Officials to talk about tax hike for roads

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

City council's Committee of the Whole plans to talk about an income tax increase for road work during a meeting set for 6 p.m. today, according to the meeting announcement.

Council President K. Bret Apple listed discussion of an income tax increase as one of the two topics for the committee meeting, with the other being the donation of the former Butler museum building to the city.

The city income tax has remained at the 1 percent level since 1968, with attempts to add a .5 percent income tax failing in 2009 and 2010.

SALEM

Councilman Dave Nestic, chairman of the Committee of the Whole, said Councilman Jeff Cushman asked to have the topic added to the agenda, with the idea to raise funds for infrastructure and capital improvements.

Council members have had discussions recently about the need to work on infrastructure, especially after city Service/Safety Director Ken Kenst announced the street paving program may be put on hold pending a final resolution to the costs associated with the recent demolitions downtown.

Nestic acknowledged a need to work on infrastructure and that it's early in the process of discussion on how to do that. The reason he said he opposed the previous income tax increase proposals was because they had not gone through the city finances or put together a plan.

He said there needs to be a planning process and all that discussion needs to come out regarding whether they're prepared to ask taxpayers for more money, what's the right way to ask, should it be a property tax or income tax and how will the money be used. If it's for streets, what streets? Why those streets?

The other topic, acceptance of the gift of the building and property at 315 E. State St. from the Salem Art Institute, has been on two other meeting agendas but hasn't been discussed at length.

The donation first came up during a Finance Committee meeting, with the committee passing the proposal on to council after no discussion. During the last council meeting, the ordinance had a first reading. There was no discussion, but there was an understanding that discussion would take place during a Committee of the Whole meeting.

Pipeline builder sues landowners for survey access

By DEANNE JOHNSON
Staff Writer

LISBON — A company attempting to build a 250-mile gas interstate pipeline through this county has filed a civil lawsuit in Columbiana County Common Pleas Court to attempt to get an injunction to gain access to survey two local properties.

Nexus Gas Transmissions LLC, a company based in Houston, Texas, claims its representatives have been in contact with the property owners named in the lawsuit — Donald and Patricia Haubert, whose address in the lawsuit is listed as Parks Road, Louisville, and with Larry Eldon and Patricia May Rosenberger, Knox School Road, Minerva.

According to the lawsuit, a representative asked the Hauberts on Aug. 30, 2014 for access to their three tracts of property in West Township — one on state Route 172 and two on Knox School Road — and they initially authorized it. However, on Sept. 14, 2014, Donald Haubert reportedly notified the company he was withdrawing his authorization.

He again refused the representatives access on Sept. 25, 2014 and Patricia Haubert refused them access on Nov. 3, directing them instead to speak to her son. On Nov. 14, 2014, a Nexus representative spoke to Doug Haubert and he refused them access.

Then on May 22, 2015, the Hauberts reportedly authorized access after meeting with a Nexus representative in their home. However, later that day Doug Haubert denied them access.

Similarly, the company reportedly contacted Larry Eldon and Patricia Rosenberger on Aug. 25, 2014; Sept. 24, 2014 and May 21, 2015, each time being denied access to survey their three tracts of property — two on Knox School Road in West Township and one on Bayard Road in Knox Township.

The lawsuit claims the pipeline will be an interstate system to transport natural gas from the Marcellus and Utica shale plays in this area to existing infrastructure in Michigan and Ontario, Canada. The project is scheduled to be completed and operating on Nov. 1, 2017. In the end the product will serve customers in Ohio, Michigan, Chicago and Ontario.

The 36-inch diameter mainline pipeline will run across portions of 11 counties in Ohio and three counties in Michigan, affecting 3,479 tracts of property. Of the those properties affected in Columbiana County, the lawsuit claims only the owners of the properties in the lawsuit have declined to allow the company to survey.

The survey would reportedly be conducted during daylight hours and compensation is available should the property or crops be damaged. The survey would include the placement of wooden stakes; an environmental study of any wetlands and threatened or endangered species; a check of any possible archaeological resources in the area; and sometimes a geological test of rocks in the area.

The company is seeking an injunction allowing them to pursue surveying activities on these properties and a declaration giving them the right to do so.

Ohio House speaker: Increase on shale tax on hold for now

By TOM GIAMBRONI
Staff Writer

LISBON — Any plans to raise the state tax on shale gas production and earmarking some of the proceeds for counties impacted by the drilling boom appear to be on hold, at least for now.

That was the message delivered by someone who should know — Ohio House Speaker Cliff Rosenberger — who was among state legislators attending a forum held Monday and hosted by state Rep. Tim Ginter.

"No, I don't think so," Rosenberger responded, when asked afterwards if he expects the House to take up the severance tax issue as part of negotiations on a new state budget with the Senate and Kasich administration.

Last month, the House passed its own version of the next two-year state budget, and it excluded any increase in Ohio's severance tax on oil and gas production, something favored by Gov. John Kasich. The House passed a bill last year increasing the production tax and earmarking a portion for impacted counties, but it died in the Senate.

Rosenberger said any revision in the production tax should be part of a comprehensive review of Ohio's tax structure that is under way and expected to result in recommendations by 2018.

"We're not against it. We just think we've got to take a longer-term look at how all of these aspects play out," he said.

Opponents are concerned that any increase in the production tax could serve as disincentive for future oil and gas development. Rosenberger pointed out that North Dakota is reducing its production tax, and it has far higher shale gas reserves than Ohio.

He also said any increase in the production gas tax should also take into account the recommendations of a special committee formed to look at the state's transportation needs and the taxes used to fund it.

Fire at former chemical plant probed

By KATIE WHITE
Staff Writer

NEGLEY — The Negley fire department and county sheriff's office are investigating a fire at a former chemical company just off state Route 154.

The Negley, New Waterford and East Palestine departments were notified of the fire shortly before 4 p.m. Monday, but the Negley fire department was the only one to remain on the scene.

Negley fire Lt. Rudy Sacchet said the small fire on the first floor at the west end of the concrete building was easily put out.

Sacchet said he did not know who currently owns the building that formerly operated as the Lakewood Chemical and Supply Co. and is known to have been affiliated with the nearby LaBate Farm at one point in time.

An address listed online for Lakewood Chemical Co. was 1252 Negley-Darlington Road.

Sacchet said the fire was a chemical fire, but when asked what kind of chemicals were involved, indicated he didn't know.

Around 5 p.m. he said a representative from Exochem in East Palestine was on their way to the scene to talk to him, but he did not disclose why they were called or what information they would be providing.

The New Waterford and East Palestine departments were already back at their stations, with only two Negley fire trucks still at the property during that time.

Sacchet said no one was inside the building when they arrived, and a dispatcher could be heard advising him over his radio of the location of about four or five teenagers, who could be seen walking along state Route 154 not far from the property.

When asked, he declined to confirm or deny whether the fire was a case of vandalism, since the building has been vacant for some time.

If so, it would not be the first time the building was targeted by vandals.

According to previous reports, a Pennsylvania woman was sentenced to one year in prison in 2012 after she and two men were found guilty of breaking into the building in 2006. One of the men was given intervention in lieu of conviction while the other was placed on five years probation.

The trio damaged the building and took copper wiring.

Boat with more than 450 people aboard sinks in China's Yangtze; rescue underway

BEIJING (AP) — A yacht carrying more than 450 people sank overnight in the Yangtze River during a cyclone in southern China, and eight people have been rescued, the state broadcaster CCTV reported Tuesday.

Further rescue work was underway but strong winds and rain were hampering the search, CCTV said. The boat was traveling from Nanjing to the southwestern city of Chongqing when it sank at about 9:28 p.m. Monday in Hubei province, the report said.

The official Xinhua News Agency quoted the captain and chief engineer, who were both rescued, as saying the ship sank quickly after being caught in a cyclone.

CCTV said the boat was carrying 406 Chinese passengers, five travel agency employees and 47 crew members.

The Eastern Star yacht measured 251 feet long (76.5 meters) and 36 feet wide (11 meters) and was capable of carrying a maximum of 534 people, CCTV reported. It is owned by the Chongqing Eastern Shipping Corp., which focuses on tourism routes in the popular Three Gorges river canyon region.

NSA impasse: Unlikely phone records collection resumes, however final vote comes out

WASHINGTON (AP) — However Congress resolves its impasse over government surveillance, this much is clear: The National Security Agency will ultimately be out of the business of collecting and storing Americans' calling records.

Aiming for passage Tuesday afternoon, the Senate on Monday prepared to make modest changes to a House bill that would end the collection while preserving other surveillance authorities. But while Congress debated, the law authorizing the collection expired at midnight Sunday.

The NSA had stopped gathering the records from phone companies hours before the deadline. And other post-9/11 surveillance provisions considered more effective than the phone-call collection program also lapsed, leading intelligence officials to warn of critical gaps.

The legislation now before the Senate, known as the USA Freedom Act, would reauthorize the surveillance but would phase out NSA phone records collection over time. It passed the House overwhelmingly and is backed by President Barack Obama. Sen. Rand Paul, who doesn't believe it goes far enough in restricting the government, objected anew on Monday, but he can't stop a vote to end debate scheduled for Tuesday morning.

If the bill becomes law over the next few days, the NSA will resume gathering the phone records but only for a transition period of six months, in the House version, or a year in the Senate version.

IS revamps recruitment machine, using polished video, public-radio-style broadcasts

PARIS (AP) — The announcer with an American accent offers an upbeat roundup of the day's main headlines: Islamic State fighters seized control of a crucial Syrian city, extremists repelled Kurdish fighters despite coalition airstrikes, and two suicide bombers successfully carried out their missions.

The tone is National Public Radio in the United States. But this is Al-Bayan, the Islamic State radio targeting European recruits by touting recent triumphs in the campaign to carve out a Caliphate, and it represents a major headache for Western powers trying to curtail the IS influence.

All news is good news for Al-Bayan's "soldiers of the Caliphate." In this narrative, the enemy always flees in disgrace or is killed. The broadcasts end with a swell of music and a gentle English message: "We thank our listeners for tuning in."

The tension between the smooth, West-style production and the extremist content shows how far the hardcore Islamic propaganda machine has come since 2012, when an aging Frenchman posed in front of a black-and-white jihadi flag and threatened France in the name of al-Qaida in the Islamic Maghreb.

The footage was grainy, with minimal production values, and released on a relatively obscure regional website. By contrast, Al-Bayan reaches thousands of listeners every day via links shared on social networks, helping to swell the ranks of Westerners — projected this year to reach a total of up to 10,000 — fighting for the Islamic State group in Syria and Iraq.

In the time it took to bring the Frenchman Gilles Le Guen to trial, his European successors in violent jihad have overturned the recruitment script in ways that might impress a New York PR agency.

DEATHS

Helen Bezon

SANDPOINT, Idaho — Helen Bezon, our dear Mother, peacefully entered into Heaven on the morning of May 27, 2015, at Valley VistaCare Center in Sandpoint, Idaho, at the age of 102.

Helen was born in Alliance on Nov. 12, 1912, to William Burns and Clara Buckel Burns. She graduated from Alliance High School in 1931. When she was 12 years old she met Frank (Puggy) Bezon at Stanley Pool. They married in Alliance on April 15, 1939, in St. Joseph Catholic Church and raised five children in that parish and Regina Coeli. She has resided with her daughter, Connie (Larry) in Lake Oswego, Oregon, and Sandpoint, Idaho, for over 20 years.

She enjoyed many summers in Sandpoint, swimming in the lake there until she was 99 years old. She loved traveling, especially her many trips to Hawaii with Connie and Larry, as well as visiting her children in different states. Helen lived life to the fullest. She loved her long walks, any swimming hole, McDonald's coffee and hot fudge sundaes. She played cards, did crossword puzzles and read her newspaper and books into her 90s when her eyesight dimmed. After that she listened to music more and taught herself the harmonica. Her favorite dance was the polka. She loved birthdays and enjoyed the casinos and the slots. In 2012 the family gathered in Sandpoint to joyously celebrate her 100th birthday.

Helen loved being a mother and a grandmother and had a special place in her heart for all children. She taught all her grandchildren to swim, dive, play poker and make homemade play dough before they were 6. They all have such special memories of her. She was blessed with 11 grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren.

Helen was preceded in death by her parents; and brothers, Billy and Wilbur. Frank, her dear husband of 55 years, died in 1994.

She leaves her children, Ronnie Bezon of Memphis, Tenn., Bonnie Dezzutto (John) of Fort Walton Beach, Fla., Bob Bezon (Janet) of Salem, Ohio, Mary Lou Banks (Cliff) of Spirit Lake, Idaho, and Connie Bedra (Larry) of Lake Oswego, Ore., and Sandpoint, Idaho.

Our Mother had great faith; she prayed her rosary daily and read the Bible for as long as she could see. She had a smile on her face and a twinkle in her eye every day of her life, no matter the circumstances. She is dearly missed and always loved. If you are reading this and knew Helen, a glass of beer and a toast to our Irish Mother would make her smile.

A memorial service and celebration of her life will be held at a later date. She will be laid to rest next to Dad in St. Joseph Cemetery in Alliance.

OUR SIDE

Renewable energy advocates have yet to prove it's value

A wind- and solar-energy advocacy group released a report last month claiming Ohio's freeze of renewable energy and energy efficiency standards is damaging the industry. Environmental Entrepreneurs, which sponsored the report, is demanding lawmakers lift the freeze. But their position is hardly convincing.

Ohio Senate Bill 310 put a two-year freeze on state clean energy standards enacted in 2008, which required utilities to cut customers' power usage by 22 percent and get 25 percent of their power from renewable and advanced technology energy sources.

Lobbyists for the renewables industry are calling that freeze a mistake, and crying about the damage done. They say it has put Ohio's clean energy industry into "a tailspin."

While it is true solar and wind energy have not yet made themselves a viable, financially sound alternative to coal-fired power plants — without the help of massive government subsidies — their industry has hardly suffered while lawmakers try to do what is right for Ohio.

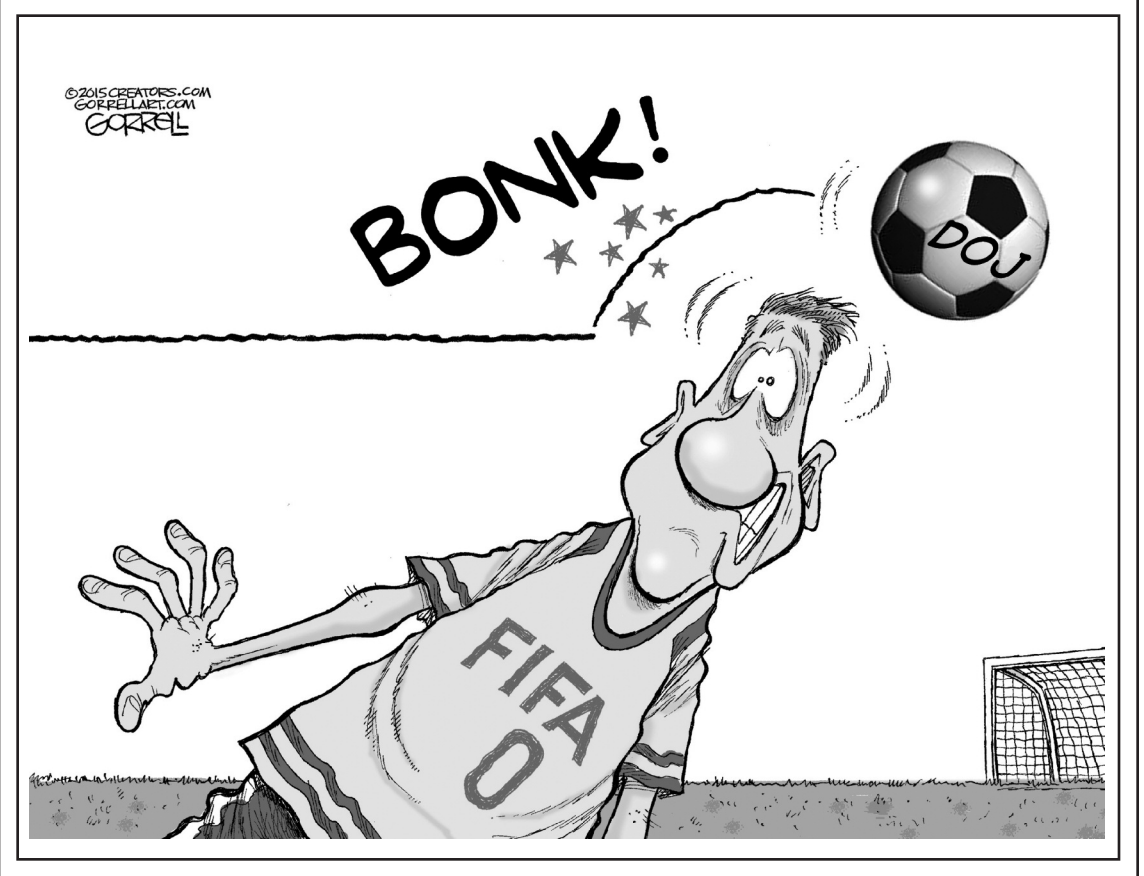

According to Gail Parson, Midwest advocate for Environmental Entrepreneurs, "There are now 89,000 Ohioans working in the clean energy field at 7,200 companies in the state."

In fact, the whining about damage to the industry has included the statistic that job growth in the renewable energy sector in Ohio has slowed to only 1.5 percent, in 2014. Slow growth is still growth.

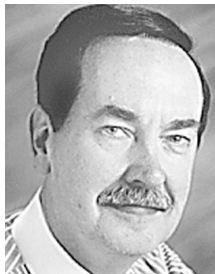

Meanwhile, National Mining Association statistics show that in 2003, West Virginia had 24,488 coal mining jobs, but in 2013, there were 20,751. In Ohio, there were 3,761 coal mining jobs in 2003. By 2013, there were 3,143. As of Friday, the numbers were even higher after Murray Energy and Alpha Natural Resources announced they were laying off 2,268 people or eliminating their positions.

See any growth there?

If renewable energy advocates are looking for sympathy because they have not experienced the explosive growth to which they believed they were entitled, with the help of government, they should look elsewhere. Ohio lawmakers were correct in attempting to slow the bleeding in the coal industry caused by the war on coal and affordable electricity. And, of course, they were right to refuse to force consumers to pay more for alternative energy. Legislators should ignore this shameless plea for more legislative shoring-up of an industry that has not yet proved its worth.

No Memorial Day for inner-city dead

CAL THOMAS

"Back lives matter!" was the chant heard at recent demonstrations in cities and towns from Ferguson, Missouri, to Baltimore, Maryland. Yes, they do matter, but apparently not so much to some other blacks. Only when a white police officer shoots or engages in other behavior that results in the death of a black man do black lives seem to matter.

While Memorial Day weekend featured the traditional parades, barbecues and moments of silence at baseball games for those who gave their lives in wartime to preserve our freedoms, in some of America's biggest cities virtual shooting galleries produced the sort of carnage more likely to be found in the Middle East from Islamic State terrorists.

In Baltimore, which was wracked by violence just one month ago after Freddie Gray, an African-American man, died while in police custody, 32 people were shot. Nine of them died. That brings to 35 the number killed in Baltimore just in May and the month isn't over.

In New York City, eight people were shot and killed.

In Chicago, where murder has become common, 12 people died and 44 were wounded.

Care to take a guess what these three cities have in common? They are all presided over by elected Democratic mayors and majority Democratic city councils.

In New York City, the murder rate reached a record low in 2013. Following the election of liberal Mayor Bill de Blasio, the murder rate jumped 20 percent in the first two months of 2015. Might the reason be de Blasio's order to dramatically curtail the stop-and-frisk program that had sharply reduced the number of murders in minority neighborhoods under former Mayor Michael Bloomberg?

In Baltimore, where Democratic Mayor Stephanie Rawlings-Blake (who is African-American) reportedly ordered Baltimore police to stand down during the recent riots, thus allowing the rioting to continue, police apparently are still obeying that order. Arrests in Baltimore have declined significantly, while incidents of criminal activity, including violent crime, are up. Cops may be reluctant to step in because six of their fellow officers have been indicted in the death of Freddie Gray. Who could blame them for thinking that Baltimore's elected officials see the police and not criminals as the enemy of public order?

There have been no visits by Al Sharpton, no investigations launched by the Department of Justice and no statements by America's first African-American president about these latest shootings. And predictably, only local media — not the national networks — have paid much attention to these murders because both the perpetrators and the victims are black. Only when the template that whites are racists and blacks are victims can be applied do the actors in this tiresome race play step onto the stage with their predictable accusations and fault-finding. Predictably, when the play ends, nothing has changed.

Last year, following the riots and looting in Ferguson, Johnathan Gentry, identified by Fox News as a minister, appeared on TV to counter the message by Al Sharpton suggesting that white racism is to blame for most problems in the African-American community. Speaking of Sharpton, Gentry said, "You only come around when something happens with the police or Caucasians. You're not there for the black community so you need to stop fronting — and NAACP as well. I want to call them out as well! They're good for nothing. All they do is perpetuate hate."

You won't find that sound bite or that man on any other channel, but he speaks the truth.

Maybe what's needed is a Memorial Day for the victims of crime. Maybe that would help reduce the body count. President Obama says he was elected to "end wars, not start them." While he is retreating overseas, he might consider trying to end the war in America's inner cities. And those inner-city voters might benefit from ending their loyalty to a party that has done them little good.

OTHER VOICES

May 23 / The Daily News, Bowling Green, Kentucky, on President Obama being no friend to police:

Police officers across this country should have everything they need to protect themselves and the citizens they are trying to protect and serve.

Whether it be batons, shields, machine guns, personnel carriers, Humvees, helmets, battering rams or camouflage uniforms, police officers should have access to this equipment.

After what we witnessed in Ferguson, Missouri, and more recently in Baltimore, where lawless thugs were throwing large rocks and large pieces of concrete at police officers, it is quite obvious they need these things to protect themselves from people who wish them harm.

Most would agree police need certain types of equipment to protect themselves, people and property during riots.

Apparently, President Barack Obama doesn't see it this way.

It's no surprise coming from a president who has made his disdain for law enforcement well known in his coded speeches about them. We believe that in Ferguson and in Baltimore, Obama added fuel to an already ongoing fire when he talked about how law enforcement doesn't get along with minorities in their communities.

This is a questionable statement to begin with because in most cities, including Bowling Green, law enforcement and people of color have a good relationship.

As though Obama hasn't made his disdain bad enough for law enforcement, he is taking it a step further by prohibiting the federal government from providing some military-style equipment to local departments and putting stricter controls on other weapons and gear distributed to law enforcement. Obama says the federal government will no longer provide armored vehicles that run on a tracked system instead of wheels, weaponized aircraft or vehicles, firearms or ammunition of .50 caliber or higher, grenade launchers, bayonets or camouflage uniforms.

To add insult to injury to these police departments, the federal government is trying to recall prohibited equipment the departments already possess.

Humvees, manned aircraft drones, specialized firearms, explosives, battering rams and riot batons, helmets and shields would come under tighter control.

Why don't you go ahead and just take police officers' pistols from them too while you are at it?

Obama is essentially tying one hand behind police officers' backs with this absurd prohibition and tightening down on other items such as helmets, shields and riot batons.

These officers need a lot of the items that Obama is banning. With the policy change, Obama potentially is putting more police officers' lives in danger.

It was interesting to see an interagency group found "substantial risk of misusing or overusing" items such as tracked armored vehicles, high-powered firearms and camouflage, behavior that could undermine trust in police, the group says.

Does anyone honestly believe people breaking the law in Ferguson or Baltimore were worried police officers were wearing camouflage or driving armored vehicles?

Of course not. They were too busy burning businesses down, throwing rocks at police and looting stores to get free merchandise.

Law enforcement has every right to be angry at this president. He has shown through this action and past statements that he is not their friend.

This latest action is just one more slap in the face to law enforcement, and we hope because of this misguided action by Obama, no officers' lives are lost because they didn't have the equipment they needed to protect themselves.

If they do because of this prohibition, Obama will own the responsibility.

Who are we and what do we believe? Think through the issues

DIANE DIMOND

We live in a world of confounding contradictions.

We call ourselves a peace-loving people, yet we continue to engage in far-flung wars. Domestically, gangs, guns and drug dealing proliferate. This is not a recipe for peace by any measure.

Nearly half of us say we are morally against the death penalty. Yet a jury in Boston — a decidedly anti-capital punishment region of the country — sentenced to death the surviving Boston Marathon Bomber, 21-year-old Dzhokhar Tsarnaev.

Another jury in Aurora, Colorado, is currently considering the death penalty for an admitted killer, who, in July of 2012, shot to death a dozen movie goers and wounded at least 70 others at a midnight showing of the Batman movie "The Dark Knight Rises." This defendant also outfitted his apartment with an elaborate and deadly booby-trap, hoping to kill those who arrived to investigate.

We earnestly say we feel for families struggling to help a relative with mental illness, but society has done little to help establish institutions to treat these unfortunate people. We seem blind to the idea that if we help the most tortured souls among us, they can't or won't harm themselves or others.

We automatically expect that when we call 911, police will instantly and heroically come to our rescue. Yet many fail to understand that officers are constantly confronted with situations that require snap decisions, and the deadly, daily dangers they face can cause their very human instinct of survival to kick in — even when it's not really a life-or-death situation.

We preach personal responsibility then think nothing of suing over an accident hoping someone or some entity with deep pockets will make us rich.

Many cry for "income equality" across the land. But stop and think about that. A nation where everyone makes the same money, regardless of work product, is socialism. Is that really what we want? Forced equality is not fair.

Many condemn Big Business and corporations as "evil" and want them abolished. Yet they have never run a business or provided job opportunities for their fellow Americans. They fail to realize where jobs that can lift people out of poverty come from. Conversely, corporate leaders who advertise their good deeds but pay no taxes are an abomination.

We claim we are for good government, yet continue to re-elect politicians who lack the integrity and foresight to do what's right for the country. We know Washington is a mess, but our busy lives keep us from demanding ways to fix it. We repeatedly fall prey to huckster politicians who promise everything and only deliver to their own political party. Even worse, a majority of us don't even bother to vote.

Some law-abiding Americans make pleas for amnesty for all those who have entered our country illegally. They extol the virtues and good intentions of the alien working class while ignoring the very real problems that come with opening our borders. Over-taxed hospitals, schools and welfare programs, for example. Giving away resources comes with a price.

Contradictions abound, yet few seem to notice. Seems we've just stopped thinking through today's issues.

Who among us doesn't say they want an exemplary, competitive, affordable education system for our youth? But can you honestly say we have one? No.

When will we stop saying we're for something and then fail to act to make it happen? That's more than a contradiction, I fear. It is self-destructive.

We claim to be an enlightened group of parents who protect our young like no generation before us, but check the growing number of missing, exploited and sexually abused children. We may brag we are "helicopter parents" who perpetually hover to swat away danger, but sadly, the statistics prove there aren't enough good parents to go around.

We distract ourselves and argue about things that mean so little. Like whether the word "thug" is racist. Criminal thugs live in crime-ridden inner-city neighborhoods, and they commit multiple murders in Waco, Texas, over something as silly as a motorcycle gang rivalry. Thugs are white, black, Hispanic, Asian and lots of colors in between.

A wise man once told me that when confronted with a myriad of problems, there is really only one main problem.

So what's this nation's one problem? It is us.

We have failed to install the leadership this country deserves. It is way past time to change that. I wonder if we will see that change in our lifetimes.

Washingtonville council passes on 911 support

By LARRY SHIELDS

Staff Writer

WASHINGTONVILLE — Council decided to table a request from Columbiana County commissioners to approve a resolution regarding an update to the county's 911 system on Monday.

Fiscal Officer Dale Davis said he received a call from commissioners asking why the village had not passed the resolution so they could obtain the necessary 60 percent approval from county political subdivision and move move ahead on upgrading the system.

Davis said, "One reason was we never received it."

Council President Herman Frank asked if the village paid anything for 911 and Davis said the funding was through existing wire and wireless service.

Frank noted if there was no cost coming back to the village he approved.

"I think anytime you upgrade 911 is a good thing," he said and Councilwoman Devon Davis moved to approve the measure.

But Frank also noted that when Fiscal Officer Davis brought up the issue it was noted there were no attachments, as indicated in the letter from commissioners.

After consulting with Solicitor Andrea Burton, Frank was unsure about passing it "without knowing what we're doing" and Councilman Al Vignon said, "I'd like to see more information."

Frank said especially "when they say they sent something and it doesn't come."

Council discussed tabling the issue, "mainly because we didn't know what it is," Frank said, and then approved a motion to rescind Councilwoman Davis' motion to approve the 911 upgrade resolution and it was tabled.

In other business, council voted to approve a police department purchase of a hand-held radar gun.

With a 5-0 vote and Councilman Jim Smith absent, council approved the purchase to an amount not to exceed $1,000 after Mayor Will Jones said it will have the ability to be transferred from one cruiser to another.

Two other radar units in the department are mounted to the cars and Jones said the hand-held unit is a backup plan "plus they can be used on bikes and they can sit in more places when stationary."

After a short discussion about the unit being more vehicle-specific in targeting, council moved ahead with the approval and Burton, in reference to the ability of the unit to do vehicle-specific targeting, said her preference was to go with it and "have something more reliable."

Police calibrate the current units prior to each shift and Frank said, "I'm all for it so let's buy it."

In other business, Jones said the safety issues related to a sinkhole on County Road near the village limits a couple of weeks ago required "emergency" action to fill in and cover it.

He said that in response to council inquires for Vignon and Councilwoman Becky Vignon wondering why some members of council weren't notified before action was taken.

The street department placed a steel plate over the hole on the road edge that also included part of the sidewalk.

Streets Foreman Ed Garrett said he learned from Utilities Superintendent Brian Gudat there were gas lines underneath and it needed to be fixed "ASAP."

Fiscal Officer Davis said a student fell into the hole and lost a shoe (that was recovered) and that was how the village learned about the hole.

"He was walking back from school, walked around it and he fell into it," Davis explained.

Garrett said it looked like a pipe separated and Davis said there were two pipes broken and R.T. Vernal fixed the hole in about three days.

Garrett said the sidewalk was the only thing left to fix.

Also, council went into a brief executive session to discuss personnel and no action was taken.

Salem VFW plans golf scramble Aug. 9

By LARRY SHIELDS

Staff Writer

SALEM — The second annual VFW Post 892 scramble is set for 9 a.m., Aug. 9 at the Copeland Hills Golf Course on Metz Road in Columbiana.

The event is the VFW's biggest fund raiser and 80 golfers attended last year's scramble at Diamondhead Golf Course in Canfield.

The cost is $250 per four-person team with a shotgun start that includes 18 holes with a cart, event T-shirt, goody bag, beer, pop and water at the course.

Skins will be available for $5 a player and $20 per team.

Nikki Ritchie, the organizer for the event, said sponsors and entrants receive an event T-shirt.

Registration runs from 7:45 a.m. to 8:40 a.m. and there will be a chance to putt for a special prize before the golfing starts.

Ritchie said they signed up 20 sponsors for last year's inaugural event and sponsor sign-up letters were just getting out now and anyone interested in sponsoring a hole can contact her at 330-277-7619.

Entrance fees are due by July 10 with checks payable to VFW Post 892 and 100 percent of the proceeds "goes to help veterans at our post," Ritchie said, "for anything and everything" and for charities including Wounded Warriors, PAWS for Patriots and it makes a donation to the Salem Fire Department and the annual Fourth of July fireworks display at Memorial Park.

Ritchie said, "The majority will go to what the veterans need" explaining they host many dinners at the post.

Hole number one is the long-drive hole with men playing from the white tees while woman play from the red tees.

Hole number two is the $15,000 hole-in-one hole where all players use the white tees.

The $15,000 is donated by Tom Gamble's State Route 45 Auto and hole seven is the longest putt hole while hole nine is the closest to the pin hole.

The 10th hole is the designated "fun hole" with a team prize with everyone playing from the white tee.

The 15th hole is the longest drive hole with men playing from the white tee and women from the red tee and the 18th hole is a long putt hole.

The morning snack includes fruit, muffins, red pop and juices while lunch consists of hot dogs, pizza sandwiches, grilled cheese sandwiches and chips.

Dinner is a choice of steak or bbq chicken, macaroni salad, pasta salad, beans, potatoes, plus desserts. It will be served approximately 30 minutes after golfers arrive at the VFW 892 hall at 496 Arch St.

Additional dinners may be purchased for $10.

Teen impersonates FBI agent, test drives car, crashes it

YPSILANTI TOWNSHIP, Mich. (AP) — A 17-year-old southeastern Michigan boy pretended to be an FBI agent and got a car dealer to let him test drive a Dodge Charger, then crashed the muscle car in northwestern Ohio, authorities say.

The Ann Arbor teen called the Cueter Chrysler dealership in Ypsilanti Township on Wednesday and asked to test drive the 2015 model, the department told The Ann Arbor News.

The boy told dealership employees he was an FBI agent and was carrying what appeared to be a firearm on his hip, sheriff's spokesman Derrick Jackson said. He said it turned out to be an Airsoft air gun. The teen then drove the car to the Toledo, Ohio, area, where he crashed and heavily damaged the crashed the car, Jackson said. The boy was uninjured and again presented himself to authorities in Ohio as an FBI agent, the sheriff's spokesman said.

The property owned by the Salem Art Institute, which is funded through the Salem Community Foundation, sustained damage from falling bricks over the last several years from the now demolished TanFastic building. The building formerly housed the Salem branch of the Butler Museum of American Art, headquartered in Youngstown, but closed several years ago because of the continuous damage. During the recent TanFastic demolition project, the building sustained even more damage when part of a wall collapsed through its roof.

Mayor John Berlin indicated recently that the Salem Art Institute was offering the property and building to the city. He said the building could be auctioned by the city for someone to rehab it. The Salem Art Institute has been ordered by the Salem Fire Department to either repair the building or raze it.

The Committee of the Whole meeting will be followed by the regularly-scheduled city council meeting at 7 tonight.

Also this week, the Rules & Ordinances Committee will meet at 6 p.m. Wednesday to discuss standards offered by the Design Review Board for signs in the downtown/central commercial district and talk about the graffiti issue in the city.

SPEAKER

FROM 1A

"It is an issue we have to examine well beyond just one sector," Rosenberger said.

Rosenberger was elected by the Republican majority in January as the new House speaker, and he said Monday's forum is the first of many he hopes to host around the state with local state legislators. Local officials were invited to attend to hear what they had to say and to also ask questions of the legislators.

Attendees were only able to squeeze in about a half dozen questions during the hour-long luncheon, but Rosenberger did address an issue of particular interest to city, village and township officials — state funding (LGF) for local governments. He apologized for cutting LGF funding four years ago but said legislators were faced with an $8 billion budget deficit.

The state budget passed by the House contained no increase in LGF funding, nor should local governments expect one, Rosenberger said. The House, however, is looking at different ways of providing additional state funding to local governments.

For example, the House budget created a $20 million government safety fund, which will provide $100,000 competitive grants to local governments to help fund purchases that benefit public safety, such as fire department equipment.

Rosenberger said creating grant programs specifically to benefit local governments would be a way for the legislature to ensure state funding is used for capital purchases and infrastructure improvements instead of on salaries and benefits.

He said another way they have tried to help local governments is by increasing the state reimbursement to counties for providing constitutionally mandated free legal services to poor people charged with crimes. Rosenberger said this was something pushed by Columbiana County Commissioner Mike Halleck in his position as current chairman of the County Commissioners Association of Ohio.

Rosenberger praised the House budget, saying it resulted in a significant increase in state funding for school districts and guarantees no district would lose money from the continued reduction in Ohio's tangible personal property tax on businesses.

"Hopefully, it will come out of the Senate looking the same way," Ginter said of the budget.

Also attending the meeting was state Rep. Kirk Schuring, R-Canton, who said his RTIP bill provides local governments with the means to generate funding for specific transportation projects. He said this could help both Columbiana and Stark counties come up with funding to qualify for federal grants needed to jumpstart the U.S. Route 30 project.

Schuring and Rosenberger both praised Ginter, who has been on the job for five months. Rosenberger said Ginter has played an active role in shaping the budget and has also introduced and/or co-sponsored several bills.

"I think what makes (Tim) good is he listens to people," Schuring said.

Rosenberger also took the opportunity to ask the 20 or so people in attendance to oppose the proposed constitutional amendment legalizing marijuana, saying it would create a monopoly controlled by a few instead of the government.

"They've already started selling shares," he said of the group behind the ballot initiative. "This is about people making money."

Rosenberger said if Ohio is to legalize marijuana it should be done by the legislature after careful deliberations because of all of the potential ramifications, and not rammed through by a special interest group.

"This is a bigger issue than has been talked about," he said.

The street department was contacted to move the block from the street. An alarm was reported at 6:59 a.m. Monday in the 1400 block of Franklin Avenue. The exterior of the building was secure. Loud persons were reported at 5:49 a.m. Monday in the 400 block of Washington Avenue where a resident said people next door were making noise and pounding on the walls. It wasn't his first complaint about the noise. He was told his options. An unsuccessful attempt was made to contact the neighbors. An unknown problem was reported at 1:32 a.m. Monday in the 1200 block of Cedar Ridge where police made contact with an intoxicated male who did not speak English. Officers gathered that he had a problem with some people who already left on foot. No one was located after a check of the area. He was told to call back if they return. Police responded at 1:10 a.m. Monday to an alarm activation on Beechwood Road, checking all the outer perimeter doors and windows and finding an unsecured side door on a garage. Officers checked the interior and found the door to the residence secure. Nothing appeared out of the ordinary. Officers secured the side door. An officer on patrol at 1:04 a.m. Monday in the 2300 block of East State Street saw broken glass on a door at a business. The glass appeared to have been broken from the inside and the door unsecured. Nobody was located inside and no property appeared to have been stolen or disturbed. An unsuccessful attempt was made to contact an employee, with follow up to be done later. Olga Courtney, 23, of 1502 N. Ellsworth Ave., was charged with committing an indecent act/public urination after an officer on patrol at 10:24 p.m. Sunday saw a person expose themselves and appear to be urinating in public. The report said the person was highly intoxicated. The officer ensured a responsible party was taking her home. A passing motorist in the 900 block of East State Street at 10:17 p.m. Sunday reported several vehicles stopped somewhere on the West State Street overpass with occupants arguing. Officers responded and found the overpass clear and no issues in any parking lots in the area. A woman in the 1200 block of Southeast Boulevard spoke to an officer at 9:12 p.m. Sunday about someone possibly getting her personal information from an online source. She was told her options. Officers responded at 8:43 p.m. Sunday to the area of Orchard and Olive for a report of several suspicious persons. A male and female were located standing near the intersection. They said they were on their way to a friend's house nearby. A loud explosion was reported at 7:26 p.m. Sunday at Jennings Avenue and West Second Street. An officer on patrol at 5:24 p.m. Sunday in the 1300 block of Pennsylvania Avenue saw an open door on the side of a building. The owner, Rhonda McDonald, 39, of 418 E. Sixth St., was cited for dog at large. Bobbi Crookston, 26, whose last known address was 818 S.

Lundy Ave., was charged with disorderly conduct/persisting after police were initially called at 11:42 p.m. Saturday to the area of South-east Boulevard and South Madison Avenue for an alleged intoxicated female walking and only partially clothed. Officers located the woman on Madison dressed in a bikini-type bottom and shirt. She said she was fine and she was dressed that way because she was hot. Due to the late hour, her attire and being intoxicated, officers gave her a courtesy transport to a relative's home on East Pershing Street. The report said nobody was home and while officers were attempting to contact someone else to take her, she allegedly became increasingly emotional, began yelling and making certain statements and subsequently opened a can of beer while sitting on the sidewalk. She was arrested for disorderly conduct and attempted to injure herself with the handcuffs, sustaining self-inflicted abrasions on her forehead. First responders and an ambulance were requested and she was transported to Salem Regional Medical Center, and served with the charges and a recognition bond.

The front window of a residence also appeared to have the red liquid rubbed on it.

Farmers take precautions to limit avian flu in Ohio

DAYTON (AP) — Ohio egg farmers are taking extra steps to protect their flocks from the avian flu, which has led to 40 million dead birds in the United States.

The Dayton Daily News reports (http://bit.ly/11tffLo) farmers are going to extremes to protect their birds in Darke County, the second-largest egg producing county in the country.

Vehicles going into egg and poultry farms are sprayed with disinfectant and workers' shoes are hosed down. Officials are also monitoring backyard flocks for signs of the virus.

"This avian influenza is a whole new level because it just wipes out everything and will put producers out of business for about six months. Just the ripple down effect of an outbreak if we lost half the layers in the state of Ohio would have a billion dollar effect on our economy," said Sam Custer, an Ohio State extension Agriculture and Natural Resource Educator.

Agriculture officials said the flu caused egg prices to double in two weeks.

An outbreak in one part of the state will impact Ohio as a whole, said Jim Chakeres, executive vice president of the Ohio Poultry Association.

"If the western part of the state is hit, the eastern part of the state cannot export product," Chakeres said. "We are doing everything humanly possible to prevent this from coming in."

Custer says it's not a question of "if" but "when" the virus will affect Ohio farms.

Officials have said the virus does not present a food safety threat, and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention have said the virus poses little risk to human health.

The avian flu is believed to have been spread by migrating fowl, like geese and ducks, which carry the virus but do not get sick.

Study: California grove's tallest tree is mere 777 years old

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An analysis found that the tallest redwood tree in Muir Woods in California is 777 years old — not the 1,500 years once assumed.

The study out of Humboldt State University is the first determination of the age of trees in Muir Woods, north of San Francisco, the San Francisco Chronicle reported Sunday.

The findings mean the 249-foot-tall coast redwood named Tree 76 was born seven centuries later than initially believed and dates back to the start of the Inquisition in the early 13th century.

It also means the oldest and biggest tree found in Muir Woods is just a baby compared with the huge old-growth trees farther north.

San Francisco's Save the Redwoods League is documenting the age, size and tree-ring history of California's old-growth redwood groves as part a statewide project.

HOROSCOPE

By HOLIDAY MATHIS 6/2/15 Hot Moon

The full moon in June has been called the Strawberry Moon for the obvious reason that it signaled in many regions the time for a luscious berry harvest.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Telling the truth keeps things simple. But which truth should you tell? There are many angles you could take on the matter at hand.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Today your tendency is to grip the controls harder than is necessary. This limits your range of motion and puts a damper on your response time.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Enjoy this balanced moment of life. There's less friction around you now that you've resolved your feelings about a certain someone.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). If you could move, where would you go? You probably won't go there anytime soon, but there are elements of this place you could bring into your life now.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Relationships need the right spatial balance. Too much closeness fast-tracks you to boring-land. Too much distance, and the relationship lacks momentum.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You're ready for the kind of challenge that will make you think deeply. This could come in the form of a difficult job, an impossible person or a heady piece of writing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). There are many ways to cultivate good fortune, the most effective of which is to embody it. When you think of yourself as a genie in service to others, you'll bring upon yourself a most auspicious energy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You see the potential in others. Be careful. Potential is not reality. Don't let the blind spot caused by hope and kindness keep you from moving toward more opportune situations.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). No one is saintly all the time, not even the actual saints. To be human is to make mistakes often, sometimes massively.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). If you find yourself alone, you won't be for long. Your creative mind is like a beacon to other creative minds, and they'll find you in even the most uninspiring of environments.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You don't have to fret over appearances. You've already put so much energy into learning how to best present yourself and your work that it is now second nature for you to make a stellar impression.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). The destination is unclear. The end-goal is changing. These are good reasons to slow down. If you don't know where you're going, there's no sense in setting a speed record to get there.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (June 2). This year comes at you like a huge wave, spectacular and unavoidable. You're the rising tide, more fulfilled with each new development. Love is your adventure in August, your solace in October.

ASTROLOGICAL QUESTIONS: Do you think it's possible that I could have been my husband's sister in a past life? Our relationship has been more like that of siblings than anything romantic for many years now.

Spiritual Sibling Your creative, open-minded Aquarian intellect inspires you to entertain a wide array of possibilities in every situation. Your husband is an air sign just like you. Your conversations are more interesting than most people's, something you take for granted as you bounce from topic to topic, riding the surprising twists and turns into fascinating hypothetical universes.

Plug with an upside

Heloise

Dear Heloise: Most electrical devices now come with POLARIZED PLUGS -- one plug is wider than the other. To quickly tell which side goes up, I mark the top side of the plug. I use a white dot of paint or correction fluid on dark plugs, or a black dot on light-colored plugs. Now I can quickly tell which side goes up when plugging in a device, even in low light. -- Scott R., Rockville, Md.

SAFE TRANSPORT

Dear Readers: On a recent business trip to Washington D.C., I stopped in to see friends at The Washington Post, which runs my column. One of the reporters had an interesting plant on top of a file cabinet. I had never seen this plant before and was amazed that it did so well with only fluorescent lighting in the newsroom.

At my hotel, I placed the trimmings in an empty coffee packet that is like foil, along with some wet tissues. I wrapped a rubber band around this, and then put it into a plastic shopping bag. Amazingly, it made it home still alive! I'll keep you filled in on the progress of the "WASHPOST" plant, as I now call it. -- Heloise

WEDDING DRESS

Dear Heloise: Our daughter is getting married. She always wanted to have a wedding dress made based on her design ideas. She also preplanned and bought extra material to save. She hopes to use the material one day to have a christening gown made for her first child. -- Betsy W., Knoxville, Tenn.

This certainly is planning ahead, and it does seem that young girls can plan a wedding for years even before there is a groom in the picture! This hint is actually one of many I have in my Heloise's Bridal Gown Hints and More pamphlet. You can order it online at www.Heloise.com, or by sending $3 and a long, self-addressed, stamped (70 cents) envelope to: Heloise/Bridal, P.O. Box 795001, San Antonio, TX 78279-5001.

SUNGLASSES SOCK

Dear Heloise: I had a lone black-and-white-striped, ankle-high sock. I could never find my black-framed sunglasses in my purse, so I slipped the sock over the glasses and now can spot them in my bag. The lenses don't get scratched going in and out of the purse. -- Kathy F., Placentia, Calif.

SWEEP AND WIPE

Dear Heloise: When I am running the sweeper, I carry a wet cloth with me to wipe up spills off the floors or walls while sweeping. If I wait until I am done, I will forget where they are. -- Vickie, via email

Parents welcome boyfriends to family

DEAR ABBY: We have two lovely daughters in their 20s. The older one lives with her boyfriend. They are expecting a baby soon. Our younger daughter lives with us, and she's planning on moving in with her boyfriend.

We're an old married couple, and we're not sure how to treat our daughters' boyfriends. However, "Gerald" is the father of our new grandchild, and we think of him as family. "Joel" is a great guy who is in love with our younger daughter and vice versa, so we think of him as family, too.

We stumbled through the holidays not knowing if we should get gifts for them. Joel is having a birthday soon. Should we get him a gift? We want to bring the boyfriends into our family and treat them like our children, but we don't know if we're overstepping our bounds. Can we start treating them like sons and wait for them to correct us? -- STUMBLING IN NEW ENGLAND

DEAR STUMBLING: Stop stumbling. I can't think of a better way to draw your daughters' significant others into your family than to open your hearts, let them know they are welcome and treat them that way.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 17 and will start my senior year of high school next fall. Recently, I started talking to this boy in my cooking class named "Ethan." He's a year older, but I decided to make the first move. We went on a few dates and he was quiet, reserved and respectful. Overall, he's a nice guy.

At first the fact that he's only an inch taller than I am bothered me. But then he told me about a foot deformity he has. He said two of his toes on each foot are attached and he calls them "webbed." When he sent me a photo one day to prove it, I realized his toes were almost entirely attached and I freaked out. I don't know how to feel. Am I being shallow? -- NERVOUS IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR NERVOUS: No, I think you're being foolish. Ethan's toes are HIS issue, and you appear to be making it yours. You say he's a nice guy. Try to remember you are not dating his feet, you are dating the person to which they are appended, and a person's toes are not the measure of his character.

P.S. This is an excellent example of why it's unwise to send photos of one's anatomy.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter is being married for the second time. Some of the guests were invited to her first wedding and will be invited to her second one as well. As her mother, I don't feel right about expecting certain guests who have already given her one wedding gift to give her another at the second wedding. How would you suggest we convey to this "select group" that a gift is not expected from them? Would it be proper to state something such as "Your presence is our present"? -- MOTHER OF THE BRIDE, AGAIN

DEAR MOTHER OF THE BRIDE: NO mention of gifts should be made in your daughter's wedding invitation. I agree that guests who gave your daughter gifts for her first wedding should not feel compelled to buy her anything more than a token gift for this one. This goes for ANY guest who attended the first wedding, not just "select" guests, whatever that means. Any discussion regarding gifts should be done verbally by you if you are hosting the wedding.

When not to worry about leaky valve

Dr. Keith Roach

DEAR DR. ROACH: During a preop exam before minor surgery, I was told that I have a leaky heart valve (my heart has always been strong). I was told "Everybody has one" and "not to worry." I am elderly. What does this mean for me? -- M.C.

ANSWER: The heart has four valves: the aortic and mitral on the left side, and the pulmonary and tricuspid on the right. Any of these can leak, but it's the valve involved and how extensively it is leaking that are the key issues for determining how problematic the leak is. It is true that many, or even most, people have a small degree of leak ("leak" in this context is when the blood flows in the wrong direction across the valve when it is supposed to be closed, not that it comes out of the heart and blood vessels entirely, which is a life-threatening emergency).

Based on what you were told, it sounds like this is a very small issue, possibly tricuspid regurgitation, and if you are feeling well, it's unlikely that you need any treatment. The next time you see your doctor, though, get the details, and ask questions until you have all the information you need to feel comfortable.

DEAR DR. ROACH: I have a very dry mouth after surgery and radiation treatment for tongue and throat cancer. I have thrush in the middle of my tongue, caused by a very dry mouth. I brush my mouth and tongue three times a day and gargle every night, yet it comes back the next day, and I start all over again. I'm used to it, but my lady friend is concerned.

We are both seniors and are thinking about a serious relationship. She was told that I could pass on the yeast infection or something worse to her. I don't know how to answer her. Is it possible the thrush is contagious? -- R.C.K.

ANSWER: Thrush is caused by the overgrowth of yeast, normally in a warm, moist environment, such as the mouth, vagina or areas where the skin overlaps, such as under the arm. Yeast normally live in the area, so thrush typically is caused by something different in the host -- that is to say, the person affected. People with diabetes mellitus or with damaged immune systems due to steroids, infection or chemotherapy are at a higher risk for thrush. Dry mouth, a common complication after head and neck cancer, predisposes one to thrush also.

Thrush is not normally considered contagious. Your lady friend likely has yeast already (most of us do, as part of the normal array of organisms that live on us), and her body's system keeps it in check. However, if she has a very weakened immune system, as described above, it is possible, but unlikely, to transmit infection.

Although good oral hygiene is important for getting rid of thrush, I am surprised that you aren't on some other kind of medication. Oral solutions, lozenges and pills all show high rates of curing infection. Some people do need ongoing treatment to prevent recurrences, and you might because of your severe dry mouth. Talk with your doctor about a lozenge (called a troche). If you wear dentures or another oral appliance, these need to be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected nightly.

Husband shaming stepdaughter

Annie's Mailbox

Dear Annie: My 14-year-old daughter attends an all-girls school. Her stepfather initially encouraged it, but in the past two years, my daughter has made friends with a few classmates who say they are lesbian or bisexual.

My husband is extremely conservative (borderline homophobic), and as a result, he is shaming my daughter regularly for her friendships. I have a good bond with my daughter and feel torn. I know my husband cares about her, but his comments are hurtful. He says he will keep it up to make sure she doesn't "become" a lesbian.

I've pleaded with him, tried to understand him and told him to stop, but it continues. What do I do? -- Is This Abuse?

Dear Abuse: Shaming your daughter is a form of abuse. Your husband sounds ignorant, homophobic and idiotic. Friendships with bisexual or homosexual girls will not make your daughter "become" a lesbian. But we guarantee that your husband's bullying will push her toward rejecting everything he says, and his influence over her will diminish to nothing.

You need to stand up for your daughter more strongly. Insist that you and your husband get counseling immediately to work on this. If he refuses and will not curtail this behavior, we recommend you take your daughter and leave the house. Your husband needs to understand the consequences of his actions, and more importantly, your child should not be subjected to such emotional abuse. You are the only one who can protect her.

Dear Annie: I read the letter from "G," whose mother died and the headstone uses only the surname of her second husband. "G" was concerned that her children's descendants won't be able to find their grandmother's grave because they won't necessarily recall the second husband's surname. Please suggest to "G" that she check the websites www.findagrave.com and www.billiongraves.com to see whether Grandma has a memorial. If not, "G" could photograph her mother's stone and create a memorial that mentions the surnames of both husbands, their dates of marriage, children from either marriage, etc. That will help descendants find Grandma when they wish to do so. -- A Genealogist

Dear Genealogist: Thank you for the helpful suggestion. Several readers mentioned findagrave.com, but you were the only one to list both sites. Of course, descendants need to know these online memorials exist in order to make use of them, and one never knows what the future holds when it comes to technology. But we are happy to mention both websites and appreciate being able to pass along the information to all of our readers.

► PREP TRACK — OHIO STATE TRACK AND FIELD MEET

Golden Eagles Fillman, Cooper seek state success

RILEY FILLMAN

By BILL DRAGOMIR
Staff Writer

HANOVERTON — The United boys track team is pinning its state hopes on two qualifiers who will compete in four events at the Division II state meet Friday and Saturday at Jesse Owens Memorial Stadium in Columbus.

Senior Riley Fillman earned his third straight trip to the state meet after placing third in the 300-meter hurdles and the long jump at the Austintown regional last week.

Fillman has been breaking up his training for state since he will compete in the long jump at 9:30 a.m.

Friday, followed by the 300 hurdles semifinals at 3:30 p.m.

"Since at state I do long jump in the morning and running later, I've got to get up early, come out and I've got to do long jump," Fillman said. "Then I go home for awhile or go to therapy and then I come back and I have to do my hurdles. So it's just practice is broke up throughout the day."

Fillman said there is a difference between the morning and afternoon competitions.

"It's a lot different," he said. "It really depends on how well I get warmed up."

Fillman hopes for a good showing at state to close out his high school career.

"I'd really like to place in the top eight," he said. "I'd like to get as high as I can. I don't know how high that is, but just do my best and see where I end up."

Senior Lucas Cooper is a returning state qualifier in both the discus throw and shot put. Cooper was second in the shot put and third in the discus at the Austintown regional.

"My goals are to break both school records and to get on the podium," he said. "My shot put is 56-foot-9 1/4. So that's 3 inches off the record. My best discus is 169-9. That's about 2 feet off the school record."

Cooper was happy to make it to Columbus as he battled rigorous competition at the regional.

"I knew going in there was some tough competition, so I just wanted to PR (personal record), get on the podium and make it to state," he said.

Cooper's training regimen involve early morning workouts since he will throw the shot at 9:30 a.m. Friday and the discus at 9:30 a.m. Saturday.

"I think I can place. I've just got to throw my best," he said. "Just be equal, wake up, and get used to throwing early."

Delly gives it his all

INDEPENDENCE (AP) — The kid was fearless, relentless, a hustler.

Growing up in tiny Maryborough, Australia, Matthew Dellavedova tried every sport. And no matter if it was playing basketball, soccer, Aussie rules football, tennis, cricket or field hockey, the Cavaliers backup point guard went after the ball with disregard for his body.

Face first.

"He's always been that way," said his 77-year-old grandfather, Alan Dellavedova, who watches all of Cleveland's games in Australia. "He doesn't leave anything out there. What he has, he gives. And if he sees the ball, he wants it."

It's been that way in the NBA playoffs.

Dellavedova has become a cult hero in Cleveland, where his play has endeared "Delly" to teammates and fans, who relate to his approach and undrafted underdog story.

It's the exact opposite in Chicago and Atlanta, where he's a villain who crashes into players' knees and irritates opponents.

As he and his Cleveland teammates prepare for this week's NBA Finals against Golden State, the once obscure Dellavedova has been thrust into an unlikely spotlight. It's new territory for the easygoing 24-year-old, who has grown a scratchy beard during a postseason in which he's raised his game while All-Star Kyrie Irving battles knee and foot injuries.

In the closing moments of the Cavs' series-sweeping win over the Hawks, Dellavedova stepped to the foul line inside a rumbling Quicken Loans Arena and bathed in Cleveland's love as 20,000 fans chanted "Del-lee, Del-lee."

"I just wanted to knock the free throw down," Dellavedova said, smiling at his fresh memory of the ovation.

If not for Dellavedova's contributions, the Cavs may not have beaten the Bulls. With Irving on the bench in Game 6 with his knee wrapped, Dellavedova, scored 19 points to help Cleveland advance.

The points were a bonus from the 6-foot-4 Dellavedova, whose primary role is to provide defense and keep things going while Irving's off the floor.

West Branch has plans for state

By BILL DRAGOMIR
Staff Writer

BELOIT — The West Branch Warrior track teams are represented by four qualifiers at the state meet Friday and Saturday at Jesse Owens Memorial Stadium in Columbus.

The boys squad has three qualifiers for the state meet on Friday and Saturday. They are Zach Robbins in the high jump, Jake Zinni in both the shot put and discus, and the 1600-meter relay team of Josiah Ross, Steve Koneval, Matt Heffinger, and Hunter Nielsen.

Robbins, the defending state runner-up, won the regional championship with a meet-record jump of 6-foot-9 1/4. His preparation leading up to state this week will be intense.

"I've just got to practice going over the bar and get my approach down," he said. "Mostly everything I have is right. I just have to get my approach, critique a couple things over the bar and I should be fine."

He described what his routine is during practice. "I usually do a lot of high bar practice," Robbins said. "I set it at like 6-10, 6-11. I'll do high bar stuff on like Monday. Tuesday and then on Wednesday, Thursday, I'll do like kind of low bar stuff and try to save my legs."

Robbins has a personal best of 6-10 and expects that it will take that or better to bring home a state title.

"6-11, 6-10 is probably going to the winning height, so I've just got to gun for those," he said.

Zinni placed fifth in the

discus last year and is pleased to be a qualifier in both the discus and shot put this year.

"It's definitely pretty awesome," he said. "I think I'm the first one to ever do it at West Branch, so it's a pretty big honor."

Zinni said he would be happy to set a personal record at state.

"I'd like a personal best whatever that gives me, that's all I'm aiming for," he said.

Zinni said he will continue to balance his workouts between the discus and shot put.

"I'm going to try as best as I can to do that. It's been working for the past two weeks, so I'm not going to change anything. If it's not broke, don't fix it."

LEA BOCK

West Branch's relay team will try to better its area-best time of 3 minutes, 26.93 seconds, which earned the Warriors a third-place finish at the regionals.

"We've been pretty consistent all year with our handoffs, keeping it clean," anchor Hunter Nielsen said. "They're pretty smooth handoffs. We're really not too worried about that right now. Right now we're just trying to focus on getting to the finals, everybody run a good split Friday so we can make our way into the finals and hopefully the podium."

Nielsen talked about the strategy for training and the competition.

"For the training, you want to get a hard workout in about three or four days before so we'll probably get one in (Monday)," he said. "Then do some easy running, try to loosen up, not get too sore for when we get down there. Hopefully Friday usually you want to not run as hard the first day, that way you can run a better race for the finals, but competition is so close down there, you're going to have run as hard as you can. It's going to be tough to make it in the finals this year. Everybody's so close, but I think we'll be able to get there."

The Warriors' girls team qualifier is senior Lea Bock, who was second in the shot put at regionals. She finished fifth in the discus to just miss qualifying in that event.

"I came in ranked fifth (in the discus)," Bock said. "It was not what I wanted, but it was something I could accept ultimately."

Her discus toss of 127-0 at regionals was better

Akron's home to the best

AKRON (AP) — Welcome to the Rubber Capital, where car tires first rolled, the Goodyear Blimp took flight and two bouncing baby basketball prodigies were born less than four years apart in the 1980s.

LeBron James and Stephen Curry, the NBA's two biggest stars set to square off in the upcoming finals, are from the same city.

Genuine homeboys. The prodigal son and the precision shooter. Talk about a long shot.

James re-signed as a free agent with the Cavaliers last summer, returning to his home after four years in Miami to chase an NBA title. And as fate would have it, Golden State's Curry will come back to his Ohio birthplace to pursue his dream.

"It's kind of ironic that he's going back to Cleveland, where he came into the world, to try and get the world championship," said his father, Dell Curry.

Wardell Stephen Curry was born on March 14, 1988, arriving while his daddy, traded by Utah to Cleveland before his second pro season, was playing in Madison Square Garden against the New York Knicks.

Curry made his world debut with almost the same speed in which he comes off a screen, catches the ball and drops one of his 3-pointers — lightning quick. His mom, Sonya, said her delivery was only about 2 1/2 hours, roughly the length of a pro game. Within two weeks, she took her boy to his first NBA game, and from the moment he neared the hardwood, she knew she and her husband had created another ballplayer.

"He was asleep," she said last week after the Warriors won the Western Conference title and advanced to their first finals in 40 years. "We walked in, and his eyes were wide open the whole game — the whole game — and then as soon as we left and went to the family room, he fell asleep."

"And so then we knew that he was in tune with that arena and basketball in every sense."

The Currys didn't spend much time in Ohio as Dell was selected by the Charlotte Hornets in the expansion draft and the family was uprooted again.

UAB supporters hold up signs after UAB President Ray Watts announced during a news conference that UAB will reinstate the football program, Monday in Birmingham, Ala. Watts is bringing the football program back. He told The Associated Press that he decided on Monday to reverse the earlier decision after meetings with UAB supporters continued through the weekend. # UAB restores football

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — UAB President Ray Watts said Monday he is bringing the football program back as early as 2016, reversing a decision to shut it down because it was too expensive.

Watts cited renewed financial commitment from supporters, students and the city as reasons for the change of heart.

He said donors have pledged to make up the projected $17.2 million deficit over the next five years if football is restored. Watts told The Associated Press he decided on Monday morning to reverse the earlier decision after meetings with UAB supporters continued through the weekend.

“The biggest single difference is that we now have tangible commitment for additional support that we never had before,” Watts said at a news conference.

In addition to reinstating football, Watts said Monday that he was also bringing back bowling and rifle. The study commissioned by the university was based on the programs being brought back in 2016.

However, new athletic director Mark Ingram stopped short of guaranteeing 2016, saying only that the goal is to bring football back as soon as possible.

Watts cut the programs last December after UAB commissioned a report saying it would cost $49 million over five years to field a competitive football program, generating both a groundswell of criticism for the decision and a rallying of financial support for the Blazers program.

The president said UAB has dropped an indoor practice facility from the equation since the initial report, and has raised about 10 percent of the estimated $12.5 million to $14.5 million needed for a turf practice field and new fieldhouse.

The December decision left players looking for teams and stirred fans, student and faculty groups to issue no-confidence votes against Watts.

“This was a very difficult decision,” he said. “It broke our hearts to make that decision, and we are sorry for any consequences of that. But we are excited today that our community and supporters have come together. Had we not made that decision, which was based on sound information, that we wouldn’t be where we are today. We have never seen this level of support. It has been a painful process at times but it has been a process that has brought us to a new day.”

UAB commissioned College Sports Solutions to review the initial report by CarrSports Consulting. The numbers were similar minus the indoor facility. Watts also said UAB’s cost of attendance could be about half the initial projected $5,000 per athlete, based on other Conference USA schools. The first season’s College Football Playoff payout also was higher than UAB had projected.

Watts said that the initial projections “showed there was no way for us to cover that unless we took away from education and health care.”

Watts said UAB sent documents to C-USA and NCAA notifying them of his decision, but he makes it clear UAB plans to remain in the league and play at the FBS level.

Without football, UAB would have likely not have remained in C-USA, which has a bylaw requiring members to field football programs.

C-USA Commissioner Britton Banowsky said members had not wanted to change the rule because “football is something that is critical to our long-term success and part of our core as a conference.”

AKRON FROM 1B

Until he left for Florida in 2010, Akron is the only place James ever knew and where the public first glimpsed his greatness as a high school star. He’s defiantly proud of his city, often referring to his humble upbringing by saying he’s “just a kid from Akron, Ohio.”

The four-time MVP said he and the league’s current MVP, who was also the top vote-getter for this year’s All-Star game, have not discussed their Akron bond.

“No, we never have,” James said. “I don’t think we’ll talk too much about it, either, coming up.”

James has been a fan of Curry’s for years, first recognizing his potential when the Warriors’ guard was at Davidson. James watched Curry play several times, once driving to Detroit to see him in the NCAA Tournament. James said he knew almost immediately that Curry was destined for stardom.

“I just thought he was special, a special kid,” James said. “I’m very good at noticing talent and I thought he was special then and he still is.”

James appreciates Curry’s game, a blend of finesse, skill and drive.

“He has a great motor,” James said. “I think a lot of people don’t understand how great his motor is. He never stops moving. His ball-handling, his ability to shoot the ball off the dribble and off the catch. It’s uncanny. I don’t think there’s ever been a guy in on league to shoot the ball the way he does off the dribble or off the catch, off the ball. He just creates so many matchup problems for your defense and you just always have to be aware.”

The Akron boys aren’t real tight. Curry was once a guest at James’ home, but he’s not that familiar with his actual hometown. Still, he and James have a unique connection.

“It’s nice to have that in common,” Curry said. “But he has more of a history with the city than I do. Maybe three or four years ago I went to his house in Akron and kind of took a lay-of-the-land kind of deal. But other than that, I’m from Akron, but Charlotte raised. So that’s kind of where it ends.”

James speaks with admiration of Curry, a player some believe is heir apparent to become the face of the league. If he wins a championship, Curry’s ascension could happen quicker.

Perhaps because Curry comes from Akron, James, who has ‘Akron’ tattooed on his right shoulder and ‘Est. 1984’ tattooed on his left, has gone out of his way to help the 27-year-old.

“I’ve had an opportunity to speak to him a few times on the floor in the past. Just talk about the process of being a great basketball player, and being a leader and doing what it takes to get to this point,” James said. “I don’t know if he used it or not, but he’s done great for himself. He has a great family. His dad comes from this pedigree. He’s got so many great people around him, so he doesn’t need nothing from me.”

BRANCH FROM 1B

than 10 of the 16 state qualifiers in that event.

Bock hopes to better her career-best shot put of 40-foot-5 that earned her the regional runner-up showing.

“Definitely to exceed what I threw on Thursday night,” she said. “I hadn’t hit 40 feet yet, so now I have a feeling of hitting 40 from Thursday so I’m just trying to build off what it felt like to throw 40 and hopefully to exceed that. I finally put together a couple good throws.”

This is Bock’s second trip to the state this year having made it with her basketball teammates in the state semifinal in March. Placing at the state would be icing on the cake for her.

“That would be incredible and I feel like my whole senior year has come to this point where I can decide my destiny,” she said. “Hopefully that will be placing at the state.”

DELLY FROM 1B

Actually, Dellavedova’s most impactful plays this postseason have come with him on the floor — down, on the floor.

Against Chicago, he skirred with Bulls forward Taj Gibson, who angrily reacted to Dellavedova scissor-locking one of his legs and was ejected. In Cleveland’s series against Atlanta, Dellavedova lunged for a loose ball, rolling over and injuring Hawks shooter Kyle Korver, who was knocked from the series and underwent surgery. He also tangled with Atlanta’s Al Horford, who threw an elbow, got tossed and then accused Dellavedova of being dirty.

Atlanta’s play-by-play announcer called him “Tonya Harding,” referring to the Olympic ice skater whose ex-husband hired a goon squad to whack Nancy Kerrigan’s knee.

Almost immediately, the Cavs came to Dellavedova’s side with coach David Blatt insisting “he doesn’t have an unsportsmanlike bone in his body.”

Dellavedova said the outside comments stung, but he won’t let them sink in.

“To call someone dirty is a pretty serious accusation,” he said. “I wasn’t happy with that. But you can’t control what people think.”

One of his Aussie mates has his back. Warriors center Andrew Bogut said he doesn’t think Dellavedova is dirty and if Korver had reached the loose ball first, he likely would not have been hurt.

“If he sees a loose ball, if he has to box out a guy bigger than him, he’ll do so. I don’t think he’s intentionally trying to take guys’ legs out,” Boguts said. “A guy you love to play with, I guess, and hate to play against. But I don’t think he’s dirty by any means.”

Dellavedova only learned one way to play — hard.

“You have to be able to put your nose in there and go get it,” he said. “I don’t know how it is in America, but in Australia, the first thing you’re taught is that if you want to be a good player, you’ve got to go win the ball.”

That goes in practice, too.

Irving, who coincidentally was also born in Australia, didn’t know Dellavedova when the Cavs signed him last year out of Saint Mary’s. From the moment the two matched up, tempers flared.

“It was almost a fist fight every day in practice,” Irving said. “It wasn’t that he was trying to be dirty or anything like that. It’s just the way he is, his nature. It’s that Australian blood.”

Irving said he grew to love Dellavedova the same way fans do in Cleveland. And in Maryborough, they’re proud of the kid who won’t give in.

“Matthew has always had a lot of energy, a lot of determination and was very competitive,” said his mom, Leanne. “But he’s always been very kind-natured, and most importantly, a good sport.”

Man flies drone inside ballpark during Phillies game

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Police have questioned a man who was flying a drone inside Citizens Bank Park during a Philadelphia Phillies game.

Authorities say Phillies staff first spotted the remote-controlled drone near the third-base gate on Sunday but it landed in a parking lot outside.

Team security director Sal DeAngelis tells The Philadelphia Inquirer the drone did not fly over the field or disrupt the game against the Colorado Rockies.

DeAngelis says the man cooperated and was released without being charged. His drone, which had a camera attached, was confiscated but will be returned. WPVI-TV reports Phillies security asked the man to erase images taken with the drone, citing intellectual property.

WILLIAMS BACK WITH SCOTT NASSAU, Bahamas (AP) — Adam Scott has split with his new caddie and for now is going back to his old one — Steve Williams. Scott says he persuaded Williams to join him for the U.S. Open, British Open, Bridgestone Invitational and PGA Championship. Scott tied for fourth at Doral and has been struggling since. He has missed two cuts and has not finished better than a tie for 24th. That was at the Colonial, and he then fired caddie Mike Kerr. Scott says he had to talk Williams out of retirement for the next three months. They last worked together at the Tour Championship last year. Williams has been on the bag for 14 majors — 13 of them with Tiger Woods and the 2013 Masters with Scott.

Dempsey, Bedoya left off US roster for European exhibitions CHICAGO (AP) — Team captain Clint Dempsey and midfielder Alejandro Bedoya were left off the U.S. team roster for exhibitions in Europe against world powers Netherlands and Germany. Coach Jurgen Klinsmann said Sunday that Dempsey will remain in Seattle awaiting the birth of his fourth child and that Bedoya is recovering from a knee injury. Forward Jozy Altidore also remains sidelined as he recovers from a hamstring injury. The U.S. team will play the sixth-ranked Netherlands on June 5 in Amsterdam and take on defending World Cup champion Germany on June 10 in Cologne. These are two of the team's final three exhibitions before starting play in the Gold Cup on July 7 against Honduras. Eight of the players chosen have 10 or fewer international appearances for the U.S. team. "Playing against top teams like Germany and the Netherlands provides valuable experience, especially for the younger players here," Klinsmann said. "More and more they must understand we come to meet these opponents eye to eye. Obviously, it's a bit tricky when we are without some of our core players, but that creates a huge opportunity for the guys here to benchmark themselves against some of the best players in the world." Goalkeeper Brad Guzan returns to the team for the first time this year. He missed time in March because of the birth of his first child. Nick Rimando has started all five games this year. Klinsmann said these games will be important for Guzan because he will be the starter for the Gold Cup. Another notable part of the roster is that Jermaine Jones was listed as a midfielder after struggling on defense for his club team, the New England Revolution. "He's going to be back in midfield because of the fact that we have so many high-quality center backs," Klinsmann said. "With the discovery of Ventura Alvarado who won the CONCACAF Champions League with Club America, we think we have a very strong and stable backline and we don't need Jermaine in the center back role."

Blatter's FIFA future under intense scrutiny

LONDON (AP) — In the House of Commons, they're calling for Sepp Blatter's head. And even inside the FIFA president's own executive committee, there is the threat of resignation.

A new week has brought new turmoil for soccer's embattled 79-year-old president and his scandal-tainted governing body, which is in the midst of the worst corruption case in its 111-year history.

"For the good of the game, it is time for Sepp Blatter to go," British sports and culture secretary John Whittingdale told the House of Commons on Monday.

While the newly re-elected Blatter seems to be going nowhere despite the arrests and indictments of several soccer officials last week in Zurich, others are calling it quits or threatening to do so.

FIFA medical chief Michel D'Hooghe, the longest-serving member on the executive committee, said he would leave unless there were rapid reforms.

"I cannot reconcile myself with an institution where I work, where I have carried the medical responsibility for 27 years and about which I now learn that there is a lot of corruption," D'Hooghe told the VRT television network in Belgium.

"My conclusion is very clear: I will no longer continue to participate (in FIFA) under such conditions. So, it is high time for change to come and we will see over the coming days what may happen. Let's be clear, if this atmosphere prevails at FIFA, I have no place there."

D'Hooghe has served on FIFA's ruling body since 1988, a decade before Blatter's move up from secretary general to president.

"If you are faced with an abscess, simple medication does not suffice," D'Hooghe said. "You have to cut it open."

Heather Rabbatts went a step further and resigned from her post on the FIFA anti-discrimination task force.

That body, until last week, was chaired by Jeffrey Webb, who was suspended as a FIFA vice president and remains in custody in Switzerland along with six others after being arrested as part of the U.S. corruption investigation.

Rabbatts is also a director at the English Football Association, a long-standing critic of Blatter.

"Like many in the game I find it unacceptable that so little has been done to reform FIFA," she wrote in a letter to FIFA. "And it is clear from the re-election of President Blatter that the challenges facing FIFA and the ongoing damage to the reputation of football's world governing body are bound to continue to overshadow and undermine the credibility of any work in the anti-discrimination arena and beyond."

The corruption scandal crept closer to FIFA's Zurich headquarters when The New York Times reported late Monday that U.S. law enforcement officials believe the high-ranking FIFA member mentioned in the indictment as having made a $10-million payment central to the investigation was Blatter's right-hand man, Jerome Valcke.

The report cited unidentified officials who believe Valcke, FIFA's secretary general, transferred the money in 2008 to accounts controlled by Jack Warner, the former CONCACAF president and FIFA vice president. That payment was allegedly made in exchange for Warner and others having voted to give the 2010 World Cup to South Africa.

FIFA said the payment, which South African officials have said was meant to help with soccer development in the Caribbean, was authorized by the then-finance committee chairman, per FIFA regulations. The chairman, Julio Grondona, died last year.

The debate in Britain, where Blatter faces some of his harshest criticism, made its way to Parliament on Monday, and Whittingdale wasn't alone in his condemnation of the FIFA president.

Chris Bryant, the sports spokesman for the opposition Labour Party, said Blatter was a "tainted leader of a corrupt organization" who was re-elected because of "Mafioso cronyism."

FIFA on Monday provisionally banned another soccer official — CONCACAF General Secretary Enrique Sanz — as its ethics committee assesses evidence from the U.S. criminal investigation.

An unidentified co-conspirator listed in last week's indictment fit the description of Sanz' work history. Sanz, who has been battling leukemia, was placed on a leave of absence by CONCACAF on Thursday.

Soccer beats out baseball in game of US-Cuban detente

HAVANA (AP) — In a landmark act of sports diplomacy, soccer's New York Cosmos on Tuesday will become the first U.S. professional team to play in Cuba since Presidents Raul Castro and Barack Obama announced their countries would re-establish diplomatic relations.

Soccer's popularity is growing in both baseball-crazy nations and Cuban officials said the friendly match against the country's national team would be an important step in the normalization of the relationship between the U.S. and Cuba.

"In this new era that our two countries are living, this game is another link that will help establish the relations announced by the two presidents," said Antonio Garces, vice president of the Cuban Soccer Association.

While the two governments have yet to reopen embassies following the December announcement of detente, Havana has been flooded by a surge of U.S. tourists as well as delegations of lawmakers, business executives and athletes.

A group of retired NBA stars held a training camp for Cuban players in April, and Cuban officials have said a U.S. professional baseball exhibition game is planned for the near future, although Major League Baseball officials have said no plans have been made.

The Cosmos, who are leading the standings in the second-tier North American Soccer League, arrived Sunday night and trained Monday afternoon ahead of the next day's match at 30,000-seat Pedro Marrera stadium, which is to be televised nationally in Cuba.

"I'm happy that we came here to play soccer and unite two countries," Cosmos midfielder Walter Restrepo said. "The people have really welcomed us, with high expectations for the game."

Garnering much attention in Cuba were former Real Madrid star and current Cosmos player Raul Gonzalez and the team's honorary president Pele, the legendary Brazilian star who played for the original Cosmos franchise as his career was ending.

"I never imagined that Cuba against the Cosmos would happen. And to think Raul and Pele would come to Cuba, nobody thought that," fan Yosbani Fuentes said.

Asked about the bribery scandal that exploded last week in soccer's global governing body, Pele declined to criticize FIFA or its head, Sepp Blatter.

"We are players and we want to provide joy to the public and people. What happens with executives doesn't interest me," Pele said. "He's a man who has been there 25 years. You have to respect him."

While Cuba is far from a soccer powerhouse, the sport hasn't been spared the waves of departures that have robbed its teams of many top-ranked athletes. Forward Maykel Galindo left in 2005 and went on to play for several U.S. teams. Midfielder Osvaldo Alonso abandoned Cuba two years later and now plays in Seattle.

Cuba's relatively weak international soccer performance hasn't stopped the sport from spreading on the island, with growing numbers watching professionally games on television and playing on dusty fields and neighborhood streets.

Soccer is a people's sport that's gained a lot of popularity in recent years, in Cuba and the United States, and without a doubt it'll help tear down barriers and open doors," Garces said.

The last professional U.S. soccer team to visit Cuba was the now-defunct Chicago Sting, which played in 1978 after President Jimmy Carter sought to improve relations with Cuba and opened the interests section in Havana that both countries want to soon convert into a full embassy.
