Machine trades program upgrade is goal

Salem schools aim to fulfill late Todd Vadino's goal of new gear

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

SALEM — A project Todd Vadino started just before his death will continue as Salem school officials solicit help to secure two engine lathes and two mills for the machine trades program.

Getting new machinery to attract and accommodate more students was Vadino's dream—a dream he expressed to school board members during a presentation in the spring, according to Salem Board of Education Vice President Ted Bricker.

Vadino's enthusiasm as the machine trades program instructor was clearly evident when listening to him talk about his students and the lessons they were learning for a trade in dire need of more members for the workforce. He helped put together a letter in June to ask local manufacturers and machine shops for donations.

His sudden death in a drowning accident later that month temporarily put the plans for the solicitation on hold, but now the letters are being sent out.

"Todd supplied the ideas for what we needed," Superintendent Dr. Joe Shivers said.

Shivers, Bricker, Vadino and Salem High School Principal Sean Kirkland met and formulated the letter which describes the equipment being sought and the fact that students will be able to "expand their skills significantly" with the addition of those machines. The letter also named future employers as beneficiaries of the upgraded equipment.

The machines are described as two Monarch engine lathes each with a 12-inch to 14-inch swing and 3 feet to 4 feet distance between centers (with Quick Change tool posts, Jacobs chucks, taper attachments, four jaw chucks and steady rest) and two Bridgeport mills (with digital readouts, Kurt vises, right-angle heads, collets and Jacobs chucks).

The letter said the district is trying to raise $40,000 or have the equipment donated to the Mayor warned on parking law

By KATIE WHITE
Staff Writer

The city's mayor was given stern warnings Tuesday night after he publicly announced he would not issue guilty verdicts for people breaking a parking law on East Park Avenue.

Mayor Bryan Blakeman was referring to his responsibility with Mayor's Court when he said he would not find people guilty for parking in front of Mercantile on the Square.

"I think placing a no parking zone there is bad for the city ... it will run a business out of town," he said.

He added he would like to see the original 1950s ordinance prohibiting parking along East Park Avenue repealed and a new ordinance created that would establish the rest of the street to state Route 14 as a no parking zone, but keep the roughly two or three parking spaces in front of the store.

The city had not upheld the law for decades due to officials not being aware of it until a few months ago. Council members are currently in the process of deciding whether to repeal the law, and unless a decision is made to do so, parking remains illegal.

The curb in front of the store was only recently painted yellow to designate a no parking area, much to the dismay of store owner Jill Eizonas, who has come before council expressing her concern about the parking removal and believes it will be bad for the business.

She was not present at the Tuesday meeting, however.

Until the curb painting Eizonas had been parking her own vehicle in front of the store nearly every day.

The parking became an issue after Councilman Dan Bekar brought it to the city's attention that people driving west on East Park Avenue were going left of center to get around the parked vehicles, creating not only a safety issue, but a traffic violation.

Nevertheless, Blakeman said he would not find people guilty of parking there based also on the fact that a city official previously stated, in writing, the parking was not illegal.

It was Bob Belding who was serving as the assistant building and zoning inspector at the time who informed Eizonas parking was allowed after she specifically asked about that area prior to opening the antique store.

Belding has since retired and, like other city officials, was unaware of the law

NW approves engineering contract for water upgrade

By KEVIN HOWELL
Staff Writer

NEW WATERFORD— Village Council on Friday approved a contract for engineering in a proposed $8 million upgrade to the water distribution system.

Council unanimously approved the contract with Engineering Associates of Wooster at roughly $600,000 after tabling the issue two days earlier to make some clarifications.

Mayor Shane Patrone said that he and Village Solicitor Walter Newton considered six to eight variations of the contract, eventually settling on the approved one coming in at approximately 7 percent of the total projected cost.

"We're pretty happy with the amount," he said. "We came up with [a contract] we felt works."

Patrone had previously stated the company will begin work once the contract was approved, finishing the design model by January. Ninety percent of the water lines will retain their current positions. After a model of the village is drawn up, the village can pursue funding next year.

Patrone was quoted last week saying the project is "dependent on funding ... the village can afford 30 percent, we need to find 70 percent."

He added that attempts to land the money through three government organizations are being considered, including the United States Department of Agriculture.

Patrone was also quoted as saying, "We pushed the envelope a little bit. Our goal is to get the most bang for our buck. If we can pull this off, the village should be good for another 50 years with PVC lines."

If plans work out, Patrone said a best case scenario has ground being broken for the upgrade "possibly by the end of next year or the spring of 2017."

Shooting suspect claims innocence at court hearing

By KATIE WHITE
Staff Writer

LISBON — The Youngstown man who eluded police for hours on Aug. 8 following a reported shooting in Salem is continuing to claim his innocence.

Vincent Perry, 22, appeared in Columbiana County Municipal Court Monday before Judge Chris Amato and waived his right to a preliminary hearing.

The waiver will bind the case over to the county grand jury and his bond was reduced from $250,000 cash surety to $150,000.

Perry was charged with felonious assault, a second degree felony, on Aug. 10 following a shooting incident at an apartment in the Salem Commons, located at 2557 Lexington Ave. on Aug. 8.

Police were alerted to the shooting after receiving a 911 call at 3:30 a.m.

According to reports, the victim, Kevin R. Jackson, 31, of Youngstown, sustained a through-and-through gunshot wound to the right forearm where a small caliber bullet entered the top and exited the bottom.

He was treated at Salem Regional Medical Center and later released and attended Perry's hearing on Monday. He did not speak and his presence at the hearing appeared to agitate Perry, who asked Amato why Jackson did not have to submit to a drug test.

Amato told him it was because Jackson was not charged with a crime.

Perry was also upset with the amount of his new bond, despite the reduction. He repeatedly asked why it was "so

Ten years ago: A Texas jury found pharmaceutical giant Merck and Co. liable for the death of a man who'd taken the once-popular painkiller Vioxx, awarding his widow $253.4 million in damages. Despite loud opposition, Congress now unlikely to block nuclear deal with Iran

WASHINGTON (AP) — The fiercely contested Iran nuclear deal will likely survive in Congress despite unified GOP opposition and some Democratic defections, the top Senate Republican says. That would mean a major foreign policy win for President Barack Obama.

Obama has "a great likelihood of success," Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell said in his home state of Kentucky this week — giving public voice to what other Republicans have acknowledged in private. "I hope we can defeat it, but the procedure is obviously stacked in the president's favor."

Indeed, even as Congress' August recess has hardened Republicans' opposition to the deal on Capitol Hill and on the presidential campaign trail, reality is setting in: They probably can't stop it. Significant Democratic defections from Obama would be required in both chambers of Congress, and even with opponents mounting a strenuous lobbying campaign in key congressional districts, such a prospect looks remote.

That means that even with Obama firmly in lame-duck territory and his GOP opponents in control of Congress and aiming for the White House, the president is on the verge of a legacy-defining victory on a pact that he and his supporters say will keep the world safe from Iran's nuclear ambitions. Opponents continue to warn furiously that the result could be just the opposite: to strengthen Tehran's hand, in an existential threat to Israel and the world.

On Tuesday a second Democratic senator, Bob Menendez of New Jersey, did announce his opposition to the deal, joining Chuck Schumer of New York.

Officials: Military likely to open most combat jobs to women, even special ops

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two women have now passed the Army's grueling Ranger test, and even tougher and more dangerous jobs could lie ahead. The military services are poised to allow women to serve in most front-line combat jobs, including special operations forces, senior officials told The Associated Press. Based on early talks, officials say the Army, Navy and Air Force likely will not seek exceptions that close any jobs to women. Marine Corps leaders, they say, have expressed concerns about allowing women to serve in infantry jobs and yet may seek an exception.

The services are wrapping up reviews and must make their recommendations to Defense Secretary Ash Carter this fall. The officials spoke on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to discuss the internal debate.

Even if Marine leaders object, they are likely to meet resistance from senior Navy and Defense Department officials who want the military to be united on this issue. Undercutting the Marines' reservations is that Special Operations Command is likely to allow women to compete for the most demanding military commando jobs — including the Navy SEALs and the Army's Delta Force — though with the knowledge that it may be years before women even try to enter those fields.

TV report: Subway pitchman expected to plead guilty to child-pornography charges

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Longtime Subway pitchman Jared Fogle is expected to plead guilty to child-pornography charges, an Indiana television station reported Tuesday.

The report on Fox59 comes six weeks after authorities seized electronics and other items from Fogle's home in Zionsville, an affluent Indianapolis suburb. Citing sources it did not identify, the station said Fogle would enter a plea Wednesday. It also said the U.S. Attorney's Office in Indianapolis planned to hold a news conference Wednesday.

The 37-year-old Fogle became a Subway pitchman more than 15 years ago after shedding more than 200 pounds as a college student, in part by eating the chain's sandwiches.

Subway suspended its association with Fogle after the raid. The company declined to comment Tuesday, saying only that the chain had "already ended our relationship with Jared."

Back in drivers' seat: Turkey's President Erdogan takes gamble with a new vote

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan appeared a shadow of his former self after his party suffered major losses in the June election — embattled and no longer in control of his political fate. His once-dominant movement was forced into the humiliating position of seeking a coalition with opposition parties intent on reining him in.

Two months later, the shrewd politician seems to be back in the saddle. The coalition-building he reportedly opposed has collapsed, and Turkey is now edging closer toward the new election he has been angling for.

Erdogan appears to be betting that a new ballot could revive the fortunes of the Islamic-rooted party, which he founded and led for more than a decade. That would put him back on course to reshape Turkey's democracy, giving the largely ceremonial presidency sweeping powers that would allow him to wield control over government affairs.

Last week, he claimed since he was elected by popular vote instead of by Parliament, Turkey now had a "de facto" new system with a more powerful president, and a new constitution was needed to reflect the change.

Police: Mom says she killed 3 young sons in 13 months

BELLEFONTAINE (AP) — An Ohio woman calmly called 911 to report her baby son wasn't breathing on Tuesday and then hours later confessed to killing him and her two other young sons over the past several months, police said.

Brittany Pilkington was charged with three counts of murder and was jailed Tuesday, said police in Bellefontaine, about 60 miles northwest of Columbus.

Pilkington, who's 23 years old, is accused in Tuesday's death of 3-month-old Noah Pilkington and in the deaths of 4-year-old Gavin Pilkington, who died in April, and 3-month-old Niall Pilkington, who died in July 2014. No working telephone number for her home could be found, and no attorney information was available for her.

Police said officers went to the family's apartment on Tuesday morning after an emergency call from the mother saying that Noah wasn't breathing. They said she calmly answered a dispatcher's questions while the baby's sleep apnea alarm beeped in the background. The baby was pronounced dead at a hospital.

Authorities already were investigating what happened to Niall and Gavin, whose causes of death still hadn't been conclusively determined. In each of those cases, their father, Joseph Pilkington, found them unresponsive when he got home from work.

"Our son's not breathing," Brittany Pilkington said meekly to a dispatcher when she called police on April 6 as her husband frantically gave Gavin chest compressions. "He's turning white."

Joseph and Brittany Pilkington were cooperative on Tuesday, police said. She eventually told detectives that she killed all three children, police said, but no other details of officers' discussions with her were released.

"The tragic deaths of Niall, Gavin and Noah leave a pit in our stomachs today," police Chief Brandon K. Standley said in a statement. "Our condolences go out to the remaining family members who have supported this family through a very difficult 13 months."

2 people struck by bulldozer die in accident

ASHTABULA (AP) — A northeast Ohio sheriff says two people run over by a bulldozer appear to have died accidentally. Ashtabula County Sheriff Bill Johnson on Tuesday identified the victims as 44-year-old Kevin Moore and 39-year-old Barbara Hammer. They were killed Monday evening in Plymouth Township, about 60 miles east of Cleveland.

Johnson says the accident remains under investigation, but it appears the machine slipped into gear and ran over the pair, who worked together at a landfill company. The sheriff says Moore had recently bought the 1968 International TD15B bulldozer for his personal use.

Johnson says no one saw the accident. Someone called 911 after the bulldozer plowed into a parked car and pushed it across a road and into a ditch. The bulldozer was found with the engine running.

If Hillary so great, why Gore rumor?

Rumors last week that former Vice President Al Gore was considering another run for the White House said something about Hillary Clinton's candidacy — and it was not good.

Gore, 67, narrowly lost the 2000 presidential election to George W. Bush. A substantial number of admirers have hoped since then he would try again. Democrat Party officials quickly denied there was any truth to reports Gore would run again this year. Still, the fact his name was being bandied about — combined with the very real possibility Vice President Joe Biden would enter the race — will lead some voters to wonder: What is it about Clinton that the political insiders know, but the rest of us do not — yet?

Clearly, Clinton's campaign has been losing steam after a start in which it was virtually assumed she would be the party's candidate for president.

At the heart of it is the question of whether Clinton's transgressions legally and against the trust of the American people can drive her out of the race. Obviously, some insiders are exploring options other than Clinton because they view that as a possibility.

Give President Barack Obama credit — if you want to call it that — for one thing: He is keeping his campaign promises, even when that requires lying to the American people.

He vowed to shut down coal-fired power plants and is carrying through with that. One means of dampening criticism was to let reports of the severity of new emissions limits stand for years — then release far more draconian rules on more than a dozen states. And, of course, many people remember the "if you like your insurance, you can keep it" promise made over and over again to help foist Obamacare on the nation. Another promise to the American people broken so he could keep a campaign pledge.

Now, Obama is trying again to keep another promise, to close the U.S. prison for terrorists at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. Previous attempts to do that have met with severe criticism from the public and heavy opposition in Congress. But now, it is reported the Pentagon is looking at two U.S. sites to which Guantanamo inmates could be transferred.

Yes, the president keeps his promises. Some of them, anyway.

Demolishing church is an injustice

To the editor:

The former West Point United Presbyterian Church, one of the most historic buildings in the county, is slated for demolition today. This is a travesty and an injustice to the county, the community, the public, families of deceased buried in the cemetery, and all board members.

When the building and grounds were turned over to the West Beaver Cemetery Foundation, it was with the intention that the grounds and the building be preserved as a chapel for those visiting the site and/or burying family members.

I have personally been a board member since March 23, 1987, and I am aware this was not handled properly as I am the secretary for the Cemetery Foundation, and I believe the public has a right to know.

Any person who has a relative buried in the cemetery is considered a board member and has a right to know and be part of all decisions before decisions are finalized. The deal made to sell the building for demolition was not made according to the bylaws of the foundation, and without properly notifying the officers, members, or general public.

I believe the public should know that there are people working to stop this injustice, and we want to assist them to share their opinions and empower all members to vote on this decision. I believe the public should have a voice in this matter. For more information on this issue and ways to be involved, contact member Menard "Bud" Powell at 330-717-5261.

To find out if you have relatives buried in this cemetery and are thereby a member, go to ohio-genealogy.net and click on the cemetery records.

Anyone interested in having a voice in this matter and stop this injustice should contact their representatives, including the Attorney General's office at ohioattorneygeneral.gov or 614-446-3181, Congressman Bill Johnson at 330-337-6951, House Representative Timothy Ginter at 614-466-8022, and Senator Joe Schiavoni 614-466-8285. A silent, liberal sisterhood hurts the cause for all women

DIANE DIMOND

Say, ladies, can we talk? What is it with women's groups in America today? They link arms and proclaim they stand for the empowerment of women of all races, creeds and religions. They demand justice and equality for the female gender. They vow to stand up for the rights and respect of women everywhere.

Then where the heck have they been as presidential candidate Donald Trump trumps all over the reputation of Fox News journalist Megyn Kelly? Not a word of support for Kelly from any of the major women's groups. Crickets. Why the silence from organizations built on standing up for women?

"She's a lightweight ... zippo. ... I have no respect for her," Trump said of Kelly after their withering confrontation at the first Republican presidential debate. The whiny candidate proclaimed Kelly's questions to him were "unprofessional" and "mean."

Really? Let's examine what the Fox News debate moderator said that ticked off The Donald. And remember, Kelly was part of a trio of journalists tasked with helping America understand the character of the candidates.

"Mr. Trump," Kelly asked, "You've called women you don't like, 'fat pigs, dogs, slob, and disgusting animals' ... How will you answer the charge from Hillary Clinton, who (is) likely to be the Democratic nominee, that you are part of the war on women?"

Seems like a perfectly professional and spot-on question for a journalist to ask someone who aspires to the nation's highest office. Journalists have been tossing candidates' own words back at them since before the dawn of television.

Trump tried to laugh off the question saying he'd only used those awful terms while talking about his favorite female punching bag, comedian Rosie O'Donnell. They've been feuding — or more accurately, the bloviating billionaire has been picking on O'Donnell — for about a decade now.

Kelly, being the experienced journalist (and attorney) she is, had her facts ready and quickly corrected the record. She made it clear Trump has trashed other women as well including at least one he worked with on the NBC show "Celebrity Apprentice."

In a post-debate interview with CNN the man who can't stop bragging about himself said, when Kelly questioned him, "You could see there was blood coming out of her eyes, blood coming out of her — wherever." Everyone with an ounce of sense gasped at the obviously tasteless and sexist comment.

I'm not a shill for Megyn Kelly, but this is a woman of observable substance. Time magazine included her on their 2014 list of the 100 most influential people in the world. She is an educated law school graduate, a mother of three and a highly visible television personality — just the kind of success story we all wish for our daughters. She deserves respect.

Yet a check of the National Organization for Women's website shows nary a word in support of their "sister" who fights for equal treatment for women on the national stage.

I couldn't find any comments of support for Kelly on The Feminist Majority Foundation website. Not a word from the Association for Women in Communications or any other journalism-based groups that I could find.

So, we are left to assume these groups only feel comfortable championing those women who are not affiliated with a conservative television network. If there's even a hint the woman might not vote the democratic ticket, she gets ignored. Is that it?

I've got news for you, sisters. That strategy puts you straight on the road to extinction. If groups can only stand up for those with similar political views, they leave a sizable portion of their gender base outside looking in. It adds to today's schism mentality of "us versus them." It leaves everyone weaker.

Democratic presidential aspirant Hillary Clinton knows this to be true. It took her a few days to formulate her political response, but she called Kelly's debate performance "incredibly impressive." A woman giving another woman her due, despite their political differences. Classy.

Staying silent while professing to demand equality and justice for all women isn't just shortsighted and hypocritical — it is stupid.

A vacation offers time to think

KATHLEEN PARKER

It is that sane and glorious time when the nation's capital dispenses its human cargo to places of origin and locations of respite.

"I don't know why everyone leaves," I remarked to my neighbor. "There's so much great parking." (Don't muddle; it's a joke.)

There is, indeed, great parking, as well as less traffic. With the political contingent largely gone, the Hill is as quiet as a morning after and "normal" people are dining out.

Most awesome: One has time to think.

August, often viewed as the end of things — summer, vacation, camp and children underfoot — marks for Washingtonians the arrival of peace. The usual, rapid chatter becomes a low, slow hum. Fewer sirens stab the air and the ever-present helicopters finally buzz off.

In this near-sudden silence, one realizes that Washington is more often Fallujah than Paris — a war zone where armies of reporters, pundits and politicians wage war with words in theaters of green rooms and bunkers of makeup.

What's that sound? Ah, cicadas. Would that Washington would burrow beneath the toil of urgent matters and keep quiet for years at a time. August is good for dreaming, too.

Look at me. I buried the lede and almost forgot everyone's favorite part of all: Journalists leave town, too. When the three branches of government shutter the windows and lock the doors, what's left to do?

(The car-alarm coverage of Donald Trump may provide a hint.)

Alas, where Trump goes, the media go. Rumor has it he's heading to Iowa so it's off to the Hawkeye State we go. Friday morning, "Meet the Press" Chuck Todd was reporting from the Iowa State Fairgrounds in a groundhoggian image of what these days we call "authentic." The real people of America will soon enough let us know what they think of all this and that.

Personally, I wonder what they think of all those Trump buses stationed in Wal-Mart parking lots around the state — sans The Donald? For Trump, you see, Being There isn't actually required. The name is all.

Look, Trump's in town! Even when he's not, really. When he does materialize, equal parts Liberace and P.T. Barnum, folks will show up if only to lay eyes on the real McCoy. Will Trump press the flesh? What a disgusting thought for a reputed germaphobe. Will he kiss babies, those messy little bundles of official emissions?

Such are the musings of an August morn — and a clear indication that my own vacation begins in just a few sentences more. For your indulgence and patience, I will share a secret I've kept mostly to myself the past year or so. It has to do with my absence for several months last summer and fall, which some of you may have noticed. If not, you are forgiven.

My syndicate issued an explanation to my then-500 papers that I'd had an accident and would be taking a break to recover. I wasn't eager to share the details for reasons that will become apparent. Basically, I slipped and fell down a steep staircase in May 2014, which resulted in a concussion — more aptly named a traumatic brain injury — that put me out of work and circulation. It was, indeed, traumatic, as well as terrifying. Thanks to months of therapy and many helping hands, it is over.

My mentioning it now has to do with two things: One, I'm back to my old self, more or less. My goal was to return to two columns a week and to reappear on news shows before I admitted that for a long time I didn't know who I was. My editors, Alan Shearer with the Washington Post Writers Group, and Fred Hiatt, editorial page editor of the Washington Post, were both anchor and sail, keeping the boat afloat and buoying my spirits until the brain had finished its business.

Two, I'm about to enjoy time off that I can consciously experience. Last year, I had bought a book titled "No Time to Think." And then suddenly I could neither read nor think. This time, I can and shall do both.

I will also continue work on a book I'm writing about what happened to me. My hope is that others might benefit from what I experienced and from what I learned about friends and family, seasons and time, rhythms and essence. It was quite a trip, about which more to come — in good time.

Meanwhile, enjoy the cicadas — because you can.

The (Toledo) Blade, Aug. 17

As many as three-quarters of the nation's air traffic controllers work schedules that can leave them chronically fatigued and prone to potentially catastrophic errors, the Federal Aviation Administration was warned in 2011. But Americans are just finding out about it now.

The Associated Press recently obtained and published a report the FAA did not release despite months of requests. The agency's unwillingness to provide the study is as disturbing as its findings, which suggest air travelers are imperiled by mistakes made by controllers whose schedules give them insufficient time to rest.

The FAA finally issued the report, conducted by NASA at the behest of the National Transportation Safety Board, after AP published its findings. Among the conclusions: Nearly one-third of controllers who worked a six-day schedule had committed a major error while directing air traffic in the previous year. More than half of them blamed fatigue ...

The nation's air-traffic controllers, who direct 60 million planes each year, need to be as well rested as pilots. The report is a wake-up call for the FAA.

machine trades program. Any money donated will be placed in a new memorial fund set up last month called the Machine Trades/Todd Vadino Fund.

If the district is able to pull it off and be able to expand the program and the skills of the students in the program, "Todd's legacy will be even greater," Shivers said.

According to Bricker, there's a deficit of skilled trades people. A lot of companies are looking for machinists and the program can help support the community by supplying trained graduates.

"We need to keep the program going," he said. Shivers said the district is ready to fill that need for machinists, noting that all seven seniors who graduated from the program this past spring passed their machinist exam and two passed it with honors.

Every student but one was placed in a position, but he explained the one who didn't had other plans. Kirkland said the new equipment will replace some old equipment and expand the number of machines available for students, high," and Amato replied it was because the court does not know all the facts of the case yet. Amato asked Perry if he still wished to waive the preliminary hearing and explained the hearing's only purpose is to determine if there is probable cause that he committed the crime, to which Perry shook his head and said, "I didn't, sir ... your honor."

He then said he still wished to bind the matter over to the grand jury. "I think he is just upset by the whole situation," his attorney, Robert Bricker, said when it was clear Perry was unhappy with the bond.

Perry Township and Salem police and the county sheriff's department's K-9 unit searched for Perry for several hours on Aug. 8 before he contacted Salem police to discuss what happened.

He agreed to meet officers at Smith Oil on East State Street and he was taken in custody. He remains in the county jail.

Assistant Prosecuting attorney Megan Forsythe noted that Perry has no prior history of violent offenses. Perry was also fined $150, given credit for two days served and had his driver's license suspended six months for a possession of drugs charge.

Perry has no other criminal or civil charges on file through Columbiana County Municipal Court. He does have a carrying a concealed weapon case pending in Mahoning County Court in Sebring after Goshen Township police charged him in November.

According to reports, he entered a no contest plea for illegally carrying a .25-caliber handgun in May after first pleading guilty. Sentencing for that case is set for Oct. 15.

PARKING FROM 1A

when he made the statement. Municipal Attorney Dan Blasdel warned Blakeman he needed to rescind his statement, but Blakeman refused, repeatedly.

"You took an oath to support and uphold the laws of this city ... to sit here and say you would not, that would be wrong. For you to make that pronouncement is inappropriate and I would ask you to withdraw it," Blasdel said.

Blakeman did not back down and simply stated, "I can't." Council President and former mayor Lowell Schloneger also warned Blakeman to rescind his statement since parking there is against the law, but Blakeman continued to state, "I can't."

Schloneger said he agreed the city should be held responsible in some way for telling Eizonas parking was permitted. He then said that the reason city officials possibly didn't notice the issue before was because people were not parking there continually on an everyday basis like Eizonas was.

Crystal Siembida-Boggs, who is running for a council seat in November, said several people have approached her wondering what would happen to them if they were to get in an accident because they had to travel left of center to get around parked cars.

"I'm just concerned that this angle is not being looked at as well. What happens to the average guy driving down the road in that area?" she said.

Blasdel also pointed out parked cars make it more difficult for motorists to see coming out of the nearby alley. City Manager Lance Willard announced a contractor has come forward and offered to create a space in front of the store that would allow for the parking spaces without impacting traffic.

A previous estimate from Howells and Baird engineering was between $16,000 and $20,000, but Willard said the contractor has offered to donate time and materials, resulting in the cost now falling around $5,000 to $6,000 for the city.

Despite his plea at the last council meeting that a decision be reached soon Councilman Dick Simpson moved to table the discussion yet again, and council approved.

When asked after the meeting if Blakeman could face charges or removal from office for not handing down guilty verdicts for the law, Blasdel declined to comment.

West Branch board OKs law enforcement contracts

By KEVIN HOWELL Staff Writer

BELOIT—The West Branch school board Tuesday approved contracts with local law enforcement for a school resource officer for the district and security at its Columbianna County school.

The board approved an agreement with the Goshen Township Board of Trustees to have a school resource officer provided by the Goshen Police District for one-year effective Sept. 1 through Aug. 31, 2016, with an automatic renewal for two years. The cost is $20,000 annually.

The board also approved an agreement with the Columbiana County Sheriff's Office to provide security at Knox Elementary for the 2015-2016 school year at a cost of $30 per hour for four hours a day.

In other business the board accepted the resignations of middle school assistant principal Aaron Walker, middle school guidance counselor Kelly Warga, intervention specialist Heidi Truxall, aide Holly Zion-Morrow, freshman volleyball coach Diana Wallace and middle school social studies teacher John Schuster.

The board hired John Young as middle school assistant principal, Amanda Davis as middle school guidance counselor, Terri Crowl as a cook's helper, Meredith Krahlung as a playground aide at Damascus Elementary and Ethan Blatch as a middle school social studies teacher.

The board also hired Mike Helm, Rebekah Hobbs, Gerry Brain and Susan Dattilio for two years under the retire-rehire provision, as well as retired teacher Louis Sellaroli as an intervention specialist for the 2015-2016 school year. Sellaroli had already worked two years under the retire-rehire provision as a teacher, but the board noted it had no other options for the intervention specialist position. Board president Earl Trimmer emphasized that the situation is unique and the board is not setting a precedent with the action.

Additionally the board approved for the 2015-2016 school year Tiffany Hobbins, Kristie Sihock, Lissette Wayt, Shawn Underwood and Susanne Dickerhoff as aides and Treva Cline, Jessica Scullion, Brianna Kelecava, Betty George, Kelly Brodzinski, Angela Klingensmith, Jeff Rhoades, Lorie Bush, Emily ReKolt, Hannah Tavallali, Melissa Seckler and Samantha Moose as Title I staff.

The board also approved an agreement with the Mahoning County Educational Service Center eLearning Options for online course and credit recovery at the estimated cost of $20,000 for the 2015-2016 school year; and established lunch fees at no increase from last year.

Charges pending in Perry burglary

PERRY TWP. — Charges are pending against a home intruder after a homeowner Friday morning discovered a break-in at his home and was knocked to the ground by a man found inside who then fled.

Perry Township Police Chief Mike Emigh said Tuesday a person of interest is in custody on a different charge from another department, with charges pending in the township investigation.

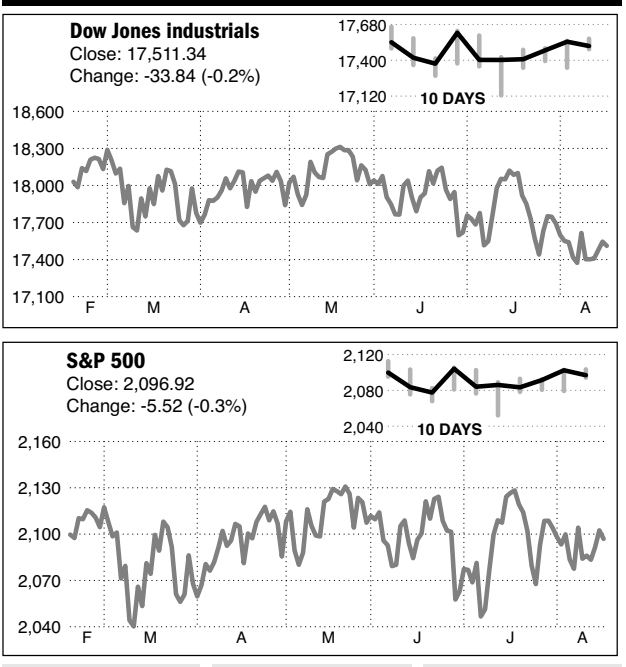

Police responded to the burglary call at 7:43 a.m. Friday in the 1700 block of South Lincoln Avenue. The homeowner was looking around the interior after discovering the break-in when he was knocked down. The man who had been inside the residence fled out the door and ran east towards the railroad tracks.

Salem Police were advised to be on the lookout and officers from both departments checked the woods along the tracks. A male matching the description of the suspect was located in the area of Summit Street in Salem.

HOROSCOPE

Venus and Uranus Trine

With responsibility comes a sense of control. With a sense of control comes security. But when we take responsibility for what we can't control, security is lost. Venus and Uranus form an auspicious angle to suggest a more fair sense of judgment about what we can and cannot control. Make peace with what falls beyond your reach.

ARIES (March 21-April 19).

Accept yourself as a work in progress. You will bond with others through your humanity, not through your perfection. You're so attractive when you let go of needing to do things right.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20).

You appreciate a friend who can keep a secret. You also appreciate a friend who can't keep a secret and gives you fair warning of this inability. Your discretion will be important to the day's events.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21).

You are the guardian of your joy. Don't let anyone take it from you, and especially don't let it slip through your fingers while you're paying attention to things other than it.

CANCER (June 22-July 22).

The safe solutions might work, but where's the fun in that? You are extra-bold in your creativity now, which makes this the perfect time to come up with outlandish solutions to your problems.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22).

Abraham Lincoln said, "When you have got an elephant by the hind leg and he's trying to run away, it's best to let him run." Recognize the things you have no control over and let them go.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22).

Socializing takes effort, but force yourself to do it even though you don't feel like it now. You'll attract admirers. It's interesting the way people fall for you when you couldn't care less.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23).

Try not to let that vivid and restless imagination of yours roam into dark places. Music, humor and exercise will be best to keep your mind reaching into the light.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21).

Love is paying attention to who a person is and warmly accepting that. Wanting someone to be different is the opposite of love. If you are experiencing this kind of rejection trying to pass for love, it's important that you label it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21).

The wish hasn't been granted yet, and already you feel thankful for it. Tonight, people feel they can be themselves around you. When you're relaxed and others are relaxed, the magic sets in.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19).

Your work needs more structure to it. With the right systems in place, you can succeed beyond your expectations. Sign up for a course or enlist the help of a tough coach or teacher.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18).

The things you want should match up with the things you're willing to do to get what you want. Look for the discrepancies and decide whether it might be time to adjust your goal.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20).

You weren't always this person, but the seeds were there and you grew them. You might be surprised at what seeds are in you now. Add water, and then stand back to see what happens.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Aug. 19).

What you think will happen over the next three weeks will indeed, so hold tight to that optimism! The whole team is rooting for you in September (yes, even the jealous ones). Your heart is fulfilled by a loved one's actions in November. There's big work to be done to accomplish lifestyle changes in January. Pisces and Aries people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 6, 24, 32, 35 and 18.

ASTROLOGICAL QUESTIONS:

"I am a Pisces who hit it off with a Leo. We share the same intellect, sense of humor and basically what we wanted out of life — I thought. He's now distant, his reason being 'life in general.' So should I remain patient, or are we done?"

Given that Leos in love and the concept of "distancing" are as non-sympatico as cats and dogs, I'd take this as a clear signal that the distance he's taking is indeed what he wants — and you should follow suit. But, Pisces, not all is lost. If you fell hard for this lion, the best remedy is to find someone similar to him. No, I'm not suggesting you go out and search for his long-lost twin, but that you send a prayerful message to the universe that the stars might send you someone with all the wonderful qualities he possesses. Make a list of those qualities. And while you're at it, throw in a few more: the musical side of your first crush, his gas station attendant's eager helpfulness... Then bury the list. If Leo comes back, great. If not, in nine months, your starter boyfriend has grown you a new one.

Avacados done right

Heloise

Dear Heloise: I use many AVOCADOS but do not like the brown bruised spots. I buy some very firm avocados, keeping them in the refrigerator for two or more days.

I wash and dry the outside, cut it top-to-bottom down to the seed and firmly, using the knife, press it open. It's easy to peel off the skin, leaving a beautiful half avocado. — Margaret L., Colorado Springs, Colo.

Ole! Being a Texas gal, I love guacamole made from fresh, ripe avocados! When shopping, do NOT buy an avocado that has brown bruised spots. It's past its prime!

If they are ripe and ready to eat, into the refrigerator is perfect. However, if they are "very firm," as you said, keeping them in the refrigerator will STOP the ripening process. It will come out just the way it went in — not ripe.

Try this: Buy one or two ready to eat - these can go into the fridge. Get a few that are a little firm; they will ripen when set out. You are set! — Heloise IRIDESCENT ROAST BEEF

Dear Heloise: I read your column in The Delaware Gazette, published in Delaware, Ohio.

I'm writing to ask about the discoloration on roast beef. It looks like an oil slick — iridescent. When I reheated the meat, it was bright pink. All of the meat wasn't like this. Is it harmful to eat? — A Reader in Central Ohio

No, it's not harmful to eat. It may look a little funny, but you're good for a go on eating the "Wow, look at that cool color!" This trusted information is from the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the go-to expert this expert relies on. — Heloise TACO SEASONING

Dear Heloise: Please share the recipe for your HELOISE'S TACO SEASONING again. I love to put it on meat and use it to make nachos. It's delicious! — Linda T. in Pennsylvania

Yes it is, and it's easy to make. Here you go: HELOISE'S TACO SEASONING
2 teaspoons chili powder
Salt, pepper and onion powder to taste (start with small amounts and add as needed)

A dash of crushed, dried oregano
Mix the ingredients together, and it's ready to use! Save whatever is left over (if you make extra) in an old spice jar. Use in taco recipes, nachos or to add flavor to meat. Why waste money buying it when you can make it for pennies? For more easy and tasty hints, why not order my pamphlet Heloise's Seasonings, Sauces and Substitutes, compiling all of my favorite ones? Go online to www.Heloise.com, or send $3 and a long, self-addressed, stamped (70 cents) envelope to: Heloise/SSS, P.O. Box 795001, San Antonio, TX 78279-5001. Keep spices away from heat or light, and DO NOT put them over the stove. — Heloise

NO DRIP

Dear Heloise: I keep a bag of miniature marshmallows in the pantry. In the summer, they are great for placing at the bottom of ice-cream cones to keep the ice cream from dripping out. It also is a delicious surprise at the end of eating the cone. — Patty W. in Alabama

Husband with low sex drive won't shift gear

DEAR ABBY: My husband, "Sam," and I have been married three years and have a good relationship. He's a wonderful father and husband, and I really couldn't ask for much more.

However, there is one thing I just don't know what to do about. He had a rough divorce from his first wife, who was also the first woman he ever had sex with (they waited until they were married). She started doing drugs shortly afterward and cheated on him several times. Counseling with her didn't work, and eventually he filed for divorce.

We married five years after his divorce, and we also waited to have sex until we were married. This was by mutual agreement. Once we were married, I realized he has some big hang-ups about sex in general. There can never be any foreplay, we never change positions, and the times it happens are few and far between.

I have expressed my need for more intimacy, but he acts like I'm being ridiculous, or says he can't make himself change something he's comfortable with. How else can I approach this situation without making him feel bad? I believe sex in a marriage is very important, and ours needs to change. — NEEDS MORE IN TEXAS

DEAR NEEDS MORE: Your husband has a problem, but in order for there to be any changes in your marriage, he will have to admit to himself — and to you — that he has one. A place to start would be marriage counseling with a licensed therapist, and from there, very likely, a course of treatment with a licensed sex therapist. I hope you can convince him that it is necessary, because unless he agrees, I don't think a mutually satisfying union will be possible.

DEAR ABBY: I got my sister a job at my workplace, and she has now fallen in love with one of my co-workers, "Bill." The problem is, he's married and has children. Bill's wife works here, too, and she recently found out about the romance. Bill and his wife talked and decided to work things out.

I have now learned that Bill and my sister are still dating and have even discussed marriage. I had decided to stay out of it, but I'm friends with this couple and I feel obligated to let the wife know. Should I stay silent and let her find out for herself? How do I make my sister realize this is not a good path she is going down? — STUCK IN THE MIDDLE

DEAR STUCK: Bill's wife already knows she's married to a cheater. She doesn't need you to tell her. Do, however, talk to your sister and remind her that this is a no-win situation for her.

When Bill's wife realizes the affair is ongoing, she'll either see to it that the romance is over once and for all — which means your sister will end up brokenhearted — or she'll divorce him. If she divorces Bill and he marries your sister, your sister will have a husband with a history of cheating and heavy child support payments. That's hardly a guarantee of a happy ending.

Help for Lil'Lee

Pictured are Humane Society of Columbiana County Agent Julie Dustman and Lil'Lee. The humane society is hosting an online T-shirt fundraiser for Lil'Lee from now until Sept. 5. The dog's leg had been broken for over a week when she came into care on Aug. 12 with the help of Dustman. Upon arrival she was seen by Dr. Vickey Brooks of Adamson Veterinary Services. After X-rays it was determined that Lil'Lee had a clean break and that her leg needed set and casted. Lil'Lee was also spayed and is now resting comfortably at the shelter. To donate to her vet bill of $756.37, send payment directly to Adamson Veterinary Services, 375 W. However, when deputies were leaving they saw Crowe in the driver's seat of a pickup attempting to back out of the yard and then pulling immediately back in. Crowe was charged with disorderly conduct.

Township, where a piece of property was willed to him, but there are other people living on it. Deputies explained how to begin eviction proceedings.

— Tracy Klein, Bell Road, Lisbon, asked deputies to check on her daughter, Sarah Klein, Brookfield Avenue, Lisbon, and her 17-month-old son at 8:17 p.m. Monday. There appeared to be no problems.

Pryor injures hamstring

PITTSFORD, N.Y. (AP) — Cleveland Browns receiver Terrelle Pryor has been held out of practice after aggravating a hamstring injury, and starting cornerback Justin Gilbert hurt his right hip flexor.

Coach Mike Pettine provided the update after the Browns completed a joint practice with the Buffalo Bills on Tuesday.

Pettine says Pryor aggravated the injury in practice a day earlier. Pryor had just returned to practice on Saturday after missing more than a week.

Gilbert was hurt 40 minutes into practice when he tumbled to the turf while defending Bills receiver Tobias Palmer during a one-on-one drill. The 2014 first-round draft pick was slow to get up, and then limped to the sideline where trainers wrapped the upper portion of Gilbert's right leg.

Pettine didn't know if Gilbert could play Thursday, when Cleveland hosts Buffalo in a preseason game.

Pettine expects Pro Bowl cornerback Joe Haden to sit out one more game to rest his hamstring injury.

Elliot, offensive line hope to lead Buckeyes

By RALPH D. RUSSO
AP College Football Writer

COLUMBUS — Ezekiel Elliott and the Ohio State offensive line could make most quarterbacks look good.

For all the headlines generated by the Buckeyes' ability to replace a star quarterback with another star quarterback last season, the development of the running game was every bit as important to Ohio State's national championship season.

No matter if J.T. Barrett or Cardale Jones takes snaps for the Buckeyes this season, Elliott could be the focal point of Ohio State's offense. The junior ran for 1,878 yards and 18 touchdowns last year and enters this season on pretty much every list of Heisman Trophy hopefuls.

At the start of last season, Elliott and an offensive line breaking in four new starters struggled to get rolling. In a September home loss to Virginia Tech, Elliott ran eight times for 32 yards. But when Ohio State turned it on down the stretch, Elliott and the offensive line were dominant.

"Zeke was the exact same player all year, but then the people around him just needed to play better in order for him to really show what he was capable of," tackle Taylor Decker said.

Elliott had 153 yards and two scores at Michigan State, then had three 200-yard games in the postseason. Against Wisconsin, Alabama and Oregon, Elliott ran for 698 yards and eight touchdowns.

"The key with Zeke is if you can get him to the second level, his skill set at the second level is unbeliev-

The offensive line now returns four starters, including Decker, who considered entering the NFL draft early before deciding to return to Columbus, and guard Pat Elflein. There might not be a better group of blockers in the country.

"I think we're definitely farther along than we were last year at this point, especially from a chemistry standpoint and an experience standpoint," Decker said. "But I think it would be dangerous to sit there and believe that we're the best."

Elliott does not shy away from praising the guys who make his life easier.

"I think they're going to be the best group on the team because after last year and the experience they gained and how tough they are and how hard they work, I don't see anyone outworking them or anyone being better than them," Elliott said.

The Buckeyes are a safe bet to start the season No. 1 in The Associated Press Top 25, which will be released Sunday. Here are some things to know about the team that will try to give coach Urban Meyer his fourth national championship:

ABOUT THOSE QBs

Barrett was the Big Ten player of the year last season, setting a conference record by accounting for 45 touchdowns.

Jones took over when Barrett broke his right ankle against Michigan, leading the Buckeyes to wins against Wisconsin, Alabama and Oregon. He passed for 742 yards and five touchdowns in that remarkable three-game run. Meyer has said he won't reveal his starter until the Buckeyes take the field Labor Night at Virginia Tech, but it certainly seems as if he can't go wrong.

MEYER'S STREAKS

Meyer is the only coach in major college history to have three winning streaks of at least 20 games.

His Florida teams won 22 in one stretch. He won 20 straight from the end of his time in Utah to his first season at Florida. He added a 25-game streak that started his last season at Florida and ended during his second season at Ohio State. The Buckeyes enter this season on a 13-game winning streak.

SUSPENSIONS

Ohio State will play Virginia Tech without All-American end Joey Bosa and three receivers: Jalin Marshall, Corey Smith and Dontre Wilson. All were suspended for a game for an unspecified violation of team rules, making one of the toughest games on a schedule that is light on marquee matchups even more difficult for the Buckeyes.

MILLER ON THE MOVE

Former Big Ten player of the year Braxton Miller is moving from quarterback to receiver after two shoulder surgeries. Miller will be used as an H-Back, a role that will have him lining up all over the field and getting the ball on all kinds of pitches, handoffs and passes.

"Just having fun out there," Miller said. "You catch the ball and you're already in the second or third level. All you got to do is make one guy miss and it's off to the races."

Red Sox rout Bauer, Tribe

By DOUG ALDEN

Associated Press

BOSTON — The Boston Red Sox continued a minor resurgence as owner John Henry made a major shake-up in the front office.

The Red Sox routed the Cleveland Indians 9-1 on Tuesday night, a victory that was overshadowed before it ended with the club's late announcement that Dave Dombrowski was hired to take over baseball operations for general manager Ben Cherington.

"We are responsible for the situation," said David Ortiz, who had two doubles and drove in a run. "Sometimes that requires new moves, sometimes it doesn't and I guess they just went for that."

Although the Red Sox have been winning of late, Boston is in danger of finishing last in the AL East for the third time in four seasons.

The Red Sox won for the fourth time in five games the same day manager John Farrell started chemotherapy for a treatable form of cancer that will keep him out for the rest of the season.

"It's been an awkward week to say the least, starting obviously with John's news," said bench coach Torey Luvullo, who is acting manager while Farrell is on medical leave. "We just got through that. We're moving forward from that and then today's news. It's been tough."

On the bright side, the Red Sox are finally hitting and giving pitchers plenty of run support. Travis Shaw went 4 for 4 and Brock Holt had three hits and two RBIs for the Red Sox, who knocked around five Cleveland pitchers for 16 hits.

Eduardo Rodriguez (7-5) pitched eight solid innings, allowing one run and six hits while striking out five and not walking a batter.

Cleveland's only run came on Michael Brantley's homer in the seventh.

Trevor Bauer (9-10) was pulled early from a second straight start for the Indians. Bauer, who lasted just 3 1-3 innings against the Yankees on Thursday, was gone before the end of the second on Tuesday after the Red Sox tagged him for six hits — four for extra bases.

Three were doubles, including one by Betts with the bases loaded on a line drive over the head of left fielder Ryan Raburn that put Boston up 4-0. Holt, who tripled in the first, followed with a single to drive in Betts.

"He's fighting it right now. I think we all know that," Cleveland manager Terry Francona said. "When they're going real good and you feel good and you're confident and you're throwing pitches with conviction. And I think right now he's probably second-guessing himself a little bit."

SLUGGING SOX

Boston has scored 62 runs over the last five games, providing welcome run support.

Rodriguez cruised early with a perfect game through three innings and didn't get rattled after Brantley's homer in the seventh. Rodriguez followed consecutive losses by going eight innings for the first time in his brief career. "After you get a lot of runs from your teammates, you get more comfortable during the game," Rodriguez said.

NO TIP?

Bauer was unhappy after Betts cleared the bases with his double off the Green Monster. Bauer felt Betts missed while swinging on a foul tip that ended up in catcher Roberto Perez's glove.

"It looked like strike three," Bauer said. "I guess the umpire said he nicked it and it hit the ground first."

TRAINER'S ROOM

INDIANS: INF Jason Kipnis (right shoulder inflammation) was activated from the 15-day DL. The Indians placed INF Chris Johnson on the DL with an infection in his left hand caused by a spider bite.

RED SOX: Farrell started chemotherapy treatment for lymphoma, which he announced Friday he had been diagnosed with and would be on medical leave for the rest of the season.

UP NEXT

INDIANS: RHP Corey Kluber (8-12) is coming off his second straight complete-game victory, a one-hitter over the Twins on Friday.

RED SOX: Joe Kelly (5-6) has won three straight starts. Kelly allowed one run and four hits over six innings Friday in a 15-1 win over Seattle.

Wheaton switches to slot receiver in training camp

By DAN SCIFO

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Pittsburgh Steelers wide receiver Markus Wheaton doesn't mind where he plays, as long as he's on the field.

That's good news for the Steelers, who are moving the talented wide receiver to the slot during training camp to add another dimension to an already-dangerous offensive attack.

"We have a lot of potential," Wheaton said. "I guess we'll see how it goes."

The results were positive in 2014 as the Steelers flourished on offense, breaking franchise records and finishing No. 2 in the league. Wheaton was a big part of the attack, playing on the outside and in the slot at times.

That the Steelers' 2013 third-round pick now gets an entire offseason to learn the nuances of a position he never played in college at Oregon State.

"We ran a lot of two-receiver sets in college, so I was outside a lot," Wheaton said.

Wheaton estimated the switch to slot came around mid-season last year, when he had a package of simplified plays designed for him.

Wheaton has worked on the outside and in the slot during training camp practices, and says he doesn't have a preference on where he plays.

"As long as I'm on the field, I'm happy," Wheaton said.

Wheaton bounced back from an injury-plagued rookie campaign that saw the 24-year-old catch just six passes for 64 yards.

Wheaton appeared in all 16 regular-season games and made 11 starts. He set personal bests with 53 receptions for 644 yards and two touchdowns.

"I think I grew a lot from my rookie year," Wheaton said. "I think the numbers say so and I expect to do the same thing this year."

Wheaton's growth was helped by the emergence of deep threat Martavis Bryant, who caught eight touchdowns as a rookie. Adding Antonio Brown, the NFL leader in receptions and yards and Le'Veon Bell, who finished second in the league with 1,361 rushing and 2,215 all-purpose rushing and receiving yards, solidified the Ben Roethlisberger-led attack as one of the most potent in the NFL.

Wheaton feels the group can only improve.

"Just the young guys getting experience in that itself will help a lot," Wheaton said. "Whether I'm on the inside or the outside, just being on the field, getting experience and seeing coverages will help."

The Steelers offense appeared to be in midseason form Friday against Jacksonville, needing just six plays to march 80 yards in a little more than three minutes. Wheaton hauled in the two-point conversion after a Roethlisberger scramble.

"I think we showed what we needed to show," Wheaton said. "It's going to be a long season and a few plays won't tell the story."

But the Steelers offense has a lot of potential and Wheaton knows it. His role in this is continued improvement wherever he plays to help the offense remain as one of the NFL's elite.

"My expectation is to make plays. as many plays as I can," Wheaton said. "When the ball comes to me I want to catch it."

NOTES: The Steelers signed undrafted rookie free agent wide receiver Jarrod West and released quarterback Tajh Boyd. The team was off on Tuesday and returns Wednesday for the first of the three final training camp practices this season at St. Vincent College.

Bills fans not happy to see Whitner return to facility

By JOHN WAWROW

AP Sports Writer

PITTSFORD, N.Y. — On a hot muggy morning, Browns safety Donte Whitner received a cold reception in his return to the Buffalo Bills' training camp facility for the first time in five years.

"BOOOOOOO!" several Bills fans yelled as Whitner took the field Monday, when Cleveland and Buffalo opened a two-day series of joint practices.

"I don't see Whitner on the Bills' Wall of Fame, do you?" one fan yelled in Whitner's direction.

The catcalls and boos did not come as a surprise.

Selected eighth overall in the 2006 draft, Whitner played his first five seasons in Buffalo before wearing out his welcome once his contract expired following the 2010 season.

Though Whitner has disputed this, former Bills general manager Buddy Nix said the player didn't want to re-sign with the team because Whitner didn't want to be in Buffalo. Whitner didn't help by engaging in numerous spats with Bills fans on his Twitter account before signing with San Francisco in free agency.

"Ah, I don't even think about that. That was just something that goes on on Twitter," Whitner said.

"I'm past that."

Bills players and fans have had difficulty letting go.

Last summer, Whitner caused a stir when the Bills' future was uncertain following the death of Hall of Fame owner Ralph Wilson. Whitner referred to the team as "the Toronto Bills," predicting they would relocate to Canada. The Bills were instead sold to Terry and Kim Pegula, who are committed to keeping the team in western New York.

Whitner also took issue with Bills receiver Sammy Watkins. Whitner warned the then-rookie to "be quiet" after Watkins said he was looking forward to playing the Browns last season.

On Monday, Watkins was amused by the boos toward Whitner.

"Yeah, that's what you're going to hear when you kind of bad-talk Buffalo," Watkins told The Associated Press. "It's funny."

Whitner, a three-time Pro Bowl selection, is entering his 10th season, and second with his hometown Browns.

In Buffalo, Whitner experienced difficulty adjusting to former Bills coach Dick Jauron's 4-3 defensive system. In 2008, the Bills went 7-9, falling short of Whitner's guarantee that they would make the playoffs.

Jordan tells jury he values his image 'preciously'

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Bulls great Michael Jordan testified Tuesday that his image is precious to him, which is why he filed a lawsuit against a grocery store chain that used it without permission.
 "I have the final say-so on everything that involves my likeness and my name," Jordan told jurors in Chicago. When his attorney asked him why he brought the case, Jordan said it was "to protect my likeness, my image ... something I value very preciously."
 Dominick's Finer Foods has acknowledged it wasn't authorized to use Jordan's image in a 2009 magazine ad. The jury will decide the fair market value of the infringement by the grocery chain, which has since gone out of business.
 Frederick Sperling, Jordan's attorney, has told jurors Jordan's name was worth at least $480 million to Nike and that each commercial use of Jordan's name is worth more than $10 million. A witness Monday testified Jordan made $100 million from his identity last year, even though he last played in the NBA in 2003.

Duval gets US Open wild card after cancer

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Vicky Duval received a wild-card entry for U.S. Open qualifying, a week after she returned to competition following a yearlong recovery from Hodgkin lymphoma.

The 19-year-old based in Bradenton, Florida, won two singles matches at a $25,000 tournament in Landisville, Pennsylvania, last week, her first action since reaching the second round of Wimbledon as a qualifier in June 2014. Shortly after that, Duval announced she had been diagnosed with cancer.

Duval made a splash at the 2013 U.S. Open, beating 2011 champion Sam Stosur in the first round.

She is among 16 players whose wild cards for qualifying at Flushing Meadows were announced Tuesday by the U.S. Tennis Association. Qualifying rounds are played Aug. 25-28; the main draw for the U.S. Open starts play Aug. 31.

The USTA also announced eight men's and eight women's main-draw wild cards, including for 2001 champion Lleyton Hewitt and Bethanie Mattek-Sands. The 34-year-old Hewitt, who also won Wimbledon in 2002, has said he will retire after the Australian Open in January. He is a former No. 1 player who is now ranked 162nd and got his wild card via a reciprocal agreement with Tennis Australia, which will give a wild-card entry to an American player for its Grand Slam tournament next year.

The other men's wild cards went to Americans Ryan Harrison, Jared Donaldson, Bjorn Fratangelo, Austin Krajicek, Ryan Shane and Frances Tiafoe, along with Pierre-Hughes Herbert of France.

Mattek-Sands has been ranked as high as No. 30 but is currently 99th. She has won two Grand Slam doubles titles this year.

The other women's wild cards went to Americans Louisa Chirico, Samantha Crawford, Nicole Gibbs, Sofia Kenin, Jamie Loeb and Sachia Vickery, along with Oceane Dodin of France.

Iowa wins LLSWS tiebreaker after controversy

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — An Iowa team advanced to the Little League Softball World Series semifinals Tuesday by beating an opponent forced into the tiebreaker after it was accused of deliberately losing a game.

The Central Iowa team beat South Snohomish Washington 3-2 in a rematch ordered by the tournament after it said it received reports that some teams "did not play with the effort and spirit appropriate" for Little League play.

"I wouldn't say vindicated. I would say that the two teams should have been playing for this spot played, and the better team won," said Chris Chadd, the president of Central Iowa Little League. "It's just an ecstatic feeling."

The dispute arose after the Washington team was no-hit Monday by a team from Salisbury, North Carolina. The loss created a three-way tie for the Pool B title, meaning that Washington and North Carolina would advance to the semifinals and the Polk City, Iowa, team would not.

Chadd, who was back in Iowa on Monday, said he was hearing from Iowa coach Charlie Husak that some of Washington's top hitters were bunting rather than swinging away, and that the West squad wasn't using its top pitcher to start the game.

Believing that Washington was deliberately trying to avoid a rematch with Iowa in the semifinals, Husak filed a protest with the tournament director.
