging and recycling molecules made up of atoms that once belonged to another organism. Scorpio energy is the energy of transformation. This full moon in Scorpio is a chance to close the door to the old world and watch a new one form that couldn't exist without you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19).

You'll perform an amazing feat: You'll become an optimist even when you're not feeling optimistic at all. This you'll do in the spirit of generosity, and it will create a ripple of goodness.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20).

You know well what you have to offer. That's why you're not so concerned about how seriously people are taking you. A happy-go-lucky attitude is good for love and for business, too.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21).

It would be easy to handle business in the generic, impersonal sort of way it's usually handled, but you recognize the need each person has to feel special and give your personal touch instead.

CANCER (June 22-July 22).

Persistence will win out. What at first looks like rejection is more likely just a case of someone not understanding completely what you have to offer. Take the time and care to communicate clearly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22).

Ask for the action you want others to take. You'll either get it, or you won't, but you'll know where you stand, which is better than being unsure about it. Today, knowledge is power.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22).

Your social orientation will depend on your emotions of the moment. You follow the leader inside you and do as you feel, not as you're told. You won't be shy, but you'll be sensitive, reading each situation carefully.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23).

When business doesn't follow the expected route, it's a good workout for your creativity. Surprises stimulate your imagination. This evening brings you a partner in fun, too.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21).

Thoughtfulness counts for quite a lot. Don't feel like you have to make a huge gesture to be kind, though. The little things that let someone know he or she is in your heart and mind will mean the most.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21).

If your desire could be manipulated by a dial, you would reach over and reset it to "less" today, thereby increasing your happiness and satisfaction tenfold.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19).

Today your life will be like a camera with an endless memory card. If you don't like the way the picture looks, change the filter and take another shot -- and another and another until you see beauty in it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18).

Whether or not you believe in karma and the boomerang effect of good things, it is still worthwhile to occupy yourself with what you believe to be very good.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20).

One excellent thing to lose is your fear of losing. This moon helps you shed your fear and take a risk. Abandoning the need to be totally in control, you'll gain the outcome you dreamed of.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (May 14).

The next six weeks will be both interesting and funny -- some of your friends won't believe the way your story is developing. By the end of June, a new order will have settled in, and you can focus once more on stashing away money for your big plan. Get team members in July. An agreement will be settled in September. Aquarius and Virgo people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 18, 3, 33, 39 and 45.

ASTROLOGICAL QUESTIONS:

Continuing on the theme of dealing with financial worry and panic that started with a Leo's comment, "I wish I weren't so high strung. ... I cry every few hours and then feel guilty because so many people have it so much worse than I do. Do you have any advice for a Leo who can't calm down?"

See Monday and Tuesday for the first steps to processing and releasing anxiety.

4. When losses occur, the emotional body goes through a process not unlike the process that your physical body goes through after being wounded. Healing takes time and has many stages. Things do not magically get better in one day. Adjust your expectations to allow for ups and downs, blips and bumps in the road.

5. Even though Leos like you tend to be extroverted and gregarious, they often react to hard times by cocooning into themselves. Even visiting with friends, driving or generally getting out in the world suddenly can seem scary. Withdrawing into your own little world may be a natural response, but it's a dangerous one. What is needed in hard times is a bigger perspective, not a smaller one. Try to face your fear and force yourself to engage in the activities that normally would bring you joy.

Micro misinformation

Heloise

Dear Heloise: I have been told by a friend that MICROWAVING FOOD depletes all the nutrients from it and makes food unhealthy. Can you please confirm if this information is accurate? — A Reader, via email

Well, it actually is not accurate. Any cooking will remove some of the nutrients from the food being cooked, but microwaving is considered one of the best cooking methods for retaining nutrients. Why? Because microwaving is fast and uses less heat and smaller amounts of liquid.

Here is an easy-to-understand example: cooking vegetables in water on the stovetop. We know, for example, that cooking broccoli in water will result in most antioxidants being pulled out of the broccoli and into the water during the time it takes to heat up and cook completely to the desired doneness.

In the microwave, cooking for less time and using less water means less chance of nutrient loss, making the microwave a much better cooking method, nutritionally. — Heloise

BITTER BAKING

Dear Heloise: I've been using the same cornbread recipe for years, but my last batch of cornbread had such a bitter taste that I couldn't eat it. The only thing I had done differently was use a new brand of baking powder.

I did some research and found that the culprit was sodium aluminum sulfate in the baking powder. While most people might not notice the flavor at all (my husband didn't), others are more sensitive to the taste of aluminum.

Some baking-powder brands contain sodium aluminum sulfate, and some don't. If your baked goods have an unpleasant metallic tang, check the ingredients list on your baking powder. I'll definitely look more closely the next time I grocery-shop. — L.R., via email

FREEZE FLOUR

Dear Heloise: I wasn't using up my flour quick enough, and it would sit for months. Then, when I was ready to use the flour, it had bugs in it. I would throw it out and go buy new flour as I needed it.

Now, I freeze my flour. I put it in one plastic freezer bag, seal it and then put that in another plastic freezer bag and seal it again. Now when I go for my flour, it is always fresh, dry and, best of all, bug-free. — Rita R. in Pennsylvania

Just remember to warm the flour to room temperature before using. — Heloise

STUCK EGGS

Dear Heloise: I always check egg cartons for broken eggs in the store, but sometimes there is a small crack that is not visible, causing eggs to stick in the carton. I found that pouring some lemon juice in the carton around the stuck eggs loosens them overnight. — David D. in Virginia

This is a good way to loosen them, but know that you can even use plain water and they will loosen! — Heloise

Dear Abby dinner party blends food, fun

DEAR ABBY: I love cooking for my wife and friends. There are few things I find more pleasing than to put out a nice spread of food and watch people enjoy. I'm always on the lookout for more cookbooks, and you hold the key to my next big party.

I was reading through your archives and have seen many people asking about your cookbooklets. I'd love to get them. Can you print the ordering information again, so I can be sure I'm sending the right amount to the right place? Thanks! — MAN IN THE KITCHEN IN NORTH LITTLE ROCK

DEAR MAN IN THE KITCHEN: I'm glad to oblige. I have been a compulsive cookbook collector for many years, so I can relate. (I'm sure you will be pleased when you see that my cookbooklets, while wide-ranging in content, take up little space on your bookshelf.)

Your idea of throwing a "Dear Abby Dinner Party" is a good one, and I have been told the recipes provide a fun, traditional eating adventure. All of them are simple, easy-to-read and delicious.

One reader described creating place cards for her guests decorated with hearts and flowers. The centerpiece was a "bouquet" of envelopes addressed to me. Another reader said she copied questions from my column, printed them out and, as a party game, asked her guests to supply the answers. (She said that after a few glasses of wine, some of the responses were hilarious, but couldn't be printed in a family newspaper.)

My cookbooklet set contains more than 100 tasty recipes, ranging from soups to salads, appetizers, main courses and desserts, that can be used when families get together to celebrate holidays and other special occasions. My mother used many of them when she hosted parties, as have I. To order, send your name and mailing address, plus check or money order for $14 (U.S. funds) to: Dear Abby - Cookbooklet Set, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, IL 61054-0447. Shipping and handling are included in the price. You will find tips on entertaining at the beginning of the first booklet. Anyone who hasn't entertained before should be sure to read them.

By following these suggestions, even the most nervous, first-time host can be confident. I know you will enjoy the recipes as much as we have and serve them with pride.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY: It's not what you put on the table, but who you put in the chairs that makes a successful dinner party.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Contact Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

Take temperature trouble seriously

Dr. Keith Roach

DEAR DR.

ROACH: I am a 66-year-old woman who usually is too hot. When I tell my doctors, they just sort of laugh it off. It is making my life miserable because if I keep the heat or air conditioning where it is comfortable for me, it is too cold for others. I hate summer and stay inside in the air conditioning. I keep the temperature in my house at 64 degrees Fahrenheit in the summer and winter. I know other members of my family do not tolerate being out in the sun when it's hot, but they aren't plagued with being too hot otherwise.

The sensation of being too warm comes and goes. I am about 40 pounds overweight, and have been for most of my life. The sensitivity has intensified as I've aged. I had a hysterectomy in my 30s, and I know some of my hormones were off. — J.R.

Fair Board offering commemorative baskets

The Columbiana County Fair Board is offering commemorative baskets for the 2014 year. These handmade baskets are made in Canal Fulton by the American Traditions Basket Company and come with a lifetime guarantee. The hardwood laser etched lid features a line drawing of the former grandstand, recently demolished to make way for the new, larger one. A limited number of baskets are available at this time by contacting the fair office at 330-424-5531. Cost is $50. (Submitted photo)

INN FROM 1A

"We're seeing manufacturing come back," Johnson said, explaining that Washington has to get out of the way with its regulations and taxes.

"This is about the region coming back," Johnson said noting that shale boom job projects that soared to well over 200,000 new jobs two years ago "were not overplayed at all."

He pointed to emerging technologies appearing as the shale play heads toward development and noted Ohio's unemployment rate has dropped nearly four percent.

Start-up companies affiliated with oil and gas industry by products like the proposed cracker plant in Pennsylvania and another projected for Belmont County are taking notice.

"No I don't think that's an overestimate," he said pointing to Ohio being about seven to eight years behind North Dakota's oil and gas field development. "Workforce development — this is a new happening for us. It's the same as North Dakota. It was new for them."

Asked about oil and gas companies bringing their own people into the area, Johnson said "they're not going to put unskilled workers on a drill pad" and pointed to local labor and labor unions capitalizing.

"Yes, we're going to see an out-of-state workforce," he said adding the state is helping to access special training while pointing to a Women in Energy Summit he presented at the Mahoning County Career & Technical Center last month.

"We need to work on workforce development," Johnson said.

Berlin is looking forward to the hotel being open for the 2014 Salem Super Cruise when it celebrates its 10th anniversary.

Larry Kosiba, executive director of the Sustainable Opportunity Development Center, said the primary focus for him is supporting the oil and gas companies.

As far as lodging, "People have to go somewhere else," he said. "Now they can stay here."

He explained the big break for the project came when the hotel and banquet center were separated.

"The hotel was stand alone. It was critical that we separated them."

Audrey Null, executive director of the Salem Area Chamber of Commerce, said the chamber has to recommend places to stay on a weekly basis. She said the hotel is "a huge victory" to have people stay at night.

"It'll bring in a lot of events. It was a no-brainer to put the banquet hall in," Herron said, corner of East State and Southeast Boulevard for 30 years.

PARADE FROM 1A

Brown and his late wife, Dorothy, were married for 62 years. They raised their family in Salem and were involved in many activities.

Brown turned 92 in April. He still drives and walks daily at the Salem Community Center and Centennial Park. He stated that he was surprised by his nomination and selection and is proud to serve as the parade marshal.

The day commences with a free breakfast at 8 a.m. at the Memorial Building at 785 E. State St. for all veterans and invited guests participating in the parade. A city-wide memorial service begins at 9 a.m. on the Village Green at the southeast corner of Lincoln and State Street.

The line-up for the parade is at 9:30 a.m. on South Broadway Avenue.

The parade steps out at 10 a.m. and proceeds to State Street, Lincoln Avenue, to Hope Cemetery.

The formal ceremony at the cemetery with full military honors begins at approximately 11 a.m.

In the event of inclement weather, the memorial service will be conducted at the Kent State University City Center at 230 N. Lincoln Ave.

Quakers overtake Warriors

BELOIT — The Salem softball team rode a seven-run first inning to upset West Branch 13-11 in regular season softball action Tuesday.

Kristen Brown had two hits including a double and three RBIs for the Quakers (5-20, 2-10 Northeastern Buckeye Conference). Also for Salem, Reagan Meals had three hits and two RBIs, while Sarah Smith and Cassandra Burke each had two RBIs.

Bailey Byers doubled, tripled and had three RBIs for the Warriors (15-5, 8-3 NBC).

West Branch is at Canton South today for a regular season game.

Cavalcanti leads Tigers over Eagles

By CHRIS RAMBO

Staff Writer
NEW MIDDLETOWN—Last year, after the Springfield softball team lost its sectional opener, utility player Michaela Cavalcanti remembered sitting on the field crying.

Tuesday, the sophomore wore an irrepressible smile.

Cavalcanti hit a tiebreaking two-out, two-run double in the bottom of the sixth inning to lift the sixth-seeded Tigers to a 4-2 win over 10th-seeded United in Division III sectional tournament action at Springfield High School.

"There is so much pressure in tournament games," Cavalcanti said. "It was so disappointing to lose in the tournament last year and to be able to come in today and get the winning hit is just incredible."

The Tigers (10-8) win their first tournament game since 2009 and travel to fourth-seeded Newton Falls at 5 p.m. today for a sectional final. The winner advances to next week's Division III Lisbon district tournament.

"We came into today with a lot of energy and got the job done," Springfield coach Taylor McMullen said. "United is a team that's gotten better as the year has gone on and we expected a hard effort from them."

It all came down to the bottom of the sixth.

With the score tied at two, cleanup hitter Charley Troggio was hit by a pitch with one out and courtesy runner Cori Wade stole second and moved to third on a wild pitch. With two outs, freshman Lindsey Druschel drew a very tough walk. Cavalcanti then went after the first pitch from United's Amanda Hall and smacked a sinking liner to left that eluded a diving

Kassie Chestnut.

"I was looking for a pitch up in the zone and inside that I could drive to left," Cavalcanti said. "I got it right on the first pitch."

"That hit took a lot of guts," McMullen said. "Lindsey (Druschel) also had a phenomenal at-bat to set Michaela up."

Taylor Johnston had two singles for Springfield, while Troggio gave the Tigers took a 2-0 lead in the third with a two run double. However, Hall would not let the Tigers shake free. Hall struck out five and walked two, while the Eagles played error-free defense.

United got its two runs in the fifth with the help of a Springfield fielding error as well as infield singles by Chestnut and Haylee Hawk.

"I felt like we had some good at-bats, we just couldn't find the gaps with our hits," United coach Ryan Burd said.

United, which dropped to 4-20 on the season, lost to the Tigers in the regular season by scores of 12-2 and 5-4 in extra innings.

"These girls have nothing to hang their head about," Burd said. "Springfield is a good team and we played very hard tonight. I've been very happy with the effort all season."

Game notes

• The last tournament win for Springfield came when the Tigers beat Campbell 13-0 in a sectional game in 2009.

Springfield played Newton Falls just last Saturday in the Mahoning Valley Invitational and lost by 10 runs.

"We will need to play one of our best games to come out with a win," Springfield coach Taylor McMullen said. "Newton Falls is a very tough, well-coached team. They move runners over well and play very strong defense."

• United has two Inter-Tri County League upper tier games left. The Eagles are at Crestview on Thursday and host Crestview Monday. Springfield has one ITCL upper tier game left with Mineral Ridge that hasn't been rescheduled.

"We see it as a positive that we still have games left," Burd said. "We are a young team and want to use every chance to get better."

• United catcher Sydney Moats was removed from the game in the fifth inning after turning her ankle while hitting first base.

"We'll have it looked at tomorrow," Burd said.

Browns sign cornerback Joe Haden

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Browns aren't letting lockdown cornerback Joe Haden get away.

Haden signed a five-year, $68 million extension with Cleveland on Monday, the total value of the contract surpassing cornerback Richard Sherman's four-year, $57 million agreement last week with the Seattle Seahawks.

Haden's contract runs through the 2019 season and includes $45 million guaranteed, agent Drew Rosenhaus told The Associated Press. The package also contains a $14 million signing bonus.

One of the AFC's top defensive backs and one of Cleveland's most popular athletes, Haden made his first Pro Bowl last season, his fourth with the team. The Browns selected him with the No. 7 overall pick in 2010.

"Joe's a good, young player who's made a commitment to our organization, and he's somebody with whom we want to move forward in order to advance our football team," general manager Ray Farmer said in a statement. "He's a great person. He's the right guy to both build with and build around as we attempt to become an elite football team."

"When we talk about identifying talent, building through the draft, developing solid players and retaining them, Joe Haden's at the top of the list."

Haden posted a photo on Twitter of him signing his new contract.

Signing Haden to a long-term deal was a priority for Cleveland this offseason. During the draft, the team selected Oklahoma State cornerback Justin Gilbert early in the first round to play opposite Haden.

Last season, Haden had four interceptions, recorded 60 tackles and was credited with 21 passes defended. He had his first career multiple-interception game and scored his first touchdown, returning an interception 29 yards at Cincinnati on Nov. 17.

According to STATS, Haden's 21 passes defended in 2013 tied for third in the NFL and his 67 since joining the Browns four years ago are second in the league during that span. Haden averages 1.19 passes defended per game, the second-highest average among players with 50-plus PBUs since at least 1994.

For the most part, Haden has been an exemplary player and citizen since joining the Browns. His only major misstep was the four-game suspension he received in 2012 for violating the league's substance abuse policy after he tested positive for the stimulant Adderall.

First-year Browns coach Mike Pettine is thrilled to have Haden for several years.

"It's important for us to extend our core players and continue to grow with guys that represent everything we want this team to be: tough, hard-working and passionate," Pettine said. "Joe obviously loves his teammates, and he loves this city. I know he wants to keep growing and improving as a player. That's what we need, and that's what we want."

With Haden's contract situation resolved, the Browns are expected to focus on getting Pro Bowl tight end Jordan Cameron signed to a long-term deal. Cameron had a breakout season in 2013, making 80 catches for 917 yards and seven TDs.

Cameron is in the final season of his contract and has reportedly turned down two offers from the Browns.

At Cleveland's recent voluntary minicamp, Cameron said he's blocking out any discussion about negotiations to improve.

"I've got a lot of stuff to work on," he said. "I'm not anywhere near where I can be. I still have a lot to prove to myself, and I'm willing to work."

Ankle & Foot Care Centers golf benefit

Ankle & Foot Care Centers is hosting its 16th annual golf benefit, a four-person scramble, on Aug. 22 at Pine Lakes Golf Club in Hubbard. The tournament raises money for local diabetes education, resources and support, through Ankle & Foot Care Centers and the Diabetes Partnership of the Mahoning Valley (DPMV). "We think it is important to support organizations like the DPMV," said Dr. Michelle Anania, partner at Ankle & Foot Care Centers. Sign-ins begin at 11 a.m. with a shotgun start at noon. The $100 fee per golfer includes 18 holes of golf, lunch, dinner, beverages, merchandise prizes and skill contests. Registration is due by Aug. 8 by calling Michael Vallas at 330-629-8800. Tribe edged by Blue Jays

TORONTO (AP) — After throwing pitches into the seventh inning, R.A. Dickey hailed Melky Cabrera for his one perfect toss.

Dickey won for the third time in four starts, Juan Francisco homered and the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Cleveland Indians 5-4 on Tuesday night.

Cabrera made a one-hop throw from left field to get Carlos Santana at the plate to end the eighth inning, preserving Toronto's one-run lead.

"That was just heroic, is what that was," a grateful Dickey said. "It saved the game." Catcher Josh Thole said Cabrera's throw was "right on the money."

"It was down the third base line so it made it easier for me," Thole said. "Had it been anywhere else it would have been a bit of a tougher play. Melky knows that and he's just that good of a player to be able to do that."

Santana said he had to alter his slide because Yan Gomes' bat was on the ground, just outside the batter's box.

"Melky made a great throw and the bat was in the middle," Santana said. "I tried to go inside." Dickey (4-3) allowed two earned runs and four hits in six-plus innings. He walked two and struck out six.

"I had some good changeups tonight, a swing-and-miss knuckleball," Dickey said. Casey Janssen, activated off the disabled list Sunday, finished for his first save.

"It's definitely good to have him back," Blue Jays manager John Gibbons said. Justin Masterson (2-2) matched a season high by allowing five runs and six hits in 5 1-3 innings.

Dickey set down the first eight batters before the Indians opened the scoring in the third. Mike Aviles singled, Michael Bourn walked and Nick Swisher hit an RBI single that dropped just in front of a charging Jose Bautista in right.

Battered Brewers beat Pirates, Cole 5-2 MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jonathan Lucroy hit a bases-loaded, two-run single, and the battered Milwaukee Brewers withstood the early exits of star outfielders Carlos Gomez and Ryan Braun to beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-2 on Tuesday night. Gomez scored the second run on Lucroy's single in the third after getting hit by a changeup from Gerrit Cole (3-3). It was their first meeting since the teams brawled last month in Pittsburgh after Cole and Gomez exchanged words. No confrontations Tuesday, though Gomez did leave the game with lower back tightness. Manager Ron Roenicke said Gomez woke up Monday with a tight back and tried to play through it. Braun was activated from the disabled list earlier Tuesday. His departure after the sixth was planned as he gets acclimated in his return from an oblique injury. Marco Estrada (3-1) struck out eight in six innings. Francisco Rodriguez tossed a hitless ninth for his 16th save. Juan Segura added two hits, the second after a shot up the middle deflected off the mound and squirted in between first and second to allow Lucroy to score from second for a four-run lead in the seventh. The Brewers welcomed the fortuitous bounce with three of their top bats out of the lineup. Third baseman Aramis Ramirez was placed on the disabled list with a pulled left hamstring earlier Tuesday.

On this date

May 14 1913 — Washington's Walter Johnson gives up a run in the fourth inning against the St. Louis Browns to end his streak of 56 scoreless innings. The Senators win 10-5.

STRUTHERS — Salem fell to Struthers 4-2 at a Div. II Sectional opener Tuesday. Struthers plays at fourth-seeded Canfield at 4:30 p.m. today.

Salem volleyball programs

SALEM — The Salem volleyball program is holding three upcoming programs. The free clinic for girls interested in trying out for the seventh-grade volleyball team will be held from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. May 21-22 at Southeast Elementary. A youth camp for girls entering grades 3-5 will be held from 9 a.m. to noon June 18-20 at Salem High School. Another volleyball camp for girls entering grades 6-8 will be held from 3:30 to 6 p.m. July 28-30.

United sports physicals

HANOVERTON — United High School will be conducting sports physicals from 8 to 11 a.m. Saturday. The schedule is based on sport participated in: 8 a.m. track; 9 a.m. football and volleyball; 10 a.m. soccer, cheerleading and basketball; 11 a.m. golf, tennis, cross country, baseball and softball. If the student plays more than one sport, he or she should attend the one that comes first in the school year. Impact baseline concussion screenings will take place in conjunction with the physicals. Upon completion, players are asked to participate in the Booster Club Membership drive. Cost will be $15, payable by cash or check.

ITCL track meets

The Inter-Tri County League track meets will be held today and Thursday. Mineral Ridge will host the lower tier meet today, while United High School will host the upper tier meet Thursday. Action gets under way at 4:30 p.m. both days.

Buckeyes set kickoff time for homecoming game

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio State alums can sleep in for homecoming. Ohio State has announced that its homecoming game on Oct. 18 against Rutgers will start at 3:30 p.m. The TV network that will carry the game has yet to be determined. Six Buckeyes game times are established, with home game times for the home opener vs. Virginia Tech (8 p.m., Sept. 6), vs. Cincinnati (6 p.m., Sept. 27) and Illinois (8 p.m., Nov. 1), in addition to Rutgers. Game times have also been set for road games vs. Navy on Aug. 30 at Baltimore's M&T Bank Stadium (noon) and at Penn State on Oct. 25 (8 p.m.).

E Illinois QB named OVC male athlete of the year

BRENTWOOD, Tenn. (AP) — Eastern Illinois quarterback Jimmy Garoppolo has been selected as the Ohio Valley Conference's male athlete of the year for 2013-14. The league announced Garoppolo's honor Tuesday as voted on by OVC athletic directors and sports information directors. Garoppolo became only the fifth OVC quarterback drafted when picked by the NFL's New England Patriots in the second round last week. He won the Walter Payton Award as the national player of the year in the Football Championship Subdivision. He led Eastern Illinois to a 12-2 record and second straight league title. He completed 66 percent of his passes for 5,050 yards and 53 touchdowns with only nine interceptions last season.

Kynard transfers from Ohio State to Xavier

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ex-Ohio State basketball player Maleeka Kynard is transferring to Xavier. She will have one year of eligibility remaining with the Musketeers after graduating from Ohio State in August. A 5-foot-7 guard from Start High School in Toledo, Ohio, Kynard played in 74 games with four starts for the Buckeyes during the past three seasons. A three-year letter winner, Kynard averaged 3.5 points per game and recorded 24 steals and 26 assists last season while dealing with injuries and an illness.

Rangers cap comeback, top Penguins 2-1 in Game 7

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Henrik Lundqvist set an NHL record with his fifth straight Game 7 victory, making 35 saves to lift the New York Rangers to a 2-1 win over the Pittsburgh Penguins on Tuesday night and earn a spot in the Eastern Conference finals. Brian Boyle and Brad Richards scored for New York, who rallied from a 3-1 series deficit for the first time in the franchise's 88-year history. The Rangers did it behind Lundqvist, who stopped 102 of the final 105 shots he faced over the final three games as New York advanced to the conference finals for the second time in three years.

Last event: Bernhard Langer won the In-sperity Invitational for the third time, beating Couples by a stroke May 4 at The Woodlands in Texas. The 56-year-old Langer has 20 victories on the 50-and-over tour. Notes: The tournament, the first of the Champions Tour's five major championships, is in its fourth season at Jack Nicklaus-designed Shoal Creek. ... Shoal Creek was the site of the PGA Championship in 1984 and 1990. In 1990, Shoal Creek's all-white membership and remarks club founder Hall Thompson made that the club wouldn't be pressured into accepting black members sparked a controversy. The club now has black members, including former Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice.

6 Ukrainian soldiers killed; Germany pushes peace

KIEV, Ukraine (AP) — An insurgent ambush killed six soldiers Tuesday in eastern Ukraine as Germany moved to jumpstart a possible plan toward peace that includes launching a dialogue on decentralizing the government in Kiev.

Ukraine's leadership appeared cool to the plan and U.S. officials view its prospects for success skeptically. But some analysts say Russian President Vladimir Putin is more likely to accept a deal that doesn't come from Washington.

German Foreign Minister Frank-Walter Steinmeier is in Ukraine to try to broker a quick launch of talks between the central government and pro-Russian separatists. That would be a first step in implementing a "road map" drawn up by the Organization of Security and Cooperation in Europe aimed at settling the crisis.

The OSCE is a trans-Atlantic security and rights group that includes Russia and the U.S., whose sparring over each other's role in Ukraine sometimes overshadows events on the ground.

Speaking in Brussels, acting Prime Minister Arseniy Yatsenyuk thanked the OSCE for its plan but said Ukraine has drawn up its own "road map" for ending the crisis and noted the people of his country should settle the issue themselves.

A settlement has been elusive, as insurgents in eastern Ukraine seize police stations and government buildings. Two regions in the east have declared themselves independent after a week-end referendum, and one of them, Donetsk, has appealed for annexation by Russia.

Ukrainian forces have mounted an offensive to try to put down the armed insurgents. On Tuesday, the Defense Ministry said six soldiers were killed by insurgents who ambushed a convoy. The separatist leader in Luhansk, one of the regions that declared independence, was shot and wounded, insurgents said.

The U.S. and Western European countries accuse Russia of fomenting the unrest, with the goal of destabilizing the country or seeking a pretext to invade and seize eastern regions, which are largely Russian-speaking and the heartland of Ukrainian industry.

Russia in turn denounces Ukraine's caretaker government, which took power after pro-Russia president Viktor Yanukovich was ousted in February following months of large protests. Moscow calls it a nationalist junta encouraged by Washington.

Western countries have slapped an array of sanctions on Russia both for its alleged role in the east and for its annexation of Crimea, the Black Sea peninsula that voted to split from Ukraine in March.

With the tensions high between Washington and Moscow, Steinmeier may be a more effective interlocutor. A senior official in the U.S. administration told The Associated Press that the U.S. had been coordinating with Germany and encouraging its leadership for a diplomatic path in Ukraine. The official spoke on condition of anonymity because of not being authorized to discuss the Ukraine crisis in public.

Putin "is far more likely to bow to pressure if it's going to come from (German Chancellor) Angela Merkel than Barack Obama," said Michael Geary of the Institute for European Global Studies at Switzerland's University of Basel.

The OSCE plan, by encouraging discussion of decentralizing the government, suggests that the West sees Russia as having the upper hand. Moscow has pushed for the "federalization" of Ukraine — giving the regions more powers.

Keir Giles, a military analyst at the Chatham House think-tank in London, said that what Moscow wants is for "Russia-backed separatists to have a voice in drafting a new constitution for Ukraine, which essentially means Russia dictating what the constitution should include."

It is unclear which representatives could be included from the separatists' side in the discussions. Ukraine has said it will not meet with "terrorists."

"Neither the local government nor the protesters nor armed separatists fully control the regions in the east. It's not clear whom the Ukrainian government should be talking to," said Kiev-based political analyst Volodymyr Fesenko.

The OSCE plan calls on all sides to refrain from violence and urges amnesty for those involved in the unrest as well as talks on decentralization and the status of the Russian language. It envisages a quick launch of high-level round tables across the country bringing together national lawmakers and representatives of the central government and the regions.

Russia called for a swift implementation of the OSCE plan, saying its demand to end violence means that Kiev should stop its military operation to recapture buildings in the east, lift its blockade of cities and towns, pull its forces from eastern regions and release all insurgents.

"We are demanding (they) stop intimidating civilians by using force or threatening to use it," Russia's Foreign Ministry said in a statement.

It added that it expects separatists in Ukraine's Donetsk and Luhansk regions to respond in kind if Kiev does. However, the insurgents previously defied Putin's call to put off the referendum and they brushed off a call to disarm and leave the buildings they occupy that was part of a conflict-resolution pact that Russia, Kiev, the U.S. and the European Union negotiated less than a month ago in Geneva.

Russia also urged the U.S. and the EU to persuade authorities in Kiev to prioritize discussions of giving more powers to Ukraine's regions ahead of a May 25 presidential election.

With few other avenues for diplomacy available, the U.S. appears to see little harm in at least having Germany test Putin's willingness to accept this new roadmap.

"We certainly support the efforts of our allies and partners," White House spokesman Jay Carney said, adding that the U.S. welcomed Kiev's efforts to move forward with the round-table discussions on constitutional reform and national unity that are a centerpiece of the OSCE plan.

Yevhen Perebiynis, a spokesman for the Ukrainian Foreign Ministry, lamented that the OSCE deal does not specifically oblige Russia to do anything.

"The de-escalation of the situation directly depends on whether Russia will stop sponsoring the terrorists, withdraw its troops from the border or whether it will call on terrorists lay down the arms and vacate the building they have seized," Perebiynis said in comments carried by the Interfax news agency.

The government in Kiev had been hoping the May 25 vote would unify the country behind a new, democratically chosen leadership. But Ukraine's crisis could worsen if regions start rejecting the presidential election. The insurgents in Luhansk have already said they wouldn't hold the balloting, and the leader of pro-Russian activists in Donetsk, Denis Pushilin, said they will use unspecified "means and methods" to prevent the vote from happening.

11,800 measles/mumps vaccines distributed in Ohio

COLUMBUS (AP) — Ohio health officials have distributed more than 11,800 doses of vaccines to try to stem recent outbreaks of measles and mumps in the state.

The state epidemiologist, Mary DiOrionio, said Tuesday that around half of those measles-mumps-rubella (MMR) vaccines have been administered.

There have been 68 measles cases reported in six counties, mostly among unvaccinated individuals in the Amish community. She says it's the largest outbreak in the U.S. since 1996. Officials say it began with unvaccinated travelers who visited the Philippines, which has had a measles epidemic. Ohio counties reporting measles have received 11,200 of the doses.

Officials say the mumps outbreak that started in central Ohio in January has reached 342 cases, mostly in Franklin County. The state has sent out 640 doses to counties with mumps cases.
