No sewer bill break for Salem Golf Club

By MARY ANN GREIER

Staff Writer

 ${\rm SALEM-The\ Salem\ Golf\ Club}$ won't get a break on a recent higher than normal water and sewer bill caused by a water loss when a pool pipe burst.

The city Utilities Commission took no formal vote on the club's request for consideration on the sewer portion of the bill, but clearly indicated the answer was no, pointing to the club's failure to install a separate meter at the pool as instructed when a similar problem occurred in 2011.

Commission Chairman Bob

Hodgson noted that according to commission records, similar problems with water leaks at the pool occurred in 2005 and 2010, also. Both times the club received credit for part of the sewer portion of the bills and both times the commission recommended a secondary water meter be installed to measure the pool water use.

When the club returned for the same problem in 2011, the commission voted against a credit. A letter sent to the club by Utilities Superintendent Don Weingart at the time noted that "since there is no measuring device to accurately measure any water claimed not having entered into the city of Salem sanitary sewer system, there is no accurate way to determine the amount of make-up water added to the pool."

In determining a credit, the commission had been guessing at the amount since there was no way to know how much water was actually lost. Hodgson said it was frustrating that since then, nothing has been and said he didn't know about the past history. He took over management of the club on Feb. 1. He had told the commission about some work done on the pool before the season started and then how the pipe burst, causing the pool to have to be refilled. The sewer portion of the bill in question was $2,390. The entire bill totaled $4,597 and was paid on July 1, including $695 to fill the pool from a metered hydrant and $87 for a service charge for filling the pool. The water portion was $1,423.

Quilt Guild pitches in for show

By MARY ANN GREIER Staff Writer

SALEM - Visitors to the United Quilt Guild's 8th biennial quilt show can feast their eyes on a kaleidoscope of colors, designs, materials, embellishments and stitches starting today and continuing through the weekend.

"We've got some beautiful, great quilts in here," quilt show committee member Beth Gallo said during setup at the Salem Community Center.

The show hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. today and Saturday and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday, featuring 200 quilts, vendors from across the country, lectures and demonstrations, the Little Quilt Auction, a United Quilt Guild raffle quilt, Dream Baskets, a market place, the UQG garage sale and refreshments. Admission is $6 or a three-day pass for $10. Tickets for the raffle quilt are $1 each or six for $5. The guild uses the show as a fundraiser to support its promotion of education and service to the community. Members make quilts for donation to local hospital oncology departments, to veterans through the "With Love To You" program and for project shelters. Workshops are held with local and national quilting teachers, too.

The quilt show is held every two years and takes about a year to organize by a small army of quilt guild members who also recruit family members on set-up day along with volunteers from the Eastern Ohio Correction Center in Lisbon.

"Everybody needs to pitch in to make it successful," Gallo said. The theme of this year's Guild Challenge is "The Painted Quilt," requiring guild members entering the challenge to use at least one embellishment technique on their challenge quilt entry. Quilt Show Coordinator Pat Williams said embellishments can include paint, beads, crayons, embroidery, crystals or any other item to challenge the member into doing more than just the basic quilt.

"Think out of the box," Williams said.

A quilt is made of three layers sewn together, including a top layer created by the maker, and the backing and the batting. The quilting or sewing together of the three layers can be done by the maker or another person. "Everybody loves quilts, the beauty and the history of quilts," Williams

UQG President Dee Hart explained that quilt making is a tradition for women. Women provide for their families and their homes and quilts are "part of our nurturing environment that we create," she said

Hart studies the history of quilts and said quilts tell not just about the creator's family but about the times, about what people were doing, the events of the day, the styles, designs and materials being used. A lot of quilting was done in the 1800s and then died down by the 1950s due to women working during the war and more of them working outside the home. Quilting gained attention again after the bicentennial in 1976 and now it's a $3 billion dollar industry

Gallo said the women back in the early days such as the time of the women's suffrage movement would make quilts to raise money. In the 1920s and 1930s they used quilts to make money for their churches or to

Port chief talks about mystery 'metals' plant

By TOM GIAMBRONI Staff Writer

 ${\it EAST\,LIVERPOOL-The\,mystery\,company\,wanting\,to}$ build a plant outside Columbiana would like to break ground by fall if everything falls into place before then, according to Columbiana County Port Authority CEO Tracy Drake.

Speaking after Thursday's port authority board meeting, Drake said he believes the company is prepared to move forward with the Fairfield Township site and would like to begin construction before fall so work can be completed in 2017.

'There's a lot of moving parts to this ... They haven't said they're in fully, but I think they are," he said.

News of the plant was first made public when a petition was filed with county commissioners on July 8 seeking to annex 183 acres from the township into the city of Columbiana. The petition was filed by the only two property owners - Buckeye Transfer Realty, which owns the property on the south side of Cherry Fork Road, and David and Carrie McMasters, who own the land to the north.

Drake said a 200,000-square-foot "speciality metals" manufacturing plant, warehouse and offices would be built on the 89 acres of farmland owned by the McMasters. Buckeye Transfer was included in the annexation request because the company also wants to be located in the city.

The total cost of the project is an estimated $100 million and it would create 120 "well-paying advanced-manufacturing jobs within several years of the facility opening. Most of the workforce would be hired from the area," Drake said, in a news release he also issued.

According of the news release, the plant involves the use of advanced metal melting and processing equipment that would "serve an international marketplace, with its products being used globally in aerospace, automotive, power generation, chemical processing, and medical applications.'

The identity of the company behind the project has been snrouded in secrecy, so much so that it was given the name "Project Foxtrot" a year ago when the port authority was first approached by the state to help find a possible site, Drake

The company Drake has been dealing with is called AMP Corp., which is a corporation created by the investors behind the project, and their identity is being kept secret for now because of competitors.

"There is a company behind it that doesn't want its name known yet," he said.

Other states are also competing for the project, including South Carolina, which offered free land. "I didn't know if we would compete with states offering free land, but we put together a good package," he said.

AMP representatives have already said it would pay the $1.4 million cost of having city water and sewer extended to the site, plus $500,000 to upgrade electrical service to the property.

Drake said the port authority will be involved in helping finance the project by using its ability to provide tax-exempt status for construction bonds obtained by AMP. He said the port authority could act on the tax-exempt bond request as early as August.

Hart said now they're trying to get the younger generation interested in quilting. The guild, which is based in Salem at the Salem Presbyterian Church, holds meetings the first Tues day of each month. Information about the group is available at www.unitedquiltguild.org.

A lot can be learned by visting the Kaleidoscope of Quilts, the 8th Biennial Quilt Show. The schedule includes lots of demonstrations and lectures all three days in the vendor room, where vendors from Illinois, Michigan, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Pennsylvania and Ohio will share their wares and their knowledge. Award-winning modern quilters Jodie Robinson, Eva Birch and Nancy Gano will lecture on Saturday, along with David Lewis of the Algonquin Mills Guild lecturing and demonstrating. Collections from sister guilds in Columbiana and Canfield will be available for view.

The main focus, though, will be showcasing the quilts entered for judging. Judges this year include Linda McCuean, a nationally known long arm quilter from New Galilee, Pa., and Linda Miller, who owns a quilting studio in Uniontown. Both have judged many a quilt competition.

LISBON — Two people waived their rights to a preliminary hearing in unrelated cases in Columbiana County Municipal David A.W. Boord III, 23, Roberstville, was bound over to the Columbiana County Common Pleas Court Grand Jury on a theft charge. Boord allegedly stole a vehicle owned by Adam Haught, who had stopped to assist at a traffic crash on U.S. Route 30 on June 29. Bond was set at $25,000 cash or surety.

During the hearing, Assistant County Prosecutor Don Humphrey Jr. said he actually had two victims in the courtroom for Thursday's hearing, Haught and Thomas Brown. According to Humphrey, Boord took Brown's vehicle first and then wrecked it leading to the second offense.

Boord has not been charged with the second offense at this time, although the prosecutor's office could choose to take both cases before the grand jury in the near future.

Stephanie Molter, 35, Eighth Street, Wellsville, charged with tampering with evidence, also agreed to waive her right to a preliminary hearing in exchange for a recommendation of having her bond modified from $20,000 cash or surety to $10,000 cash or surety.

Judge Mark Frost agreed with the request to lower the

When Columbiana County DTF executed a search warrant at her home a week earlier, Molter allegedly ran back inside after seeing police outside and locked herself inside the bathroom. A bag of suspected narcotics reportedly were found in the toilet by one agent. Molter allegedly also was found with a loaded syringe inside her shorts.

U.S. could follow Greece into chaos

No doubt many Greeks are upset with their prime minister this week, after he agreed to tax increases and entitlement cuts needed to keep the country's economy from going belly-up. At least part of their anger would more appropriately be directed inward. Many of Greece's economic maladies were self-inflicted.

We Americans should not be too self-congratulatory over the fact our economy is in much better shape than Greece's, however. There, in a matter of not so many years, may go we. And if that happens, we, too, can look first in the mirror in our search for culprits.

Greek leader Alexis Tsipras agreed Monday to changes demanded by his country's many creditors, including both other governments and financial institutions. Tsipras had for months vowed to defy the creditors, but continuing to do so could prompt them to cut off future credit, leaving the Greek economy in chaos.

High unemployment, topping 25 percent, is part of Greece's dilemma. Much of it is from a culture in which government spent far beyond its means on social programs such as pensions, and mandated many in the private sector do the same. Now, Tsipras must tell his constituents they have to cut back on entitlements such as pensions and raise taxes to get their financial house back in order.

Greeks have known for years they were spending too much, but they resisted calls for austerity.

Sound familiar? Americans are in the same boat, though ours has not begun sinking — yet.

But unless changes are made — and that means entitlement reform, less government spending and fewer expensive mandates on the private sector — it is only a matter of time before we, too, begin feeling water around our ankles.

Government protects us, or says it does, from virtually every risk. Sometimes it also protects us from our heritage.

That appears to be the situation with the steamboat Delta Queen, which plied the inland waterways for many years. Many area residents have seen her on the Ohio River and, we suspect, enjoyed the glimpse of bygone days.

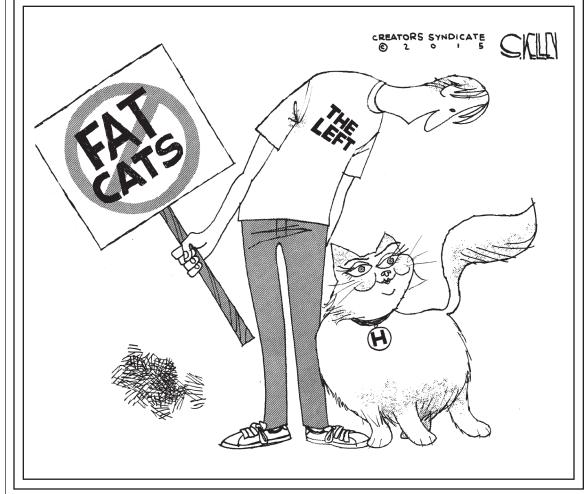

But the Queen is a wooden craft, outlawed under a 1966 law intended to safeguard passengers from fires aboard ocean-going vessels. For some time, the Queen was granted exemptions from the statute, but Congress' failure to act regularly on them forced the boat's owners to tie her up.

Bills in both the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives would allow the Queen to get up a head of steam again, by granting her a 15-year exemption to the law.

Congress should approve the measure and President Barack Obama should sign it into law.

Is the Queen less safe than more modern steel riverboats? Of course. But on the Ohio or Mississippi rivers, her passengers are at comparatively little risk — and many people, we suspect, would consider that a small price to pay for seeing the Queen again.

Republicans must disown Trump

JULES WITCOVER What do you do with a problem like The Donald? Probably not since the U.S. Senate in 1954 censured the odious Joseph McCarthy for his reckless witch hunt for communists in the Eisenhower administration has such a bull in a china shop rummaged through American politics.

McCarthy was put in his place by a member of his own party, the mild-mannered Sen. Ralph Flanders of Vermont, who offered a resolution that said simply: "Resolved, that the conduct of the senator from Wisconsin, Mr. McCarthy, is unbecoming a member of the United States Senate, is contrary to senatorial traditions, and tends to bring the Senate into disrepute, and such conduct is hereby condemned."

The indictment was an unspecific broad brush against the loose cannon from Wisconsin, but at the time no specific details were needed to explain to the Senate or much of the American public. McCarthy, as chairman of a Senate investigations subcommittee, sweepingly condemned officials in the State Department, the military and other targets as communist sympathizers or past or current members of the Communist Party.

A select committee of three Republicans and three Democrats, chaired by circumspect Republican Sen. Arthur Watkins of Utah, was composed to consider a bill of particulars related to Flanders' resolution. It recommended censuring McCarthy for abuse of the committee and for his insults of an Army general in the Army-McCarthy hearings, who he said was unfit to wear the uniform.

The Senate approved the censure by a vote of 67 to 22, and McCarthy, by this time in the grip of alcoholism and ill health, died about two and half years later, diagnosed with hepatitis. He was given a funeral service in the Senate chamber, but the stain of his slanderous service indelibly clung to his place in history.

Less than two decades after McCarthy's censure, another Republican, Richard Nixon, was similarly brought to disgrace. A small group of prominent leaders in his party came to the White House and told him point-blank that he didn't have enough support in Congress to avoid impeachment in the Watergate scandal and associated crimes.

Sens. Barry Goldwater and Hugh Scott and Rep. John Rhodes informed him that a special House committee was about to approve impeachment charges against him, forcing the first presidential resignation in the nation's history.

Both McCarthy and Nixon were elected public officials, subject to legal and political pressures and punishment. Trump, on the other hand, is a private citizen, and neither the Republican Party nor another political or governmental entity has the muscle to derail him.

Trump, in arousing the anger of those that share his extreme anti-immigration and anti-government views, is pitting his personal celebrity and biases against the political process, rallying the like-minded to hijack that process.

So far, the weak and splintered Grand Old Party apparatus and would-be presidential nominees have largely cowered in the face of Trump's publicity and bombast blitz. They hope he will go away. The distinctly low-wattage party national chairman, Reince Priebus, has demonstrated his lack of imagination and sense of reality by pleading with Trump to tone down his message

As for the other Republican presidential aspirants, most have said that Trump's tirade against Mexicans as rapists and other kinds of criminals is "not helpful" or otherwise not in keeping with the party's thinking.

One of them, presidential longshot Sen. Lindsey Graham of South Carolina, has flatly called Trump "a demagogue" poisoning the Republican brand. But few others have been bold enough to agree publicly.

The willingness of the party hierarchy to allow the various television organizations to dictate which Republican candidates will be permitted to take part in the approaching debates, based on standings in certain public-opinion polls, makes a mockery of the process. In all, the ability of Donald Trump, a man conspicuously unqualified to be president, to take captive the run-up to the 2016 presidential campaign, is reducing the entire political scene to a joke. The phenomenon is detrimental not only to the Republican Party but also to the single most important civic event in our society every four years.

Any GOP presidential hopeful who cannot find the courage to denounce Trump does not deserve consideration himself for occupying the Oval Office.

Obamakill: End-of-life counseling to be pushed for seniors

BETSY McCAUGHEY Look out, Grandma. Medicare said last week it wants to start paying for end-of-life counseling.

It's being sold as "death with dignity," but it's more like dying for dollars. Seniors are pressured to forego life-sustaining procedures to go into hospice. That enriches the booming hospice industry and also frees up dollars for the left's favored social causes.

Why is the government meddling with how we cope with death? The Institute of Medicine doesn't mince words. Scrimping on seniors will free up money "to fund highly targeted and carefully tailored social services for both children and adults." Just like Obamacare. Robbing Grandma to spread the wealth.

In 2009, President Obama said seniors are getting too many procedures and maybe they're "better off not having the surgery, but taking the painkiller." Obama's health guru Ezekiel Emanuel argues the elderly should be a lower priority because "they have already had more life-years."

It's the perfect storm of ideology and industry greed, with hospice providers lobbying lawmakers to make end-of-life counseling the standard.

And not just once. Hospice advocates want to drill their morbid message into patients' heads. "It has to be a series of recurring conversations over years," an industry representative insists.

Imported from Europe, the hospice industry has boomed -- and taken a sharp turn from nonprofit to aggressively for-profit. Revenues are up 500 percent since 2000, and the industry is flexing its muscle in state capitols and Washington, D.C.

In 2010, industry lobbyists convinced New York lawmakers to compel all doctors to offer end-of-life counseling to patients with terminal illnesses. New York's law imposes heavy fines, even jail time, on doctors who don't.

heavy fines, even jail time, on doctors who don't.

The state's physicians protested that some patients will break down at the mention of hospice and give up on life. Other some patients will break down at the men tion of hospice and give up on life. Other patients are religiously or culturally opposed.

But the law prohibits exemptions. Forcing New York doctors to say things violates their First Amendment rights. Just last week, the U.S. Supreme Court allowed a ruling to stand that struck down a North Carolina law dictating what doctors said to certain patients.

How about pressure on patients? Advocates say end-of-life counseling is always voluntary for the patient. Technically that may be true, but if your doctor faces penalties for not doing it, you're going to feel forced to go along.

That was the problem with the end-of-life counseling provision in an early draft of Obamacare in 2009. It said Medicare would pay doctors for end-of-life counseling. Fine.

But the bill went on to prescribe what doctors would have to discuss. That's not fine. Uncle Sam can't possibly know better than your family, the doctor at your bedside and maybe your minister or rabbi.

Even worse, the provision would have punished doctors who didn't comply, something the Institute of Medicine is calling for again.

A doctor's quality rating (and pay from Medicare) would have depended partly on the proportion of patients who had advanced directives and how many adhered to them. How voluntary is it if your doctor's pay is affected by whether you stick to your Do Not Resuscitate order. That's what's ahead with this latest proposal.

Already, some seniors who could survive their illness and go home are pushed into refusing medical care. Advocates parrot the statistic that 25 percent of Medicare hospital expenditures are for the last year of life. That's like harping on how often Babe Ruth struck out.

Three-quarters of the time, this care is helping seniors. A major study of 208 California hospitals in the Annals of Internal Medicine proves that spending more on Medicare patients leads to substantially higher survival rates. The money isn't wasted. In the hospitals that spend more, seniors have a better chance of recovering, going home and resuming life.

Despite the hazards of end-of-life counseling, Jeb Bush is on the bandwagon, saying seniors should be forced to fill out an advanced directive to get Medicare. His Republican rivals should make it clear they don't support government interfering in this highly personal decision.

Jury quickly convicts theater shooter of murder; eligible for death penalty

CENTENNIAL, Colo. (AP) — Colorado theater shooter James Holmes was convicted Thursday in the chilling 2012 attack on defenseless moviegoers at a midnight Batman premiere after jurors swiftly rejected defense arguments that the former graduate student was insane and driven to murder by

The 27-year-old Holmes, who had been working toward his Ph.D. in neuroscience, could get the death penalty for the massacre that left 12 people dead and dozens of others

The initial phase of Holmes' trial took 11 weeks, but jurors needed only about 12 hours over a day and a half to find him guilty on all 165 counts.

The same panel must now decide whether Holmes should pay with his life. Starting Wednesday, they will hear what is expected to be a month's worth of testimony over whether Holmes deserves the death penalty.

For almost an hour, Judge Carlos A. Samour Jr. read charge after charge, reciting the name of the victim, the offense and the word "guilty." Dressed in a blue shirt and khakis and flanked by his public defenders, Holmes stood impassively with his hands in his pockets the whole time.

Obama visits Oklahoma federal prison as part of push for fairer criminal justice

EL RENO, Okla. (AP) — Peering from the back seat of his armored black limousine, President Barack Obama rode into a razor wire-surrounded federal prison Thursday and said he met young inmates "who made mistakes that aren't that different than the mistakes I made.

Obama came to the medium-security El Reno Federal Correctional Institution near Oklahoma City to press his case that the nation needs to reconsider the way crime is controlled and prisoners are rehabilitated. The president met with inmates and walked past rows of empty cells secured by large grey doors. Prison officials opened cell no. 123 for Obama and he gazed at its sparse trappings: a double bunk bed and third bed along the wall, a toilet and sink, along with a small bookcase and three lockers.

"Three full-grown men in a 9-by-10 cell," he said. The White House said Obama was the first sitting president to visit a federal prison. The president said there must be a distinction between young people "doing stupid things" and violent criminals. Young people who make mistakes, he said, could be thriving if they had access to resources and support structures "that would allow them to survive those mistakes.'

Greek banks to reopen after cash pledge from lenders, austerity vote in Athens

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Greece on Thursday won vital pledges of support from bailout lenders needed to keep its economy from collapsing, but officials in Athens said the painful austerity measures demanded in return were likely to force an election within months.

Hours after parliament approved the tough new cuts, the government promised to reopen banks on Monday and gradually restore services — helped by higher cash support from the European Central Bank.

The ECB announced it was increasing emergency credit to Greek banks, adding another 900 million euros ($980 million) in support over one week. And eurozone lenders pledged short-term loans so Greece can cover its debts and negotiations for a new three-year bailout worth 85 billion euros ($93 billion).

The news buoyed world markets and came as a relief in Greece, where banks and the stock market have been closed for nearly three weeks.

Officials in Prime Minister Alexis Tsipras' government, however, were still reeling from the contentious post-midnight vote that saw one-in-four lawmakers from Tsipras' leftwing Syriza party vote against the raft of tax increases, pension cuts and other economic reforms.

Hedging bets with Bush and Clinton: Some donors give money to both WASHINGTON (AP) — John Catsimatidis, a Manhattan grocery chain owner, gave as much money as allowed to Hillary Rodham Clinton's Democratic primary campaign. Two months later, he gave the same amount, $2,700, to Jeb Bush, her would-be Republican challenger.

"I've been friends with both of their families for many, many years," he said. "They both love America, and I'd be happy if either of them won."

The billionaire is one of at least 60 donors hedging their bets heading into 2016 by giving to presidential campaigns of both parties, an Associated Press review of federal campaign finance records found. While those contributions totaled only about $300,000, they are an odd wrinkle of presidential politics in a race expected to see 22 candidates vying for billions of dollars in contributions.

Even more people — at least 350 — gave to multiple candidates within the same party, the data show, reflecting a sense of uncertainty among the donor class eying a crowded Republican primary with no clear front-runner but an array of strong candidates, governors, senators and business leaders among them.

The reports Wednesday to the Federal Election Commission represent the first detailed look into how hundreds of thousands of Americans have opened their wallets with the general election still a year and a half away.

Google's 2Q signals new era of austerity with new CFO on board

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — After years of big spending on risky projects that CEO Larry Page proudly hails as "moonshots," Google may be launching into a new orbit of financial discipline.

Investor hopes for a more austere Google are largely tied to the arrival of a new chief financial officer, Ruth Porat. She joined Google in late May, about two-thirds of the way through the Internet company's second quarter. Thursday's release of Google's report covering that period indicates that Porat already may be shaking things up.

Excluding stock compensation expense and several other items, Google earned $6.99 per share — topping the average estimate of $6.70 per share among analysts surveyed by FactSet.

The pleasant surprise ended a streak of six consecutive quarters in which Google's earnings missed the analyst estimates that steer investors' perceptions about publicly held companies. Investors welcomed the change as Google's stock gained $43.90, or 7 percent, to $645.68 in extended trading after the numbers came out.

'It's like, 'Wow, look Ruth is already doing her thing,'" said BGC Financial analyst Colin Gillis.

4 Marines and gunman die in attack on 2 military sites

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — A gunman unleashed a barrage of fire at a recruiting center and another U.S. military site a few miles apart in Chattanooga on Thursday, killing at least four Marines and sending service members scrambling for cover as bullets smashed through the windows. The attacker was also killed.

Federal authorities said they were investigating the possibility it was an act of terrorism, and the FBI took charge of the Authorities identified the gunman as Kuwait-born Muhammad Youssef Abdulazeez, 24, of Hixson, Tennessee, though the spelling of his first name was in dispute, with federal officials and records giving at least four variations.

A U.S. official said there was no indication Abdulazeez was on the radar of federal law enforcement before the shootings. The official was not authorized to discuss the case and spoke on condition of anonymity.

The shootings took place minutes apart, with the gunman stopping his car and spraying dozens of bullets first at a recruiting center for all branches of the military, then apparently driving to a Navy-Marine training center 7 miles away, authorities and witnesses said. The attacks were over within a half-hour.

In addition to the Marines killed, three people were reported wounded, including a sailor who was seriously hurt.

"Lives have been lost from some faithful people who have been serving our country, and I think I join all Tennesseans in being both sickened and saddened by this," Gov. Bill Haslam Authorities would not say how the gunman died. FBI agent Ed Reinhold said Abdulazeez had "numerous weapons" but would not give details.

"We are looking at every possible avenue, whether it was terrorism, whether it's domestic, international, or whether it was a simple criminal act," Reinhold said.

Within hours of the bloodshed, law officers with guns drawn swarmed what was believed to be Abdulazeez's house, and two females were led away in handcuffs.

A dozen law enforcement vehicles, including a bomb-squad truck and an open-sided Army green truck carrying armed men, rolled into the Hixson neighborhood, and police closed off streets and turned away people trying to reach their Abdulazeez graduated from the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga in 2012 with a bachelor's in electrical engineering and was a student intern a few years ago at the Tennessee Valley Authority, the federally owned utility that operates power plants and dams across the South.

The U.S. National Counterterrorism Center is reporting no apparent nexus to terrorism has been uncovered in the investigation, but intelligence officials are monitoring the investigation closely. The Islamic State group has been encouraging extremists to carry out attacks in the U.S., and several such homegrown acts or plots have unfolded in recent months.

The names of the dead were not immediately released. In addition to the wounded sailor, a Marine was hit in the leg but not seriously hurt, and a police officer was shot in the ankle, authorities said.

In Washington, President Barack Obama pledged a prompt and thorough investigation and said the White House had been in touch with the Pentagon to make sure military installations are being vigilant.

HOROSCOPE

By HOLIDAY MATHIS 7/17/15 Mercury and Mars Conjunction

Under this powerful conjunction of Mercury and Mars, time stretches out before us like a lazy bear, just daring us to interrupt its idleness. You may want to nudge and prod and push, but there will be repercussions for doing so. The best trainers, when faced with forces far more powerful than they are, know to be aware, observant and respectful.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). The part of your life that is ailing will be healed by a routine, methodical approach. Take it slow and steady and commit to doing it daily over a long period of time — at least a

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). As St. Francis of Assisi suggested, baby steps will lead to greatness. "Start by doing what's necessary; then do what's possible; and suddenly you are doing the impossi-

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). What if you could listen so hard to another person that you could express that person better than he or she could? Those who listen well are liked. Those who listen masterfully are revered.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). There are times when distraction can be a great help. People who are experiencing something painful or frightening will glide through more easily with the help of a distraction. You'll mercifully provide such a distraction today.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Psychic clearing is real. It can be felt, and it can make for an easier, lighter, healthier experience. Today's best method for psychic clearing is simply to get what's in your heart out in

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Rinse and repeat isn't just for shampoo. Excellence may come in the form of a glorious action, but it is actually the result of habits. Practice daily. Don't wait for the inspiration;

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Maybe you can have it all, but you can't have it all at once. The key to feeling like you've had a successful day is in picking one thing to work on and working on it until it's finished.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Even the most capable people require assistance sometimes. The more responsibilities a person has the more help he or she needs. You may be the only one who notices this, so don't hesitate to lend a hand.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). The philosopher Nietzsche suggested that we are all in a flight from ourselves. Though this may be true, today's journey will bring you

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). The thing you felt entrapped by will magically disappear. Sweet freedom! Keep running and don't look back. If you create enough momentum, this newfound independ-

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You'll probably have to make your own fun, but the extra effort will prove worthwhile. Your ebullient personality will attract new friends, interesting offers and perhaps a romantic hopeful

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Set aside your pride. Giving yourself a wide margin for error (especially in regard to bank accounts. projects and deadlines) will make life better and work enjoyable.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (July 17). You've been a fan for a long time. With great purpose, you enter this solar year ready to be the star. The next 10 weeks are financially lucky once you lay down some rules. September is your chance to change a piece of history. The ones you've taught will make you proud in December. Sagittarius and Aquarius people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 50, 3, 22, 14 and 16 WEEKEND LOVE FORECAST: ARIES: You don't have to be a charmed conversationalist if you are a charmed listener. TAURUS: Your casual hints and stolen glances will be as obvious as a billboard. GEMINI: The melding of imagination with good taste brings success to your love life. CANCER: Is it possible to overuse the word "love"? Not this weekend! LEO: The better you can empathize with others the more attractive you'll be. VIRGO: You need people. Admit it, pursue it, and you'll be happy this weekend. LIBRA: You are turned off by anyone who seems to need and demand more than the usual amount of attention. SCORPIO: People care about you more when they believe that you care about them more. SAGITTARIUS: Because you appreciate and respect yourself, you gravitate toward the type of people who naturally provide a wonderful opportunity to be you. CAPRICORN: When you discuss your feelings and reactions to life, people relate to you and open up to you. AQUARIUS: You take responsibility for your own enjoyment, expecting others to do very little to entertain you — so attractive. PISCES: You'd rather be with someone who can't do as told than be with someone who can't do anything other than what's told.

Traveling in time

Heloise

Dear Heloise: When I go on a long plane trip, I set my watch to the TIME of my destination as soon as I get on the plane. This helps me figure out when to "nap" before arriving at my destination. It helps me adjust to the time change a little more easily. — J. Doogan in Boston

I've done the same for many years of travel, especially when changing several time zones. If I'm going to be there only one day, I stay on my home time zone. If longer, I try to adjust to the local time when I arrive. If it's dinnertime there, I eat dinner, even though it may only be midday "my" time. Soft landings, as we say in ballooning! -Heloise

SEND A GREAT HINT TO:

Heloise P.O. Box 795000 San Antonio, TX 78279-5000 Fax: 1-210-HELOISE Email: Heloise@Heloise.com

SALT AND PEPPER, PLEASE

Dear Heloise: I have trouble with the tiny holes in my salt and pepper shakers. I can never get them clean, and it makes it hard to get the seasoning out. How can I clean them? — Natalie P., Portland,

This can be a little bit of a bother and does tend to happen, especially if you live in a high-humidity area. The salt seems to turn into glue and really does stop up the holes. I use a toothpick to punch through the hole, then let the shakers soak in hot water to dissolve the rest. The standby hint is to put some instant or regular rice (or a saltine cracker, if the shaker is big enough) inside the shaker to help absorb the moisture. Heloise

CLEANING AN IRON

Dear Heloise: Can you suggest how to clean an iron's plate? I have tried to clean it with dishwashing liquid and a scrubber with the iron heated, and it does not work. It is a relatively new iron, so I would rather not purchase another one. — Susan, via email

Susan, don't run out and buy a new iron! Don't try to clean the soleplate while the iron is on and hot. That will only cause the dish soap to "cook" on, as you probably found out. If it's really cruddy, go ahead and buy a tub of commercial iron cleaner. Buy the smallest size you can find, because it does not take much to clean the iron. Or run the hot iron over a damp cloth several times. Over time, especially if you iron synthetic material or use the iron at too hot a setting, it will actually 'burn" off some of the fibers. These burnt fibers then stick to the iron and really do build up. Good luck. — Heloise

WALKING CLUB

Dear Heloise: My mother started going for long walks, but she doesn't have a walking stick. What she uses is of my dad's old golf clubs that he no longer uses. She holds it by the head of the club and uses it like a cane. Now she has something to steady herself (and for protection, if needed). — Bonnie B., via

Keep engagemnent secret a while longer

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating my boyfriend, "Derek," for four years. After a night of emotion-filled discussion, he asked me to marry him. I said yes, but it has always been a difficult idea for me to wrap my head around. I'm turning 21 and although that may be old enough for some people to get married and have kids, it scares the heck out of me.

I love Derek and I want to marry him one day. He ured me we could stay lengaged for a few years, but it still makes me uneasy. We don't have a ring yet, and we agreed we wouldn't tell our families until we get one. It doesn't feel real because there's no ring and no one knows — could that be why I'm so nervous?

I need a second opinion and some advice on whether to wait to tell anyone or tell people now. -

DEAR COLD FEET: An engagement with no ring and no announcement hardly seems like an engagement at all. That's why you and Derek should rethink making any announcements until you BOTH feel ready to take such a big step. When the time is right, the idea of marriage and children will make you feel Frankly, I think your fears may be well founded because you have had little life experience — and once the ball starts rolling, stopping it may be complicated. That's why you and Derek should remain in a holding pattern until you are more confident about what you want to do.

DEAR ABBY: Although I am not considered bad looking, I'm not extremely beautiful either. Guys find my friends prettier than me.

For a few years I have been thinking about getting a nose job. My parents say I need to wait for all my facial features to adjust to my growing body to prevent facial disfigurement in the future. I think that's just an excuse. When is the right age to get a nose job? — ALA-BAMA TEEN

DEAR TEEN: This is a question that should be answered by your personal physician. You didn't state your age, but I don't think your parents are stalling. According to WebMD, it is very important that before a young person has a nose job the facial bones have reached "adult size." The usual age for girls' noses to mature is 15 or 16. (Interestingly, for boys it is a year

DEAR ABBY: My father had a son with a woman while he was dating my mother. Mom made Dad choose between her and his son. He chose Mom, and has had no contact with the boy.

Dad doesn't want to interfere with his now-grown son's life. I, on the other hand, would love to reach out and meet my half-brother. Would it be overstepping boundaries if I do this? — SOMEONE'S SIBLING IN MICHIGAN

DEAR SOMEONE'S SIBLING: I'd be curious to know how you became aware of your half-brother's existence, because I'll bet the topic wasn't discussed in your home. While I might have no objection to you reaching out to your half-sibling - because I am not emotionally involved — your mother will feel betrayed and angry. If you decide to move forward, be prepared.

Find specialist for trochanteric bursitis

DEAR DR. ROACH: I am a 78year old woman with longstanding trochanteric bursitis. I am always offered cortisone injections, and most of them have not worked. When they did, they were short-lasting. This bursitis can be severe. In the beginning I was given high doses of anti-inflammatories, but these gave me ulcers, so I can never take them again. I do everything I know to keep the pain at bay. I am wondering if you know of any new remedies for my condition. I am unable to find a physician who specializes in this type of bursitis. I am just told that it falls under the scope of orthopedics, so the physicians I have seen know only about the above remedies to

What is your opinion of surgically removing the bursa, as one physician suggested? - B.C.

ANSWER: Trochanteric bursitis is inflammation of the bursa (I think of these as "oil patches" under the skin - small, lubricating sacs that help tissues move smoothly over each other) that is directly over the "point" of the hip - the greater trochanter. This inflammation causes a sharp pain and tenderness in the region of the outer thigh.

Steroid injections usually are effective. When they are not, I worry that the diagnosis is incorrect. Several conditions can masquerade as trochanteric bursitis, including a gluteus medius tendon tear, stress fracture or hidden fracture of the hip. Many conditions that cause the bursitis to begin with, including lower-spine arthritis, discrepancy in the length of the two legs and inflammation of the sacro-iliac joint all can cause the bursitis to come back after treatment if they aren't properly treated.

Another issue that can keep the injection from working is not taking proper care of the hip after the injection, and I worry that you might not have gotten careful instructions. Rest after the injection helps keep the medication where it belongs; excess activity forces the medicine out, and occasionally bed rest is necessary for up to three days for severe cases. Ice also can relieve inflammation, so I recommend using it for 15 minutes every few hours in the few days after the injection.

Orthopedic surgeons often have areas of subspecialization, and I would seek out the most experienced orthopedic surgeon who specializes in the hip that you can find. Surgical removal of the bursa is rarely done (I've never seen it), but even if it is, the bursa can reform

DEAR DR. ROACH: Regarding the recent column on a man with bladder stones after treatment for prostate cancer, bladder stones have their own pathophysiology and are unrelated to stones coming down from the kidney. The No. 1 reason for bladder stones is incomplete bladder emptying. The stasis of urine leads to infection, and the stones most often are phosphate. The patient had lots of reasons to empty incompletely and have urine infection. Radiation therapy, be it seeds or external beam, strips the protective lining of the bladder and promotes urine infection. Though the prostate cancer was treated, he still can have bladder outlet problems, with strictures from the radiation impeding emptying. The gland itself can still be obstructive.

His bladder stones are going to persist as long as the fundamental problem exists. His urologist is not helping him. He needs another urologist to get the underlying problem taken care of. - Dr. George Steinhardt

ANSWER: Thank you for the helpful information. A surgeon often has a perspective that I, as an internist, lack.

Fixated on wife's affair from long ago

Annie's Mailbox

Dear Annie: My wife and I have been married for 40 years. When we were first dating, my future wife unexpectedly set me aside to explore the possibilities of seeing another man. It was a difficult time for me. The other man was a mutual acquaintance, for whom I didn't much care, which intensified my hurt.

Within two months, they stopped seeing one another, and in due time, we started dating again, fell in love and married. Sounds good and it has been. But I have one mental demon with which I struggle.

About three decades ago, when casually chatting about our previous romantic interests, my wife revealed that when seeing the aforementioned man, they had sex. Since being made aware of it, I can't let it go. All of those painful memories were revived by her disclosure.

My wife has been a wonderful friend, partner and parent and does not deserve my periodic fixation on something that was a tiny moment in time. Why can't I, as she requests, just forget about it? How can I reconcile myself to it and downsize its larger-than-life status in my consciousness? — Living in the

Dear Living: It is not unusual to remember something disturbing and periodically think about it. But if you are doing this more than a few times a year and becoming fixated on it to the point where it is affecting other areas of your life, you might need professional help to put it aside. You've been holding in your resentment, jealousy and fears for 40 years and they are still eating at you. Please talk to a counselor so you can air your feelings to someone other than your wife and get help managing them. Your doctor can

Pirates surge into second half strong

By WILL GRAVES AP Sports Writer

PITTSBURGH — Jordy

Mercer and Pedro Alvarez were on the way to their lockers to savor another improbable comeback late Sunday night when the Pittsburgh Pirates teammates stopped in unison in front of one of the halfdozen large-screen televisions in the clubhouse.

They stood, grins glued in place, to relive Gregory Polanco's walkoff single that lifted the Pirates to a 6-5, 10-inning win over St. Louis, a victory that brought Pittsburgh to within just 2 1/2 games of the once seemingly uncatchable Cardinals. After seeing Polanco's soft liner to right fall in front of Jason Heyward to score Jung Ho Kang and give the Pirates their second straight extra-inning win over their rival in as many nights, they laughed while watching the team pour out of the dugout in celebration

"If people didn't think we're for real, they probably do now," Mercer said. "I just think it's the culture we're trying to create here. We're slowly getting there. Sure we've got ways to go. We know we're heading in the right direction.' Quickly.

A distant speck in St. Louis' rearview mirror less than three weeks ago, Pittsburgh begins the second half of the season on Friday in Milwaukee looking to carry the momentum from an early summer surge that has them in firm position for a third straight playoff berth.

The giddiness that sprouted from taking three straight from the Cardinals heading into the All-Star break plays in stark contrast to the quiet and puzzled clubhouse of early May, when star centerfielder Andrew McCutchen called himself out for being

"under mediocre" and manager Clint Hurdle publicly challenged his players after the Pirates slogged through the opening quarter of the season four games under .500. Pittsburgh is an MLB-best 35-13 since.

"If we play with the mindset that if we play our best baseball, we can get what we want to get done done, we can go where we want to go," Hurdle said. "There's a lot of baseball to be played and the season is going to bring you a lot of different things. We've got to stay focused on the game we're playing that day."

The novelty of winning has worn off in Pittsburgh after two decades of misery. Hurdle likes to say he is "easy to please but hard to satisfy." He would rather replace the high-wire act that comes with making the postseason as a wild card — which the Pirates have done each of the last two Octobers - with an NL Central title and that assurance of a spot in the division series. So would his team.

"We're in a good place right now," pitcher Francisco Liriano said. "We're playing good baseball.

We've been playing good baseball all year. We continue to play the way we're playing, we'll be OK in the end." The Pirates have been blessed with dominant starting pitching and a remarkably good health. While third baseman Josh Harrison is out until at least the end of August after undergoing surgery on his left thumb, his loss has been offset a bit by the rapid maturation of Kang, a rookie who is the first position player to make a di-

NEW YORK — Clayton Kershaw looks around the major leagues and sees opponents convinced they can reach the playoffs.

"It's just a matter of everybody beating up on everybody," the Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher said. "We want everybody to feel like they're in it."

It's the year of parity in the major leagues, when almost no one has managed to break away from the pack or fall way behind. Kershaw, a three-time Cv Young Award winner and the reigning NL MVP, has a won-lost record reflecting the parity - he's 6-6.

Every team in the American League reached the All-Star break with a .450 winning percentage or higher. It's the first time an entire league did that since 1944, according to STATS, and many rosters that season were depleted of stars because of World War II.

"It's fantastic to see," Pittsburgh pitcher Gerrit Cole said. "All the teams at .500 all think they're going to finish over .500, and all the teams that are over .500, and even us, we're always fretting, looking behind our back."

Boston headed to the All-Star break in last place yet just 6 1/2 games from first – only the second time since division play began in 1969 the AL East spread was that close. The first-tolast gap has been that narrow in any division just nine times overall in the expansion era, STATS said.

'We're at the bottom of the barrel right now, but rect jump from the Korean Baseball Organization to we're not that far out," Red Sox All-Star Brock Holt said. "It's just about going out and taking care of our business, and the standings themselves towards the end of the year.

Oakland has the worst record in the AL but at 41-50 is just 8 1/2 games behind the West-leading Los Angeles Angels. While last in the AL Central, the Chicago White Sox are 41-45 and only 5 1/2 games out for the AL's second wild card.

"We have an unbelievable level of competitive balance," new baseball Commissioner Rob Manfred said. "When I look at the standings, I think we're in for one heck of a ride in the second half of the season."

There is a little more spread in the NL, where the St. Louis Cardinals have the major leagues' best record at 56-33 and Philadelphia owns the worst at 29-62. Other than the Phillies, Miami and Milwaukee, every team is within single-digit games back of a playoff berth.

"It just shows that there's not really that a monopoly of a franchise right now, Baltimore closer Zach Britton said.

Kansas City was 48-46 at the All-Star break last year, 6 1/2 games behind AL Central-leading Detroit and 2 1/2 back of Seattle for the league's second wild card. By October, the Royals were one win shy of their first World Series title since Royals manager Ned Yost said the bunching gave his AL players extra incentive in the All-Star Game.

"Everybody in that locker room is going to have a chance to continue to move forward and be playoff bound." he said before the AL's 6-3 victory.

Toronto, Seattle and the Marlins are the only teams that have not made the playoffs since 2005. In-

Tyson visits Rousey, sees shadow ot selt

GLENDALE, Calif. -Moments after Mike Tyson stepped into the Glendale Fighting Club, Ronda Rousey grabbed her judo coach and abruptly flung him onto the canvas with an enormous bang.

This training violence unsettled Iron Mike, whose eyes widened in awe while Rousey repeatedly hiptossed Justin Flores with the same brute skill. The former heavyweight champion finally spoke up.

"It just doesn't look fun no more," Tyson said with a smile.

"It's fun for me," Rousey replied from the cage. "I don't know about him."

Tyson once dominated boxing in much the same way Rousey dominates mixed martial arts, overwhelming every opponent in their paths with a mixture of pre-fight intimidation, hard-earned skill and unstoppable force.

Dana White realizes the comparison is inexact, but the UFC president believes no other athletes in the socalled combat sports have separated themselves from their competition more than Tyson and Rousey over the past 30 years.

"These are two of the greatest to ever walk the planet in their sports," White said. "Not many people in the world can relate to that."

Although the 49-year-old Tyson is years removed from any interest in competition, he saw shades of himself in the UFC's most authoritative champion when he dropped in to meet the appreciative Rousey this week. Tyson has watched Rousey's fights cageside for years, but hadn't seen her training work up close. "Ronda, she's a lady. Polite, kind, sweet and adorable," Tyson said. "But her whole barometer is, she's a killer. She has that killer aura, meaning anything is capable of happening. Whoa! That's exciting before the fight even starts. I think of myself when I watch her.'

Rousey (11-0) is the only women's bantamweight champion in the UFC's history, and the two-time U.S. Olympic judoka has dominated her new sport. She is heavily favored to win her next bout against Bethe Correia at UFC 190 in Rio de Janeiro on Aug. 1, but that hasn't stopped it from becoming one of the most attractive pay-per-view fights of the year, according to White.

Rousey, who has stopped 10 of her 11 opponents in the first round, has been a big fan of Tyson for years. After the fighters chatted for several minutes, she even left her training session wearing an Iron Mike

Jang takes lead after first day of Marathon Classic

SYLVANIA (AP) -South Korea's Ha Na Jang birdied the par-5 18th for a 5-under 66 and a onestroke lead Thursday after the first round of the LPGA Tour's Marathon Classic.

She chipped to 6 feet to set up the final birdie after hitting a 3-wood approach to the front edge.

"Just really good shot," Jang said about the chip with a 52-degree wedge.

"I feel happy today because in the morning ... I was very tired in my bed, so no practice today. I don't think about the score, so really good play today."

Winless in 23 career tour events, Jang birdied four of the first five holes on the back nine at Highland Meadows, dropped a stroke on the par-4 15th and rallied with the closing birdie.

"I like the course," Jang said. "Very narrow fairways and small greens. Very close to Korean golf course, so I think it's very easy for my feel. ... Really good golf course.

She took a simple approach on the course softened by a rainy month.

"Just always thinking about fairway and greens," Jang said. "Very easy thinking.

Sarah Kemp, Nannette Hill, Wei-Ling Hsu and Lee-Anne Pace were tied for second.

Kemp bogeyed her final hole, the par-4 ninth. The Australian has missed the cuts in seven of the 12 tournaments this season.

"My caddie and I were actually talking before I teed off that I had not had a 4 or 5 under in a while,' Kemp said. "That was the plan today, so it was nice to pull it off. It's confidence. Î've had an inconsistent year, some good and some bad. Hopefully, for the rest of the three days I can keep Kemp's approach on No. 9 landed in the rough to the left of the green. She hit to the fringe, but came back with a chip that hit the flagstick and she was able to make her putt for bogey.

Spieth opens with good round, familiar foe at British Open

By DOUG FERGUSON AP Golf Writer

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland — Jordan Spieth played like he had a Grand Slam to win. Dustin Johnson played like he had a score to settle.

The two main characters from Chambers Bay brought their games across eight time zones and an ocean Thursday and set the tone at St. Andrews for what could be another riveting battle at the British Spieth quickly seized on his opportunity for a third straight major with six birdies in his first 11 holes, fought through a chilly wind on the inward nine and closed with a birdie for a 5-under 67 that put him two shots out of the lead.

Johnson, whose threeputt from 12 feet on the final hole cost him a shot at the U.S. Open, looked as daunting as ever. He simply overpowered the Old Course with such force that he hit wedge into 10 of the par 4s and had an eagle putt on another. With a pair of big par saves on the tough closing holes, he played bogey-free for a 65 and for at least a day made good on a warning he made earlier in the week.

Asked about Spieth's chances to sweep the four majors, Johnson said, Well, I'm playing the next two so we'll have to see."

This was hardly a twoman show.

The six players who were one shot behind at 66 included former British Open champion Paul Lawrie and two-time U.S. Open champion Retief Goosen. Jason Day, com-

Johnson was pin-high with a 3-wood in the morning. Mickelson made only one bogey on the back nine and shot 70. He called the conditions "fun," though his smile might not last if the morning group doesn't face the same conditions.

"We were at a significant disadvantage today," Mickelson said. "And hopefully, if we're able to play an entire day tomorrow, it will even itself out.'

The first 26 groups had an average score of 71.46. The last 26 groups averaged 72.62.

Rickie Fowler, coming off a victory in the Scottish Open, said the final seven holes was "hanging on for dear life." He made two bogeys, one eagle and 15 pars for a 72.

The forecast was for rain early Friday and wind calming as it clears, followed by stronger gusts in the afternoon. Saturday could have gusts approaching 40 mph.

Any duel between Spieth and Johnson is void of animosity. They played in the same group, and during one long wait on the 17th tee, they laughed and chatted as if this were an opening round at a regular PGA Tour event.

"No chat about the U.S. Open at all, as I wouldn't imagine there would be, other than talking about the differences in the course," Spieth said. "But I enjoy playing with Dustin. I've played a lot of golf with

"I'm going to hit driver on every hole if I can," Johnson said.

Spieth already has shown at the Masters and U.S. Open that power isn't everything. And while he laid back on several holes - Johnson's tee shots were on average 36 yards longer Spieth can score.

He birdied four of the first six holes with putts inside 12 feet and took a share of the lead with a 10foot putt on the par-3 11th. His lone mistake came in bunkers — a pot bunker in the 13th fairway he had to play out sideways, and the Road Hole bunker on the 17th. He blasted out to 6 feet and missed.

"I've played enough golf with him to where I believe in my skill set, that I can still trump that crazy ability that he has," Spieth said. "I expect when he stands on the tee it's going to up there miles and down the fairway. I also expect that I can birdie each hole when I stand on the tee it just happens to be a different route."

Not many can appreciate the route Spieth is taking. Only five other players since 1934 have won the first two majors of the year. Only Ben Hogan has won the Masters, U.S. Open and British Open in the same year. No one has won all

Ex-airlfriend of Kurt Busch resigns from military charity DOVER, Del. (AP) — NASCAR driver

Kurt Busch's ex-girlfriend has resigned from the military charity that she headed amid an investigation of her finances

A spokesman for the Armed Forces Foundation said Thursday that Patricia Driscoll tendered her resignation Tuesday night after 12 years as president.

The foundation posted a statement on its website thanking Driscoll for her work but not explaining the reason for her resignation. The site also includes a statement from Driscoll, who said she was proud of what the group achieved under her tenure but also offered no explanation

Driscoll, who accused Busch of assault ing her last year at Dover International Speedway, hung up on a reporter when contacted by telephone Thursday. She did not respond to a later email seeking an interview.

Dan Hill, an outside spokesman for the foundation, said the charity is conducting an internal investigation into published reports alleging that Driscoll used foundation funds for her personal expenses

"We take it seriously, and the foundation is committed to its mission," he said. Hill said the investigation is being led by the Washington, D.C., law firm of Wiley Rein and will examine the foundation's policies and practices, finances, audits, and filings. "It's going to be exhaustive," said Hill. who did not know when the investigation would be completed.

In a year-end financial statement for 2013, the tax-exempt nonprofit listed revenues and expenses of more than $14 million, including almost $12.5 million in "volunteer" and "in-kind" expenses

The foundation says its mission is to promote the morale and welfare of active duty, reserve and retired military personnel and their families. It is a fixture on the NASCAR racing circuit, and Busch formerly served as a "celebrity ambassador" for the group.

After Driscoll accused Busch of assaulting her following their breakup, a Delaware Family Court commissioner granted her request for a protective order requiring Busch to stay away from her, but law enforcement officials said there was not enough evidence to bring criminal charges against Bus

Auburn was declared the favorite to win the overall title Thursday, but rival Alabama got the edge in the West. It's the first time that's happened.
