Trustees seek levy for roads

By KEVIN HOWELL
Staff Writer

Residents will decide on additional taxes for road maintenance and equipment Nov. 4.

Township officials are proposing an additional 1.5-mill road levy for general road maintenance and equipment. The five-year levy is expected to generate $102,000 annually.

The township currently has two road levies on the books—a 3-mill approved in November 2011 that generates $134,300 annually and a 3.5-mill approved in November 2010 that generates $210,200 annually—but they are no longer meeting the needs of the township, according to Trustee Tom Sanor. The trustees elected to seek an additional levy instead of a replacement so that qualified residents can retain rollback savings on the original levies that equate to approximately 12 percent, he noted.

In information provided to the Salem News, the trustees said they feel the levy is needed to bolster the funds that allow them to care for 56 miles of roads.

"We have been struggling for some time with a shortage of funds from the LGF (Local Government Funds) and our current levy values are bringing in so little because of the age of the levies," they said.

The trustees expect the levy if approved to bring the township back to where it was five years ago, allowing them to meet the goal of chipping 10 miles of roads each year in the countywide program. Township road employees chipped and sealed only five miles of road this summer due to financial problems, according to the information.

"With 56 miles of road to do, we cannot keep a four-year rotation on our chipping program," the trustees said. "If the township doesn't do more roads with the chipping program, it will not be able to keep up."

The trustees added that road equipment is aging, as well.

Sanor noted that the trustees will not place too much emphasis on the extra money, but recognize that residents seem to want the services that the money will help continue.

Small fire delays work on TanFastic building

SALEM — State Street is expected to reopen sometime this morning in downtown Salem after a small fire Monday caused a slight delay for completion of the shoring up project at the crumbling TanFastic building.

A Salem Fire Department report said a construction worker stopped at the fire station at 2:28 p.m. to report a small fire had started in the insulation inside a wall while they were cutting steel cables holding the building together.

The worker said he dumped a good amount of water inside the space and believed he extinguished the fire, but wanted the fire department to check it. Using the new platform ladder truck, firefighters checked the area with a thermal imaging camera.

Lt. Lance Ritchie said they checked the roof and checked the wall where the contractors had been working and "no hot spots were found." Fire Chief Jeff Hughes said it was likely there were sparks when they were cutting the cables. Smoke had been reported coming out of a third floor window.

The iron workers started the project last Wednesday, attaching steel straps from the corner of the TanFastic building to the northern facade in an attempt to shore up a column of bricks considered a safety risk due to the large, visible crack showing separation between the column and the rest of the dilapidated structure.

The straps measure 18 feet long, 4 inches wide and up to a half-inch thick. Bolts were placed in epoxy. Cables were then put in place to hold netting for both the north facade and west wall.

City Service/Safety Director Ken Kenst also explained that four shorter measuring straps of aluminum were put in place over the crack and marked, so the engineers will be able to tell if the column of bricks has moved at all. The marks will be checked on a monthly basis. A plastic tarp was placed over that part of the roof and over the west wall in an effort to prevent water from getting inside.

The netting was installed with 10 feet on the north facade and 30 feet on the west wall.

Firefighters set to roll out new services

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

Township residents can expect a couple of new services from the Perry Township Volunteer Fire Department in the coming months, with first responder and fire inspection services nearly ready to deploy.

Firefighter Sandy Messimer told township trustees during their meeting Monday that the first responder program received approval for its drug license. After a state inspector checks over their equipment, she said they should have the license in hand as of Nov. 5, but won't go live until the protocols are out and Fire Chief Bruce Whitcher talks to the trustees.

"Ambulance companies will do all the transporting?" Trustee Chairman Cliff Mix asked.

Messimer verified that the fire department will not do transports. When firefighters first announced their intention to start a first responder service, they said it would be modeled much like the one utilized by the Salem Fire Department.

The firefighters certified as first responders will be able to provide limited life-saving procedures and act as backup until an ambulance service arrives. In no way is the first responder service meant to replace an ambulance service, according to Whitcher.

The trustees approved a resolution for fire inspections, paving the way for firefighters certified as inspectors to offer free fire safety/prevention inspections at commercial businesses in the township and home-based businesses in the township.

"I think it's a good deal, especially good for township businesses," Mix said.

All the businesses have to do is contact Whitcher for an inspection by calling 330-332-4641 and leaving a message.

The effective date for the inspection service may not be until December, after the resolution has been posted in five places in the township for 31 days and in the newspaper.

In other business, trustees again reminded residents about leaf pickup and the availability of free environmentally-safe paper leaf bags. Mix said any township residents in need of leaf bags can call the road department at 330-337-7266 to arrange a time to pick some up at the south station on Depot Road. If no one answers the phone, residents should leave their name and phone number so someone can call them back to set up a pickup time.

The bags also will be available on election day at the north station/administration building on Ellsworth Avenue.

Trustees will hold the annual leaf pickup for residents in the unincorporated area beginning Nov. 3 for two weeks on the north side and beginning Nov. 17 for two weeks on the south side. Leaves must be secured in bags and placed on the curb lawn near the street for pickup, with bags of a size that can be lifted into a truck by one person. The dividing line between north and south for

Abduction charge expected after Sunday night incident

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

PERRY TWP. — Police Chief Mike Emigh said he's filing an arrest warrant this morning for an abduction charge against 34-year-old James Strait, who has been the subject of a search since an incident Sunday night.

Township police first received a call regarding a domestic at Strait's residence at 1137 Cunningham Road at 7:58 p.m. Sunday.

The caller reported a man was holding a woman against her will with a firearm and threatening to shoot her and law enforcement personnel. It was also reported he had assaulted another man with a baseball bat.

Strait's been on the run ever since, according to Emigh, with police searching the woods between his residence and a relative's apartment in the 1300 block of South Lincoln Avenue, where he taken the female victim identified as Jackie Cruz and then fled without her. She was unharmed.

Emigh said the relative reported he returned to the apartment later, pounding on the door wanting his cell phone, but she wouldn't let him in and he fled again into the woods. Anyone with information about his whereabouts should call the Perry Township Police at 330-332-1000 or their local law enforcement. Police are also looking for a gun allegedly tossed in the woods after he initially left his home with the female victim.

Today is Tuesday, Oct. 28, the 301st day of 2014. There are 64 days left in the year. Ten years ago: Insurgents slaughtered 11 Iraqi soldiers, declaring on an Islamic militant website that Iraqi fighters would avenge "the blood" of women and children killed in U.S. strikes on the guerrilla stronghold of Fallujah. Five years ago: Taliban militants stormed a guest house used by U.N. staff in the heart of the Afghan capital, leaving 11 dead, including five U.N. staff and three attackers. One year ago: Penn State said it would pay $59.7 million to 26 young men over claims of child sexual abuse at the hands of former assistant football coach Jerry Sandusky.

Emigh said the rest of the possible charges related to the case will be presented to the Columbiana County grand jury. He explained that Cruz was Strait's ex-girlfriend and she came to the residence with her brother-in-law, Jeffrey Fleming, 30, of Darlington, Pa. to retrieve her belongings and return to Pennsylvania. Strait allegedly didn't want her leaving and produced a baseball bat, allegedly striking Fleming in the head, causing injury, he said.

From what police were told, Fleming was able to drive himself back to Darlington and a relative took him to a local hospital, then he was transported by helicopter to UPMC in Pittsburgh, Pa., where Emigh said he remains for treatment.

According to the female victim, Strait took a gun when he fled the house with her and made it known he wouldn't be taken alive.

"She was fearful because of statements he had made," Emigh said.

When police were first called, township officers secured the perimeter in the 1300 block of Cunningham Road with help from Salem officers who were called to assist, along with the Sheriff's Office.

The Columbiana County Special Response Team was activated and began staging, then police received a call from Strait's relative in the 1300 block of South Lincoln Avenue saying that he was there with the female victim. Salem Police responded a little before 10 p.m. and found the female unharmed.

Emigh said a search warrant was obtained and executed at the Cunningham Road residence to look for evidence related to the incident, with Salem Police called to assist at 2:34 a.m. Monday. Some evidence was obtained, but Strait was not there. Another search of the woods was conducted Monday with assistance from the Sheriff's Office canine unit and deputies, but came up empty. Strait does not have a vehicle or valid license.

Emigh said they were grateful for the help from Salem Police, the Sheriff's Office and the Bureau of Criminal Investigation & Identification, for all their assistance. Salem and Perry Township fire departments also assisted by blocking off Cunningham Road at Butcher and state Route 344.

South Range 5-year forecast improves; deficits still loom

By KEVIN HOWELL
Staff Writer

BEAVER TOWNSHIP— The South Range school board Monday night approved a five-year financial forecast that shows slight improvement, but not enough to alter the significant operating deficits.

Submitted by school Treasurer Jim Phillips, the forecast shows a deficit of nearly $490,000 in the fund balance for certification of appropriations, an increase of $117,000 from the May forecast, which Phillips attributed partially to an increase in open enrollment.

The cash balance shows a surplus through next year, but enters a deficit in 2017 and grows to over $2.5 million in the final year. Expenditures are expected to exceed revenues by $450,000 next year and grow to nearly $1.2 million in the final year.

Regarding the slight improvement in the forecast, Phillips said the district, which changed to K-12 this year instead of K-6, has increased its enrollment revenue to $1.17 million versus $511,000 last year. Schools Superintendent Dennis Dunham said that the district has received 205 more students this year than the last.

The board on next week's ballot is seeking a 3.9-mill, 10-year levy that will generate $707,560 in an effort to battle the projected deficits.

In other business the board approved the creation of a boys junior varsity coaching position at no increase to supplemental costs of the basketball coaching contracts; salaries of the current positions will be adjusted to include the new one. The board then approved coaching contracts for John Cullen, varsity boys head; TJ Irons, assistant varsity boys; Harold McCue, seventh-grade boys; Burt Sellers, boys junior varsity; Jeff Fishel, freshman boys; Michael Kollar, assistant varsity girls; Dana Matthews, freshman girls; Colleen Eisenbraun, eighth-grade girls; and Kendall Malsch, seventh-grade girls. The board also approved as unpaid volunteer coaches Eugene Leeson, softball; Brandon Pluchinsky, boys basketball; and Jerry Belmonto, middle school boys basketball.

In other personnel matters the board hired Alfred Davison as a part-time cleaner, Lisa Stilliana and Gina Calpin as part-time educational aides, George McDowell as a technology helper and Firl Byers as sewage treatment plant operator. The board also rescinded the assistant cheerleading supplemental for Katie Toy and hired her as a part-time tutor, as well as approved Paul Cubick as an on board instructor for bus driver training.

Also at the meeting Food Service Director Kelly Fullum reported that the cafeteria has taken in more than $8,000 more this year than the same time last year.

Dunham reported that the district's newsletter will be distributed online instead of in the mail beginning in November. He said the K-12 newsletter will be sent as an attachment via a no-reply email.

The next regular board meeting has been changed to 7:30 p.m. Nov. 24 in the high school band room.

Fullum drops protection order bid

By TOM GIAMBRONI
Staff Writer

LISBON — Brian Fullum has dropped his attempt to obtain a protection order against Columbiana County Auditor Nancy Milliken for mailing him a response to a complaint he filed against her with the Ohio Elections Commission.

Fullum filed a dismissal notice Monday just hours before a full hearing on his requested protection order was to be held before Columbiana County Common Pleas Court Magistrate J. Bradley Allison. According to Fullum's motion, he was dropping the matter due to "lack of evidence."

The motion did not make it to the magistrate's courtroom before the hearing was held, however, so Allison dismissed the matter after Fullum did not show up.

Fullum filed for a protection order against Milliken on Oct. 17 after he received a document from her by certified mail, which was Milliken's official response to the elections commission complaint Fullum had filed. Magistrate Allison denied Fullum's request for an emergency protection order and had scheduled the matter for further hearing on Monday.

Commission rules require responses be served to the parties in a dispute, but Fullum characterized this as an attempt by Milliken to harass him since she is among the county officials who are the subject of a lawsuit he filed this year.

The lawsuit alleges Fullum resigned from the county coroner's office under duress after his former boss created a hostile work environment when he raised concerns about how the office was being run.

The petition is actually for a stalking protection order, which is the way it is stated under the law, although Fullum said he was not accusing Milliken of stalking him. Fullum had said Sunday he was considering dropping the matter because he did not like how it was being covered by the news media.

Poland in defense shift to east as security concerns rise

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland is planning a major realignment of its military structure because of the conflict in neighboring Ukraine, the country's defense minister said Monday, a move that could shift thousands of troops to its eastern border.

"The geopolitical situation has changed. We have the biggest crisis of security since the Cold War and we must draw conclusions from that," Polish Defense Minister Tomasz Siemoniak told The Associated Press.

Although Poland joined NATO in 1999, most of its 120,000-member army is based along the country's western border, as a relic of its former status as a Soviet bloc member.

That is going to change, Siemoniak said, adding that at least three military bases in the east will increase from the current 30 percent of capacity to almost 90 percent by the end of 2017. That's a potential increase of thousands of troops, although Siemoniak wouldn't specify a precise overall figure.

Up to 400 jobs would be filled in the air defense unit in Siedlce alone by 2017, he said.

"I believe that what happened to the east of Poland does not represent a threat to us for the next months, or two or three or five years. It is a need to draw conclusions for the decades to come," he added in explaining the large scope of the plans.

The announcement follows a visit by U.S. President Barack Obama to Estonia last month in which he urged NATO members to do more to assist Ukraine.

There was no immediate reaction in Moscow to the planned Polish military moves. The Russian government may be reluctant to criticize Poland since Russia had insisted on the right to position its forces as it wishes within its own country when confronted by the West over the deployment of Russian troops along the Ukrainian border.

Deputies spoke to Veronica Foster, who said her husband was highly intoxicated and did not want to leave a party. They argued, but she said nothing physical happened. Timothy Foster returned home a short time later and demanded deputies take him to jail. He became upset when deputies told him because he did nothing wrong he was not going to jail. He offered to kick the deputy in the crotch if he would then go to jail. Deputies told him he would regret that decision. Foster eventually went inside and passed out.

— Eugene Tripp, Alderlick Road, Salineville, reported at 11:30 a.m. Monday he received a letter from the BMV wanting him to send proof of insurance for a 2012 Ford pickup. Tripp told deputies he does not own such a truck and he called the BMV, but was waiting for a supervisor to call him back.

— Hugh Ward, Navajo Trail, Negley, reported at 11:29 a.m. Monday he parked his semi truck, which belongs to JB Hunt at the Y-Inn in Rogers on Friday. On Monday he returned to find someone broke into it taking a Magnum CB radio, Ram McNally GPS and a Bluetooth. The passenger's side window was broken.

— Dennis Stock, East Palestine dispatcher, reported at 10:26 a.m. Sunday there was a suspicious person at the Dollar General in New Waterford. Deputies found Jay Farrow inside and he told deputies he was just shopping for a phone card. Deputies left, but were called back at 1 p.m. when the manager told deputies Farrow was outside asking people for money. He was told to leave and not return.

Algae at Buckeye Lake could threaten tourism

BUCKEYE LAKE (AP) — Those who depend on tourism at a central Ohio lake popular with boaters and fishermen are concerned about the higher levels of toxic blue-green algae this year. Algae levels at Buckeye Lake east of Columbus were consistently higher this year than in any of the past three years, despite increased protection efforts.

Warning signs went up at the nearly 5-square-mile lake in June and have remained at some beaches since. Elevated levels of microcystin — a liver toxin created by algae — have some Buckeye Lake advocates worried about the future of tourism, a major part of the community's economy, according to The Columbus Dispatch (<http://bit.ly/1v3j8FG>).

"You've got property values, the tourism, the fishermen," said Merv Bartholow, the director of Buckeye Lake for Tomorrow, a nonprofit group that works on water quality at Buckeye Lake. "It's an angler's paradise out here, especially during certain seasons. Businesses depend on it."

Toxic algae are common in most Ohio lakes, growing thick by feeding on phosphorus from manure, sewage and fertilizers that rain washes into waterways.

The Ohio Department of Natural Resources manages Buckeye Lake, but the Ohio Environmental Protection Agency maintains the warning list. As of Friday, the list had warnings for three beaches at Buckeye Lake, four at Grand Lake St. Marys and one at Maumee Bay State Park on Lake Erie.

Some worry that Buckeye Lake will become the next Grand Lake St. Marys, where tourism has been hurt by toxic-algae woes. The shallow lake in western Ohio has recorded some of the highest microcystin levels in the state.

Microcystin became so pervasive in Lake Erie this summer that it contaminated the city of Toledo's drinking-water system, leaving 500,000 people without public drinking water.

Grand jury returns no bill in Lisbon case

LISBON — A no bill of indictment was returned by the Columbiana County Common Pleas Court grand jury on a charge against Ralph J. Libert, 43, Grant Street, Lisbon. He had been accused of domestic violence. The case was dismissed.

CLARIFICATIONS

The Mahoning County communities of Goshen and Smith townships were omitted from the gas aggregate pre-election story published in Monday's edition. Passage of the issue would permit the communities to join Northeast Ohio Public Energy Council (NOPEC), a nonprofit group that has a cooperative purchasing agreement with NextEra Energy Resources to supply natural gas to customers using 500 cubic feet per year. The program will be an opt-out one.

In the Hotel Metzger fire story published in the Oct. 19 edition, Salem Fire Department Lt. Martin Catlos also responded to the scene.

Kensington area man accused of pointing shotgun at deputy arraigned

Staff Reports

LISBON — A Kensington area man accused of pointing a loaded shotgun at a Columbiana County sheriff's deputy on Saturday was arraigned Monday morning in county Municipal Court.

A Nov. 3 pretrial was set for Mark A. Gromley, 48, Emerick Road, Kensington, who is charged with aggravated menacing, weapons while intoxicated and resisting arrest. He is alleged to have been intoxicated when deputies went to his home at 6:57 p.m. Saturday. His wife told deputies she had argued with her husband and feared for her life because he had loaded guns with him in the bedroom.

When deputies entered the bedroom, he reportedly had a loaded shotgun in his hand, which he pointed at a sheriff's deputy. Deputies talked him into putting the weapon down.

Judge Carol Robb set Gromley's bond at $25,000 cash or surety and set the condition he is to possess no firearms or other weapons pending further order.

Emergency Dept. parking changes announced

SALEM — Limited parking will be available in the Emergency Department (ED) parking lot at Salem Regional Medical Center (SRMC), starting at 5 p.m. today and continuing through approximately 7 p.m. Wednesday. This means that the number of available ED parking spaces will be reduced by approximately one-half during this time. The temporary reduction in parking spaces is necessary to allow preparation of the lot for resurfacing.

Individuals transporting people to the SRMC ED for treatment are advised to deliver patients to the ED drop off area, which will remain open and accessible from the East State Street parking lot entrance. Limited ED patient parking will be available in the ED lot, with overflow parking in SRMC's North parking lot, which is located across the street from SRMC's main campus. Additional security staff will be stationed in the ED lot to assist and direct new arrivals to the ED. Visitors to the medical center are asked to use alternate hospital parking during this time.

The parking lot resurfacing project will be completed in two phases, with a re-paving phase to be completed at a later date. When finished, the ED lot will be completely resurfaced and new curbs will be added. This project will improve traffic flow and enhance handicap accessibility by allowing a smoother transition from car to door. For additional information, please call the SRMC Public Relations Department at 330-337-2895.

Halloween safety dos and don'ts

Halloween Trick or Treat and other activities are coming up fast, so it's time to take steps for a spooky but safe outing.

When it comes to trick or treat night, it's important to go at the appointed times set by your community and stick to neighborhoods you know. Parents should plan their route ahead and supervise this activity as much as possible. Never send a child to trick or treat alone. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention also offers these tips:

- Walk on sidewalks and not in a roadway and carry a flashlight if it is dark.
- Attach reflective tape or wear reflective clothing.
- Avoid masks to keep children from tripping or falling.
- Don't wear loose-fitting costumes. Stay clear of lighted candles or other luminaries.
- Avoid homemade treats and check candy for choking hazards or signs of tampering.

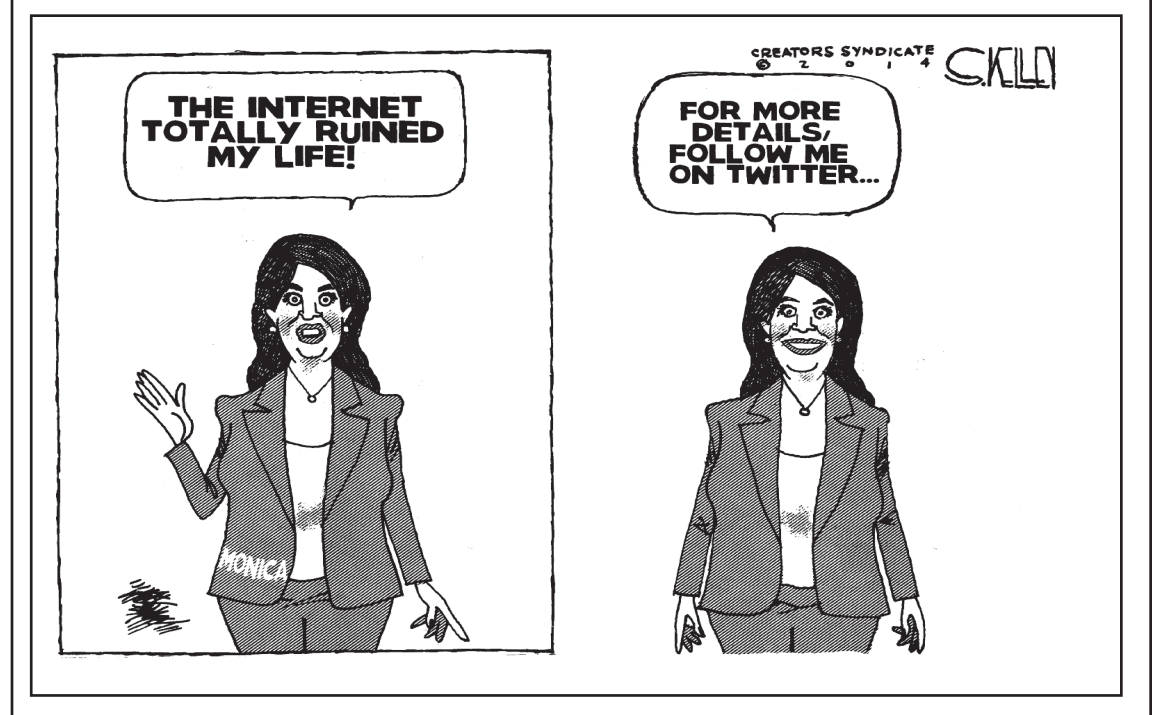

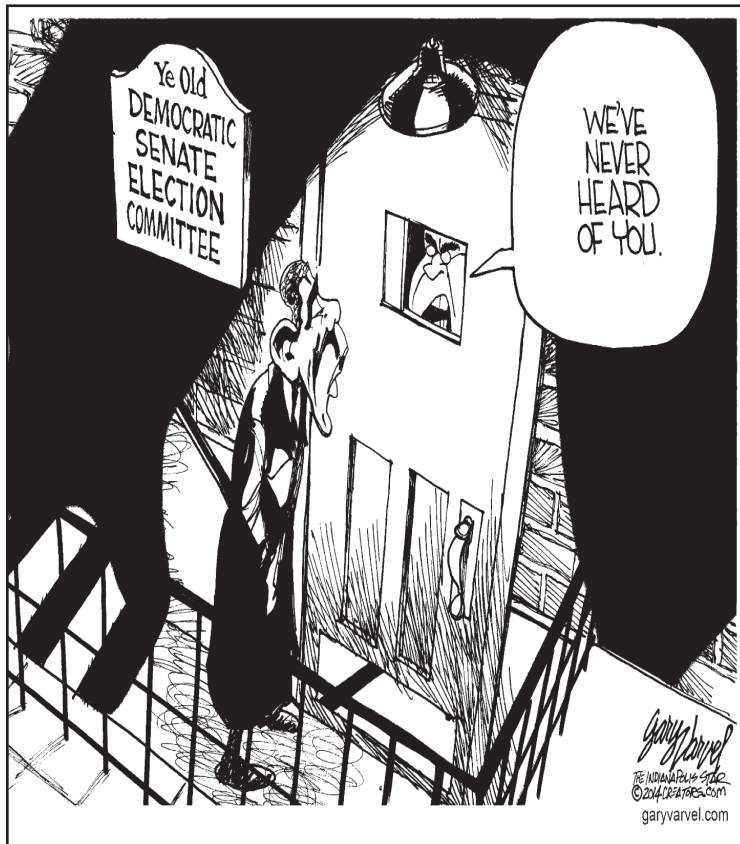

We also want to remind motorists to be on special alert this time of year. According to the CDC, children are four times more likely to be in a fatal pedestrian accident during trick-or-treating than on any other night of the year. Be on the lookout for youngsters. Drive slowly and prepare to stop.

We wish everyone a safe and happy Halloween.

Michael Brown and race hoaxes

MONA CHAREN

Back in August, when news first broke of a shooting in Ferguson, Mo., the media world, perpetually tingling with eagerness for white-on-black violence stories, plunged into delirium. An unarmed, black 18-year-old "gentle giant" had been shot in the back while running away from a white police officer! He was just preparing to enter college in the fall. He had been assassinated while holding his hands in the air in a gesture of helplessness.

"Hands up; don't shoot," chanted protesters. The "hands up" gesture immediately achieved iconic status among demonstrators from Boston to New York to San Francisco.

If the early reports of the tragedy had been accurate, I would have been happy to jump on a plane and march with the protesters. I wouldn't have set fire to any convenience stores or beauty parlors -- nor would I, as Missouri's governor and U.S. attorney general did, imply that "justice" would mean the "prosecution" of the officer -- but I would have demanded a full investigation and, if the evidence supported it, an arrest.

But the reports were not accurate, and we had reason to doubt them as soon as the video of the convenience store robbery emerged. The theft and rough shoving of the owner didn't look very gentle. The small cigars Brown stole are often filled with pot.

Now, as the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and The Washington Post are reporting, more evidence is emerging that supports the officer's account. The autopsy (first released in September) shows that Brown was not shot in the back. He was hit in the chest, arm and forehead. The entry wounds show that his hands were not raised when he was hit, and blood-spatter evidence suggests he was advancing on Officer Darren Wilson. A wound on Brown's hand contained gunpowder residue, supporting Wilson's claim that Brown went for his gun while Wilson was seated in the car. There is forensic evidence showing that the gun did, as Wilson testified, go off in the car.

Seven or eight African-American eyewitnesses, reports the Post, support Wilson's account of what happened that afternoon but have remained out of the public eye for their own safety.

Brown was found to have enough THC in his body to trigger hallucinations. Marijuana doesn't usually promote aggression, but it can induce paranoia in some people and certainly warp perception. His companion, Dorian Johnson, who provided some of the narrative about Brown's supposed hands-up posture, has a criminal record and has lied to police in the past.

And so Brown joins a long, very sad list of faux "civil rights" victims. Recall the "epidemic" of black church burnings in the South, the nooses found hanging from black professors' offices, the KKK appearance at Oberlin College a couple of years ago, the Tawana Brawley rape case and the Florida black voter disenfranchisement case. Each of these, and too many other cases to list, was greeted with lip-smacking relish from the press. All of them were frauds or hoaxes.

In this familiar morality play, it's always 1963; it's forever Selma. Participants luxuriate in the warm bath of sympathy for victims of the kind of white racism that disappeared decades ago. The awful period in American history when Emmett Till (to whom Brown has been compared, which is outrageous) could be lynched for smiling at a white girl, when the Scottsboro boys were found guilty of rape despite one of the "victims" admitting she had lied, when blacks faced endemic racism everywhere, is long gone.

Now racism is the province of a few kooks, while the overwhelming majority of Americans of all colors agree on the sacredness of equality and vote twice for a black president to underscore it. Americans have many more pressing problems than racism -- including family decay, terror threats, educational mediocrity, stagnant growth, intergenerational poverty and shrill polarization.

So it's heartbreaking to watch the kabuki theater play out yet again and to know that thousands, maybe millions, of American blacks are being deceived into believing that an 18-year-old who showed really bad judgment in attacking a police officer is a civil rights hero, and that young black males minding their own business on city streets are in danger of being shot by police for fun. It's demoralizing for blacks and a calumny on whites.

OTHER VOICES

Oct. 22

The Commercial Appeal, Memphis, Tennessee, on Putin's antics:

When George W. Bush proposed pulling U.S. bases out of Germany and moving them farther east to Poland and Romania, the plan got a chilly reception with the U.S. public and Congress.

The move was meant as a cost-saver, and a welcoming and less crowded Eastern Europe offered plenty of room for maneuvers. Bush also intended the bases as a shield against the problematic attack by Iranian missiles. But Bush's credibility was at low ebb. Russia was in economic shambles and posed little immediate threat. Now large, permanent NATO bases in Eastern Europe don't seem such a bad idea, particularly now that Russian President Vladimir Putin has annexed Crimea, seems bent on reducing Eastern Ukraine to vassal status and cowering Poland into weakening its commitment to NATO.

As Russia's economy sinks deeper into recession, more because of falling oil prices than Western sanctions, Putin reflexively blames all of Russia's woes on the West. Then there is the problem of Putin himself. His behavior is increasingly erratic, and although this might be a tactic to keep the West off balance, his actions have surely started to worry his acolytes in the Kremlin.

He kept, for example, West German Chancellor Angela Merkel waiting for a meeting in Milan. As a former KGB agent in East Germany, he must have been aware that this was a horrendous breach of protocol. The New York Times commented that "Mr. Putin's showmanship appears to be wearing thin with Europe's leaders."

Poland's current leadership is formally opposed to a permanent NATO base on its soil, preferring a quick reaction force based somewhere else. That will change in a hurry if Russia, as it surely will to distract from domestic problems, begins to meddle in Polish affairs.

Chilling free speech with NSF's Truthy study

ANDREW NAPOLITANO

Last week, the federal government's National Science Foundation, an entity created to encourage the study of science -- encouragement that it achieves by awarding grants to scholars and universities -- announced that it had awarded a grant to study what people say about themselves and others in social media. The NSF dubbed the project Truthy, a reference to comedian Stephen Colbert's invention and hilarious use of the word "truthiness."

The reference to Colbert is cute, and he is a very funny guy, but when the feds get into the business of monitoring speech, it is surely no joke; it is a nightmare. It is part of the Obama administration's persistent efforts to monitor communication and scrutinize the expressions of opinions it hates and fears.

We already know the National Security Agency has the digital versions of all telephone conversations and emails sent to, from or within the U.S. since 2005. Edward Snowden's revelations of all this are credible and substantiated, and the government's denials are weak and unavailing -- so weak and unavailing that many NSA agents disbelieve them.

But the government's unbridled passion to monitor us has become insatiable. Just two months ago, the Federal Communications Commission, which licenses broadcasters, threatened to place federal agents in cable television newsrooms so they can see how stories are generated and produced. The FCC doesn't even regulate cable, yet it threatened to enhance its own authority by monitoring cable companies from the inside.

What's going on here?

What's going on here, and has been going on since President Obama took office in January 2009, is a government with little or no fidelity to basic constitutional norms. There is no defense under the Constitution to any aspect of the government's -- federal, state, regional, local or hybrid; or any entity owned or controlled by any government; or any entity that exercises the government's coercive powers or spends or receives its money -- monitoring the expressive behavior of anyone in the U.S., not in a newsroom, on social media or anywhere else.

The NSF's stated purpose of the Truthy squad is to look for errors in speech, particularly errors that fuel hatred or political extremes. This monitoring -- this so-called search for error -- is totalitarian and directly contradicts well-grounded Supreme Court jurisprudence, for several reasons.

First, for the government to gather information -- public or private -- on any person, the Constitution requires that the government have "articulable suspicion" about that person. Articulable suspicion is a mature and objective reason to believe that the person has engaged in criminal behavior. Without that level of articulable belief, the government is powerless to scrutinize anyone for any reason.

The articulable suspicion threshold is vital to assure that people in America have the presumption of liberty and are free to choose their behavior unimpeded or threatened by the government. The feds cannot cast a net into the marketplace of ideas and challenge what it brings in. Were they able to do so, the constitutional protections for free expression and the primacy of liberty would be meaningless.

Second, the courts have repeatedly held that the First Amendment needs breathing room, and they also have held that government monitoring of speech curtails that breathing room. Stated differently, a person under observation changes behavior on account of the observation. Thus, by the very act of monitoring our words, the feds will have the effect of curtailing them.

The virtual or physical presence of the monitors would give people pause, cause them to reconsider offering opinions, induce them to refrain from expressing their true thoughts and even drive their speech underground. This is called "chilling," and it has been condemned by numerous

Supreme Court decisions.

The principal purpose of the First Amendment is to keep the government out of the marketplace of ideas, and any governmental behavior that influences the exercise of the freedom of speech -- no matter how gently, indirectly, innocently or secretly -- violates that principle and provides the basis to sue the government to have its Stasi-like monitoring of speech enjoined. Another prime purpose of the First Amendment is to encourage open, wide, unfettered and robust debate about the policies and the personnel of the government. Who can engage in that with Big Brother watching and keeping score?

All presidents push the envelope when it comes to exercising their constitutional powers. But we never before have seen in modern times a president like the present one. From his halcyon days as a senator fighting for civil liberties, he has descended into a totalitarian darkness. How can he ask soldiers to defend a Constitution with their lives that he disregards with his deeds?

The government is worried about speech. Big deal. Speech is none of the government's business. History teaches that the remedy for tasteless speech is not government repression -- it is more speech. In a free society, when the marketplace of ideas is open and unfettered, the truth is obvious. But in a repressive society, the truth becomes a casualty. Which society did the Framers give us?

Center Township voters face decision on zoning

By TOM GIAMBRONI
Staff Writer

LISBON — Center Township voters will get to decide Nov. 4 whether they want some form of zoning or like things just they way they are.

The zoning plan was prepared over two years by a volunteer committee of Robert Berg, Gina Bettis, Jerry Connor, Bob Cosma and Sam Sowards.

They were asked by township trustees to come up with a zoning plan that strikes a balance between protecting residential properties and not being so overly restrictive that it unreasonably interferes with private property rights or impedes economic development in the township.

The plan creates three zoning districts: agricultural/residential; commercial/industrial; and special districts.

The zoning plan, among other things, prohibits outside storage of junked and abandoned vehicles or boats in residential/agricultural districts. It also bans accumulation or storage of junk, junked vehicles, disabled and inoperative machinery or equipment in residential/agricultural districts.

It also establishes regulations for accessory structures for residential dwellings, home businesses, swimming pools, small and large satellite dishes, animals and roadside stands.

The plan also creates a five-person planning commission, with the members appointed by trustees, and allows for a zoning inspector and implementation of a permit-fee-and-fine structure to help cover costs.

An opposition group was formed by township resident Darryl Muir, who said while the trustees may have wanted a limited approach that addresses problem properties maintained in a dilapidated manner, what they got was a comprehensive zoning plan that goes far beyond the stated intention.

“The 105-page resolution only refers to junk on property in one section consisting of 56 words, with no details on how or when we would go about enforcement or cleaning up ‘discarded objects,’” he said.

Muir said state law already provides the trustees with the authority to go after “nuisance” properties, with the cost of cleaning up these nuisance properties passed on to the property owner. “Why would we make another law to do the same thing and mask it in 105 pages of what we don’t need,” he said.

Trustee Joe Csonka, who took the lead in pursuing zoning, said the nuisance process is limited and can take more than a year to complete and takes cooperation of other local government agencies.

Csonka has said before he once was opposed to zoning but changed his mind over the past 10 years. He now sees the benefits of having some regulations that would prevent or restrict where junk yards, trash dumps and other sorts of landfills could be located in the township.

He said the problem of unkempt properties in the township has also continued to grow over the past decade. “Zoning gives the residents some power to resist anything, from out of state trash to injection wells, or a neighbor who accumulates trash,” Csonka said.

Csonka would have preferred first placing an issue on the ballot simply asking voters if they wanted the trustees to develop a zoning plan, but they were told this was impermissible. Their only option was to draft a plan and place it before voters.

Muir said the plan is so overly restrictive that it only allows for concrete, asphalt or paving brick driveways, and permits must be obtained for new fences, decks, out buildings and additions. It also includes site-plan requirement for new developments that address off-street parking, driveways, drainage and site lighting.

“The reason for opposing zoning in our township is really simple for me. If it ain’t broke don’t fix it The 105-page zoning (plan) is dedicated to fixing things which in fact aren’t broken and provides zero benefits for our townships,” he said.

Csonka said the driveway restriction applies to housing developments not individual driveways. “The zoning committee and the trustees are human, and there may be a few issues that we missed. Assuming zoning passes, any issues can be brought before the board” to changes the plan or grant variances, he said.

Flyers put out by the opposition group also mentioned regulations governing the choice of porch lights. Csonka said this it to prevent someone in a residential area from erecting the type of lighting found in commercial or industrial parking lots.

“This could be used if your neighbor put a beacon light on his porch that lit up your house and kept you from sleeping. Without zoning, your option would be to call a lawyer,” he said.

Committee chairman Robert Berg could not be reached for this story, but he stated before the majority of the 105 pages involved mandatory language required by Ohio law for any zoning plan. He said their plan was patterned on the one used by Beaver Township (North Lima area) in Mahoning County.

The plan contains no restrictions on oil and gas drilling, which is something trustees specifically wanted omitted so as not to interfere with the oil and gas development underway in the region.

Csonka praised the committee members, who volunteered their time over two and a half years, saying they represented a good cross section of the township. “These people did this without anything more than a thank you,” he said.

As for the question whether those with junk stored outside on their property are “grandfathered” in under zoning, Csonka said they would still be required to clean up their property. “You can’t grandfather in junk,” he said.

“These things all seem trivial or ridiculous until they affect you personally,” Csonka said.

Suspected meth-making items were confiscated Sunday night in East Palestine. (Special to the News/East Palestine Police Department)

Crash leads to mobile meth lab arrest

By KATIE WHITE
Staff Writer

EAST PALESTINE — A minor traffic crash Sunday night resulted in the arrest of one man after police uncovered a mobile meth lab in his vehicle.

Police Chief Kevin Dickey said officer Alex Pryor responded to East Martin Street near James Street after several people reported the crash, with the first call coming from East Martin Street resident Vicki Hoffman around 8:50 p.m.

The crash involved Jordon Wales, 22, of 357 Columbia St., who was westbound on East Martin Street in a 2012 Chevy four-door sedan when he struck a parked rental car driven by Fabian Ortiz, 33, Sixth Street, Columbiana.

Dickey said Ortiz was in the area visiting some residents at the time of the crash. The mobile meth lab was uncovered after a firefighter, on scene for the traffic crash, noticed Wales removing items from the trunk of his vehicle during the investigation and alerted Pryor.

Wales was then detained by police for the rest of the investigation, which uncovered a plastic bag that contained a plastic bottle that appeared to be what is commonly known as a “one pot” methamphetamine lab. Other items recovered included lithium, empty cartons of pseudoephedrine, acid, a razor blade, straw and about a gram of suspected methamphetamine, according to Dickey’s report.

Police notified the county drug task force, and stood by with East Palestine firefighters while task force officers secured the lab and rendered it safe for removal.

Dickey said in his report the fire department stood by in the event of a flash fire, which can easily result due to the extremely combustible nature of the ingredients used to manufacture meth.

Wales was charged with possession of chemicals for drugs. Dickey said he did not attempt to resist arrest or provide police with any statements during the investigation, which is continuing.

“He wasn’t saying a whole lot at the scene,” Dickey said when asked if Wales provided police with any information as to whether the items belonged to him or someone else.

As to what caused the crash, the chief said Wales did not appear to be under the influence of drugs or alcohol.

“From what we can tell right now it just seems to be a case of distracted driving,” he said.

Wales’ vehicle sustained heavy damage to the front while the rental car was heavily damaged on the left rear and side. There were no passengers with Wales and he was not injured, the chief added.

He also said Wales has no prior arrests or involvement with the local police department.

“All officers, agents and firefighters did an outstanding job in bringing this situation to a safe conclusion and I commend each of them for a job well done,” Dickey said.

Wales appeared Monday morning in county Municipal Court before Judge Carol Ann Robb, who granted him a public defender and set a $100,000 cash or surety bond. A preliminary hearing was set for Nov. 3.

Space station dodges junk from old satellite

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The International Space Station sidestepped a piece of treacherous junk Monday just hours before the planned launch of a supply ship from Virginia.

NASA said debris from an old, wrecked Russian satellite would have come dangerously close to the orbiting lab — just two-tenths of a mile — if not for the move.

The space station was maneuvered well out of harm’s way to keep the outpost and its six inhabitants safe.

Mission Control was informed of the space junk over the weekend. It is wreckage from a Kosmos satellite that was launched in 1993 and collided with an Iridium spacecraft in 2009.

Mission Control said the space station’s relocation would not affect Monday evening’s scheduled launch of a commercial supply ship.

Orbital Sciences Corp.’s unmanned Cygnus capsule holds 5,000 pounds of cargo for NASA, including 32 mini research satellites, a meteor tracker, and a tank of high-pressure nitrogen to replenish a vestibule used by spacewalking astronauts. Liftoff was scheduled for 6:45 p.m. from Wallops Island, Virginia.

The launch, coming a half-hour after sunset, should be visible along much of the Eastern Seaboard, from South Carolina to Connecticut and Massachusetts. As an added bonus, the space station was to pass overhead five minutes later, resembling a fast-moving star.

Traffic is heavy these days 260 miles up. Just this past Saturday, a Dragon cargo ship supplied by the California-based SpaceX company — its fifth — departed the space station after a monthlong visit and splashed into the Pacific with a load of precious science samples.

On Wednesday, a Russian cargo ship is set to rocket into orbit from Kazakhstan and arrive at the space station the same day.

TANFASTIC FROM 1A

“We’re going to monitor it and if there are any changes, we’ll do what the engineer advises,” Kenst said.

Engineers on the project include a structural facade engineer from Barber & Hoffman and structural engineer Matt Shaw of Shawco, who coordinated the work.

Mayor John Berlin said the intention is to prepare for the demolition of the building sometime next year when State Street traffic is curtailed for the West State Street/Cranmer bridge redecking project. The bridge will be closed to all traffic. The building remains the subject of a lawsuit the city filed against the building owners over the building’s condition.

“People do expect these services, they like to see the road curbs mowed,” he said. “We want to keep all the services that people have grown to enjoy.”

Sanor added that if the levy is decisively defeated, the trustees are prepared to cut back.

“The trustees are not going to fight over this,” he said. “We have had very good feedback and people are very much aware that we are doing everything we can with every dollar.”

Sun Trine Neptune

Neptune guides the realm of vision and in Pisces is particularly creative and spiritually aligned. Real insights are coming together as the sun and Neptune form the same 120-degree angle that occurred yesterday between Venus and Neptune. Strong themes around identity and self-esteem will be carried out in the hours and days to come.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Unexpected additions and requests are bound to make this day busier than expected. When the choice is between waiting and hustling, hustle. If you go at the suggested pace, you'll already be behind.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). They might not talk openly about it because it's hard to explain, but you might be surprised by how many successful people rely on intuition every day. Rely on yours to avoid potential unpleasantness this afternoon.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Someone who wants to know what you know will shadow, research or interview you. It's flattering to receive this kind of attention, though you're compelled toward privacy.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You know that how you see yourself is more important than how others see you, and yet today it's practically impossible to get an accurate self-image. Better to forget yourself and get lost in a project.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Keep up with your social life even though you may not feel like it. One of your friends or loved ones needs to talk to you more than he or she lets on. Don't let anyone go lonely on your dime!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Painful thoughts usually have something to teach you, so try to lean into them instead of rejecting them as negativity. Let those thoughts inspire you to act, resolve things or escape them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Showing up is enough today. If you can show up strong, all the better, but you don't have to. Take the pressure off, because you'll make a difference by simply checking in where you're supposed to.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Even the most skeptical person can benefit from some kind of faith. Think of your faith as a muscle that needs exercise. There is no shortage of unknowable things to believe in. Choose a few of your favorites and invest some faith.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Overgeneralization is a dangerous habit to watch out for in yourself and others. Nothing is all one way. Nuzzle up to life's ambiguities today because they will help you understand the very thing that will enrich you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Your rational mind leads the way for most of the day, but by evening this side of your brain is ready to take a break. That's when the emotional person inside will call out for comfort and security.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). It's pointless to anticipate the next cycle of life or the one after that, because the cycle you're in requires so much attention. Don't let yourself rush ahead in fear or excitement. Stay here. Here needs you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You have incredible powers of discipline in a certain area of your life and practically none in others. You'll have willpower to apply elsewhere when you stop needing so much of it to keep up with your regular life.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Oct. 28). You'll mature into a new stage of life in which you feel more powerful and independent. The special events that pepper the end of the year (concerts, parties, family gatherings) will make it so memorable. A dear friend will open professional or social doors for you in November. There's a windfall in May and August. Cancer and Libra people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 50, 2, 43, 19 and 16.

NEPTUNE UPDATE: Yesterday Neptune was in a trined position to Venus, and today the sea god of the sky will make the same kind of aspect with the sun. So what's it mean to us?

Consider that Venus is doing her runway model strut through Scorpio these days, and true to the current fashion ethos, she's not smiling. Her confident gait in this realm of the sky is self-assured, magnetic and maybe a bit intimidating. Venus in Scorpio would rather come off as ferocious than approachable; she'd rather be mysterious than cute.

The Scorpio sun has a similar intensity, and as Neptune comes into the same 120-degree angle with the sun as he did yesterday to Venus, the question we can extrapolate from this cosmic arrangement gets personal: How would you like to come off? How do you want people to perceive you? What do you want them to feel when they interact with you?

The current Neptune arrangement will help you figure out what social and aesthetic choices you might make to create just the effect you wish to have, or at least to experiment with your image and come a little closer to that result.

Data destruction

Heloise

Dear Readers: If you have an old COMPUTER that you are ready to get rid of, don't forget to delete all personal data first. Check the manual (or go online) to learn how to do this. However, this may not be safe enough, since the data can remain "hidden" and still be there if someone wants to find it.

The best hint? Destroy the hard drive completely! Take a hammer and smash to your heart's content, or drive over it with a large, heavy truck! -- Heloise

PACK HANGERS

Dear Heloise: We travel a lot, and there never seems to be enough hangers in the rooms, especially if two of us are traveling. I now pack a handful of hangers. Takes up little space, but saves my clothes. -- Lydia S., Newark N.J.

WEDDING CHECKS

Dear Heloise: I got married this summer and came across a dilemma with some gifts. Most checks were made out to my new last name. It takes a while to get a legal name change, and many women don't take their husband's name these days, leaving these checks in limbo.

To avoid this problem, I suggest that wedding gift-givers write out checks to the bride with her maiden name, to the groom, or just opt for cash instead. -- Emily T. in Ohio

Congratulations on your new marriage! This may cause a hiccup for some. If you want to use your existing account (with your maiden name), inform the financial institution. Some may request documentation, so have a copy of your wedding certificate handy.

A wedding can be a very special time, stress and all! If you're planning one (or helping out) and need some Heloise hints to save money, or to pick your dress, you can request my Heloise's Bridal Gown Hints and More pamphlet. Just send $5, and a long, self-addressed, stamped (70 cents) envelope to: Heloise/Bridal, P.O. Box 795001, San Antonio, TX 78279-5001. Please remember, it's YOUR wedding, not the rest of the world's. -- Heloise

MAGAZINE EXPIRATION

Dear Heloise: I get frustrated trying to figure out my magazine subscriptions. I was being billed or renewed before I even got the full subscription. I learned to read the label to see when the subscription expires. - A Reader in California

Good advice. Take a look at the label, and you usually can figure out an expiration date. Look for an abbreviation for a month, such as "Oct.," or numbers, "10/15/15." If not, call and ask! -- Heloise

MANUAL MUST

Dear Readers: Manuals come with almost everything today! Before you shove that manual (especially for a big-ticket item) away, make a photo copy of the receipt. Most times, the ink can fade or smudge over time. -- Heloise

Send a money-saving or timesaving hint to Heloise, P.O. Box 795000, San Antonio, TX 78279-5000, or you can fax it to 1-210-HELOISE or email it to Heloise@Heloise.com. I can't answer your letter personally but will use the best hints received in my column.

Bad news dampens delight at generosity

DEAR ABBY: My husband's best friend gave us a very generous gift for our toddler. However, it arrived with the news that the baby he and his girlfriend are expecting may have serious complications, which could result in termination of the pregnancy. Abby, I am also expecting.

I know I should send them a thank-you note, but I don't want to sound overly cheerful when someone is obviously suffering. Is there a way to appropriately express our thanks in writing while still being sensitive? I want to show my concern without overstepping my boundaries. -- LOST FOR WORDS

DEAR LOST: My advice is to stay on message. Thank the man for his generous gift and say how much it is appreciated. If you wish to express concern for the difficult time they are going through, do so without going into detail. It's sufficient to say that he and his girlfriend are in your thoughts and prayers. Make no reference to your own pregnancy because in this communication it's not relevant.

DEAR ABBY: I work with the public and make small talk all day long. At the end of a busy day, I like to go to a neighborhood restaurant by myself for a quiet dinner. My problem is the owner, "Giovanni." He's a very nice man, and he'll sit down at my table to chat, often for the entire meal. To complicate matters, he speaks limited English and conversation with him is a chore.

I can't think of a polite way to ask that I be left alone without hurting his feelings and making future visits awkward. Any suggestions? -- HUNGRY AND TIRED IN THE EAST

DEAR H AND T: A polite way to do it would be to say, "Giovanni, I like you very much. But I have had a hard day. All I want to do is sit down, eat my food and stare into space. Please understand." Unless he is very new to the hospitality, business he should regard that as his cue to back off.

DEAR ABBY: I live with my parents and when my mom does laundry, she always asks me if I want to throw any of my clothes in with hers and vice versa. The problem is, when the cycle is finished, she throws everything into the dryer -- even items that will shrink or wrinkle. I've asked her not to do it, but she persists.

Now, I know what you're going to say: "Do your own laundry." I have tried. But if Mom hears the wash finish before I do, she goes out and chucks everything into the dryer. Last week she shrank half my socks.

I can't think of a solution aside from doing my laundry when she is out of the house, which would be difficult because she's retired. I'm starting to get frustrated. Any ideas? -- FRUSTRATED IN COLUMBUS

DEAR FRUSTRATED: If your mother is also forgetting other things, it's possible she may be in the early stages of dementia. However, if that's not the case, then your solution is practical -- or consider taking your things to a laundromat. It would be less expensive than constantly having to buy new socks.

Should they blame overuse for tendonitis?

Dr. Keith Roach

DEAR DR. ROACH: I am 67 years old; my sister is one year younger than I am. Her partner is a little bit younger. All three of us women have very bad tendonitis in our hands and arms. I know I got mine from doing too much artwork and typing on the computer. My sister says it's because we are old. All three of us use the computer a lot. What I want to know is, Are we getting it because we're using the computer too much? Or is the culprit that we all are in our 60s, in bad physical shape and not exercising much? I have heard of very young people also getting it. I think that it would help us to stop using the computer so much, and also to take more potassium. However, my sister says it's because we are in bad physical shape. What do you think, honestly? -- D.H.B.

DEAR DR. ROACH: My husband has CBD (corticobasal degeneration). He is very depressed and frustrated, because you never hear anything about it and there is no cure. He wishes there to be an increased awareness of this condition and more research. There are approximately 3,000 people diagnosed with it per year. It is very likely that some of those diagnosed with Parkinson's disease could have it. Is it possible for you to mention this disease in your column? -- Anon.

ANSWER: I am sorry to hear about your husband, as corticobasal degeneration is a very challenging diagnosis. As you suggest, it often is misdiagnosed as other conditions, including Parkinson's disease, but also other neurological conditions such as progressive supranuclear palsy (PSP), frontotemporal or Alzheimer's dementia and primary aphasia.

ANSWER: What we call "tendonitis" doesn't usually have inflammation, so the correct technical term is "overuse tendinopathy," which tells you that you are more correct than your sister. The higher the degree of load on the tendon, the greater the likelihood of getting symptoms, so a jackhammer operator is at higher risk than an artist, in general.

In CBD, symptoms often begin on one side, in one limb. Rigidity, abnormal movement, muscle twitching and jerks are common early symptoms, before Parkinson's-like symptoms emerge. Other symptoms include clumsiness in the affected limb, difficulty standing and falls. Problems with thinking and judgment occur at variable times in the disease, as do speech abnormalities.

Rebels in control

By CHRIS RAMBO
Staff Writer

COLUMBIANA—This season has been a bumpier ride than the Crestview football program has been accustomed to over the past decade.

After going a combined 45-4 over the last five regular seasons, the Rebels currently sit at 5-4 overall and 4-2 in the Inter-Tri County League upper tier.

However, a couple of things are still the same.

In what has been a season of drastic ups-and-downs, the Rebels enter Friday's home showdown against rival Columbiana (4-5, 2-4 ITCL) in control of their playoff destiny and also have a chance at sharing the Inter-Tri County League upper tier title.

"All three years I've been in this program we've made the playoffs and contended for the league title," Crestview senior center/defensive tackle Jacob Henderson said. "Doing it again one more time is something all the seniors really want. Once you get the experience it makes you want it more every year."

Crestview picked up a chunk of valuable computer points with last week's 26-3 win over fellow Division V Region 15 playoff contender United (6-3, 3-3 ITCL), vaulting from ninth to sixth in the ratings (the top eight teams in the final ratings qualify for the playoffs).

A win this week against the Clippers this week locks up the program's seventh consecutive trip to the postseason despite a ragged 1-2 start.

"After a couple of weeks, I just wanted us to go .500," Crestview coach Paul Cusick said. "We've accomplished that and we have some goals still out there and some opportunities ahead of us here in the final week. It's a great position to be in."

As far as the league standings are concerned, the Rebels are in a second-place tie with South Range — which is at first-place Springfield this week.

Jacob Henderson

If the Rebels beat Columbiana and the Raiders beat the Tigers, there will be a three-way tie for the upper tier title.

The Rebels finished second to South Range last season, ending a run of five consecutive conference championships.

"I always thought we'd eventually fight back," junior wide receiver/defensive back Spencer DeSalvo said. "We have a lot of pride, and I always thought we would find a way to put something together and get us into this position. To be able to get a piece of the ITCL title, especially after not winning it last year would be great."

After its shaky non-conference start, Crestview appeared to be on its way with a 63-42 upset over South Range in week five. However, inconsistent play on both offense and defense plagued the Rebels in their 41-35 week six loss to Lisbon and 42-21 week eight setback to Springfield.

Crestview is last in the ITCL upper tier in turnover margin (-10) and seventh in pass defense.

"We were upset after the Springfield game," Henderson said. "But we came back out refocused and ready to get back to work. All you can do is move on, and we have. We treated United like a playoff game, and I think it really helped us focus."

In preparation for the Eagles, Cusick opted for more conservative defensive coverages and less blitzing than he had done earlier in the season. The defense responded with its best effort of the season, limiting the powerful United rushing attack to a season-low 124 yards— with just 54 in the second half.

"We went back to a lot of older stuff that was done in years past on defense," Cusick said. "At the beginning of the year, we were trying to be a little more aggressive and try some different things. I thought it was for the best, but it's not our personality. We were able to go back and get that fixed and the kids played with more confidence."

The performance came despite the loss of senior linebacker Derek Kozlowski, who was out with a concussion suffered against Springfield. Senior free safety Zach Marr filled the vacated spot, while DeSalvo—who has played primarily at wideout this year—slid back to safety.

"Whatever the team needed, I was all for," De-

Salvo said. "Our mindset changed a lot this past week on defense. We hadn't been as physical lately and we wanted to get back to being physical like the old Crestview defense. We think we feed off of that this week and into the playoffs if we make it."

With only three starters on defense and four on offense scheduled to graduate, Cusick knows how valuable even a little bit of playoff experience can be for next season's returnees.

"More than any other year, I think it's big for this group to get to the playoffs and get the experience that come with it," Cusick said. "With so many younger guys coming back for next year, getting those extra weeks of practice — however long it lasts — is very important."

Game notes

• Crestview's current playoff position can be attributed partly to a strength of schedule that Drew Pasteur's Fantastic 50 Website ranks 30th in Division V and third among the Region 15 playoff contenders — behind only Ursuline and Canton Central Catholic.

"We've set up our non-conference schedule to play some bigger schools over the years so we can test ourselves for league play and also to pick up some points if we win," Cusick said. "Also, our ITCL opponents did pretty well outside the conference this year, so we've been able to get some points with those wins as well."

• In three of their four losses (West Branch, Liberty and Lisbon), the Rebels have been inside the opponent's 20 in the final minute with a chance to either tie or win the game.

"Even in most of our losses, we were right there at the end," DeSalvo said. "This team hasn't quit fighting no matter what the situation."

Western Reserve tops area teams in poll

COLUMBUS — Something has to give this week.

Unbeaten McDonald travels to Wellsville on Friday in a state-ranked battle for the Inter-Tri County League lower tier title.

It promises to be a defensive struggle as the teams feature two of the top defenses around. McDonald is holding opponents to an average of 7.7 points per game, while Wellsville is leading the area at 11.7 points per game.

McDonald is 9-0 overall and 6-0 in the ITCL lower tier, one game ahead of Wellsville (7-2) and Western Reserve (8-1) with one league game remaining.

All three teams are ranked in the latest Associated Press high school football poll released Monday. McDonald is ranked sixth in Division VI, while Western Reserve is fifth in Division VII and Wellsville returns to the poll in 14th place.

All three teams have already clinched playoff berths. But there is no time to look ahead with the league title on the line Friday.

McDonald and Wellsville each have held opponents to 14 points or less in all but one game this season. McDonald beat East Palestine 59-20 in the season opener, while Wellsville dropped a 37-13 decision to Western Reserve on Sept. 19.

After consecutive losses to Lisbon and Western Reserve, Wellsville has reeled off five straight wins to set up an ITCL showdown with McDonald.

Both teams are nearly identical statistically except for scoring — McDonald averages 41.1 points a game and Wellsville 29.4. In six ITCL games, McDonald has

Buckeyes say they benefited from close call vs. Penn State

By RUSTY MILLER

Associated Press

COLUMBUS — When a team faces an uphill climb yet still ends up winning, it gains something from the experience.

At least that's what Ohio State coach Urban Meyer is banking on.

Meyer's 13th-ranked Buckeyes survived their own mistakes and a Penn State rally to win 31-24 in double-overtime on Saturday night.

So, was just getting out of Happy Valley with a win a good thing?

"It's not a good thing," he said. "It's a great thing."

The Buckeyes looked as if they could name the final score while building a 17-0 halftime lead. But then they watched the Nittany Lions come alive to tie the game in the final minute and then take a seven-point lead after the first possession of overtime.

But the Buckeyes stayed alive on quarterback J.T. Barrett's 5-yard run and then came right back to score on a 4-yard run by Barrett before a loud and rowdy crowd of 107,895 on white-out night at Beaver Stadium. They then had a defensive stop to get out of Happy Valley with smiles on their faces.

"You're down by several points in that environment, and (you can't) look to anyone else for help. There's 11 guys out there, and you have to score a touchdown, and we did," Meyer said. "Invested players and invested teams really celebrate wins, and our guys did. You started getting your tail kicked and you came back and won. That builds toughness."

Meyer never said the words "Michigan State" but he might as well have. The Buckeyes play at the eighth-ranked Spartans a week from Saturday in the game of the year in the Big Ten.

Barrett sprained a ligament in his left knee against Penn State and is limited in practice this week. But he is expected to be full go against the Illini (4-4, 1-3) on Saturday night.

It's clear that Meyer felt his team needed to develop some toughness to win not only at Penn State, but also in other hostile environments the rest of the way. The coaching staff has spent time this week impressing upon the Buckeyes that they need to learn from how they responded to being down in overtime last week.

"They're still young men and can take some moments for granted," said running backs coach Stan Drayton. "It's up to us as coaches to press pause, reflect and really point out some key points. They tend to get it. And when they get it, that's when it turns to execution and has a positive effect from there on out."

The Buckeyes say they're aware of the pitfalls of getting ahead of themselves. Since a Week 2 loss to Virginia Tech at home, they've won five straight and can tie the Big Ten record with their 20th consecutive conference win on Saturday.

Illinois earned the Buckeyes' full attention by upsetting Minnesota last weekend.

"We aren't looking past nobody, because that's how you get beat," safety Tyvis Powell said. "We take every opponent seriously; when you go in there and think you can just slap somebody to win, that's when you get in a fight."

"Nobody should even be thinking about Michigan State at this point," he said.

Steelers hope breakout versus Colts only the start

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Sure, all those touchdowns and all those yards and all those big plays were nice.

Yet the Pittsburgh Steelers' 51-34 victory over the Indianapolis Colts on Sunday left the man who conducted it wanting more. A lot more.

"We showed flashes of being really good," quarterback Ben Roethlisberger said. "But I missed some throws and we turned the ball over, so we still left stuff out there."

The scary part might be that he's right. If that's the case, the Steelers (5-3) might want to have a dry erase board double as their team record book.

On a day Roethlisberger set new club marks with 522 yards passing, 40 completions and six touchdowns, he insists it could have been even better. If not for a couple of drops and a pair of fumbles that allowed the Colts to hang around longer than any team that trailed by as much as 25 points has a right to, it could have gotten really ugly.

"There are still a lot of things we need to improve on," he said.

Just not nearly as many as it appeared a few weeks ago following a mystifying loss to Cleveland.

The red zone issues that plagued Pittsburgh vanished against the Colts. The Steelers scored five touchdowns in six trips inside the Indianapolis 20, the only mistake coming when running back LeGarrette Blount was stripped while trying to fight for extra yardage midway through the fourth quarter.

The emergence of rookie wide receiver Martavis Bryant has certainly helped. Stashed on the inactive list for the first six weeks, Bryant now has three touchdowns in two games. His 35-yarder in his season debut against Houston sparked a second-quarter deluge and his two scores on Sunday showcased the value of having a 6-foot-4 target for Roethlisberger to work with in tight spaces.

"The plays that he makes are pretty special," Roethlisberger said. "He does some great things. The better he plays, the more (Antonio Brown) is going to benefit from it, because he is a threat."

The Steelers spent the first seven games relying heavily on Brown to make something happen. It's a role he's thrived in even as Roethlisberger and offensive coordinator Todd Haley stressed it was time for the guys behind the Pro Bowler on the depth chart to make an impact.

Consider it done.

Brown didn't even catch a pass until the second quarter on Sunday. By that time the Steelers already led 21-10, a testament to Roethlisberger's decisiveness, the preparedness of role players Bryant, Markus Wheaton and Lance Moore and an offensive line that gave its quarterback all the time he needed to become the first player in NFL history to top 500 yards passing in a single game twice.

Roethlisberger dropped back to pass 49 times. He got the ball away 49 times.

"The (line) did a great job protecting him," coach Mike Tomlin said. "Ben did a great job of making quick, correct decisions. The wideouts did a nice job of winning and winning quickly. It was an 11-man job."

One that will get tougher on Sunday night when rival Baltimore (5-3) comes to town. The Ravens mauled the Steelers 26-6 in Week 2. Funny how long ago that seems now. Pittsburgh looked every bit the part of contender while ending Indianapolis' five-game winning streak. And they believe it was just the beginning.

Roethlisberger, Brown and running back Le'Veon Bell were already in the midst of career years. Now it seems like they're starting to get help as the second half of the season begins, and their coaches are starting to get confident.

The proof came with just over 5 minutes to go and the Steelers up by 10. Facing fourth-and-1 at the Indianapolis 11, Tomlin and offensive coordinator Todd Haley opted to go for it. Roethlisberger checked to a pass, rolled right and found tight end Heath Miller for his sixth and final touchdown.

It's the kind of play the Steelers missed frequently early in the year. Not so much anymore.

"Credit to the coaches for keeping the pedal down the whole game," Miller said. "We never went into kind of a relaxed mode. We wanted to keep the pressure on."

Pettine satisfied with 'ugly' win

BEREA, Ohio (AP) — As he was leaving the stadium following Sunday's win over Oakland, Browns quarterback Brian Hoyer took some playful teasing from assistant coach Dowell Loggains about a cap he was wearing.

"You get that from Tom Brady?" Loggains cracked. "It's stylish," Hoyer countered.

It was a much better look than Cleveland's 23-13 win over Oakland.

One week after an embarrassing road loss at Jacksonville, the Browns managed to hold at home despite rushing for just 39 yards, converting only 2 of 12 third downs and being outgained by the winless Raiders.

Still, it was a win and Browns coach Mike Pettine isn't about to apologize for it.

"You're going to have games like that," he said. "When you look back at your wins there's going to be some ugly ones and that one certainly wasn't the prettiest. But I'll sit up here and talk about ugly wins for a lot of Mondays."

At 4-3, the Browns have matched their win total from last season with nine games left. It's their best start since 2007 and with Tampa Bay (1-6) coming to town this week, the Browns have a chance to pad their record. Just don't ask Pettine to assess his team at this point in the season.

Asked if he was pleased with his team's status, Pettine gave an abrupt response.

"No," he said. "I could probably tell you a handful of plays from the four wins. I could tell you a lot of plays from the three losses. That's just the curse I have that I inherited from my dad. We have to move on to the next one. You don't get caught up in records. It's way too early to even think about that stuff."

Pettine feels his team, which is still adjusting on offense from losing Pro Bowl center Alex Mack for the season, has improved on both sides of the ball. The Browns remain a work in progress, but after seven games they're still in the discussion in the AFC North and that hasn't been the case in late October for several seasons.

"We're getting better on defense, definite improvement there, which is encouraging," Pettine said.

"Offensively, we have taken a step backward due to the obvious circumstances, but we still found a way yesterday. As tough as the Jacksonville loss was on us, we've won three of our last four, which is encouraging. "We have some confidence, some momentum, and I think it's a group that's just starting to function well together."

Without Mack, the Browns' running game is in reverse. After managing just 69 yards on 30 carries against the Jaguars, the Browns were even worse on Sunday.

The Raiders crowded the line of scrimmage, challenging Cleveland's offensive line to open holes. It was Nick McDonald's first game at center and Pettine is confident the unit will improve with time.

Hoyer's performance wasn't an artistic marvel, but that didn't matter to Pettine.

Hoyer was 19 for 28 for 275 yards and threw a 4-yard touchdown pass to Andrew Hawkins to give Cleveland a 16-6 lead early in the fourth quarter.

He missed some throws, forced a few others and didn't do anything special. Other than win, that is.

Hoyer improved to 7-3 as a starter, and at least muffled the screams by some Cleveland fans who continue to believe Johnny Manziel should be starting.

Pettine acknowledged his quarterback made some mistakes, but none of them too big to overcome.

"People get so wrapped in that performance," Pettine said. "We won the football game. That's bottom line. As long as our quarterback is playing good enough for us to win, we're not looking for style points. We're looking for wins. That's what we're ultimately judged on here. I'll take ugly wins all day."

NOTES: With TE Jordan Cameron possibly missing time with a concussion, the Browns claimed TE Ryan Taylor off waivers from Baltimore. The team also placed DL John Hughes on injured reserve/designated for return after he injured his knee Sunday. Hughes does not need surgery, but he is not eligible to practice until Week 15 and play until Week 17. ... Pettine isn't expecting the Browns to make any trades before Tuesday's 4 p.m. deadline. "I know the phone is ringing," Pettine said. "For all the talk that goes on, the number of trades that actually occur is minimal."

World Series notes

GAME FIVE DRAWS 12.6 MILLION
 KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The television rating for Game 4 between San Francisco and Kansas City dropped to a 6.3, a low for this year's World Series, then rebounded to a 7.3 in Game 5 as the Giants took a 3-2 lead.

San Francisco's 11-4 win in the fourth game drew 10.7 million viewers on Saturday night, according to fast national ratings from Nielsen Media Research announced by Fox on Monday. Saturday traditionally is a night when fewer people are watching television.

The Giants' 5-0 victory Sunday was seen by an average of 12.6 million viewers, the second-highest of the Series behind 12.6 million for Game 2.

The opener earned a 7.3 rating, a record low for a Game 1, and was followed by a 7.9 for Game 2 and a 7.2 for Game 3.

The five games are averaging a 7.2 rating and 12.1 million viewers. Fox said coverage on Fox Deportes is averaging a record 248,000 viewers, up from 203,000 last year.

ANTHEM APOLOGY

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Aaron Lewis has apologized for botching the lyrics of "The Star-Spangled Banner" during his performance before Game 5 of the World Series.

The lead singer of the metal band Staind turned country singer published a note on his website Monday after stumbling during his rendition of the national anthem the night before in San Francisco.

"All I can say is I'm sorry and ask for the Nation's forgiveness. My nerves got the best of me and I am completely torn up about what happened," he wrote. "America is the greatest country in the world."

"The Star-Spangled Banner means so much to so many, including myself. I hope everyone can understand the intensity of the situation and my true intent of this performance. I hope that the Nation, Major League Baseball and the many fans of our national pastime can forgive me."

After starting with "O say can you see by the dawn's early light, what so proudly we hailed," Lewis diverted from the lyrics. Instead of singing "at the twilight's last gleaming" he sang "were so gallantly streaming," words that appear later in the song.

Quarantined nurse leaves New Jersey for Maine

FORT KENT, Maine (AP) — A nurse who worked in West Africa with Ebola patients and was quarantined at a New Jersey hospital over the weekend was returning home to Maine on Monday as her lawyer criticized the state's policies that had her fighting to be released from an isolation tent.

Health officials said Saturday that nurse Kaci Hickox tested negative for Ebola. Hickox left a hospital Monday afternoon, to be taken to Maine, where she lives.

Hickox called her treatment "inhumane" and "completely unacceptable" after she became the first person forced into New Jersey's mandatory quarantine, announced Friday by Gov. Chris Christie for people arriving at Newark Liberty International Airport from three West African countries.

Prominent New York civil rights attorney Norman Siegel, hired by Hickox while she was quarantined, said he has not ruled out legal action.

"We are pleased that the state of New Jersey has decided to release Kaci. They had no justification to confine her," Siegel said. "We are figuring out how to amplify Kaci's voice on this issue. We have to figure out if that is through the courts of law or through the court of public opinion."

Hickox agreed to be quarantined at her home in Fort Kent, but another of her lawyers and state officials disagreed over how long she'll have to stay out of public places.

Hickox's partner is a University of Maine at Fort Kent nursing student who lives off campus. There was no sign of her there late Monday, and the home was dark inside.

Maine officials announced that Hickox would be quarantined at home for 21 days after the last possible exposure to the disease under state health protocols. But lawyer Steven Hyman said he expected Hickox to remain in seclusion for the "next day or so" while he works with state health officials. He said he believes the state should follow federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention guidelines that require only monitoring, not quarantine, for health care workers who show no symptoms after treating Ebola patients.

Christie and New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo jointly announced the quarantine policy on Friday. But over the weekend, President Barack Obama's administration condemned the mandatory quarantines. Late Sunday night, Cuomo and Christie stressed separately that the policies allowed for home confinement for medical workers who have had contact with Ebola patients if the workers show no symptoms.

Under New Jersey's protocol, state residents who come into contact with someone with Ebola would be subject to a mandatory, 21-day quarantine at home, even if they had no symptoms. Non-residents who landed in the state would be taken home if feasible or otherwise quarantined in New Jersey.

Christie denied going against his policy by releasing Hickox. He tweeted Monday: "I did not reverse any decision in this case."

Neither Christie's office nor a spokeswoman for the state Department of Health answered questions Monday about the mechanics of the quarantine, and they have not said whether there's a written policy laying out the state's protocol in more detail.

A Department of Health spokeswoman referred to a state law that established the department's authority to quarantine people. But the law does not spell out how that would be enforced.

In a telephone interview Saturday with CNN, Hickox said she did not initially have a shower, flushable toilet, television or reading material in the special tent she was in at University Hospital in Newark.

The Department of Health said in a news release that Hickox was being discharged Monday because she had been symptom-free for 24 hours. Hickox wrote in a first-person account Saturday in The Dallas Morning News that her temperature was normal Friday when measured by an oral thermometer at the hospital and she only showed a higher temperature when measured with a forehead scanner.

Hickox did not immediately return a phone call or email seeking comment from The Associated Press.

Christie said Monday that his priority is protecting the health of people in his state.

"I understand that she didn't want to be there. She made that very clear from the beginning," Christie said during a campaign event for Florida Gov. Rick Scott in Wellington, Florida. "But my obligation is to all the people of New Jersey, and we're just going to continue to do that."

Sheriff: Washington state teen sent text invite for lunch to students, then shot them

MARYSVILLE, Wash. (AP) — A popular student responsible for a shooting at a Washington state high school invited his victims to lunch by text message, then shot them at their table, investigators said Monday.

Snohomish County Sheriff Ty Trenary said at a news conference that the five students were at a lunch table Friday when they were shot by 15-year-old Jaylen Fryberg. Fryberg then committed suicide.

Detectives are digging through reams of text messages, phone and social media records as part of an investigation that could take months, Trenary said.

"The question everybody wants is, 'Why?'" Trenary said. "I don't know that the 'why' is something we can provide."

Fryberg, a football player who was named a prince on the school's homecoming court a week before the killings, was a member of a prominent Tulalip Indian Tribes family. He seemed happy although he was also upset about a girl, friends said. His Twitter feed was recently full of vague, anguished postings, like "It won't last ... It'll never last," and "I should have listened. ... You were right ... The whole time you were right."

As Congress mulls reining in NSA phone records collection, attention turns to challenges

WASHINGTON (AP) — While Congress mulls how to curtail the NSA's collection of Americans' telephone records, impatient civil liberties groups are looking to legal challenges already underway in the courts to limit government surveillance powers.

Three appeals courts are hearing lawsuits against the bulk phone records program, creating the potential for an eventual Supreme Court review. Judges in lower courts, meanwhile, are grappling with the admissibility in terror prosecutions of evidence gained through the NSA's warrantless surveillance.

Advocates say the flurry of activity, which follows revelations last year by former NSA contractor Edward Snowden of once-secret intelligence collection programs, show how a post-9/11 surveillance debate once primarily hashed out among lawmakers in secret is being increasingly aired in open court — not only in New York and Washington but in places like Idaho and Colorado.

"The thing that is different about the debate right now is that the courts are much more of a factor in it," said Jameel Jaffer, deputy legal director at the American Civil Liberties Union. Before the Snowden disclosures, he said, courts were generally relegated to the sidelines of the discussion. Now, judges are poised to make major decisions on at least some of the matters in coming months.

Though it's unclear whether the Supreme Court will weigh in, the cases are proceeding at a time when the justices appear increasingly comfortable taking up digital privacy matters — including GPS tracking of cars and police searches of cellphones.

Late-campaign attack ads: Democrats hit hard at GOP, hoping to save Senate majority

WASHINGTON (AP) — Their majority in jeopardy, Senate Democrats unleashed a late-campaign round of attack ads Monday accusing Republicans in key races of harboring plans to cut Social Security and Medicare.

The commercials in Iowa, New Hampshire, Louisiana and elsewhere appear aimed at older voters, who cast ballots in relatively large numbers in midterm elections and have tended to support Republicans in recent years.

One ad, airing in Iowa, shows Republican candidate Joni Ernst on videotape saying,

"Yes, I have talked about privatizing Social Security." Another, which began appearing in New Hampshire during the day, says that while Scott Brown was a senator from Massachusetts he voted to "cut Medicare and Social Security while giving tax breaks to millionaires and oil companies."

Gretchen Hamel, a spokeswoman for Ernst, countered that the "Democratic attacks on Social Security are as predictable as they are false." Jennifer Horn, Republican chairwoman in New Hampshire, said that Sen. Jeanne Shaheen, Brown's opponent, "cast the deciding vote for Obamacare that cuts Medicare by $716 billion."

Toronto elects new moderate mayor, ending Ford era

TORONTO (AP) — Toronto elected a moderate conservative as mayor on Monday night, ending the Rob Ford era marked by scandals over his illegal drug use and public drunkenness. John Tory, a former chief executive of major cable company Rogers Communications, had 40 percent of the vote, compared to 34 percent for Doug Ford, brother of outgoing Mayor Rob Ford. Left-leaning Olivia Chow was third with nearly 23 percent. The results were announced with more than 90 percent of polling stations reporting.

Rob Ford's four-year tenure as mayor of Canada's largest city was marred by his drinking and crack cocaine use. He announced last month that he wouldn't seek re-election as he battles a rare form of cancer. His brother, a city councilor, ran in his place.

However, Ford will not disappear from Toronto politics anytime soon.

Despite the cancer, he opted to seek the City Council seat from the Etobicoke district where he launched his political career. He won his old seat in a landslide Monday and strongly hinted he may seek to run for mayor again in four years.

Toyota tops Consumer Reports rankings

DETROIT (AP) — Toyota continues its winning streak atop Consumer Reports' annual reliability rankings.

The company's Toyota and Lexus brands top the survey, while its Scion brand is in the top ten. It's the eighth year in a row that a Toyota brand has led the rankings.

"Toyota has a strategy that emphasizes reliability over excitement," says Jake Fisher, Consumer Reports' head of auto testing. "They take a conservative approach to redesign and roll out new features slowly. The risk is they may not have the latest bells and whistles, but the reward is world class reliability."

Also Monday, Toyota released sales numbers that showed it is on track to be the world's top-selling automaker this year. Toyota beat out General Motors and Volkswagen in sales for the first nine months.

Japanese brands generally fared well in Consumer Reports' survey, which predicts the reliability of 2015 model year cars and trucks based on a survey of subscribers who own 1.1 million vehicles from current or prior model years.

Mazda, Honda and Subaru joined Toyota in the top ten. Audi was the highest scoring non-Japanese brand, while Buick was the only domestic brand in the top ten.

Infotainment systems generated the most complaints from Consumer Reports' readers and hurt many brands with new models, including Infiniti, Fiat and Cadillac. The most common problems were unresponsive touch screens and trouble with pairing up phones.

Younger car owners tended to be the most impatient with glitchy electronics. "They expect the same connectivity level when they're in the car," says Doug Love, a spokesman for the magazine.

Ford's luxury Lincoln brand moved up 12 spots in the survey, the most of any brand, after fixing bugs in its touchscreen dashboard. Hyundai gained eight spots, mostly because it had few new vehicles. New cars and trucks tend to have more problems, and the magazine recommends waiting a year or two after a new model comes out before buying it.

Truck buyers complained about new full-size pickups from Chevrolet and GMC, which were plagued by squeaks and rattles. Mercedes-Benz fell the hardest, by 11 spots in the rankings, because of quality issues with its new lower-priced CLA sedan and complaints about the electronics in the higher-end S Class.

The recently merged Fiat Chrysler Automobiles fared worst in the rankings, with its Dodge, Ram, Jeep and Fiat brands in the bottom four spots. The new nine-speed transmission in the Jeep Cherokee was among the company's headaches.

Toyota vehicles were also the most highly recommended in 10 of the 18 model categories, including hybrids (the Lexus CT 200h), compact cars (the Scion xB), midsize SUVs (the Toyota Highlander) and small and large pickup trucks (the Toyota Tacoma and Toyota Tundra).
