Butler Twp. road levy still passed by 1 after recount

Staff Reports

LISBON — Butler Township's new road levy survived Thursday's recount by the Columbiana County Board of Elections. Elections board director Adam Booth reported the new 1.5-mill levy still passed by a single vote — 178 to 177 — following the recount, which included counting by hand the votes cast in one of the three precincts in the township. The levy passed by the same margin once all of the votes cast on election day, May 5, were counted, but the margin was small enough to trigger an automatic recount. Booth said the outcome of the hand count, which involved 131 ballots, matched the totals shown by the machine that scans and automatically tallies the paper ballots. He said all of the ballots were again run through the machine and the count matched the original tally. The levy takes effect in 2016 and will raise property taxes by $52 a year for the owner of a $100,000 home.

Students clean up downtown Leetonia

LEETONIA— The village is getting a little help with clean up. The Leetonia National Junior Honor Society recently picked up trash and weeded all of Main and Front streets, as well as parts of Chestnut and Walnut streets. A total of eight students participated in the project.

In addition to the junior NHS group, the high school football team will also be helping to clean up the village, although its attempt this week was postponed due to rain.

Team members plan to paint curbs, wash windows and possibly weed the tree bed on Front Street if time permits.

According to Ben Lynch, the village's community development coordinator, the partnership with the school is twofold— it shows that the district has pride in the its community and it improves the image of downtown.

The partnership also re-

Lynch also noted when people see that a school district is supportive and active in their community it makes the area more desirable in which to reside and also increases the possibilities of businesses to locate in the area.

Youngstown couple pleads guilty to torching mansion

Staff Reports

COLUMBIANA — A Youngstown couple has pleaded guilty to setting fire to the historic Firestone mansion in Beaver Township. Brian McKinney, 20, and Alexis Little, 20, pleaded guilty this week in Mahoning County Common Pleas Court to arson and vandalism, both felonies. They are scheduled to be sentenced on July 21, and the county prosecutor's office is recommending they be sentenced to five years probation, with the first six months to be served in the county jail. The couple admitted to setting the Oct. 21 fire that destroyed the mansion, which was built in 1880 and was in the process of being renovated. The eight-bedroom house is next to the Firestone tire-testing facility and built by the Lower family, who were relatives of Harvey Firestone. The vandalism charge had to do with the couple spray-painting a part of the Old Mill at Mill Creek Park several days following the fire, according to other published reports.

Former US House Speaker Hastert accused of evading banking laws

CHICAGO (AP) — Former U.S. House Speaker Dennis Hastert agreed to pay $3.5 million in hush money to keep an unidentified person silent about "prior misconduct" by the Illinois Republican who was once second in line to the U.S. presidency, according to a federal grand jury indictment handed down on Thursday in Chicago.

The indictment, which does not describe the misconduct Hastert was allegedly trying to conceal, charges the 73-year-old with one count of evading bank regulations as he withdrew tens of thousands of dollars at a time to make the payments. He is also charged with one count of lying to the FBI about the reason for the unusual bank withdrawals.

Each count of the indictment carries a maximum penalty of 5 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

Hastert, who had worked as a lobbyist in Washington, D.C., since shortly after he left Congress in 2007, resigned from the law firm of Dickstein Shapiro LLC, a spokesman for the lobbying group said Thursday.

The firm's website had described Hastert as a "featured attorney" as late as Thursday afternoon, but his contact details appeared to have been removed from the website hours later. Firm spokesman Jason Huntsman did not have further details.

In contrast to the failures of Iraqi army, Kurdish fighters on march against IS BEIRUT (AP) — In contrast to the Iraqi army's failures, Kurdish fighters in Syria are on the march against the Islamic State group, capturing towns and villages in an oil-rich swath of the country's northeast under the cover of U.S.-led airstrikes.

As the Kurds close in on Tel Abyad, a major commercial center on the Turkish border, their advance highlights the decisive importance of combining airstrikes with the presence of a cohesive and motivated ally on the ground — so clearly absent in Iraq.

In Syria, a country now split mostly between al-Qaida-style militants and forces loyal to President Bashar Assad, the U.S. has found a reliable partner in the country's main Kurdish fighting force, known as the YPG. They are moderate, mostly secular fighters, driven by revolutionary fervor and deep conviction in their cause.

Since the beginning of May, they have wrested back more than 200 Kurdish and Christian towns in northeastern Syria, as well as strategic mountains seized earlier by IS. Along the way, they have picked up ammunition, weapons and vehicles left behind by Islamic State fighters.

The push has gotten them closer to Tel Abyad, a major avenue for commerce for the extremist group through which it smuggles foreign fighters and sells black-market oil to help fund its conquests. The city is also a key link between Turkey and the northern Syrian city of Raqqa, the Islamic State group's de-facto capital in its self-declared caliphate.

CDC investigating error that caused live anthrax shipments from Utah site

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Army's top general said Thursday that human error probably was not a factor in the Army's mistaken shipment of live anthrax samples from a chemical weapons testing site that was opened more than 70 years ago in a desolate stretch of desert in Utah.

Samples from the anthrax lot ended up at 18 labs in nine states and an Army lab in South Korea, leading more than two dozen people to get treatment for possible exposure.

Gen. Ray Odierno, the Army chief of staff, told reporters the problem may have been a failure in the technical process of killing, or inactivating, anthrax samples. Odierno said the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention is investigating what went wrong at Dugway Proving Ground, the Army installation in Utah where the anthrax originated.

Officials said the government labs that received the suspect anthrax were at the Army's Edgewood Chemical Biological Center in Maryland and the Naval Surface Warfare Center in Virginia. The rest were commercial labs, which the Pentagon has declined to identify, citing legal constraints.

The general said he was not aware that such a problem had surfaced previously at Dugway.

"The best I can tell, it was not human error," he said, adding that normal procedures had been followed.

The Pentagon disclosed on Wednesday that at least one of nine labs in the U.S. that received anthrax from Dugway got live rather than dead bacteria. It has not identified any of the U.S. laboratories by name but said they are in nine states: Texas, Maryland, Wisconsin, Delaware, New Jersey, Tennessee, New York, California and Virginia.

Lucrative stints as corporate director, adviser earned Jeb Bush millions

WASHINGTON (AP) — During his transition from Florida governor to likely presidential candidate, Jeb Bush served on the boards of or as an adviser to at least 15 companies and nonprofits, a dizzying array of corporate connections that earned him millions of dollars and occasional headaches.

Bush returned to corporate America after leaving the governor's mansion in early 2007, and his industry portfolio expanded steadily until he began shedding ties late last year to prepare a run for president.

Executives who worked alongside Bush describe him as an engaged adviser with an eye for detail. Yet experts question how anyone could serve so many boards at once effectively.

"Board of directors and advisory boards are in charge of high-level oversight," said law professor Elizabeth Nowicki, a former Securities and Exchange Commission lawyer. "You cannot possibly do that simultaneously for 10 or 15 entities."

Demi Lovato discusses bipolar disorder as face of mental health for Be Vocal

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When Demi Lovato was diagnosed with bipolar disorder, she was actually relieved.

"Growing up, I felt very, very depressed," she said. "Even though I was playing concerts and living out my dream, I couldn't tell you why I was upset."

After a family intervention, she sought treatment and learned she has a mental illness.

"I remember smiling and thinking great, OK, so there's not anything wrong with me as a person," she said in a recent interview. "It's actually just a condition that I have and I can do something to fix it. I don't have to be like this forever."

Lovato is sharing her story and encouraging others to do the same through Be Vocal: Speak Up For Mental Health, an initiative launched Thursday by a pharmaceutical company, the National Alliance on Mental Illness and other mental-health advocacy groups. Its aim is to improve treatment options at all levels and erase the stigma around mental illnesses.

EL man gets probation for concealed weapon charge

By DEANNE JOHNSON
Staff Writer

LISBON — A man who previously pleaded to carrying a concealed weapon for an antique gun in his vehicle was placed on four years probation by Columbiana County Common Pleas Court Judge Scott Washam.

Vance L. Gray, 52, Densmore Avenue, East Liverpool, had a "very, very, small, antique revolver" in the center console of his vehicle, according to his defense attorney Kelly Linger. She added that Gray said the gun was inoperable and as a gun enthusiast he was taking it to be turned into a belt buckle.

Washam voiced his concerns about a prior misdemeanor conviction, for carrying a concealed weapon in 2006.

Gray said that charge involved a weapon he had while he was working security as a bouncer and he has retired from that line of work.

Washam agreed with the felony plea agreement recommendation of Assistant County Prosecutor Ryan Weikart for four years probation for the fourth-degree felony charge. Gray will serve a 60-day house arrest with allowance for going to work and to take his mother to her scheduled medical appointments. He was ordered to perform 100 hours of community service. The gun was ordered to be destroyed.

Distracted driving ban needs teeth

"Distracted driving" by those using cell phones — often for texting or other activities requiring them to take one or both hands off the wheel — causes a substantial number of traffic accidents. Ohio has a law against it, but it has done little to curb the problem.

Current law makes texting while driving a misdemeanor crime in the Buckeye State. But police cannot pull motorists over solely for engaging in the practice. Some other offense has to be the trigger, or primary reason for a traffic stop.

Just 114 citations have been issued under the law this year, according to a published report.

Many states already have statutes allowing police to pull over and ticket distracted drivers solely on the strength of spotting them misusing their cell phones. Three Ohio lawmakers have introduced bills to put the Buckeye State on the list.

Reportedly, most legislators are not eager to act on any of the measures. They should be. Cracking down on distracted drivers may be viewed by some as a matter of politics — upsetting voters.

More important is the effect a better state law would have on discouraging motorists from misusing cell phones, if necessary through arrests and fines.

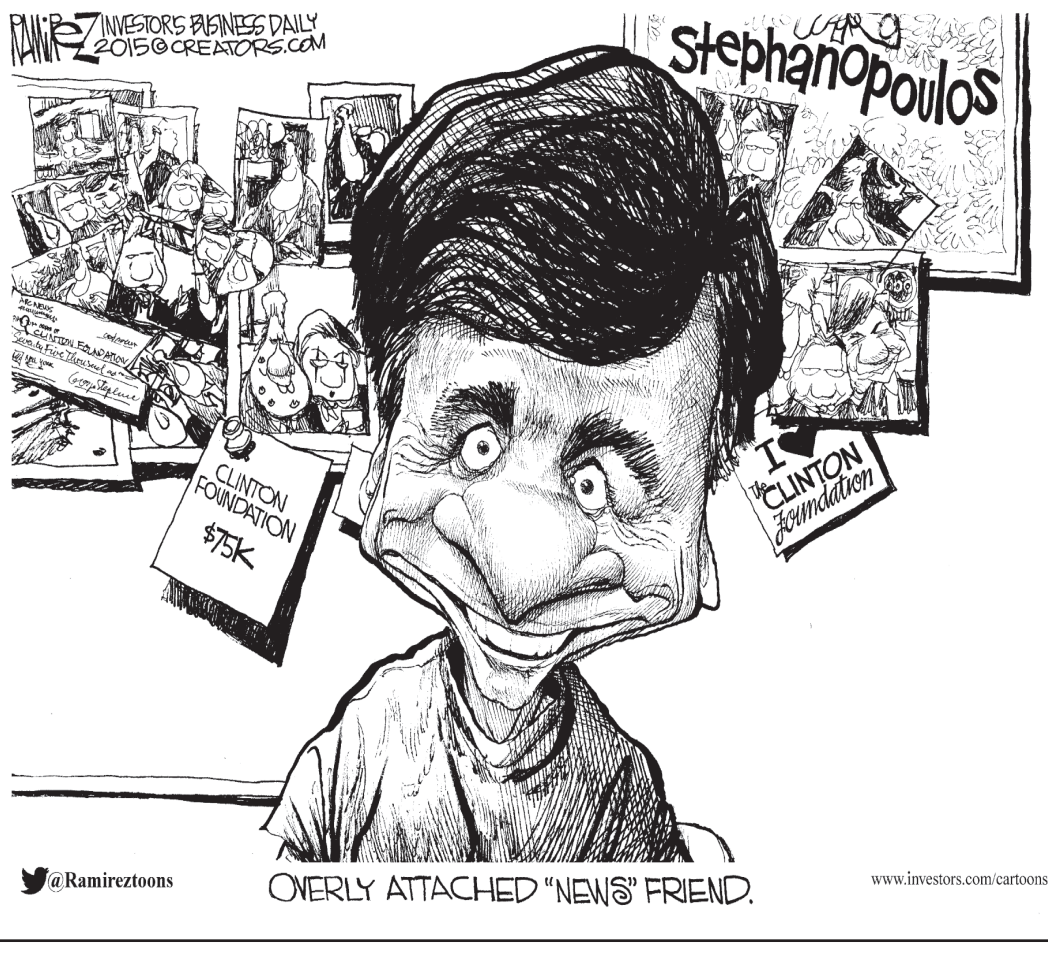

Banning all use of cell phones by motorists would be impractical and unnecessary. "Hands-free" equipment allows use of the devices to make and answer calls safely. It should be permitted.

But making misuse a primary offense with stiff fines — one bill calls for $100 on the first offense and $300 thereafter — could make a real difference. It could save lives.

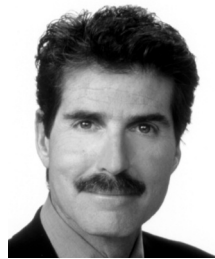

Ohio legislators should adopt a distracted driving bill with real teeth. They should not delay in doing so.

Hello, 2015 grads: Just don't go

JOHN STOSSELL

It's graduation time! Have we learned much? No. College has become a scam.

Some students benefit: those with full scholarships and/or rich parents so they don't go deep into debt, those who love learning for its own sake and land jobs in academia and those who get jobs that require a college credential.

But that's not most students.

Half today's recent grads work in jobs that don't require degrees. Eighty thousand of America's bartenders have bachelor's degrees.

Politicians such as Hillary Clinton promote college by claiming that over a lifetime, college graduates "earn $1 million more." That statistic is true but utterly misleading. People who go to college are different. They're more likely to have been raised by two parents. They did better in high school. They'd make more money even if they never went go to college.

Economist Bryan Caplan argues that there isn't much evidence that college grads are paid more because they learned anything at college that is valuable to their jobs.

Getting into elite universities and graduating from them is mostly a "signaling" device, he says. It tells employers you're a smart person, so employers can begin teaching you things you really need to know. Employers, not the colleges, turn out to be the ones making students valuable contributors. This suggests college is more like a hurdle than an investment. It would be better if companies found cheaper ways to screen for talent than four years of college.

Most of America's prestigious universities started out as training centers for the priesthood and ways of confirming your status as part of the upper crust. In many cases, that's still true today. Taxpayers shouldn't be forced to subsidize that. But we are.

Now President Obama proposes spending more of your money on "free community college." Senator and presidential candidate Bernie Sanders goes further, proposing "free tuition" at four-year public colleges.

Of course, "free" just means taxpayers are forced to pay.

This is nuts. When government subsidizes services, people supplying those services get wasteful. Colleges now spend millions on manicured lawns and fancy gyms.

A University of Missouri admissions officer bragged to my TV show crew about the university's "day spa" and said when it comes to recruiting students, "more important than reading, writing and arithmetic" is giving "our Tigers spring break every time they step into the student recreation complex."

I'm happy that Missouri's students like their luxurious gym, but I don't want to help pay for it. If the school thinks its "day spa" is crucial for recruiting, let them sucker their own alumni into making voluntary contributions for it. Leave taxpayers alone.

Government subsidies encourage students who don't belong in college to go anyway. Many don't graduate, feel bad about themselves and end up deep in debt. The subsidies also invite schools to increase the cost of tuition.

Democrats complained we need Obamacare because health care costs "were skyrocketing." But while the cost of health care rose 296 percent over the past 30 years, college tuition rose 553 percent. College is now a grotesque spending bubble, funded by government, that's about to burst.

Law professor Glenn Reynolds, author of "The Education Apocalypse," writes, "The rapid increase in college tuition began just about exactly the time the federal government started helping to subsidize college ... (Y)ou don't want to engage in subsidies that make universities more bloated and more inefficient."

But that's what Obama and Sanders propose to do.

A more compassionate move would be to warn people that college is not as valuable as colleges advertise themselves to be.

PayPal co-founder Peter Thiel encourages students to escape the college trap by paying them $100,000 not to go to college and instead to found their own capitalist ventures.

If we really want to build a better future and not just keep going through the same old motions, experiments like that are a much smarter idea than throwing more money at the college bubble.

OTHER VOICES

Northeast Ohio Media Group, May 22

... Getting most voters to buy into the argument that judges are underpaid is about as difficult as convincing them their taxes are too low. A great many believe judges earn salaries that are scandalously high.

But the voters who think that are wrong. In fact, it's not hard to make the case that low judicial pay might very well be affecting the quality of justice in Ohio.

... Elected judges in Ohio have gone more than seven years without a raise. Gov. John Kasich's budget included a raise of 5 percent annually for four years, but the House — burned last year when it passed a pay raise bill and the Senate refused to concur — removed the provision.

... The $121,350 salary of a Common Pleas judge is below that of his counterparts in every state that borders Ohio. It's $52,000 less than what trial court judges earn in Pennsylvania and nearly $66,000 less than judges in Illinois.

Ohio's appellate court judges ($132,000) rank 32nd nationally in pay, and Ohio's Supreme Court judges ($141,600) rank 39th. An Ohio Supreme Court judge earns about a third — in some cases far less — of the salary paid partners in large law firms...

Political speech: The separation of campaign and state

GEORGE WILL

would suffice. Instead, campaign finance reformers, horrified by the predictable results of their handiwork, aspire to yet more regulatory wrinkles to limit political speech. These, too, would have consequences unintended and undesired by reformers, "requiring" a new round of reforms. But the Constitution, properly construed, requires a wall of separation between campaign and state.

Reformers detest the emergence of super PACs that fund advocacy supportive of, but not "coordinated" with, particular candidates. These vast reservoirs of money are, however, inevitable, reasonable and, on balance, wholesome responses to the reformers' attempts to combat what they call "too much money" in politics. Reformers have limited the amounts that can be contributed to parties and to candidates' campaigns, thereby limiting the quantity of political advocacy — aka speech.

To the surprise of no one familiar with political hydrology, money has flowed through crevices in our (fortunately) still porous society, into super PACs. Most political money funds the dissemination of political advocacy to influence elections, and Americans continue to exasperate reformers by finding new ways to speak about politics.

Reformers regret super PACs as a source of "outside" money. Greg Weiner asks: Outside of what? Weiner, an Assumption College political scientist, wonders: Who decreed that campaigns are the private property of the two parties and their candidates? Today, parties and candidates welcome supportive super PACs as a necessity, given the reformers' regulatory regime. But parties and candidates would prefer to receive the money that goes to the super PACs, which can frustrate the parties' and candidates' desires to control America's political conversation.

Super PACs can annoy parties by enabling inconvenient candidates to compete in primaries and can annoy even candidates they favor by forcing certain issues into the campaign dialogue. So, Weiner argues, super PACs are new devices that actually restore something old — an era when "campaigns were communicative free-for-alls rather than regulated, top-down affairs." The First Amendment, which takes no cognizance of parties or candidates, hardly supports making them privileged, semi-exclusive conduits of the political conversations.

Reformers who resent the existence of super PACs, and the reformers' critics who oppose the reformers' regulations of politics that have made super PACs necessary, should ponder Bradley A. Smith's "Separation of Campaign and State" in The George Washington Law Review of November 2013. He argues not just that the quality of America's civic conversation would be improved by the deregulation of politics but also that the Constitution requires this because it contains no enumerated power authorizing Congress to regulate campaigning.

The Constitution speaks only of Congress' power to regulate the "time, place and manner" of elections. Congress has justified the regulation of political speech by conflating what Smith rightly says are two quite different things — campaigns and elections. Campaigns consist of speech and other activities to persuade the public to register particular decisions in elections. Elections are the formal processes by which those decisions are recorded.

The regulation of the quantity, content and timing of political speech is clearly unrelated to regulating an election's "time" or "place." Can Congress, however, wring an implied power to regulate political speech from the enumerated power to regulate the "manner" of elections? No.

The "manner" of an election includes modalities such as the keeping of voter lists, designating polling places and counting votes. The Constitutional Convention's discussion of the times, places and manner clause, Smith notes, "revolved entirely around election administration" and referred "not at all to the process of seeking to persuade citizens to vote in one way or another."

"There is," he says, "no 'on' or 'off' switch on American politics"; campaigning is constant. Elections are occasional, discrete episodes. And "the fact that 'manner' was combined with 'times' and 'places' in the Constitution further suggests that it refers to the details of carrying out the formal process of voting." Listen, Smith says, to the logic of our language. "We do not talk about candidates making 'election stops' as they travel the country talking to voters, but rather 'campaign stops.' ... We have a 'campaign,' at the conclusion of which voters cast ballots on 'election day.'"

The phrase "a wall of separation between church and state" is from Thomas Jefferson, not the Constitution. But, says Smith, the metaphor's aptness "flows from the document's structure and purpose." So does the propriety of a wall between campaigns and government: It is simply impermissible for the government to regulate the debate that determines if the party controlling this or that portion of the government will retain control.

BUSINESS HIGHLIGHTS

Shrinking IQ economy isn't cause for fear
 WASHINGTON (AP) — Another first quarter of the year. Another reversal for the U.S. economy. Another expectation of a rebound to come.
 On Friday, the government will likely estimate that the economy shrank in the January-March quarter for a second straight year, depressed by brutal weather, a reeling energy sector and an export slump caused by a higher-valued dollar.

Yet few will see any cause for panic. Steady job gains are widely expected to propel modestly healthy growth for the rest of 2015. A harsh winter is gone. So is a labor dispute that slowed trade at West Coast ports. Home sales and construction are rebounding. Business investment is picking up.

Many economists also suspect that the government's calculations have tended to underestimate growth in the first quarter of each year.

Some sectors of the economy do remain subpar. Energy drillers, for example, have been damaged by persistently low energy prices and are still cutting jobs and slowing production. The rise in the dollar is still making U.S. manufactured goods pricier overseas.

Google unveils Android's latest tricks

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Google's next version of its Android operating system will boast new ways to fetch information, pay merchants and protect privacy on mobile devices as the Internet company duels with Apple in the quest to make their technology indispensable.

The upgrade will give Android's personal assistant, Google Now, expanded powers of intuition that may be greeted as a great convenience to some and a tad too creepy for others.

FCC head unveils Internet access plan

NEW YORK (AP) — The head of the Federal Communications Commission is proposing that the government agency expand a phone subsidy program for the poor to include Internet access.

The FCC Chairman Tom Wheeler, has emphasized that Internet access is a critical component of modern life, key education, communication and finding a keeping a job.

With the net neutrality rules released earlier this year, the agency redefined broadband as a public utility, like the telephone, giving it stricter oversight on how online content gets to consumers. That triggered lawsuits from Internet service providers.

Avago to grow with deal for Broadcom

NEW YORK (AP) — Avago Technologies is buying rival chipmaker Broadcom in a cash and stock deal worth about $37 billion, vastly expanding its lineup of products for the rapidly growing wireless device market at a time when sales growth has otherwise been tough to come by for smaller chipmakers.

Hock Tan, Avago's president and chief executive, says that the deal will make his company the third largest semiconductor maker in terms of revenue and give it the most diversified communications platform in the industry, adding that there is very little overlap between Avago and Broadcom's products.

Jobless aid applications rose last week

WASHINGTON (AP) — More Americans sought unemployment benefits last week, though the overall level remains low and points to a healthy job market.

Weekly applications increased 7,000 to a seasonally adjusted 282,000, the Labor Department said Thursday. The four-week average, a less volatile measure, rose 5,000 to 271,500. The average had fallen to a 15-year low two weeks ago.

Applications are a proxy for layoffs. They have remained below 300,000, a historically low number, for 12 weeks. That suggests Americans are experiencing solid job security. It also indicates that employers are confident enough in the economic outlook to hold onto their staffs.

Average rate on 30-year mortgage rises

WASHINGTON (AP) — Average long-term U.S. mortgage rates rose this week to their highest level so far this year as new data showed strength in the housing market.

Mortgage giant Freddie Mac said Thursday the average rate on a 30-year fixed-rate mortgage increased to 3.87 percent from 3.84 percent a week earlier. The rate on 15-year fixed-rate mortgages advanced to 3.11 percent from 3.05 percent.

Rates have risen in recent weeks amid signs of improvement in the economy.

Study shows how 11 US cities stack up

NEW YORK (AP) — Renters are on the rise in America's biggest cities, but many tenants are scrambling to keep up with growing rent bills and shrinking vacancies, according to a study released Thursday.

From Boston to Miami, New York to Los Angeles, more than half of tenants are paying what experts consider unaffordable rents, says a report by New York University's Furman Center, which studies real estate and urban policy, and bank Capital One, which is a leading affordable-housing lender and financed the research.

Madoff accountant sentenced to detention

NEW YORK (AP) — A former accountant who certified fake financial records hiding Bernard Madoff's epic Ponzi scheme was sentenced on Thursday to one year of home confinement, becoming the latest defendant to avoid prison by cooperating in the case.

David Friehling had agreed to cooperate almost immediately after the financial fraud — one of the largest in U.S. history — was exposed in 2008. Last year, he testified for several days against five of the firm's insiders before a jury found them guilty of participating in the scheme.

Teva to pay $1.2B in drug-delay settlement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal regulators announced Thursday that Teva Pharmaceuticals Industries will pay $1.2 billion to settle charges that one of its subsidiaries illegally blocked the launch of low-cost generic versions of the blockbuster sleeping pill Provigil.

The settlement is a major victory in the federal government's ongoing campaign against a common drug industry practice known as "pay-for-delay" deals. Drugmakers have long maintained that the deals help resolve costly patent litigation between branded drugmakers and their generic competitors. But Federal Trade Commission officials have argued for over a decade that the agreements keep cheaper forms of medicines off the market, driving up costs for consumers and the U.S. health system.

Gambling market saturated, yet casinos keep on coming

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The casino market in the northeastern United States is saturated, yet that's not stopping some states from approving gambling legislation and companies from building new gambling halls.

That's the consensus of participants at a major casino conference in Atlantic City.

Eugene Johnson, of Spectrum Gaming Group, says by the end of this year, there will be 60 casinos in the northeast. That figure will grow to 65 by 2018, according to his colleague, Joe Weinert.

"There's not a politician in the land who is going to choose a tax increase when gaming looks so good on paper," said Wendy Hamilton, general manager of Philadelphia's Sugar-House casino. "We have to avoid the siren song. There's not a fly code in the region that doesn't have four or five (gambling) options within an hour."

Asked if casino closings outside New Jersey are likely, she said nothing appears imminent, but "of course it's going to happen" if expansion continues at its current pace.

"Pennsylvania doesn't care what happens to New Jersey, and New York doesn't care what happens to Pennsylvania," she said. "It just can't go on forever. There's a finite amount of gaming revenue out there. We are in a very volatile time and we're in a frenzy of gaming expansion. It needs to stop."

Ed Sutor, president of Dover Downs casino in Delaware, said the entire mid-Atlantic region saw decreasing revenue in the first quarter of this year.

"New Jersey, Delaware, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Maryland — the entire market is down," he said. "That is, friends, saturation. You're just moving money around. You bring in a new operator and the money just moves around and the entire market doesn't go up."

Sutor noted his state is considering adding three more casinos, which he said "makes no sense."

Atlantic City has lost half its casino revenue and thousands of jobs to competition from Pennsylvania, which is now under pressure from casinos in Ohio and Maryland, said William Ryan Jr. chairman of the Pennsylvania Gaming Control Board.

"We in Pennsylvania know the competition we now confront will always be there, and the days of double digit growth in that area are probably gone," he said.

More casinos are planned soon for Philadelphia, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Maryland and New York. Hamilton noted that a planned second Philadelphia casino is being appealed to the state Supreme Court.

"There's a lot of competition right now," she said. "If you look at the entire mid-Atlantic region, you've got people really hammering each other to win people over. There's not $400 million in new money in that market. There's just not. We're keeping a wary eye on what's coming down the road; it's a scary situation."

New Jersey is considering allowing a casino in the Meadowlands, and possibly a second one in Jersey City, both just outside New York City.

"We're at a point where we're just moving money around," said Chris Brown, a New Jersey state senator from near Atlantic City, who opposes a plan to extend casino gambling to other parts of the state. "All you're doing is cannibalizing the market you already have."

War and Peace Sky

The second difficult square of the week features Mercury in Gemini and Neptune in Pisces. People have a way of saying the exact thing that could most trigger deep unrest in another. They don't even have to try. Countering this aspect is the peaceful Libra moon. When you feel your fist clenching, tap into the Libra moon and let it go.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Maybe you feel like you've let yourself down recently, but the cause of underperformance may well be a lack of self-love. How could you better appreciate yourself? Give yourself attention because you need it to thrive.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You know that area you're weak in? Well, guess what. You're not really weak in that area at all -- you're just inexperienced. Get more practice, and you'll grow rapidly.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Your entire being cannot be captured in one snapshot. For this reason, you don't have to worry about how you're viewed by others. Most people only see a very small part of you anyway.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Befriend time. Settle into the belief that everything is happening in the moment that it should. Rushing or pushing, even if you are running late, will not get you where you're supposed to be any faster.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You may feel like you're being punished, and probably the disciplinarian is a voice inside your head. Try not to think of things in terms of bad or good. So you made a choice that didn't work. Choose again.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You are drawn to objects that help you appreciate time's natural process. Such objects are records of the sun, wind, rain, temperature and human wear. They remind you of the fragility and the strength inside you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You have a honed aesthetic. You don't follow the conventions of good taste, even though you know what those conventions are. The irregularity that happens by chance or accident will be especially beautiful to you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You influence the people you believe in, perhaps without even trying to. You know they can accomplish great things, and your belief in them helps to make this come true.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Your acts of caring do not only affect the people and animals close to you. They are part of what brings your whole community closer. You'll never know how you've contributed to the world by making one person happy.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Follow through in full confidence. You are capable, efficient and effective. Believe and act on what you believe. You'll be on sure footing every step of the way. You've got this one.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). The work at hand will help you to develop your identity. So dive in, even if you suspect the job is not a perfect fit for you. You'll learn about yourself in the process, and that's what's important.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Is it love or not? To determine this, it might help you to think of love as an action, not a feeling. When you do, it suddenly will be obvious who loves whom.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (May 29). Your world will grow, but don't worry -- your influence will, too. New projects beckon you in June. Apply what you learned (to prove that you learned it), and you'll have a round of beginner's luck. Making money inspires you to make more in July. September brings sparkling new relationships and peace to those who were ailing. Aries and Libra people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 2, 49, 3, 21 and 15.

WEEKEND LOVE FORECAST: ARIES: It's more attractive to talk and move slowly than quickly. TAURUS: Your honesty is not only refreshing to those around you; it is also a powerful force that guides and simplifies your life. GEMINI: All signs point to you taking a chance. CANCER: Those who play among the stars risk the longest freefall. LEO: You can't force yourself to feel. When the inner conditions are right, the emotions flow freely. VIRGO: You go with your whole heart or nothing at all. Half-heartedness can't touch the splendor. LIBRA: Despite your resolution, someone keeps drawing you back. SCORPIO: Do you like the feeling of infatuation or hate having a crush? You'll find out this weekend. SAGITTARIUS: Don't stay with someone whose selfishness is undeniable and bottomless. CAPRICORN: You'll wonder whether you really do fit with someone and will get answers in the way you come together this weekend. AQUARIUS: You'll brilliantly balance the responsibilities you have to yourself and those you have to the people you care about. PISCES: Limbo is a place everyone has to visit at one time or another, but it's no place to stay.

Quelling the smell

Heloise

Dear Heloise: I got a wonderful DRESSER from a neighbor. We did not smell any cigarette smoke when we received it. We painted it and put the drawers back in. Now all we smell is a musty, yucky cigarette smell. I have used charcoal, vinegar, baking soda, sunlight, dryer sheets and soap. I am desperate. I don't want to get rid of the dresser. Please help! -- K.G., via email

Hmmm. You seem to have tried the usual items that I would suggest. First, a question: Did you paint the inside of the dresser and the drawers? If not, then the exposed wood is where the smell probably is coming from. Do go back to the vinegar, but you need to wipe down all surfaces; placing a bowl of vinegar, baking soda or charcoal in the dresser is not going to kill the odor. Also, many of the odor-removing sprays for fabric do neutralize odors, so you can give that a try. The important thing to keep in mind is that you must apply the vinegar (full strength will not hurt) to all of the surfaces, including the bottom. Do this several times, allowing the wood to dry completely between applications. If you want to do a Heloise test, use vinegar on one drawer, fabric spray on another and see which works better.

When done, try another coat of paint, and use a sealer. Hopefully this will banish that smell. Last resort? Try to mask the smell. Put some cologne or perfume on a paper towel, wipe it on the wood and let dry. It's worth a shot. I'd do it -- what do you have to lose? Good luck! -- Heloise

TRAVEL HINT

Heloise: I used to text my husband the parking-space number at the airport garage whenever I traveled. Now with a smartphone, I send a photo of the back of my car, showing license-plate and spot number, plus a photo of the parking ticket. I hope never to need him to pick up my car, but if he does, he will have the location and the parking fee at his fingertips. -- Linda in Houston

Good hint! This also helps YOU find the car when you get back. -- Heloise

MONTHLY CLEANING CHECKLIST

Dear Heloise: I still prefer to use a day planner. In mine, there is a note section that has lined pages of paper. I made one into a monthly cleaning checklist. I wrote down the tasks like changing air filters, cleaning the oven, etc. I drew lines to divide the rest of the page into boxes for the months. Now I have a list of monthly chores, and I never forget what I need to do. -- Nina in Alabama

SCHOOL ZONES

Dear Heloise: Regarding the question about where school zones end, there usually is another speed-limit sign posted where the school zone ends and the normal speed limit resumes. -- Peggy in San Angelo, Texas

Politics plus profanity choke family dinners

DEAR ABBY: My sister-in-law and her live-in boyfriend, "Bud," get together with us for dinner and outings. We enjoy each other's company, but over the last couple of years he has been making disparaging remarks on the subject of politics. We do not belong to the same political party, and his remarks make our blood boil.

Bud knows we belong to the other party, but continues his barrage peppered with profanity. It's impossible to have an intelligent debate with him before the cursing starts spewing out. A difference of opinion is tolerated, but when it's laced with profanity it becomes hard to swallow. My husband feels the same way.

I would tell Bud to head south as far as he can go, were it not for my sister-in-law's feelings. (She's pretty close to my husband.) I thought it better not to say anything during these dressing-downs, but I don't know how much longer I can keep my mouth shut without blasting him. How should I handle this? -- READY TO BLOW IN IDAHO

DEAR READY TO BLOW: You and your husband should pick up the phone and call your sister-in-law. Tell her that as much as you love her and Bud, the political discussions have gotten out of hand, and therefore, there will be NO MORE discussions about politics when you get together. Period. If Bud starts in, your husband should not take the bait. You are both to say, "We'll never agree on this, so let's change the subject."

DEAR ABBY: After 12 years of marriage, my husband and I finally have our first child, a little girl. Yes, I was very happy to have a child on the way, but I was also very depressed. My OB/GYN had to put me on anti-depression medication for it. I felt that only family should know and, while I was pregnant, my husband went along with it.

But now, if someone asks about my pregnancy or jokes about us having a second child, he will tell them he's not sure because during my pregnancy I was depressed. When I ask him please not to tell people about it, he says, "Why not? You have nothing to be ashamed of." How can I get him to understand that for me, it's not about shame but PRIVACY? -- NEW MOM IN LOUISIANA

DEAR NEW MOM: While I agree that depression is nothing to be ashamed of, I also agree with you that some things should be kept private -- and your medical history is one of them. Perhaps your husband would understand if you analogize it with a man using Viagra. While he might use the little blue pill with abandon, many men would prefer folks to assume they didn't need the pharmaceutical assistance.

Dealing with blood iron overload

DEAR DR. ROACH: I'm a 59-year-old Caucasian woman. My iron level was tested, at my request, during my recent annual physical. The results showed that both my iron and iron saturation were high. My physician ordered a ferritin level and a hereditary hemochromatosis DNA test. The ferritin came back normal, but the hereditary hemochromatosis DNA test came back indicating that "two copies of H63D mutation were identified." My doctor was uncertain about these results, so he consulted with my gastroenterologist, who said, "If her ferritin is normal, she does not have hemochromatosis." This still left me with no action plan as to what to do about having too much iron. So, I decided to see a liver specialist just to be certain about whether I have an issue that needs to be addressed. In the meantime, I gave blood, and the next day I felt like a million bucks. -- A.

ANSWER: Hereditary hemochromatosis is a genetic condition in which iron is absorbed at too high a rate, even when iron levels are normal. Based on the genetic test, you have two abnormal copies of the gene, but because you don't have iron overload (the ferritin is the best test for iron overload), you are unlikely to develop any problems. The abnormal gene mutation you have two copies of, the H63D, confers a lower risk than the more severe genetic abnormality C282Y. Only about 1 percent of women with your genes will have iron overload, versus 50 percent of women (and 85 percent of men) with two copies of C282Y. Women tend to develop symptoms of iron overload later in life than men do, since they are partially protected by menstrual blood loss. However, premenopausal women can develop iron overload, especially those with the C282Y mutations. Donating blood periodically is fine; since your iron levels are slightly high, you will help others and might also help yourself by donating.

DEAR DR. ROACH: I was diagnosed with papillary thyroid cancer, and after surgery, my doctor wants me to take a higher dose of replacement thyroid hormone. I am confused, because all the lab tests are normal. Why a higher dose? -- M.V.

ANSWER: After thyroid cancer surgery, the entire thyroid usually is removed, so the body needs replacement hormones. However, we like to slightly suppress the hormone TSH, which is the pituitary hormone that stimulates the thyroid gland ("TSH" stands for stimulating hormone"). The hope is that with less TSH, there will be fewer stimuli for growth, just in case there are any cancer cells left after surgery. The thyroid replacement dose needs to be only very slightly adjusted and should not cause noticeable symptoms of excess thyroid levels.

DEAR DR. ROACH: What is the problem if a person eats ice regularly? I read once that it might be a deficiency in a vitamin or something else? -- J.T.

Farmer's Trust Co. aids SRMC effort for cancer care center

SALEM — The Salem Regional Medical Center (SRMC) Foundation has announced that Farmer's Trust Company has joined SRMC in the fight against cancer with a meaningful donation to the Foundation's "Community Champions - Expanding Cancer Care Together" capital campaign.

The generous donation from Farmers Trust Company will be used to support SRMC's efforts to expand local access to state-of-the-art cancer care through its oncology services expansion. Scheduled to open this coming fall, SRMC's new cancer treatment center will offer a healing and welcoming environment, while providing advanced service to support cancer patients and their families.

"Farmer's Trust Company is proud to partner with Salem Regional Medical Center to bring expanded cancer care to the area. There are many community members who have had their lives touched by cancer, and we do this in their honor," stated Joseph DePascale, President of Farmers Trust Co. "This donation is our way of helping to fight the battle against cancer, right here in our local area."

Lisa Long, director of development at SRMC, expressed how thankful the hospital is for support from local businesses and members of the community. "Farmers Trust Company has a history of supporting our Foundation's fundraising efforts. We are incredibly humbled by their continued support."

Blue Ribbon Digs

The Beautification Committee of the Salem Area Chamber of Commerce is recognizing Joe Mong of Mong Enterprises for the restoration work done to the house on the corner of Fifth Street and North Lincoln Avenue, as it has been restored to its original Victorian splendor. Because of Mong's interest in Salem's restoration and the beautification committee's "Planting Pride ... City Wide," the beautification committee selected this North Lincoln Avenue residence as the recipient of the initial 2015 Yard of the Month, "Blue Ribbon Digs" Award. Pictured are Mong and Beautification Committee volunteer Isabel Huber. (Submitted photo)

Downtown cleanup

The Mahoning County Training Association's youth workers, led by Susie Aikens, worked on May 19 and 20 with the Salem Beautification Committee (SBC). "They spent approximately five hours both days, weeding, trimming, edging and spreading mulch in various areas throughout the downtown," said Karen Carter, SBC co-chairman. "They did a great job. They helped us out by working to clean up several places that we did not have time to do during our clean-up day in April. The youth were accompanied by their leaders and they assisted them with the workload. We gratefully acknowledge their help and appreciate their time and dedicated efforts," she said. Pictured are, from left, Jordan Lipscomb, Melissa Scyoc, Susan Bratt, Kent intern; Elizabeth Pruder, career consultant; Shayna Jarvis, Aikens, youth services coordinator; and Chrissy Valentine. Census: No. on assistance may be leveling off

WASHINGTON (AP) — The once-increasing number of Americans getting some kind of public assistance from the U.S. government may be slowing down, according to new information from the U.S. Census Bureau.

Approximately 52.2 million Americans — or 21.3 percent — participated in one or more of six poverty assistance programs on average each month in 2012, a new Census report released Thursday said. Although higher than the 20.9 percent found in 2011, government officials said the 2012 number is not a statistically significant change from the previous year's.

The number of people participating in assistance programs had been on the rise from 18.6 percent in 2009 to 20.2 percent in 2010 to the 20.9 percent in 2011. Medicaid was the most used program in 2012, with an average monthly participation rate of 15.3 percent, followed by SNAP at 13.4 percent, housing assistance at 4.2 percent, SSI at 3 percent and TANF and general assistance at 1 percent.

During an average month in 2012, 37.3 percent of people who did not graduate from high school received benefits, compared with 21.6 percent of high school graduates and 9.6 percent of people with one or more years of college. And the average monthly participation was highest for African Americans at 41.6 percent, compared with Asian/Pacific Islanders at 17.8 percent and non-Hispanic whites at 13.2 percent.

Iconic Martha's Vineyard lighthouse moves inland

AQUINNAH, Mass. (AP) — A Martha's Vineyard lighthouse that is among the most endangered historic landmarks in the U.S. began its gradual march back from a rapidly eroding cliffside on Thursday.

Powerful hydraulic pistons inched the 160-year-old Gay Head Lighthouse about 5 feet at a time along steel rails lathered with soap, starting just before noon. By midafternoon, it had moved more than 25 feet.

The 52-foot-high, 400-ton brick-and-mortar structure is expected to arrive at its final destination — a concrete pad about 135 feet due southeast — as soon as Friday.

"We've got plenty of time. We're not in any rush," said Jerry Matyiko, a seasoned mover of large structures whose crews have relocated five lighthouses, including the famed Cape Hatteras Light in North Carolina. "Preparing it was the hard part. Moving it is the easy part."

Workers spent weeks painstakingly digging under the lighthouse to lift it a few short feet off the ground, using dozens of hydraulic jacks supported by a network of wood-and-steel beams.

Once in its new home, the lighthouse and the scoured-out land around it will be restored.

Located on the sparsely populated, western edge of the resort island, Gay Head Light has been a critical waypoint for mariners since the peak of the whaling trade in the 19th century.

Its red-and-white beam can be seen for almost 20 miles out, warning ships of the coastline and the treacherous shoal extending about a half-mile into the water.

Today, the beacon and its dramatic, brilliantly colored cliffside perch are also a must-see destination for tourists.

Buddy Vanderhoop, a longtime charter fishing captain whose great uncle was the lighthouse's first keeper, was among a handful of locals on hand Thursday to observe the start of the move. "That light right here has been significant for me finding my way back home on more than a thousand occasions," he said. "You know exactly where you are when you see the red and the white. That's the homestretch."

Paula Eisenberg, who has lived down the road from the lighthouse since 2002, said the beacon has been a comforting and treasured part of her time on the island. "At night, my husband and I can see the sweep of the lighthouse beam through our bedroom window," she said. "It's just a big part of our lives out here and we couldn't bear the thought of losing it."

A group of local schoolchildren that had helped raise money for the $3.4 million project also stopped by for a visit. "It's pretty cool. I thought it would take a lot of time, maybe a couple of weeks," 9-year-old Yossi Monahan said of the move.

Relocating the lighthouse became an urgent matter after constant landslides caused by ocean waves and groundwater severely eroded the cliffs. The lighthouse is now just 46 feet from the clay-and-sandstone cliff's edge. Within two years, advocates feared, it would have been too close to the edge to move safely.

▶ REGIONAL TRACK AND FIELD — DIV. II

A strong field

AUSTINTOWN — United's Riley Fillman and Lucas Cooper and West Branch's Jake Zinni are heading back to the state track meet and will be joined by East Palestine's Nick Monteleone.

All four senior standouts captured high finishes at the Division II regional meet Thursday at Austintown Fitch's Falcon Stadium.

Fillman earned his third straight state berth in the long jump, placing third (22-feet-4 1/2). Montelone, the Bulldogs' first state qualifier in four years, earned the fourth and final state berth with a personal-best jump of 21-10.

Zinni was second in the discus (160-2) and Cooper took third (153-10).

West Branch senior Lea Bock also qualified in the girls shot put. She finished second with a personal-best toss of 40-5.

The top four in each event advance to the state track meet in Columbus on June 5-6.

South Range juniors Madelyn Kimpel and Mollie Pierson, sophomore Xena Maali and freshman Lillian Kimpel were sixth in the girls 3200-meter relay in 10 minutes, 0.24 seconds, best time in the area this season.

Also for the South Range girls, senior Catherine Schuler was sixth in the shot put (37-7 3/4) and senior Andrea Oliver tied for ninth in the high jump (4-11).

West Branch seniors Steve Koneval and George Leppert and sophomores Michael Johnson and Max Pizga were 11th in the boys 3200 relay (8:45.46).

The top two in each heat of the preliminaries plus the next four fastest times advance to Saturday's regional finals.

Fillman had the top time in the 300 hurdles in a school-record 38.32 seconds. He false started in the 110 hurdles after coming in with the top time.

Raiders bow out of tournament

MASSILLON — A South Range rally fell just short as the Raiders were defeated by the Elyria Catholic Panthers 5-4 in a Division III softball regional semifinal game Thursday at Massillon Washington High School.

The Raiders end their season with a 21-7 record. The Panthers, 16-14, move on to play fifth-ranked Warren Champion (27-4) who defeated Apple Creek Waynedale 6-5 Wednesday in the regional final on Saturday.

"Errors. You get to this level, you just can't give people runs," said Raider head coach Don Feren. "They (Elyria Catholic) made plays. They made difficult plays, they made routine plays. We didn't make the ones we needed to do."

Two costly errors led to a pair of Panther runs in the second frame. After Leigha Donaghue walked, stole second, and scored on a double by pitcher Ashley Cascio, Sam Filiaggi reached on a throwing error which scored Cascio, and Riley Schill reached on another throwing error scoring Filiaggi and giving the Panthers a 5-1 advantage. The Panthers scored their first two runs in the first inning on a home run by Schill that cleared the left field fence scoring Filiaggi ahead of her. After that Raider pitcher Caragyn Yanek tossed five scoreless innings. Yanek ended up taking the tough loss.

"It was an extremely tough loss," Yanek said.

"I'm proud of my team, though, for coming back and picking me up after that first inning. I honestly could not have gotten this far without my team. They are there for me for everything. We just didn't play our best today. We could have played better."

Despite that, the Raiders were almost able to pull off the win.

They scored a run in the first stanza when catcher Felecia Gaeta walked, advanced to third on singles by Sarah Moretti and Jordan Youngs, and scored on a sacrifice fly by Taylor Helon.

In the third inning, Gaeta and Moretti both singled with Gaeta scoring on a mishandled flyball hit by Youngs and Moretti crossing the plate on a groundout by Codi Taylor.

The Raiders got within a run in the sixth when Morgan Smith hit a single and was pinch-run for by Madison Weaver who scored on Jessica Skripac's double. Skripac advanced to third but was stranded.

In the seventh, Gaeta

Mathews' might too much for Devils

By MIKE McLAIN
Special to the News

KENT — There was no need for a formal announcement.

The best way the Mathews Mustangs could tell anyone willing to listen that there's more to their softball team than simply the work of senior pitcher Cheyenne Eggens was to speak with their bats, legs and gloves. Yes, Eggens is the cornerstone, but there are plenty of other impressive pieces on a team that's one win away from a trip to the Division IV state tournament.

"We don't have to prove anything," senior catcher Jenna Siefert said after the Mustangs' 9-0 win over the Berlin Center Western Reserve Blue Devils in a regional semifinal Thursday at Kent State University. "We know we are hitting the ball. We back her up 100 percent. When Cheyenne is in the circle, she says, 'I have my team behind me.'"

"It kind of hurts when people say that (we're a one-person team), but we don't let that get to us. We can't win games if we don't have offense."

The Mustangs (24-5) brought plenty of offense to the plate against talented Blue Devils pitcher Aleah Hughes. Mathews had 12 hits, including four by Meredith Grimes and three by Eggens, who helped her cause with a home run far beyond the fence in left-center field. A five-run fifth inning pushed the lead to 9-0, and with Maddy Nicula on third with two outs the Mustangs almost ended the game on the mercy rule.

The Mustangs appeared to frustrate Hughes, who struck out three and walked two. Two of the runs in the fifth were on wild pitches.

"We all went and hit yesterday before our game and we all prepared very well," said Grimes, who had a pair of doubles. "We've been hitting very well lately, and we came and did it on the field, too."

Grimes has been one of the offensive catalysts. She doesn't know what her batting average is, which is exactly how Mustangs coach Jim Nicula prefers it.

"She's batting over .600. She's killed the ball this year," Jim Nicula said. "The early part of the season, when there were times when we were struggling, it was never her. She's only struck out twice all year long. She's fouling balls off until she gets what she wants and she rips them."

Another offensive area in which the Mustangs are noticeably strong is base running. The theme is to be aggressive, except when it involves Eggens. Siefert, a courtesy runner as a freshman on the team that reached the Division IV state final, sparked the attack by going from first to home on a long single by Grimes in the first inning. There was never hesitancy in Siefert's stride as she received the go sign at third.

"Our coach says when you take a hard lead, you're gone," Siefert said. "I just go, unless someone says down, and then I slide."

Eggens breezed to the win, allowing four singles, striking out 14 and not yielding a walk. She had one stretch of six consecutive strikeouts. Just two runners reached second base.

"I was throwing a little more changeups than usual," Eggens said. "I just try to work on my off-speed a little bit because they were fouling me off for how fast I was."

Eggens' homer came after Siefert scored on a fielder's choice off the bat of Marissa Odell. It was Eggens' second homer of the season.

"I haven't hit like that in a long time," Eggens said. "I felt really good today pitching and hitting. I knew my team's been there all day. I made contact with the ball. I didn't expect it to go where it did."

The Mustangs sent 10 batters to the plate in the fifth. A fielding error on a bunt by Paula Sponsler opened the door for four unearned runs. Siefert drove in a run with a sacrifice fly. Odell singled home Grimes after her first double.

Mathews will play defending state champion Cuyahoga Heights Saturday at noon. It's another chance for the Mustangs to show that they're a complete team.

"She (Eggens) is a phenomenal player, and she's going to have an illustrious college career, but the other kids are doing things too, and they want a little bit of due," Jim Nicula said.

Lenna Hoff and Siefert each had two hits.

Reserve heads back to regional final

LORAIN — The Western Reserve baseball team is going back to a Div. IV regional final and they will be facing a familiar opponent.

The Blue Devils (20-5) outdueled New Riegel 2-0 in a Div. IV regional semifinal Thursday at the Pipe Yard in Lorain.

Western Reserve will travel all the way back out to Lorain at 5 p.m. today to take on eighth-ranked Louisville St. Thomas Aquinas for the regional championship.

The Knights defeated Cuyahoga Heights 5-1 in the other regional semifinal.

The Blue Devils defeated the Knights 5-3 last season in a regional semifinal on their way to a state semifinal berth.

Ursuline no-hit

MASSILLON — After running roughshod over the district competition, the Ursuline baseball team was rudely sent packing 8-2 by Akron Manchester in a Div. III regional semifinal Thursday at Massillon Washington High School.

Manchester's Pavin Parks tossed a no-hitter as the Panthers (15-15) advance to take on Canton Central Catholic at 5 p.m. today in a regional final.

The Irish (16-6) jumped out to a 2-0 lead after three innings thanks to a slew of Manchester errors, but could muster nothing the rest of the game.

Ursuline pounded South Range 13-3 last Friday in the Struthers Div. III district title game and was playing in its fifth straight regional semifinal.

Florida dominates Tennessee, 7-2

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Pitcher Lauren Haeger outhit Tennessee all by herself.

Florida's do-it-all senior had two hits and allowed just one in a complete-game victory as defending champion Florida defeated Tennessee 7-2 Thursday in the opening game of the Women's College World Series.

Haeger, who homered in the first inning, showed why she was recently named USA Softball's collegiate player of the year.

"To be the national player of the year and jump back on this stage — she stepped up and hit a home run her first at-bat, pitches a great game, allowed just one hit — I think she answered that call," Florida coach Tim Walton said.

Florida lost to Tennessee in the Southeastern Conference tournament in their only previous meeting this season. This time, the Gators got some unexpected help. Former Florida basketball coach Billy Donovan, now the new Oklahoma City Thunder coach, gave the team a pregame pep talk.

"His volume would just go up, and up, and up, and when he'd look at you, when he made eye contact with you, he'd speak into your soul," Haeger said.

"Like, I felt it. I was like, 'OK!'"

Florida (56-6) will play LSU on Friday, after the Tigers defeated Auburn 6-1. Tennessee (47-16) will play Auburn in an elimination game on Saturday.

Haeger, the only player in NCAA history to have more than 60 homers and 60 wins in a college career, opened the scoring against Tennessee with a solo home run to left field.

"She's a great hitter," Tennessee starter Rainey Gaffin, who got the loss, said. "Two-strike at-bat, two outs. She tapped a good pitch. I left it up a little too much, and she attacked it. I give her props for that. She was attacking all day."

Kayli Kvistad, a freshman, followed with a two-run shot to center in the third to make it 3-0.

Haeger (29-1) had a no-hitter going until Megan Geer's two-run homer in the fourth trimmed Florida's lead to 3-2.

"If you leave one ball up here at the College World Series, it can get taken out of the yard against good teams like that," she said. "I was just trying to buckle down and get the next girl out."

Florida added two runs in the fourth inning and two more in the sixth.

RAIDERS FROM 1B

walked and advanced to second on Moretti's sacrifice bunt, but was stranded there as the game ended.

Gaeta scored two runs, Skripac finished with a single, double and one RBI, and Moretti had two singles and a run scored to pace the Raider offense. Yanek finished with nine strikeouts, permitted just six hits and three walks, and retired 16 of the final 23 batters she faced.

In addition to Schill's homer and two RBIs, Cascio had an RBI double, and Filaggi had a pair of singles and scored twice for the Panthers.

"Like everyone here knows we've been in the cages," said Panther head coach Ryan Minney. "We started off slow and I sound like a broken record, but we focused on defense at the beginning of the year and then probably about halfway through the year we started hitting the cages daily. My assistant coaches are up there three to four hours a day. I got girls strolling in and out hitting in the cages and it's all voluntary, nothing is mandatory. They're all doing it on their own. I wasn't so concerned with keeping them (the Raiders) off the bases. I was more concerned for them making the plays that needed to be made. I told the pitchers if you hit your spots, let me control the game. I said our players will make the plays that need to be made and they did."

The Elyria Catholic-Warren Champion regional final is set for noon on Saturday.

Indians notes

TRIBES MAKES MOVES
SEATTLE (AP) — The Cleveland Indians have placed right-handed reliever Scott Atchison on the 15-day disabled list because of a sprained left ankle.
The Indians made the roster move before opening a four-game series in Seattle on Thursday night. Cleveland will also be without infielder Carlos Santana for at least a few days after he was placed on the paternity list.
Atchison was 1-1 with a 5.74 ERA in 19 relief appearances for the Indians this season. This is his fifth career stint on the disabled list.
To take the open roster spots, the Indians selected the contract of outfielder Jerry Sands and recalled right-hander Austin Adams from Triple-A Columbus. Sands has split the season between Cleveland and Columbus appearing in nine games in April with the Indians.
Adams started the season with Cleveland before being sent down. Adams appeared in three games with the Indians and 10 games at Columbus.

Salem HOF seeks OSU coach relative

SALEM — The Salem Athletic Hall of Fame is searching for a relative of the late Sam Willaman. Willaman, a former head football coach at Ohio State, was a 1909 graduate of Salem High School. Anyone with information may contact Michael Lesch, chairman of the Hall of Fame committee, at mlesch57@hotmail.com or (330) 831-1909. Willaman will be inducted into the Salem Athletic Hall of Fame on Aug. 27.

And now, we wait: Cavs and Warriors get time to rest

Golden State coach Steve Kerr was chatting with assistant Luke Walton a few minutes before what became the Warriors' clinching victory in the Western Conference Finals, and a realization popped into his head. "You know what we do now?" Kerr asked, somewhat rhetorically. "We wait." Now, we all wait. The NBA Finals won't start until June 4, meaning both the Cleveland Cavaliers and the Warriors will have more than a full week to rest, recover, scout and plan for Game 1 of the title matchup. It's the same sort of break that Golden State had to deal with between the first and second rounds, and for Cleveland, these mini-vacations are now the norm — the Cavs also had layoffs of about a week following their wins in each of their opening two series. So both teams were off Thursday. At the Cavaliers' complex in Independence, Ohio, some players arrived for treatment, but nary a basketball was bouncing in the facility — that resumes on Friday. The Warriors planned to also take the day and revel in a five-game ousting of the Houston Rockets in the West title series. Kerr said after the West finals that he had not given any thought to Cleveland. "There's plenty of time to get to Cleveland," Kerr said. Not that's necessarily a good thing. It's unprecedented in league history for both conference champions to be sitting around for so long before the NBA Finals. There's instances of one Finals-bound team having longer breaks, but not both in the same year. There has been so-called "move-up dates" for The Finals in the past, but no more. "We decided a few years ago that it was important to lock in a start date given the global nature of the NBA, with TV and digital partners and 215 countries and territories airing the games," league spokesman Michael Wade said Thursday. "While it's rare for our teams to have a week off prior to The Finals, the time allows for both teams to rest up and get healthy." And just about everyone needs the rest. Start with LeBron James, who has made playing through aches and pains at this time of year an annual occurrence. The athletic trainer who has worked in tandem with him for years, Mike Mancias, is basically around James more than any one else as the playoffs go deeper, tending to whatever is ailing the four-time MVP.
